Panel urges 6-month military draft

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Pentagon advisory panel is recommending that Congress consider reinstituting a version of the military draft that would require youths to serve six months and then decide whether to stay on active duty longer or join the reserves.

Louis J. Conti, chairman of the Reserve Forces Policy Board, called this a "try it before you buy it" approach.

Reporting to Congress, Conti noted recent increases in Reserve and National Guard strength but said the board still is concerned over "inadequate force levels which must be responsive to mobilization demands."

However, Conti made it clear the board was not speaking for Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger when it expressed its views to Congress.

Conti is a retired Marine Corps major general and had been a star football lineman at Cornell in the 1940s.

There has not been a military draft in the United States since 1973 and it would take an act of Congress to revive it.

However, draft registration, which was ended by former President Ford in 1975, was resumed for young men last summer by former President Carter to have names on hand in case the draft was reinstituted.

Weinberger and President Reagan have indicated reluctance to keep the draft registration machinery intact and voiced strong opposition to reviving the draft itself.

"The board fully realizes that a return to the draft will fall far short of resolving all the problems of a modern, technologically advanced military force," Conti said. "On the other hand, the board sees too many positive outcomes resulting from a draft not to pursue the question with utmost vigor."

He described the draft as "potentially the most cost-effective and equitable answer" to many of the problems.

Under the board's recommendation, men — "and women, if mandated by Congress" — would be required to serve six months on

Youth guilty in stabbing

A Huntington Beach youth believed to be a follower of the punk rock movement has been convicted in Orange County Superior Court on assault charges in connection with the near fatal stabbing of a chauffeur in Newport Beach in June, 1980.

Following the announcement of the jury's verdict Thursday, Judge Leonard McBride ordered defendant David Paul Owen, 19, taken into immediate custody.

Owen, convicted on charges of assault with a deadly weapon, had been free on $10,000 bail during the trial.

The jury, which had deliberated since Wednesday afternoon, also convicted the spiky-haired defendant on a charge of causing great bodily harm.

McBride scheduled sentencing proceedings April 3. Owen could face up to seven years in state prison.

His conviction stems from the stabbing of chauffeur Daniel Harms, 25, of Cypress, during high school graduation night last June.

Harms, who suffered near fatal stab wounds in the chest, testified that he was attacked by four youths after a bottle was thrown at his limousine as he drove down the 300 block of Walnut Street in the Newport Shores area of Newport Beach.

The 25-year-old chauffeur said his assailants kicked, beat and stabbed him when he got out of the car and then laughingly poured beer over his head as he lay wounded on a curb.

A second youth who had been arrested in the attack, Rod Glenn Sherard, 19, of Huntington Beach, pleaded guilty earlier to assault with a deadly weapon charges. He faces sentencing April 1.

Jury weighs killer's fate after plea

Defense attorney James Merwin pleaded for the life of convicted murderer John Alan Keith of San Clemente, telling an Orange County Superior Court jury:

"John Keith desperately wants to live."

The six-man, six-woman jury, which must decide if the curly haired slayer is to be sentenced to die in the California gas chamber, began its first full day of deliberations today.

But before it was given the penalty phase of the case late Thursday by Judge Donald A. McCartin, the panel heard closing statements by Merwin and prosecutor Dave Carter. Carter strongly urged jurors to sentence the killer of Corona del Mar real estate agent Ruben Martinez to death.

Merwin, however, asked the jury to return instead with a verdict of life imprisonment without parole for Keith, 23, who sat impassively at the counsel table under the steady gaze of three and sometimes four county Sheriff's Department deputies.

Only two days earlier, Keith had unsuccessfully attempted to escape from Orange County Jail with two fellow inmates.

The Laguna Hills defense lawyer said Keith's bid for freedom was proof of how much

Scuffles with NB police

By STEVE MARBLE

A still-unidentified man, who led police officers on a high speed chase from Newport Beach to Costa Mesa early today, is hospitalized but in stable condition after being shot twice by a Newport patrolman.

The injured man, believed to be in his early 20s and a possible Arizona resident, was shot once in the hand and again in the right thigh during a struggle with Newport officer Gary Bruton in front of a Costa Mesa coffee shop.

Police allege the unidentified man was shot after he assaulted Bruton.

The incident, police say, began at about 1 a.m. when Newport patrolman Rick Bradley reported seeing a motorcyclist traveling north on Balboa Boulevard near 14th Street at a high rate of speed.

Bradley said he took after the speeding biker and followed him up Newport Boulevard into Costa Mesa at high speeds. He reported that the motorcyclist tried to elude him by weaving in and out of traffic.

In front of a private trailer park at 1640 Newport Blvd., police say, the cyclist abruptly tried to turn into the park driveway but crashed head-on into a parked vehicle.

Apparently uninjured at this point, the young man took off on

Hostage exchange set

Hijackers to trade for political prisoners

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — A group of political prisoners flew out of Pakistan today to be exchanged for more than 100 hostages held by a trio of hijackers at the Damascus airport, authorities said.

Airport authorities in Karachi, Pakistan, said the special flight took off for Libya and would be followed by a second plane with more prisoners. The hijackers, who have held the plane 12 days, demanded the release of 55 prisoners. Pakistan officials have said they could find only 49.

The leader of the heavily armed hijackers said today that none of the hostages would be freed "until all political prisoners and family members" released by Pakistan arrive in Libya.

The Pakistani military government began assembling the political prisoners it agreed to free Thursday after the hijackers threatened to kill three Americans, (one of them from Orange County) among the hostages. Libya, asked to provide asylum for the hijackers and to receive the freed prisoners, agreed, a Pakistani diplomat here said.

The officials said the latest demands by the hijackers were "not a problem," but the timing of the release was still unsettled.

The plane was commandeered over Pakistan on March 2 and went first to Kabul, Afghanistan, and then to the Damascus airport. The hijackers shot and killed one hostage, a Pakistani diplomat, while it was in Kabul.

The hijack leader also told negotiators in the control tower of Damascus airport today that the trio demanded that an agreement in writing be sent to the Syrian government, the United Nations and Amnesty International, a human-rights group based in London.

A Pakistani spokesman in Islamabad today denied his government agreed to pay $50,000 to the hijackers and said, "We have received no demands for money."

Up in arms over bussing

EAGLE POINT, Ore. (AP) — Students at a high school in this southern Oregon town, up in arms over a ban on kissing and hugging, warn they might walk out of classes again unless the administration loosens the restrictions.

About 300 of Eagle Point High School's 1,000 students streamed out of a morning class to rally in a sun-baked courtyard to protest the kissing prohibition and other rules.

Principal Hazen Bernard said he was pleased that the rally was peaceful and promised to study the students' complaints. Some students say they hope the administration is sincere.

Hijackers' captive believed safe

By JOHN NEEDHAM
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

The father of an Orange County man being held hostage on a hijacked Pakistani airliner in Damascus, Syria, says he'll believe his son is safe when he sees him leave the plane and hears his voice.

Glen Clymore of San Juan Capistrano, whose son Craig is one of three Americans aboard the jet along with about 100 other hostages, said Thursday he was feeling more relaxed since learning the Pakistan government had agreed to the hijackers demands.

Pakistani terrorists holding the plane threatened to blow up the jet and everyone on it if 55 purported political prisoners were not released from jails in Pakistan.

Clymore said Thursday's 8 a.m. deadline was like "living through a nightmare."

"You just can't believe what's happening to yourself," the senior Clymore said, standing outside his home on a quiet residential street. "This has been quite an ordeal."

He said he and his wife Thelma turned off the radio so they could unwind after spending a sleepless night awaiting news if their son Craig was alive or dead.

"It was literally a countdown to an explosion," Clymore said. "We've quit listening for now so we can turn off the tension. Every time we would begin to relax we would hear another piece of news and get upset again. It's very hard not to break down."

Clymore said he had received two telephone calls from U.S. State Department officials since Thursday's deadline passed.

"They tell us they are doing everything they can and I'm sure they are," he said. "We will be very delighted when this is all over."

Clymore said his wife was still too upset to talk with reporters. Mrs. Clymore has remained secluded inside her home since her only son was taken hostage 12 days ago.

The younger Clymore, a 1974 graduate of Laguna Beach High School, runs an import business from his home and was in Pakistan on a buying trip when the jet was hijacked.

His father said Craig had moved just prior to his trip from Lake Forest, but declined to say where his son's new home is.

"We didn't know Craig was in Pakistan," the senior Clymore said. "We just wish he had been some place else."

He said the hostage crisis was something he thought always happened to someone else, but not him. "Your heart goes out for the people involved, of course, but you never really know what it means."

Clymore said he was hopeful there would be a speedy conclusion. "We just hope there will be no more delays," he said.

"That has been foremost in our minds today. The anxiety we feel is very strong. It's like being trapped on a roller coaster."

he wished to live.

Keith was convicted of first-degree murder in late February by the same jury for the mutilation slaying of Martinez in the bedroom of his Corona del Mar home.

Testimony during the trial indicated that Keith and a companion, Anthony David Bics, went to Martinez's home hon the night of August 28, 1978, after meeting him in a Laguna Beach gay bar.

The defendant admitted on the witness stand that he and Bics, also convicted of first-degree murder in a separate trial, bludgeoned Martinez, 40, with a star-shaped candle.

But on a second visit to the home, Keith said he used a mitre box saw to partially decapitate Martinez, doing so out of both anger at and fear of homosexuals. The prosecution claimed he did so when he found that Martinez was still alive.

Merwin said Keith's attitude toward homosexuals was molded by his homelife with a Marine Corps officer father. "He (Keith) was raised in an atmosphere where gays were less than human," the lawyer said.

Carter, however, claimed that the convicted slayer killed "not only for pleasure and excitement, but for greed. . ."

He said the murder of Martinez was a cold, calculated act based on plans to rob Martinez and then eliminate him as a potential witness.

He told the jury: "Mr. Keith deserves the same number of chances he gave Mr. Martinez, nothing more or less."

Silo vapor leaks

SEARCY, Ark. (AP) — In the second such incident within a week, oxidizer vapor leaked from an underground Titan II missile silo, but the accident never represented a safety hazard and was corrected within four hours. The leak, discovered Thursday, was unrelated to a leak a week ago at the same silo, the Air Force said.

Prince not so bonny

ESHER, England (AP) — Britain's Prince Charles fell from his horse today during a steeplechase race and suffered a bloody nose.

Charles, on a new horse, was nearing the end of a muddy trek over the fences at Sandown Park racetrack when he fell.

The 32-year-old heir to the throne was riding Good Prospect for the first time in competition. His regular mount, Allibar, collapsed and died Feb. 20 when the prince had him out on a practice run before a race.

Woman slain; Grove police arrest mate

Garden Grove police are holding the husband of a 49-year-old woman who was found shot to death in the couple's home.

Taken into custody at the scene Thursday night was Leslie L. Munson, 55. He was booked into Orange County Jail on suspicion of murder.

Responding to reports of a shooting, officers discovered the body of Joan Munson, 49, who was shot in the chest. She was taken to UC Irvine Medical Center, where she was pronounced dead.

Police Sgt. Bruce Beauchamp said a .22 caliber rifle was seized at the scene. He said the shooting appeared to be the result of a family argument.

U.S. role in Salvador 'softened'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reacting to concern that it is risking a Vietnam-type conflict, the Reagan administration is suddenly speaking softly about its involvement in El Salvador while sending Green Berets to train government troops in guerrilla warfare.

Meanwhile, Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. told reporters today the guerrillas may be "running short of ammunition" and said the United States has "seen some slackening of the movement of arms through Nicaragua."

But Haig said there is evidence that Cuba, which the United States maintains has been using Nicaragua as a funnel for arms going to the Salvadoran guerrillas, is searching for "alternative routes" for arms supplies.

On Thursday, several officials said the administration decided against deeper involvement in El Salvador, barring some major setback to the government at the hands of Marxist guerrillas. And even then, no one was prepared to predict the United States would do anything more.

"They are clearly backing off," one State Department official said Thursday. "They apparently feel they went too far, and the Vietnam analogy has a lot of people worried."

"We haven't made a decision not to get more deeply involved," another official insisted. "We had no plans to get any more deeply involved."

For his part, Haig today defined the U.S. commitment in El Salvador as stopping the flow of arms to the guerrillas from outside. The Salvadorans, he stressed, should be allowed to determine their future.

"Our interest is that they have it out at the ballot box and not with bullets," he said.

And Haig, indicating he felt some previous administration statements had been overlooked, said he has sought from the beginning to make it clear that "we are seeking to avoid extremes of right and left in El Salvador."

foot. Newport authorities say Costa Mesa police and a Huntington Beach officer and a search dog were brought to the scene.

Minutes later, authorities say, officer Bruton saw the man near the intersection of 17th Street and Newport Boulevard in front of a coffee shop. Bruton later reported that he tried to arrest the man.

Bruton said he was in the process of taking a buck knife away from the young man when the man started struggling and assaulting the officer. Police say the exact nature of that assault is still being reviewed.

It was at this point, police say, that Bruton fired his gun twice, striking the man in the hand and thigh. Despite the wounds, say authorities, the man again started running.

With the help of the Huntington Beach police dog, officers say they located the wounded man several minutes later hiding behind a boat storage yard on Newport Boulevard.

The unidentified, injured man was taken to the trauma center at Fountain Valley Community Hospital for emergency treatment and later moved to UCI Medical Center.

Police say their investigation has revealed that the motorcycle was stolen last month in Palm Springs.

HIJACK . . .

Pakistan's ambassador to Syria, Maj. Gen. Safraz Khan, said Thursday his government agreed to pay the ransom.

It was unclear if the hijackers' strongly worded statement today would be construed by Pakistani authorities as new demands.

The hijackers apparently were annoyed by the presence of their relatives at the airport. Diplomatic sources said the father of one hijacker and the brother of another visited the control tower Thursday night.

"We are struggling for a cause and an ideology. Don't send our family again and again to blackmail us," the chief hijacker said in the radio transmission monitored by reporters.

The hijackers belong to a group calling itself "Al Zulfikar," apparently named after former Pakistani President Zulfikar Ali Bhutto who was hanged in Ap by President Mohammed Zia ul-Haq.

Stock market has busiest opening hour

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market churned ahead today, extending Thursday's rally in trading that set a record pace.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up 22.15 points on Thursday, climbed another 3.25 to 993.07 in the first hour today.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange totaled 24.10 million shares in the first hour, making it the busiest opening hour in exchange history.

The rally got its start Thursday amid excitement over a spate of three major merger proposals in the past week. Analysts said the euphoric mood was heightened by a continuing decline in interest rates. On Thursday afternoon, New York's Chemical Bank lowered its prime lending rate from 18 to 17½ percent.

But after a strong opening, prices pulled back a little. The Dow Jones industrial average briefly approached the threshold of the 1,000 level with an early advance of about 8 points, but it turned back.

active duty. It would start with a "military orientation" period of three to four weeks, followed by basic and advanced individual training.

The required military service would begin after graduation from high school or at the "conclusion of the academic term of college in which the individual was enrolled."

For a high school dropout, service would start within 90 days of the time he left school or at a specific age, which was not given.

At the end of the orientation phase, the youth would be offered a choice among three options: remain on active duty in the service of his choice if openings existed, join a reserve unit or go into the Individual Ready Reserve of the Army or Marine Corps, which have had the most trouble filling this mobilization manpower pool.

As is the case now, members of the Individual Ready Reserve would not be members of units that hold monthly drills but would be required to undergo "periodic refresher training."

If a youth decided to remain on active duty, he would serve at least three years and then be obliged to enter a reserve unit or the Individual Ready Reserve for another three years.

The youth would be eligible for full veterans benefits after completing the three-year active duty tour.

Lady Bird Johnson says she was "scared to death" as filmmakers prepared a documentary on her life. But that didn't stop her from having a good time at its premiere.

"Tonight has been a feast. I've loved it," Mrs. Johnson told about 250 gathered for the premiere at the National Academy of Sciences auditorium in Washington.

The audience included her two daughters — Lynda Johnson Robb and Luci Johnson — and longtime friends and associates from her years in Washington as wife of the late President Lyndon B. Johnson.

The film was commissioned for showing at the Lyndon B. Johnson Library in Austin, Texas. It also will be available for showing at schools and public organizations.

Jerry Plotkin, one of the 52 hostages released by Iran, filed a $60 million libel suit against the Van Nuys-based Daily News, and its parent, the Chicago Tribune, over a story they say implied Plotkin's trip to Iran involved illegal drug deals.

"My attorneys are also researching the rights that I may have to assert against the government of Iran for the kidnapping and 14 months of physical, emotional and psychological abuse to which they subjected me," Plotkin said. "If that research warrants it, I intend in short order to pursue claims based on the above facts as well."

Drug rings broken

$1 billion in contraband seized

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal undercover investigation has smashed 14 drug rings responsible for $22 billion in annual street sales and 30 to 40 percent of the marijuana smuggled into the United States, the administration reported.

With Attorney General William French Smith at his side, Drug Enforcement Administrator Peter Bensinger said the 22-month operation also produced scores of arrests and the seizure of dozens of ships along with $1 billion worth of drugs — including cocaine and methaqualone.

Smith said the indictment of 155 individuals in Florida, Louisiana and Georgia "would have a major impact" on U.S. marijuana traffic. Smith declared President Reagan had asked him "to extend his personal commendation" to the agents involved.

Bensinger said the operation had seized 1.2 million pounds of marijuana, 831 pounds of cocaine, three million doses of methaqualone, 30 ocean-going mother ships used to smuggle drugs, two airplanes and $1 million in cash.

He said the operation represented "the single largest enforcement activity ever domestically against the marijuana trade."

As of mid-afternoon, Bensinger said, 122 of those indicted had been arrested, including 30 of the 45 ringleaders who were charged. He noted that three defendants — Jose Fernandez, Paul Hinderling and Reuben Perez — already have had bail set at $20 million each or more.

In the operation, Bensinger said, nine DEA agents posed as drug off-loaders.

He said finding a source of supply in Colombia was easy, as was purchasing ships and distributing drugs in the United States.

He described the unloading of drugs from mother ships offshore as the most dangerous point for drug traffickers because of prevalent law enforcement surveillance. He said the unloading requires an expertise that drug rings do not have automatically and that the undercover agents were able to establish trust among the smugglers.

In 24 instances, information supplied by the undercover agents allowed the U.S. Coast Guard to seize the drugs while still on the open ocean, far from the unloading point. Bensinger said that to establish trust, the undercover agents allowed the drugs to be taken ashore in six instances and then tipped local law enforcement authorities on where the drugs could be seized.

On Feb. 4, the agents allowed a substantial quantity of drugs to be unloaded on the Gulf Coast of Louisiana and hidden at a farm in LaForce Parrish. The drug agents tipped the Louisiana State Police and a ruse was devised under which the police launched a search of the surrounding area for a lost girl.

The drug smugglers monitored the police radio traffic during the search and the undercover agents convinced the smugglers they could dissuade the police from entering the farm.

The agents did that. After the police left, the smugglers heard police radio traffic indicating they intended to return to investigate suspicious activities. At this point, undercover agents convinced the suspects to flee in pandemonium, leaving the drugs.

Bensinger said the undercover agents later rejoined the smugglers in a bayou near New Orleans, where it became clear the incident had solidified the trust between them and, at the same time, allowed the investigation to continue.

Cops tackle mystery of lost dummies

The start of football season is months away but, according to Newport Beach police reports, it appears someone wants to get a head start on it.

Police said that's one possible explanation for the disappearance of two football tackling dummies taken this week from an equipment shed at Newport Harbor High School.

Head football coach James Cochran told officers the foam dummies, used during tackling practices, are worth $275. He reported both stand four feet high and that one was mounted on a sled.

The thief, who reportedly used a bolt cutter to break into the shed, also took the sled, police said.

Pay raises rejected

House, Senate deny 16.8 percent hikes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House and Senate clamped the new mood of austerity upon themselves, their staffs, judges and other top federal officials by overwhelmingly rejecting a 16.8 percent pay hike.

A voice vote in the House and sweeping approval of four resolutions in the Senate were overtly political gestures. The same result would have occurred without any votes — except that wouldn't have put the two chambers so strongly on record as biting the bullet.

The Senate first voted 93 to 0 Thursday to deny itself the hike, then rejected the increases for staff members, federal judges and senior government executives by tallies of 91 to 3, 87 to 8 and 86 to 7.

"I don't believe at a time when there are going to be cuts in food stamps that we want to vote a pay raise for members of Congress," said House Democratic Majority Leader Jim Wright of Texas.

"My colleagues are not starving," he said.

Both the House and Senate voted overwhelmingly to turn down proposals to hike congressional salaries from the current $60,662 to just under $71,000. Salaries of cabinet secretaries would have gone from $69,630 to $84,000.

NB history book planned

A 21-chapter history of Newport Beach will be published in honor of the city's 75th anniversary, to be formally celebrated Sept. 26.

The 208-page illustrated book, detailing Newport's history from early Spanish days to the present, will be published by the city's anniversary committee, headed by William Banning.

Chapter authors include Newport historian Ellen Lee, Daily Pilot Managing Editor Tom Murphine, former Daily Pilot reporter Joanne Reynolds, the Irvine Company's Jerome Collins and Herb Sutton, president of Sutton Industries.

Jean Ritter, a Newport Historical Society member, has been charged with collecting early records, photographs or other contributions. Contributions should be directed to her at 410 Aliso St., Newport Beach.

The book is to be available by September.

Mayors fear loss of a million jobs

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's mayors say President Reagan's latest round of budget cuts may add up to more than a million lost jobs, and their chairman thinks the result could be a mass crime wave when the unemployed hit the streets this summer.

"The truth is that you are going to see some kind of reaction to the kinds of cuts that we're talking about, affecting people," said Mayor Richard Hatcher, president of the U.S. Conference of Mayors.

"That reaction might not be the traditional form of riots in the streets," said Hatcher, mayor of Gary, Ind. "But you could just see a tremendous increase in street-type crime, and with all its attendant costs, both in terms of dollars and in terms of human suffering."

In a news conference called to respond to Reagan's newest budget proposals, Hatcher said crime already is on the rise, "and by summer, by the time the full weight and force of these reductions are really starting to be felt, you could see a tremendous increase there."

Burglars take safe in Mesa

Burglars cut a padlock off the door of a Costa Mesa auto body shop, kicked a hole through the door to turn the knob from inside and apparently loaded a 300-pound safe on a truck to escape, police report.

James Lewis Harper, proprietor of Newport Auto Works, 120 Industrial Way, told officers Wednesday the $500 office safe contained about $8,000 in cash, jewelry and guns.

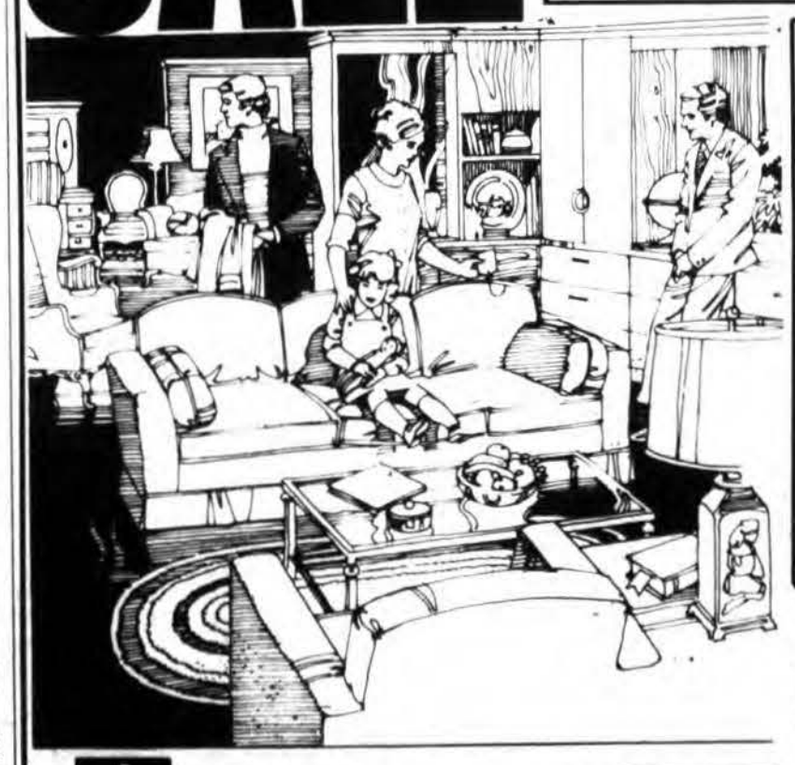

Dave Walker, commercial burglary investigator, said the safe, "now a pile of junk," was recovered near the swimming pool at Newport Harbor High School.

Walker said the thieves had tried to rip off the back of the roll-away safe, apparently gave that up, mangled its hinges and finally ripped off the front plate to gain access.

Walker said none of the valuables was recovered.

JUST COASTING

Since when is cash a sin?

FRIDAY THE 13TH BLUES: You have to have a large degree of sympathy for the poor, hapless, impoverished man in the nice suit who stood at the counter just in front of me at the Busybee Auto Rental Agency in Costa Mesa. Clearly, here was a man unable to cope with modern society.

Never mind why I was standing in line at this auto lease emporium. But the guy getting waited on, now, hey, here's a real problem.

He had just been transported to the rental office from an auto dealership where he was getting his own heap glued back together. The nice lady behind the counter started filling out the multi-carboned copies of the car rental agreement.

TOM MURPHINE

"MAY I SEE your driver's license," she asked.

He handed it over.

"Some additional identification," she asked.

He pulled another card from his wallet and dropped that on the counter too.

"Now sir," she said, "just let me see one of your national credit cards and we'll be all done here . . ."

There was a moment of silence. The man at the counter shuffled his feet a bit.

"I don't have one," he confessed.

"Pardon me, sir," the lady behind the counter said, her eyes glazing over slightly. "I don't think I heard what you said."

"I SAID I DON'T have any credit cards," the man repeated patiently. "But listen, I may have one here that belongs to my wife . . ."

The Busybee Car Lady behind the counter looked like a person who had just been struck by a lightning bolt. She fumbled her ball point pen on the counter. She had trouble recovering both the pen and her voice.

Battered, bruised and not much used

Finally she managed to sputter, "But sir, that simply won't do. We have to have a credit card with YOUR name on it. Your wife just won't do."

Give the Busybee lady credit however. She was struggling to make a comeback. Her eyes brightened up. "Perhaps if I could verify your employment," she said. "You are employed, aren't you?"

THE MAN IN THE NICE suit gave her his company phone number. Excitedly, she began dialing. She reached the company. She spoke rapidly. Then there was silence. Slowly, she put the phone back on the hook.

"Sir," she said quietly. "I have terribly bad news for you. Your personnel director is in a meeting. I can't verify you. I don't know what we can do next . . ."

Abruptly, the Busybee lady, who doesn't give up easily, brightened again. "Perhaps your wife — you know she has that credit card — perhaps she could come down here and we could work this all out with her?"

The man in the nice suit shook his head glumly. "That won't work," he said.

"I HAVE ANOTHER idea," he said. "How about I just pay cash for the car?"

The Busybee lady looked like she'd been struck by lightning again and was suffering terminal vapors at the same time.

"Cash, cash," she mumbled. "You mean money? You have regular money?" Her ballpoint pen clattered to the counter again.

Clearly, here was a customer who was a troublemaker.

Texaco gives rebates

Shell cuts wholesale prices 2 cents

NEW YORK (AP) — Texaco Inc. says it has begun offering dealers across the country rebates of 4 cents a gallon on some gasoline purchases, while reliable industry sources say Shell Oil Co. has cut wholesale gasoline prices 2 cents a gallon in the Midwest.

Analysts said the moves were taken to spur sluggish sales after the increase of almost 12 cents a gallon in retail gasoline sales prices that has occurred since the federal oil-price controls were lifted Jan. 28, eight months ahead of schedule.

Texaco, the nation's third-largest oil company, said it began offering "rebates" of 4 cents per gallon to dealers March 1.

Texaco said its 4-cent a gallon rebate would apply to dealers who sell more than 80 percent of the quantity of gasoline they sold in March 1980.

Dan Lundberg, publisher of an oil industry newsletter, said Texaco's rebate might show up shortly at the pump.

"It will be on a station-by-station basis. Nothing requires dealers to pass it on to the customer, but many unquestionably will," Lundberg said.

Lundberg said Texaco's leaded regular gasoline was selling for an average of $1.41 a gallon at full service stations as of March 6.

He said the average price of the fuel for smaller, independent refiners was $1.34 and the national average price of the fuel was $1.38.

Gasoline demand dropped 4 percent in 1979 and 7 percent in 1980 in the United States as prices climbed. The drop in demand has left U.S. refiners' gasoline supplies within 2 million barrels of the 283 million barrel record set last April.

Publisher guilty in extortion

PATERSON, N.J. (AP) — The publisher of a weekly community newspaper faces up to 15 years in prison and a $5,000 fine after being convicted of extortion in what may be the first trial of a publisher for attempting to coerce people into cooperating with his publication.

Alex Bidnik Jr., of Clifton, publisher of the Independent Prospector, was convicted this week by a Passaic County Superior Court jury on five of six counts.

JOURNALISM HISTORIAN Edwin Emery said he believed the trial marked the first indictment of a newspaper publisher for extortion.

Bidnik, 45, was convicted of extortion in incidents involving William Elias, former Clifton athletic director; Ari Tasiou and Charles Italia, owners of Clifton restaurants; Edward Looney, owner of Henry's Delicatessen and Liquor Store in Clifton, and Edward Hahn, advertising vice president for New Jersey Bank in Clifton.

ELIAS HAD testified Bidnik threatened his job and reputation when the athletic director refused the publisher's demands for an interview. Other witnesses testified Bidnik threatened to write damaging articles if they did not advertise with his publication.

Jurors could not reach a decision on a sixth indictment count, and Assistant Passaic County Prosecutor Bruno Mongiardo said he would move to have that charge dismissed.

Safer sips from suds

CHICAGO (AP) — The nitrosamine level of domestic and imported beers has been falling and generally is below the amount the government considers unsafe, scientists report.

Some nitrosamines, organic compounds containing nitrogen, cause cancer in laboratory rats when given at high levels.

But the amount in most beers now falls under the Food and Drug Administration's safety level of five parts per billion, Dr. Stephanie Crocco of the American Medical Association's Department of Foods and Nutrition reported in the association's journal.

Mother guilty in death

BUENA VISTA, Va. (AP) — A judge has found a woman guilty of second-degree murder and sentenced her to 20 years in prison for pouring black pepper down the throat of her 3-year-old daughter.

"I just poured it (the pepper) from the box into her mouth. I didn't mean to kill her," Diana M. Pugh, 30, said in a police statement read to the court.

Buena Vista Circuit Court Judge Rudolph Bumgardner III heard the case without a jury and handed down the sentence this week.

POLICE CHIEF Erskin Campbell, who read the statement, said Mrs. Pugh also admitted beating her daughter, Mary Elizabeth.

Dr. William Weddle of Stonewall Jackson Memorial Hospital in Lexington said the mouth-to-mouth resuscitation he administered to the child burned his mouth. He said he tried to put a plastic tube into the child's throat to make an airway but failed because it was blocked with pepper.

IN HER statement, Mrs. Pugh said she did not know how much pepper she had given the child.

Weddle testified the girl weighed 17 pounds and was 2½ feet tall, which he said was the height of a 2-year-old and the weight of a 9-month-old baby.

"It looked like the baby had been starved," Weddle testified. "There was no subcutaneous fat, which meant it was skin and bones."

HE SAID the child's body was covered with bruises from head to legs on front and back and that most of the bruises appeared to be three to four days old.

Mrs. Pugh, separated from her husband at the time of the child's death, sobbed as she answered questions from the judge and kept her head in her hands through much of the proceedings. She had pleaded innocent to the charges July 15.

Consumers to pay

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Communications Commission has approved a change in accounting rules designed to ensure the financial integrity of the nation's telephone companies but at a cost of billions of dollars to consumers during the next 10 years.

Skies mostly sunny

Precipitation limited to isolated areas

Coastal weather

Southerly winds 5 to 10 knots with one-foot wind waves. Winds becoming westerly 10 to 18 knots today decreasing to 7 to 12 knots tonight. Two to 4 foot westerly swell. Mostly cloudy. Chance of showers. Clearing tonight.

U.S. summary

There was little precipitation over most of the nation Thursday, except for light rain over the southern half of Texas, which has been drenched the past few days.

Skies were cloudy for the rest of Texas, the southern Rockies, the central Gulf Coast states and on the northern Atlantic Coast.

Light snow fell in a few spots in New York.

There was some cloudiness over the southern Pleateau and on the Pacific Coast, but skies were sunny elsewhere.

Temperatures at midday ranged from 29 at Montpelier, Vt., to 78 at Thermal and Miami.

For today, widely scattered snow showers were forecast from the lower Great Lakes to northern New England and over parts of Michigan. Isolated shower activity was possible along the Gulf and Pacific coasts.

Highs will be in the 60s and 70s from the Southwest deserts to the southern Atlantic Coast, while the coolest spots will be from northern Minnesota to the lower Great Lakes and northern New England, with readings in the 30s.

California

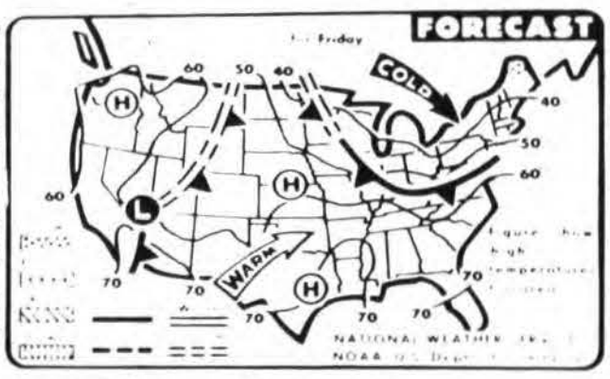

It will be mostly cloudy this afternoon, with clearing forecast tonight in Southern California. Fair and warmer weather is due for all Southland areas by Saturday.

Local highs will be in the 60s today and highs 60s to low 70s Saturday. Overnight lows will be in the mid 50s. Chance of rain less than 10 percent this afternoon and tonight.

Southland mountain areas will have partial clearing tonight, with southwest winds 15 to 30 mph at times. Highs Friday in the 40s, 45 to 55 Saturday. Lows tonight 25 to 35.

Desert areas partly cloudy today and tonight. Fair Saturday. Southwesterly winds 15 to 30 mph at times. Highs today and Saturday in the 60s upper deserts, 70s lower deserts. Lows tonight about 35 upper deserts and 45 lower deserts.

Northern and Central California becoming partly cloudy tonight. Variable clouds and a chance of showers Saturday. Snow level about 5,000 feet in northern mountains, 8,000 feet in southern Sierra Nevada.

STATE

Anti-busing forces hail ruling

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Opponents of forced busing reacted ecstatically to a state Supreme Court decision that could be the death blow to the Los Angeles Unified School District's mandatory integration program.

"I'm thrilled, I'm excited, I don't know what to say," school board president Roberta Weintraub said after learning that the high court had let stand an appeals court ruling upholding the state's anti-busing amendment, Proposition 1, and its application in the Los Angeles school district.

