Some students find themselves in a quandary when faced with the poser above. To others it's a cinch. How about you?

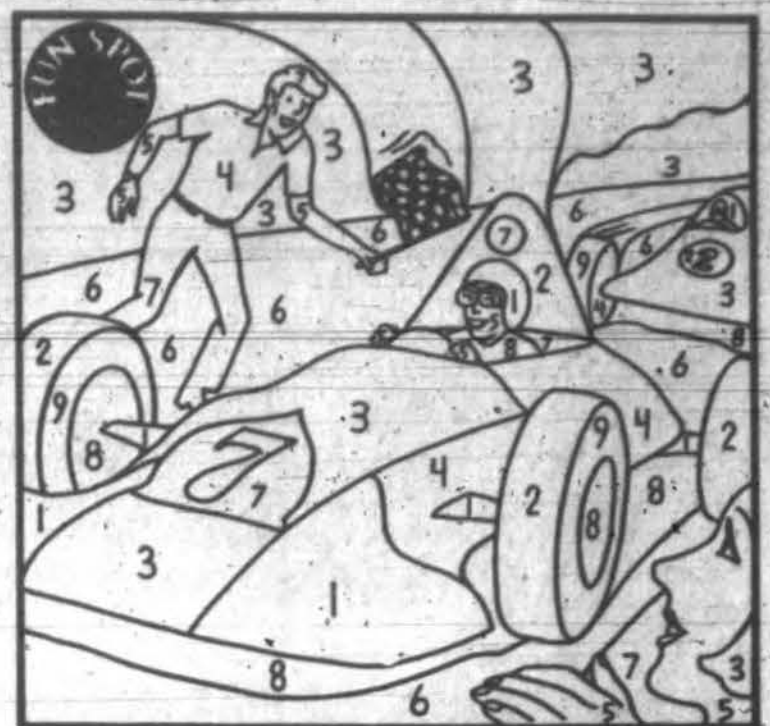

Six boxes are formed with 17 lines. Object is to erase five of these lines so just three boxes remain.

How is it done? Of course, if lines 6, 7, 8, 9 and 10 are removed, four boxes remain, but that's one box too many.

When you've solved this poser, try it on friends, using toothpicks or paper clips to serve as lines.

HEADLINERS

Dallas fans around the country are as nervous as an oilman who's waiting for a stubborn well to gush. Why? They want to know who shot J.R.'s brother, Bobby Ewing. Well, don't bother asking the newest addition to the cast, Jenilee Harrison. The Dallas producers make it a point to keep the actors as much in the dark as the anxious viewers. The blond alumna of Three's Company has already filmed three episodes of the show on location under the blazing Texas sun, and all she is sure about is that her character is somehow related to the Ewings. Those Dallas producers speak with (South)-Forked tongues.

One thing about running for president of the United States: It certainly keeps your children off the street.

HARRISON: KENNETH COHEN

from 22-year-old William's speech (in Spanish!) before a crowd of 8,000 in Puerto Rico to 24-year-old Eleanor's attendance at a Navajo Indian ceremony in Arizona. But it is Ted Mondale, 26, who's the real veteran of the campaign trail. He began his stumping career stuffing envelopes for his father's mentor, Hubert Humphrey, in 1968 and has been at it ever since. "I wanted to do this because I believe in my father and where he wants to take this country," says Ted. Even with their hectic schedules, the Mondales still manage to see one another ever the November election turns out, the mailing address of the Mondale kids will not be 1600 Pennsylvania Ave. William will return to Brown University in January to finish his senior year; aspiring actress Eleanor, who's had bit parts in Three's Company, Emerald Point NAS, and Matt Houston, will start auditioning again, and Ted hopes to study law at the University of Minnesota like his dad. First, though, there's the entrance exam. Frets Ted, "I haven't written anything for more than a year. If talking and shaking hands were the key to law school, I'd be set."

Robert Preston, who played Mary Martin's husband in the Broadway show I Do, I Do, is saying, "I with Julie Andrews as his co-star. "I never said I would," says the former Music Man, whose refusal has struck a sour note with Andrews and her husband, Blake Edwards, the writer/producer/director of the hit movie. "When I said I wouldn't, they got indignant; they are very disappointed with me." Frankly, Preston thinks the whole project is ill-considered. "I wish Blake well, but it costs $5 million to mount a musical today. I've left too many shows in Boston and Philadelphia. Why, that crazy little drag scene I did at the end of the movie would get laughed off the stage."

We can tell you this much about the end-of-the-season plane crash on CBS's Falcon Crest: Grape-arbor matriarch Jane Wyman survived it, Mel Ferrer didn't; Billy Moses and Ana Alicia didn't even get on the plane, so we assume they're still around. Lorenzo Lamas? Well, since movies?"

"A few years back the best roles went to two robots and a shark," Newman replies, "and the trend began. It's hard to compete with a role created on a computer. And the trend continued. For a year or so, actors were not acting. But now, movies seem happily to be more personal, like Terms of Endearment and The Big Chill. Films are zeroing in on personal relationships. It's nice to see movies where once again actors are using their craft."

WHERE HAVE ALL OUR HEROES GONE?

MAYBE THEY NEVER WENT AWAY — MAYBE WE JUST GREW UP

Paul J. Sutton/Quem

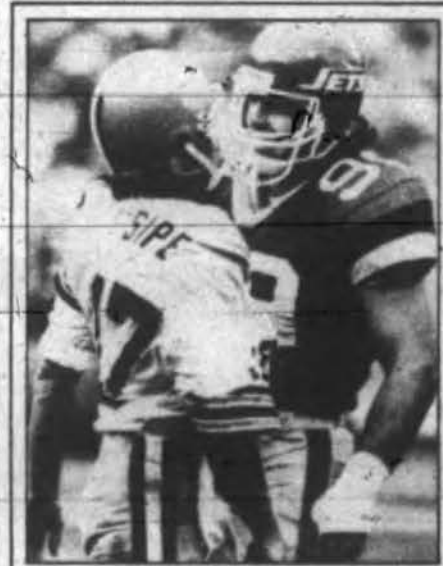

By David Kindred

Anyone reading the newspapers today must think the American sports hero is as dead as a baseball left overnight in a mud puddle. Arrogance and petulance march across the sports pages. Drugs and booze bring down victims faster than Steinbrenner fires managers. The more we know, the less we like it. The more money the athletes get, the more they demand. Give me another million, gimme, gimme, gimme. Have you ever seen anything like it?

As far back as 1875, four of baseball's best players caused a ruckus when they quit their hometown team to join the cursed rivals out West. The league already was in a bad way. Gambling by players had undermined the fans' faith. The cry went up that these four saloon rats were mercenaries selling loyalty for $100 a month. If fans couldn't count on seeing their hometown heroes, they would stop buying tickets. Then the money-grubbing bums would have to get a job on the railroad.

Human nature, as it applies to upward mobility, was as much in effect for the Boston Americans of 1875 as it is for today's stars. Drugs are terrifying now, but in 1899 the baseball boss Henry Chadwick had worries just as real: "The saloon and the brothel are the evils of the baseball world." Even before then, a players' revolt over salaries damaged the National League. Four players were banned for life after fixing games. In 1901 Wee Willie Keeler and Cy Young jumped to a new league for bigger bucks.

Mark Gastineau (right) has gotten mixed reviews for his treatment of quarterbacks.

John McEnroe wasn't the first to throw a tennis tantrum.

In games as in wars, the past is prologue. The Jack Johnson of 1908, outrageous in tone and deed, prefigured the Muhammad Ali of 1964. "Shoeless Joe" Jackson took gamblers' money in the 1919 World Series, three decades before the first of college basketball's game-fixing scandals. In 1982, football players went on strike for a percentage of the league's revenue; the 1912 World Series continued only after players demanded and received a percentage of all money from those newfangled moving pictures of the games.

Memory's forgiving nature chooses happy moments. However odd their shape and color, these moments are squeezed into the jigsaw puzzle of the alleged good old days. Babe Ruth's debauchery, Walter Hagen's drinking, Joe Di Maggio's salary holdouts, George Mikan's brutish work in the pivot, the angry theatrics of Pancho Gonzalez (before John McEnroe was born) — all have been covered over by the kindly, forgiving mists of time.

There were heroes then.

And there still are heroes, athletes of extraordinary skills who draw us to them by their charm, effervescence and endearing superiority. Name a few:

Julius Erving, Chris Evert Lloyd and Berr Crenshaw; Dale Murphy, Mary Decker and Bobby Clarke; Joe Morgan, Larry Holmes, Wayne Gretzky, Jack Nicklaus and Walter Payton.

Yet it is right to suggest that today's athletes are discolored by the mud of disgrace. It is one thing to have boozed it up. Old-timers confess to such failings without a blush. It is another, more serious, failing to buy, sell or use cocaine, an illegal drug. Sports pages report with depressing regularity the drug problems of today's athletes, some of whom have heard their rights read to them. Gods don't go to jail.

The loss of innocence always hurts, but it is unusually painful in sports today. A judge in Kansas City sent Willie Wilson to jail for three months after Wilson pleaded guilty to a federal misdemeanor charge of attempting to possess cocaine. The judge suggested the Royals outfielder had failed to live up to a morality imposed by his status as hero to youngsters. Once upon a Frank Merriwell time, we could believe in the myth of a hero. Now the romance is gone. Now we see a man play 100 times a year on television. We know his limitations. Now we read of a judge sending a man to jail. Myth can neither grow nor long endure in such hot light. As in music and war and sex, innocence ends early in sports these days.

Every generation grows up dreaming of heroes without flaw. We need to believe in Lancelots on white horses; all goodness and courage. We need to believe in the Boston Americans, our surrogates at bat, their goodness proven by how well they hit the curve. But there comes inevitably the moment when myth loses to reality. Our baseball heroes can sell us out for $100 a month. When Shoeless Joe stood accused of fixing a World Series, legend says a small boy shouted, "Say it ain't so, Joe." It was so, dreamer.

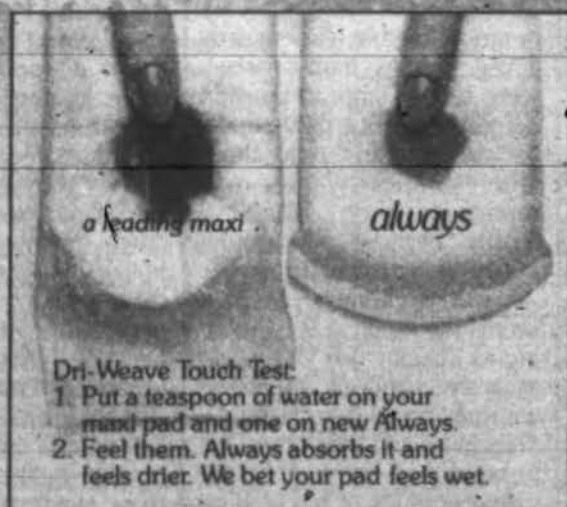

Sometimes these days, there comes the urge to spank an imperfect 300-pound lineman who dances a jig over a beaten opponent. One would love to send to bed without his supper the millionaire tennis star who curses Keeps you cleaner and drier than any other maxi.

Cleaner and drier even on heavy-flow days, new Always gives you a kind of protection that simply didn't exist until now.

Only Always has the silky surface they call Dri-Weave. Wetness passes through the Dri-Weave and virtually all of it stays trapped inside the absorbent pad, away from you. So the surface stays drier and you feel cleaner.

And Always maxi and mini pads are flow-shaped: thicker in the middle than at the ends. So you get protection where you need it most. With the widest adhesive of any pad — to help keep it comfortably in place.

Important Safety Message

Fisher-Price is recalling and replacing the head from the five-piece Splash & Stack Bluebird toy, model #167, due to a potential suffocation hazard. There have been three incidents in which the head of the Bluebird became stuck over the noses and mouths of young children's faces by suction and was forcibly removed. Toy safety and quality are of primary importance to Fisher-Price, which is why parents have always looked to Fisher-Price with trust. We've redesigned the toy with a bridge in the beak to eliminate the potential safety hazard.

If your child has an older model Splash & Stack Bluebird, please return only the blue head portion to Fisher-Price, Dept. 167, 636 Girard Avenue, East Aurora, New York 14052. We'll replace it and reimburse your postage.

Consumers outside New York State who have questions may call Fisher-Price directly between 10 am and 4 pm E.S.T. on a toll-free line: 1-800-828-7319. For New York State residents only, the number is: 1-800-462-7359.

SPORTS HEROES

a referee working for free. Sports figures' self-absorption in our times is preserved in Muhammad Ali's shortest poem. "Me," Ali began, "wheel!"

Happily, these are exceptions. Most athletes go unnoticed. They are solid citizens. But a story on cocaine is hotter copy than another Joe Theismann visit to Children's Hospital. A gambling scandal draws more notice than a second baseman's church work. Human nature guarantees it. If we then add our fascination with the private lives of public figures — a product of this generation — we have a distorted perception of today's athlete. We can't see the truth for the image.

As for the good old days, the truth was no different. Newspapers now tell of careers lost to the immaturity or amorality that leads to drug abuse, just as many careers were lost to bathtub gin and demon rum. But newspapers back then didn't print those stories, partly because reporters were dishonest, mostly because such problems were considered private.

Today we know so much it seems too much. It is comforting to imagine Joe Di Maggio as a shy Lancelot. Whatever we imagined a hero to be, Di Maggio could fill the bill because we knew only the vague outlines of his life and manner. But now imagination is no longer necessary or possible. All we heard about in the good old days were the good guys. Now we hear about the heroes and the villains — and sometimes it's hard to tell them apart.

One thing hasn't changed. Money gets in the way of the myth. In 1875, the Boston Americans won 71 of 72 games. Then the team's star — Albert Spalding, Deacon White, Ross Barnes and Cy McVey — dumped Boston for Chicago at salaries as extravagant as $1,000 a month. Now some salaries reach $1 million a year, and quarterback Steve Young works under a $40 million lifetime contract.

What fans don't understand is the money. Maybe we can't understand an immature athlete with tons of money getting himself too deeply into drugs. But fans resent the athlete who demands more money. Here are men making millions at games who would play for free if only they were good enough — and they want more, more, gimme more, gimme, gimme.

It wasn't this way when we were kids. Was it? They were games then. We would go to the ballpark down by the school and for hours be transported by dreams. We lived to get between the white lines of baseball field, where we became the players we loved. If Stan Musial batted from left-handed crouch, we unfortunate right-handers would try it. Maybe the magic in the stance would make our dreams real.

We took a radio to bed listen to Musial's games. We smuggled a flashlight under the covers so we could write down what the great man did. "The biggest thrill in baseball," Musial said, "is putting on the uniform every day." Every time we put on a baseball uniform, every time for 20 years, we heard Stan the Man's words.

In 1952 the Cardinals' owner told Musial to fill in a blank check. Musial agreed to the previous year's salary, $75,000.

In 1982 a sportswriter, no longer a kid, asked Musial, "Had there been free agency in 1952, would you have quit the Cardinals for more money?"

"Sure," he said. "They make big money now."

The recent death in American sports is not of the athlete as hero. It is the ritual passing of a generation's innocence. Fans would rather live in a world they imagine than one they examine. Ring Lardner, a great sportswriter, lost heart for games when his heroes, the White Sox, fixed that 1919 Series. Innocence ended for another generation on Feb. 26, 1964, the morning after Cassius Clay won the heavyweight championship.

He announced he was a Black Muslim named Muhammad Ali. Soon we knew Ali the braggart, Ali the athlete, Ali the showman and salesman, Ali the hero and Ali the anti-hero. Ali wouldn't go to war and didn't go to jail. Joe Namath wore panty hose on television and guaranteed victory in the Super Bowl. Wilt Chamberlain called the NBA a bush league and endorsed Richard Nixon. Paul Hornung was suspended for gambling and wrote a book about his sex life. Howard Cosell asked real questions and played himself in Woody Allen fantasies.

We changed, too. We no longer accepted with a child's faith the idea that athletes as a class are sacrosanct heroes. Too much had happened. We had seen Watergate and Vietnam, and we had seen assassins on television. We doubted everything. Could Joe Di Maggio have been that nice? Lancelot today would need three forms of identification to cash a check.

Now we see athletes as what they always were: some good guys, some bums. They are the same as the rest of us, except they can hit the curve.

Drugs, greed, overexposure and cynicism are powerful agents of destruction. Yet sports today are stronger than ever. Why? Last-days-of-Rome theorists say sports are the obsession of an affluent society going to pieces. Another theory: We embrace sports as the last simplicity in a world increasingly complex.

Or maybe we fill stadiums for the same reason we went to the ballpark down by the school. We have grown up, part way at least, and now we know that we respect athletes as real, imperfect people doing perfect, heroic things. But what we love most are not the heroes. If Shoeless Joe lets us down, we turn to Babe Ruth. If we think John McEnroe is a jerk, we turn to Bjorn Borg.

Heroes come and go, but the games stay. Cocaine has nothing to do with the ballet of a double play. Greed is not part of the jazz that lives in a fast break. We love the games that give the Paytons and Murphys a moment to work their artistry. We love what goes on between the white lines. Our dreams live out there. A hero is the guy who does what we would if only we could. And then he stays out of jail. PW

MONTHLY COLUMN

LOVE AN ANIMAL — IT'S GOOD FOR YOU

People often joke about their pets: "I'd rather have a dog than a wife"; "my cat would never lie to me or be unfaithful"; "my dog never answers me back."