But Superior Court Judge Paul Egly called it "crazy."

"IT'S SOMETHING I didn't expect. I won't comment further," said Egly, who had spent years overseeing the development of the school district's integration plan as the result of a 1963 civil rights lawsuit.

The Supreme Court in San Francisco denied without comment a petition by the American Civil Liberties Union to throw out the Court of Appeal ruling, although Chief Justice Rose Bird would have granted the hearing.

But state Sen. Alan Robbins, D-Van Nuys, author of Proposition 1 — the so-called Robbins Amendment — said the measure was worded in such a way that it could not be overturned at the federal level.

"This was our biggest hurdle," he said. "We have a very liberal Supreme Court in the state of California, and now even they've found that mandatory busing is unconstitutional."

"I'M THE happiest person in California," Robbins said. Mrs. Weintraub, who leads an anti-busing majority on the school board, said the district's 2½-year-old forced busing program would be ended "as soon as humanly possible" and called a special board session for tonight.

"This is the most exciting news in my life," she said. "I'm so excited for the kids and the parents and the schools."

"It's a wonderful victory for all of us who worked on the Robbins amendment," Robbins said. "It's everything we could have possibly wanted, it's a dream come true.

"NOW WE can devote our schools to education, we can end forced busing, we can take millions of dollars that right now is being spent on buses and busing and use it for education."

Robbins said the district would not lose millions of dollars in federal funds earmarked specifically for integration programs.

"We'll continue to use it for voluntary programs," he said.

"We're going to prove that voluntary integration can produce more integration than forced busing. Once parents know that they don't have to bus their kids, we're going to get rid of the bitterness and resentment around busing and they'll be receptive to busing their kids shorter distance and other programs."

Proposition 1, passed overwhelmingly by voters in 1979, bars state courts from going beyond federal guidelines in assigning pupils in desegregation cases on the basis of race. It says mandatory busing can only be imposed in districts where segregation has been intentional.

In a ruling last Dec. 19, the appeals court found that Proposition 1 does not violate federal law, that integration in Los Angeles schools was based on residential patterns and was not intentional, and that the district therefore was not required to maintain its mandatory busing program.

Corona firm loses bid

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A Corona optical firm, convicted two months ago of illegally shipping laser mirrors to the Soviet Union in 1976 and 1977, has lost its bid to have a federal judge overturn a suspension of its security clearance by the Defense Department.

U.S. District Judge Mariana Pfaelzer said this week she lacked jurisdiction to take the action sought by Spawr Optical Research Inc. because the firm had not exhausted its appeals to the Pentagon.

An attorney for Walter and Frances Spawr said afterward that the firm would appeal the temporary suspension with the Defense Department this month and that a decision is possible in April.

Attorney Daniel Mogin said that if the Spawrs fail to win that appeal, they will return to federal court arguing that the suspension should be lifted because they are not a threat to national security.

Caviar trade proves fishy

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — State fish and game officials, looking out for the welfare of California's sturgeon population, are cracking down on a gourmet black market that provides caviar to those who crave it.

Four agents seized 65 pounds of the black fish eggs from a San Francisco oyster merchant as part of a drive to wipe out the illegal trade, a fish and game official said.

The roe, carefully packed in 130 eight-ounce jars, was valued at $6,500.

NEWS BRIEFS

State transit slashes seen

SACRAMENTO (AP) — The California Transportation Commission says that all state and local transportation services must be cut — unless new revenues are found.

Commission Chairman Dean Meyer commented on the draft biennial report to the Legislature that the cuts would affect everything from urban bus systems to county roads.

In a statement accompanying draft report, Meyer said, "It is not a question of being unable to afford new freeways. The message is that we cannot keep up what we have now, and that will hurt everyone.

"We need a billion dollars more in the next five years to buy the buses and coaches needed to keep up our transit services. If we do not get it, that will hurt the elderly, the handicapped, the low-income workers and the commuters who rely on transit."

Van Houten appeal denied

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Manson family member Leslie Van Houten's bid to overturn her murder conviction has been denied by the California Supreme Court.

VAN HOUTEN

Miss Van Houten had claimed the verdict should be set aside because gruesome photographs, including those from a crime she was not involved in, were viewed as evidence by the jury.

She was convicted in 1971, along with Charles Manson and two other family members, in the slaying of grocery executive Leno LaBianca and his wife, Rosemary, on two counts of murder and one count of conspiracy to commit murder.

All were sentenced to death, but the penalty was set aside when the California Supreme Court ruled the state capital punishment law was unconstitutional. The sentences then automatically became life terms.

Airport control worth the fight

The Orange County Board of Supervisors has correctly taken action toward removing John Wayne Airport from a federal airports funding program.

About $8 million per year flows from Orange County to the Airport Development Aid Program. The money is generated by an 8 percent surcharge on airline tickets.

In return, however, the county has been receiving an average of about $1 million per year. That means $7 million or so is going somewhere else. That somewhere else is determined by the Federal Aviation Administration which controls the air program.

Supervisors are basically saying, let's keep the money at home. As well they should. The board already has approved a $75 million improvement program for the airport. Any and all revenue will be needed.

More importantly, removal of the airport from ADAP would give the county more power in dealing with the FAA, which in the past has used threatened cutoff of funds as a weapon against the county.

Defederalization of the airport will not occur overnight. It may not occur at all. Before the county can pull out of ADAP, enabling legislation must be approved by Congress and signed into law by the President.

Yet, it's a battle worth fighting. The more control Orange County government can achieve over the airport, the better.

Coastal law test

With the July 1 deadline for state certification of Local Coastal Plans (LCPs) drawing near, the state Coastal Commission faces a critical test of its integrity.

Under the Coastal Act, the precise content of each local coastal plan is to be determined by the local government agency, in consultation with the state and regional commissions and with full public participation.

To achieve this goal, local agencies have devoted hundreds of hours, including many public hearings, to their plans.

On July 1, the regional commissions go out of business and the state commission will take over administration of permits in areas where LCPs have not yet been certified. This could mean a serious reduction in local control.

The test will come when the oustanding plans are presented to the state body.

Many local agencies contend the state commission already has made too many attempts to "condition" the content of the local plans, contrary to the intent of the Legislature. That body wanted the plans to reflect the socio-economic conditions of various coastal areas, in balance with statewide environmental objectives.

While the plans may not be perfect, there is no doubt a sincere effort has been made to hear and balance the demands of both environmentalists and developers.

The state commission will be well advised to keep this in mind as the plans are presented for certification.

The state Legislature, already in the process of attempting to modify some of the requirements of the Coastal Act which have been regarded as oppressive, recently sounded a warning when the Senate Rules Committee arbitrarily replaced two of its appointees to the state commission.

It remains within the power of the Legislature to modify the Coastal Act and this could very well be the result if the state commission is too rigid in its demands as the local plans are submitted. If the commission takes a rational stance, the integrity of the act need not be disturbed.

Brown-style politics

For four years, Gov. Jerry Brown stood firmly in favor of the Peripheral Canal plan to carry water around the Sacramento-San Joaquin Delta for export to Southern California.

When the controversial measure finally was passed by the Legislature, he signed it with a flourish.

Now that the canal plan is in danger, the governor is backing off.

Northern California opponents of the canal, fearing loss of water, have lined up a referendum, hoping to kill the measure with a statewide vote.

It was in the governor's power to call a special election on June 2. But Los Angeles and a number of other Southern California cities will be going to the polls on that date and supporters of the referendum feared too heavy a vote from the Southland where the canal is much in favor.

So the governor has let the deadline for placing the referendum on the ballot slip by without taking action, despite his professed support for the canal.

Now he doesn't even want to discuss the issue, doubtless looking further down the road to a time when he may need votes from throughout the state for his Senate bid. Politics can be a two-way street.

Professional experts live high

WASHINGTON — There are 4,958,491 people on the federal payroll, with more than 15,000 different specialties. They can produce expert answers on almost anything from the dynamics of the galaxies to the habits of the fruit fly. Yet there always seems to be a need for the high-paid services of outside experts.

This has spawned a whole new profession of expertise peddlers who often acquire their know-how working for the government in the first place. Then they leave government service to set up practice as consultants for fat fees befitting professional know-it-alls.

Apparently they fulfill some need in the psyche of bureaucrats, who seem to suffer from a basic insecurity over their own ability to spend the taxpayers' money efficiently.

THE PROFESSION has grown so rampantly, in fact, that no one has a clear idea of its size. Recent estimates have put government spending on private consultants at anywhere from $400 million to $2.5 billion a year.

The role of the private consultant perhaps can best be appreciated by examining one modest firm — Practical Concepts, Inc., which is located in Washington handy to the agencies that offer government contracts. Its specialty is "program evaluation" which has to do with manipulating the levers and wheels of the federal fuddle factory.

Such agencies as the Health and Human Services Department, the Small Business Administration and the Agency for International Development have hired Practical Concepts, Inc., to design and evaluate their programs. The bureaucrats profess to be pleased with the results. An AID spokesman told reporter Julie Kosterlitz, for example, that the firm is "very good, very capable."

Practical Concepts, Inc., to be referred hereinafter by its initials, PCI, in the bureaucratic manner, employs some 30 people to counsel bureaucrats. During the three-year period covered by a government audit, this cost the taxpayers less than $2 million annually — a mere droplet from the federal pump, though a large drop in PCI's small bucket.

A TOP EXPERT ON the federal payroll would cost the taxpayers no more than $61,000 annually. But the Defense Contract Audit Agency found that in 1978 PCI's president, executive vice president and vice president were paid $97,249, $70,957 and $56,947 respectively.

This compensation included salaries — which the audit found to be far higher than the average salaries paid by comparable firms — plus additional bonuses and perquisites the auditors questioned. About 60 percent of PCI's business is generated by federal contracts. Among the questionable expenses that PCI charged off, in part, to the government were:

— SCHOOL TUITION for the top executives' children.

— Rental of a Jaguar from a company owned by PCI's president, Leon Rosenberg. He used it to commute to and from the office. The auditors note that the contractor "claims that the car was used by its employees for local business travel," but they add that the only supporting evidence of local travel consisted of reimbursement for cab fare.

— Rental of a swimming pool and a tennis court, also from the president's company. "The tennis court and pool are located on the residential property of the president," the audit notes, adding: "The need for these recreational facilities at $3,200 per year has not been established."

— Rental of oil paintings from the president's company, at $1,920 a year, a need that also "has not been established."

— Rental of office furniture from a company owned by PCI's vice president — at greater expense than it would have cost to purchase the furniture outright.

— Rental of a telephone system from a company owned by PCI's president — also at greater cost than ownership.

— Memberships in the YMCA for the president and vice president, listed for the purpose of "employee morale."

— Payment of $400 a month to the executive vice president to provide sleeping quarters in her personal residence for "intermittent employees" on travel status.

— Payments "for liquor which we believe was used for entertainment," and is thus not allowable under federal regulations.

— REIMBURSEMENT to the firm's president for room and meals at a weekend conference for employees held at his home.

Asked about specific points in the audit, PCI's Rosenberg conceded that the liquor shouldn't have been charged to government contracts. He defended the rental expenditures as not only reasonable, but as good value for the money. The tuition payments were simply "advance on bonus" payments, later deducted from the bonuses, he said. As for the auditors' comparison of PCI executive compensation with that of other firms, Rosenberg questioned the auditors' choice of "comparable" firms. He said, "A firm doing quality work deserves more than the average."

Footnote: Despite the auditors' misgivings, PCI has just been awarded a two-year AID contract.

The new world of push-button democracy

NEW YORK — A recent edition of the New York Times, as I read it, reported routinely on the inevitable breakdown in the American criminal justice system, the stupidity of education as we know it, a new way of governing ourselves, and the end of public vice.

It was just another day in the revolution — "the Communications Revolution." The phrase is carelessly tossed around a lot these days, but three stories in that morning's paper gave it real meaning for me.

— "High Court Decides States Can Permit Televising of Trials.'

The front-page headlines announced that the nation's highest court had ruled unanimously that courtroom justice could be dispensed on television. The decision was consistent with state rulings that television equipment is now so unobtrusive that it does not disrupt trials.

The technology has improved — that's part of the revolution — so that you can hardly notice the wires and cameras now. But we may notice the results: television justice instead of courtroom justice. The people who bring us "That's Incredible" will decide which trials we'll see; crowds and talk-show offers will be there for popular defendants, judges and prosecutors. The punishment of public ridicule may be worse than anything a judge and jury can threaten. Televised justice is essentially a return to the stocks and pillory in the village square.

— "Television Blocks the View"

ANOTHER STORY reported that the Annenberg School of Communications at the University of Pennsylvania has concluded that television is the reason that "we have a serious national problem blocking the way of better understanding and support of science."

Blame television, the report states, because the networks depict scientists as older, more dangerous and shorter than other people — and uses them in cartoons. (I didn't make up that part about height — the university looked at 1,400 dramas and measured the characters). The whole thing is a joke, part of a useless attempt to try to change television to meet the needs of education rather than changing education because we now live in a television age.

TELEVISION is here to stay. It's our environment. What we need are different kinds of teaching and teachers to deal with children raised comfortably among cameras, screens, computers and lasers.

— "Almost Half of Sample in a Poll Reports 'Addiction'."

A third story reported that 205 people in Columbus, Ohio, indulged in "an obsessive, compulsive use of a substance or activity to cope with pain of any kind and to produce a high."

The reason that was news was that those people were almost half the 420 Columbus residents who had answered a question about addiction by pushing buttons on QUBE, the city's two-way cable television system. The idea of buttons and computers and percentages makes the whole thing seem valid; it must be true if it's electronic.

Who knows what the percentages really mean? But those same kinds of percentages recorded some day in two-way systems all over the country — will almost certainly become part of the political process. Interactive television, after all, could replace city councils and Congress. Direct electronic democracy.

The one thing about push-button democracy, though, is that there will still be a turnout problem — because there is a turn-on problem. In Columbus, after three years of use, far and away the highest-rated service QUBE offers is pornographic films. Dirty movies. Vice, as we used to call it, is moving off the streets and into Midwestern homes.

It's going to be a brand-new world. It is a genuine revolution, happening so fast that we hardly notice it. And we certainly don't know what all the results of this will be: the consequences of changing what we know and when we know it. The revolution may change democracy itself or it may just keep more of us at home at night and, maybe, produce a few more morning smiles.

Predicting history's a hazardous undertaking

Driven by a relentless sense of greed, I consented to take part in a symposium last year called "The Shape of Things to Come." My participation was fraudulent as well as venal, since I haven't the foggiest notion of the shape of things to come.

The venture brought to mind one of the less successful projects of Herbert Hoover. When he was Secretary of Commerce in 1922, he commissioned a study of "future trends" in the U.S. and the world. For eight years, more than 30 specialists in different fields labored at this project. Finally, in early 1930, when Mr. Hoover was president, they delivered up their massive four-volume report.

AMONG THE THINGS they neglected to predict were the Great Depression, the collapse of the League of Nations, the spread of Communism, the rise of Fascism, the start of World War II less than a decade away, and most of the incipient revolutions and innovations in technology, medicine, transportation, agriculture, and social and economic disruptions.

The fact of the matter is that while no one has an unclouded crystal ball — including myself, most of all — the specialists are almost the worst people to consult about the future in their own areas.

Political and military leaders have been no more accurate than academic or scientific experts in predicting the course of history, even at short range. In 1776 George Washington estimated that the war for American independence "depends in all human probability on the exertion of a few weeks." Yet it was not until seven agonizing years later that the war finally ground to an end.

Likewise, Lincoln privately expressed his belief that the North might overcome the South in well under a year — but the Civil War, as we know, lasted for four years, taking the greatest toll of lives in history up to that time.

ON THE very eve of the Napoleonic Wars, in early 1792, the British prime minister, William Pitt, forecast at least 15 years of peace for Europe. The war that followed a few weeks later lasted for nearly a quarter of a century!

And a century later, when Lord Granville became Britain's foreign secretary in 1870, he was informed by the permanent under-secretary that "I have never, during my long experience, known so great a lull in foreign affairs, and am not aware of any important questions we have to deal with."

On that same day, a German prince accepted the crown of Spain, an event that three weeks later led to the outbreak of the Franco-Prussian War. So much for the shape of things to come.

Quotes

"I know there is great concern over that. I think it's part of a Vietnam syndrome. But we have no intention of that kind of involvement." — President Reagan, at an impromptu news conference, responding to critics who are worried that sending military equipment and advisers to El Salvador could lead to Vietnam-type involvement.

It's that day again

Shawn Buffer, 10, of Clovis, has some luck for sale in time for another Friday the 13th. But that ol' devil, inflation, has hit even the horseshoe market. Last month, which also had a Friday the 13th, the shoes sold for $1.50. Now they're $2.50, says Shawn. He gets them from his grandfather's blacksmith shop.

Report says

1 of 3 homes get U.S. aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Census Bureau, in its first look at who gets government help, reports that federal benefit programs reach one out of every three American households.

The agency studied non-cash assistance programs as of 1979, reporting on the recipients of food stamps, school lunch aid, subsidized housing, Medicare and Medicaid.

According to the report, made public Thursday, these programs reached 27,190,000 households out of a total of 79,108,000.

Medicare is the single largest program, covering one or more persons in 18,526,000 households.

Gordon W. Green Jr., author of the report, cautioned that the number of people covered by Medicare means the totals do not merely reflect a picture of assistance to the poor.

Medicare eligibility is based on age or being disabled, he noted, not income. Green said that people receiving only Medicare totaled more than half of those studied. Thus, those receiving assistance based on income level accounted for about one household in six.

Ninety percent of the people covered by Medicare were white, 9 percent black and the rest were listed as Hispanic.

According to the report, 15 million of the involved households included someone aged 65 or over.

Forty percent of the covered individuals either lived alone or with other people not related to them, and in 78 percent of the cases the householder was female.

The median income of households with someone covered by Medicare was $8,484, compared to $16,533 for all households in the country. Green noted that most Medicare recipients are over age 65 and living on retirement income.

While Medicare is aimed at the aged and disabled, Medicaid tries to help needy families with dependent children. It covered 18.1 million people in eight million households under a complex array of rules which vary from state to state.

The median income of households with Medicaid coverage was only $5,990.

Of them, 68 percent had a white householder, 30 percent were black and 9 percent Hispanic, according to the figures.

Those totals, and some others, will add up to more than 100 percent because some Hispanics list themselves as white or black as to race, and Hispanic as to national origin. This can result in a household being counted as Hispanic and also under the white or black category.

Quacks exposed

DEAR READERS: As part of its educational campaign, the Food and Drug Administration is offering a booklet entitled "The Big Quack Attack: Medical Devices." Categories range from figure-enhancing to cure-all devices. Designed to aid consumers in recognizing the general characteristics of device quackery the booklet contains information on where and how to report problems.

Single copies are available by postcard request from: FDA/Big Quack Attack, Consumer Communications Staff (HFE-88), Office of Consumer Affairs, 5600 Fishers Lane, Rockville, Md. 20857.

Air fare refund due

DEAR PAT DUNN: We took our vacation last October and traveled with a major airline. I heard there might be a refund of excise tax coming to us. Will you look into this for me?

J.Y., Newport Beach

On Oct. 1, 1980, the air passenger ticket tax was reduced from 8 percent to 5 percent. Also, the $3-per-passenger international departure tax expired.

If tickets were purchased before Oct. 1, 1980, claims may be filed directly with the issuing airline's refund department or with the IRS. If tickets were purchased on or after that date, claims should be filed only with the issuing airline's refund department. In all cases, passengers are required to provide passenger coupons to document their claims.

Rx for consumers

DEAR READERS: "Pharmacy Services — Your Bill of Rights" is the title of a new consumer publication offered by the California Pharmacists Association.

It explains the pharmacist's basic responsibility to see that patients get the right drug in the proper quantity to meet required medical needs and make certain the patient is protected from drug interactions and other adverse effects. The booklet also describes services available from your family pharmacist. Consultation, patient medication records, coordination of drug therapy, drug therapy recommendation, emergency and delivery services also are discussed.

Ask your pharmacist for a copy of this pamphlet, or request it by mailing a self-addressed, stamped envelope to California Pharmacists Association, 555 Capitol Mall, Suite 645, Sacramento 95814.

"Got a problem" Then write to Pat Dunn. Pat will cut red tape, getting the answers and action you need to solve inequities in government and business. Mail your questions to Pat Dunn, At Your Service, Orange Coast Daily Pilot, P.O. Box 1560, Costa Mesa, CA 92626. As many letters as possible will be answered, but phoned inquiries or letters not including the reader's full name, address and business hours' phone number cannot be considered. This column appears daily except Sundays."

Prostitutes taken off Vegas Strip

LAS VEGAS (AP) — A three-night police crackdown on the hordes of prostitutes prowling the glittering Las Vegas Strip has resulted in 377 citations or arrests, a top police official said.

The roundup began Monday night when about two dozen uniformed and plainclothes officers spread out along the Strip and began taking suspected prostitutes into custody, said Assistant Sheriff Jere Vanek. The women were put aboard a bus where most were issued citations, kept for the rest of the night and then released.

Police, faced with overcrowded conditions in the Clark County Jail, have turned to issuing citations to most prostitutes. But some women arrested in the crackdown have been jailed because "they had warrants for them already for failure to come in on the other citation," Vanek said.

'PADRE PADRONE' IMAGE FADES
Rome father pushes child's stroller

Tradition falls

Italian husbands don aprons

ROME (AP) — When Antonio Da Silva first hung out the wash on a clothesline outside his house, neighborhood women gathered and stared. They'd never seen a man do that before.

"The second or third time they got used to it," says Da Silva. "Now it's accepted. The customs are changing."

Da Silva, 29, of the northern city of Sassuolo, near Bologna, is one of a small but growing number of Italian men abandoning their traditional roles and learning to do the laundry, wash the dishes, shop for groceries, cook and care for the kids.

OLD TRADITIONS die hard here and the image of "padre padrone" or "the father as boss" still prevails in most of Italy.

In small towns, especially in the south, most women work the fields, harvest the olives and grapes, tend the livestock as well as do all the cooking and housework. The men sit in sidewalk cafes playing cards for hours while the women work.

But in some cities, a few men are taking up dish towels, changing diapers and helping out around the house. Supermarkets in Rome, once women's domain, are crowded with men. Men who once expected dinner on the table when they came home are showing their talents as cooks.

"THERE IS A BIG difference between the generations," said Sandro Mantovani, 35, of Rome, who divides cooking and housework with his wife, Giuliana. "People who grew up in the 1960s are very different from the generation before. The women have changed a lot. They've achieved an autonomy. They've discovered themselves and they've discovered their rights."

The change hasn't been easy. Several men said they are doing housework only after endless battles with their wives about it. Some say they've given in only after boycotts.

"After your wife has left the dishes in the sink for two weeks, what can you do? You're stuck washing them," said Francesco Peddelay of Rome.

"THE MEN ARE changing their attitude, whether voluntarily or involuntarily," said Roberto Ferrazza, whose family lives on the outskirts of Rome. "In my family, my father is doing more work at home, like heavy house cleaning or painting. He's spending more time at home too, maybe just because there were so many fights about it. My mother said, 'You have no choice, either you do it or I leave'."

Although Italy is still a country in which women must dodge wolf-whistlers and bottom pinchers on city buses, the laws concerning the role of women are among the most progressive in Western Europe.

In 1975, Parliament passed the Italian equivalent of the proposed U.S. Equal Rights Amendment and did away with "patria potestas," Latin for paternal power, an ancient Roman rule stating that the husband is the only authority in the family.

"From a legal point of view, we're a very advanced country, indeed," Margherita Boniver, a Socialist Party senator, said in an interview. "But there's a tremendous discrepancy between what the law says on paper and what actually happens."

Hormone test set

LONDON (AP) — About 150 workers at British pharmaceutical firms will undergo medical tests to help determine the risks involved in exposure to estrogen, a potent female hormone used in making contraceptive pills, a government health spokesman said.

Exchanges revealed in air crash tape

The pilot of Air California flight 336 was searching the sky for another plane, asking the tower, "Can you tell us where he is?" just before crash landing at John Wayne Airport on Feb. 17, according to an official copy of the airport tower tape.

The airliner, with 106 passengers and a crew of five, crashed in a failed attempt to regain altitude when — in the words of the air controller — it "might have stalled," according to the tape.

The breakup of the plane, and the fire that followed, injured 34 passengers — three of whom required hospitalization.

Capt. Don Clark, the Air California flight 336 pilot, first made contact with the tower at 5:32 p.m., two minutes and 17 seconds before the official time of the accident, and reported "Air California 336 on visual approach."

The controller, who has not been identified publicly, responded, "Keep it nice and square, sir, you're following traffic between you and that Boeing on final."

Another Boeing 737, Western Airlines flight 83, touched down on the runway at 5:33 p.m.

Clark replied to the tower, "Orange County, this is 336. We don't have our secondary traffic in view. Can you tell us where he is?"

To which the controller said, "He's probably going to end up behind you. I got him on a 360 . . . see how it works out."

The "secondary traffic," a Bonanza aircraft, did end up behind the ill-fated flight 336.

At around 5:33 p.m., the controller cleared flight 336 for its final approach to land.

While flight 336 was on its final landing approach, at 5:33.50 p.m., the controller was clearing another Air California 737 jet, flight 931, for takeoff.

"Air California 931, traffic (Western flight 383) clearing at end of runway. Clear for takeoff, sir."

Then, referring to the approaching Air California flight 336, the controller said, "Boeing 737, mile-and-a-half out."

Immediately afterwards, apparently realizing the planes were possibly too close together, the controller began a series of orders to the pilots of Air California flights 336 and 931, directing them to abort their respective patterns.

He told the landing craft, "Okay, Air California 336, go around. 336, go around."

Turning from Mao

China change told

By DAVID KUTZMANN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

During the violent years of upheaval in China in the 1960s, visitors at a shooting gallery in a Peking park usually would take aim at targets dressed to resemble American soldiers.

By the 1970s, those same visitors would shoot at targets that had come to look like Soviet soldiers.

But these days, park visitors fire at nothing more dangerous than replicas of ducks, giraffes and leopards, "nothing to remind the Chinese of ideology or anything too serious," Harvard sinologist Ray Terrill says.

Terrill, a noted China scholar, said the huge Communist nation, a population colossus, is now in a "delicate stage of transition" that would make former leader Mao Tse-tung "turn in his mausoleum."

In an address to the World Affairs Council of Orange County this week, Terrill said post-Mao China has witnessed significant changes, the transformation of the shooting gallery targets being just one small, but vivid, example.

Bigger changes, Terrill told community leaders at the Saddleback Inn, include a new emphasis on economics over politics; a reduction in the scope of Communist ideology; the creation of rules and regulations to mold a "government of laws," and a "new degree of openness" to non-Chinese ideas and influences.

"The materialism of the Chinese people is returning," said Terrill, an Australian-born author who is an associate professor of government at Harvard and a contributing editor to Atlantic Monthly.

Terrill, recently invited to lecture in China, said economic issues are being given priority where once politics ruled Chinese life.

He said the fate of the present Chinese government may well hinge on the kinds of economic results government leaders can produce.

Nevertheless, China will remain a poor country for the foreseeable future, he said. However, it is becoming an influential nation as it opens its doors to the rest of the world again.

"China is collectively very grand," said Terrill, who also is to address world affairs councils in San Francisco and San Diego.

With economics being thrust in the spotlight, ideology has become less important, he said. "(The Chinese) have stopped talking about class struggle," he explained.

"You have business management entering the picture not discussed in Marxist terms," Terrill said.

He added, "Communism as an idea is probably dying in China."

Coupled with this, Terrill said, is an attempt by leaders to fashion a constitutional government of laws to move away from the "arbitrariness" which characterized the years under Mao's leadership.

"It's a cautious, but I think, hopeful attempt to establish predictability and individual rights in the Chinese system," he told his 450 listeners.

At the same time, the nation has opened itself to new ideas and influences, resulting in a tripling of foreign trade. "The Chinese are looking everywhere for ideas," the educator said.

But if there have been significant changes, there also has been little progress.

"The bureaucratic disease of China has not changed very much," Terrill said.

By this, he said he meant there was still a "corruption of power" rather than a "corruption of wealth."

A credibility gap also has emerged with Mao at the center. "They need his authority even if they don't like his ideas," said Terrill of a man he described as the Marx, Lenin and Stalin of his country's revolution.

$1,000 reward

Lagunans seeking return of musket

The family of Laguna Beach lawyer Bill Wilcoxen is offering a $1,000 reward for the return of a Revolutionary War flintlock rifle stolen from his offices this week.

"We think the thief might try to sell it to a collector," said the attorney's mother, Helen.

She said the $1,000 would be paid for the return of the musket, or for information that leads to the return of the weapon.

"It was brought over here from France by Lafayette during the Revolutionary War," Mrs. Wilcoxen said.

"It has been passed down for at least five generations," she said.

She said anyone with information should call 494-7980 or 494-7565.

Rites set Sunday for Gladys Noble

A memorial service will be held Sunday for Gladys Noble, one of Fountain Valley's first city employees, who died March 4 at Hoag Memorial Hospital in Newport Beach.

Mrs. Noble, a Huntington Beach resident, was 70.

A native of Ohio, Mrs. Noble and her family moved to Orange County in 1959. She began working for Fountain Valley in 1961, and became its communications coordinator, answering telephone inquiries and greeting City Hall visitors.

According to her family, she was affectionately known as "the voice of City Hall."

She retired in 1973 but continued to work for the city on a fill-in basis for several years.

The daughter of a Nazarene minister, Mrs. Noble was active in many area church programs.

She is survived by her husband Wesley; four children, Grace Israel of Reseda, Bud L. Herren of El Toro, Donna Hayes of Long Beach, and Janet Hamill of East Flat Rock, N.C.; two sisters, Grace Klimko of Youngstown, Ohio, and Mary Beth Holloway of Lancaster, Ohio; a brother, Carl Schroeder of Tennessee; seven grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

The memorial service will begin at 2 p.m. at the Sky Valley Retreat in Desert Hot Springs.

The family has suggested donations to the Gladys Noble Memorial Fund, 23008 Main St., P.O. Box 2, Homeworth, Ohio 44634.

WINDMILL TOWERS OVER STREET LIGHT
Saving on electric bill in Huntington Beach

'No problem'

HB man's windmill backed

By ROBERT BARKER
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Things apparently are looking up for a Huntington Beach man who has installed a 60-foot high windmill in the backyard of his home.

ROY SCANE HAD the $10,000 windmill installed in late January with the aim of producing some of his own energy and saving on his electricity bill.

Scane received a permit that was issued in error because the city doesn't have any regulations dealing with windmills.

Normally, such structures are limited to 15 feet in Huntington Beach.

THE CITY rescinded the permit, but Scane declared it would be "a cold day in hell" before he took the windmill down.

It now looks like that cold day won't arrive because planning officials indicate they will recommend that the windmill stay put.

"Scane has a deep lot that is backed by a flood control channel and the windmill doesn't seem to have any adverse impact on his neighbors," said Pat Spencer, assistant director of the city's Development Services Department.

"IT LOOKS nice and hasn't caused any problems."

Spencer said he will recommend to the city Planning Commission Tuesday night that the height of future windmills be determined by size of lots, how esthetic they look and whether they cast shadows on their neighbors.

Schools' lunches going up?

By JERRY CLAUSEN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Newport-Mesa School District parents who began paying to bus their kids to school this year and who already have paid fees for some classes may have new money woes next September.

School lunches, a district official observed, could go up 40 or 50 cents next year.

Eve Cremers, district food services director, told district trustees this week that President Reagan's proposed spending cuts are expected to hit the families of students who pay for their lunches or breakfasts at local schools.

She said information out of Washington, D.C., indicates that cuts in Agriculture Department and other federal subsidies could result in meal price rises of up to 32 cents.

Rumblings in Sacramento indicate that similar cuts by state officials will add eight more cents to the price of meals.

Her predictions came Tuesday as the board mulled over proposals for raising the current cost of lunches a dime in the district to offset increased cafeteria food and operating costs.

The food services organization prides itself on being self sufficient, taking nothing from the district's general fund.

Trustees rejected the proposed 10-cent hike, but they did raise the price of several a la carte food items served at the schools.

Trustee Barbara Skilling proposed rejecting the full lunch and breakfast price hikes because, she said, she hates to raise prices now and then again when school opens in September.

Lunch and breakfast prices have risen 15 cents already this year, one trustee noted.

Elementary schools charge 40 cents for breakfasts and 70 cents for lunches.

Middle schools charge 50 and 75 cents, while high schools get 60 and 85 cents.

Under the new a la carte prices approved by trustees Tuesday, most sandwiches are going up 25 cents, making roast beef or tuna sandwiches $1 each.

Special sandwiches, such as poor boys, grinders or beef dips will go up 35 cents, topping out at $1.25.

The venerable hamburger will go up only a nickel to 80 cents, while the hot dog moves up the same amount to 70 cents.

The district is holding the price of tacos to 60 cents, but school-made pizza servings go up 15 cents to a new 75-cent price tag.

2 Mesa boys captured in market heist

Two Costa Mesa 14-year-old boys are lodged in Orange County Juvenile Hall today on suspicion of robbery following a bizarre hostage act that allegedly netted them $50 from a local store earlier this month.

Alan Kent, juvenile investigator, said the boys were arrested late Wednesday after he talked to youngsters throughout the city.

It was at 7:45 p.m. on March 3 that two boys walked into the La Linda Michoacana Market, 600 W. 19th St., where one of the youths grabbed the other, held a knife to his throat and demanded the store's money.

He said he'd cut the other lad ear to ear, employees told police at the time.

As one clerk ran to a back room to search for his gun, Kent said, the boys reached into the cash drawer as an astonished clerk watched and darted from the market.

Anselm Jacobson services Saturday

Funeral services are scheduled Saturday for longtime Costa Mesa resident Anselm B. Jacobson, 87, who died Wednesday at a Newport Beach hospital following an illness.

His daughter, the Rev. Marley Spilman of St. Paul's Methodist Church, San Jose, will officiate at the 11 a.m. service in the Baltz Bergeron-Smith & Tuthill Westcliff Chapel, 427 E. 17th St., Costa Mesa.

Mr. Jacobson moved to Costa Mesa with his family in 1944 from Minnesota where he had farmed for several years.

He was a Costa Mesa-based house painter with the A. Taylor Co. for 35 years before retiring in 1970.

He is survived by his wife Hazel, of Costa Mesa; a son, Maynard, of Minnesota and four daughters, Mrs. Spilman, Adelaine Gomez of Placentia, Audrey Eldridge of Costa Mesa and Jorraine Gunberg of Portland, Ore.

Also surviving are two sisters, Mrs. Hilda Frietag of Quartz Hill and Signe Dilleshaw of Texas; a brother, Bertil Jacobson of Minnesota; 16 grandchildren and 27 great-grandchildren.

Friends may call at the chapel Friday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Private interment will be at Melrose Abbey Memorial Park in Anaheim following Saturday's service.

Safety in cars to be discussed

The safety of children who ride as passengers in cars is the subject of a seminar scheduled at 2 p.m. Saturday at the Costa Mesa Junior Women's clubhouse, 610 W. 18th St., Costa Mesa.