Behind the jokes is a very real feeling. To many people — myself included — a pet is a person: a surrogate spouse, a child, someone to talk to. I look forward to coming home every night, when my wonderful little Jack Russell Terrier, Daisy, greets me at the door.

We pet humanizers are not crazy, silly, lonely or bored. It's perfectly normal to love your pet just as you do your husband, wife, baby or best friend. Consider fashion designer Oscar de la Renta and his Yorkshire Terriers, K and Zazi; or the choreographer Jerome Robbins and his good-natured Long-haired Terriers, Annie and Nick; or trend-setter Andy Warhol and his Dachshund, Amos. These clients of mine are unquestionably in love with their pets, who take center stage in their already exciting lives. Another client, Walter Cronkite, was devoted to his Spaniel, Buzzy. He took the dog with him everywhere. When Buzzy died, Walter was bereft. Eventually, he took a cat named Dancer into his heart. He feeds Dancer every morning on top of the dresser where she watches him get ready for the day.

Bizarre behavior? No, just human. Pets, like people, fill deep emotional needs in our lives. My 12-year-old daughter, Meredith, has had a special understanding with her cat, Petey, since the day they met, when both were going through troubled times. Petey, who was sick, had been abandoned at my office, while Meredith was in bed recuperating from a sledding accident. There are times when she feels that Petey is the only living being on earth who understands her. Not surprising — when she cries, he licks away the tears. Pets are often the best soulmates you will ever find. They will never criticize your behavior or disappear when you need a friend. In their eyes, you're always number one. And consider the trade-off — for undivided love and devotion, they ask so little in return: an open can of food, a nice neighborhood walk, a reassuring rub on the stomach or pat on the head.

More is at stake here than having fun. Pets can also be a health aid. Medical studies show that cardiac patients who own pets have fewer recurring heart attacks and lower blood pressure. Studies also show that pets can be psychologically therapeutic for autistic children and the elderly. Such discoveries have inspired important new measures designed to benefit senior citizens. Last year, for example, legislation was sponsored by Sen. William Proxmire that would forbid the Department of Housing and Urban Development to evict the elderly from federally funded housing projects because they had pets.

It is not known precisely how pets improve our health, but in recent years social workers and mental health experts have been exploring "the human-companion-animal bond." Some believe that the therapeutic value of pets is purely psychological. You love them, so you feel better. But another explanation seems increasingly plausible: Pets actually trigger physiological changes in people, in which enzymes are secreted that directly alter their moods.

Whatever the explanation — and I favor the latter — the emotional pull of a pet can be enormously strong. Consider the young woman who told me her pet saved her life. She was so depressed for a while that, she said, she would have committed suicide were it not for the only "person" in her life to whom she felt close: her cat.

Sometimes we humans ask too much of our pets, who have their own emotional needs. This is an important point to remember: An emotionally strained pet is a prime candidate for any number of stress-related diseases. And sometimes, too, we unknowingly inflict pain on our pets. I'm now treating a beautifully bred West Highland White Terrier who's practically dying of a broken heart. The reason: Her owners separated, and the man, her favored master, moved into an apartment that won't take pets. The terrier is deeply disturbed. She won't eat. She sits by the door all day and cries. The situation has deteriorated to such an extent that I've advised the man to forgo his visits to the dog because whenever he leaves, the dog falls back into the throes of despair.

Whatever the complications of owning a pet, remember the rewards it inevitably brings: love, companionship, greater physical and mental health. Pets surely make people more human. And humans, on their best behavior, can be good pals to their pets. —FW

"Because of My Feet I Just Couldn't Go On!"

"Thanks to Feathersprings®, I finally got a spring in my step again ..."

"Retiring as a golf professional was my own decision. Being forced to stop playing altogether was something my sore aching feet forced me to do. It got to the point where I would play a few holes and have to quit . . . because of my feet I just couldn't go on! I had tried everything and nothing seemed to work. Now, thanks to Feathersprings my feet are absolutely pain-free and I finally got a spring in my step again."

Jock Hutchison Jr.
Retired Golf Professional

73% of all Americans over 18 have foot problems. Anybody can develop foot problems . . . no matter what your age or walk of life. A young person with foot pain shouldn't be surprised, because there are over 300 types of perplexing problems your feet can develop.

Natural support breaks down and problems begin.

Each of your feet is made up of 26 bones, 56 ligaments and 38 muscles, joined in such a way to provide springy foundation for the whole body. Foot problems begin and multiply as soon as something happens to destroy nature's built-in support mechanism.

Feathersprings replace nature's support system.

It's true! Feathersprings, which are made in West Germany, actually restore the balanced, elastic support nature intended your feet to have. That's why Feathersprings have already brought instant, lasting relief to over 3,000,000 people of all ages, with all types of painful foot problems.

Feathersprings will relieve your foot pain.

We're so certain Feathersprings Flexible Foot Supports will relieve your pain that if they don't, we'll refund your money in full with no questions asked.

Don't needlessly suffer pain and discomfort for another day. Although most people think that foot pain is normal, the fact is that it's not. And you don't have to live with it. What people say in unsolicited testimonials, about Feathersprings:

"I have thoroughly enjoyed the comfort Feathersprings have provided me. You would not believe the difference they have made my feet feel—before I had such pain when walking because I have severe callus on both of my feet."
M.W.R./Richmond, VA

"Received my wife's Feathersprings two days ago. They are super . . . neither of us can believe the results. She has had terrible feet for years; already no pain. Incidentally, her sore knee is much better. . . . As a retired physician, this result is amazing."
Dr. C.O.C./Tucson, AZ

"I am probably one of your worst customers as far as being difficult because of my various peculiarities, but I am more than pleased and for the first time in my life I feel like really walking. I am wearing my Feathersprings and they are everything you said they were!"
E.G.W./Lookout Mountain, TN

"I want to thank you for refunding to me the full amount of what I ordered. I admire your company for this with no strings or red tape."

SHARON PATYK: NO SELF-PITY ALLOWED

By Frederick Kaufman

I always wanted to have blue eyes," Sharon Patyk says, smiling, "and now I do." After the gruesome incident that left Sharon sightless, she decided to have prosthetic eyes implanted. The eyes look so real that people stop her in the supermarket to ask where the juice is. They ask her for directions to the gas station.

Just over four years ago, on May 23, 1980, Sharon was the victim of two terrible, violent crimes. She was driving to her home in Boca Raton, Fla., when a stranger shot a bullet into her face from his car. Though she was immediately blinded, Sharon managed to pull her car off the road, honking her horn in hopes of summoning aid. A man offered to take her to a hospital, but instead he drove the bleeding woman to his apartment. There, he stabbed her, raped her, and left her for dead.

Sharon escaped, but her second assailant did not. He was convicted of attempted murder, sexual battery and kidnapping, and sentenced to 104 years in prison. One would expect Sharon to feel rage toward this man, but she doesn't. "He took eight hours of my life," she says, "and I'm not going to give him one second more."

"Lying in that hospital bed," she continues, "I said to myself, 'Look, kid, this really happened and this is the way it's going to be. You're blind. Now what?' That's always the most important question: Now what? There's nothing you can do about the past, so you better accept it and look to the future."

Instead of dwelling on the ordeal, Sharon got on with living. After the incident, her parents urged her to move back to Ohio. She was, after all, a divorced woman with three young children. But after a great deal of introspection, Sharon decided to try to make it on her own. It wasn't easy. "There were times," Sharon remembers, "when I was so angry that I would chase my daughter Kristin around the living room. In fact, once I got so fed up that I went into my bedroom, got into the closet, and just sat there. It was so peaceful and quiet, I never wanted to get out. After about fifteen minutes, though, I realized that I wasn't doing anything constructive about my problems, just hiding out. So I emerged. Still, when people ask me how I handle my kids, I tell them that I'm a 'closet case.'"

There is nothing that Sharon does not do — except drive a car. She has made numerous radio and television appearances and has a steady schedule of speaking engagements, lecturing on motivation. She is co-authoring her autobiography. She is also a board member of the Boca Raton Crime Stoppers organization and volunteers a great deal of her time to speak on its behalf.

Eloquent, charming, literate and charismatic, Sharon conveys a strong message about crime and its victims. "It's subconscious on the part of society," she says, "but rape victims are made to feel guilty. This is the most dangerous of attitudes because it makes the victim embarrassed about what happened and less inclined to talk about it. Above all, what that victim needs is to get the experience off her chest — to let it out." Almost invariably, after one of Sharon's speeches, a young woman from the audience will come up to her and confide: "I was raped, but I never told anybody about it. You have given me the strength to face up to myself."

The control Patyk has established in her outside life is evident at home, too. "It's a real team effort in this house," she reports. "And the kids know they have to do their part. I want my kids to understand that throughout life they will be held accountable for their actions — they won't be able to blame other people for all the bad things that happen to them. I give them chores around the house so they know how it feels to be relied upon, and how it feels to have responsibilities and duties."

One of Sharon's joys is cooking. If you visit her, you're apt to find her in the kitchen happily concocting one of her secret recipes. "I love to cook, and my blindness has not impaired my sense in the kitchen. I don't follow any set of rigid rules. If I add a little too much, or not enough, I compensate." The tone of her voice changes, and Sharon sums it all up: "I cook like I lead my life. That is, to my taste." FW

Frederick Kaufman is the co-author of Sharon's autobiography, Feel the Laughter.

ARE YOUR PARENTS OVER 60? AND USING PRESCRIPTION DRUGS?

If your parents are over 60, there is a good chance they use prescription drugs—especially if they have a chronic condition like high blood pressure, arthritis or diabetes. But how much do they really know about the drugs they use? Do they know how to recognize possible side effects, and what precautions must be taken with certain drugs?

Do you know if your parents take more than one medication at the same time? This is frequently a problem with older people. Because of their age, they are more likely to have several different medical conditions which must be treated with more than one drug. But a drug which is safe when taken by itself, may become dangerous if it interacts with a second or third drug. Have your parents been alerted to the dangers of drug interactions?

WHAT DOCTORS DON'T TELL PATIENTS

According to a recent government study, when doctors prescribe medications, 74% of the time they do not warn patients of possible side effects. More alarming, less than 5% of the patients request this information at the doctor's office.

THIS BOOK DOES TELL PATIENTS

Here is an updated, 1984 hardcover book that does tell patients, in plain, non-technical English:

- which drugs should not be taken by people who have high blood pressure, diabetes or other chronic conditions
- which drugs interact with other drugs, with alcohol and with foods
- which drugs may cause side effects like dizziness, drowsiness, nausea, sleeplessness or blurring of vision
- how to buy, store and administer drugs plus how you may be able to save money on generics

PREScription DRUGS has been carefully prepared by the Editors of Consumer Guide® under the supervision of a registered pharmacist. It includes listings for over 700 drugs and a comprehensive guide to the 200 most commonly prescribed medications.

BAYOUT?

GOOD COOKIN' FROM CAJUN COUNTRY

By Marilyn Hansen

Paul Prudhomme, a young Cajun chef from Louisiana, has been reaping laurels and acclaim in culinary circles across the United States. His food has a distinctive, tantalizing quality that reflects his roots. After working with a variety of master chefs throughout the country, he returned to Louisiana because he considers it "the place to be for creative cooking in the United States."

His Louisiana Kitchen cookbook is filled with authentic, imaginative Cajun recipes. Here are a few for you to try.

CAJUN MEAT LOAF

A combination of pork and beef gives more flavor diversity to this dish, but you can use all ground beef, if desired.

- 2 whole bay leaves
- 1 tablespoon salt
- 1 teaspoon ground red pepper
- 1 teaspoon black pepper
- 1/2 teaspoon white pepper
- 1/2 teaspoon ground cumin
- 1/2 teaspoon ground nutmeg
- 4 tablespoons unsalted butter
- 1/2 cup finely chopped onions
- 1/2 cup finely chopped celery
- 1/2 cup finely chopped green peppers
- 1/2 cup finely chopped green onions
- 2 teaspoons minced garlic
- 1 tablespoon Tabasco sauce
- 1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
- 1/2 cup evaporated milk
- 1/2 cup catsup
- 1 1/2 pounds ground beef
- 1/2 pound ground pork
- 2 eggs, lightly beaten
- 1 cup very fine dry bread crumbs

1. In a small bowl, combine bay leaves, salt, red, black and white peppers, cumin and nutmeg; set aside.
2. In a 1-quart saucepan, melt butter over medium heat. Add onions, celery, green pepper, green onions, garlic, Tabasco, Worcestershire and combined seasonings. Saute until mixture starts sticking excessively, about 6 minutes, stirring occasionally

- and scraping the pan bottom well.
3. Stir in milk and catsup. Continue cooking about 2 minutes, stirring occasionally. Remove from heat; allow mixture to cool.
4. Place ground beef and pork in an ungreased 13 x 9-inch pan. Add eggs, cooked vegetable mixture and bread crumbs. Mix by hand until thoroughly combined.
5. In the center of the pan, shape mixture into loaf about 12 x 6 x 1 1/2 inches. Bake uncovered at 350° for 25 minutes, raise heat to 400°; continue cooking until done, about 35 minutes longer. Serve immediately.

ARE MEN AND WOMEN ALL THAT DIFFERENT?

By John E. Gibson

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. Women are more self-conscious about their clothing than men are.
2. Men and women are equal participants in group discussions, both socially and at work.
3. Men and women are very different when it comes to the willingness to reveal one's secret self to another.
4. In relationships with the opposite sex, men tend to be more shy and bashful in their behavior than women are.
5. Women derive more satisfaction from their friendships than men do.
6. Men tend to judge the character of an overweight person less charitably than women do.

ANSWERS

1. False. University of North Carolina investigators questioned 52 male and 52 female undergraduates about their feelings and attitudes about clothing. The subjects were also given a standard self-consciousness questionnaire. The conclusions of the investigators: "Contrary to expectations, and in contrast to the marked tendency for females to be more involved with and interested in clothing, it is actually the males who displayed a more powerful relationship between self-consciousness and clothing variables."
2. False. An Amherst College study examined the relationship between sex differences and participation in group discussions. Those studied were "bright, career-oriented men and women, similar in personal attributes and aspirations." The subjects of the study were 118 men and women undergraduates randomly assigned to either an all-male, all-female, or mixed-sex discussion group. Contrary to expectations, women actually dominated most of the mixed-sex discussions, in-friendships are richer.

itiating more interaction than did the men. The presence of the men did not have a suppressive effect on the women; they assumed and were provided ample opportunity to participate.

3. True. An Adelphi University study reveals that sex differences in self-disclosure are negligible in same-sex friendships. In cross-sex friendships, however, it was found that men tend to confide more readily than women.

Further, it was noted that in female-male pairs, "men tend to hide their weaknesses and women to conceal their strengths."

4. True. Studies conducted at Indiana University and Bowling Green State University have shown that men report a significantly greater tendency than women to be shy in dating situations, and women tend to be more assertive in private interpersonal settings.

5. True. A University of Rochester study concluded that while males made a greater number of friends, females' friendships were emotionally richer. Women were found to have more contact with their close friends and to engage in more spontaneous activities with them.

6. False. A University of Cincinnati study that measured the effect of being overweight on personality characterization indicates that "female subjects are more likely to associate an overweight body image with an unpleasant personality [in others] than are male subjects." PW

WHAT IN THE WORLD

BY MARION LONG

Bob Camp

SACK RACE

There's at least one working person in the United States who doesn't have to worry about getting sacked: Cheryl King. Cheryl is America's best bagger, having won the First All-American Paper Grocery Sack Pack-Off.

Not content just to pack it in, she challenged the Tonight Show's Johnny Carson to a televised match. Cheryl had it in the bag from the beginning, but the impressive thing was that when her packed bags were cut open, the contents stood upright unsupported.

Cheryl shared some of her trade secrets with us in case we have to pack our own bags: (1) heavy stuff on the bottom; (2) put boxes along the sides — it creates a frame to support the other groceries; (3) put bottles in the middle — the boxes will cushion them; (4) delicate items on top, and (5) slip the little incidentals in the remaining spaces.

Oh yes, one more thing: Pick the sack up from the bottom. Otherwise you may be caught holding (nothing but) the bag.

WHERE DID RIN TIN TIN LIVE?

When it comes to leisure time, millions of Americans go strictly by the book: TV Guide. The average citizen spends a lot of time in front of the set, but we couch-potatoes always knew that, sooner or later, we would reap the benefits of our hours of screen study. Well, here's our chance: TV Guide's TV Game. Six thousand questions exploring all areas of television scholarship. It's all there, from Milton Berle to Manimal.

Here's a sample: (1) What was the name of Baretta's pet cockatoo? (2) Outstanding collegiate athletes in the late '60s, these two men went on to star in Hill Street Blues. (3) Which government official quipped in a 1981 speech: "Middle age is when you're faced with two temptations, and you choose the one that gets you home by 9 o'clock." (Answers: Fred, Mike Warren and Ed Marinaro, and Ronald Reagan.)

The game will soon be available all over the country. And, oh, by the way, Rin Tin Tin performed his doggy heroics in and around the town of Fort Apache.

ON THE BEAN

They've been called the magical fruit. It's been said that they're good for your heart. But how does one discuss them diplomatically? Perhaps we should just forge ahead and spill the beans about some new scientific research.

Two Indian scientists, V.S. Rao and U.K. Vakil of the Bhabha Atomic Research Centre, have been working on the development of a bean that, once eaten, has no later, uh, repercussions. Beans contain sugar molecules that the human digestive system cannot break down. The result is flatulence. So the good doctors in India have been working on a method of weakening the bean's molecular bonds and allowing the stomach's enzymes to go to work. They soak the legumes in distilled water for sixteen hours and then bombard them with radioactive cobalt 60.

Lest you think that such research is full of beans, note that the U.S. government has been working on the development of a gas-free bean for nearly four decades. Experiments began during World War II because fliers became more flatulent at high altitudes, where gas expands, causing discomfort to themselves and their fellow crew members.

HAIR TODAY

From the Beatles shag to the Punk look, many of the hairstyles that have swept the United States have been imported from Great Britain. For a look ahead, we consulted the Daily News Record (a men's fashion newspaper).

It appears that the look of the near future is longer and neater hair. "Everyone wants to look intellectual now, moody and arty," says Peter Smith of the Atlas salon in London, "and this is reflected by longer, falling-down hair." Smith reports that some of his customers carry books to complete the look.

But what to do if you currently sport punkish stubble? No problem. Simon Forbes, owner of Antennae — the birthplace of the Boy George look — will attach long plastic hairs by a form of braiding.

Finally, if you prefer the Conan the Barbarian look, James Lebon of the Cuts salon will cut a false scar into your eyebrow. He also sprays graffiti on his customers' hair and is experimenting with mud and Jell-O treatments. Hair-raising!

BEDSIDE READING

What do people read before they switch out the light and retire for the night? Here are two reports:

Tyne Daly, co-star of Cagney and Lacey

"I am seldom seen with any other book in my hand but my Complete Works of Shakespeare," says Ms. Daly. "It belonged to my father, and the book looks like it has been run over by a truck 14 times. When things get tense I tell people, 'William and I are now going to rest together.'"

Donna Rowe, police officer, Grand Junction, Col.

Ms. Rowe reports, "I've been reading a lot of Stephen King. My favorite is The Stand, because it could so easily happen. The events involve bacterial accidents and warfare. I've also been reading C.S. Lewis's fantasy stories The Chronicles of Narnia. I'm a kid at heart, I guess, and a little make-believe at times helps you to deal with reality so much better."

Open fun for the fans

By LORENZO CARCATERRA

Wimbledon is an elegant old lady who, after having lived an interesting and well-trained life, is ready to relax, sit back and enjoy her memories. The old lady of Wimbledon has class, surrounded as she is by polite fans, umpires, tea served in the finest manner and the wisdom of her years.

The U.S. Open has nothing at all in common with the old lady. The U.S. Open is a guerrilla war played out in front of 20,000 screaming Queens, N.Y., fanatics in a stadium built less for tea and more for beer. The U.S. Open is an angry, grizzled, old soldier still fighting a war that was decided long ago. The U.S. Open is, in short, a lot of fun.

This year's Open, which begins this week and will be televised on both CBS and USA cable network, should be just as exciting and controversial as last year's. This year we most likely will again see Martina Navratilova chase away all challengers. McEnroe, Jimmy Connors and Ivan Lendl will duke it out in the trenches of Louis Armstrong Stadium.

The fans who do finally arrive via crowded highways or subways seem to be made up of two different species. There are those who like their tennis with cool Perrier and lots of silence, fitting very easily into the staid conditions of Wimbledon. At the U.S. Open, they are flanked by beer lovers, people who like tennis to be loud, as if it were a rock concert. They stomp, they cheer, they scream at every questionable call. There are fights, and a handful of arrests.

So, while the war is being played out on the courts, the fans are staging a resistance movement of their own. All in the name of fun and the love of tennis.

'Comedy Zone' short on humor

Realities of modern television dictate laughs hard to find

By PHIL SNEIDERMAN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

This hasn't been a happy year for comedy on television. Action-adventure series like "Riptide" and "Magnum, P.I." have managed to weave humorous story threads among the high-speed chases. But that TV staple, the half-hour situation comedy, has proved anemic in the ratings this past year. Musical-variety shows, which once featured lots of comedy skits, have now vanished from the network schedules.

If the old comedy forms aren't clicking, maybe it's time for a new approach. Lorne Michaels, the original "Saturday Night Live" producer, tried a revamped comedy-variety format earlier this year, NBC's "The New Show." It quickly tumbled to the bottom of the ratings and stayed there.

Now, it's CBS's turn to try repackaging (Please see COMEDY/Page 5)

Dabney Coleman and Mariette Hartley appear in a sketch on innovative new CBS series, "The Comedy Zone" on Friday nights.

What's due on tube this fall?

Bill Cosby's coming back to TV, but so are more silly car chases

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

RIDGEFIELD, Conn. — The temperature dipped well into the 50s last night, near the end of one of the dreariest summer reruns on the boob box, and the first falling leaf fluttered by the window.

All evening long the croakers croaked mournfully in the moonlit mists rising from our little lake, where already the Canada geese are marshaling into flight formations for the trip south. Oldtimers around here insist these are sure signs of an early autumn and a long cold winter.

The conclusion then is inescapable: another TV season will soon be upon us and the moth-eaten reruns will vanish with the songbirds and the circling hawks into winter hibernation.

What is in store for us on the tube this fall?

The early word from out LA way is that some two dozen shows will make their debuts on the major networks. ABC is high on "Paper Dolls," a series built around high-fashion models and the rag trade, and "Finder of Lost Loves," one of those Fantasy Island-Love Boat clones that provide space for a broad variety of plots and a generous display of big-name stars playing key cameo parts.

In the latter, Tony Franciosa is cast as a worldly type who helps people find old love interests. Why anyone would be interested in such a quest is beyond me. Even Dr. Zhivago in Siberia should have left bad enough alone. I can't help thinking that the network might reap better ratings doing a TV version of Bob and Ray's "Mr. Trace, Keener Than Most Persons," that zany send-up of the old radio soap opera "Mr. Keane, Tracer of Lost Persons."

The good news is that NBC is bringing back the "Bill Cosby Show," after an absence of 13 years, in a sit-com format featuring the comic as an obstetrician, coping with a lawyer wife and four lively kids. The premise is promising but there is always the danger of the series being afflicted with an acute case of the cutes, one of TV's deadlier diseases.

The bad news is that NBC also has a new sex-drenched prime time soap, "Miami Vice," and something called "Hunter," starring Fred Dryer as a maverick cop, brought to you by the same people responsible for "The A-Team" and "Riptide." Here we go with more silly car chases, gory shootouts, descents into that absence of culture they call the drug culture.

If murder must out in prime time, CBS offers a promising mixture of mayhem and merriment in "Murder, She Wrote." The series stars the always delightful Angela Lansbury as a mystery story author, not unlike Dame Agatha Christie, who helps solve non-fictional crimes that come to her attention. The result, we hope, will be a cross between Auntie Mame and Miss Marple.

That 36-year-old prodigy Steve Spielberg, who with "Jaws," "E.T.," "Raiders of the Lost Ark" and "Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom" hit the box office jackpot by making the kind of movies we thought they didn't make anymore, is returning to his first love, TV. He has signed on with NBC to produce "Amazing Stories," an adventure and mystery series evoking the grand ghosts of "Twilight Zone" and "Alfred Hitchcock Presents."

Unfortunately the Spielberg project, which calls for a minimum 44 episodes, won't premier until the fall of 1985. In the meantime, I recommend cable TV's "Tales of the Unexpected," a British import seen at odd hours in various locations featuring John Houseman doing the Vincent Price bit as interlocutor for some excellently acted, well-written bizarre yarns shot in exotic locations. There was one the other day about a little boy on a Caribbean island who rescued a giant sea turtle from the nets.

Ex-villain expands in 'Santa Barbara'

Q: I was wondering if the actor who plays C.C. Capwell on "Santa Barbara" also played the Rev. Snow on "Three's Company." — B.B., Morris County, N.J.

A: Yes. Peter Mark Richman was indeed Chrissy's father on "Three's Company." Richman came to Hollywood to star in the wonderful movie "Friendly Persuasion" (1956) with Gary Cooper, Tony Perkins and Dorothy McGuire, and spent his first year in Los Angeles playing heroic leading men. Then Richman became the classic villain, appearing in hundreds of television shows and movies as the archest of enemies. He's glad to be playing a three-dimensional character on "Santa Barbara."

Q: I miss Meg Ryan as Betsy on "As the World Turns." Has she any projects lined up now that she's left the show? Also, I think her replacement bears an amazing resemblance to Meg. — P.C., Red Bank, N.J.

A: Right now Meg's still looking for her first prime-time or movie assignment. As for Mary Kane, her replacement, we hear that before she had her hair cut in the same style as Meg's, there was hardly any resemblance. Evidently a haircut can make all the difference. (Aside to "As the World Turns" fans: We know that you adored Meg, but give Mary a chance. It takes a while for anyone to take over a role, especially from one who was as popular as Meg.)

LYNDA

Q: I remember watching "All My Children" with my grandmother since I was a child. I'm now 22. I don't remember ever hearing what happened to Chuck Tyler's parents. Can you explain why he was raised by his grandparents? — S.E., Buffalo, N.Y.

A: It has been mentioned on rare occasions that Chuck's grandfather, Charles Tyler, was married once before he wed Phoebe. Charles' first wife died. This first marriage produced a son — Chuck's father. When Chuck was five his parents were killed in an accident and he was raised by Charles and his step-grandmother Phoebe.

Q: I'd like the address of Bradley Lockerman of "Capitol." — D.O., El Paso, Tex.

A: You can write Bradley, who plays Zed Diamond, care of "Capitol," CBS Television City, 7800 Beverly Blvd., Los Angeles, Calif. 90019.

'COMEDY ZONE' SKETCHY...

humor on TV. "The Comedy Zone" is in the midst of a five-week tryout at 8 p.m. Fridays on KCBS Channel 2.

Someone had an idea that the problem with TV comedy might be regional in nature.

If the Hollywood hacks couldn't come up with funny new material, why not produce the show in New York and enlist some of Broadway's brightest playwrights to whip up some humorous skits? Round up a talented comic ensemble, bring in a few "name" guest stars and watch the ratings soar.

Well, after a look at the first two episodes of "The Comedy Zone," the news isn't good. There are some talent performers on view, and some of the skits are quirky and interesting. But "The Comedy Zone" has a fatal flaw: it's not very funny.

(However, no one thought to inform the laugh-track operator, who inserts loud, intrusive guffaws after even the lamest gags.)

TV veteran Steve Allen was host of the first episode, and he urged viewers to "stay tuned for serious comedy." Mark Linn-Baker played a Russian standup comedian, with Steve Landesberg translating. The gag was that the Russian's approach to American comedy didn't work. But focusing on bad jokes just caused the skit itself to short-circuit.

Better was John Bishop's whimsical sketch about a woman (Penny Marshall) recalling a string of romantic encounters as she sifted through the shirts the men left behind. Steve Allen himself generated some humorous responses with a tricky man-on-the-street segment. He asked passers-by, "If an admitted heterosexual were running for President, would you vote for him?"

But more typical were tiresome parodies of "Jane Fonda's Workout" and headache commercials. Of questionable taste was an impression of James Mason, just days after the actor's death.

The first show ended with a clever Lawrence Welk-type cast performance of a song called, "Don't You Hate it When They Make You Sing Along." And of course, the singers strutted into the audience, asking people to do just that. It was a clever idea, but not the sort to have you rolling on the floor.

Host of the second show was Dabney Coleman of "Buffalo Bill" and "Tootsie" fame. Coleman and Jane Curtin took part in the show's one brilliant sketch, Ted Tally's "We've Got to Stop Meeting Like This." Coleman and Curtin were two single people engaged in a cliched get-acquainted chat at a cocktail party.

But one person's answers always seemed to be one jump ahead of the other's questions. As the skit wound to a close, you suddenly realized you'd been watching a party conversation run in reverse.

Less successful were skits on a swinging father lecturing his conservative son on how to attract women, on a woman confessing infidelity over the breakfast table and on a sleazy real estate saleswoman (played by Audrie J. Neenan of

"Comedy Zone" will feature Ann Lange, Bill Randolph, Mark Linn Baker, Bob Gunton, Joe Mantegna and, seated, Audrie J. Neenan.

HBO's "Not Necessarily the News"). Michael Davis did his astonishing juggling act involving a bowling ball, an apple and an egg, but it wasn't new to anyone's who'd seen him on "Saturday Night Live."

Perhaps the trouble with "The Comedy Zone" is the television audience's expectations. Situation comedies and the gross-out teen prankster movies that air regularly on cable have conditioned us to expect big and noisy gags. Wit and subtlety are not qualities we've come to expect from TV humor.

Many of the "Comedy Zones" skits were clever and thoughtful, but they had no punch line. Thus, a sketch about a bubbly singer prancing among nuclear war survivors was not likely to bump your funny bone.

Or consider Jaston Williams' "Hate and Harmony" sketch in which Miss Patty Poteet (Jane Curtin) sang a country hate song — that's right, a hate song, not a love song. It was a clever parody of country music, but was it funny? Not really.

If anything, "The Comedy Zone" proves just how difficult it is to be both intelligent and funny. Perhaps the program will improve in its final episodes. But this seems to be the year in which viewers would rather watch their favorite stars blow their lines on mindless blooper shows.

As an experiment, "The Comedy Zone" deserves some credit. But the realities of modern television dictate that "The Comedy Zone" is most likely destined for a place in TV's dead zone.

TV TIDBITS: It's official. Diane Sawyer will join the staff of "60 Minutes" as the show's fifth correspondent. Sawyer has distinguished herself as a co-anchor of the "CBS Morning News" and as a floor correspondent during this summer's political conventions. She will begin working on pieces for "60 Minutes" immediately and will begin appearing on the show at a date not yet announced.

Kelsey Grammer joins the cast of NBC's "Cheers" this fall in the recurring role of Dr. Frasier Crane, a psychiatrist who is dating Diane, played by Sherry Long.

Marriott's ready for the Reagans

From jelly beans to embroidered robes, Irvine hotel's putting best foot forward

From Staff and Wire Reports

They've ordered, monogrammed bathrobes for the presidential suite, satellite dishes for the roof and Jelly Bellies for the check-in counter at the Irvine Marriott.

It's all part of the preparation for this weekend's visit by President and Mrs. Reagan and an entourage that may include up to 300 White House staffers, campaign aides and press corps members. Several hundred rooms have been reserved for the visitors.

Reagan is scheduled to arrive at the Marine Corps Air Station at El Toro at 5 p.m. this evening. He will officially open his fall presidential campaign Monday with a rally at Mile Square Park in Fountain Valley.

The rally is free and open to the public. Gates open at 8:30 a.m. The program begins at 9:45 p.m. Among the dignitaries scheduled to attend with the president are Gov. George Deukmejian and U.S. Sen. Pete Wilson.

The president's overnight stay will be at the 1-year-old, 500-room Irvine Marriott.

Ed Proenza, the hotel's director of marketing, said the Marriott staff did not learn of the president's visit until 10 days ago, leaving little time for preparations.

Proenza said special arrangements must be made for the president's security team and the press corps. He said the hotel had to install temporary satellite dishes atop the roof to allow broadcasters to transmit their stories.

He also said the hotel took several special steps on its own.

At the check-in desk, a bowl of fruit normally provided for guests has been replaced by a bowl of red, white and blue Jelly Bellies, one of the president's favorite snacks.

Bathrobes are generally provided for guests in the luxury rooms where the president and Mrs. Reagan will stay. But Proenza said the Marriott's housekeeping staff ordered brand-new bathrobes for the First Couple, embroidered with their initials.

"MAIN EVENT" DOWNTOWN MERCHANTS SEPTEMBER HELD ANNUALLY-LABOR DAY WEEKEND

They came to Huntington Beach from all over the Southland Saturday. There were beauties such as Holly Hovious, 18, of Woodland Hills (right), who won the OP bikini contest, and cuties such as Moondoggie (below), held by Rodger Ivey of Bellflower and admired by Terry Carty of Sierra Madre. Crowds also enjoyed ethnic foods and entertainment at the Main Event (left), held on the city's Main Street downtown.

Waves were poor but spirits high at HB Main Event

'People are astounded.... it's twice as big as last year and 100 percent smoother'

By TONY SAAVEDRA
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Aside from a few hoots and howls at Saturday's bikini contest, Huntington Beach police officials generally gave a good conduct rating to the estimated 100,000 people converging on the seaside town for a weekend of festivities and surfing championships.

But Sgt. Patrick Gildea, head of the special enforcement detail, cautioned that the holiday weekend is not over yet, and police are expecting a larger — and perhaps rowdier — crowd today.

Gildea, three other police sergeants and 26 officers patrolled the first three blocks of Main Street, beginning at Pacific Coast Highway, where downtown merchants are sponsoring a carnival. The 2nd annual Main Event festival features 150 food booths, rides in a beer-shaped hot air balloon and continuous rock bands.

The event coincides with the OP surfing championships being held at the beach through Monday.

After two days of festivities, Gildea is expecting the Sunday crowd to be a little more restless. For that reason, he was thankful that the bikini contest ended Saturday after being held in the mid-morning, before male admirers could load up on alcoholic beverages.

Last year, Huntington Beach officers needed help from nearby police departments to quell a riot-in-the-making after pranksters, inspired by the bikini contest, ripped the bathing suit tops off some women.

This year, police were ready. "The crowd got a little unruly Saturday afternoon. Some were real rowdy, looking for a fight. But we walked through them to let them know we were there. It was strictly high visibility," said Gildea.

He added: "We were all tense to see what would happen at this event. But everything is going smooth."

Surrogate births stuck in legal limbo

Whole arena of alternative births fraught with moral ramifications and no controls

Kathryn Wyckoff-Oliver, remarried only an hour earlier, trooped into a Santa Ana press conference with her new family and some of her wedding party in tow this week to announce the opening of her Center for Reproductive Alternatives in Newport Beach.