Dr. Phyllis Agran of the UCI Medical Center will present information derived from a UCI study on injuries children suffer depending on their position in cars and the types of restraining devices used.

Linguists vow to stay

Bible workers to continue in Colombia

By GEORGE CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK — With a colleague slain by terrorists in Colombia, the 109 other Wycliffe linguists working there were offered the option of pulling out. But they're sticking to their task of putting unlettered languages into writing.

"All of them voted to stay," says Anne Minor, communications director at the organization's International Linguistics Center in Dallas. "It's risky. Wherever there are terrorists, it's dangerous. But the work will go forward."

That fortitude is characteristic of Wycliffe Bible Translators — Summer Institute of Linguistics, whose global corps of more than 4,000 linguists are the world's chief pioneers of the newly written word.

SERVING IN REMOTE, primitive areas in 30 countries among tribes whose spoken tongues have never been put in writing, the linguists analyze the phonetic meanings, develop alphabets, basic dictionaries and finally, Scriptures.

"We emphasize service to all," says W. Cameron Townsend, 84, the folksy, amiable founder, president emeritus and premier diplomat and negotiator with governments in spreading the organization's work.

"We identify with the people we serve. We don't sit in judgments on governments and never meddle in politics. That opens doors. We help them and they help us. It works.

"WE'RE NON-ECCLESIastical and we're not propagating any doctrine or denomination or starting any organizations. We feel if we give the people the word, God will take care of the rest of it. And he has."

"Uncle Cam," as he's called, flew to Colombia this week from his base in Waxhaw, N.C., to encourage the staff there in the wake of the kidnap-slaying of American linguist Chester Bitterman, and to confer with government officials in working out any ensuing difficulties.

The linguistic organization, although started by California-born Townsend in the 1930s, has an international staff from 22 nations and various denominations, Protestant and Catholic, trained in researching unwritten languages and giving them written form.

MARTYRED
Chester Bitterman III

IT TAKES 10 TO 20 years for each one. With a budget of $27 million annually, contributed by individuals and churches, the linguists are working with more than 750 languages.

The organization has completed alphabets, elemental dictionaries and Scripture portions in about 600 languages, New Testaments in 150 of them, with the number growing.

Although putting the Bible in reach of the people is the final goal, this first requires producing the written language and teaching people to read it, which gives the work broad literacy-educational value.

There are more than 5,000 languages in the world, many of them isolated tribal tongues and distinct dialects. At least one book of the Bible has been published in 1,710 of them, the American Bible Society says.

WYCLIFFE TRANSLATORS work closely with the national Bible societies around the world. They do most of the printing, once the languages have been set to writing.

The linguists serve on the staff of the Summer Institute of Linguistics or SIL, so named for its nine-week summer training courses given at universities in six countries, including four U.S. campuses.

Its headquarters are in Dallas, while its U.S. adjunct, Wycliffe Bible Translators, is based in Huntington Beach. The organization's Jungle Aviation and Radio Service, with about 50 planes and 100 pilots operating in various lands, is in Waxhaw.

REGARDING THE terrorist group's charges in Colombia that the linguists are linked to the CIA, similar anti-American accusations have arisen occasionally elsewhere, but the organization's long-standing policy rejects any such ties.

"They're absolutely untrue," Townsend says. Such charges, raised in Peru in 1977, were declared disproved after an extensive Peruvian investigation.

Townsend has made 11 visits to the Soviet Union seeking to open work there.

Senator sues UC president

LOS ANGELES (AP) — State Sen. Paul Carpenter says he's tired of state officials dipping into the treasury to campaign for or against public initiatives.

And he thinks he has the court case that will "establish once and for all that it is illegal to use tax dollars for political purposes."

The Cypress Democrat has sued University of California President David Saxon for mailing a letter last fall to students warning them that if Proposition 9 passed, UC would have to impose tuition.

CARPENTER SUPPORTED THE measure, which would have halved state income taxes. But it was defeated.

CARPENTER

"I think there are some well-documented cases . . . clearly establishing it is illegal to use tax money for or against any issue," Carpenter said in an interview. "If the government can use tax dollars to campaign for or against a public issue, then it can perpetuate itself forever . . . and that obviates democracy."

He said Saxon's move to print and mail the letters at university expense "flagrantly violates this principle."

Carpenter's attorney is Trevor Grimm of Los Angeles, who has represented tax reformer Howard Jarvis, the leading supporter of Proposition 9.

HIS SUIT HAS BEEN JOINED WITH one also filed against Saxon by a UC Davis law student, Clint Bolick, who will be represented by Yolo County attorney Bob Burnside, a recent UC Davis graduate.

At the time, Saxon defended the action by saying he felt compelled to warn parents that Proposition 9 would lead to a reduced income for the university and that, in turn, would mean tuition.

UC is considered tuition-free since the fees charged students are not used for the instructional program.

The suits are asking for Saxon to personally repay the $29,594 used to mail the letters to the homes of some 130,000 UC students throughout California.

Ballets canceled

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Ballet has decided to cancel preliminary plans to perform in South Africa this summer because of "intense political debate" over that country's racial policies.

Teaches gays

SF coroner advises on S-M sex dangers

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The coroner, whose main concern usually is dead bodies and how they got that way, is also giving instruction to homosexuals on how to survive sado-masochistic sex.

"...We decided that instead of making value judgments or ignoring the problem, we would try to save lives," said Coroner Boyd Stephens.

Dr. Stephens estimated that 10 percent of the city's homicides are S&M-related.

Stephens held his first workshop Feb. 10 after fliers announcing the sessions were posted in some 30 bars and bath houses frequented by adherents of the pain-and-bondage brand of sex.

Stephens said San Francisco is possibly the only city in the country where public officials provide information on S&M, wherein pain is inflicted on restrained, willing partners. Stephens said S&M fatalities in San Francisco almost exclusively involve homosexuals.

Brutality is not the rule among the city's gays, he said, but often the dominant parties in the partnership are dangerous criminals, some of whom cruise S&M haunts looking for victims, who are often robbed.

SIGNATURE ON BONDS: At least one of the signatures on the bonds will be manually affixed.

INTEREST: The bonds shall bear interest at a rate or rates to be fixed upon the sale thereof but not to exceed 7% per annum, payable annually for the first year and semi-annually thereafter.

PAYMENT: Said bonds and the interest thereon are payable in lawful money of the United States of America at the office of the Treasurer of Orange County.

REGISTRATION: The bonds will be coupon bonds registerable only as to both principal and interest.

NOT CALLABLE: The bonds are not callable before maturity.

SECURITY: Said bonds are general obligations of said school district, payable both principal and interest from ad valorem taxes which, under the laws now in force, may be levied without limitation as to rate or amount upon all of the taxable property, except certain personal property, in said school district.

TERMS OF SALE

INTEREST RATE: The maximum rate bid may not exceed 7% per annum, payable annually the first year and semi-annually thereafter. Each rate bid must be a multiple of 1/20 of 1%. No bond shall bear more than one interest rate, and all bonds of the same maturity shall bear the same rate. Each bond must bear interest at the rate specified in the bid from its date to its fixed maturity date. Not more than 4 interest rates may be bid, and there shall not be a spread of more than 1% between the highest and lowest interest rates bid. The repetition of any rate will not be considered the bidding of an additional rate.

Award: The bonds shall be sold for cash only. All bids must be for not less than all of the bonds hereby offered for sale and each bid shall state that the bidder offers par and accrued interest to the date of delivery, the premium, if any, and the interest rate or rates not to exceed those specified herein, at which the bidder offers to buy said bonds. Each bidder shall state in his bid the total net interest cost in dollars and the average net interest rate determined thereby, which shall be considered informative only and not a part of the bid.

Highest Bidder: The bonds will be awarded to the highest responsible bidder or bidders considering the interest rate or rates specified and the premium offered, if any. The highest bid will be determined by deducting the amount of the premium bid (if any) from the total amount of interest which the district would be required to pay from the date of said bonds to the respective maturity dates thereof at the coupon rate or rates specified in the bid and the award will be made on the basis of the lowest net interest cost to the district. The lowest net interest cost shall be computed on a 360-day year basis. The purchaser must pay accrued interest from the date of the bonds to the date of delivery. The cost of printing the bonds will be borne by the district.

Right of Rejection: The Board of Supervisors reserves the right, in its discretion, to reject any and all bids and to the extent not prohibited by law to waive any irregularity or informality in any bid.

Prompt Award: The Board of Supervisors will take action awarding the bonds or rejecting all bids not later than twenty-six hours after the expiration of the time herein prescribed for the receipt of proposals, provided, that the award may be made after the expiration of the specified time if the bidder shall not have given to said Board notice in writing of the withdrawal of such proposal.

Place of Delivery: Delivery of said bonds will be made to the successful bidder at the office of the County Auditor-Controller of Orange County.

Prompt Delivery, Cancellation for Late Delivery: It is expected that said bonds will be delivered to the successful bidder within thirty days from the date of sale thereof. The successful bidder shall have the right, at his option, to cancel the contract of purchase if the bonds are not tendered for delivery within sixty days from the date of the sale thereof, and in such event the successful bidder shall be entitled to the return of the deposit accompanying his bid.

Form of Bid: Each bid, together with the bid check, must be in a sealed envelope, addressed to the district with the envelope and bid clearly marked "Proposal for Irvine Unified School District Bonds."

Bid Check: A certified or cashier's check on a responsible bank or trust company in the amount of 3% of the principal amount of the bonds, payable to the order of the County Treasurer must accompany each proposal as a guaranty that the bidder, if successful, will accept and pay for said bonds in accordance with the terms of his bid. The proceeds of the check accompanying any accepted proposal shall be applied on the purchase price or, if such proposal is accepted but not performed, unless such failure of performance shall be caused by any act or omission of the district, shall then be retained by said Treasurer for the benefit of the district. The check accompanying each unaccepted proposal will be returned promptly.

Change in Tax Exempt Status: At any time before the bonds are tendered for delivery the successful bidder may disaffirm and withdraw the proposal if the interest received by private holders from bonds of the same type and character shall be declared to be taxable income under present federal income tax laws, either by a ruling of the Internal Revenue Service or by a decision of any federal court, or shall be declared taxable, or be required to be taken into account in computing any federal income taxes, by the terms of any federal income tax law enacted subsequent to the date of this notice.

Legal Opinion: The unqualified opinion of O'Melveny & Meyers, attorneys, approving the validity of said bonds will be furnished the successful bidder at or prior to the date of delivery of the bonds, at the expense of the district. A copy of the legal opinion certified by the County Auditor by his facsimile signature will be printed on the back of each bond without cost to the successful bidder, if requested in his bid.

CUSIP: CUSIP numbers have been applied for and if requested by the purchaser, will be printed on the bonds at the purchaser's expense.

No Litigation Certificate: At the time of payment for and delivery of said bonds the successful bidder will be furnished with a certificate that there is no litigation pending affecting the validity of the bonds.

Career Day 1981

Students at Corona del Mar High School this week got an in-depth look at job opportunities during "Career Day 1981 — Looking Toward the Future". Los Angeles newsman Cal Campbell (above) from KLOS told how to get into radio. The Rev. Steve Sallot (right), from Our Lady Queen of Angels Church, talked of church work. Todd Theilbar (below) listens to UCI's Harvey Williams, Ph.D., (bottom) talk of the future.

Shafted out of the job

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I would like to say something in defense of the job applicant who, in an interview, said, "I am working now, but I can start right away." (The person who wrote to you said he would not hire anyone who had so little integrity that he would leave his empployer without giving notice.)

If I were you, Ann, I wouldn't be so quick to side with the employer against the applicant.

I was one who always felt it was important to conduct myself with integrity. After several years with a certain company, I decided to change careers. I gave my boss two weeks' notice. He became angry and said, "You can quit right now. Someone else will be sitting at your desk tomorrow morning!" This resulted in my being without my income for two weeks while I waited to begin my new job. Where was HIS integrity?

I'm not saying it's wrong to give two weeks' notice. Just stupid.

— SHAFTED IN ST. PETERSBURG

Dear Shafted: Just because you ran into a lemon is no reason to turn sour on the whole human race. And whatever happened to severance pay? A boss has the right to say, "You can quit now," but he should have had the decency to give you two weeks' salary, then and there.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My younger sister and her husband, both 36, have been trying to have a family for five years. Last September they finally succeeded. Our joy was short-lived. The child was born brain-damaged. The doctors said it was due to her difficult and complicated delivery.

The prognosis is uncertain as to how dependent this child will be. They say it is too early to tell.

How can I help my sister with this horrendous challenge?

— UPSTATE NEW YORK READER

Dear Friend: Buy your sister a subscription to The Exceptional Parent. It is a superb magazine for parents whose children require a great deal of love and understanding because of emotional, mental or physical problems. This publication is a gold mine of information. It will give your sis and her husband a tremendous life — as well as hope, which is what they need desperately at this time.

Price for an annual subscription is $14. Write to Stanley D. Klein, editor of The Exceptional Parent, 296 Boylston St., Boston, Mass. 02116. Those parents will bless you forever.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: The woman who was always getting lost and was told she had some form of dyslexia asked if there were others like her. Tell her yes. I am one.

I can't read a road map to save my soul. I get lost in parking lots and often need help to find my car. When I go to the powder room in a large restaurant I can't find my way back to the table.

No one else in my family has this probelem, so it's not genetic. What do you think?

— GROPING IN SULLIVAN, MO.

Dear Groping: It could still be genetic — a grandparent who died before you were born and kept his problem a secret. Whatever, it's a difficult thing to cope with and if it's any comfort, you're not alone.

A no-nonsense approach to how to deal with life's most difficult and most rewarding arrangement. Ann Landers' booklet, "Marriage — What to Expect," will prepare you for better or worse. Send your request to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Ill. 60611, enclosing 50 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

SATURDAY, MARCH 14

By SYDNEY OMARR

HOROSCOPE

ARIES (Mar. 21-Apr. 19): You gain more "operating room." Chance exists for original approach, fascinating contacts, romance, outlet for creative talents. Leo, Aquarius persons figure prominently. Focus also on property, security and welfare of family.

TAURUS (Apr. 20-May 20): Hunch is on target — you learn by teaching, sense of direction is regained and, accommodation is made with "feuding" relative. Quick trip, calls, messages dominate busy scenario. Cancer, Capricorn, Aquarius natives figure prominently.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Get points across, open lines of communication, accept invitation to social affair. Elements of timing and luck aid in "financial coup." Sagittarius, Leo and Aries natives play important roles.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You get what you want through unique change, turn of circumstances. Cycle high — you instinctively determine right place to be at proper moment. Aquarius, Leo, Scorpio persons figure prominently. Dilemma is resolved.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Information, long sought, will be handed you on proverbial silver platter. Involves written material, special communication and "feelings" of member of opposite sex. Romantic interlude is on agenda.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Unique combination of diplomacy and persuasion makes wish come true. Focus on expense, income, home improvement and reconciliation with family member. Major domestic adjustment is spotlighted. Libra figures prominently.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You are close to goal, but it is elusive. Important to define terms; superior will have change of heart. Perceive situations, people as they are, not merely as you wish they might exist.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Much that seems out-of-reach is actually available. Highlight production, challenge, responsibility and confidence enough to invest in pet project. Capricorn, Taurus, Virgo natives figure prominently. Outline travel plans.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Plug financial drain. Let go of past concepts — strive to gain pulse of public. Move with the times; realistic approach aids in avoiding financial embarrassment. Important projects can now be successfully completed.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Break from tradition is indicated; fresh legal interpretation highlights scenario. Focus on public relations, joint efforts and marital status. Maintain low profile. If patient, you get to heart of matters.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Intuitive intellect is sharply honed. Emphasis on employment, special services, dependents and pets. Another Aquarian, Cancer and Capricorn figure prominently. Learn by teaching — by sharing, you make significant gains.

PISCES (Feb. 19-Mar. 20): Good lunar aspect coincides now with change of heart, spur to creative processes. Travel plans come into focus. Member of opposite sex figures prominently. Young person surprises by revealing "excellent news."

Sudden fall in blood pressure

DOCTOR IN THE HOUSE

DEAR DR. STEINCROHN: I'm in a bind. I'm full of ambition, yet I hate to get up in the morning. At times my family thinks I'm malingering when I complain of terrible dizziness when I get out of bed. They think I'm lazy.

I'm 24, hold a good job and feel healthy. It's the mornings that are my nemesis. When I stand up — even after a good night's sleep — I feel faint and dizzy and scared.

All my doctor has told me to do is "sit by the side of the bed and get up slowly." This helps a little, but I wonder what else I can do. I'm also concerned that it may be serious. — MR. H.

Dear Mr. H.: The causes of dizziness and faintness and anxiety run into the hundreds. But if you want me to wonder also, I'll offer one possible cause of your trouble.

It's an affliction found in some healthy young adults as well as in the elderly. It's called "postural hypotension." This means a sudden fall in blood pressure due to poor postural adjustment.

Sometimes it's aggravated during hot weather, by physical exhaustion, or prolonged stay in bed. Your doctor will need to rule out any more serious causes of the condition.

In assuming the upright position there may be a fall of more than 30 mm of mercury systolic, and 14 mm of mercury diastolic. Some also complain of lightheadedness, blurred vision, weakness and unsteadiness. Usually, faintness and dizziness do not last longer than seconds or minutes.

Your doctor's suggestion to get out of bed slowly is a good one. Try sleeping with your head elevated 8 to 12 inches. This prevents the sudden pooling of blood away from the brain.

Try to postpone shaving until you have been up a while. Various drugs may help. For example, ephedrine taken in small doses several times during the day.

DEAR DR. STEINCROHN: I was the perfect physical specimen at age 45. Then one day I developed chest pain while playing golf.

Everyone, including doctors, thought it was a heart attack — but it wasn't. All kinds of tests showed no evidence of organic trouble in my coronary arteries.

I get the pains occasionally even when I'm not exercising in any way. The last attack occurred while I was sitting quietly reading my paper.

My doctor says I do not have typical angina and these pains aren't heart attack pains. If not so, what can they be? — MR. F.

DEAR MR. F.: We used to think that coronary arteries never went into spasm. Now we know they can.

In classic angina pectoris, pain comes on with exertion. Usually there's definite obstruction in one or more coronary arteries.

But some patients have spasm of the arteries that produce pain even when at rest. This is a syndrome which is called "Printzmetal variant angina." It may even produce temporary changes in the ECG.

The treatment consists of taking nitrate vasodilators (to open up the coronary arteries). These spasms are often prevented by also taking what we call calcium-antagonist drugs.

If there's still any question in your mind about diagnosis or treatment, Mr. F., don't hesitate to ask for consultation with another cardiologist.

Remember, your heart is in your own hands, so take care of it and make it a part of your living philosophy, advises Dr. Steincrohn in his booklet, "22 Ways To Prevent and Treat Coronary Disease." For a copy write to him at this newspaper, enclosing 50 cents and a SELF-ADDRESSED, STAMPED ENVELOPE.

Art auction

The Orange Coast Mothers of Twins Club, along with the California Auction Services, is sponsoring an art auction this evening at the Airporter Inn Hotel in Irvine. Numerous fine works will go on the block at 8:30 following a 7:30 preview.

Employment workshop

A four-part workshop focusing on ways to find fulfilling employment and make a good living will begin Wednesday in the Community Center of Golden West College in Huntington Beach.

The series, which will be offered on four consecutive Wednesdays, will be taught by counselor Christine Aros-Truhe.

Admission is free and all classes will be held from 7 to 9 p.m. For more information call 892-7711, ext. 591.

Painting instructions

Class instruction in painting and drawing will be offered for both beginners and advanced students by the City of Newport Beach starting March 25 in the Mariner's Library Multipurpose Room.

Instructor Mimi Sharon Stein will focus on the use of mixed media and acrylic painting. Classes will be held from 10 a.m. to noon on Wednesdays. For more information call 640-2271.

Correction

In the March 10 article on "Stress: It Can Be A Killer," the Pilot erroneously reported the symposium "Stress and Catastrophic Illness" was set for the Sheraton Newport Hotel.

The symposium, set for March 19 to 22, will be held in the Disneyland Hotel.

Friends set slide 'tour'

Friends of Hortense Miller Garden will be treated to an "armchair trip" to the Galapagos Islands on Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. at Laguna Federal Savings and Loan community room, 260 Ocean Ave., Laguna Beach.

Al and Jo Rosenberg will take viewers by ship to the islands, via slide projection, and tell of experiences during their two-week visit there.

Many species of wildlife, long protected by isolation of the islands, have evolved some distinctive adaptations to their environment. The Galapagos are now under the protection of Ecuador.

On March 26, Marka Ritchie will lead the group on a birdwalk to Upper Newport Bay where thousands of migratory birds are still wintering. Those attending will meet at 8:30 a.m. at the north end of Safeway's parking lot to car-pool. Call 494-1391 or 494-8348 regarding transportation.

Hortense Miller Library is open to the public the first Monday of each month at 1 p.m. The garden is open for visitation daily, Tuesday through Saturday noon. For visitation permits to the garden, call the Human Affairs Dept., Laguna Beach City Hall, 497-3311.

Daffodil exhibits scheduled

Daffodils will take center stage at Descanso Gardens, 1418 Descanso Drive, La Canada, when the Southern California Daffodil Society presents its 25th Annual Daffodil Show Saturday and Sunday.

The society has been presenting these shows in Descanso Gardens since 1960 for the enjoyment of the public, and to further encourage the use of the genus Narcissus for home and garden decoration.

Cut specimens and container-grown exhibits will be on display. Also featured will be various species and miniature daffodils.

The exhibits will be open to the public.

The Southern California Daffodil Society has members ranging from Santa Maria to Chula Vista. Anyone wishing to join is welcome.

Information on both the SCDS and The American Daffodil Society may be obtained at the information booth at the show.

No puffing this plant

YUBA CITY (AP) — An alert narcotics officer spotted a suspicious looking plant, obtained a search warrant and found several healthy tomato plants being grown by an irate 63-old woman.

"I think it's a waste of taxpayers' money on busting little old ladies like me," said Sarah Mainland.

She said Detective Jim Lovoi and two other narcotics officers with a search warrant for marijuana entered her house but apologized when they found out what she was really growing in her window.

Weekend gardening checklist

•Prune wisteria heavily after spring bloom.

•Give bermuda grass lawns a stiff raking with a steel rake to get up long runners. Cut close and feed the lawn when it begins to "green up".

•To loosen packed or clay soils, use gypsum and organic soil amendments. If the soil is soggy or wet, wait until it crumbles easily.

•If you've already planted your vegetable garden, remember to thin seedlings to prevent over crowded or stunted plants. Thinning is done when the plants are 2-3 inches high.

•To enjoy the blooms of chrysanthemums in your garden next fall, plant the rooted cuttings in your garden now.

• Peppers are well suited to growing in containers and other limited space areas and can be used for decorative as well as food purposes. Bell peppers can be harvested when green or ripe red.

'Mums' the word

Bloom development heralded

Chrysanthemums were garden flowers in the Orient well over 2,000 years ago; and they have been popular garden flowers in the Western World since the early 18th century. Yet, it is only in the past quarter of a century that mums have become something really special.

The breakthrough in chrysanthemum breeding came in the early '30s when the so-called Korean hybrids were developed in America, and the succession of development that followed has been no less astounding.

MUMS NOW COME in every imaginable size and shape and countless colors, and with a bloom period that starts in midsummer for some of the small cushion mums, extending through fall.

Even though they bloom late in the year, mums should be started soon. Their culture follows an easy-to-learn routine which starts with setting rooted cuttings in the garden now or next month and encouraging their growth through late spring and summer by feeding and pinching until suddenly in fall they burst into their sensational bloom which more than rewards the gardener for his green thumb efforts.

SELECT A SUNNY location but one where the mums will get some shade during the day. They need air flow around them so avoid pockets at fence corners. Work the soil in advance of planting, incorporating some organic matter into it. Mums like soil on the slightly acid side.

One of the first things to remember about the mum's needs is water. In order to continue their lush, succulent growth until fall, mums need moisture in the soil at all times. If they dry out, their stalks harden and lush growth is curtailed. A shallow basin around individual plants will direct water to areas where it does the most good. Overhead sprinkling is not the best practice.

FEEDING IS ALSO important, especially to correct nitrogen deficiency in the soil. This feeding should stop when the buds begin to show color. Feed every three weeks until then.

African violet exhibit, sale set in Tustin

Considered one of America's favorite houseplants, the African violet will be on exhibit and for sale March 21 and 22 at Tustin Community Center, 300 Centennial Way, Tustin.

Large plants covered with blooms will share the spotlight with teacup-size miniatures laden with flowers twice the size of their leaves.

Starter plants and prize-winning show plants will be offered by more than 15 local hobbyists at the show, beginning at 10 a.m., both days. Recent releases and old favorites from hybridizers such as Nadeau, Granger, Lyon, Champion and Fredette show the variety of bloom, foliage, and plant size available.

Fantasy, bi-color, frilly-edged, striped and star-shaped blooms; pink tan and green foliage; miniature, semi-miniature and trailing plants will be available to novices and experts alike.

Admission is free. For information, contact Vivian Morgan, 546-9619.

Prolific bloomer

The regal rose is one of nature's most prolific flower-producing plants. The more blooms cut, the more it produces. It also provides continuous weeks of color in the garden from spring through fall. There is still bareroot stock available at your favorite nursery.

Society meeting set

The Horticultural Society of Orange County will meet Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. at the California Cooperative Extension, 1000 S. Harbor Blvd., Anaheim.

Margaret Carlberg, former president of the Audubon Society and environmentalist, will discuss edible plants. Come and learn of the vegetable garden you may already have in your back yard.

There will be a plant forum, plant sales and refreshments.

Morning glories liven landscape

Morning glories are not noted for their neat and tidy habits. But there are two, the bush morning glory and the ground morning glory, that are well mannered, compact and ideal for use in the landscape.

One of these is a shrubby little sun lover that thrives on tough going. The other is a trailer of modest growth that will cascade down from a raised bed in a show of color you won't soon forget.

The predominant color of bush morning glory derives from its silvery foliage which serves as the perfect backdrop for its delicate white flowers. The blooms, obviously morning glories, are long lasting and fresh looking even in sun that resembles a blast furnace.

The shrub is resistant to drought and one to consider for the sunny side of the house or along a drive where it draws attention but doesn't need much of it.

JUBILANT CORONA DEL MAR PLAYERS AND FANS REACT TO CIF VICTORY, WHILE MARK SPINN (32) AT RIGHT PLAYS IT TOUGH.

Sea Kings Spin(n) into 3-A finals

Corona del Mar wins, 48-29; Estancia falls, 69-54

Corona del Mar did everything the way it's supposed to be done, both offensively and defensively. They're poised and they deserve to be where they are.
— La Quinta High Coach Dick Katz

By ROGER CARLSON
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

LOS ANGELES — Corona del Mar High's Sea Kings spun a little bit of magic into their storied history Thursday night and as a result are where La Quinta High's Aztecs expected to be Saturday night — battling for the CIF 3-A basketball championship.

The Sea Kings shocked a Sports Arena crowd of 4,536 as they demolished the No. 2 seeded and defending champions, 48-29, and thus qualify for Saturday's 7 o'clock showdown with Tustin, a 69-54 victor over Estancia in the other half of the semis.

ON THE SURFACE it would appear just to be another in Coach Jack Errion's triumphs at Corona del Mar (he is now 103-28 and has his third team in the CIF finals in a five-year span), but in reality, although it was no more than a qualifier for the finals, it was one of the more significant victories in Corona del Mar annals.

Mark Spinn, a 6-5 standout for the Sea Kings for three years, supplied some of the finest defense in CIF history, and with the assistance of his teammates — Jeff Pries, Steve Moore, Chris Lynch and Mike Hess — buried the highly regarded Aztecs.

Spinn's totals reflect eight points, six rebounds, three assists, two steals and three deflections. But as has been the case game-in and game-out, Spinn's true worth was his tremendous defensive effort.

HE HELD THE AZTECS' Johnny Rogers, a 6-9 talent who shared CIF 3-A Player of the Year honors as a junior and is the odds-on choice to claim the individual honor this year, to six points, 32 less than his playoff average.

Rogers could hit only 3-of-10 from the field, was 1-for-6 at halftime as CdM took a 20-14 lead and did not score his second bucket until 4:44 remained and the issue was more than settled. At that point the Sea View League champions, now 21-5, were ahead by a 39-25 margin and clearly in command.

"This was a challenge for Mark. He has been under a lot of pressure this season," said Errion.

"We lost to (Wayne) Carlander and Ocean View, then we lost to Fountain Valley and La Quinta, and it was a lot for him to absorb. This was justification."

It was the Sea Kings' plan to play Rogers straight up in their man-to-man defensive style and Spinn was equal to the task. While he limited Rogers to only 10 attempts, his teammates were able to concentrate on their individual foes and in each case, the Sea Kings came up winners.

"AFTER WE PLAYED THEM in January we felt we could go more one-on-one," said Errion. "We were concerned with La Quinta's outside shooting and wanted to neutralize the others, if we could.

"Spinn deserves a lot of credit, he played four quarters of tough ball. He was the difference and certainly controlled the inside, offensively and defensively."

Yachting favorites unseated

By ALMON LOCKABEY
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

LONG BEACH — Every champion has his comeuppance, and the first day of the 1981 Congressional Cup match racing series at Long Beach Yacht Club proved no exception to that adage.

The pre-race favorites and widely heralded champions fell like ten-pins Thursday as dark horses took the reins in the first four series of races, providing one surprise after another in a moderately breezy day under clear skies.

NOT TOO GREAT a surprise was the four straiqht wins turned in by Rod Davis, representing the host club, who established himself as a possible winner by unseating the favorites.

The 25-year old sailmaker from Seal Beach skimmed off the cream by defeating his boss, Dick Deaver of Balboa Yacht Club; Gary Jobson, Fort Worth, Tex: Dennis Conner, of San Diego the much heralded America's Cup defender, and "Gentleman" Jim Hardy of Australia, the equally heralded America's Cup loser, in that order.

Conner, Deaver and Dennis Durgan, Newport Harbor Yacht Club, are all former two-time winners of the Congressional Cup. Conner fared the best of the trio by splitting his four races. Durgan, the defending champion, and Deaver both wound up with 1-3 records.

Durgan, however, lodged protests against two of his competitors, Russell Long of New York Yacht Club, and Robin Morgan, Little Ships Fleet. Should the judges rule in his favor, he would wind up with a 3-1 record.

SURPRISE PERFORMER of the day was Long, youngest skipper in the 10-man lineup and the one with the least experience, who won three races and had to drop out of the fourth because of rigging failure. However, he was trailing Deaver when the mishap occurred.

Hardluck skipper of the day — and the one who provided the most spectacular scene — was Deaver. In his race with Hardy he was sailing almost dead-even at the leeward mark when the crew lost control of the spinnaker near the mark and sent it flying ahead of the boat with no way of getting it down.

Before the "Chinese firedrill" was over, Deaver's boat was dead in the water. He lost the match by two minutes, 37 seconds.

Skippers with 3-1 records were Long, Hardy, and Morgan.

Here is the way they finished in Thursday's four races:

Haden can't win

Pat Haden has to be wondering if the sun is ever going to shine for him in Southern California. He's walked under a black cloud for so long now it's almost accepted as part of his general appearance.

For Haden, the announcement by Vince Ferragamo's agent of a possible signing with Montreal of the Canadian Football League was just another in a long line of "that's nice."

One must understand that the former USC hero — who stands to inherit his old job if Ferragamo departs — is in a current state of limbo with the Rams.

If Ferragamo leaves, more than likely Haden will stay. If Ferragamo stays, more than likely Haden will ask to leave.

Indeed, it's not an ideal postition to be in.

"I've just been trying to keep an even keel, says Haden about all the rumors and possibilities concerning Ferragamo. "As far as I'm concerned my situation is the same as yesterday.

"The only difficult thing is that I'm not in control and this is the first time I've been in that position. It's a little frustrating because I've been in control of my future up until this point."

Haden has been keeping himself busy during the off-season trying to finish up his law studies. The work has helped keep his mind off his problems . . . but only to a certain degree.

"Fortunately, I've been so doggone busy with school I can't really think about it much," he says. "But there are pros and cons about staying, and it's going to be difficult for me here regardless."

Haden is referring to the fan acceptance in Orange County and Los Angeles where — in both cases — he was greeted and treated with the warmth of an ice cube.

"I suppose people will blame me for Vince not signing with the club," said Haden, who seems to have become the brunt of the fans' frustrations. "People have demanded a lot from me and they'll demand more, particularly because Vince had such a good season last year."

Some observers wonder why Haden doesn't just pack it up and ask to go elsewhere. But there are a lot of factors involved as he'll tell you.

First, there's his schooling and possible business opportunities in the Southern California area. And second, with a third child on the way, Haden's wife is not too thrilled about the prospect of picking up and moving elsewhere..

"You have to play with the hand you're dealt," says Haden. "If it's just verbal abuse I can handle that. But my family has had difficulty handling that and I don't think they'll come to any more games."

Haden admits he's in a can't-win position.

"If we lose the fans will blame me, and if we win they'll say we should have won because we had the better team on the field."

If Haden does become No. 1 again, all he hopes is for a fair chance.

If only the fans would cooperate.

FERRAGAMO UPDATE:

Ferragamo's agent — David Fishof — who put his foot in his mouth Wednesday by saying his client would almost assuredly sign with Montreal, gingerly removed it Thursday, saying on ABC radio in New York that he was "misquoted and misunderstood" in regard to Wednesday's story.

Fishof denied he was ever close to an agreement with Montreal and its proposed owner, Nelson Skalbania.

Rams vice president and general manager Don Klosterman, in a retracted story by the Associated Press, said, "He (Fishof) said there is no

From AP dispatches

EL PASO — A couple of basketball coaches from the East whose teams are matched against clubs from the West in the NCAA tournament want to make it clear they are not complaining — but they'd just like to know why they are playing here, in this far West Texas city.

"We won't have many fans. My wife wouldn't even come," cracked Coach Roy Chipman, whose Pittsburgh Panthers meet Idaho in the first game of a first-round NCAA West playoff doubleheader tonight.

"I was disappointed when I first heard about it (El Paso), no question," said Northeastern Coach Jim Calhoun, whose team plays Fresno State in the second game with a 9:38 p.m. MST starting time.

"That's 11:38 p.m. in Boston," Calhoun said. "If we understood the rationale it would be much easier. Whether we agree or disagree, at least we'd understand why."

Idaho Coach Don Monson, who appeared with the other two coaches in a pre-game news conference Thursday afternoon, told them his state is certainly not within walking distance.

"A round trip ticket costs $528," he said.

Quote of the day

"If he (a purchaser) has to ask how much, he can't afford it." — Philadelphia Phillies owner Ruly Carpenter, after stunning the baseball world by announcing that the world champions were up for sale.