The center, Wyckoff-Oliver said, will arrange for infertile couples to have children by a number of new, controversial medical techniques — including surrogate parenting, embryo transfers and in-vitro fertilization.

Wyckoff-Oliver, a 30-year-old mother of three who herself became a surrogate mother four years ago, said she opened her own clinic in Ohio after a disappointing experience as a surrogate.

Not only did she have a miscarriage, but she felt the surrogate program she joined was badly organized.

The surrogates were not allowed to meet the infertile couple who would ultimately adopt the child and program officials had absolute control over the entire process, Wyckoff-Oliver thought she could do the job better.

So she opened her own center, not to handle the medical procedures, but for the counseling, selection and legal help infertile couples and surrogate mothers need before they go through with the expensive process of having a child.

Wyckoff-Oliver was subsequently arrested, charged with violating state adoption laws and then released. All charges against her were later dropped.

KAREN KLEIN

FOCUS ON THE NEWS

But the experience served to underline the legal and moral confusion surrounding new reproductive techniques that have moved rapidly from medical miracles to commercial enterprises.

William Handel, a Los Angeles attorney who will represent Wyckoff-Oliver's Newport Beach center, said the entire arena of new-age reproductive techniques is "in legal limbo."

"The whole area is fraught with legal, moral and ethical ramifications and no controls whatsoever," Handel said. "At this point, anybody can hang out a shingle and call themselves a surrogate parenting clinic."

Surrogate parenting has emerged as the most controversial of the new techniques and has been targeted by some opposition groups as "premeditated abandonment."

In what has come to be called the "rent-a-womb" procedure, a surrogate mother is chosen after extensive psychological counseling, background checks and physical tests. She agrees to be artificially inseminated and to carry a child that biologically belongs to her and the adoptive father. The surrogate mother turns the child over at birth to the infertile couple.

For her services, the surrogate is paid around $12,000, Handel said.

Arena noise charges stayed

Judge orders parties to work toward truce in amphitheater case

A municipal court judge has asked the owners of the Pacific Amphitheatre and the city of Costa Mesa to attempt to reach a truce in their ongoing battle over the noise emitted from rock concerts at the open arena.

Criminal charges against amphitheater owner Ned-West Inc. for violating Costa Mesa's noise ordinance were put on the back burner Friday by Harbor Municipal Court Judge Selim Franklin, in hopes that the two parties could negotiate a compromise. Criminal proceedings were postponed until Sept. 28.

Costa Mesa City Attorney Tom Wood said the judge wants sound engineers from the city and the company to determine how much noise is coming from the amphitheater at the Orange County Fairgrounds and what can be done to muffle it.

The city has filed three misdemeanor complaints against the amphitheater this year for violating its noise ordinance after nearby residents complained of loud music from rock concerts.

Two separate charges are pending for a Jefferson Starship concert in June and a Rod Stewart concert in July. An earlier complaint for a Scorpions concert in June was rejected by a municipal court judge.

Ned-West retaliated last week by filing a lawsuit against the city. The suit claims the noise law is ambiguous and violates the "equal protection clause" of the Constitution because it is aimed solely at the concert stadium.

Furthermore, the owners maintain that the city has no business regulating the amphitheater because it is on state-owned property.

Wood said Franklin's request was intended as a detour to the web of litigation awaiting the city and the amphitheater owners.

"The judge wants the problem to be solved rather than have a criminal case wind its way through court," said

Safe, sunny beach holiday

Thousands hit surf, no major traffic collisions reported

The Labor Day weekend brought more than 125,000 people to Orange County beaches Saturday as the Southland sweltered in a wave of heat and humidity.

With the mercury hitting 89 in Los Angeles, temperatures were in the high 70s and low 80s along the coast. The National Weather Service is forecasting that the Orange Coast's fair weather will continue today.

Huntington Beach reported 35,000 sunbathers, swimmers and surfers, many of whom were attracted by the CP surfing championships being held through Monday. And an estimated 65,000 people enjoyed the rock music, booths and carnival rides at the nearby Main Event festival, sponsored by merchants on Main Street.

Newport Beach lifeguards reported 70,000 people, while

A northern California man becomes an extra-terrestrial ambassador with clothing of his own design, while a Utah arms maker sells hand-forged battle axes and swords, and several major movie studios tout future releases about space and the Wizard of Oz.

At World-Con, a five-day meeting running through Monday at the Anaheim Convention Center, ordinary citizens are encouraged to escape their hum-drum lives, and live out their most vivid fantasies.

Attendees, who range from "hard science" types to Trekkies to young males influenced by futuristic paramilitary hardware and sword-and-sorcery romances, can attend lectures, watch movies or buy rare books and magazines such as a first edition of Robert Heinlein's "Stranger in a Strange Land" ($800) or Volume 1,

No. 1 of Astounding Magazine ($500).

By Saturday, about 7,000 people had paid the convention's $35 entry fee, convention spokesman Fred Harris said.

"We are, a lot of us, overweight or otherwise unattractive," said Mel Gilden, a writer and science fiction talk show host on Los Angeles radio station KPFF. "We were outcasts as kids; we were intelligent, but not socially skilled. We tended to escape from an unpleasant reality by reading. As we grew up, we fell deeper and deeper into it."

Sheanaser Brown, whose flowing dress with embroidered bodice would have been fashionable in the year 1350, said that only among like-minded people attending the convention can she feel free to indulge herself.

Brown, who goes by her first name only, says her dress is reminiscent of another time, another place "and this is the only place I can wear it. For the same reason, I don't like to use my mundane name here. It reminds me of there (the outside world), and there's to much here I enjoy, and too much outside that is grubby and ugly."

They all can stroll past elaborate displays for the upcoming movies "Dune," "2010" and "Oz," and take giveaway buttons, posters and graphics. Or they can attend lectures with titles such as: "World War III and Its Aftermath," "Tourist Spots for Time Travelers," "Alien and Creature Anatomy," "If I Were a Sorcerer" and "The Oddest Place in the Universe."

Beginning Sunday night, continuous screenings of the three "Star Wars" films were to begin.

The convention also features visits from well known science fiction writers, demonstrations of computer technology and other high-tech innovations, a costume party and the Hugo Awards ceremonies honoring the year's best science fiction works.

"The purpose of the convention is to have fun and also to give people a chance to see what's going on in the future," Harris noted.

WAVES POOR, SPIRITS HIGH...

The Downtown Merchants Guild, sponsor of the Main Event, initiated the yearly festival in hopes it would revitalize languishing shops. And it has.

"It's brought a lot of life here," said Liz Tice, guild staff member. "People are astounded because it's twice as big as last year and 100 percent smoother."

Agreeing was Councilwoman Ruth Finley, who strolled around the booths and shops Saturday afternoon. "I thought it was kinda' neat. The only complaint I heard was that the surf wasn't very good."

Huntington Beach lifeguards confirmed that the 2-to-3-foot waves weren't especially accommodating for the championship surfers in the second day of competition. The surf is expected to be the same today.

Lifeguard Brandt Lapschies added that the 35,000 beachgoers were about as peaceful as the waves.

"There were just the typical drunks and drugs, but no major problems."

SURROGATE BIRTHS IN LIMBO...

From A1

If the infertile couple is able to achieve conception but the wife cannot carry her pregnancy through to term, an embryo transfer may be performed.

In the embryo transfer procedure, the fertilized egg the wife is carrying is flushed from her womb and then implanted in the uterus of a surrogate, who carries a child for the infertile couple.

The monetary rewards to the surrogate are similar in both procedures.

Wyckoff-Oliver said the surrogate and the adoptive parents have sometimes become too attached to each other if they were allowed to have close contact during the pregnancy. Under her Newport Beach program, if the two parties meet (the program encourages one meeting between the surrogate and the adoptive parents before the birth), they do not exchange last names or addresses.

"The woman who is about to give birth needs to know the couple and know what they are like," Wyckoff said. "But she also needs to make a break with the couple and the baby in the delivery room."

After the surrogate mothers give birth, she said, they are given the option of getting back into the program as counselors and participating in support groups for other surrogates.

The procedures, while costly (Handel estimated the process costs between $25,000 and $30,000) and risky (the adopting parents currently have no legal right to claim the child if a surrogate decides to keep the baby), do enable an infertile couple to have a child that in many cases they have coveted for as much as a decade.

"These people have literally spent their life savings, and there's no guarantee that the baby will be theirs at the end of it all," Handel said. "But you have to remember that most have gone through years of surgery, spent thousands of dollars, had their sex lives dictated to them for years and the end result is that they still don't have a child."

For infertile couples who have endured years of disappointment and hardship, the new reproductive programs sound like a godsend.

For Larry and Janet Tubelle, a middle-aged couple from Los Angeles who have two adopted teen-agers, a surrogate mother was the godsend that gave them two-year-old Dillon, Larry's son by artificial insemination and Janet's by adoption.

Dillon was born during the same week that Britain's Prince William was born, Larry said. After he got the bill for the medical expenses and the surrogate process, he said Dillon truly fit the "prince and the pauper" syndrome.

After having raised two adopted children, Larry said, he still felt the desire to "achieve quasi-immortality" by having his own child. "It's a kind of life extension through the genes," he said.

Handel and Wyckoff-Oliver said the surrogate process provides an infertile couple with more control over the birth of their child than an adoption, where the biological parents' backgrounds are often sketchy.

The surrogate mother also must sign a contract promising not to drink or smoke during her pregnancy.

But despite the positive aspects of the alternative processes, they also open a Pandora's box of complicated legal, moral and ethical questions that remain unanswered.

Handel and Wyckoff-Oliver openly admit the tremendous problems involved in their procedures. Thus far, of the 32 surrogate births they have arranged, none of the mothers has changed her mind about giving up the baby. They credit that kind of success to extensive psychological and psychiatric workups, personality screening and testing.

But they also admit the program cannot go on forever without a hitch.

One of the more celebrated cases involving such programs revolves around the fertile embryos that remain frozen in an Australian clinic after both parents were killed in an airplane crash this year. The ultimate fate of the embryos has not been decided.

Other questions raised by the controversial procedures include:

• Should a child be told its parents paid the biological mother to give him up after birth?

• If a couple divorces after having a surrogate child, does the father have more right to custody of the child because of his biological relationship to the child?

• If the unborn child is found to be physically imperfect, does the couple have the right to order an abortion? Can the surrogate mother choose an abortion over the couple's wishes?

• If a fertilized embryo is discarded before being implanted in the uterus of a surrogate, does that constitute killing a life?

Because of the intense legal and moral ramifications of the new procedures, there have been few official opinions published for or against the techniques.

But strong opposition has come from traditional religious groups, who see the procedures as tampering with natural order. "Anything that takes these processes out of the natural realm is highly open to question," said Bob Simonds, president of the Citizens for Excellence in Education, a conservative religious organization.

"These procedures would meet the need of childless couples — and we're 100 percent for that," Simonds said. "But when God says something isn't right, it's because there are serious consequences for the people involved. That is hard for secular society to understand, but it's something that's real by a principle with us."

HOTEL ALL SET FOR REAGAN...

From A1

He said the Reagans will find with the robes a welcoming card signed by members of the hotel's housekeeping staff.

The presidential party will occupy the Marriott's top two floors, the 16th and 17th, in a special area known as the concierge level. Featuring a bi-level parlor area with members of the hotel's concierge staff on duty, the two floors are joined by a spiral oak staircase.

Pronza described this area as "a very deluxe hotel-within-a-hotel."

Floor-to-ceiling windows afford a dramatic view of the nearby John Wayne Airport and Saddleback Mountains. President and Mrs. Reagan are scheduled to occupy the hotel's presidential suite, which contains a marbled entry parlor replete with antique Chinese art objects.

The 518-square-foot suite includes two bedrooms, adjoining the spacious parlor area.

Since the hotel's opening in August 1983, the presidential suite has served as lodging for not only former President Richard M. Nixon but also former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger. Rock star Rod Stewart has also occupied the suite during the past year.

Irvine Marriott General Manager Ronald V. Cribbet said President Reagan's visit will not be easily forgotten by the hotel's 450-member staff nor future visitors to the hotel property.

Following the president's departure on Monday, the VIP quarters will be renamed "The Ronald Reagan Presidential Suite."

HB glass-a-thon's on again; seeks reduction in injuries

The sand at Huntington and Bolsa Chica state beaches in Huntington Beach used to be a mess.

Barefoot bathers walked through the eight miles of sand on both sides of the city pier at their own risk. There were a lot of broken glass and too many injuries.

But that was five years ago, before state officials initiated the glass-a-thon.

State park officials hit on the idea of handing out prizes to youngsters for picking up bottles before they could be shattered and become a danger. Local companies such as Aminol and Chevron and about 50 others donated money for prizes.

Youngsters James Edwards, Shawna Bierman and Allen Dault collected 5,000 to 12,600 bottles to become top winners in past summers.

This year the glass-a-thon got off to a late start because of the opening of new facilities at the state beach. But it's now in full-swing, according to State Park Ranger Larry Fulvio.

People of all ages can take part, he said. Participants receive a ticket for each 12 bottles they turn in at bins at the headquarters of the two parks. The person with the most tickets at the end of the program on Sept. 29 will get the top prizes, which include Schwinn Beach Cruiser bicycles.

Planes collide in midair, killing all 6 aboard crafts

By The Associated Press

THE DALLES, Ore. — Two single-engine airplanes collided near here Saturday and "disintegrated" as they plunged to earth, killing all six people aboard the two craft, authorities and witnesses said. The planes collided at 10:05 a.m., two to three miles west of The Dalles, O'Connor said. The airplanes hit the ground about a mile apart, at separate ends of a large field, and burned on impact. In another fatal air accident Friday, two California women died when their single-engine airplane apparently got caught in a gust of wind, cartwheeled and crashed on a runway at the Rock Springs-Sweetwater County Airport. Coroner Mike Vase identified the victims of Friday's crash as Dr. Genevieve A. Wagner, 56, and Lois E. Halls, 57, a registered nurse. Both were from Crescent City.

Nuns defeat developer with their silence

MORRIS TOWNSHIP, N.J. — A developer said Saturday he has given up a plan to build a five-story office building next to a convent where nuns broke a vow of silence to fight the project. The seven-acre tract next to the convent of the Most Blessed Virgin Mary of Mount Carmel has been sold to SENTRY Morris Associates of Union, which plans to build houses there, said Kenneth Merin. The SENTRY Morris plan would not need a zoning change because the area is designated for single-family homes.

Only 3 major fires still active in Montana

HELENA, Mont. — Only three major fires remained active Saturday after a week-long rampage of blazes that blackened 250,000 acres of forest and rangeland, but authorities were keeping an eye on the wind. The three remaining fires were in heavy timber in western Montana, and officials said such blazes are capable of smoldering for weeks or months, waiting for dry weather and high winds to revive them. The army of 5,000 firefighters from several Western states that was marshaled to fight the blazes was rapidly demobilizing, passing on responsibility for the rest of the fires to state or local firefighters.

Union members authorize auto strikes

DETROIT — United Auto Workers members overwhelmingly approved strike authorizations against General Motors Corp. and Ford Motor Co., which offered no raises in contract proposals, union officials said Saturday. Employees of both companies gave the go-ahead to strike by better than 90 percent margins, the UAW said in a statement. GM earned $3.73 billion last year and Ford earned $1.87 billion. Both could nearly double those records this year, and union members want a bigger share of those profits.

Mondale given national security briefing

NORTH OAKS, Minn. — Democratic presidential nominee Walter F. Mondale received a "courtesy" briefing from President Reagan's top national security aide on Saturday as he neared the end of a turbulent summer of preparations for his fall campaign for the White House. Mondale spent more than two hours at the briefing by Robert C. MacFarlane. "This... is a courtesy briefing that incumbents as a matter of practice will give to a challenger," said campaign spokesman Don Foley. The meeting took place at Mondale's home.

Police search for clues in L.A. slayings

LOS ANGELES — Detectives searched for clues Saturday in the killing of four members of ex-football star Kermit Alexander's family. Alexander's mother, sister and two nephews were gunned down by two men who walked into the mother's home Friday morning and opened fire without saying a word, witnesses said. Meanwhile, Mayor Tom Bradley has pledged a police effort to stem a wave of violence in south-central Los Angeles, the area where the killings occurred. Three people have been killed and six others shot in a bloody outburst of violence that hit the area since Aug. 18 concert at the Memorial Coliseum that drew a number of local street gangs.

Poll says Ferraro not drawing many voters

LOS ANGELES — Democratic vice presidential nominee Geraldine Ferraro is more popular than her running mate, Walter Mondale, but isn't drawing enough voters to the ticket to make it a winner, according to a nationwide poll published in Sunday editions of a Los Angeles newspaper. Sixty percent of those polled said that if the general election were held now, they would vote for President Reagan, while 33 percent would vote for Mondale. When the vice presidential nominees were included, 59 percent said they would cast their ballot for Reagan and George Bush, with 36 percent for the Mondale-Ferraro ticket.

Women sues over haircut

SAN FRANCISCO — A woman who said she suffered mental anguish after receiving "an extreme and bizarre" style of haircut has filed suit against her hairdresser and hair salon. In a suit filed Friday in San Francisco Superior Court, Joan Kienker charged that her hairdresser, identified only as Clayton, "exhibited erratic, bizarre conduct... including the administration of strange mohawk-type haircuts to unsuspecting patrons." Since the haircut on Sept. 24, 1983, the suit said, Kienker has incurred bills for hospitals, doctors, nurses and drugs because of the haircut.

Insect swarms, virus combat grape pest

VICTORVILLE — In an unlikely alliance, parasitic wasps, flies and a virus have been released in concert by San Bernardino County biologists to battle the grapeleaf skeletonizer. In three weeks, the county Department of Agriculture will run tests to see if the insect swarms and the virus, released in a square-mile area here, have succeeded in killing the grapeleaf-eating pest discovered last month.

Argument leads to bystanders' death

PARAMOUNT — An argument between two men led to the shooting deaths of a young man, a 17-year-old girl and the wounding of two other bystanders, police said Saturday as they searched for the gunman. "We still don't know what the argument was about," Los Angeles County sheriff's Deputy Steve Lee said. The gunman had departed after the argument Friday night, then "came back apparently intending to shoot the man he had argued with. But he was one of the few people he missed."

Shamir, Perez will seek resolution today

TEL AVIV, Israel — Yitzhak Shamir, the caretaker prime minister, and Labor Party leader Shimon Peres still differed over Jordan and who should be prime minister first as they prepared for talks Sunday aimed at nailing down a bipartisan government, reports indicated. Israel television said Saturday that Shamir, head of the right-wing Likud bloc, and Peres would try to resolve the prime ministership issue today, but both were determined to be the government leader in the first 25 months of the proposed coalition government.

Saudi Arabia withdraws Lebanon mission

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Saudi Arabia told Lebanon Saturday it has withdrawn its diplomatic mission from Beirut to protest an attack on its embassy compound by pro-Iranian zealots nine days ago, Foreign Ministry sources here said. The Saudi Chancé d'Affaires Abu Bakr Rafi and his staff reportedly left the Lebanese capital Thursday. The embassy's telephones went unanswered Saturday. There was no word on whether the Saudi decision will affect Lebanon's chances of getting a promised $450 million reconstruction grant from the oil-rich kingdom.

Walesa urges parley with government

GDANSK, Poland — Saying that it is "nonsense to go out into the street and get beaten by truncheons," Solidarity leader Lech Walesa called Saturday for negotiations with the communist government in the spirit of peaceful ceremonies that marked the free labor movement's fourth anniversary. He told reporters at his apartment he hoped the peaceful demonstrations and rallies held on the anniversary Friday would characterize the future strategy of the now-outlawed Solidarity.

Crews set to retrieve sunken cargo

OSTEND, Belgium — Salvage crews are due to start retrieving the radioactive cargo of the wrecked French freighter Mont Louis on Sunday, eight days after the ship sank off the Belgian coast following a collision, a salvage company official reported. "On Sunday morning we will cut a big hole in the side of the ship and in the afternoon we will bring out the first containers," said Henk Drenth of the Dutch salvagers Smit Tak International.

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Discovery's astronauts successfully launched their third commercial satellite Saturday, achieving a turnaround for a shuttle program whose image as a reliable transportation system has suffered from delays and failures.

"Congratulations," said Mission Control. "Three for three."

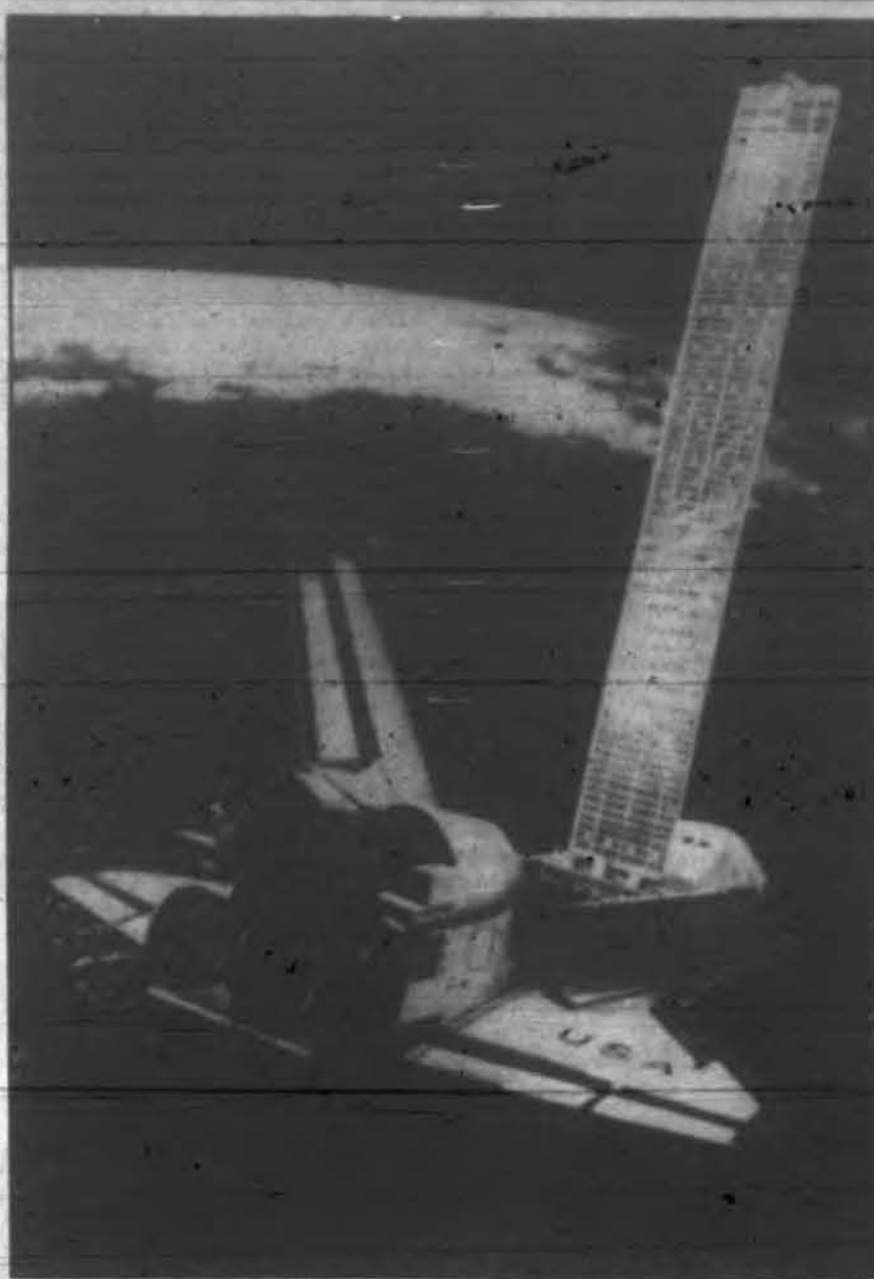

There was relief on the ground because the satellite, Telstar 3, employed the same kind of rocket booster that shot two similar $35 million satellites off course in February. Those failures raised launch insurance rates and caused customers to think about shifting their satellite business to a NASA competitor in Europe.

Two of the three satellites deployed on this inaugural flight of Discovery used the booster, validating the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's contention that its flaws have been found and corrected. Many of the satellites to be launched from the shuttle in the future use the same rocket to propel them to higher orbit.

Adding to the good news for NASA: the satellite ejected from the shuttle Thursday was placed into a circular orbit, 22,300 miles high, after a radioed command set off a second successful firing of the worrisome rocket booster.

After having earned $37 million for NASA with the three launches, the astronauts turned their attention to the two tasks that will occupy most of their time the rest of the flight, which ends Wednesday at Edwards Air Force Base.

Charles Walker, the McDonnell Douglas engineer who is on board to manufacture a hormone, was having trouble running his equipment with automatic controls and had to operate it manually. Electronic sensors, which monitor pressures inside the device, were shutting it off. Walker's employer is guarding the identity of the material and what it will be used for, but said it could benefit millions of people.

This is an artist's conception of Saturday's test of a thin, collapsible solar panel aboard the shuttle Discovery, unfurled to a height of 10 stories out of the cargo bay.

In the other job, with astronaut Judy Resnik at the controls, a 10-story-tall "solar sail" was raised twice out of the shuttle's cargo bay. It was the first test of technology vital for space stations of the future.

"It's up, and it's big," she told Mission Control. "Now that it's stretched out, it's very steady with no wrinkles or wobbles."

The stability of the sail, and the effect it had on ship's motion, was one of the major questions for engineers.

South Korean floods

Subdued ceremony recalls KAL flight

MANGHYANG GARDENS, South Korea (AP) — In a driving rain from a sky that had been leaden for days, South Korea held a memorial service on Saturday for the 269 people killed one year ago when a Soviet jet fighter shot down a commercial Korean airliner.

About 900 relatives of the victims came to these gardens 50 miles south of the capital, Seoul, for the service and dedication of a twin-towered, granite monument to the dead. Officials of Korean Air — formerly Korean Airlines — said the mourners included about 160 family members from 15 countries.

An estimated 1,200 people, including Korean government officials, members of the diplomatic corps and others huddled under umbrellas in front of the monument as a military band played funeral music and hymns that included "Nearer My God to Thee."

A Buddhist monk, a Protestant pastor and a Roman Catholic priest offered prayers for the dead.

It was the major observance in South Korea of the shooting down of Korean Airlines Flight 007 on Sept. 1, 1983, as it flew from New York to Seoul by way of Anchorage, Alaska.

The first anniversary of the incident was subdued, in contrast to the world outcry and protests one year ago.

South Korea has said it will still press for compensation from the Soviet Union, but will also seek to develop unofficial ties between Seoul and Moscow.

The two countries have no diplomatic relations. Even unofficial sports and scientific exchanges were ended after Flight 007 was blasted from the skies near Soviet-held Sakhalin Island.

The Soviets have rejected all demands for compensation.

In the Sea of Japan, 79 relatives of 21 victims — 20 Japanese and one Korean — took part in a brief memorial service on a ferry near where the plane was downed.

Soviet warships were visible in the distance as the families threw overboard flowers, candy, fruit and other offerings to the dead at a point about 29 miles northeast of the Soviet Union's Moneron Island.

Plaque to KAL victims dedicated near U.N.

NEW YORK (AP) — Chanting "We will not forget," about 100 people gathered near the United Nations on Saturday to dedicate a plaque in memory of the downing of a Korean airliner by the Soviets a year ago and the loss of 269 "innocent lives."

Relatives and friends of those killed Sept. 1, 1983, were among those attending the morning dedication opposite the U.N. complex.

Some in the crowd carried signs bearing messages such as "Remember Korean Airline Flight 007... 269 Slaughtered!" and "007, Still in Our Hearts."

The Soviet Union has claimed that the plane, which was traveling in Soviet air space when it was shot down, was on a spy mission near a military base.

The plaque characterizes the attack as "wanton and unprovoked" and says "such action cannot and will not be tolerated in civilized society."

The plaque was unveiled by Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., the founder of the Soviet Massacre Victim's Assistance Fund, a non-profit foundation that has raised $100,000 for the victims' families and sponsored the plaque.

The plaque will be affixed to the Isaiah Wall across the street from the United Nations, which contains a carved inscription from the Old Testament reading: "They shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruninghooks; nations shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more."

30 dead, 100 hurt in Kabul bombing

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — About 30 people were killed and nearly 100 were wounded when a bomb exploded in the main terminal building of the international airport in Kabul, Afghanistan, diplomatic sources here said Saturday.

State-run Radio Afghanistan had reported earlier that several women and children were killed and "a number" of people were injured in the explosion Friday. It did not give specific numbers, and blamed the blast on rebels fighting the Soviet-backed Marxist government.

The diplomatic sources in New Delhi said the reports they had received from Kabul, the Afghan capital, indicated that most of the victims were women and children among the travelers and relatives gathered at the airport.

They said the explosion in the tightly guarded airport, which also serves as a base for Soviet warplanes, occurred at 9 a.m. The sources spoke on condition that they not be identified by name or nationality.

The Soviet Union sent some 100,000 soldiers into Afghanistan in December 1979 to help the government battle the anti-communist rebels.

Western diplomats in Kabul say there are frequent bombings in the capital, but the government news media usually report only those that inflict severe casualties and damage.

Poison aids eye disease victim

Toxin offers some relief from spasms that inexplicably force eyes to close MADISON, Wis. (AP) — When doctors proposed injecting poison into 67-year-old Douglas Tveten's eyes, his wife had to read the consent form because he couldn't keep his lids up long enough to finish it.

The injections of Botulism A toxin into his eye muscles provide temporary relief from the effects of a puzzling disease known as benign essential blepharospasm, a disease that causes its victims' eyes to suddenly slam shut.

The spasms leave sufferers virtually blind unless they use a finger to pry their eyelids open, said Dr. Russell Gonnering, a Milwaukee ophthalmologist who provides the experimental treatment in conjunction with a national testing program.

Prior to the treatment, Tveten said it was practically impossible for him to drive a car or cross the street safely. His wife had to read the consent form for the research project to him because his eyes would not stay open.

"For the first time in years, I can close my eyes when I want to, not when they want to," Tveten said. Tveten said he probably will undergo the injections every three months. The only side effects have been temporary bruises where the injections were made and a slight darkening of vision for a day in his right eye, he said.

The drug is produced from botulism, bacteria. The injections contain about one two-hundredth the amount of toxin it would take to make a person ill, but enough to paralyze the eye muscles that cause the spasms, Gonnering said.

Botulism, which can be fatal, is caused by eating improperly canned or preserved food.

The same treatment has been used elsewhere to correct crossed eyes, Gonnering said, but has yet to receive U.S. Food and Drug Administration approval as a treatment for blepharospasm.

A national survey by the Texas-based Benign Essential Blepharospasm Research Foundation found about 250 people afflicted with the ailment, Gonnering said. He said he has seen 24 people in Wisconsin who suffer from it, and his program involves 14 people.

Until the experimental treatment was approved in Wisconsin in May, the only alternative for Tveten and other victims was surgery.

Prince governs the last outpost of Roman Empire

By HANNS NEUERBOURG
Of The Associated Press

VADUZ, Liechtenstein — He has lived in the family's 13th century castle and managed a fortune including a $150 million art collection, but the crown prince of Liechtenstein drives a Volkswagen Rabbit and favors free enterprise on the eve of his reign.

Last Sunday, the 39-year-old Crown Prince Hans-Adam of Liechtenstein was installed as regent of this prosperous 61-square-mile nation on the upper Rhine, the last surviving monarchy of the Holy Roman Empire, which the prince calls "the world's most industrialized country."

In a simple ceremony in the family castle, his 78-year-old father, Prince Franz Josef II, will turn over to Hans-Adam the executive functions he has held since 1938. The popular Franz Josef will continue as head of state, retaining only a ceremonial role.

In his new position, Hans-Adam has the final say on any law, can issue emergency decrees, dissolve the 15-member parliament and quash judicial proceedings. His father made history by forming a national coalition government after the 1938 Anschluss when neighboring Austria became part of the Nazi Reich, and Hans-Adam says he too wants to be more than a figurehead.

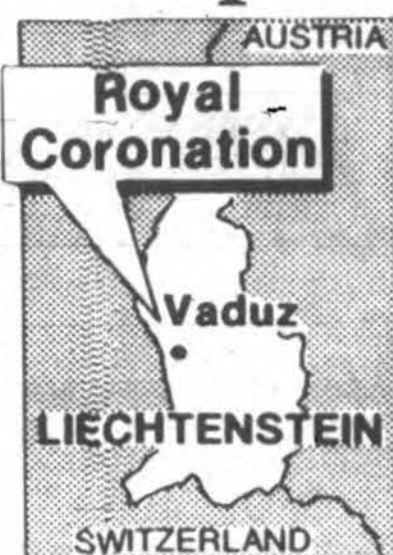

In an interview with The Associated Press at the castle above Vaduz, Hans said he favors "new ideas" and "if necessary ... legislative changes." His primary interest is foreign policy and his hope is to strengthen Liechtenstein's ties with international organizations, including the United Nations.

"We would already have joined the U.N. if it depended only on my hopes," he said. "But 900 people could force a national vote on the issue if membership means a public expenditure of more than 20,000 francs ($8,330)."

The principality's diplomatic interests are looked after by Switzerland, but the two countries' foreign policy decisions are not necessarily the same.

In 1980, Liechtenstein, unlike its two neutral neighbors, joined the U.S.-led boycott of the Moscow Olympics to protest the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan. Last year, the prince raised eyebrows by endorsing increased European military integration, including the creation of a European nuclear deterrent force.

"We have to think about European stability, even though we are neutral," he said, noting that Liechtenstein has no army of its own. "After all, we live in Europe."

Two generations ago, the country was so poor that the government tried in vain to mortgage the government-cum-prison, building, and Hans-Adam's grandfather sold some of the family jewels to bail the government out.

Since then, the onetime "poorhouse of Europe," as he put it, has become one of the world's wealthiest nations. Liechtenstein has a balanced budget, low taxes and a sophisticated array of industrial exports ranging from false teeth to boilers and protective coatings for spaceship windows.

Last month, authorities counted 42 jobless and 85 vacancies among the approximately 26,000 people who live here. There has never been a strike.

Hans-Adam says the key to Liechtenstein's prosperity is free enterprise and diversification. "There are no state guarantees and no subsidies. In order to survive, our enterprises are compelled to be successful," he said.

The sale of Liechtenstein postage stamps and the existence of more than 20,000 "mail box" companies set up by foreigners as a tax-saving device also bolster the economy. They pay little in fees, but accounted for about one-third of Liechtenstein's total fiscal revenues last year.