Ainge, BYU to meet UCLA after win

Danny Ainge scored 21 points and BYU solved Princeton's deliberate offense in the second half to beat the Tigers, 60-51 Thursday night in first round of the NCAA East Regionals basketball tournament. The 16th ranked Cougars will face 10th-ranked UCLA Saturday . . . In other NCAA regional contests, Lamar gained some revenge on Missouri with a 71-67 decision over the Tigers in the Midwest playoffs. Earlier in the season, Missouri routed the Cardinals, 92-70 . . . In another Midwest regional outing, 20th-ranked Arkansas held off upset-minded Mercer, 73-67 and will now meet Louisville Saturday . . . James Madison downed Georgetown, 61-55 in the first round of the East Regionals. That pits Madison against Notre Dame Saturday . . . Maryland had to come from behind to top Tennessee-Chattanooga, 81-69 . . . Kansas State got a clutch basket from Renaldo Blackman to top USF, 64-60 in the West Regionals at Pauley Pavillion. The Wildcats must now face Oregon State on Saturday.

Fidrych shaky in second start

Mark Fidrych gave up six runs in the first inning, including two on a Russ Kunts homer, as the Chicago White Sox downed Detroit, 13-5 Thursday in exhibition baseball action . . . In other games, Wayne Garland hurled four scoreless innings as Cleveland went on to a 7-2 win over Seattle . . . Jim Sundberg's fourth-inning single provided the winning RBI as Texas downed Baltimore, 2-1 . . . A wild pitch by loser Doug Capilla enabled John Rabb to score from third and San Francisco went on to score a 5-4 victory over the Chicago Cubs . . . Rookie outfielder Reid Nichols drilled a bases-loaded homer in the 12th to give Boston a 9-5 triumph over Minnesota . . . Claudell Washington, Chris Chambliss and Bob Horner had two RBI apiece in Atlanta's 8-2 victory over the Yankees . . . A two-run homer by Jeff Newman was the difference in Oakland's 2-0 victory over Milwaukee . . . Don Sutton worked three innings for Houston, allowing two runs, four hits while striking out three and walking two as the Astros topped Toronto, 3-2 . . . The Dodgers' Steve Garvey who has played in 835 consecutive games has been named the winner of the 1981 Roberto Clemente award as the player who best exemplifies the game on and off the field . . . President Reagan will open the 1981 season by throwing out the first ball of Cincinnati's traditional season opener.

This filly wants to play golf

LAUREL, Md. — Thoroughbred filly Amazing Princess may not have her heart set on the race tracks. It seems her hoofs lead her to golf courses.

Fifteen pursuers, including three state troopers, a mounted outrider, a race track security officer and the superintendent of the Laurel Race Course stable area chased the valuable filly for 45 minutes through dense traffic in the streets of this community recently.

The filly eventually was captured on the 16th hole of the Laurel Pines Golf Course.

"I finally get a chance to train a Majestic Prince filly, and what does she want to do? Play golf!" quipped trainer Greg Wilson.

The filly, who is closely related to former filly champion Forward Gal, is valued at more than $100,000. She was not injured.

Three-way tie for Doral golf lead

Ray Floyd opened defense of his title with a 6-under-par 66 and tied David Graham and Gil Morgan for the first-round lead Thursday in the Doral Open golf tournament . . . Tommy Hearns, the World Boxing Association's welterweight champion, made it official— he will defend the title April 25 against Randy Shields in Phoenix . . . Alexandra Reinhardt shot a 6-under-par 67 to take a two-stroke lead over Kathy Young and Patty Hayes in the opening round of the LPGA Sun City Classic . . . Terry Labonte pulled off a surprise Thursday, racing his Buick at a speed of 162.940 mph to top the qualifiers for Sunday's 22nd annual Coca-Cola 500 auto race.

CdM GAINS 3-A FINALS . .

Moore got the Sea Kings off with a couple of quickies and it was evident early that La Quinta was in trouble.

Katz called time out with 3:39 left in the first quarter and his team was still without a point as the Sea Kings shut off the passing lanes, Rogers was 0-for-3 as he had to shoot awkwardly against the 6-6 Spinn and turnovers were already beginning to mount.

By the time it was over La Quinta was guilty of 20 turnovers, 14 coming in the first half as the Sea Kings were taking command of the issue.

MARK SPINN

STILL, LA QUINTA was down by only a 22-18 margin early in the third quarter. But then Pries drove the baseline, Spinn hit three free throws and an eight-footer from the baseline, then Moore scored, followed by two more from the gratis line by Spinn and one of Pries' patented takeovers inside.

Suddenly it was 36-21 and as the Sea Kings have done in each of their playoff victories, the sudden surge put them in a driver's seat which they never came close to relinquishing.

Pries was the leading scorer (13), followed by Moore (12) and Lynch, who burned La Quinta's zone with 10 points. Hess added five points and a clever floor game.

La Quinta was unable to answer with anyone over six points.

La Quinta was a 28-22 winner on the boards, but it wasn't nearly enough to offset a 20-5 margin in turnovers and a 35.1 shooting percentage (13-for-37) as opposed to CdM's 44.7 percent (17-for-38).

AT THE HALF it was 14-1 in turnovers. Pries added six boards and four steals, Moore had five rebounds and Hess added four rebounds for the winners.

It was surely a savoring victory for Errion and his Sea Kings, who were eliminated in the 1980 championship finals by Rogers & Co., in addition to a 54-50 non-league loss in January.

But Errion tempered the luster of it all by recalling his Sea Kings' fate of a year ago, when his team was so impressive in smashing highly regarded Santa Monica, only to fall to La Quinta in the finals.

"Tustin is at the peak of its game," cautioned Errion.

Errion obviously knew what he was talking about.

THE TILLERS of Tustin easily swept past Estancia in the following game as they took the lead at the outset and never trailed.

It was a bitter ending for the Eagles of Coach Larry Sunderman, who had shocked Lynwood and Moreno Valley in making it to the Sports Arena, and that initial burst by the Tillers set the tone for the remainder of the game.

Scott Pritchett (6-7) got a layup off the opening tip and followed with a four-foot shot with an offensive rebound seconds later and the die was cast.

ESTANCIA FELL behind, 8-4, rallied to within 10-9, fell back to 23-13, rallied to 27-23, fell to 33-23, rallied to 33-28, then fell behind for good as Tustin simply wore the smaller Eagles into the floor.

"We never had a chance to play our game," said Sunderman. "If we would have had even a one-point lead we would have spread it.

"But we let them establish the inside game early. We got down, came back, got down again, came back. Well, you can only do that so long.

"They dominated the game and 10 (Rich Prospero) shot so well from outside. Mark Lewis is a helluva player. He's 6-7 and shooting like a guard.

"I was pleased the way we came back and we don't have any excuses. We made some mistakes but we never gave up."

MIKE MARKEL was Estancia's leading scorer with 20 points, but Ken Hall was the only other Eagle in double figures (10).

Tustin, meanwhile, got 23 from Lewis and another 16 from 6-7 Art Francis.

The Tillers, Century League champions, upped their overall mark to 25-4, while Estancia closes out the campaign with a 19-9 record.

Tustin's shooting percentages were just short of unreal, the Tillers netting 22-for-38 from the field (57.9 percent) and 23-for-28 at the line (82.1 percent).

TUSTIN SHOOTERS clicked on 20 of their first 21 from the line.

Estancia, meanwhile, could net only 18-for-51 from the field (35.3 percent). The Eagles made 14 of 19 from the line, but in the final analysis Estancia was in it only briefly, during halftime intermission while on the short end of a 27-23 count.

Three straight buckets at the outset of the third quarter got that 33-23 lead, Estancia made the one brief flurry keyed by steals and subsequent baskets by Jeff Gardner and Markel, then the Tillers pulled away.

So, it's over for the Eagles, although previous successes surely won't be overshadowed by Thursday's loss.

"I'm disappointed. I know we can play better than we did tonight," said Sunderman. Nineteen victories proved that.

RAMS' HADEN CAN'T WIN . . .

truth to the report that Ferragamo will sign with Montreal in the next few days and asked to continue negotiating with the Rams."

Klosterman went on to say he and Fishof were scheduled to meet Thursday (yesterday), but that Klosterman called off the meeting when the Rams learned of the alleged deal.

ADD FERRAGAMO:

It appears from a source close to the situation in Montreal that Fishof retracted his statements only after Skalbania came down on him hard for saying anything in the first place.

Furthermore, for those interested, Ferragamo's contract reportedly calls for a base salary of $400,000 annually for the next four years plus a cut of the gate.

Decide for yourselves who's lying to whom. . .

MEDICAL CENTER:

Jack Youngblood, who underwent surgery last Friday night to remove a blood clot in his left armpit, is scheduled to leave Centinela Hospital in Inglewood sometime this weekend.

Youngblood's admittance and subsequent operation were handled quietly by the Rams, not wanting to create a panic situation among the media.

Still, the operation was of a semi-serious nature and there have been some rumors flying about that Youngblood's future in pro football is in jeopardy.

Youngblood flatly denied this.

"I want to play as long as I can and as long as I can contribute to the football team," he said from his hospital bed.

"I'm feeling fine. It's just a matter of time now."

Youngblood said he had no advanced warning of the clot. "It was just one of those type of things where the symptoms dictated what the problem was."

Youngblood also explained he felt no pain, he just experienced some discoloration in his left armpit. "It was more like a bruise, but then it wasn't," he added.

Finally, Toby Freemon, the Rams' physician, ran some tests on the defensive end and diagnosed the problem.

"It was a freak of nature," Youngblood explained. "But I have total and complete faith in Toby Freemon and his staff and Dr. (Robert) Kerlan and his bunch. I know I'm not smart enough to know what the world is wrong."

Youngblood is currently negotiating a new contract with the Rams. He was one of the four holdouts during the summer of 1980 when he discovered at the '79 Pro Bowl what some of the other players around the NFL were getting paid for their services.

He's stated on a number of occasions, too, he's considered retirement — pointing to his age (31) as a factor.

Would his operation hasten that decision?

"It's hard to say," answers Youngblood. "It's a long ways before football and my plans are to play. But a 31-year-old man needs to start a little earlier than a 25-year-old one."

Youngblood said he will remain in the Southern California area for awhile to take care of business and return for a few checkups.

"The doctors have told me I'll be 100 percent by the start of practice (the end of July)," said Youngblood. "I've always gone in in tremendous shape and right now I still want to play for as long as I can."

A special note here goes out to Rams publicist Jerry Wilcox, who is at St. Joseph's Hospital in Orange suffering from a kidney malfunction.

Wilcox, who has served in the Rams' publicity office since 1966, is one of the most respected and well-liked men in the business.

Those of us who have been fortunate enough to work with him wish the very best for a speedy recovery.

SAN DIEGO — Magic is back.

One couldn't help but come to that conclusion after watching the Lakers topple San Diego, 122-116, here, Thursday night.

The Lakers not only have regained their Magic in the last two games, but are now gearing up for the NBA playoffs.

Magic Johnson put on his best display since returning to the Lakers six games ago. The former Michigan State standout scored 27 points, picked up five steals and led the team with nine rebounds.

Since his return, the Lakers are 4-2, but have looked very impressive their last two outings. With 11 games to go in the Pacific Division and Phoenix holding a four-game lead over the Lakers, there appears to be little chance of LA overhauling the Suns — but coach Paul Westhead's team is certainly gearing up for those playoffs.

"The backcourt is blending together," said Westhead. "We can run Magic, Norm Nixon and Cooper (Michael) in there and they're working together the way they used to."

Magic got plenty of help from the supporting cast. Jamaal Wilkes led the Lakers with 29 points, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar chipped in with 26 and Nixon hit 17.

And the Lakers shot a sizzling 62.3 percent to the Clippers' 53.1.

The Lakers did have some problems in the rebounding department. Abdul-Jabbar only had five, the fifth straight game he has failed to reach double figures.

But Westhead said he wasn't concerned about Abdul-Jabbar's rebounding.

"Kareem has been very active. It means the other teams are working hard to keep him off the boards, which leaves other guys open to get them."

The Lakers took control of the game early as San Diego gave the Lakers problems only in the second quarter when it narrowed an eight-point Laker lead to a one-point halftime edge.

But Nixon and Wilkes took charge soon after the second half began and the Clippers never made an effective run.

The Lakers return to the Forum tonight to take on Kansas City, then host San Diego Sunday afternoon at 2.

Marina tough in volleyball

Marina High's volleyball team continued its torrid pre-season play Thursday night, downing host Ocean View in four games.

Coach Tim Reed's Vikings (4-1), managed to shake an emotional letdown after they upset Capistrano Valley the previous night.

Thursday night, Marina won, 15-13, 15-11, 6-15, 15-7 despite coming out a little bit flat.

"But that's not taking anything away from Ocean View," said Reed. "They played a very good game."

Marina got strong performances from outside hitters Tom Plane and Scott Filipek to record the victory.

Ocean View was led by setter Casey Osterlund.

The Vikings are off to one of their best volleyball starts ever. Among their victories was a triumph over perennially tough Dos Pueblos.

STEVE MOYERS

Anteaters fall in tournament

LONG BEACH—UC Irvine's seven-game winning streak came to an end Thursday as the Long Beach State 49ers defeated the Anteaters, 8-2, in the opening game of the Southern California Baseball Association Tournament at Blair Field.

The 49ers exploded for five runs in the fourth inning to blow the game open. Left fielder Tony Laurenzi led the 11-hit attack with three singles.

Former Saddleback College star Dave Woodhead started and picked up the loss. Woodhead allowed six runs (only three were earned) on seven hits as his record dropped to 2-2.

UCI was shut out through seven innings by Randy Ramirez (2-3). Ramirez went the distance and gave up only the two runs in the eighth inning while striking out 10.

Moyers, Surf far apart

Striker says he isn't appreciated

By CURT SEEDEN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Steve Moyers has come a long way since those days as a youngster playing soccer in the streets of St. Louis.

One of the few American players to climb the ladder of success in the predominantly European North American Soccer League, Moyers is considered a precious commodity now that the league, and in particular, the California Surf is trying to Americanize the game.

You would think Moyers would be sitting pretty right now.

BUT MOYERS IS A TROUBLED man, and Thursday afternoon, along with player agents Wolfgang Suhnholz and Walter Barnes, he called a press conference to discuss his sudden departure from the Surf's training camp in Palm Springs Tuesday.

"I haven't been appreciated. I've never been one to cause trouble," Moyers says. "I've always put my nose to the grindstone."

Moyers' complaint, short and simple, is money. Although he's still got three years remaining, including two option years, on his contract, the 24-year-old forward feels he isn't appreciated and his performance for the NASL team over the past four years warrants a healthy increase in his salary.

Moyers reportedly is making $24,000 a year. His agents say the Surf has offered him $35,000 a year, even though the team is not obligated to renegotiate any player's contract.

SUHNHOLZ, WHO WAS CUT last season by the Surf, claims the team has done nothing to make Moyers feel wanted, even though the team has shifted its philosophy towards building a successful franchise.

Last week, Surf Coach Peter Wall said the emphasis will be placed on developing young American talent rather than on high-priced European class players. And according to Surf general manager Bill Dawson, Moyers fits right into the scheme.

"He's a great player and he works hard. We really want Steve Moyers. We feel strongly that we can make a substantial investment in Steve," Dawson says.

The Surf general manager disputes Moyers' $35,000 figure, saying the team offered "to double what he was making," meaning somewhere in the neighborhood of $48,000 a year was offered.

THE TEAM ALSO OFFERED him a car and housing plan along with a bonus incentive, Dawson says.

At Thursday's press conference, Moyers acknowledged that the Surf offer included a housing deal and $200 for each game he started.

But because he has spent four years with the franchise and has scored more goals (25) than any American on the team, Moyers and his agents claim the blond striker has been "cheated and humiliated by empty promises," according to Barnes.

Suhnholz and Barnes make up SBS Soccer Internationale, Inc., which acts as agents and personal representatives and advisors for pro soccer players.

The duo feels Moyers should be allowed to talk to other teams and, in fact, be traded to one of several teams which has reportedly offered up to $100,000 a year for Moyers.

THE BIGGEST PROBLEM, Suhnholz points out, is the contract Moyers signed when he broke into the league while with the St. Louis Stars, a team which eventually moved west to Anaheim and became the Surf.

"Legally, Steve has no rights. But when he signed a contract, he was a young player who didn't know what the hell he was doing. He was just trying to prove himself," Suhnholz says. "Now it's time for management to show its appreciation."

Mater Dei's milers impressive in victory

Junior distance runner Mike McMaster ran 4:27.9 in the mile to lead a Mater Dei High sweep in the event as the Monarchs defeated Costa Mesa, 82-36, to highlight prep track action Thursday.

In other action, Estancia had an easy time with Laguna Beach, University raced past Laguna Hills, Corona del Mar defeated Newport Harbor and Cypress in a triangular meet and Ocean View fell victim to Victor Valley.

MCMASTER'S MILE time was his fastest of the year. It was an impressive sweep for Mater Dei as all three runners were clocked under 4:45. Junior Bob Planta, who is coming off a stress fracture, was second in 4:32.2.

Mater Dei also swept the 2-mile as sophomore Mitch Eddy won the race in 9:44.7.

The best race of the day turned out to be the 880 where Costa Mesa senior Victor Herrera, who has a best of 1:56.4, edged out Mater Dei sophomore Jim Gallivan. Herrera was timed in 1:59.0 to Gallivan's 1:59.4.

At Estancia, it was distance races again that highlighted the meet. Estancia's Jim McCarthy was a double winner in the Eagles' win as he captured both the mile (4:34.8) and the 2-mile (9:40.9).

DOUG HARTUNG was another double winner for Estancia. Hartung won the 100-yard dash (10.6) and the 440 (55.3).

Athlete-of-the-meet honors, however, had to go to Laguna Beach's Jay Thorson. Thorson won four events for the Artists, taking the 220 in 24.0, the 120 high hurdles in 14.7, the 330 low hurdles in 40.5 and winning the high jump with a leap of 6-2.

University ran its non-league record to 2-0 with a big win at Laguna Hills. The Trojans got an excellent performance from shot putter Rich Morrison. Morrison won the event with a fine put of 50-3½.

Basketball star Tim McLaughlin, who led the Trojans into the CIF playoffs, high jumped 6-2 after just a couple of weeks of practice.

TRACK

At a triangular meet at Newport Harbor, Corona del Mar's Jim Hartford and Shawn Gallagher turned in excellent distance doubles in the Sea Kings' win. Hartford won both the mile (4:28.2) and the 2-mile (9:56.0) while Gallagher placed second in the mile (4:28.3) and the 880 (1:59.5), just one-tenth of a second behind the winners.

NEWPORT HARBOR'S Erek Turner won the 880 in 1:59.4.

The Sailors' also got an outstanding performance from weight man Kevin Jeffries. Jeffries threw a lifetime best in the discus (151-4) and also won the shot put (55-10).

The best area sprint times of the day belonged to Ocean View's Rex Brown. The junior won both the 100-yard dash (10.0) and the 220 (22.5) and anchored the Seahawks' 440 relay team to a fine 43.1 clocking.

Huntington Beach lost to Katella but did get a strong performance from junior Richard Brim. Brim won three events (100, 220 and long jump) and also anchored the Oilers' victorious mile relay team.

A WHOLE NEW SPORT.

INTRODUCING THE COROLLA SPORTS HARDTOP.

There's a new sport in town. And one look will tell you how it plays. Fast. Sure-footed. As daring as its rakish, notchback roof line.

A whole new feeling.

Wide open. That's the feeling inside the Corolla Sports Hardtop, thanks to the pillarless Hardtop design.

Ready to move. That's the feeling the sporty standard features on the Corolla SR5 Hardtop give you. 5-speed overdrive transmission and radial tires put you in touch with the road. Full instrumentation tells the score.

And the swiveling AM/FM MPX stereo radio does a "pivot" toward driver or passenger.

37 EPA Est. Hwy. MPG, 26 EPA Est. MPG.

With a gas-saving 1.8 liter 4-cylinder engine sparking the action. Remember: Compare this estimate to the EPA "Estimated MPG" of other cars with manual transmission. You may get different mileage, depending on how fast you drive, weather conditions, and trip length. Actual highway mileage will probably be less than the EPA "Highway Estimate."

The new Toyota Corolla Sports Hardtop. It may look like the sport of kings. But with so much Toyota economy and dependability built in, you can afford to get in on the action too!

OH WHAT A FEELING TOYOTA

Moment of truth?

It could be coming for Burleson

By ED ZINTEL
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

From Leo Cardenas to Bert Campaneris, from Rudy Meoli to Fred Patek, young and old have tried, over the last decade, to match the stability Jim Fregosi once provided at shortstop for the Angels.

Even during the club's 1979 divisional title year, Jim Anderson, Orlando Ramirez and Bert Campaneris shared the post.

Now comes Rick Burleson, an ironman of a shortstop if ever there was one. During the last six seasons with the Boston Red Sox, Burleson averaged 153 games of playing time.

YET, AS SILLY as it sounds, the Angels, who worked so hard to obtain Burleson in what was an unpopular trade, may have him for only two months once the season starts.

That's because Burleson is eligible to become a free agent on May 29, should players strike as they've threatened. Entering the option year of his contract, Burleson may become a free agent at the end of the season — whenever that is.

Currently, Burleson and his agent, Jack Sands, are negotiating with the Angels to avoid the possibility of free agency. They're reportedly working on a six-year agreement worth some $3.5 million.

The 29-year-old Burleson, a three-time All-star, is anxious to get matters settled, hoping to avoid further negotiations once the season starts (April 9).

THE ANGELS AREN'T looking forward to carrying on the daily talks they've been having with Sands for about two months, any longer either.

Executive Vice President for the club Buzzie Bavasi said at the time of Burleson's signing: "(He's) my new Pee Wee Reese, the glue to our infield. He's what this team has needed since Fregosi was traded."

Burleson agrees whole-heartedly with Bavasi's assessment. He has indicated that, being the "one of the five or six best" all-around shortstops in the American League, if not all of baseball, he wants a salary comparable to what shortstop Garry Templeton receives from St. Louis — about $650,000 per annum.

A resident of nearby La Habra Heights, Burleson further indicates that he'd like to finish his career with the Angels. And though he places a certain value on the fact that he makes his home here, he says he will not "give up a lot of money just because I live here."

THE ANGELS DEALT what was looked upon then as too large a commodity in pitcher Mark Clear, third baseman Carney Lansford and outfielder Rick Miller to Boston for Burleson and third baseman Butch Hobson.

Bavasi said that as more trades were made, especially to obtain more pitchers, that fans and critics would understand the transaction more.

And apparently, that is turning out to be the case.

"When we leave here (Palm Springs), we will expect to win," Burleson says. We won't just be expected to win — but we'll expect it of ourselves."

"I was real happy when I found out Rick was coming with me," said Hobson, a close friend of Burleson's. "He's real aggressive, a real leader. He's always giving 110 percent. It's the only way he knows how to play."

BURLESON HAS FILED for salary arbitration, which the Angels say he is ineligible for since his 1976 contract contains specifics dealing with his '81 salary. A grievance is scheduled for April.

Still, Burleson, the guy thay call "Rooster" because of the intensity with which he used to, and still does play, has only one thing on his mind as he prepares for the upcoming season — baseball.

"I'm not statistic-minded, even though at contract time, that's what they throw at you. I do look forward to leading off for this team, because I've always wanted to score 100 runs (he scored 93 and 89 as the Red Sox's leadoff man the last two seasons), and with our lineup, I should.

"If I play 155 games," he added, "we're going to win a lot of them."

RICK BURLESON

Dodgers fall, 5-1

VERO BEACH, Fla., (AP) — Larry Parrish slugged a three-run homer to highlight a five-run sixth inning that carried Montreal to a 5-1 exhibition baseball victory over the Dodgers Thursday.

Parrish's homer, his first of the spring, came off loser Ted Power, who was tagged for six of the Expos' 11 hits.

Tim Raines tripled home one Montreal run and then scored on a sacrifice fly by Jerry Manuel.

Baseball roundup

Pitchers gel in victories

Golden West College finally got a solid pitching performance, and Saddleback used an explosion at the plate as each team picked up victories Thursday afternoon in community college baseball action.

On the prep front, Mater Dei recorded a victory in the Santa Ana-Newport Mesa tournament behind a 15-strikeout pitching performance.

Golden West 1, Santa Monica CC 0

The last time GWC saw Santa Monica, the Corsairs got a seven-hit shutout from ace right-hander Greg Simpson in a 4-0 victory over the Rustlers in the consolation championship of the Casey Stengel tournament.

Thursday afternoon, at Santa Monica, the Rustlers turned the tables on the Corsairs as freshman left-hander Mark Stone made a first-inning run stand up for GWC's first Southern Cal Conference victory.

Stone, a former All-Empire League pitcher from Kennedy High, allowed just four singles while striking out 10 Corsair batters. It was GWC's first complete game performance this season, and in fact, the first in two years for the Rustlers.

Not an overpowering pitcher, Stone usually goes to the off-speed pitches and they kept the Corsair hitters off balance throughout the day.

Meanwhile, the Rustlers' only run came in the top of the first when Curt Gervais led off with a double, moved to third on a sacrifice by Steve Springer and then scored when Santa Monica pitcher Simpson — the same man who beat GWC earlier — committed an error.

The victory left GWC with a 1-2 Southern Cal Conference record, the same as Santa Monica, while overall, the Rustlers are now 3-7.

Saddleback 10, Southwestern 2

The Gauchos improved their Mission Conference record to 2-0, while Southwestern — the only team to beat the No. 1 ranked Orange Coast Pirates — fell to 0-2 with the loss on their home field.

The Gauchos' Mike Breslin clouted a two-run homer in the eighth inning, but the key hit for Saddleback came in the fifth when Steve Schaeper ripped a double with the bases loaded to break open a tight ball game. At the time, Saddleback held a 3-2 lead. After that, the Apaches couldn't recover.

Breslin and Schaeper each collected two RBI on the day, while Terry Madden went 2-for-4 for Saddleback.

Ben Amaya recorded the victory, going eight strong innings and allowing three walks and seven hits.

The victory improved the Gauchos' overall record to 5-5.

Mater Dei 8, Santa Ana Valley 1

Senior left-hander Steve Mendoza scattered five hits while striking out 15 as the Monarchs recorded a consolation bracket victory in the Santa Ana-Newport Mesa tourney.

It was Mendoza's second victory of the year.

Tom Baine led the Monarch hitting attack with a 3-for-3 performance, scoring twice and adding an RBI.

Borg served up a loss

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Rolf Gehring of West Germany rode a cannonball serve to register a 7-6, 7-5 upset over Bjorn Borg, the world's No. 1 player, in the second round of the Belgian Indoor tennis championships Thursday.

Tale of 2 towers

Town Center gets law firm

By JODI CADENHEAD
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Costa Mesa's new financial complex at South Coast Plaza Town Center got a welcomed boost when Rutan & Tucker, one of Orange County's largest law firms, announced it will move 130 employees from its Newport Beach and Santa Ana offices to the 15-story American City Bank Tower currently nearing completion at the center.

"With our current office building expansion near completion, Town Center is really blossoming," said Henry Segerstrom, managing partner of the family-owned C.J. Segerstrom and Sons, developers of the property with Prudential Insurance Co.

RUTAN & TUCKER'S move is one of the first planned following completion of 725,000-square-feet of office and commercial space at the center along Bristol Street and the San Diego Freeway. The tower will be ready for occupancy later this month, while its twin, the Great Western Savings Tower, will open in June.

Construction is expected to begin in June on a two-story, 12,000-square-foot building between Great Western and Imperial Savings and Loan. Imperial S&L's single-story structure will be completed next month, as will a five-story Bank of America building, according to a spokesman for the center.

Joining the office accommodations will be a glass-roofed, four-plex Edwards Cinema Theater with a seating capacity of 1,800. It is expected to open in June.

Nearby, along Anton Boulevard will be an 11,000-square-foot restaurant.

PARKING FACILITIES for the complex will include a 2,200-car L-shaped concrete garage. A portion was opened last November with the remainder scheduled to open in April.

The first central energy plant to be built in Southern California will provide electricity to Town Center. Air conditioning for the new buildings will come from two 682-ton water chillers that will work at night. Because the rates are cheaper then, the twin towers are expected to save $50,000 this year according to James Knowles, a consultant on the project.

Already located at the center are South Coast Plaza Hotel, Imperial Bank Tower, Downey Savings & Loan, Transamerica Insurance Co., South Coast Repertory Theater, movie theaters and restaurants.

LAST YEAR the Segerstrom family donated five acres for the construction of a $40-million Orange County Music Center.

Earlier this week, executives from Segerstrom and Prudential unveiled the first of six sculptures by Isamu Noguchi to be located near the twin towers.

"A dramatically changed skyline has been created," Henry Segerstrom said.

Sohio plans Kennecott purchase

CLEVELAND (AP) — Standard Oil Co. (Ohio), flush with cash from its lucrative Alaskan oil holdings, has announced a $1.77 billion proposed takeover of Kennecott Corp., the nation's largest copper producer.

The companies' board chairmen jointly announced the merger will result in payment by Sohio of $62 for each of Kennecott's 28.5 million shares.

Sohio Chairman Alton W. Whitehouse and Kennecott Chairman Thomas D. Barrow said completion of the proposed merger would require approval by Kennecott shareholders and satisfaction of other unspecified conditions. They said Kennecott shareholders would be asked to consider the proposal sometime in May.

Sohio, which owns 53 percent of the oil reserves on Alaska's North Slope, bought three coal mines and certain reserves from United States Steel Corp. last December for $750 million.

Luxury hotel set in Peking

PEKING (AP) — Vice Premier Chen Muhua has broken ground for a $72 million, 1,000-room luxury hotel being built jointly by the Chinese government and the E-S Pacific Development and Construction Co. of San Bruno.

The 22-story Great Wall Hotel, which would be Peking's largest, is scheduled for completion in the summer of 1983 on four acres in northeastern Peking. It will have seven restaurants and specialty shops, a swimming pool, health club and five-story tea garden atrium.

E-S Pacific said the Chinese partner, the Peking Branch of the China International Travel Service, will hold 51 percent of the ownership. The Chinese will become sole owners after 10 years of operation.

WINDING ROADS, SPIRALING INFLATION AND OTHER REASONS FOR BUYING A BMW 320i.

Since its automotive debut, the BMW 320i has turned the heads of those who believe that driving is an experience that should be enjoyed.

Indeed, its legendary suspension system—quick and clean in the curves—invites the driver to seek out meandering country roads.

Its 1.8-liter, fuel-injected engine responds with an exhilarating thrust that harks back to the days before environmental controls.

In the face of rising automobile prices, however, it is heartening to know that the 320i's resale credentials are every bit as impressive as its performance.

Astonishingly, according to the 1981 NADA Used-Car Guide, the 320i over the past 4 years has retained an average 95.2% of its original purchase price on the used-car market.

A figure made all the more remarkable by the fact that some cars depreciated by as much as 50% over the same time span.

Perhaps equally unexpected in a performance car of this calibre is the 320i's efficient use of fuel. For with a 5-speed standard transmission (automatic is available) the 320i delivers an impressive EPA estimated 25 mpg in the city and 36 estimated mpg on the highway.

(Naturally, our fuel efficiency figures are for comparison purposes only. Your actual mileage may vary, depending on speed, weather and trip length. Your actual highway mileage will most likely be lower.)

All this considered, the 320i may well be the only automobile in the world that permits the joys of cornering, accelerating, conserving and investing. Simultaneously.

If the notion of owning such a car intrigues you, we suggest that you call your nearest BMW dealer. He'll arrange a thorough test drive.

Being a Circus Vargas clown is more than just a funny face at times

The big top

Clown's life hard, and sometimes dull

By MICHAEL DOUGAN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

My make-up man was in a hurry to go sell programs and the wardrobe lady was a nun. The elephant pulling its red chariot wouldn't arrive for an hour, so I killed time watching showgirls in sequined little nothings get costume adjustments from the nun's boss.

In time, the big parade began. Someone zipped me into my undersized, silly yellow outfit, I donned a pointed cap with tassle and entered the big top for my moment of minor glory. (That's right, folks, this is a reporter as clown story; just shut up and keep reading).

It seems appropriate that an advance man for the circus would be named Kukie (pronounced kookie). Paul, that is. In secret negotiations with my editor, Kukie arranged for me to get a little participatory taste of life in Circus Vargas, scheduled to play Costa Mesa and Laguna Hills March 17-23.

I can't tell you much about being a clown, but I can tell you even less about the circus. I never saw it.

I arrived with cameraman in tow at Circus Vargas' seaside tent in Santa Monica only to learn that the man who would apply my make-up, a clown named Dale, didn't have time to slap white-face on some hack.

Would I mind playing a clown without benefit of make-up? Yes, very much. I do that every day.

My protests were ignored and Kukie rushed me to the wardrobe trailer where a member of the Catholic Order of Little Sisters strived desperately to find a clown suit my size. After the third embarrassing try, she located a tattered yellow costume that fit like a wet suit. If I raised my arms, I hurt myself.

Why was a nun dispensing clown suits? Kukie couldn't say.

I know clowns aren't supposed to whine, but I wanted make-up. In time, Kukie got tired of hearing me mutter under my breath about a red nose and retrieved Dale, who was out selling programs.

Dale had a beautiful white face with red, black and blue lines curving down from his eyes and a big blue sequin on his nose. I wanted to look like him.

No such luck. "This will be a quickie," said Dale as he reached for the greasepaint. I've heard that one before.

"I'm going to make you up as an 'Auguse' clown," he ex-

Conductor Keith Clark takes break during recording session

"I want to remind you," conductor Keith Clark told 85 members of the Pacific Symphony Orchestra, "this digital equipment is so sensitive it can pick up your heartbeat."

But it was a downbeat, not a heartbeat, that followed, launching Orange County's only professional symphony orchestra into its first recording venture.

That was one first logged last Saturday afternoon in Santa Ana High School's spacious auditorium. There were others.

MRS. ROY HARRIS, widow of the well-known UCLA-based conductor and Clark's mentor, sat listening as her husband's "Sixth Symphony" was picked up by three small microphones and, for the first time, put on tape. Later, it will become an album.

Harris is the first American composer to have his work recorded digitally.

And, noted symphony president Topper Smith, this was the first digital recording to be made in Orange County. Newly-developed digital techniques, using a computer to perfectly pin down each tone, promise to displace direct-disc recordings as the state-of-the-art technology.

But composer Harris' widow and friends — former colleagues who have formed the Roy Harris Archives — were clearly more concerned with the music than the mechanics of laying down a sound track.

Some sat in the audience and others in the backstage room where young men in t-shirts sipped beer and watched over an array of blinking lights and buttons. The archivists followed the score note by note, scribbling down reminders for adjustments in take two. A few "conducted" as they listened, their right hands marking time in unconscious response to the soaring melodies of four movements.

Roy Harris never saw any of his compositions recorded because "he would not play the political games other composers played," said Thomas B. Null, executive vice-president of Varese Sarabande Records in Hollywood. Null's outfit owned and operated the recording equipment.

Harris died in 1979 after retiring from UCLA and taking up a part-time teaching position at Cal State, L.A. "Friends from both institutions got together and formed the archives," explained Smith. "It's purpose is to broaden the awareness of this man's music through further performances and recordings."

Null said Varese Sarabande has already made several Harris records using traditional, analog recording methods. "This is the biggest project we've done so far in the way of a series," he added.

EARLIER EDITIONS have used other orchestras. Smith said the Pacific Symphony was selected for the first digital recording in the series because of Clark's connection with Harris.