Sometimes, these companies have been used to cover dubious deals. But Hans-Adam said matters have improved since controls were tightened following Switzerland's greatest banking scandal in which Credit Suisse lost 1.2 billion francs ($500 million) in what a Swiss court found to be illegal transactions funneled through a Liechtenstein address during the 1970s.

LB youth shelter receives $55,000

The South County Youth Shelter in Laguna Beach recently received a $55,000 federal grant for its program of providing temporary shelter, care and counseling for abused, runaway and homeless youth and their families.

The local shelter is one of 38 in California, Nevada, Hawaii, Guam, American Samoa and Trust Territories in the Pacific receiving grants totalling $2,525,327 from the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services.

The centers in the western region are among 260 throughout the country receiving $18 million in federal funding under the Runaway and Homeless Youth Act.

Nationally, the centers serve about 250,000 runaway and homeless youths each year, according to Health and Human Services statistics.

Julie Pozetta, director of the Laguna Beach facility, said $27,000 of the grant would be used in the Youth Shelter's new foster care program. The remainder will provide about 10 percent of the shelter's total annual budget.

This is the second year in a row the Youth Shelter has received one of the competitive grants, Pozetta said.

Ray Catalano Jr.

Local YMCAs offering child care programs

Child-care programs offered by the three Orange Coast YMCAs served more than 650 children from 59 different elementary schools during the 1983-84 school year, according to Jim de Boom, president and chief executive officer of the Orange Coast YMCA in Newport Beach.

The before- and after-school child-care programs have been offered for eight years and include structured activities as well as full-day programs on school conference days and legal holidays.

"The YMCA provided a structured program for children of working parents, with trained and well-supervised leadership at an affordable price," de Boom said. "We even had scholarship funds available to aid those who couldn't afford the regular fee," he added.

More information about the child care programs at local Ys can be obtained by calling the YMCA offices. The Orange Coast YMCA, in Newport Beach, can be reached at 642-9990; the South Coast YMCA, in Laguna Niguel, can be reached at 831-9622; and the West Orange County YMCA, in Huntington Beach, is at 847-9622.

Laguna, CM vie for claim to title: 'City of the Arts'

To the Editor:

I was reading in the Pilot on August 20th that Costa Mesa Chamber of Commerce has declared itself to be the "City of the Arts." Perhaps that could be correct for the future with the great facilities for the arts now under construction.

For my participation in most of the art and cultural events of Laguna Beach I have tried to have our city adhere to the theme "the Community of Culture and beautiful homes with the economic base of sound tourism" as past president of the Chamber of Commerce and other cultural events.

No city can ever take away from Laguna the proud record we have of the oldest, finest playhouse, art museum, ballet, art school, Pageant of the Masters, chamber music and poetry reading and, most important, the Laguna Lyric Opera. The idea for the opera came from Laguna's Velma Sun and ignited in our home on meeting the famous oriental art collector Robert Robert of Paris Opera Co. and the A.A. Krochs whom my wife, Maxine, and I invited for mutual enjoyment and discussion of oriental art — but no — the discussion lent itself toward great opera — but in English. Velma Sun and Robert worked together for the first year forming the board and created three great operas in the Pageant Bowl about September 1960. I was treasurer and was responsible for about a $50,000 budget. It was a success but Robert and Velma split up at the end of the first fall season.

The Lyric Opera succeeded for fifteen years and only recently was absorbed into the present Orange County Opera Association after Velma Sun left our community. She was truly the heart and soul of the great opera movement and made it succeed against all odds.

Laguna's record on these great artistic events has never wavered in the last thirty years and has grown stronger each year. Laguna Beach is still the City of Great Cultural Events in spite of its weekend bizarre Coney Island atmosphere.

Long live the great art and culture of Laguna Beach!

Q. In comic books, who was "The Alchemist"?

A. Superman. It was an alias the writers created in 1961 for a scenario wherein Superman and Batman teamed up.

The modern spelling of "news" may indeed have been influenced by the oldtime newspapers that ran the letters N.E.W.S. on their mastheads to suggest their reports came from all directions. The word itself, however, is much older than any American newspaper. In 1423, it was spelled "newis." In 1485, it was spelled "news." In 1523, it was spelled "newes."

If a TV station wanted to broadcast everything in one Sunday edition of the New York Times, it would have to transmit 60 minutes an hour, 24 hours a day, seven days a week, for more than a month.

Ferraro: Spokeswoman for 2-career marriage

Such relationships must be separate for a fighting chance at survival

WASHINGTON — Years ago, a university president was asked why he no longer ranted and raved about the radical student groups that had been disrupting his institution. The eminent scholar paused, thought for a second, and said that his daughter had graduated and was no longer on the campus. Now his troubles were strictly professional.

It goes without saying that all public events have their personal side. The agony of Geraldine Ferraro is no exception. Others may see her as the first woman to run for national office or maybe merely as Walter Mondale's running mate. I, though, see her as something else — a spokesperson for two-career marriages. Her troubles have been my own.

For almost 16 years now the Cohens, Richard and Barbara, have been a two-career marriage like Ferraro and her husband, John Zaccaro. They have been involved in politics and real estate while our business has been journalism. Both my wife and I work at that trade, occasionally in direct competition with one another.

As a result, it came as no surprise to learn that the Ferraro-Zaccaros had filed individual tax returns, paying more in taxes simply to keep their two careers separate. And it came as no surprise to me, either, when Ferraro said she had cultivated an ignorance of her husband's business affairs — once again to avoid a conflict of interest.

I am sure other two-career couples do similar things to avoid even the appearance of a conflict of interest — and often to no avail. It was interesting to me, for instance, that some of the same newspapers that wrote of the problems of two-career couples when it came to Ferraro treat those in their own shops as an affliction second only to labor agitation. Not only do spouses complicate transfers, but they are seen as corporate security risks. The operative cliché is, "There are no secrets in the bedroom."

To an extent there aren't, and in the case of Ferraro she can not be both an officer of her husband's company, a recipient of its profits and still claim total ignorance. But it is not surprising to me that where their two careers clash, where for instance she and her husband might have a conflict of interest, they keep each other in the dark.

In the case of the Cohens, for instance, we avoid conflicts of interest simply by not discussing them. If my wife's television network is working on a story that either I or my employer would kill for, I would be the last to know about it. The same holds for me. This is done because our marriage comes first. The chances of a two-career marriage surviving, always slim nowadays, can only be enhanced if career conflicts are kept to a minimum and the two careers are kept as separate as possible.

Nevertheless, over the years two-career couples have always been on the usual list of suspects whenever a corporate secret leaks out. Lovers or mere friends are never suspected — always married couples who have the most to lose by indiscretion. Once, an editor lied to me about a story in progress. I think he feared that I would tell my wife. (His name will remain a secret until Ferraro becomes president, and then I will recommend him for deportation.)

Anyone who's involved in a two-career marriage has to admit that sometimes they are not easy. Things can get complicated for the couple and for the people they work for. It was certainly a far easier era for executives when they could transfer an employee and not have to worry about a spouse. Will he or she be happy and (often more to the point) will he or she wind up as a competitor?

There are no simple formulas for these situations. Just about all that can be said is that these couples are the wave of the future and that they know better than the people who employ them that career conflicts can tear asunder what God has put together. In fact, they — we! — know something that American business does not: Our rules are a lot stricter than theirs. We have more to lose.

So here's to Ferraro-Zaccaro and to Mondale for choosing a career woman for his ticket. In November, they might lose. But simply because they made the race, some of us will win. The ultimate secret of the two-career bedroom is out: There are secrets after all.

Reagan and religion: Recipe for re-election

Religious Right won't let adversaries set terms of its political participation

WASHINGTON — The nation's liberal establishment was badly shaken by the Dallas Convention. Badly shaken by the militancy, the fervor and the strength of the alliance cemented there between Reagan's Republican Party — and the traditionalists and fundamentalists of the Protestant, Catholic and Jewish faiths.

All that keening and caterwauling that followed Reagan's address to the ecumenical breakfast Thursday morning are not marks of a self-confident elite. "It is time for religious leaders of all faiths to demand that it be stopped," cried Reform Rabbi David Saperstein, and Rev. Charles Bergstrom of the Lutheran Council. Reagan's speech contributes an abuse on high office, a "trespass into the moral realm," a "civic sin," declared The New York Times. One had thought the presidency, as FDR put it, was pre-eminently "a place of moral leadership."

What exactly did the president say? Basically, his address was an elaboration and documentation of Orestes Brownson's observation of more than a century ago: "The United States have a religious as well as political destiny, for religion and politics go together ... church and state, as governments, are separate indeed, but the principles on which the state is founded have their origin and ground in the spiritual order, in the principles revealed or affirmed by religion, and are inseparable from them."

Reagan's address was not only nicely crafted and well-delivered, it was timely; it hit upon a theme he should continue pounding throughout this campaign and beyond: It is an act of "intolerance," of bigotry, for our Lords Spiritual to impose a form of second-class citizenship upon those Americans who derive their ideas of a Just and Good Society out of the Old and New Testaments rather than from Rachel Carson or Betty Freidan.

If it is right for environmentalists, feminists, socialists, supply-siders, vegetarians, libertarians to organize among themselves to elect or defeat those who favor or oppose their vision of the Good Society, why is it wrong for conservative Christians or Jews to do the same thing?

What the Times and others seem to be saying to these conservative Americans is this: You may teach and preach and practice your precepts inside your churches and schools and synagogues; but stay out of the public square — because the political arena is no place for values, beliefs, ideals and ideas grounded in a religious faith. The political market place in a free society must be open to those who preach the gospel of Marx and Lenin, but don't come in hero spouting Mark and Luke — because you have no business here.

What the Religious Right was saying in Dallas is that it will no longer permit its adversaries of the trendy and secular Left to set the terms for its participation in the political debate.

Christians are under no more obligation to accept as given and unalterable the status quo, 1984 — where school prayer is outlawed and abortion and pornography are constitutionally protected — than the Left was to accept the status quo, 1954 — when prayer and religious observance were commonplace in public schools, and pornography and abortion were vices and crimes. The New Morality, having displaced the tenets of the Old Time Religion in much of American law, is trying to play Established Church. The claim is fraudulent.

The question at issue in this election is not whether somebody's moral precepts should be imposed upon society but "whose."

The potential rewards of this alliance are enormous. In 1976, Jimmy Carter, a self-professed "Born Again" Christian, carried 10 of 11 Southern states against Gerald Ford, and the presidency. In 1980, that Southern Evangelical and fundamentalist vote shifted back to the Republicans and Carter lost 10 of 11 Southern states, and the nation. The same thing occurred in the socially conservative Catholic precincts of the Northeast and Middle West, where Democrats abandoned their own party because they thought their own party abandoned their most basic beliefs — to court radicals and trends and weirdos.

If the Republicans will advance themselves as the party of traditional religious values and beliefs — with the Democrats depicted as partial to the experimental, the radical and the trendy — a lock on the presidency is possible. This is what the wailing is all about.

WATCH ON WASTE: Federal investigators have found that the government spends far too much on various payroll systems to pay its civilian employees. At last count these systems totaled 75.

Many agencies were found to be operating more than one system. The costs varied from $52 to $374 per worker. A recent report suggests that the government could save at least $10.8 million a year if it reformed its network of payroll systems.

1933 Packard which once belonged to Clark Gable upholds elegance in automobiles. The poster car for the Newport Beach Concours d'Elegance on Oct. 7 in Aldrich Park at UC Irvine is one of 30 owned by Nancy and Byron Tarnutzer.

Flair for elegance keeps life in high gear

Martha Fluor of Newport Beach, wife of J. Robert Fluor II and mother of Douglass, 8; Allyson, 6; Anne Marie, 5; Maggie, 3, and Andrew, 1, still finds time to devote to volunteer activities.

For Junior League of Newport Harbor she is computer committee chairman, serves on the nominating committee and has been a director and executive committee member, finance/treasurer and business support chairman of the Christmas Company. As a KOCE Foundation member she chairs its nominating committee.

Fluor, who received her BA degree and did post-graduate work at San Diego State University, taught the learning disabled in the Orange Unified School District and now works with the Exploratory Learning Center as chairman of the marketing committee.

Still another interest is the Assessment and Treatment Services Center, a private, non-profit diversion program aimed at providing a positive alternative to the juvenile justice system for police and youth offenders who come in contact with them.

Fluor serves as an ATSC director and on the committee for the Sept. 15 party at Saks Fifth Avenue, South Coast Plaza, being staged as a kickoff for the second Newport Beach Concours d'Elegance planned Oct. 7 as an ATSC benefit.

The black tie-optional cocktail party will feature Adolfo's fall collection, presented by Billur Wallerich, fashion director. Three hundred are expected to attend the glamorous event. Others on the committee are Karen Betson, Francie Carver, Mary Johnson, Olivia Johnson, Diane Knight, Hedda Marosi, Ginny Smallwood, Nancy Tarnutzer, Shirley Wilson, Susan Wilson, Lorie Warmington and Catherine Thyen, chairman of the Concours.

The Newport Beach Concours d'Elegance to be staged in Aldrich Park at UC Irvine, is the final stop on this season's national concours circuit.

Some of the most exquisite automobiles in the world will be among the more than 100 vintage, classic and sports cars on display for public showing and competitive judging.

Many of the entries are ones not often shown on the circuit. Top field cars to be exhibited include pre-war Bentleys and Rolls-Royces as well as examples of post-war European coach work. Admission is $8 per person from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Last year's event, also under the chairmanship of Catherine Thyen, raised more than $16,000 for ATSC programs.

An underwriter campaign was launched at a recent breakfast at the Pacific Club with support coming from corporate and individual donations including the Irvine Co., Saks Fifth Avenue, Dynamic Visuals, Inc., Charlie and Nora Hester, Byron and Nancy Tarnutzer, Mrs. John Porter, Delane and Catherine Thyen, Ernie and Shirley Wilson, the Michael Toomeys, Dr. and Mrs. Noel Drury, the Argyros Foundation, E. G. Warmington, the Garry Concannons, Scott and Susan Jackson, Messrs. and Mmes. Howard Richardson, Roy Carver Jr., Roy Carver III, Henry Braun, Ernie Schroeder, Jim Muller and George Dashiell, John and Trish O'Donnell and Dr. and Mrs. John Applegate.

Follow lines to luxury

Adolfo's fall suits are lush, longer with alluring mink

"Elegance" is the primary concern of a Concours and the same word can be used equally well to describe the fashions in Adolfo's fall collection.

By day the look starts with a skirt that's longer, in trim knit suits injected with colors like a kelly green, fuchsia or yellow wool suit with a double-breasted cardigan jacket and a black bow.

Adolfo brings back the turtleneck sweater in black rib-knit worn with a striped silk jacquard kilt skirt and matching shawl and jeweled belt.

Rich black mink adds allure to a sophisticated cocktail suit with a burgundy wool plaid, seven-eighth length coat, matching slim skirt and a feminine pink jacquard blouse with a self scarf.

For evening there is opulence in the way of lush fabrics such as panne velvet and velvet lame. The beauty is enhanced by the attention to detail, seen in a striped, soft lame long skirt in shades of garnet, brown, rust and gold, with a matching hand-sequined knit jacket, flowing chiffon scarf and smoky topaz rhinestone belt.

Adolfo shows black for evening, too, in silk charmeuse pajamas and full skirts often accented with bright tops in fuchsia, cobalt and silver.

The fashions are classic, elegant and diverse...like premium automobiles.

Adolfo's black, green and gold embroidered ribbon jacket tops a gold lame wrap blouse and matching lame pleated skirt with a tri-color buckle belt.

The turtleneck makes a comeback for fall in black rib knit paired with a red, black and tile striped jacquard kilt skirt, matching jacquard scarf and multi-tone rhinestone belt.

Hand-sequined, garnet wool kallmousse cardigan with gold and smoked topaz trim is worn with this garnet, brown and rust striped lame skirt with a brown chiffon scarf.

Nails splitting? File away these beauty tips

Manicurist for first lady opens Corona del Mar salon

"Nails don't break in the middle. They break on the sides. So why cover up the entire nail tip with fibers?" asked Jessica Vartoughian.

"If a nail is weak you can apply the fibers on the sides and angle them down. That's where it needs to be reinforced," she said as we sat in her new Jessica Nail Clinic on Coast Highway in Corona del Mar.

Continuing with her opinions on fiber (paper) wrapping she added, "It makes the nails look thick. They are heavier on the ends and with that weight they break where the paper ends."

Checking out my nails (wrapped with paper to the nail base) she noted a couple of small breaks at the sides where the polish was beginning to chip and attributed both conditions to the wrapping method.

Jessica, who has five other nail clinics in the U.S., has very definite ideas about how nails should be cared for, although she has only one fairly regular client at this time — Nancy Reagan. She does her nails when the first lady is in Los Angeles or when she (Jessica) is in Washington. "I consider it an honor to do her nails," she says, smiling.

But, the Rumanian native paid her dues to nail care working in a department store for years after emigrating to the U.S. before taking a big step in 1969. She opened a Beverly Hills salon devoted exclusively to manicures and pedicures that attracted a list of celebrated clients including Morgan Fairchild, Linda Gray, Betsy Bloomington and Anne Douglas (wife of Kirk).

Now, she trains technicians to carry on her definite ideas on nail care in Upland and Corona del Mar, El Paso and Houston, Chicago and Columbus, Ohio. "They are called technicians, not manicurists. They educate men and women on how to care for their nails," Jessica explained, adding that there's more to a manicure than applying polish. (Before working on a client in one of her clinics, a technician must go through three months of training to learn her methods).