"Keith got his doctorate at UCLA," he explained. "He was Harris' protege. He actually lived in his home for awhile and Harris often said Keith was the best person to conduct his —ETC.

ST. PATRICK'S DAY celebrations abound. Here are a few:

— A dance featuring piper Jerry Donoghue, the Brennan Stepdancers and The Journeymen will be held by the United Irish Societies at the Cornilia Connoly Hall, 2323 W. Broadway in Anaheim, at 8 p.m. tomorrow. A $6 donation goes to the United Irish Societies fund to build an Orange County Irish Cultural Center. Call 529-2797 or 637-2426.

— A St. Patrick's sing-a-long is set for noon tomorrow at Fashion Island. Co-sponsored by the merchants' association and Newport Beach City Arts Commission, the sing-fest will be led by Sarah Kerr and accompanied by a combo of well-known local musicians. It's free to the public and song sheets will be provided.

— Mickey Mouse will be co-grand marshal for the 12th annual Mission Viejo St. Patricks Day Parade, kicking off at noon Saturday. The parade will feature drill teams, floats, entertainers and some 100 bands, including those from Mission Viejo, Capistrano Valley, Laguna Hills and El Toro high schools.

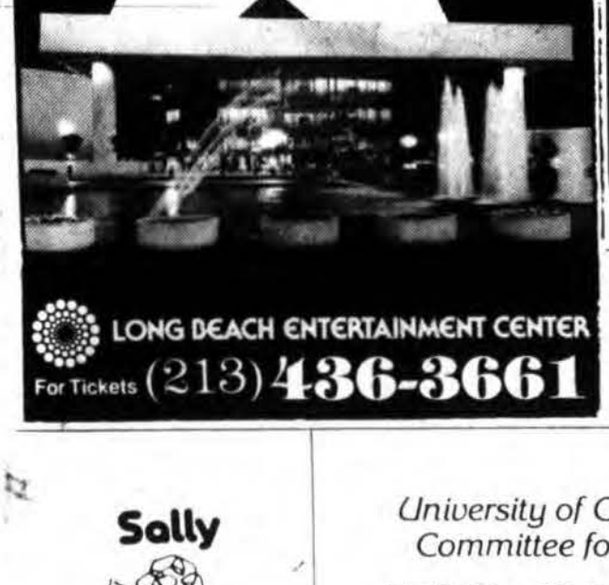

— Mooncoin, a Northern California music duo, will perform traditional Irish music at UC, Irvine on Tuesday, St. Patricks Day, at 8 p.m. in the Fine Arts Village Theater, as well as two free performances at noon in the Lumber Mill Restaurant and 3 p.m. in the Backlot Restaurant in University Center. Corn-beef sandwiches and green beer will be served at the noon show and persons wearing green will get a "free Irish potion."

A NIGHT OF STARS, Temple Sharon's annual fundraiser featuring comedian Jan Murray, soprano Alma Piazza and master of ceremonies John Francis, is set for Sunday at 7:30 p.m. in the Huntington Beach High School Auditorium, 1905 Main Street. For information, call 631-3262.

ST. JOSEPH'S DAY comes next Thursday and you know what that means— the swallows return to Capistrano. (Actually, they've been back for some time, but we'll pretend.) The annual pageant at the mission begins at 10:45 a.m. and will feature Mariachi music, Indian and Mexican dances. Welcome back, birds.

Whatever happened to Radar O'Riley?

Gary Burghoff is alive and well and full of faith

Gary "Radar" Burghoff was waxing philosophic.

"People get so focused on what's in front of them with their senses," said the bearded man who secured his career playing a teddy-bear-cuddling corporal. "They forget that special sense that enables us to see this."

And with his right hand (the "good" one) Burghoff made a grand sweep encompassing the Huntington Beach sky. He was in town to help KOCE-TV promote its semi-annual fund-raising drive.

The 37-year-old Malibu resident said he devotes his time— between bill-paying theater engagements and the occasional television movie— to "the search within, meeting people and talking and getting all different points of view and philosophies.

"The search within is tremendous and I'm not talking about the 'me, me, me,'", he said.

"People ask me why I left the show. I haven't left the show. 'MASH' wasn't the show; this is the show."

Burghoff hastened to counter allegations in the sensational check-out stand press that he has become "The Hermit of Malibu" since abandoning his spot on one of television's all-time hits.

He has appeared in several plays, including Woody Allen's "Play It Again, Sam," and "broke six out of seven box-office records," Burghoff said.

His next play, a Jonathan Daily number called "A Good Look at Bonnie Kern" is so good "I think we can bring it to Broadway," he added.

"And I was just offered today the lead in Neil Simon's 'They're Playing Our Song' on Broadway," he said. Unfortunately, Burghoff had to turn down that plum to honor a prior engagement in San Antonio.

On April 6, he will take his jazz band (Burghoff's a talented drummer) into the Dorothy Chandler Pavilion to play a benefit for the Los Angeles County Crippled Children's Foundation.

Next summer, Burghoff said, he has been invited to speak at the Smithsonian Institute in Washington, D.C. in honor of the Year of the Crippled Child.

He doesn't know why they invited him, but it may have to do with the fact that Burghoff, himself, is crippled, although he probably doesn't think so.

More than that, he is deformed. And, unless you're one of the 10 or 11 people in this country who have never seen him on "MASH," you've seen that deformity with your own eyes. Didn't notice, did you?

The fingers on Burghoff's left hand are barely stubs, perhaps one-third grown. He doesn't consider it a handicap.

"It has never held me back, any more than Herbert Marshall's wooden leg," said Burghoff.

In fact, he has exploited it for the good by hosting a film called "The Invisible Children," about kids with physical abnormalities. A teacher who saw it praised the little movie for "making children who are different feel good about themselves."

'RADAR' BURGHOFF SPORTS NEW LOOK
Raising funds for KOCE-TV

Another possible handicap has failed to materialize, said Burghoff. From the age of 26 to 35, he played a character who was forever 18.

"I haven't had any problem of stereotyping at all in the theaters," he claimed. "But I have with television. I just got a call to play a jockey."

Burghoff admits that his success on the stage is attributable to his years as the resident innocent of "MASH." But he is glad to be out of regular television production.

"The theater allows me to live the more normal part of my life," he explained. "I can work 10 weeks and earn enough money to live the rest of the year. I can go to India and seek out the wisdom of the East if I want to."

Although Burghoff doesn't want to be portrayed as "a religious fanatic," his conversation is sprinkled liberally with references to wisdom, spirituality and moral choices. He likes to tell stories about "children and faith," particularly when the child is his 5-year-old daughter, Gina.

"We were flying in a jetliner just recently and she was looking down at the top of the clouds," he recalled. "Suddenly, she looked at me and said, 'Now I get it. When it's raining down below the sun is always shining up here.'"

Burghoff beamed. That said it all.

Starting a New Business

According to California Business and Professions Code (Sec. 17900 to 17930) all persons doing business under a fictitious name must file a statement with the County Clerk and have it published four times in a newspaper serving the area in which the business is located.

The statement is required by law and is necessary in protecting your business name. Most banks require proof of filing to open commercial accounts.

The DAILY PILOT provides both filing and publication services. We have all the necessary forms and maintain a daily service to the Orange County Courthouse. Either stop by one of our convenient offices or phone the LEGAL DEPARTMENT 642-4321, Ext. 332 for more information and forms.

Countians win prizes

Noting local songwriters

Songwriter Jerry Wagoner of Costa Mesa and his partner, Richard DeLong, recently took the grand prize in a county-wide music contest.

SECOND PLACE WINNER MICHAEL DAMON
Netted $1,000 with his "Cheap Talk"

Their song, "Cold Nights," was chosen overall finest from a field of over 500 entries, according to Terry Sheppard of International Automated Media in Irvine, one of three co-sponsors of the contest.

First prize went to the jazz-rock band Tamarack for their tune, "High Horse." Second prize winner was Michael Damon for his song, "Cheap Talk."

The awards were presented at the monthly meeting of the Orange County Entertainment Writers Association at the El Paso Cantina in Fullerton.

"We recorded 'Cold Nights' at the last minute," said Wagoner. "We'd already entered another song, but we knew this one was magic when we finished writing it."

DeLong and Wagoner received use of the I.A.M. production facilities to master and record a two-side single. Co-sponsors KEZY will air the single, along with an interview of the winning duo.

First prize winners, Tamarack, won 12 hours of studio time at I.A.M., while second through seventh place winners won from $50 to $1,000 in cash from Coast Music, also co-sponsors of the pontest.

OC eateries break out the blarney for St. Pat's Day

By NORMAN STANLEY

Faith and begorra, that annual merriment tied to wearin' of the green rolls around again next Tuesday. 'Tis the time shamrocks, shillelaghs and snakes receive fitting and proper attention.

Old St. Patrick reigns supreme and the populace goes a bit daft by way of tribute. Galway Bay and everybody's wild Irish rose flounder amid tears of suds-induced joy.

Those who want to get a head start can devote this weekend to a build-up for the main event. All those Irish eyes can start smiling tonight and carry right on through a bleary Wednesday morning.

Name alone leads to the guarantee that the old sod will be toasted often and heartily at a couple of Newport Beach spots.

You'll probably find it difficult to get through the doors at Muldoon's Irish pub and restaurant in Newport Center. Try it anyway, it's all part of the fun at 202 Newport Center Drive. Telephone: 640-4110.

And it will be pretty much the same story at Malarky's Irish pub on the Balboa Peninsula. But who would want to miss lifting one or two "wee little ones" at 3011 Newport Blvd. Telephone 675-2340.

They're calling it a "leprechaun roundup" at Stuart Anderson's Black Angus restaurants, and everybody is invited to "tie one down." All St. Patricks's Day long they'll be serving traditional corned beef and cabbage and hearty drinks at the restaurants in Fountain Valley, Santa Ana, Garden Grove, Anaheim, Cerritos, Lakewood and Torrance.

OUT 'N ABOUT

Newport's Warehouse restaurant in Lido Marina Village will celebrate St. Pat's big day by serving Irish coffee for $1 from first to last call. Befitting the occasion, the Wharf Lounge will also feature Bailey's Irish cream and Murphy's Irish whiskey at 3450 Via Oporto. Telephone: 6743-4700.

In a salute to the Emerald Isle, Newport's Benihana's Japanese restaurant will undergo a one-day change of name to "Benny O'Hanna's." Midori (green) cocktails, lime sherbet and the green tea ice cream will round out the gaelic treats at 4250 Birch Street. Telephone: 955-0822.

It isn't official, but don't be too surprised if a popular Huntington Beach place also gets a St. Patrick's Day name change to Charley O'Brown's. That's because the day's special fare will be corned beef and cabbage, accompanied by your favorite libations, at 16160 Beach Blvd., In Huntington Executive Park. Telephone: 842-6602.

YOU DON'T HAVE to be Irish — you don't even have to be Scotch — to appreciate the inflation fighter they've come up with at Elizabeth Howard's Curtain Call Dinner Theater in Tustin.

For the agreeably low price of $11.95 which also includes the show, of course — yankee pot roast, accompanied by salad, vegetables and bread, is now the fixed menu on Tuesday evenings at the Curtain Call.

Current theatrical presentation is Rogers and Hammerstein's tuneful "South Pacific." The production plays nightly, except Monday, with a Sunday matinee.

The dinner theatre is located at 690 El Camino Real, just off the Santa Ana and Newport Freeways. Reservations and information: 838-1540.

ANY NIGHT'S PRICE is right for the show that's just opened at Sebastian's West Dinner Playhouse in San Clemente. But the engagement is limited, so hurry if you're going to catch Virginia Mayo, Dennis James and Alan Young starring in "Murder at the Howard Johnsons."

Sebastian's San Clemente is located at 140 Ave. Pico, just off the Coast Highway. Reservations and information: 492-9950.

Meanwhile Sebastian's Dinner Playhouse at the Grand Hotel in Anaheim has extended the run of "Fiddler on the Roof." The highly acclaimed production will continue nightly, except Monday, through April 5.

The jazz doctor

By JOEL C. DON
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Dr. Joseph Hart sports a white smock, tie and works in a not-too-out-of-the-ordinary Newport Beach medical office. That's "Doctor" Hart.

With banjo in one hand and a tall can of beer in the other, he's just Joe. Or better, Dr. Jazz, as he's unofficially known — the leader of a spirited, rowdy bunch of musicians who are members of his Dixieland jazz band called the Oversextet.

"Dixieland music is a happy sound," says the 48-year-old urologist. "It will never be popular again but it'll never die.

"All of us need an uplift. I like to make people well with surgery and medicine and the band does that too."

The self-taught musician started the band while a medical student at Yale University. The musical combo helped the students ease the pressure, or sometimes the boredom, of an intensive medical education.

They were hired by a New Haven, Conn. watering hole for "$5 and all the beer you could drink," which was just fine for the pre-med band members.

"We were pretty good beer drinkers in those days," he muses. "I could get down an awful lot of kidney lubricant."

And the name, Oversextet, well, was derived from the primary preoccupation of the future physicians.

Hart continued Oversextet during residency training at Stanford University and service in the Air Force. His group was hired for private parties and played union gigs in San Francisco.

The musicians changed when Hart moved from one practice to the next but the music remained distinctively tight, fast and in true respect to the classic Dixie tunes penned out of the South.

A demanding medical practice put a damper on the group for a time, but in 1965 Hart and some physician friends gathered for yet another edition of the Oversextet.

But 16 years later, Hart remains the only doctor in the group.

"Physicians make lousy musicians," Hart says. "The problem is just the same as I have. Doctors get tied up with their work — they don't come, they don't practice and they are unreliable as performers because of their schedules."

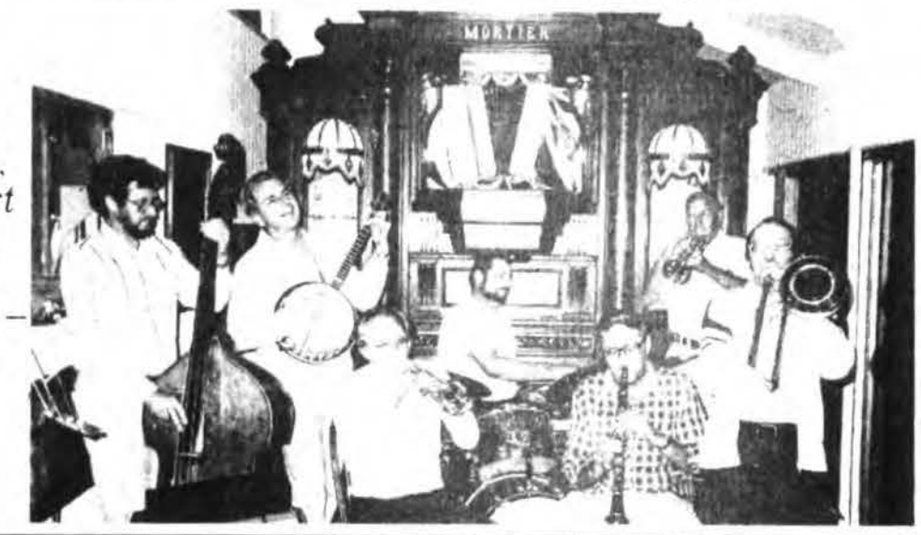

The current group includes a couple of program cost analysts, a retired airline pilot, a hospital music director, a middle school music teacher and others who join the band from time to time.

Oversextet is well-known for its charity work for the Newport Harbor Art Museum, a county juvenile offenders program, the Orange County Philharmonic Society and Hoag Memorial Hospital.

The group has raised more than $10,000 for Hoag Hospital via private parties and socials in lieu of direct payment to band members.

Oversextet performs or meets for rehearsal at least once a week.

(See JAZZ, Page E1)

Dr. Joseph Hart, left, is a Newport Beach urologist, but his heart belongs in Dixie — music that is. At right, Hart's band, the Over-Sextet.

WILLIE NELSON ON NEW ALBUM
"Somewhere Over the Rainbow"

SOMEWHERE OVER THE RAINBOW
Willie Nelson
Columbia Records

Willie Nelson's latest album, "Somewhere Over the Rainbow," could be sub-titled "Son of Stardust." More likely, though, it is a sibling, or perhaps a country cousin, to the bearded kicker's first double-platinum release.

"Stardust" was a break in the Nelson tradition (if, indeed, such an animal exists; Nelson has never fit comfortably into an assigned genre). A gentle collection of pop classics, with full orchestration, "Stardust" spoke little of Nelson's country western origins.

On "Somewhere Over the Rainbow," Nelson continues the theme, but with a twist. The orchestra is gone, replaced by a handful of accoustic musicians straight out of Nashville. They're very good.

Despite his reputation as The Outlaw, despite his pot smoking and tequila swilling on stage, despite his long, braided hair, Willie Nelson is an unabashed sentimental fool. It is that trait which endears him to many who might otherwise dismiss Nelson as a rebellious upstart.

Witness the songs on this album: There is, of course, the title tune, followed by numbers like "Who's Sorry Now?" "My Mother's Eyes," "Won't You Ride in My Little Red Wagon," "I'm Gonna Sit Right Down and Write Myself A Letter" and "Twinkle, Twinkle Little Star" (although you wouldn't recognize that last one).

Though the sound is country, it is nominally so. Little imagination would be required to consider this a folk album. And Nelson continues to indulge in weird, haunting chord progressions, contrasting nicely with the rather traditional pickin' modes adhered to by his guitar, fiddle, upright bass and mandolin back-up players.

As usual, Nelson enjoys sharing the spotlight with other singers. He is joined on several songs by sideman Freddie Powers, who at one point launches into a spat of scat. Powers adds a nice element of vocal dimension to an already pleasant album.

It isn't likely that "Somewhere Over the Rainbow" will achieve the same phenomenal success as "Stardust" or "Willie and Family Live." But for Nelson fans (and they are legion) or anyone who enjoys a gentle song well-sung, it comes recommended.

DAD LOVES HIS WORK
James Taylor
Columbia Records

James Taylor's music is one of control and release — hovering, tenuous melodies that spill into lush refrains when they're successful and droop anticlimactically when they're not. His recent release, "Dad Loves His Work," displays those qualities again; most of the tunes soar, a couple of them crash.

Taylor's last album, "Flag," emphasized the driving, rock 'n' roll "band" sound of Taylor and his usual sidemen, Leland Sklar, Russ Kunkel, Danny Kortchmar and Don Grolnick. "Dad Loves His Work" is a return to the more acoustic, slower music for which he is known.

As always, Taylor sings and writes sincerely here; there's little posturing, little nonsense and a great deal of probing and questioning going on. He's in an agitated state of mind again, following the contented beauty of "J.T." and the good-natured, punchy "Flag." The songs here deal with break up ("Her Town Too"), avoiding break up ("Stand and Fight"), loss of inspiration ("London Town"), and faith in the sometimes painful search for love ("Love of My Life"). Acting as a balance to these songs are the cheerier "Summer's Here Again" and "Hard Times."

The interplay between Taylor's voice and the band continues to be the same exciting, finely-tuned thing it has been since "One Man Dog." Although Waddy Wachtel plays guitar here instead of the usual Danny Kortchmar, and Rick Marotta plays drums instead of the usual Russ Kunkel, the sound is still fluid, clear and rich.

"Dad Loves His Work" quietly moves Taylor's art another step forward. His singing is masterful, the tunes, (for the most part) are good, and he's dealing with the same kind of things that most of his listeners are. An album from James Taylor is half entertainment and half Dear Abby: you get a look at how someone else answers the same questions you've been asking yourself.

CALIFORNIA SUITE
Claude Bolling and Hubert Laws
CBS Masterworks

"California Suite" is the offspring of a musical marriage made in heaven. Don't let the flippant cover cartoon fool you, this magnificent meld of classical and jazz music is a serious and exceptionally beautiful album.

Claude Bolling is one of the most fascinating pianists around. A native of Cannes, France, Bolling found acclaim on this continent with his fabulous "Suite for Flute and Jazz Piano," written and recorded with fellow countryman Jean-Pierre Rampal. "Suite" settled onto Billboard magazine's best-seller chart for more than four years.

Hubert Laws, a Houston product, has distinguished himself among this country's finest flutists. Along with his musical brothers, Laws is a favorite of "cool" jazz fans, although he boasts extensive classical credits as well.

Together they recorded the title tune for Neil Simon's movie "California Suite." But, other than that one number, this a is not a soundtrack album.

It is, instead, an exploration into the common themes of two genres. Sometimes it is classical, sometimes it is jazz, sometimes it is an astounding synthesis. Bolling and Laws slip back and forth between modes so silkily it's hardly noticed.

"California Suite" contains pretty little surprises for the careful listener. Was that a touch of honky-tonk in "Black Folks?" And did we hear a moment of minuet on "Beverly Hills?"

Billing on the album is also granted to bassist Chuck Damonico and drummer Shelly Manne. They are given occasional moments of glory, but remain largely, and properly, inconspicious, leaving our attention focused on the delicate, complex interplay between Bolling and Laws.

If you don't like "California Suite" — and I mean really like it — you're probably someone who kicks his dog and never says "Good morning."

It's a musical sunrise.

Digital recording means discs don't hiss music."

The project was paid for out of a $20,000 gift to the symphony by Irvine businessman Ernst Jechart.

Null said the discs would be pressed in Japan by the Japan Victor Corporation, using a special plastic that is outlawed for manufacture in this country because of the pollutants released during that process. "But," he added, "it do deliver the bacon."

The album is due for release by early fall on the Varese Sarabande label.

— Michael Dougan

An audiophile's search for perfection in recorded sound would probably lead him right back to the music halls and recording studios.

Or that path may lead to digital recordings.

It's no secret that "truth" in music lies in the original source of the sound; everything else is a mere imitation or copy. Everytime a musical performance is transferred from one copy to the next in the recording and album pressing process, more distortion — primarily in the form of audible hiss and muffled highs — accumulates on the final 12-inch LP purchased by the consumer.

Record companies have made a few attempts at improving the purity and clarity of their products. It's not uncommon for some audiophiles to buy specific record labels for their higher quality vinyls.

Direct-to-disk recordings, which bypass the tape medium to transfer music directly into grooves on a special master record, offered the latest in audio achievement and a relatively hefty price (about $16 per disk).

Then along came so-called digital recordings.

They are being hailed as the dawning of pure sound in audio recordings; musical realism for the home stereo. Tchaikovsky's cannons from the "1812 Overture" will blast as if they were in your living room, you'll supposedly hear Chick Coreas's fingers wandering on the keyboard and James Taylor's delicate vocal intonations.

"Digital is simply a different tape recorder," explained Thomas B. Null, executive vice president of Varese Sarabande Records. "Everything else is the same."

But the technology involved in digital recording is like comparing a computer to an abacus: they perform the same task but in much different ways.

The more common records, also known as "analog" recordings, transfer musical sinewaves into the grooves. But during the process of copying recorded sinewaves to the finished product, audio "glitches" are introduced in the form of distortion and noise.

Digital recording seems to have solved the noise problem, since music is encoded into numbers rather than waves. Like digital computers, the technology uses a binary system to preserve every high, low and mid-range sound via the numbers 0 and 1.

Since the music is recorded using specific numerical quantities, there's virtually little or no room for distortion, Null said.

"Anybody with a record player and ears can tell that digital is an improvement," he said. "It's just like when stereo came out. People thought it was an improvement."

Null points out that the digital records now on the market are, in a sense, only hybrids of what will eventually be known as "true" digital. Since digital records are still made by transfer of digitally-encoded master tapes to sinewaves on grooves, vinyl records are at best only halfway there.

Null predicts audiophiles will one day purchase credit card-sized records with no grooves. They'll be encoded via laser beams and played back using home laser systems.

Null, though, thinks there's plenty of room to explore the hybrid digital record market, especially since digital records sell for as much as the direct-to-disk variety.

"We've realized that (vinyl) records have turned out to be far more flexible than we thought," he said. "We can get 90 to 95 percent of the digital sound quality onto the final record played at home."

Colleges offer 'Tom Jones' and 'Gamma Rays'

By TOM TITUS
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

The college theaters take over the spotlight tonight as the 18th century comedy "Tom Jones" opens on the main stage of Golden West College and Paul Zindel's "The Effects of Gamma Rays on Man in the Moon Marigolds" comes to UC Irvine.

"Tom Jones," the stage version of the Oscar-winning movie from Henry Fielding's novel, features William Pomeroy in the title role of a young man who encounters a series of amorous escapades. Others in the cast are Frank Pierce, Lida Pingree, Michael Grenie, Terra Shelman and Laura Mitchell.

INTERMISSION

Performances will be given tonight and Saturday, and Thursdays through Saturdays for the next two weekends at 8:30 with a closing matinee March 29 at 2:30 in the GWC theater off the Gothard Street entrance to the Huntington Beach campus. Reservations 892-7711.

Only two performances of "Gamma Rays/Marigolds" will be presented, tonight and Saturday at 8 p.m., in the Fine Arts Little Theater in UCI's Humanities Hall. Reservations 833-6617.

CLOSING OUT its four-weekend run with final performances tonight and Saturday at 8:30 and Sunday at 2 p.m. is the suspense drama "Rope" by Showcase Productions. Alex Koba is directing the show, which will be presented at the Westminster Auditorium, 7571 Westminster Ave.

A half dozen other theatrical ventures are continuing along the Orange Coast. They are:

— "The Merchant of Venice" at South Coast Repertory, 655 Town Center Drive, Costa Mesa (957-4033) nightly except Mondays at 8 p.m. with weekend matinees at 2:30 through April 5.

— "SAME TIME, NEXT Year" at the Harlequin Dinner Playhouse, 3503 S. Harbor Blvd., Santa Ana (979-5511) nightly except Mondays at varying curtain times through March 22.

— "Murder at the Howard Johnson's" at Sebastian's West Dinner Playhouse, 140 Ave. Pico, San Clemente (492-9950) nightly except Mondays at varying times through April 5.

— "Victoria's House" at the Westminster Community Theater, 7272 Maple St., Westminster (995-4113) Fridays and Saturdays at 8:30 through April 4.

— "CATCH ME IF You Can" at the Saddleback Valley Community Theater, 25741-C Obrero, Mission Viejo (770-0381) Fridays and Saturdays at 8 p.m. through March 21.

— "A Bad Year for Tomatoes" at the Huntington Beach Playhouse, in the Seacliff Village Center, Main at Yorktown, Huntington Beach (847-4465) Fridays and Saturdays at 8:30 through March 28.

TWO COMMUNITY THEATERS which share the same March 27 opening night have announced the casts for their respective new productions — "God's Favorite" at the Newport Theater Arts Center and "Everything in the Garden" at the Newport Harbor Actors Theater.

Kent Johnson is directing Neil Simon's "Favorite," which will feature Paul Teschke and Sorrell Wayne as a beleaguered couple and John Szura as a heavenly messenger. Others in the cast are Joe Brockman, Scott Clevenger, Paula Kay Perry, Dolly Ross and William Buckley.

Edward Albee's "Garden" is being directed by Don Laffoon and features Rochelle Savitt, Ben Miles, Bill Urban and Valerie McIlroy in the principal assignments. Others in the show are Tom Early, Robert Knapp, Denise Dale, Gary Bartick, Jenne Christiansen, Tom Emmannuel and Jeanne Clark.

"God's Favorite" will run Fridays and Saturdays at 8 and Sundays at 2 through April 18 at the Theater Arts Center, 2501 Cliff Drive, Newport Beach (675-3143) while "Everything in the Garden" will be staged Thursdays through Saturdays at 8 p.m. with matinees at 2:30 on March 29 and April 5 at the Actors Theater, 309 Monte Vista St., Costa Mesa (631-5110).

'Eyewitness' isn't, but new Tesich film is still on target

By JEFF PARKER
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Writer Steve Tesich and director Peter Yates, who teamed brilliantly in "Breaking Away," have turned their talents to another genre in "Eyewitness." It's a subte, small-scale suspense story about a janitor (William Hurt) who, ironically, does not witness a murder but implies that he did in order to get the attentions of an attractive newscaster (Sigourney Weaver) who is working the story.

For a writer with roots in stage drama, Tesich's screen work in "Eyewitness" is remarkably sparse and effective. There's an unnerving sense of quiet that pervades the film right from the start and continues to the end; the events are compounded by the vacuum of information and dialogue. There's a beauty in the innuendo. Deever's near death at the hand of a friend (at first it looks like a set-up to us); and the last-minute arrival of the police to tie things up are all pulled from first year screen writing, and there's no attempt to hide it.

The brilliance of "Eyewitness" comes in the autonomy of the scenes themselves. There are dozens of fascinating vignettes to behold here: an explosive family dinner at the Deever's; a touching scene in which Deever and his old fiance fall out of love ("It's beautiful," she says to him, "we don't have to be crazy about each other any more"), a short, lyrical shot of Deever carrying his paraplegic father upstairs on his back ("I used to carry you like this," his father remarks).

More emotion springs from some of the short scenes in "Eyewitness" than comes from most movies as a whole, and Hurt and Weaver are responsible for a great deal of it. Hurt's janitor isn't just self-contained, he's self-surrounded: we get the feeling that he'll never stop talking, if she can only get him to start. Weaver plays off Hurt wonderfully, quietly taking what he offers, prodding him on with a cool mixture of personal and professional interest. We can see that she's not quite comfortable with either. James Woods, who gave the stunning and overlooked performance in "The Onion Field," plays Aldo, a friend of Deever's, and he brings all the manic weirdness here that he did in the Wambaugh movie.

"Eyewitness" fizzles awkwardly at the end, when Tesich and Yates squeeze their story into formula instead of keeping the possibilities open. A number of gross unlikelihoods are used to set up the final shoot out, which isn't worth the cost of watching our characters behave like numbskulls. In light of the previous two hours,' we wonder why the conclusion wasn't pulled off with the same care and imagination.

. . . Clown act from dullsville

plained, applying daubs of color to my eyelids. "The Auguse clown is the straight man, while the white-face clown is more intelligent. It's the Auguse clown who gets the pie in the face — he's the white-face clown's foil."

My mission, should I choose to accept it, was to march in the circus parade staged just before the intermission. "Fine," I said. "Where are my big floppy shoes?"

Came the reply and my heart sank. Who ever heard of a clown in tennies?

It was an hour before the parade. I was told to loiter around the wardrobe trailer and not wander off because "They tend to get extremely perturbed."

Swell. If I mosey over to admire the elephants I'll get arrested as a False Clown.

I listened to the roar of the crowd as a tiger performed, pretty girls dangled from ropes, a magician prestidigitated. Perhaps some daredevils swung on the trapeze in search of the perfect triple. I wouldn't know.

Finally, I saw llamas and samoyeds and elephants line up outside the entrance. The parade was about to begin.

Because they didn't trust me to walk in a circle without getting lost, the clown crew placed me in a red chariot pulled by the last elephant. I would be followed by a water buffalo.

Billy, a portly and friendly man who's been in the clown biz since 1948, would ride along to make sure I didn't screw that up, either.

And there we were, cruising past the bleachers of cheering children and beaming parents. It was like diving into a fish bowl — you get to see what the fish see.

"Hang on," whispered Billy through his clown smile. "Hang on tight and wave." Billy was afraid I'd fall off and be trampled by the water buffalo, lousing up a good parade.

I waved as much as my straight-jacket-that-was-a-clown-suit would allow and, frankly, it was boring. I felt no enthusiasm for the faceless masses.

So I turned my attention to the front row, less than 10 feet away, and began to pick out specific kiddos, making eye contact and waving directly at them.

The result was astounding. Their little round faces fairly exploded with joy. Only then did I get some feel for the payoff clowns receive. Those tykes were happy and I had given it to them. It felt terrific.

My clown career spanned approximately three minutes. I didn't know an elephant walked that fast. About the time I was beginning to get the hang of it, we were outside and Billy was pulling me off of the chariot and out of the water buffalo's path.

I stood there alone, watching the llamas pass and humming "Is That All There Is?"

The nun took back her clown suit, I shook the sawdust off my non-floppy shoes and went home — still in make-up. That, I learned, would be a problem.

It doesn't come off. Not with soap and water, anyway.

I had an interview with a major television star in one hour. After several washings panic set in, followed by a brave sense of acceptance.

While I browsed through my closet for a sport jacket that would go with a red nose and silver eyelids, a female friend produced the solution. Thank God for mascara remover.

Circus Vargas will appear at Montgomery Wards in Costa Mesa next Tuesday through Thursday and at Laguna Hills Mall next Friday through Monday, March 23.

They say it's the last three-ring circus still playing under the traditional big top and they say it's pretty good. You couldn't tell by me.

. . . Intermission

CALLBOARD — Auditions for the musical comedy "Dames at Sea" will be held Monday at 7:30 by the Gem Theater, 13852 Main St., Garden Grove . . . three men and three women are being sought, and auditioners should bring an up-tempo song in their own key . . .

. . . 'Eyewitness'

The core of the movie isn't the murder mystery anyway, but rather the romance between Deever, the janitor, and Toni, the news reporter. Deever offers information to the reporter to help in his seduction of her; she offers her affections (we guess) to help get the story. But Deever's soft-spoken charm and up-front infatuation with Toni appeal to more than just her news sense, and she is pulled farther and farther into his uncluttered world ("I've got a motorcycle, a dog and a pretty nice apartment . . . and I'd really like to see you again," he tells her).

"Eyewitness" is steeped in movie devices, and we can feel the tension between those devices and the story with which Tesich is mainly preoccupied, namely, Toni and Deever. Yates plays these cliches brilliantly.

. . . Jazz

At practice in his Newport Beach home, Hart either keeps the raucous group in line or happy with a fresh drink in their hands.

"I'm a far greater surgeon than a banjo player," asserts Hart, who manages the group's business affairs and arranges performances. "They wouldn't let me play unless I owned the ball and mitt.

"I've continued in the performing arts not only for entertainment but for self-education so I can be a better doctor," he explains. "I think a performing artist has a different emotional and personality structure than a pragmatic surgeon for instance.

"I understand actors and musicians and dancers more fully by performing myself."

'Some pretty big tigers'

Ed Bradley vaults to '60 Minutes' post

By TOM JORY

NEW YORK (AP) — Ed Bradley is quick to note that his assignment with CBS' "60 Minutes" will mean sharing "a cage with some pretty big tigers.

"I know I can carry my weight," Bradley says, "but that's something you have to demonstrate, to yourself as well as others."

"60 Minutes" is, indeed, an exclusive club — five correspondents, including Bradley, in 13 years. Two, Mike Wallace and Harry Reasoner, were there for the program's debut in 1968, though Reasoner later spent eight years at ABC. Bradley replaces Dan Rather, who completed nearly six years as "60 Minutes" correspondent before moving on to an even higher plateau — anchorman for the network's "Evening News," earlier this month.

BRADLEY

"When I came to 'CBS Reports' in '77 or '78," Bradley recalls, "I was asked how I felt about '60 Minutes.' At the time, it wasn't something I felt compelled to go after. As it turned out, they decided on Harry Reasoner, and that was fine with me.

"The next time it came up, about a year ago when they announced Dan would succeed Walter Cronkite on the 'Evening News,' I still wasn't sure it was what I wanted. I thought about it, and talked about it with friends, and decided, 'Yeah, it's what I want.'