Her method is strong on cleaning. "How long do most manicurists spend cleaning nails? Maybe 10 minutes? They should spend at least 20 minutes cleaning and examining the nails to determine their condition (dry, brittle or normal) and the type of products to use."

Do's & don'ts

Jessica Vartoughian, who is writing a book on nail care to supplement the international sale of her beauty products, offers these basic tips for personal grooming of hands. For best results:

- Always treat your nails as if they have wet polish on them.
- Exercise fingers to help circulation and nail growth.
- Wear cotton-lined gloves while doing household chores or gardening.
- File nails with the fine side of an emery board. Metal files can create splitting.
- And, she advises, for lovely looking hands, to avoid:
 - Using nails as tools to open letters or boxes. Learn to use the pads for typing and using calculators. Use the eraser end of a pencil for dialing a phone.
 - Doing dishes or shampooing your hair for at least 12 hours after a manicure. Try not to bathe for eight hours.
 - Waiting until the color begins to chip to reapply. Routinely reapply about the fifth or sixth day after a manicure, or whenever one coat shows signs of wear.

A good manicure should last for two weeks with proper care by a client between appointments. That timing eliminates another of Jessica's definite ideas — using polish remover too often.

"Polish remover is drying to the nails," she contends. "When a client comes in, the technician removes the polish. Fingers are not placed in a bowl filled with remover and allowed to soak."

Jessica, in her natural nail pursuit, doesn't approve of acrylic nails or linen wraps claiming they also dry the nail too much.

Another drying factor, she explains, is using cuticle remover. "It's too caustic. I use a cuticle vibrator and instruct clients to use a cuticle cream nightly to take care of cuticle build-up."

So definite is she in her ideas on products, that in 1976 she began the development of her own (created to meet the needs of specific types of nails). Husband Victor, a chemist, and son Bergi joined her in this venture and now the products (the only ones used in her clinics) are marketed in several countries including Canada, Switzerland and Japan.

Her collection includes 33 nail polish colors.

"That is enough colors for a woman to find the ones she likes. A very chic woman knows colors that are best for her and won't use more than three shades, usually changing with the season," says Jessica who stays in touch with color trends by making regular trips to Europe.

At the CdM clinic, managed by Mary Lou Albert, Jessica plans to increase the number of technicians from four to 20 and eventually offer facials, waxing and makeup. Will she develop her own line of makeup?

"No. I will stay with what I know best — nails."

Was chuck wagon fare their best medicine?

Balboa Bay Club Admiralty toasts the end of summer

Red-checked tables dotting six acres, the smoky smells of beef turning on spits and country western music greeted the more than 250 arriving at Collette and Arthur Bartlett's Peralta Hills ranch.

celebrating the second decade of United Western Medical Centers and the WESTMED Gold Club.

Mounds of fruit piled high and tasty barbecued sandwiches were available as snacks for the mostly jeans-clad guests as they chatted on the spacious grounds and awaited the clanging call for the chuck wagon feed.

After the sumptuous feed — beef and chicken (hot off the coals) and all the trimmings including fruit cobbler for dessert, a brief program was held.

Donald Christeson of Corona del Mar was honored for distinguished service as president (for six years) at Santa Ana-Tustin Community and as retiring president (81-84) of United Western Medical Centers. The honoree, unable to attend, was represented by his daughter Kelli, who accepted his plaque. Bartlett moves up from first vice president to chairman and president of the UWMC board.

Jim and Sharon Henwood of Irvine were there. He is general chairman of FUNDSY, the Oct. 27 fund-raising dinner and auction at WestMed, Santa Ana, and during the program had the opportunity to try out his "Howdy" greeting on the folks. (He's a New York boy who picked up his accent at school in Oklahoma).

Others there included members of the medical staff who were given recognition plaques as they departed the ranch and Zee Allred (a Tustin resident in the midst of plans for moving to Harbor Ridge), Doagie Devine, Jeanne and George Shambek (she's on the Gold Club board) and Joleen Parham.

Others on the guest list were and John McDermott and Eric Johnson (of McDermott and Traynor), Jimmie and Jane White, Wayne Schroeder (exec VP of UWMC), Wayne and Patti Brown, and Dr. Hun and Hee-jung Kim.

About 400 showed for the California-casual affair and raised $4,000 for Childrens Hospital of Orange County.

Members and guests were treated to a festive evening of oldies but goodies and surf tunes played by the Jeff Bitetti group, "New Toys", and a wide variety of fare exhibited with spirit by the club staff.

A spirited ceremony was held to inaugurate the new directors headed by President Mark Whitfield. He replaces Tim Salyer who remains on the board with Mary Pat Earl, Bill Anderson, Shields Richardson and Blake Woodward.

New board members are Joyce Caminiti, Robert Harrell, Roger Keating and Ralph Yack. John Wagner is the BBC's appointed liaison for Admiralty activities including the Christmas gala, Kentucky Derby day and quarterly member mixers.

With the help of Hans Prager, owner of The Ritz restaurant, and his staff the chapter has raised more than $125,000 to reduce the building fund at RIO's facility in Orange.

Women's pens puncture chauvinist's ego

DEAR ANN LANDERS: That letter signed "No Chauvinist — Just Honest" made me mad enough to write my first letter to Ann Landers.

First, in an attempt to establish himself as an authority he announces that he has slept with 150 females in 10 years. He then goes on to say European and Asian women are far superior to their American sisters when it comes to sexual performance.

He insists that American women are hung-up about their bodies, have anxieties about breast size and prefer to make love with the lights out. All this he blames on their mid-Victorian mothers — whose inhibitions were passed on from THEIR mid-Victorian mothers.

First of all, if he were as good a lover as he claims, he would not have piled up such a staggering record of bed-hopping. Fifteen women a year is more than one a month. Apparently nobody was interested in staying around.

The truth about sexually-inhibited women is that the problem was not caused by their mothers, but by their husbands, with a hefty assist from the media and advertising. Ads showing big-breasted females in bikinis with gorgeous gams, 21-inch waists, slim hips, hair that bounces and a perfect set of teeth don't make life any easier for the average dame, which most of us are.

I was married to a man I thought was emotionally healthy. Neither of us had had much sexual experience and we were eager to learn together. I soon discovered it wasn't smart to put too much into it. Whenever I did anything slightly imaginative he'd say, "Where did you learn THAT?" When I attempted to say a few words to let him know I appreciated him, he'd say, "Be quiet."

After three years, I decided we would never make it together, so we parted.

I'll bet you get a load of mail from women who would like to paste that creep in the mouth. Print some of it, will you? — HAD MY SAY IN NEW HAMPSHIRE

DEAR N. HAMP: Thanks for your say. It was a good one. You were right about the mail. The creep angered about 4,000 females into writing. Read on.

DEAR ANN: "No Chauvinist" is a nerd. Any man who brags about bedding down 150 women in 10 years is clearly interested in what he can get — not give. With that attitude it's not surprising nobody stood up in bed and applauded. — GREENSBORO, N.C.

DEAR ANN: The nerve of that jerk criticizing American women because they aren't as responsive as their Asian and European sisters. With his proclivity for bookkeeping he is obviously more interested in racking up numbers than in cultivating a meaningful relationship. I'll bet he was a flop in the sack and his American bed partners let him know it, so he ran them down to get even. — BEEN AROUND

DEAR ANN: A man who sleeps with 150 women in 10 years is considered a stud. A woman who runs up such numbers is called a whore. With such unfair labeling is it any wonder there is trouble from the outset? Until the double standard is abolished things aren't going to get any better. — DOLLY FROM MADISON male chauvinist took a royal clobbering in the mail this week and he had it coming. Obviously the man has an ego so large it can be seen only from the air. Today's column should settle his hash.

DEAR DOLL AND ALL OTHERS WHO WROTE: The

Confused about what's right and what's wrong in today's "new morality"? You're not alone. If you want honest, down-to-earth information on your sex questions, read Ann Landers' new booklet, "High School Sex and How to Deal With It — A Guide for Teens and Their Parents." Send 50 cents plus a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Ill. 60611.

DEAR READERS: We have had many requests over the years for those hands we consider to be our favorites. That makes quite a list. For the time being, therefore, we are devoting the Sunday column to a series of famous hands. At the end of the series, we will go back to our weekly question and answer column.

He stood tall and his bearing was regal, as befits the most powerful card in the pack. Yet their was something about his demeanor that showed his pride had been hurt.

"Just awful," he muttered. "In no other country in the world have I been treated in such a manner. To be discarded like an old shoe! He'll

"I was dealt that chap with the walrus mustache — unpleasant fellow. I must admit he bid his hand sensibly, but what he did to me in the play...

"West led a low spade and declarer perforce won the king. Now it would seem a lead up to the queen of clubs, or even a diamond finesse, would be a sensible way to play the hand. But no! Old walrus-face had to go and be clever. He cashed the king and ace of diamonds and continued with the jack. And on this trick he discarded me — just as if I were a lowly deuce!

"East won the queen of diamonds and could do no better than return a spade to his partner's queen. That brought about this position:

"West made his best return of a club. It's better to be lucky than good, and my declarer guessed everything perfectly. He played low from the table and captured East's eight with the nine. Then he continued with a low club to the queen and East's king. Poor East had either to give dummy the lead with a diamond or a spade, or else lead a heart. Even if West held the queen of hearts, declarer could assure himself of an entry to the board simply by playing low. As it was, he made an overtrick because East had the queen.

Right stuff in wrong places

The Olympics have been over for three weeks now.

Los Angeles freeway drivers are once again back to their first language — Yugoslavian. And the promises I made to myself as I sat there in front of my TV set for 180 hours, watching those young, taut, muscular bodies being pushed to the maximum, have gone to that big septic tank in the sky.

I made a resolution during those two weeks that my entire life was going to change. I was going to challenge my body to do things it never thought were possible. Discipline was going to become a way of life. Pain would make me stronger and strengthen my character.

I made a schedule. First, I was going to take all my hand-washables that I had stashed away for the last eight years (and which equal my body weight) and eventually build up to lifting them over my head and holding them there for 30 seconds. Then I was going to run the 26 miles to the shopping center each day, stripped down to a pair of satin shorts, a sleeveless T-shirt and two major charge cards.

I set goals for myself. I knew through conscientious exercise and perseverance I could park in a five-minute unloading zone, sprint 400 yards to a White Sale, get four matching single percales and be back in the car before I was ticketed.

I geared the entire house toward fitness. In each door frame I put two hanging rings so that every time I went through them, I could hang in an iron cross. The clothes hamper had a hoop over it. I kept a stack of the kids' favorite albums and each day I planned to step inside of a circle, spin around until I nearly screwed my body into the ground and throw the album for as many yards as I could toss it.

The fact that none of this has worked out for me is not important. What is crucial here is that up until now I could never figure out why there were four years between each Olympiad. Naive little fool that I am, I thought it took the host country that long to build all the facilities needed for the events.

No, no. It takes four years to find a swim team that has the courage to get into a bathing suit with legs that go all the way up to the armpits.

How easy do you think it is to unearth six girls who can balance themselves on a 4-inch bar and hold in their stomachs at the same time? Or who can guide a horse across an 8-foot bar without ripping her pants.

I'm talking raw courage here. Oh sure, a lot of us have the right stuff. It's just in the wrong places.

Ojai's post office, with its mission-style bell tower, is an architectural landmark and focal point of the downtown area.

Ojai design: View of the past

Quaint community an artist retreat and a resort for recreationists

By DONNA and RAY OTT
Special to the Daily Pilot

In the 1930s, the Ojai Valley first gained prominence when it served as Hollywood's Shangri-La for the movie "Lost Horizon."

Recently, the international spotlight focused on the valley when Lake Casitas, eight miles west of downtown Ojai, served as the site for the Olympic rowing and canoeing events. But whether or not the Olympics are in town, Ojai and its immediate surroundings offer a wide variety of scenery and activities for vacationers.

While Ojai maintains the charm of a small ranch community (about 6,000 population in town; 24,000 in the entire valley), it is also a popular retreat for artists as well as an active resort for recreationists.

As you enter Ojai via Route 150 from Los Angeles, stop first at the Dennison Grade Viewpoint for a spectacular view of the entire valley. A large stone bench marks the spot.

Just as picturesque, from a historical perspective, is a closeup view of downtown Ojai, where much of the architecture reflects the town's early Spanish heritage. The most prominent example is the post office, at the center, with its Spanish bell tower.

Across the street is the arcade, a block-long Spanish-style arched portico sheltering a variety of interesting shops and galleries. This is Ojai's main shopping center and is well worth some browsing time.

Nearby are several other notable examples of early California architecture, including the city hall, library, St. Thomas Aquinas Chapel, and Libbey Park's adobe walls and fountain. All are within walking distance of each other.

Ojai has four city parks plus other recreational sites that provide year-round sports and cultural events.

Libbey Park is the annual setting for the Mexican Fiesta in September, the Ojai Valley Tennis Tournament in April, and the Music Festival in May.

Soule and Sarzotti Parks both have free tennis courts, plus Soule has an 18-hole golf course with greens fees ranging from $6 to $9. Sarzotti Park is the scene every Labor Day weekend for the Ojai-Budweiser Slo-Pitch Softball Tournament.

Fourteen miles east of town is Dennison Park, with tent and trailer campsites and lots of hiking trails in 32 acres of pine and oak trees.

You will also find plentiful hiking, camping, fishing, and horseback riding opportunities throughout the Los Padres National Forest just north of town. The U.S. Forest Service station gives free trails maps, and the Ojai Valley Inn Riding Stables on Hermosa Road rents horses for $7 per hour.

Lake Casitas is reported to be one of the best lakes in America for bass fishing. Ten and 12 pound bass are commonly caught there, and last summer a lucky fisherman brought in a 16-pound catch. Boat and canoe rentals are available at the lakeside, as are 450 campsites, and even an airstrip for model planes.

If you prefer water hot instead of cold, try Matilija Hot Springs, six miles northwest of town. Originally the health spa of the Chumash Indian tribe, it now has hot mineral baths, a swimming pool, snack bar, and picnic area.

The artist colony in Ojai is readily evident in the number of studios, shops, and galleries that carry works by local artists. Drawn by the scenery and tranquility of the valley, artists have found it an attractive setting in which to work.

Local art is on continuous display at the Ojai Valley Art Center, which also sponsors a winter Crafts Festival each December.

About three miles from downtown Ojai is The Pottery, 971 McAndrew Road, which is the home, studio, and gallery of artists Vivika and Otto Heino.

Internationally recognized for their pottery, the Heinos have participated in more than 200 major exhibits and have won many awards. Their gallery, in a peaceful garden setting with a pond and pet peacocks, is open Tuesday through Sunday, 1 to 5 p.m.

The grande dame of Ojai potters, noted ceramist Beatrice Wood, has her studio about four miles east of town, at 8560 Ojai Road. You can spot her driveway by its bright pink mailbox.

Known for her sense of humor, Wood has a posted notice: "Pottery, Reasonable and Unreasonable." Included in her gallery is a room housing her large collection of dolls, furniture, and artifacts from India. Wood's gallery is open daily, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

If you're planning to visit the Ojai Valley for more than a day, there are a number of good accommodations in the moderate price range. Most are air-conditioned and located on the main highway. Resort accommodations are available at the Ojai Valley Inn & Country Club. Also, The Oaks, owned by noted fitness authority Sheila Cluff, is a health resort that has a vacation package of low-calorie meals, lodging, and exercise programs.

Sailboard fans head for gorge

HOOD RIVER, Ore. (AP) — The Beach Boys may not have written any songs about it, but the Columbia Gorge is fast becoming a boom area for surfers from the Northwest and elsewhere.

It's not the sun, surf or California girls that draw them. It's the wind.

Sailboarders — surfers using sails — have discovered a dream come true where the Columbia River cuts through the majestic Cascade Range between Oregon and Washington. Cool temperatures on the west side of the mountains and warm temperatures to the east result in steady winds through the gorge from mid-March to mid-October.

Winds averaging 16 mph year-round coupled with the downstream current of the Columbia allow adventurous souls to zip across the river.

"With the wind blowing from the west and the current going east, you never have to work upwind," says Jack Betty, 28, of Goldendale, Wash. "That's why this spot is becoming one of the best in the United States, if not the world."

On spring and summer weekends, cars from British Columbia, California, Washington, Oregon and Idaho travel on Interstate 84 with sailboards tied on top.

The gorge's popularity has grown as recognition of sailboarding's thrills has thrust the sport into the nation's recreational mainstream. Invented in 1968, sailboarding did not begin to take hold in this country until about 10 years later, with the advent of foot straps and waist harnesses that made it less physically demanding.

Surfers get soaked repeatedly as winds shift or mishaps toss riders into the water.

Despite the apparent risk, however, its proponents say sailboarding rarely results in broken bones or other injuries.

A prospective sailboarder can be outfitted with a good-quality board, reinforced mylar sail and wetsuit for about $1,000.

Sailboard technology is evolving so rapidly that this year's high-performance board may be next year's antique, says Betty, who with his wife, Becky Jo, opened a sailboard shop in a Hood River hotel in April.

An engineering aide at a Boeing Co. wind turbine testing site in Goldendale, Betty started windsurfing after seeing it on a television commercial. Regular gorge surfing trips have turned him into one of the area's top sailboarders.

When his board capsizes in mid-river, Betty quickly recovers by pushing his feet on the board and pulling himself upright as the wind counteracts his weight.

Quiet charm of Cambria worth discovering

About five minutes south of Hearst Castle, the small town of Cambria, with its stately pines and panoramic ocean views, provides a scenic gas-saver get-away vacation.