"It was the No. 1 show on television at the time," Bradley says, "and I wanted to compete at that level." "60 Minutes" finished the 1979-80 season as the top-rated program in primetime, a lofty perch assumed since then by a CBS show of another sort altogether, "Dallas."

Bradley's decision to go after the "60 Minutes" job — take it if offered — was at the least consistent for the former schoolteacher from Philadelphia.

"Everything I've done, I've benefited from," he says. "I have never had what people call career goals; my goal has been to do what I'm assigned to the best of my ability.

"I LOOK AT any job as a vehicle to take me somewhere new. And where this one will take me from here, I don't know."

Bradley's credentials are impressive; his "CBS Reports" documentary on the plight of refugees in Southeast Asia, "The Boat People," won an Emmy as well as a duPont-Columbia University Award for the 1978-79 season. He received a second duPont-Columbia Award last month for another "CBS Reports" production, "Blacks in America: With All Deliberate Speed?"

Bradley approaches his work from a rather unique perspective, and that may be an important factor in his success as a journalist. To illustrate:

"WHILE WE were doing 'The Boat People," he recalls, "we happened to be on the beach one day as this boatload of people tried to reach land. Some were really struggling, and I said 'The hell with it,' and walked out into the water to help them ashore.

"As a journalist, the question is, 'Do you become a part of the story?' Well, I don't think you always have to stand back and merely observe. And that's not the same as expressing my opinion, which I would not do."

Ed Bradley joined CBS News as a stringer in the Paris bureau in 1971, and moved on to Saigon the next year. He was named a correspondent in '73, and transferred to Washington in June 1974. The next March, he returned to Southeast Asia to cover the fall of Cambodia and Vietnam.

He spent nearly two years as White House correspondent before being assigned principal correspondent for "CBS Reports" in September 1978.

HANDICAPPED TEEN ATTITUDE MODEL
No mental barriers for Tammy Hopper

Deformed girl gets praise

HANFORD (AP) — Tammy Hopper is a teenager with deformities that would make some people hide. But she says if people don't like the way you look, "they're not worth thinking about."

The 18-year-old Hanford High School junior was born without arms, and her hands, shortened legs and feet are deformed, making her look like a thalidomide baby. Her mother never took the tranquilizer, but the defects are similar.

Despite her deformities and 20 operations over nine years, Miss Hopper has overcome the mental trauma.

SHE EVEN REALIZED A DREAM of becoming a cheerleader in elementary school.

"I yelled along with them . . . and I kind of wriggled myself around there to lead the cheers," she said.

Tammy is forcing others to face their psychological barriers about the handicapped.

Growing up with the hurt of insults and exclusion, she learned that "if people don't like what you're wearing or what you look like, they're not worth thinking about."

She said her upbringing gave her a positive attitude.

"I'VE BEEN TREATED LIKE everyone else all my life. If I hit my brother, then I got whopped back," said the oldest of four children. "My parents brought me up the right way."

Miss Hopper often walks to her six classes and performs secretarial work part-time at the state Employment Development Department office here.

She lives independently in a separate living area at her parents' home although she shares most meals with the family.

Her presence has provoked many fellow students and workers into changing their attitudes about the handicapped.

Earline Null, her employment supervisor, called her "a neat teen-ager. She has the same wants and needs and desires as any other teenager I've met in my life.

"THERE ARE THINGS THAT SHE can handle — and that handicapped people can handle — that we don't realize."

Tammy's best friend, Terri Anderson, said she is treated like everyone else in school "because she's not any different.

"I look beyond her handicap," she said. "To me, she doesn't have one and I treat her as I would any other friend. She doesn't ask for pity, so I don't give her any."

Co-worker Katie Jones added, "I admire Tammy more than anyone else because, in a way, Tammy has proved that even with short legs and short arms, she's the same as anyone else."

Miss Hopper said she wants to become a psychologist for handicapped children.

Her forced medical absences from school slowed her formal education, but she is taking a remedial reading course to sharpen her skills for the rigors of college.

Cotton tampon re-introduced

LAKE SUCCESS, N.Y. (AP) — Tampax Inc. will reintroduce an all-cotton tampon it developed in 1936 but withdrew from the market in 1978.

A statement issued by the company said Original Regular was being brought back to meet "strong consumer demand."

Some tampons have been selling poorly since a scare over toxic shock syndrome, an infection that appears related to use of super-absorbent tampons. The natural, all-cotton Tampax product is believed to have none of the problems of synthetic products.

Original Regular was replaced three years ago by a smaller, high-absorbency product. Original Regulars are to be reintroduced next year.

Used bank for sale

SIOUX CITY, Iowa (AP) — In the market for a used bank?

Sioux City officials are offering one for sale, complete with a couple of vaults, a 24-hour automatic teller and safety deposit boxes.

There's a catch, though. If you want it, you have to move it.

The building, formerly owned by Security National and abandoned when the bank moved into its branch in a nearby mall last October, is blocking construction, and city officials want it moved by April 1.

Kennebunkport?
Isn't that the boat that won The America's Cup in '75?
no
If you're not sure who (or what) Kennybunkport was, don't feel bad—you're not alone. Kennybunkport is one of 14 distinctively different apartment floorplans at Seawind Village in Huntington Beach. Seawind Village is a result of totally personalized professional planning. The kind of attention you deserve. A perfect blend of nature and living—nestled in a forest with babbling brooks and quiet ponds, cooled by natural ocean breezes. Add to that tennis courts, swimming pools, a jacuzzi and a convenient location near shopping and employment and you've got a place anyone would proudly call home. (Even Kennybunkport!) One and two bedroom, one and two bath adult apartments from $440.00.

Panel urges 6-month military draft

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Pentagon advisory panel is recommending that Congress consider reinstituting a version of the military draft that would require youths to serve six months and then decide whether to stay on active duty longer or join the reserves.

Louis J. Conti, chairman of the Reserve Forces Policy Board, called this a "try it before you buy it" approach.

Reporting to Congress, Conti noted recent increases in Reserve and National Guard strength but said the board still is concerned over "inadequate force levels which must be responsive to mobilization demands."

However, Conti made it clear the board was not speaking for Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger when it expressed its views to Congress.

Conti is a retired Marine Corps major general and had been a star football lineman at Cornell in the 1940s.

There has not been a military draft in the United States since 1973 and it would take an act of Congress to revive it.

However, draft registration, which was ended by former President Ford in 1975, was resumed for young men last summer by former President Carter to have names on hand in case the draft was reinstituted.

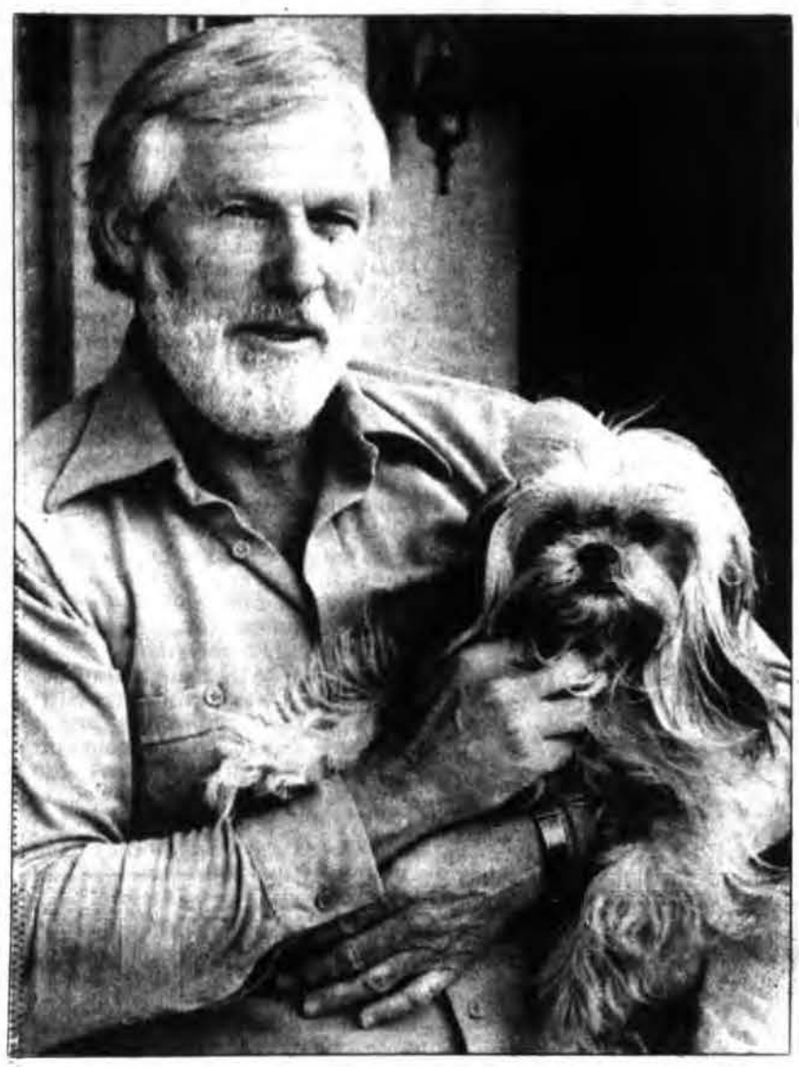

Weinberger and President Reagan have indicated reluctance to keep the draft registration machinery intact and voiced strong opposition to reviving the draft itself.

"The board fully realizes that a return to the draft will fall far short of resolving all the problems of a modern, technologically advanced military force," Conti said. "On the other hand, the board sees too many positive outcomes resulting from a draft not to pursue the question with utmost vigor."

He described the draft as "potentially the most cost-effective and equitable answer" to many of the problems.

Under the board's recommendation, men — "and women, if mandated by Congress" — would be required to serve six months on

SAN JUAN'S GLEN CLYMORE WITH HIS DOG, 'ROWDY'
Hostage's dad finds it 'very hard not to break down'

Coast dad living hostage nightmare

By JOHN NEEDHAM
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

The father of an Orange County man being held hostage on a hijacked Pakistani airliner in Damascus, Syria, says he'll believe his son is safe when he sees him leave the plane and hears his voice.

Glen Clymore of San Juan Capistrano, whose son Craig is one of three Americans aboard the jet along with about 100 other hostages, said Thursday he was feeling more relaxed since learning the Pakistan government had agreed to the hijackers demands.

Pakistani terrorists holding the plane threatened to blow up the jet and everyone on it if 55 purported political prisoners were not released from jails in Pakistan.

Clymore said Thursday's 8 a.m. deadline was like "living through a nightmare."

"You just can't believe what's happening to yourself," the senior Clymore said, standing outside his home on a quiet residential street. "This has been quite an ordeal."

He said he and his wife Thelma turned off the radio so they could unwind after spending a sleepless night awaiting news if their son Craig was alive or dead.

"It was literally a countdown to an explosion," Clymore said. "We've quit listening for now so we can turn off the tension. Every time we would begin to relax we would hear another piece of news and get upset again. It's very hard not to break down."

Clymore said he had received two telephone calls from U.S. State Department officials since Thursday's deadline passed.

"They tell us they are doing everything they can and I'm sure they are," he said. "We will be very delighted when this is all over."

Clymore said his wife was still too upset to talk with reporters. Mrs. Clymore has remained secluded inside her home since her only son was taken hostage 12 days ago.

The younger Clymore, a 1974 graduate of Laguna Beach High School, runs an import business.

Prisoners out of Pakistan for hostages

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — A group of political prisoners flew out of Pakistan today to be exchanged for more than 100 hostages held by a trio of hijackers at the Damascus airport, authorities said.

Airport authorities in Karachi, Pakistan, said the special flight took off for Libya and would be followed by a second plane with more prisoners. The hijackers, who have held the plane 12 days, demanded the release of 55 prisoners. Pakistan officials have said they could find only 49.

The leader of the heavily armed hijackers said today that none of the hostages would be freed "until all political prisoners and family members" released by Pakistan arrive in Libya.

The Pakistani military government began assembling the political prisoners it agreed to free Thursday after the hijackers threatened to kill three Americans, (one of them from Orange County) among the hostages. Libya, asked to provide asylum for the hijackers and to receive the freed prisoners, agreed, a Pakistani diplomat here said.

The officials said the latest demands by the hijackers were "not a problem," but the timing of the release was still unsettled.

The plane was commandeered over Pakistan on March 2 and went first to Kabul, Afghanistan, and then to the Damascus airport. The hijackers shot and killed one hostage.

Patient stable with transplant

STANFORD (AP) — Mary Gohlke, the world's only living heart-lung transplant patient, is gathering strength and slowly recuperating from the operation that gave her a new lease on life, doctors say.

Mrs. Gohlke, 45, remained critical but stable. She is being treated with cyclosporin-A, an experimental drug designed to aid healing without hampering the body's ability to fight off infections.

Oil pipeline protected

Court bars HB from blocking flow

By PATRICK KENNEDY
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

A Los Angeles federal court has stopped Huntington Beach officials from shutting down a Gulf Oil pipeline that runs under property owned or leased by the city.

U.S. District Court Judge Robert Takasugi also has stopped the city from pursuing a $20 million lawsuit filed against Gulf in Orange County Superior Court last month.

The federal court action is the latest development in a dispute over the pipeline.

The federal court preliminary injunction issued Wednesday replaces a temporary restraining order issued by the court last month, allowing Gulf to continue operations.

The decision means the federal court will hear the controversy, but the date has not been announced.

City officials contend Huntington Beach should shut off the pipeline because a 25-year agreement allowing Gulf to use the line under city coastal land expired last December.

Gulf contends the city is interfering with interstate commerce in a lawsuit filed last December.

In the previous agreement, Gulf paid $2,400 annually to run the pipeline under city property along the coast.

City officials suggested an annual payment of $1 million in negotiations last year. Gulf has offered $6,000.

The pipeline originates at sea, about three miles west of Beach Boulevard. It runs parallel to Pacific Coast Highway, and terminates at the Gulf oil tank farm near Newland Street.

'Rocker' convicted in stabbing

A Huntington Beach youth believed to be a follower of the punk rock movement has been convicted in Orange County Superior Court on assault charges in connection with the near fatal stabbing of a chauffeur in Newport Beach in June, 1980.

Following the announcement of the jury's verdict Thursday, Judge Leonard McBride ordered defendant David Paul Owen, 19, taken into immediate custody.

Owen, convicted on charges of assault with a deadly weapon, had been free on $10,000 bail during the trial.

The jury, which had deliberated since Wednesday afternoon, also convicted the spiky-haired defendant on a charge of causing great bodily harm.

McBride scheduled sentencing proceedings April 3. Owen could face up to seven years in state prison.

His conviction stems from the stabbing of chauffeur Daniel Harms, 25, of Cypress, during high school graduation night last June.

Harms, who suffered near fatal stab wounds in the chest, testified that he was attacked by four youths after a bottle was thrown at his limousine as he drove down the 300 block of Walnut Street in the Newport Shores area of Newport Beach.

The 25-year-old chauffeur said his assailants kicked, beat and stabbed him when he got out of the car and then laughingly poured beer over his head as he lay wounded on a curb.

A second youth who had been arrested in the attack, Rod Glenn Sherard, 19, of Huntington Beach, pleaded guilty earlier to assault with a deadly weapon charges. He faces sentencing April 1.

Prince not so bonny

ESHER, England (AP) — Britain's Prince Charles fell from his horse today during a steeplechase race and suffered a bloody nose.

Charles, on a new horse, was nearing the end of a muddy trek over the fences at Sandown Park racetrack when he fell.

The 32-year-old heir to the throne was riding Good Prospect for the first time in competition. His regular mount, Allibar, collapsed and died Feb. 20 when the prince had him out on a practice run before a race.

Stock market has busiest opening hour

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market churned ahead today, extending Thursday's rally in trading that set a record pace.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up 22.15 points on Thursday, climbed another 3.25 to 993.07 in the first hour today.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange totaled 24.10 million shares in the first hour, making it the busiest opening hour in exchange history.

The rally got its start Thursday amid excitement over a spate of three major merger proposals in the past week. Analysts said the euphoric mood was heightened by a continuing decline in interest rates. On Thursday afternoon, New York's Chemical Bank lowered its prime lending rate from 18 to 17½ percent.

But after a strong opening, prices pulled back a little.

HB seeks classroom leasing

By PHIL SNEIDERMAN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

With three schools scheduled for closure next September, the Huntington Beach City (elementary) School District now wants to find paying tenants to occupy the sites.

District officials say they already have received inquiries from private business and government agencies interested in leasing Clapp, LeBard and Peterson schools.

District trustees voted last month to close the three sites because of declining enrollment and a shortage of funds.

LeBard and Peterson classes will conclude in mid-June while Clapp, which houses special education students, will remain open through July 17.

The financially troubled district expects to save about $370,000 annually as a result of the three closures.

The district also expects to derive revenue from renting out these facilities.

Some school districts such as Fountain Valley, must return all school lease funds (aside from maintenance costs) to the state because the buildings were constructed through a state financing program.

But Robert Hawthorne, director of business services for the Huntington Beach elementary district, said its schools were built with other funds. As a result, the district may keep any money it receives from leasing Clapp, Peterson and LeBard, he said.

Hawthorne said the district's leasing charges have not yet been established.

State law provides a list of priorities that must be followed in selecting tenants for a closed school. In general, government agencies must receive the first chance to occupy the closed schools.

As a result, the Orange County Department of Education and Coastline Community College, which have expressed interest in the sites, must be considered ahead of private schools and businesses.

Up in arms over bussing

EAGLE POINT, Ore. (AP) — Students at a high school in this southern Oregon town, up in arms over a ban on kissing and hugging, warn they might walk out of classes again unless the administration loosens the restrictions.

About 300 of Eagle Point High School's 1,000 students streamed out of a morning class to rally in a sun-baked courtyard to protest the kissing prohibition and other rules.

Principal Hazen Bernard said he was pleased that the rally was peaceful and promised to study the students' complaints. Some students say they hope the administration is sincere.

Woman slain; Grove police arrest mate

Garden Grove police are holding the husband of a 49-year-old woman who was found shot to death in the couple's home.

Taken into custody at the scene Thursday night was Leslie L. Munson, 55. He was booked into Orange County Jail on suspicion of murder.

Responding to reports of a shooting, officers discovered the body of Joan Munson, 49, who was shot in the chest. She was taken to UC Irvine Medical Center, where she was pronounced dead.

Police Sgt. Bruce Beauchamp said a .22 caliber rifle was seized at the scene.

Credit bill OK'd

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate has approved a bill which would reimpose a ban on credit card surcharges and make it easier for merchants to give discounts for cash purchases.

ATLANTA (AP) — Most of the deaths of 20 black children being investigated by a special task force could be unrelated homicides, the work of at least 10 different killers, says Fulton County District Attorney Lewis Slaton.

In a newspaper story published Thursday, Slaton said that except for "the last six or seven" cases where asphyxiation has been the cause of death, and three more where the cause of death is unknown, the slayings may be the work of different killers.

Life plea made for killer

By DAVID KUTZMANN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Defense attorney James Merwin pleaded for the life of convicted murderer John Alan Keith of San Clemente, telling an Orange County Superior Court jury:

"John Keith desperately wants to live."

The six-man, six-woman jury, which must decide if the curly haired slayer is to be sentenced to die in the California gas chamber, began its first full day of deliberations today.

But before it was given the penalty phase of the case late Thursday by Judge Donald A. McCartin, the panel heard closing statements by Merwin and prosecutor Dave Carter. Carter strongly urged jurors to sentence the killer of Corona del Mar real estate agent Ruben Martinez to death.

Merwin, however, asked the jury to return instead with a verdict of life imprisonment without parole for Keith, 23, who sat impassively at the counsel table under the steady gaze of three and sometimes four county Sheriff's Department deputies.

Only two days earlier, Keith had unsuccessfully attempted to escape from Orange County Jail with two fellow inmates.

The Laguna Hills defense lawyer said Keith's bid for freedom was proof of how much he wished to live.

Keith was convicted of first-degree murder in late February by the same jury for the mutilation slaying of Martinez in the bedroom of his Corona del Mar home.

Testimony during the trial indicated that Keith and a companion, Anthony David Bics, went to Martinez's home on the night of August 28, 1978, after meeting him in a Laguna Beach gay bar.

Concern noted

U.S. softens Salvador role

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reacting to concern that it is risking a Vietnam-type conflict, the Reagan administration is suddenly speaking softly about its involvement in El Salvador while sending Green Berets to train government troops in guerrilla warfare.

Meanwhile, Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. told reporters today the guerrillas may be "running short of ammunition" and said the United States has "seen some slackening of the movement of arms through Nicaragua."

But Haig said there is evidence that Cuba, which the United States maintains has been using Nicaragua as a funnel for arms going to the Salvadoran guerrillas, is searching for "alternative routes" for arms supplies.

President Reagan plans U.S. economic aid for El Salvador "in the ballpark" of $63.5 million, senators were told today — and the president got a warning that Congress will support no Vietnam-like involvement in that country.

Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., said he and other senators told the officials "we are not about to retrace those steps that led us into the longest war in history in Southeast Asia."

Hatfield is chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee that got a three-hour closed briefing on El Salvador from State Department, defense and intelligence officials.

On Thursday, several officials said the administration decided against deeper involvement in El Salvador, barring some major setback to the government at the hands of Marxist guerrillas. And even then, no one was prepared to predict the United States would do anything more.

"They are clearly backing off," one State Department official said Thursday. "They apparently feel they went too far, and the Vietnam analogy has a lot of people worried."

"We haven't made a decision not to get more deeply involved," another official insisted. "We had no plans to get any more deeply involved."

For his part, Haig today defined the U.S. commitment in El Salvador as stopping the flow of arms to the guerrillas from outside. The Salvadorans, he stressed, should be allowed to determine their future.

"Our interest is that they have it out at the ballot box and not with bullets," he said.

And Haig, indicating he felt some previous administration statements had been overlooked, said he has sought from the beginning to make it clear that "we are seeking to avoid extremes of right and left in El Salvador."

Anti-Castro Cubans sought for raids?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Several of President Reagan's advisers want to unleash anti-Castro Cubans for raids on the island to pressure President Fidel Castro to cut support for guerrilla movements in Central America and Africa, sources said today.

So far, their views have not hardened into proposals and are opposed by other administration officials as in violation of the neutrality principle.

"People are arguing both ways, and it's been going on since the presidential election campaign," said one official, who insisted his name not be used.

In 1961, after Castro's Marxist regime had taken hold in Havana, Cuban exiles launched an invasion to try to restore a pro-U.S. government to Havana. Congressional investigations of the unsuccessful landing at the Bay of Pigs showed the U.S. government supported the operation.

Aid to anti-Castro exiles was discontinued.

Now, however, some officials within the Central Intelligence Agency and elsewhere in the government "are out to unleash the exiles again," the official said. "These are people who want to put pressure on Castro. Others are arguing just as strongly the other way that it would be foolish and in violation of neutrality."

So far, the official stressed, the discussion was entirely theoretical and no proposals had been formulated.

Cuban troops and advisers are instrumental in maintaining Marxist governments in Angola and Ethiopia and often act as surrogates for the Soviet Union in assisting anti-Western regimes. The Reagan administration has also accused Cuba of helping to arm leftist terrorists in El Salvador.

Owl cuts power

KLAMATH FALLS, Ore. (AP) — A large owl that flew into a high-voltage line was responsible for a power outage that left the downtown area dark for more than two hours, officials say. The bird died in the Thursday incident.

Delta combed for serpent

STOCKTON (AP) — A 12-foot python, described as dangerous if provoked, slithered away from its owner after he tried to take it on a boat ride, authorities said.

The missing serpent was the object of a snake-hunt by San Joaquin County sheriff's deputies, who were combing the area near jungle-like Potato Slough on the Sacramento-San Joaquin river delta east of San Francisco.

The snake was reported missing by Stockton school teacher James Fitch, who told deputies the snake was used for research. He did not explain why he wanted to take the snake for a boat ride.

Heart attack takes ex-Pilot employee

Horace J. Blanco, retired classified advertising manager of the Daily Pilot, died Thursday following an apparent heart seizure. He was 66.

At his request, there will be no funeral service, the family said.

Blanco's advertising career spanned nearly 30 years, ending with his retirement in 1973 for health reasons. He was with the Daily Pilot and its predecessor, the Costa Mesa Globe-Herald, for more than 18 years.

Born in North Dakota, Blanco's earlier career had a decidedly different direction. He received a BA in music from Concordia College in Moorhead, Minn., and intended to concentrate in that field.

He was sidetracked into becoming an $80-a-month school principal in Balfour, N.D., in 1936 and stayed there three years — until he married one of his students — his surviving wife Dolores.

Lured west, the Blancos lived in Los Angeles while he did postgraduate work at Woodbury Business College. That landed him a wartime job with Lockheed Aircraft, where he was an industrial and public relations director in Van Nuys and Belfast, Ireland.

Blanco's first newspaper job was more of an accident than a plan. He joined the tiny San Fernando Valley Reporter in 1946, serving as editor, display ad salesman and classified ad manager of a department in which he was the only member.

This led Blanco to the advertising staff of the now-defunct Los Angeles Daily News. He was there until 1955, when he became the first classified ad manager of the Globe-Herald.

An innovative newspaperman, Blanco was credited with originating the now-famous Dime-a-Line want ads — and with building the classified advertising lineage of the newspaper from seven columns weekly to a section that now runs as many as 24 pages daily.

Throughout his career — until ill health intervened — Blanco remained active in, and attracted to, his musical beginnings. He played in pickup bands and was a frequent volunteer bass accompanist to such jazz figures as Meade "Lux" Lewis.

Blanco had suffered from diabetes and heart problems in recent years, but appeared in apparent good health at the time of his death. He was stricken at a Costa Mesa health spa and pronounced dead on arrival at Costa Mesa Memorial Hospital.

Survivors include his wife Dolores; a son, Seaton J. Blanco, a Fountain Valley teacher; daughter, Susan (Mrs. Albert) Winterstein of Fountain Valley; and five grandchildren.

Burial was at sea.

active duty. It would start with a "military orientation" period of three to four weeks, followed by basic and advanced individual training.

The required military service would begin after graduation from high school or at the "conclusion of the academic term of college in which the individual was enrolled."

For a high school dropout, service would start within 90 days of the time he left school or at a specific age, which was not given.

At the end of the orientation phase, the youth would be offered a choice among three options: remain on active duty in the service of his choice if openings existed, join a reserve unit or go into the Individual Ready Reserve of the Army or Marine Corps, which have had the most trouble filling this mobilization manpower pool.

Probe mulled in Capitol Hill scandal

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal investigators are trying to decide whether to look into possible foreign government involvement in the latest Capitol Hill sex scandal arising from a female lobbyist's sharing of a vacation cottage with three congressmen.

An investigation was requested by Rep. Philip M. Crane, R-Ill., whose administrative assistant is the brother of White House national security adviser Richard Allen. Crane has not said which government he had in mind.

The office of Attorney General William French Smith released a letter Thursday in which Smith told Crane: "I share your concern at the seriousness of these allegations, which can have far-reaching effects on American society and its faith in its government."

Smith said the matter was referred to his department's criminal division.

Rep. Tom Railsback, R-Ill., one of those who shared the Atlantic City, Fla., cottage in January 1980 with lobbyist Paula Parkinson, said of Crane's request for the investigation, "It sounds to me like he's trying to clear the air . . . I intend to cooperate with whatever vehicle may be used for that purpose."

Others who stayed at the cottage with Mrs. Parkinson, who later posed nude for Playboy magazine, were Rep. Tom Evans, R-Del.; Dan Quayle, an Indiana Republican who then was a congressman but since has been elected to the Senate; a lobbyist for the Tobacco Institute; and two other friends of Evans.

John C. Keeney, acting assistant attorney general in charge of the criminal division, said, "We are analyzing it as we would any request or allegation to see what if anything should be done with it."

Model Millie Velasquez takes a playful swipe at actor Robert Duvall at the Carnaval de Rio in New York City this week. Her costume won the grand prize.

The man who directed "True Grit" had some gritty things to say about the state of the movie industry as he celebrated his 47th wedding anniversary and prepared to turn 83.

Henry Hathaway, released from a hospital in Rochester, Minn., after surgery, polished off a stack of hotcakes as he called many movies "smut, dirt, junk."

That, he said, is the "best way to describe most of what they expect the public to pay $5 a ticket for."

"Tell anyone interested that I'm as feisty as ever and feeling better every day," he said before he and his wife returned to Bel Air.

Hathaway, whose 80-film career included "How the West Was Won," made filmdom history in 1934 when he directed the first outdoor film in color, "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," starring Henry Fonda.

Lady Bird 'loves' film

Lady Bird Johnson says she was "scared to death" as filmmakers prepared a documentary on her life. But that didn't stop her from having a good time at its premiere.

"Tonight has been a feast. I've loved it," Mrs. Johnson told about 250 gathered for the premiere at the National Academy of Sciences auditorium in Washington.

The audience included her two daughters — Lynda Johnson Robb and Luci Johnson — and longtime friends and associates from her years in Washington as wife of the late President Lyndon B. Johnson.

The film was commissioned for showing at the Lyndon B. Johnson Library in Austin, Texas. It also will be available for showing at schools and public organizations.

Jerry Plotkin, one of the 52 hostages released by Iran, filed a $60 million libel suit against the Van Nuys-based Daily News, and its parent, the Chicago Tribune, over a story they say implied Plotkin's trip to Iran involved illegal drug deals.

"My attorneys are also researching the rights that I may have to assert against the government of Iran for the kidnapping and 14 months of physical, emotional and psychological abuse to which they subjected me," Plotkin said. "If that research warrants it, I intend in short order to pursue claims based on the above facts as well."

While tests showed no sign of growths or breaks, Nashville doctors treating singer Glen Campbell for severe neck and head pains won't discuss what might have forced his hospitalization.

Dr. Jerry Maynard, who was on call at Opryland Hotel where Campbell was staying, said he admitted the singer to Donelson Hospital for X-rays.

Maynard said the tests showed no tumors or fractures, but he would not elaborate on Campbell's illness.

Drug rings broken

$1 billion in contraband seized

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal undercover investigation has smashed 14 drug rings responsible for $22 billion in annual street sales and 30 to 40 percent of the marijuana smuggled into the United States, the administration reported.

With Attorney General William French Smith at his side, Drug Enforcement Administrator Peter Bensinger said the 22-month operation also produced scores of arrests and the seizure of dozens of ships along with $1 billion worth of drugs — including cocaine and methaqualone.

Smith said the indictment of 155 individuals in Florida, Louisiana and Georgia "would have a major impact" on U.S. marijuana traffic. Smith declared President Reagan had asked him "to extend his personal commendation" to the agents involved.

Bensinger said the operation had seized 1.2 million pounds of marijuana, 831 pounds of cocaine, three million doses of methaqualone, 30 ocean-going mother ships used to smuggle drugs, two airplanes and $1 million in cash.

He said the operation represented "the single largest enforcement activity ever domestically against the marijuana trade."

As of mid-afternoon, Bensinger said, 122 of those indicted had been arrested, including 30 of the 45 ringleaders who were charged. He noted that three defendants — Jose Fernandez, Paul Hinderling and Reuben Perez — already have had bail set at $20 million each or more.

In the operation, Bensinger said, nine DEA agents posed as drug off-loaders.

He said finding a source of supply in Colombia was easy, as was purchasing ships and distributing drugs in the United States.

He described the unloading of drugs from mother ships offshore as the most dangerous point for drug traffickers because of prevalent law enforcement surveillance. He said the unloading requires an expertise that drug rings do not have automatically and that the undercover agents were able to establish trust among the smugglers.

In 24 instances, information supplied by the undercover agents allowed the U.S. Coast Guard to seize the drugs while still on the open ocean, far from the unloading point. Bensinger said that to establish trust, the undercover agents allowed the drugs to be taken ashore in six instances and then tipped local law enforcement authorities on where the drugs could be seized.

On Feb. 4, the agents allowed a substantial quantity of drugs to be unloaded on the Gulf Coast of Louisiana and hidden at a farm in LaForce Parrish. The drug agents tipped the Louisiana State Police and a ruse was devised under which the police launched a search of the surrounding area for a lost girl.

The drug smugglers monitored the police radio traffic during the search and the undercover agents convinced the smugglers they could dissuade the police from entering the farm.

The agents did that. After the police left, the smugglers heard police radio traffic indicating they intended to return to investigate suspicious activities. At this point, undercover agents convinced the suspects to flee in pandemonium, leaving the drugs.

Bensinger said the undercover agents later rejoined the smugglers in a bayou near New Orleans, where it became clear the incident had solidified the trust between them and, at the same time, allowed the investigation to continue.

Cops tackle mystery of lost dummies

The start of football season is months away but, according to Newport Beach police reports, it appears someone wants to get a head start on it.

Police said that's one possible explanation for the disappearance of two football tackling dummies taken this week from an equipment shed at Newport Harbor High School.

Head football coach James Cochran told officers the foam dummies, used during tackling practices, are worth $275. He reported both stand four feet high and that one was mounted on a sled.

The thief, who reportedly used a bolt cutter to break into the shed, also took the sled, police said.

Pay raises rejected

House, Senate deny 16.8 percent hikes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House and Senate clamped the new mood of austerity upon themselves, their staffs, judges and other top federal officials by overwhelmingly rejecting a 16.8 percent pay hike.

A voice vote in the House and sweeping approval of four resolutions in the Senate were overtly political gestures. The same result would have occurred without any votes — except that wouldn't have put the two chambers so strongly on record as biting the bullet.

The Senate first voted 93 to 0 Thursday to deny itself the hike, then rejected the increases for staff members, federal judges and senior government executives by tallies of 91 to 3, 87 to 8 and 86 to 7.

"I don't believe at a time when there are going to be cuts in food stamps that we want to vote a pay raise for members of Congress," said House Democratic Majority Leader Jim Wright of Texas.

"My colleagues are not starving," he said.

Both the House and Senate voted overwhelmingly to turn down proposals to hike congressional salaries from the current $60,662 to just under $71,000. Salaries of cabinet secretaries would have gone from $69,630 to $84,000.

NB history book planned

A 21-chapter history of Newport Beach will be published in honor of the city's 75th anniversary, to be formally celebrated Sept. 26.

The 208-page illustrated book, detailing Newport's history from early Spanish days to the present, will be published by the city's anniversary committee, headed by William Banning.

Chapter authors include Newport historian Ellen Lee, Daily Pilot Managing Editor Tom Murphine, former Daily Pilot reporter Joanne Reynolds, the Irvine Company's Jerome Collins and Herb Sutton, president of Sutton Industries.

Jean Ritter, a Newport Historical Society member, has been charged with collecting early records, photographs or other contributions. Contributions should be directed to her at 410 Aliso St., Newport Beach.

The book is to be available by September.

Mayors fear loss of a million jobs

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's mayors say President Reagan's latest round of budget cuts may add up to more than a million lost jobs, and their chairman thinks the result could be a mass crime wave when the unemployed hit the streets this summer.

"The truth is that you are going to see some kind of reaction to the kinds of cuts that we're talking about, affecting people," said Mayor Richard Hatcher, president of the U.S. Conference of Mayors.

"That reaction might not be the traditional form of riots in the streets," said Hatcher, mayor of Gary, Ind. "But you could just see a tremendous increase in street-type crime, and with all its attendant costs, both in terms of dollars and in terms of human suffering."

In a news conference called to respond to Reagan's newest budget proposals, Hatcher said crime already is on the rise, "and by summer, by the time the full weight and force of these reductions are really starting to be felt, you could see a tremendous increase there."

Burglars take safe in Mesa

Burglars cut a padlock off the door of a Costa Mesa auto body shop, kicked a hole through the door to turn the knob from inside and apparently loaded a 300-pound safe on a truck to escape, police report.

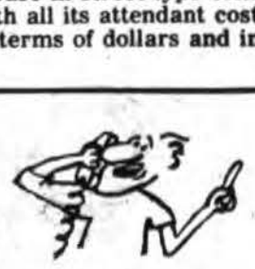

James Lewis Harper, proprietor of Newport Auto Works, 120 Industrial Way, told officers Wednesday the $500 office safe contained about $8,000 in cash, jewelry and guns.

Dave Walker, commercial burglary investigator, said the safe, "now a pile of junk," was recovered near the swimming pool at Newport Harbor High School.

Walker said the thieves had tried to rip off the back of the roll-away safe, apparently gave that up, mangled its hinges and finally ripped off the front plate to gain access.

Walker said none of the valuables was recovered.

JUST COASTING

Since when is cash a sin?

FRIDAY THE 13TH BLUES: You have to have a large degree of sympathy for the poor, hapless, impoverished man in the nice suit who stood at the counter just in front of me at the Busybee Auto Rental Agency in Costa Mesa. Clearly, here was a man unable to cope with modern society.

Never mind why I was standing in line at this auto lease emporium. But the guy getting waited on, now, hey, here's a real problem.

He had just been transported to the rental office from an auto dealership where he was getting his own heap glued back together. The nice lady behind the counter started filling out the multi-carboned copies of the car rental agreement.

TOM MURPHINE

"MAY I SEE your driver's license," she asked.

He handed it over.

"Some additional identification," she asked.

He pulled another card from his wallet and dropped that on the counter too.

"Now sir," she said, "just let me see one of your national credit cards and we'll be all done here . . ."

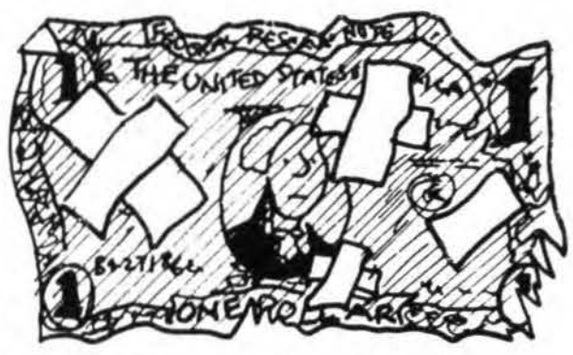

There was a moment of silence. The man at the counter shuffled his feet a bit.

"I don't have one," he confessed.

"Pardon me, sir," the lady behind the counter said, her eyes glazing over slightly. "I don't think I heard what you said."

"I SAID I DON'T have any credit cards," the man repeated patiently. "But listen, I may have one here that belongs to my wife . . ."

The Busybee Car Lady behind the counter looked like a person who had just been struck by a lightning bolt. She fumbled her ball point pen on the counter. She had trouble recovering both the pen and her voice.

Battered, bruised and not much used

Finally she managed to sputter, "But sir, that simply won't do. We have to have a credit card with YOUR name on it. Your wife just won't do."

Give the Busybee lady credit however. She was struggling to make a comeback. Her eyes brightened up. "Perhaps if I could verify your employment," she said. "You are employed, aren't you?"

THE MAN IN THE NICE suit gave her his company phone number. Excitedly, she began dialing. She reached the company. She spoke rapidly. Then there was silence. Slowly, she put the phone back on the hook.

"Sir," she said quietly. "I have terribly bad news for you. Your personnel director is in a meeting. I can't verify you. I don't know what we can do next . . ."

Abruptly, the Busybee lady, who doesn't give up easily, brightened again. "Perhaps your wife — you know she has that credit card — perhaps she could come down here and we could work this all out with her?"

The man in the nice suit shook his head glumly. "That won't work," he said.

"I HAVE ANOTHER idea," he said. "How about I just pay cash for the car?"

The Busybee lady looked like she'd been struck by lightning again and was suffering terminal vapors at the same time.

"Cash, cash," she mumbled. "You mean money? You have regular money?" Her ballpoint pen clattered to the counter again.

Clearly, here was a customer who was a troublemaker.

Sheriff denies bank heist role

YERINGTON, Nev. (AP) — A Nevada sheriff says "it isn't so" to allegations that he set up a 1979 bank robbery to boost his reputation and then lied to a grand jury about the heist.

Lyon County Sheriff "Red" Kingsley turned himself in Thursday after being indicted by a grand jury on charges of felony perjury in connection with the robbery in nearby Fernley. A former subordinate, ex-Sgt. August Victor "Bud" Dreeson, was arrested on the same charge the night before.

Kingsley, who was released on his own recognizance pending arraignment Monday, said of the allegations, "it isn't so." Asked whether he planned to stay on the job, he said, "Damn right."

Dreeson's lawyer, Ron Holbert, declined to let his client comment but said, "The charges are not founded on any reasonable facts. We're going to fight it all the way."

Dresson posted $1,000 bond.

Along with the indictment, made public after Kingsley turned himself in, was an accusation signed by grand jury foreman Ray Aiazzi alleging that Kingsley actually set up the bank robbery.

The allegations stem from an Aug. 8, 1979, holdup of a First National Bank branch office. William Akers pleaded guilty to conspiracy to commit grand larceny and was sentenced to nine months in jail.

The grand jurors accused Dreeson, who was working at the time as an undercover investigator for Kingsley, of driving Akers to the bank "without taking any teps to prevent the robbery."

Kingsley and four deputies nabbed the man a half mile from the bank and recovered $1,962. The sheriff said at the time he received an anonymous tip before the robbery.

Kingsley and Dreeson both were called as witnesses before the grand jury, which has been investigating a wide range of county matters.

The panel's indictment claims the sheriff and Dreeson perjured themselves when they swore to jurors they had no advance knowledge of the robbery.

City faces deficit, hikes tax

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Faced with the threat of bankruptcy, a weary City Council approved a 20 percent property tax rate increase today as Mayor Vincent Cianci agreed to turn over authority on city spending to a new watchdog board.

The final approval for the tax increase aimed at plugging a $20.5 million deficit for the current fiscal year came this morning after a confrontation in Cianci's office in which the chairwoman of the council's finance committee, Carolyn Brassil, asked the mayor to resign.

Cianci, who has been attacked for his handling of city finances, refused to step down, then sent word to the council he would sign an ordinance creating the special 11-member financial commission.

The commission will be made up mostly of finance committee members, legislative leaders and their appointees. The mayor will be permitted to appoint one member.

In return for giving up his authority over city spending, the mayor asked the council to approve the tax increase, designed to raise more than $14 million to pay off the deficit projected for the year ending June 30.

The council also passed measures to lay off city employees and defer a $6.1 million payment into the city pension fund.

Reagan ends U.S. tie to Tahoe panel

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the name of eliminating unnecessary federal interference, President Reagan has abolished a commission set up by President Carter so federal programs would not harm the environment in the Lake Tahoe Basin of California and Nevada.

Reagan's order kills the Tahoe Federal Coordinating Council created Oct. 15.

In a one-sentence executive order, Reagan said he took the step "to eliminate unnecessary and duplicative federal interference" with the Tahoe Regional Planning Agency of California and Nevada.

The federal panel included representatives of the departments of Defense, Interior, Agriculture, Commerce, Transportation, Health and Human Services, Housing and Urban Development and the Environmental Protection Agency.

In establishing the commission, Carter said it would "develop environmental quality thresholds and carrying-capacity standards for the air, water and land resources in the region.

Stock option probe unresolved

NEW YORK (AP) — Dean Witter Reynolds Inc. has said that at least 244 of its customers purchased AMAX call options in the days leading up to Standard Oil Co. of California's $4 billion offer to take over AMAX Inc.

The statement came at a hearing in federal court on a suit by O'Connor & Associates against Dean Witter and A.G. Becker Inc., contending some investors attempted to profit from advance information of the offer.

U.S. District Judge Morris E. Lasker, who previously issued a temporary restraining order barring the two brokerage firms from distributing to customers any profits from sales of the call options, said Thursday he hoped to be able to withdraw the order, but did not do so.

Lasker said he had given instructions to both Becker and Dean Witter to present information on customers who bought the options, including amounts and dates. Becker apparently provided the information Thursday, but Dean Witter said it would not be able to comply until the middle of next week because of problems of assembling the information.

Socal's offer of $78.50 a share for AMAX, whose shares were then trading for about $38 a share, caused the price of options to buy AMAX shares to soar in value, in one case from 12.5 cents to $9. O'Connor said it believes some buyers of options had inside information.

Witness says Carol 'sober'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A dinner party at a posh Washington, D.C. restaurant and a brief discussion between Carol Burnett and Henry Kissinger have been recalled by a witness in Miss Burnett's $10 million libel suit against the National Enquirer.

Peter Matz, musical director of Miss Burnett's TV show for many years, was first to take the stand Thursday in the long-awaited trial which resumed today. He stated Ms. Burnett was not intoxicated.

The Enquirer later retracted the gossip column article which was published March 2, 1976. Miss Burnett's attorney told the jury that he would prove the article was false and was printed by the Enquirer either knowing it was false or "with reckless disregard" for its accuracy.

Grand jury views fraud suit

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A federal grand jury has begun looking into the facts related to a $21.3 million fraud suit filed by Wells Fargo Bank against boxing promoter Harold J. Smith, bank official L. Ben Lewis and others, and Smith's attorneys have turned over some of his records.

Attorney Jennifer King said Thursday that she and attorney Albert Sheppard have talked briefly to the panel and turned over a variety of requested records.

Smith is one of several defendants in the lawsuit, which seeks restitution of an allegedly embezzled $21.3 million as well as $25 million in punitive damages — a total of $46.3 million.

Continental shares purchased

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas International Airlines Inc. has reached its goal of purchasing six million shares of Continental Airlines stock, according to TIA spokeswoman Stephanie Roth.

TIA, which offered $13 a share for Continental's common stock, has acquired a total of 7,452,200 shares of Continental, or 48.5 percent of its outstanding stock, Ms. Roth said Thursday.

TIA owned 1.45 million shares before it made the offer, which was to have expired March 16.

High courts stands by ruling

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The California Supreme Court has decided to stand by its decision upholding the constitutionality of a preferential admissions policy for minorities at a University of California law school.

It denied the petition for rehearing from Glen DeRonde without comment Thursday.

The court's 4-2 decision on Feb. 11 held that procedures permitting consideration of ethnic minority status in the 1975 selection of the first-year class at University of California at Davis Law School violated neither state nor federal constitutions.

Deukmejian spanked by court

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The state Supreme Court says Attorney General George Deukmejian had no business filing an action against Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. — by statute his client — in a state employees collective bargaining law dispute.

The court said Thursday the attorney general by law is the designated attorney for the governor and the state Personnel Board as well as other state officers and agencies involved in the lawsuit.

The decision barred Deukmejian from continuing the action and ordered his petition dismissed.

Heir confident

Murder charges may be dropped

SANTA MONICA (AP) — A radio station says murder charges will be dropped against 65-year-old Dr. Raymond LaScola, who is accused of killing his adoptive mother only five months after she made him sole heir to her $3 million fortune.

Deputy District Attorney Steve Trott declined to confirm the report by KNX radio, but conceded that prosecutors "will have an announcement" after returning to court today with results of a new investigation of the charges.

"We will be in court Friday, but we will not discuss the details of the hearing. We have no comment at this time," Trott said Thursday.

HOWEVER, LaSCOLA'S ATTORNEY, Albert Garber, was confident that the charges would be dismissed.

"We certainly hope all the charges are dismissed. We have reason to believe they will be," Garber said.

LaScola, who is free on $100,000 bail, is accused of killing 89-year-old millionairess Georgia Mahoney Thera on July 18, 1979 and forging an authorization to have her body cremated the following day without an autopsy. LaScola signed Mrs. Thera's death certificate, listing "congestive heart failure" as the cause of death.

MRS. THERA, THE WIFE of 76-year-old Buddhist monk Ariya Thera, had adopted LaScola in February 1979 and made him her sole heir.

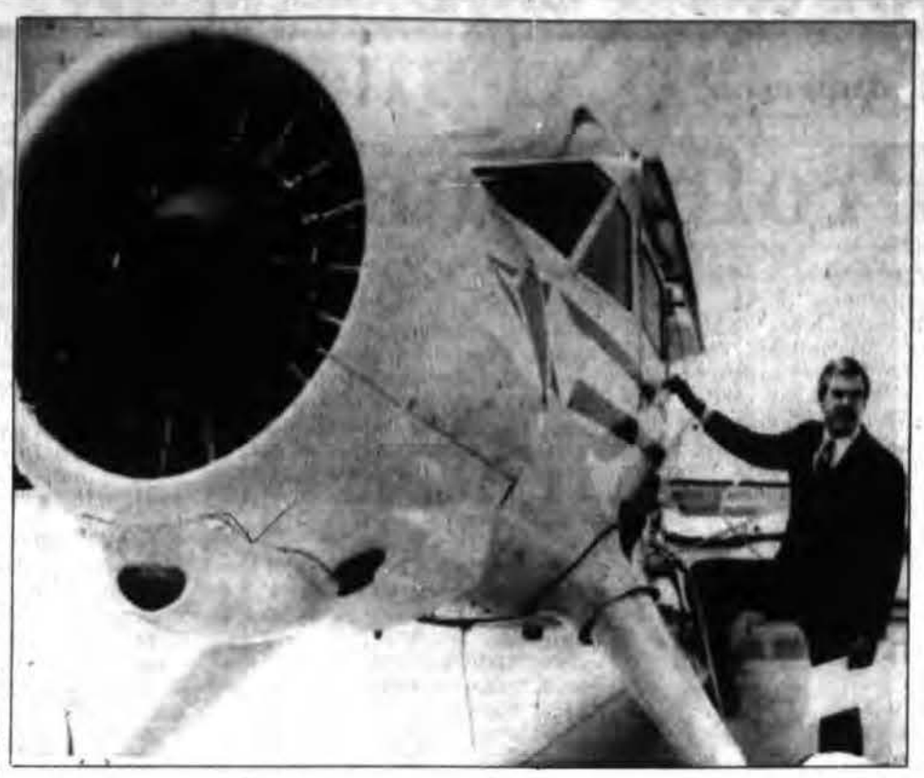

In a criminal complaint filed Oct. 5, LaScola also was accused of grand theft, solicitation of murder, witness tampering and conspiracy to forge prescriptions and sell illicit drugs.

The solicitation of murder charges result from allegations that LaScola hired persons to kill two attorneys representing Thera's new wife, who was contesting LaScola's claim to the estate.

The grand theft charges stem from claims that LaScola forced an elderly New Orleans physician, Dr. George Ronstrom, to make a will leaving $1 million to LaScola.

FRESNO (AP) — Fresno County supervisors have decided against pursuing $25 million in debts owed to Valley Medical Center that date back as many as 30 years. The action relieved the auditor-controller of responsibility for collecting dated bills, mostly prior to 1968.

Gildred and his co-pilot, Dean Farran, expect the trip to last 18 days, duplicating the elder Gildred's daring flight over the 21,000-foot peaks of the Andes and a 900-mile stretch over water. He described the flight as an "anniversary salute" to his dad, who died in 1967.

Busing end eyed

LA may allow Easter switch

LOS ANGELES (AP) — School board members say they may end mandatory busing in Los Angeles as early as April 10 in the wake of a state Supreme Court decision upholding the constitutionality of the anti-busing amendment, Proposition 1.

But the judge who originally ordered busing of 23,000 students to integrate grades 1 through 9 claims the district could lose millions of dollars in state aid because of the Supreme Court ruling.

SIX BOARD members, who met behind closed doors for almost two hours, told reporters a final decision on dismantling the busing program would not be made until their regular meeting Monday.

But three board members said Thursday night they favor allowing parents to choose between having their children complete the school year at their current school or transfer in mid-semester, following the Easter vacation, to a neighborhood school.

Two others said they supported an end to forced busing after this school year but were concerned that allowing mid-semester transfers would have a disruptive effect on the children's education.

MEANWHILE, STATE Superior Court Judge Paul Egly of Laguna Beach, who has been overseeing the board's integration efforts for the past five years, appeared to wash his hands of the case, saying the high court's decision left him with no jurisdiction.

The Supreme Court on Wednesday refused to hear an American Civil Liberties Union appeal of a lower court ruling upholding the constitutionality of Proposition 1.

Proposition 1, approved overwhelmingly by voters in 1979, says mandatory busing can be required only to integrate schools in districts where segregation results from deliberate discrimination in pupil assignments rather than from housing patterns.

Report riles educators on state board

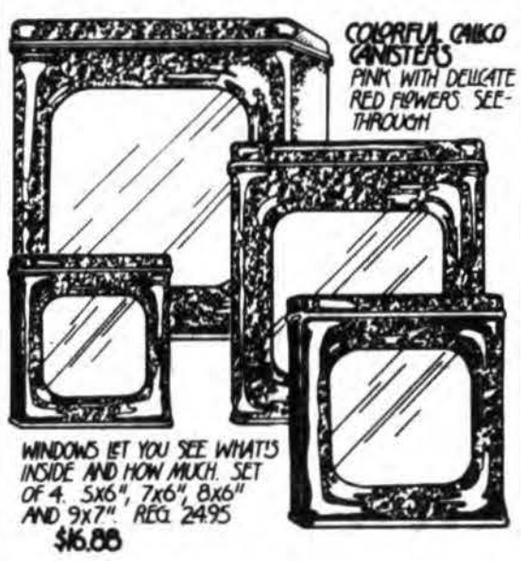

SACRAMENTO (AP) — State schools Superintendent Wilson Riles and a potential political opponent, state Board of Education member Louis Honig, disagree on whether high schools are too easy.

The two broke out in an acrid argument Thursday at the board's regular monthly meeting.

"The kids of this state are not taking the kind of courses they need," declared Honig, a Marin County school superintendent who says he might run against Riles next year.

An obviously angry Riles accused Honig of doing "slipshod" work in drafting a proposed board statement criticizing the level of instruction in the high schools.

Airport control worth the fight

The Orange County Board of Supervisors has correctly taken action toward removing John Wayne Airport from a federal airports funding program.

About $8 million per year flows from Orange County to the Airport Development Aid Program. The money is generated by an 8 percent surcharge on airline tickets.

In return, however, the county has been receiving an average of about $1 million per year. That means $7 million or so is going somewhere else. That somewhere else is determined by the Federal Aviation Administration which controls the air program.

Supervisors are basically saying, let's keep the money at home. As well they should. The board already has approved a $75 million improvement program for the airport. Any and all revenue will be needed.

More importantly, removal of the airport from ADAP would give the county more power in dealing with the FAA, which in the past has used threatened cutoff of funds as a weapon against the county.

Defederalization of the airport will not occur overnight. It may not occur at all. Before the county can pull out of ADAP, enabling legislation must be approved by Congress and signed into law by the President.

Yet, it's a battle worth fighting. The more control Orange County government can achieve over the airport, the better.

Coastal law test

With the July 1 deadline for state certification of Local Coastal Plans (LCPs) drawing near, the state Coastal Commission faces a critical test of its integrity.

Under the Coastal Act, the precise content of each local coastal plan is to be determined by the local government agency, in consultation with the state and regional commissions and with full public participation.

To achieve this goal, local agencies have devoted hundreds of hours, including many public hearings, to their plans.

On July 1, the regional commissions go out of business and the state commission will take over administration of permits in areas where LCPs have not yet been certified. This could mean a serious reduction in local control.

The test will come when the oustanding plans are presented to the state body.

Many local agencies contend the state commission already has made too many attempts to "condition" the content of the local plans, contrary to the intent of the Legislature. That body wanted the plans to reflect the socio-economic conditions of various coastal areas, in balance with statewide environmental objectives.

While the plans may not be perfect, there is no doubt a sincere effort has been made to hear and balance the demands of both environmentalists and developers.

The state commission will be well advised to keep this in mind as the plans are presented for certification.

The state Legislature, already in the process of attempting to modify some of the requirements of the Coastal Act which have been regarded as oppressive, recently sounded a warning when the Senate Rules Committee arbitrarily replaced two of its appointees to the state commission.

It remains within the power of the Legislature to modify the Coastal Act and this could very well be the result if the state commission is too rigid in its demands as the local plans are submitted. If the commission takes a rational stance, the integrity of the act need not be disturbed.

Brown-style politics

For four years, Gov. Jerry Brown stood firmly in favor of the Peripheral Canal plan to carry water around the Sacramento-San Joaquin Delta for export to Southern California.

When the controversial measure finally was passed by the Legislature, he signed it with a flourish.

Now that the canal plan is in danger, the governor is backing off.

Northern California opponents of the canal, fearing loss of water, have lined up a referendum, hoping to kill the measure with a statewide vote.

It was in the governor's power to call a special election on June 2. But Los Angeles and a number of other Southern California cities will be going to the polls on that date and supporters of the referendum feared too heavy a vote from the Southland where the canal is much in favor.

So the governor has let the deadline for placing the referendum on the ballot slip by without taking action, despite his professed support for the canal.

Now he doesn't even want to discuss the issue, doubtless looking further down the road to a time when he may need votes from throughout the state for his Senate bid. Politics can be a two-way street.

Boyd/Match trick

By L. M. BOYD

If you don't want to spend the money for foot-long matches, bear in mind you can light hard-to-reach spots in the fireplace with lit shafts of uncooked spaghetti. You already thought of that?

Don't you wonder what colors the artists down in the basement of the Pentagon are choosing for the El Salvador service ribbon?

"Gung" meant "work" in the Chinese lingo of the South Pacific and "ho" meant "harmony." It was on the islands down there during World War II that U.S. marines Americanized the expression "gung ho."

Q. Is it true that the man who wrote the religious classic "Amazing Grace" was, in fact, a slave trader along the African coast?

A. Quite right, John Newton first dealt in human bodies. But then he became a born-again Christian and went on from there.

Do you, too, doubt the claim that the color yellow discourages crime? Hard to swallow, that one. Still, the owner of one store with an extremely high incidence of shoplifting painted his walls yellow and insisted thereafter the thefts dropped off to about a fourth of what they'd been.

Professional experts live high

WASHINGTON — There are 4,958,491 people on the federal payroll, with more than 15,000 different specialties. They can produce expert answers on almost anything from the dynamics of the galaxies to the habits of the fruit fly. Yet there always seems to be a need for the high-paid services of outside experts.

This has spawned a whole new profession of expertise peddlers who often acquire their know-how working for the government in the first place. Then they leave government service to set up practice as consultants for fat fees befitting professional know-it-alls.

Apparently they fulfill some need in the psyche of bureaucrats, who seem to suffer from a basic insecurity over their own ability to spend the taxpayers' money efficiently.

THE PROFESSION has grown so rampantly, in fact, that no one has a clear idea of its size. Recent estimates have put government spending on private consultants at anywhere from $400 million to $2.5 billion a year.

The role of the private consultant perhaps can best be appreciated by examining one modest firm Practical Concepts, Inc., which is located in Washington handy to the agencies that offer government contracts. Its specialty is "program evaluation" which has to do with manipulating the levers and wheels of the federal fuddle factory.

Such agencies as the Health and Human Services Department, the Small Business Administration and the Agency for International Development have hired Practical Concepts, Inc., to design and evaluate their programs. The bureaucrats profess to be pleased with the results. An AID spokesman told reporter Julie Kosterlitz, for example, that the firm is "very good, very capable."

Practical Concepts, Inc., to be referred hereinafter by its initials, PCI, in the bureaucratic manner, employs some 30 people to counsel bureaucrats. During the three-year period covered by a government audit, this cost the taxpayers less than $2 million annually — a mere droplet from the federal pump, though a large drop in PCI's small bucket.

A TOP EXPERT ON the federal payroll would cost the taxpayers no more than $61,000 annually. But the Defense Contract Audit Agency found that in 1978 PCI's president, executive vice president and vice president were paid $97,249, $70,957 and $56,947 respectively.

This compensation included salaries — which the audit found to be far higher than the average salaries paid by comparable firms — plus additional bonuses and perquisites the auditors questioned. About 60 percent of PCI's business is generated by federal contracts. Among the questionable expenses that PCI charged off, in part, to the government were:

— SCHOOL TUITION for the top executives' children.

— Rental of a Jaguar from a company owned by PCI's president, Leon Rosenberg. He used it to commute to and from the office. The auditors note that the contractor "claims that the car was used by its employees for local business travel," but they add that the only supporting evidence of local travel consisted of reimbursement for cab fare.

— Rental of a swimming pool and a tennis court, also from the president's company. "The tennis court and pool are located on the residential property of the president," the audit notes, adding: "The need for these recreational facilities at $3,200 per year has not been established."

— Rental of oil paintings from the president's company, at $1,920 a year, a need that also "has not been established."

— Rental of office furniture from a company owned by PCI's vice president — at greater expense than it would have cost to purchase the furniture outright.

— Rental of a telephone system from a company owned by PCI's president — also at greater cost than ownership.

— Memberships in the YMCA for the president and vice president, listed for the purpose of "employee morale."

— Payment of $400 a month to the executive vice president to provide sleeping quarters in her personal residence for "intermittent employees" on travel status.

— Payments "for liquor which we believe was used for entertainment," and is thus not allowable under federal regulations.

— REIMBURSEMENT to the firm's president for room and meals at a weekend conference for employees held at his home.

Asked about specific points in the audit, PCI's Rosenberg conceded that the liquor shouldn't have been charged to government contracts. He defended the rental expenditures as not only reasonable, but as good value for the money. The tuition payments were simply "advance on bonus" payments, later deducted from the bonuses, he said. As for the auditors' comparison of PCI executive compensation with that of other firms, Rosenberg questioned the auditors' choice of "comparable" firms. He said, "A firm doing quality work deserves more than the average."

Footnote: Despite the auditors' misgivings, PCI has just been awarded a two-year AID contract.

The new world of push-button democracy

NEW YORK — A recent edition of the New York Times, as I read it, reported routinely on the inevitable breakdown in the American criminal justice system, the stupidity of education as we know it, a new way of governing ourselves, and the end of public vice.

It was just another day in the revolution — "the Communications Revolution." The phrase is carelessly tossed around a lot these days, but three stories in that morning's paper gave it real meaning for me.

— "High Court Decides States Can Permit Televising of Trials."

The front-page headlines announced that the nation's highest court had ruled unanimously that courtroom justice could be dispensed on television. The decision was consistent with state rulings that television equipment is now so unobtrusive that it does not disrupt trials.

The technology has improved — that's part of the revolution — so that you can hardly notice the wires and cameras now. But we may notice the results: television justice instead of courtroom justice. The people who bring us "That's Incredible" will decide which trials we'll see; crowds and talk-show offers will be there for popular defendants, judges and prosecutors. The punishment of public ridicule may be worse than anything a judge and jury can threaten. Televised justice is essentially a return to the stocks and pillory in the village square.

— "Television Blocks the View"

ANOTHER STORY reported that the Annenberg School of Communications at the University of Pennsylvania has concluded that television is the reason that "we have a serious national problem blocking the way of better understanding and support of science."

Blame television, the report states, because the networks depict scientists as older, more dangerous and shorter than other people — and uses them in cartoons. (I didn't make up that part about height — the university looked at 1,400 dramas and measured the characters). The whole thing is a joke, part of a useless attempt to try to change television to meet the needs of education rather than changing education because we now live in a television age.

TELEVISION is here to stay. It's our environment. What we need are different kinds of teaching and teachers to deal with children raised comfortably among cameras, screens, computers and lasers.

— "Almost Half of Sample in a Poll Reports 'Addiction'."

A third story reported that 205 people in Columbus, Ohio, indulged in "an obsessive, compulsive use of a substance or activity to cope with pain of any kind and to produce a high."

The reason that was news was that those people were almost half the 420 Columbus residents who had answered a question about addiction by pushing buttons on QUBE, the city's two-way cable television system. The idea of buttons and computers and percentages makes the whole thing seem valid; it must be true if it's electronic.

Who knows what the percentages really mean? But those same kinds of percentages — recorded some day in two-way systems all over the country — will almost certainly become part of the political process. Interactive television, after all, could replace city councils and Congress. Direct electronic democracy.

The one thing about push-button democracy, though, is that there will still be a turnout problem — because there is a turn-on problem. In Columbus, after three years of use, far and away the highest-rated service QUBE offers is pornographic films. Dirty movies. Vice, as we used to call it, is moving off the streets and into Midwestern homes.

It's going to be a brand-new world. It is a genuine revolution, happening so fast that we hardly notice it. And we certainly don't know what all the results of this will be: the consequences of changing what we know and when we know it. The revolution may change democracy itself or it may just keep more of us at home at night and, maybe, produce a few more morning smiles.

Predicting history's a hazardous undertaking

Driven by a relentless sense of greed, I consented to take part in a symposium last year called "The Shape of Things to Come." My participation was fraudulent as well as venal, since I haven't the foggiest notion of the shape of things to come.

The venture brought to mind one of the less successful projects of Herbert Hoover. When he was Secretary of Commerce in 1922, he commissioned a study of "future trends" in the U.S. and the world. For eight years, more than 30 specialists in different fields labored at this project. Finally, in early 1930, when Mr. Hoover was president, they delivered up their massive four-volume report.

AMONG THE THINGS they neglected to predict were the Great Depression, the collapse of the League of Nations, the spread of Communism, the rise of Fascism, the start of World War II less than a decade away, and most of the incipient revolutions and innovations in technology, medicine, transportation, agriculture, and social and economic disruptions.

The fact of the matter is that while no one has an unclouded crystal ball — including myself, most of all — the specialists are almost the worst people to consult about the future in their own areas.

Political and military leaders have been no more accurate than academic or scientific experts in predicting the course of history, even at short range. In 1776 George Washington estimated that the war for American independence "depends in all human probability on the exertion of a few weeks." Yet it was not until seven agonizing years later that the war finally ground to an end.

Likewise, Lincoln privately expressed his belief that the North might overcome the South in well under a year — but the Civil War, as we know, lasted for four years, taking the greatest toll of lives in history up to that time.

Quotes

"I know there is great concern over that. I think it's part of a Vietnam syndrome. But we have no intention of that kind of involvement." — President Reagan, at an impromptu news conference, responding to critics who are worried that sending military equipment and advisers to El Salvador could lead to Vietnam-type involvement.

ON THE very eve of the Napoleonic Wars, in early 1792, the British prime minister, William Pitt, forecast at least 15 years of peace for Europe. The war that followed a few weeks later lasted for nearly a quarter of a century!

And a century later, when Lord Granville became Britain's foreign secretary in 1870, he was informed by the permanent under-secretary that "I have never, during my long experience, known so great a lull in foreign affairs, and am not aware of any important questions we have to deal with."

On that same day, a German prince accepted the crown of Spain, an event that three weeks later led to the outbreak of the Franco-Prussian War. So much for the shape of things to come.

Panel urges 6-month military draft

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Pentagon advisory panel is recommending that Congress consider reinstituting a version of the military draft that would require youths to serve six months and then decide whether to stay on active duty longer or join the reserves.

Louis J. Conti, chairman of the Reserve Forces Policy Board, called this a "try it before you buy it" approach.

Reporting to Congress, Conti noted recent increases in Reserve and National Guard strength but said the board still is concerned over "inadequate force levels which must be responsive to mobilization demands."

However, Conti made it clear the board was not speaking for Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger when it expressed its views to Congress.

Conti is a retired Marine Corps major general and had been a star football lineman at Cornell in the 1940s.

There has not been a military draft in the United States since 1973 and it would take an act of Congress to revive it.

However, draft registration, which was ended by former President Ford in 1975, was resumed for young men last summer by former President Carter to have names on hand in case the draft was reinstituted.

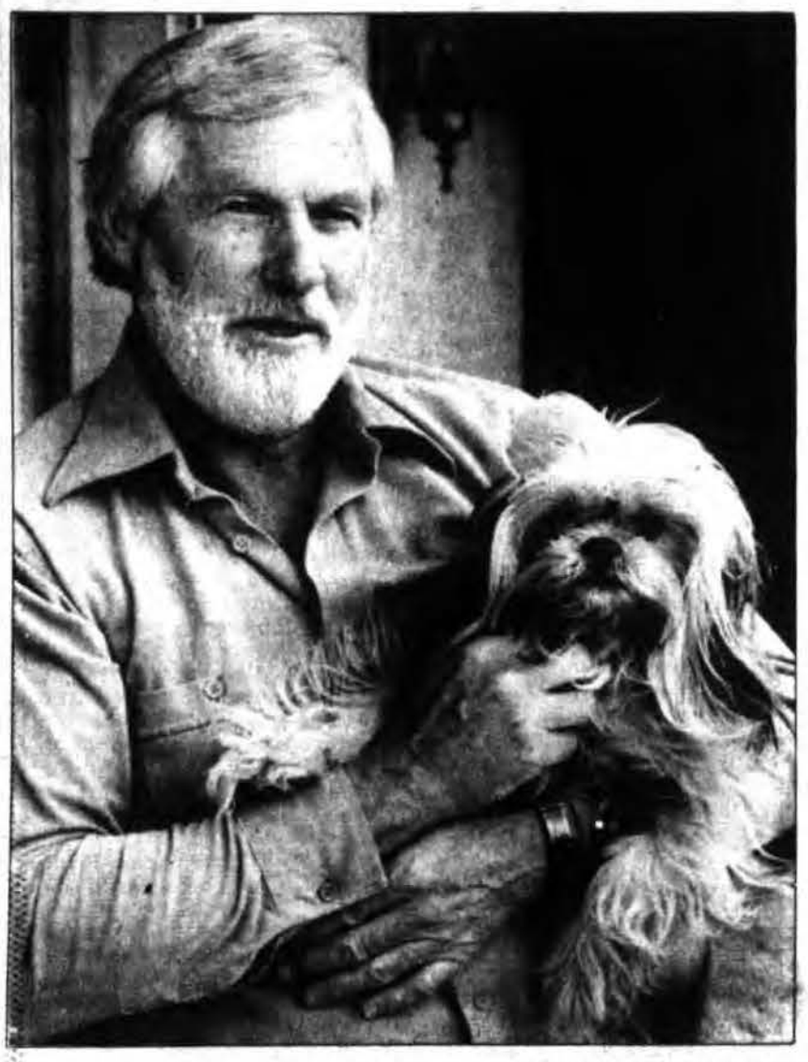

Weinberger and President Reagan have indicated reluctance to keep the draft registration machinery intact and voiced strong opposition to reviving the draft itself.

"The board fully realizes that a return to the draft will fall far short of resolving all the problems of a modern, technologically advanced military force," Conti said. "On the other hand, the board sees too many positive outcomes resulting from a draft not to pursue the question with utmost vigor."

He described the draft as "potentially the most cost-effective and equitable answer" to many of the problems.