"Because Cambria lies off the main highway — SRI — it's often missed by coastal travelers," said Joni Hunt, Auto Club travel editor. "But time spent discovering this town's beautiful setting and quiet charm is well rewarded."

Any tour of the town should begin with a walk down Main Street, which runs through Cambria's distinct East and West Villages. Art galleries, antique stores and handcrafted items, many fashioned by local residents, line this thoroughfare.

Main Street in West Village houses such diverse shops as "The Soldier Factory," well known for its pewter figurines, and "Heart's Ease," specializing in dried flowers and herbs. Also there's the Pinedorado grounds, site of the annual Labor Day parade and fair. Pinedorado claims two historic buildings — a very small jailhouse built in 1884 and a schoolhouse constructed in 1886 — as well as a lighthouse beacon dating to 1850. The Allied Arts Schoolhouse Gallery now occupies the school; it's open daily from noon to 3:30 p.m.

North of Main on Hillcrest Street stands a private residence known as Nit Wit Ridge. Over the past 40 years its owner has incorporated a variety of materials into its construction, including shells, car parts and bottles.

About a mile southeast of West Village is East Village, also known as Old Town. It was originally developed in 1866 and over the next 20 years became a center for shipping and commerce. The lumbering and whaling enterprises of that era have been replaced by businesses, specialty shops and restaurants. Across the street is a converted home, originally built in 1874 and since enlarged, accommodates "The Brambles Dinner House."

A drive through Cambria's celebrated pines on the ocean side of SRI reveals homes built in a variety of architectural styles. Along the shore, Moonstone Beach Drive offers motels and restaurants with scenic ocean views.

This street also provides access to Shamel County Park, where beachcombers may find jasper, petrified wood, quartz, agate and a low-grade jade. Vacationers also will find picnic grounds, barbecues, a playground and a swimming pool. The park is open during the summer Wednesday through Sunday from noon to 4 p.m.

Also off Moonstone Beach Drive is Leffingwell Landing, a state day-use park. Along with picnic areas, braziers and a boat launch, the park provides views of whales during their winter migration and sea otters throughout the year. Tide pools in the park are especially good for observation.

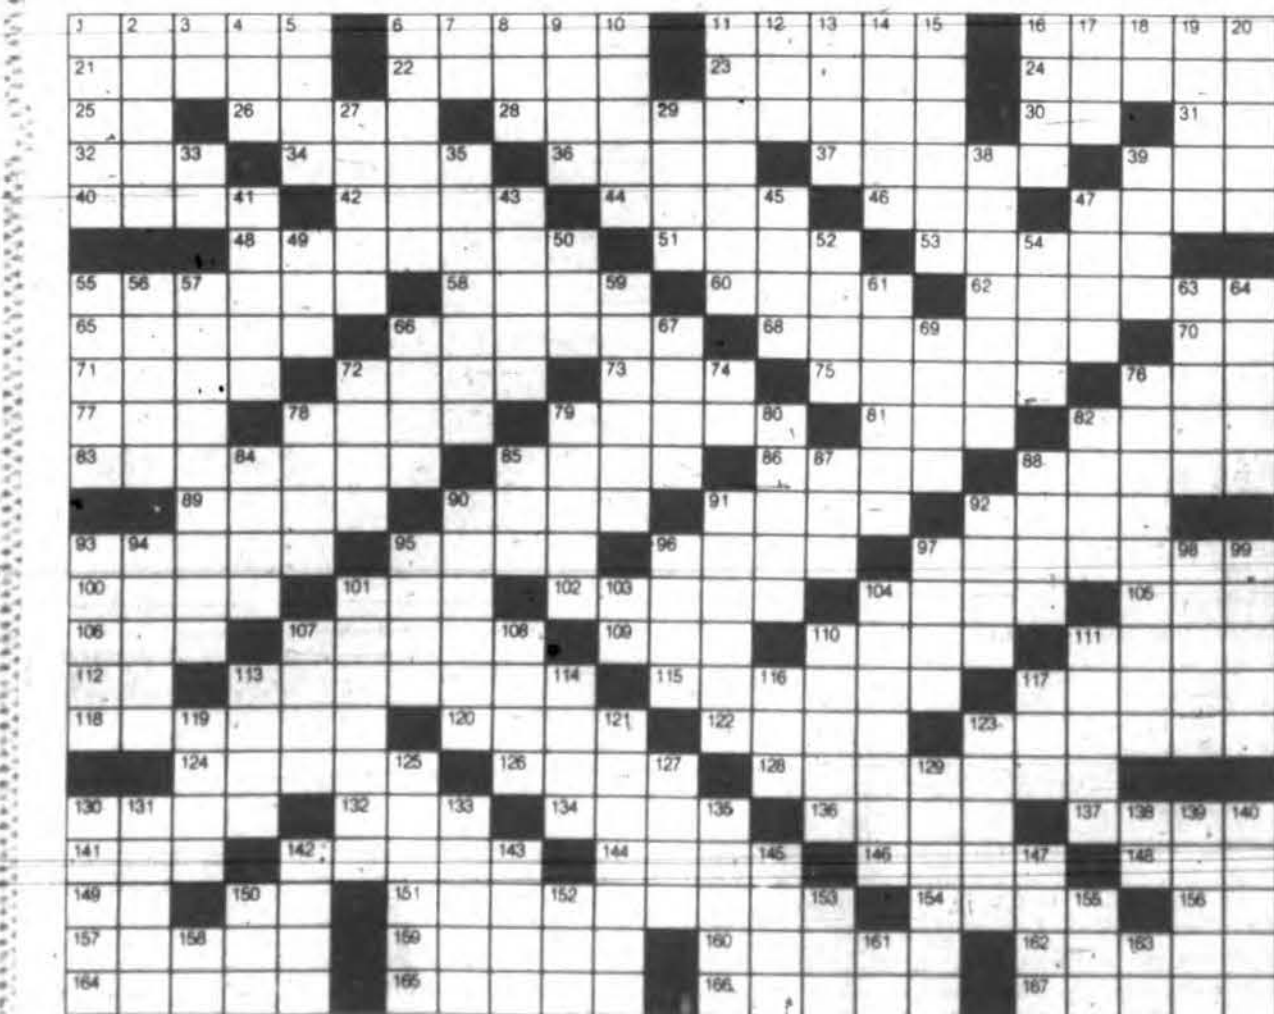

Located three miles north of Cambria, just off SRI on the inland side, is San Simeon State Beach, with more than 130 tent and recreational vehicle sites. Facilities include picnic grounds and fire rings, but there are no RV hookups or showers. Tide pools in the area are for observation only.

About four miles farther up the coast, the William Randolph Hearst Memorial State Beach, open for day use and picnicking, affords travelers a distant view of Hearst Castle.

For additional information on Cambria, call the Chamber of Commerce at (805) 927-3624 between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. daily, or write 767 Main St., Cambria 93428.

INTERMISSION

New season under way for local theater groups

It's a new season this week and two local community theaters will greet it with a pair of comedies which haven't yet been seen by Orange County audiences.

The new arrivals, which officially kick off the 1984-85 campaign, are "The Farmer's Daughter" at the Huntington Beach Playhouse and "A Tomb With a View" at the Westminster Community Theater. Both open Friday, "Farmer" for six weeks and "Tomb" for five.

Phil de Barros is directing "Farmer's Daughter," a stage adaptation of the movie comedy which won Loretta Young an Oscar in 1948. Jini Aman and Ed Hayes take the leading roles, with Charles Taylor, Alene Hyatt, Kathleen Mahoney and Jack Willenbacher in featured assignments.

Rounding out the cast are Manny and Ruth Siegal, Stan Scott and

Tom Titus

Ernest Brownie. Performances will be given Fridays and Saturdays at 8:30 (with a pair of Sunday matinees at 2:30 Sept. 23 and 30) through Oct. 13 at the playhouse, Main Street at Yorktown Avenue in the Seacrest Village shopping center. Call 832-1405 for ticket information.

Meanwhile, the British comedy "Tomb With a View" goes on the boards at Westminster under the direction of Aida Grigsby. Lorraine McWilliams, Mitchell Nunn, Bonnie Hurd, Jo Scott and Don Barrett are featured.

Completing the company are J. Mann, Renee Seldon, T. Bradshaw Yates and Caroline Shepherd. The show runs Fridays and Saturdays at 8:30 through Oct. 6 at the Westminster theater, 7272 Maple St., and reservations are available at 995-4113.

While the season is opening for these two shows, others are ringing down their curtains this weekend. They include:

"Lavender Follies" at Sebastian's West Dinner Playhouse, 140 Ave. Pico, San Clemente (492-9950), closing performances Wednesday through Saturday at 8 p.m. and Sunday at 1 and 7 p.m.

"Anything Goes" aboard the Pilgrim II in Dana Point Harbor (751-1344), completing its summer-long run with final performances Thursday and Friday at 9, Saturday and Sunday at 7 and 9.

"The Comedy of Errors" at the Gem Theater, 12852 Main St., Garden Grove (636-7213), windup performances Wednesday through Saturday at 8 p.m., Sunday at 7:30.

Four musical comedies continue their respective engagements around the county. They are:

"Barnum" at the Newport Theater Arts Center, 2501 Cliff Drive, Newport Beach (631-0288), Fridays and Saturdays at 8 p.m. through Oct. 13.

"The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas" at the Harlequin Dinner Playhouse, 3503 S. Harbor Blvd., Santa Ana (979-5511), nightly except Mondays at varying curtain times through Sept. 23.

"Boffola" at the Grand Dinner Theater, 7 Freedman Way, Anaheim (772-7710), nightly except Mondays at varying curtain times through Oct. 28.

"Anything Goes" at the Curtin Call Dinner Theater, 690 El Camino Real, Tustin (838-1540).

Bianca Jagger wants different acting roles

By JERRY BUCK

AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES — Actress Bianca Jagger, darling of the jet set and former wife of the Rolling Stones' Mick Jagger, says she'd really prefer a role as a "sweet girl" instead of always being cast as the femme fatale.

"Well, actually, I usually play women who have a cool side and a childlike side," she says, nibbling at a crust of bread on her plate. "In 'Success' the lady prosecutor I played was tough and cold. Then she falls in love and reveals her childlike side. In 'Flesh Color' I'm a Mafia leader, then I fall in love and reveal the other side."

Jagger, who divides her time between living in this country and other parts of the world, also says she'd like to do comedy. "I'd like to do more American television — if it's good. I'd love to do a series."

She makes her first American TV appearance in an episode of the ABC fall series "Streethawk," which stars recording star Rex Smith as a motorcycle police officer turned government agent. Once again, she is the femme fatale.

"I'm a lady heavy," she says, "the wife of a deposed Latin American dictator. She has a lot of henchmen, so she doesn't dirty her hands. She wants to take back her country and becomes involved with mercenaries."

Jagger, a native of Nicaragua and a one-time political science student in Paris, says: "I do a lot of political work in Central America. To a certain extent my role as Simone Prevera is political, but it's really more of an adventure."

She left Nicaragua when she was 16 and went to Paris to study at the Institute of Political Science. She was born Bianca Theresa Perez Mora de Macia and changed her name to Bianca when she was in Paris. She says, "Bianca is white in Spanish but I thought it was too formal, so I chose the Italian version. It's a name, incidentally, that Shakespeare used in 'Othello' and 'The Taming of the Shrew.'"

"My father was a well-to-do businessman," she says. "I'm not really a member of the oligarchy. My father was never political, but some members of my family were. An uncle on my father's side was ambassador to Cuba during Batista's regime. On my mother's side someone was an ambassador to Bonn."

REVIEW

'Brighton Beach Memoirs' shows Neil Simon's genius

By CHRIS CRAWFORD
Daily Pilot Correspondent

The creative genius of Neil Simon is once again gracing the Los Angeles stage scene with "Brighton Beach Memoirs" at the Wilshire Theatre.

Simon's autobiographical play about family life in Depression-era America made its debut two seasons ago at Los Angeles' Ahmanson Theatre, and then went on to Broadway where it received two 1983 "best play" awards (N.Y. Drama Critics and N.Y. Outer Critics) while director Gene Saks won the 1983 Tony Award for best director.

After completing a 15-city itinerary, the touring production has returned for a four-week run.

So, for theatre-goers who missed it the first time around or who want to enjoy it a second time, there is another opportunity to experience the comedy/drama that is destined to become another classic in the long line of successes from the playwright whose pen never seems to run dry.

An incredibly prolific writer, Simon has had a regular, almost yearly, succession of hit comedies and musicals beginning with "Come Blow Your Horn" in 1961 and followed by "Barefoot in the Park," "The Odd Couple," "They're Playing Our Song," plus many others.

In his current hit, Simon takes perhaps his most serious look yet at human relationships. Still, as a balance for the earnest, sometimes painful, and often touching moments, he blends in an equal amount of the traditional Simon wit and humor so characteristic of the playwright at his comedic best.

Simon's opportunities for delivering comedy along with conflict are boundless as he presents two intermingled families trying to co-exist in the same household.

Set in 1930s New York, "Brighton Beach" is Simon's memory of himself as a young teenager struggling to grow up in an extended family consisting not only of parents and brother but also widowed aunt and two female cousins.

Young Simon (renamed Eugene) is played to perfection by Jonathan Silverman, a Beverly Hills teen who made his Broadway debut in this role. Silverman is totally convincing as the comically-pubescent Jewish youth who is simultaneously trying to deal with his adolescent hormones (including a frustrated lusting after cousin Nora) and with his position as second son.

His mother Kate, for whom woman's work is never done, is realistically played by Broadway and TV actress Joan Copeland. Coincidentally, Copeland's most recent work prior to this production, was as her own real-life Jewish mother (in her brother Arthur Miller's "The American Clock").

Mark Nelson (Stanley) persuasively shoulders the responsibilities that come with being eldest son, and warmly portrays a young man who has the deepest respect and love for his father. As another casting coincidence, Nelson began his acting career in Brighton Beach community theatre.

New York actor Charles Cioffi as Jack, the father, effectively plays a strong but loving head of the large household who is the continuing source of family strength for the various crises that arise.

New York actress Barbara Caruso (Blanche) impressively conveys the widowed sister/mother who moves towards more independence and self-respect, as she resolves her emotional conflicts with her sister and her eldest daughter, Nora (Wendy Gazelle). Both Gazelle and Erin Leigh Peck (as younger sister Laurie) realistically evoke the same sibling rivalry that also exists between mother and aunt.

In "Brighton Beach Memoirs," Simon delivers a wonderfully warm and humorous slice of life from his childhood, probably similar in many ways to other depression-era childhoods.

Ultimately, however, he gives us Everyfamily, as it universally exists, with all of the attendant love, sorrow, joy, and pain that are inevitable part of family relationships.

"Brighton Beach Memoirs" continues at the Wilshire Theatre, 8440 Wilshire Blvd., Los Angeles with performances at 8 p.m. Tuesdays-Saturdays, 7:30 p.m. Sunday and matinees at 2 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

Edinburgh a theater-goer's dream

By MATT WOLF
Associated Press Writer

EDINBURGH, Scotland — The world's "most ardent theatergoer," drama professor Gerald Berkowitz, who set a record here in 1979, is back at the 38th annual Edinburgh International Arts Festival seeing as many shows as possible in three weeks. In 1979, Berkowitz saw 145 shows at the festival, and was cited several years running in the British edition of The Guinness Book of World Records as the world's most ardent theatergoer.

The 42-year-old author of "New Broadways: Theater Across America, 1950-1980," does not expect to beat his record this year, but his enthusiasm for the festival is undimmed.

"I like to think that if there is a special heaven for good theatergoers when they die, then it looks like the Edinburgh Festival," New York-born Berkowitz said in an interview.

Berkowitz is a professor of English and drama at Northern Illinois University in De Kalb, Ill. He attributes his slower pace in the years since 1979 to a "matter of endurance, rather than a lack of enthusiasm."

"The big difference is that I'm getting older," he said. He had planned to see 70 or more than 900 dramatic events at the festival before he left.

"Now, if I'm physically exhausted, I go home," Berkowitz said. "The other night I stopped at 10 p.m. although I could easily have squeezed in two more."

The concentration of dramatic offerings at the festival, easily the world's largest devoted to the arts, is great indeed.

There are official events such as Anne Jackson and Eli Wallach in their Broadway show "Twice Around the Park," and the New York Negro Ensemble Company's production of Charles Fuller's Pulitzer Prize-winning "A Soldier's Play."

These compete for audience attention with some 830 "fringe" events — unofficial performances of plays, cabaret and dance that start at 10 a.m. and end around 2 a.m. next day.

"I try to cover all the theaters and my rate so far is fractionally better than five a day," Berkowitz said.

"I don't deliberately choose the short ones," he continued because it's possible to see 20 of the shorter productions in 24 hours.

Moving day for Angels.

They pass Royals and pull within 1½ games of Twins

By RICHARD DUNN
Daily Pilot Correspondent

The Angels had one thing going for them before they even arrived at the ballpark Saturday night.

After learning that Minnesota had fallen again hours earlier in Toronto, the Angels knew they had an opportunity to climb closer in the American League West. And, when Kansas City later fell to Chicago, second place was there for the taking.

So, before 40,077 at Anaheim Stadium, the Angels took advantage and pulled within 1½ games of the Twins, moved into second place in the AL West and won their third straight come-from-behind victory. It wasn't easy, but the Angels pinned an 11-6 defeat on the New York Yankees.

It was also the Angels' fourth win in a row, the first time they've accomplished that in a month.

Starter