Under the board's recommendation, men — "and women, if mandated by Congress"—would be required to serve six months on

SAN JUAN'S GLEN CLYMORE WITH HIS DOG, 'ROWDY'
Hostage's dad finds it 'very hard not to break down'

Coast dad living hostage nightmare

By JOHN NEEDHAM
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

The father of an Orange County man being held hostage on a hijacked Pakistani airliner in Damascus, Syria, says he'll believe his son is safe when he sees him leave the plane and hears his voice.

Glen Clymore of San Juan Capistrano, whose son Craig is one of three Americans aboard the jet along with about 100 other hostages, said Thursday he was feeling more relaxed since learning the Pakistan government had agreed to the hijackers demands.

Pakistani terrorists holding the plane threatened to blow up the jet and everyone on it if 55 purported political prisoners were not released from jails in Pakistan.

Clymore said Thursday's 8 a.m. deadline was like "living through a nightmare."

"You just can't believe what's happening to yourself," the senior Clymore said, standing outside his home on a quiet residential street. "This has been quite an ordeal."

He said he and his wife Thelma turned off the radio so they could unwind after spending a sleepless night awaiting news if their son Craig was alive or dead.

"It was literally a countdown to an explosion," Clymore said. "We've quit listening for now so we can turn off the tension. Every time we would begin to relax we would hear another piece of news and get upset again. It's very hard not to break down."

Clymore said he had received two telephone calls from U.S. State Department officials since Thursday's deadline passed.

"They tell us they are doing everything they can and I'm sure they are," he said. "We will be very delighted when this is all over."

Clymore said his wife was still too upset to talk with reporters. Mrs. Clymore has remained secluded inside her home since her only son was taken hostage 12 days ago.

Huntington punk rocker found guilty

A Huntington Beach youth believed to be a follower of the punk rock movement has been convicted in Orange County Superior Court on assault charges in connection with the near fatal stabbing of a chauffeur in Newport Beach in June, 1980.

Following the announcement of the jury's verdict Thursday, Judge Leonard McBride ordered defendant David Paul Owen, 19, taken into immediate custody.

Owen, convicted on charges of assault with a deadly weapon, had been free on $10,000 bail during the trial.

The jury, which had deliberated since Wednesday afternoon, also convicted the spiky-haired defendant on a charge of causing great bodily harm.

McBride scheduled sentencing proceedings April 3. Owen could face up to seven years in state prison.

His conviction stems from the stabbing of chauffeur Daniel Harms, 25, of Cypress, during high school graduation night last June.

Harms, who suffered near fatal stab wounds in the chest, testified that he was attacked by four youths after a bottle was thrown at his limousine as he drove down the 300 block of Walnut Street in the Newport Shores area of Newport Beach.

The 25-year-old chauffeur said his assailants kicked, beat and stabbed him when he got out of the car and then laughingly poured beer over his head as he lay wounded on a curb.

Patient stable with transplant

STANFORD (AP) — Mary Gohlke, the world's only living heart-lung transplant patient, is gathering strength and slowly recuperating from the operation that gave her a new lease on life, doctors say.

Mrs. Gohlke, 45, remained critical but stable. She is being treated with cyclosporin-A, an experimental drug designed to aid healing without hampering the body's ability to fight off infections.

Hostage exchange set

Hijackers to swap for prisoners

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — A group of political prisoners flew out of Pakistan today to be exchanged for more than 100 hostages held by a trio of hijackers at the Damascus airport, authorities said.

Airport authorities in Karachi, Pakistan, said the special flight took off for Libya and would be followed by a second plane with more prisoners. The hijackers, who have held the plane 12 days, demanded the release of 55 prisoners. Pakistan officials have said they could find only 49.

The leader of the heavily armed hijackers said today that none of the hostages would be freed "until all political prisoners and family members" released by Pakistan arrive in Libya.

The Pakistani military government began assembling the political prisoners it agreed to free Thursday after the hijackers threatened to kill three Americans, (one of them from Orange County) among the hostages. Libya, asked to provide asylum for the hijackers and to receive the freed prisoners, agreed, a Pakistani diplomat here said.

The officials said the latest demands by the hijackers were "not a problem," but the timing of the release was still unsettled.

The plane was commandeered over Pakistan on March 2 and went first to Kabul, Afghanistan, and then to the Damascus airport. The hijackers shot and killed one hostage, a Pakistani diplomat, while it was in Kabul.

The hijack leader also told negotiators in the control tower of Damascus airport today that the trio demanded that an agreement in writing be sent to the Syrian government, the United Nations and Amnesty International, a human-rights group

Hostages cheer in freedom

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — The hostages cheered and in the jetliner that had been their crowded home for 11 days the lights came on for the first time after Pakistan's ruling generals capitulated to the three hijackers.

"They certainly have a lot to cheer about, and not just because the threat of violent death doesn't hang over them any longer," said an official of the Pakistani airline.

"When they come off that plane, they'll certainly be a miserable smelly lot. They have been wearing the same clothes for 11 days and we doubt they have been able to wash properly."

He said his company has been supplying the plane with 40 packets of paper tissues every day but did not send any shaving cream, cologne or other toiletries.

More than 100 passengers and crew members have been held prisoner aboard the Pakistan International Airlines plane since three young foes of Pakistan's military government seized control of the airliner March 1. On Thursday, after the hijackers threatened to kill the three American men among them, the Pakistani government agreed to exchange 55 political prisoners for the hostages and let the hijackers go to Libya.

Despite the obvious hardships of their protracted confinement, the passengers and crew "maintained remarkably high spirits," said Maj. Gen. Safraz Khan, the Pakistani ambassador to Syria, who negotiated with the hijackers through Syrian intermediaries.

Prince not so bonny

ESHER, England (AP) — Britain's Prince Charles fell from his horse today during a steeplechase race and suffered a bloody nose.

Charles, on a new horse, was nearing the end of a muddy trek over the fences at Sandown Park racetrack when he fell.

The 32-year-old heir to the throne was riding Good Prospect for the first time in competition. His regular mount, Allibar, collapsed and died Feb. 20 when the prince had him out on a practice run before a race.

Stock market has busiest opening hour

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market churned ahead today, extending Thursday's rally in trading that set a record pace.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up 22.15 points on Thursday, was off 2 points at noon.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange totaled 24.10 million shares in the first hour, making it the busiest opening hour in exchange history. By noon the volume was over 60 million.

The rally got its start Thursday amid excitement over a spate of three major merger proposals in the past week. Analysts said the euphoric mood was heightened by a continuing decline in interest rates. On Thursday afternoon, New York's Chemical Bank lowered its prime lending rate from 18 to 17½ percent.

Jury mulls fate of SC killer

Defense attorney James Merwin pleaded for the life of convicted murderer John Alan Keith of San Clemente, telling an Orange County Superior Court jury:

"John Keith desperately wants to live."

The six-man, six-woman jury, which must decide if the curly haired slayer is to be sentenced to die in the California gas chamber, began its first full day of deliberations today.

But before it was given the penalty phase of the case late Thursday by Judge Donald A. McCartin, the panel heard closing statements by Merwin and prosecutor Dave Carter. Carter strongly urged jurors to sentence the killer of Corona del Mar real estate agent Ruben Martinez to death.

Merwin, however, asked the jury to return instead with a verdict of life imprisonment without parole for Keith, 23, who sat impassively at the counsel table under the steady gaze of three and sometimes four county Sheriff's Department deputies.

Only two days earlier, Keith had unsuccessfully attempted to escape from Orange County Jail with two fellow inmates.

The Laguna Hills defense lawyer said Keith's bid for freedom was proof of how much he wished to live.

Keith was convicted of first-degree murder in late February by the same jury for the mutilation slaying of Martinez in the bedroom of his Corona del Mar home.

Testimony during the trial indicated that Keith and a companion, Anthony David Bics, went to Martinez's home on the night of August 28, 1978, after meeting him in a Laguna Beach gay bar.

The defendant admitted on the witness stand that he and Bics, also convicted of first-degree murder in a separate trial, bludgeoned Martinez, 40, with a star-shaped candle.

But on a second visit to the home, Keith said he used a mitre box saw to partially decapitate

10 child killers seen possibility

ATLANTA (AP) — Most of the deaths of 20 black children being investigated by a special task force could be unrelated homicides, the work of at least 10 different killers, says Fulton County District Attorney Lewis Slaton.

In a newspaper story published Thursday, Slaton said that except for "the last six or seven" cases where asphyxiation has been the cause of death, and three more where the cause of death is unknown, the slayings may be the work of different killers.

Up in arms over bussing

EAGLE POINT, Ore. (AP) — Students at a high school in this southern Oregon town, up in arms over a ban on kissing and hugging, warn they might walk out of classes again unless the administration loosens the restrictions.

About 300 of Eagle Point High School's 1,000 students streamed out of a morning class to rally in a sun-baked courtyard to protest the kissing prohibition and other rules.

Principal Hazen Bernard said he was pleased that the rally was peaceful and promised to study the students' complaints. Some students say they hope the administration is sincere.

Woman slain; Grove police arrest mate

Garden Grove police are holding the husband of a 49-year-old woman who was found shot to death in the couple's home.

Taken into custody at the scene Thursday night was Leslie L. Munson, 55. He was booked into Orange County Jail on suspicion of murder.

Responding to reports of a shooting, officers discovered the body of Joan Munson, 49, who was shot in the chest. She was taken to UC Irvine Medical Center, where she was pronounced dead.

Police Sgt. Bruce Beauchamp said a .22 caliber rifle was seized at the scene.

Heart attack takes ex-Pilot employee

Horace J. Blanco, retired classified advertising manager of the Daily Pilot, died Thursday following an apparent heart seizure. He was 66.

At his request, there will be no funeral service, the family said.

Blanco's advertising career spanned nearly 30 years, ending with his retirement in 1973 for health reasons. He was with the Daily Pilot and its predecessor, the Costa Mesa Globe-Herald, for more than 18 years.

Born in North Dakota, Blanco's earlier career had a decidedly different direction. He received a BA in music from Concordia College in Moorhead, Minn., and intended to concentrate in that field.

He was sidetracked into becoming an $80-a-month school principal in Balfour, N.D., in 1936 and stayed there three years — until he married one of his students — his surviving wife Dolores.

Lured west, the Blancos lived in Los Angeles while he did postgraduate work at Woodbury Business College. That landed him a wartime job with Lockheed Aircraft, where he was an industrial and public relations director in Van Nuys and Belfast, Ireland.

Blanco's first newspaper job was more of an accident than a plan. He joined the tiny San Fernando Valley Reporter in 1946, serving as editor, display ad salesman and classified ad manager of a department in which he was the only member.

This led Blanco to the advertising staff of the now-defunct Los Angeles Daily News. He was there until 1955, when he became the first classified ad manager of the Globe-Herald.

An innovative newspaperman, Blanco was credited with originating the now-famous Dime-a-Line want ads — and with building the classified advertising lineage of the newspaper from seven columns weekly to a section that now runs as many as 24 pages daily.

Throughout his career — until ill health intervened — Blanco remained active in, and attracted to, his musical beginnings. He played in pickup bands and was a frequent volunteer bass accompanist to such jazz figures as Meade "Lux" Lewis.

Blanco had suffered from diabetes and heart problems in recent years, but appeared in apparent good health at the time of his death. He was stricken at a Costa Mesa health spa and pronounced dead on arrival at Costa Mesa Memorial Hospital.

Survivors include his wife Dolores; a son, Seaton J. Blanco, a Fountain Valley teacher; daughter, Susan (Mrs. Albert) Winterstein of Fountain Valley; and five grandchildren.

Burial was at sea.

active duty. It would start with a "military orientation" period of three to four weeks, followed by basic and advanced individual training.

The required military service would begin after graduation from high school or at the "conclusion of the academic term of college in which the individual was enrolled."

For a high school dropout, service would start within 90 days of the time he left school or at a specific age, which was not given.

At the end of the orientation phase, the youth would be offered a choice among three options: remain on active duty in the service of his choice if openings existed, join a reserve unit or go into the Individual Ready Reserve of the Army or Marine Corps, which have had the most trouble filling this mobilization manpower pool.

A Pakistani spokesman in Islamabad today denied his government agreed to pay $50,000 to the hijackers and said, "We have received no demands for money."

Pakistan's ambassador to Syria, Maj. Gen. Safraz Khan, said Thursday his government agreed to pay the ransom.

It was unclear if the hijackers' strongly worded statement today would be construed by Pakistani authorities as new demands.

The hijackers apparently were annoyed by the presence of their relatives at the airport. Diplomatic sources said the father of one hijacker and the brother of another visited the control tower Thursday night.

"We are struggling for a cause and an ideology. Don't send our family again and again to blackmail us," the chief hijacker said in the radio transmission monitored by reporters.

The hijackers belong to a group calling itself "Al Zulfikar," apparently named after former Pakistani President Zulfikar Ali Bhutto who was hanged in Ap by President Mohammed Zia ul-Haq.

He said the amateur musician, who was not identified, kept strumming and singing Thursday despite the approach of the execution deadline their captors set for him and the other two Americans. But Pakistani and Syrian officials said they did not know whether the hijackers told the Americans they were singled out for execution.

The American hostages are Frederick Hubbell of Des Moines, Iowa, a lawyer; businessman Craig Richard Clymore of Orange County, and Lawrence Clifton Mangum of New York City, who reportedly lives in Spain.

"As far as food goes, we provided them with everything they asked for, even though most of the Pakistanis aboard had a distinct preference for chicken curry meal after meal," the airline official said.

He said confinement must have whetted the appetites of some since every day they asked for and got 10 to 20 more boxed meals than there were people aboard.

As the hijack drama unfolded on an auxiliary runway and in the control tower, the airport's normal business continued without interruption. The crowds of travelers arriving and departing were increased by curious Damascenes.

"We are happy everything has been agreed without anybody getting hurt here in Syria," said a merchant who brought his wife and two teen-age daughters out to see what was happening.

His father said Craig had moved just prior to his trip from Lake Forest, but declined to say where his son's new home is.

"We didn't know Craig was in Pakistan," the senior Clymore said. "We just wish he had been some place else."

He said the hostage crisis was something he thought always happened to someone else, but not him. "Your heart goes out for the people involved, of course, but you never really know what it means."

Clymore said he was hopeful there would be a speedy conclusion. "We just hope there will be no more delays," he said.

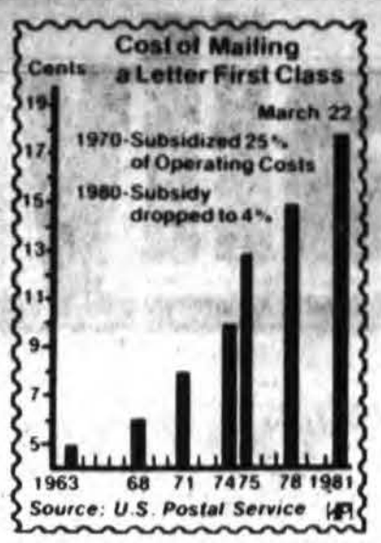

"That has been foremost in our minds today. The anxiety we feel is very strong. It's like being trapped on a roller coaster."

Delta combed for serpent

STOCKTON (AP) — A 12-foot python, described as dangerous if provoked, slithered away from its owner after he tried to take it on a boat ride, authorities said.

The missing serpent was the object of a snake hunt by San Joaquin County sheriff's deputies, who were combing the area near jungle-like Potato Slough on the Sacramento-San Joaquin river delta east of San Francisco.

The snake was reported missing by Stockton school teacher James Fitch, who told deputies the snake was used for research. He did not explain why he wanted to take the snake for a boat ride.

Concern noted

U.S. softens Salvador role

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reacting to concern that it is risking a Vietnam-type conflict, the Reagan administration is suddenly speaking softly about its involvement in El Salvador while sending Green Berets to train government troops in guerrilla warfare.

Meanwhile, Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. told reporters today the guerrillas may be "running short of ammunition" and said the United States has "seen some slackening of the movement of arms through Nicaragua."

But Haig said there is evidence that Cuba, which the United States maintains has been using Nicaragua as a funnel for arms going to the Salvadoran guerrillas, is searching for "alternative routes" for arms supplies.

President Reagan plans U.S. economic aid for El Salvador "in the ballpark" of $63.5 million, senators were told today — and the president got a warning that Congress will support no Vietnam-like involvement in that country.

Martinez, doing so out of both anger at and fear of homosexuals. The prosecution claimed he did so when he found that Martinez was still alive.

Merwin said Keith's attitude toward homosexuals was molded by his homelife with a Marine Corps officer father. "He (Keith) was raised in an atmosphere where gays were less than human," the lawyer said.

Carter, however, claimed that the convicted slayer killed "not only for pleasure and excitement, but for greed. . ."

He said the murder of Martinez was a cold, calculated act based on plans to rob Martinez and then eliminate him as a potential witness.

He told the jury: "Mr. Keith deserves the same number of chances he gave Mr. Martinez, nothing more or less."

Stage line founder rites set Saturday

Funeral services will be held Saturday in Santa Ana for the co-founder of the Laguna Beach-Santa Ana Stage Line, Orange County's first bus service.

The funeral is scheduled at 11 a.m. at Fairhaven Memorial Park for Samuel Paul Carr, who along with partner Paul Kellogg, founded the Stage Line in 1933 with an investment of $150.

Mr. Carr died Wednesday at St. Joseph's Hospital in Orange at the age of 80.

In 1933 his bus line had two buses which provided transportation for a nickel between Central Orange County and areas along the coast.

A native of Atlanta, Mr. Carr came to Santa Ana in 1920 and worked as a driver for the Motor Transit Metropolitan in Los Angeles, which became the Southern California Rapid Transit District, before forming his own company.

He sold the stage line to the American Transit Corp. of St. Louis in 1962 after it had gone from two buses to 17. In the early 1970s it was taken over by the Ornge County Transit District.

Mr. Carr is survived by his two sons, Sidney of Santa Ana, and Clifford of Hemet. Two grandchildren also survive him. Mr. Carr's wife, Ethel, preceded him in death.

Probe mulled in Capitol Hill scandal

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal investigators are trying to decide whether to look into possible foreign government involvement in the latest Capitol Hill sex scandal arising from a female lobbyist's sharing of a vacation cottage with three congressmen.

An investigation was requested by Rep. Philip M. Crane, R-Ill., whose administrative assistant is the brother of White House national security adviser Richard Allen. Crane has not said which government he had in mind.

The office of Attorney General William French Smith released a letter Thursday in which Smith told Crane: "I share your concern at the seriousness of these allegations, which can have far-reaching effects on American society and its faith in its government."

Smith said the matter was referred to his department's criminal division.

Rep. Tom Railsback, R-Ill., one of those who shared the Atlantic City, Fla., cottage in January 1980 with lobbyist Paula Parkinson, said of Crane's request for the investigation, "It sounds to me like he's trying to clear the air . . . I intend to cooperate with whatever vehicle may be used for that purpose."

John C. Keeney, acting assistant attorney general in charge of the criminal division, said, "We are analyzing it as we would any request or allegation to see what if anything should be done with it."

Panel requests 6-month draft

Congress to view reports

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Pentagon advisory panel is recommending that Congress consider reinstituting a version of the military draft that would require youths to serve six months and then decide whether to stay on active duty longer or join the reserves.

Louis J. Conti, chairman of the Reserve Forces Policy Board, called this a "try it before you buy it" approach.

Reporting to Congress, Conti noted recent increases in Reserve and National Guard strength but said the board still is concerned over "inadequate force levels which must be responsive to mobilization demands."

However, Conti made it clear the board was not speaking for Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger when it expressed its views to Congress.

Conti is a retired Marine Corps major general.

There has not been a military draft in the United States since 1973 and it would take an act of Congress to revive it.

However, draft registration, which was ended by former President Ford in 1975, was resumed for young men last summer by former President Carter to have names on hand in case the draft was reinstituted.

Weinberger and President Reagan have indicated reluctance to keep the draft registration machinery intact and voiced strong opposition to reviving the draft itself.

"The board fully realizes that a return to the draft will fall far short of resolving all the problems of a modern, technologically advanced military force," Conti said. "On the other hand, the board sees too many positive outcomes resulting from a draft not to pursue the question with utmost vigor."

He described the draft as "potentially the most cost-effective and equitable answer"

Bribe case recording under fire

By STEVE MITCHELL
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

An attorney for two former Irvine building inspectors argued unsuccessfully that a 45-minute tape recording offered as evidence of bribery is of such poor quality it shouldn't be submitted to the hearing officer.

A personnel hearing Thursday into charges that fired city inspectors Daniel Bullard, 50, Costa Mesa, and Arthur Peck, 51, Anaheim, solicited and received gifts from developers entered its third day today in Irvine City Council chambers.

During the day-long hearing, Deputy City Attorney David Larsen submitted a tape recording purportedly made in December at a construction site in Irvine.

The prosecution contends that comments made on the recording show that Bullard and Peck, along with a third inspector, Manuel Linares, 34, of Corona, received bottles of alcohol from a job superintendent in exchange for favorable inspections.

Linares, who was also fired as a result of a police investigation into complaints of bribery, did not appeal his firing.

Administrative law judge William F. Byrnes is conducting the personnel hearing in Irvine. Following the hearing, which may stretch on for several more days, Byrnes will submit a recommendation to City Manager William Woollett Jr.

It will then be up to Woollett to determine whether to reinstate the two inspectors.

Police investigator Mark Hoffman played the 45-minute tape recording during Thursday's hearing, despite objections from defense attorney Vance Simonds that a recording he had heard previously included "unintelligible responses."

And, after hearing the recording, which included background

Coast dad living hostage nightmare

By JOHN NEEDHAM
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

The father of an Orange County man being held hostage on a hijacked Pakistani airliner in Damascus, Syria, says he'll believe his son is safe when he sees him leave the plane and hears his voice.

Glen Clymore of San Juan Capistrano, whose son Craig is one of three Americans aboard the jet along with about 100 other hostages, said Thursday he was feeling more relaxed since learning the Pakistan government had agreed to the hijackers demands.

Pakistani terrorists holding the plane threatened to blow up the jet and everyone on it if 55 purported political prisoners were not released from jails in Pakistan.

Clymore said Thursday's 8 a.m. deadline was like "living through a nightmare."

"You just can't believe what's happening to yourself," the senior Clymore said, standing outside his home on a quiet residential street. "This has been quite an ordeal."

He said he and his wife Thelma turned off the radio so they could unwind after spending a sleepless night awaiting news if their son Craig was alive or dead.

"It was literally a countdown to an explosion," Clymore said. "We've quit listening for now so we can turn off the tension. Every time we would begin to relax we would hear another piece of news and get upset again. It's very hard not to break down."

Clymore said he had received two telephone calls from U.S. State Department officials since Thursday's deadline passed.

"They tell us they are doing everything they can and I'm sure they are," he said. "We will be very delighted when this is all over."

Clymore said his wife was still too upset to talk with reporters. Mrs. Clymore has remained secluded inside her home since her only son was taken hostage 12 days ago.

The younger Clymore, a 1974 graduate of Laguna Beach High School, runs an import business from his home and was in Pakistan on a buying trip when the jet was hijacked.

Prisoners out of Pakistan for hostages

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — A group of political prisoners flew out of Pakistan today to be exchanged for more than 100 hostages held by a trio of hijackers at the Damascus airport, authorities said.

Airport authorities in Karachi, Pakistan, said the special flight took off for Libya and would be followed by a second plane with more prisoners. The hijackers, who have held the plane 12 days, demanded the release of 55 prisoners. Pakistan officials have said they could find only 49.

The leader of the heavily armed hijackers said today that none of the hostages would be freed "until all political prisoners and family members" released by Pakistan arrive in Libya.

The Pakistani military government began assembling the political prisoners it agreed to free Thursday after the hijackers threatened to kill three Americans, (one of them from Orange County) among the hostages. Libya, asked to provide asylum for the hijackers and to receive the freed prisoners, agreed, a Pakistani diplomat here said.

The officials said the latest demands by the hijackers were "not a problem," but the timing of the release was still unsettled.

The plane was commandeered over Pakistan on March 2 and went first to Kabul, Afghanistan, and then to the Damascus airport. The hijackers shot and killed one hostage, a Pakistani diplomat, while it was in Kabul.

Man shot after chase

By STEVE MARBLE
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

A 23-year-old transient, who led police officers on a high-speed chase from Newport Beach to Costa Mesa early today, is in custody in a hospital jail ward after being shot twice by a Newport patrolman.

David Dean Selliez, who authorities say is a parolee from Arizona, was shot once in the hand and again in the right thigh during a struggle with Newport policeman Gary Bruton in front of a Costa Mesa coffee shop.

Police allege the young man, who at first refused to identify himself, was shot after he assaulted Bruton.

Authorities say they've subsequently discovered that Selliez is named in a $10,000 burglary warrant issued in Palm Springs and is wanted for questioning in a claw-hammer attack on a Riverside deputy sheriff last year.

The incident began today at 1 a.m., officers say, when Newport patrolman Rick Bradley reported seeing a motorcyclist traveling north on Balboa Boulevard near 14th Street at high speeds.

Officer Bradley said he took after the speeding biker and followed him north on Newport Boulevard into Costa Mesa. He reported that the motorcyclist tried to elude him by weaving in and out of traffic.

Near the entrance of a private trailer park at 1640 Newport Blvd., police say, the cyclist made an abrupt turn and crashed head-on into a parked vehicle.

Apparently uninjured at this point, the man took off on foot. Newport authorities say Costa Mesa police and a Huntington Beach unit that included a search dog also assisted.

Minutes later, authorities report, officer Bruton saw the man near the intersection of 17th Street and Newport Blvd. in front of the coffee shop. Bruton later reported that he tried to arrest the man.

Bruton said he was in the process of taking a buck knife away from the young man when the man started struggling and assaulted the officer. The exact nature of the assault is still being reviewed.

It was at this point, police say, that Bruton fired his gun twice, striking the man in the hand and thigh. Despite the wounds, authorities report, the man again started running.

Keith 'wants life'

Slayer of CdM man appeals to jury

Defense attorney James Merwin pleaded for the life of convicted murderer John Alan Keith of San Clemente, telling an Orange County Superior Court jury:

"John Keith desperately wants to live."

The six-man, six-woman jury, which must decide if the curly haired slayer is to be sentenced to die in the California gas chamber, began its first full day of deliberations today.

But before it was given the penalty phase of the case late Thursday by Judge Donald A. McCartin, the panel heard closing statements by Merwin and prosecutor Dave Carter. Carter strongly urged jurors to sentence the killer of Corona del Mar real estate agent Ruben Martinez to death.

Merwin, however, asked the jury to return instead with a verdict of life imprisonment without parole for Keith, 23, who sat impassively at the counsel table under the steady gaze of three and sometimes four county Sheriff's Department deputies.

Only two days earlier, Keith had unsuccessfully attempted to escape from Orange County Jail with two fellow inmates.

The Laguna Hills defense lawyer said Keith's bid for freedom was proof of how much he wished to live.

Keith was convicted of first-degree murder in late February by the same jury for the mutilation slaying of Martinez in the bedroom of his Corona del Mar home.

Testimony during the trial indicated that Keith and a companion, Anthony David Bics, went to Martinez's home on the night of August 28, 1978, after meeting him in a Laguna Beach gay bar.

The defendant admitted on the witness stand that he and Bics, also convicted of first-degree murder in a separate trial, bludgeoned Martinez, 40, with a star-shaped candle.

But on a second visit to the home, Keith said he used a mitre box saw to partially decapitate Martinez, doing so out of both anger at and fear of homosexuals. The prosecution claimed he did so when he found that Martinez was still alive.

Punk rocker guilty in Newport assault

A Huntington Beach youth believed to be a follower of the punk rock movement has been convicted in Orange County Superior Court on assault charges in connection with the near fatal stabbing of a chauffeur in Newport Beach in June, 1980.

Following the announcement of the jury's verdict Thursday, Judge Leonard McBride ordered defendant David Paul Owen, 19, taken into immediate custody.

Owen, convicted on charges of assault with a deadly weapon, had been free on $10,000 bail during the trial.

The jury, which had deliberated since Wednesday afternoon, also convicted the spiky-haired defendant on a charge of causing great bodily harm.

McBride scheduled sentencing proceedings April 3. Owen could face up to seven years in state prison.

His conviction stems from the stabbing of chauffeur Daniel Harms, 25, of Cypress, during high school graduation night last June.

testified that he was attacked by four youths after a bottle was thrown at his limousine as he drove down the 300 block of Walnut Street in the Newport Shores area of Newport Beach.

The 25-year-old chauffeur said his assailants kicked, beat and stabbed him when he got out of the car and then laughingly poured beer over his head as he lay wounded on a curb.

TAPE. . .

construction noises, Judge Byrnes agreed the tape "like many surveillance tapes, is of markedly poor quality."

The prosecution contends the recording was made by Steve Collo, a job superintendent for Western Commercial Construction, Inc., by means of a wireless microphone attached to his clothing.

Collo has testified that he and his boss went to Irvine city officials in December to complain of solicitations by the three inspectors for gifts of food, alcohol and overtime in exchange for easy job inspections.

Police equipped Collo with the microphone and, following a phone call to Linares, allegedly met the three men at the job site in Irvine.

The clearest portions of the tape were the times Collo allegedly told the three men that he expected no problems with inspections as a result of the gifts of alcohol.

But attorney Simons argued that, while Collo's comments were fairly clear to understand, the responses by his two defendants were not.

He also objected to a 19-page transcript that accompanied the tape recording and was purportedly a written account of what was said on the tape.

Judge Byrnes agreed the transcript of the tap "while a noble job, still is not satisfactory."

But, he said, "it still, by and large, reflects reasonably accurately the most audible portions."

When questioned by Simons on how the transcript could contain the names of individual speakers, Investigator Hoffman said undercover officers used field glasses from a spot a short distance from the job site to determine who was speaking during the rambling 45-minute discourse.

He said detectives spent 16 hours listening to the tape in order to come up with the transcript.

Board hears tape of OC jet crash

The National Transportation Safety Board was briefed for the first time on the events surrounding the Feb. 17 crash of an Air California jetliner at John Wayne Airport.

Meeting in closed session in Washington, D.C. Wednesday, the board listened to a tape recording of the communications between the air traffic control tower and the pilot of Flight 336 and received a report on the status of the crash investigation from Tom McCarthy, a senior air safety investigator. (Related story, B1).

Because of the nature of the meeting, no questions "of a deliberative nature" were asked, Ira Furman, an NTSB spokesman said today. The Air California Boeing 737, carrying 109 persons, crashed about 5:30 p.m. after the pilot was told to cancel his landing because of the presence of another Air California jet on the main runway.

Thirty-four people were injured.

Furman said such overviews of major crashes is routine. It will be at least four months before the board makes a determination on the probable cause of the crash.

In other developments related to the investigation, Furman said, a detailed examination of the plane's No. 2 (right) engine has revealed that it was operating at the time of the crash.

However, it has yet to be determined at what level the engine was running, he said.

The pilot told investigators that the engine did not perform to his expectation after he was told by the air traffic controller to cancel his landing, regain altitude and circle the airport.

Both engines were stripped from the airplane in the crash.

Furman said the recording of communications between the air traffic controller and the pilot were not particularly revealing. Information contained in the tape was previously outlined by McCarthy while investigators were in Orange County.

Furman said the so-called tower tape will be analyzed in conjunction with a separate recording made in the cockpit of the plane.

A native of Atlanta, Mr. Carr came to Santa Ana in 1920 and worked as a driver for the Motor Transit Metropolitan in Los Angeles, which became the Southern California Rapid Transit District, before forming his own company.

He sold the stage line to the American Transit Corp. of St. Louis in 1962 after it had gone from two buses to 17. In the early 1970s it was taken over by the Ornge County Transit District.

Mr. Carr is survived by his two sons, Sidney of Santa Ana, and Clifford of Hemet. Two grandchildren also survive him. Mr. Carr's wife, Ethel, preceded him in death.

Heart attack takes ex-Pilot employee

Horace J. Blanco, retired classified advertising manager of the Daily Pilot, died Thursday following an apparent heart seizure. He was 66.

At his request, there will be no funeral service, the family said.

Blanco's advertising career spanned nearly 30 years, ending with his retirement in 1973 for health reasons. He was with the Daily Pilot and its predecessor, the Costa Mesa Globe-Herald, for more than 18 years.

Born in North Dakota, Blanco's earlier career had a decidedly different direction. He received a BA in music from Concordia College in Moorhead, Minn., and intended to concentrate in that field.

He was sidetracked into becoming an $80-a-month school principal in Balfour, N.D., in 1936 and stayed there three years — until he married one of his students — his surviving wife Dolores.

Lured west, the Blancos lived in Los Angeles while he did postgraduate work at Woodbury Business College. That landed him a wartime job with Lockheed Aircraft, where he was an industrial and public relations director in Van Nuys and Belfast, Ireland.

Blanco's first newspaper job was more of an accident than a plan. He joined the tiny San Fernando Valley Reporter in 1946, serving as editor, display ad salesman and classified ad manager of a department in which he was the only member.

This led Blanco to the advertising staff of the now-defunct Los Angeles Daily News. He was there until 1955, when he became the first classified ad manager of the Globe-Herald.

An innovative newspaperman, Blanco was credited with originating the now-famous Dime-a-Line want ads — and with building the classified advertising lineage of the newspaper from seven columns weekly to a section that now runs as many as 24 pages daily.

Throughout his career — until ill health intervened — Blanco remained active in, and attracted to, his musical beginnings. He played in pickup bands and was a frequent volunteer bass accompanist to such jazz figures as Meade "Lux" Lewis.

Blanco had suffered from diabetes and heart problems in recent years, but appeared in apparent good health at the time of his death. He was stricken at a Costa Mesa health spa and pronounced dead on arrival at Costa Mesa Memorial Hospital.

Survivors include his wife Dolores; a son, Seaton J. Blanco, a Fountain Valley teacher; daughter, Susan (Mrs. Albert) Winterstein of Fountain Valley; and five grandchildren.

Burial was at sea.

Under the board's recommendation, men — "and women, if mandated by Congress"—would be required to serve six months on active duty. It would start with a "military orientation" period of three to four weeks, followed by basic and advanced individual training.

The required military service would begin after graduation from high school or at the "conclusion of the academic term of college in which the individual was enrolled."

For a high school dropout, service would start within 90 days of the time he left school or at a specific age, which was not given.

CHASE. . .

With help from the Huntington Beach police dog, the wounded man was located several minutes later, hiding behind a boat storage yard on Newport Boulevard.

The injured Selliez was taken to the trauma center at Fountain Valley Community Hospital for emergency treatment and later moved to UCI Medical Center, where he is being held in the jail ward.

Newport police say Selliez was formally arrested on grand theft charges when it was determined the motorcycle he had been riding was reported stolen last month in Palm Springs. Bail was set at $5,000.

Selliez also is being held on the $10,000 Palm Springs burglary warrant. Police claim other charges likely will be filed.

Crash victim goes home

A Newport Beach woman returned home from the hospital Thursday eight days after she was involved in a four-car pileup in Laguna Beach.

Carol Boyle, 48, of 2915 Broad St., was seriously hurt March 4 when her car skidded in water, causing her to lose control of the vehicle on Coast Highway near Emerald Bay.

Two other motorists were injured in the accident, which traffic investigators said may have been caused by water surging on the street from a broken main.

The other accident victims were treated following the crash and sent home.
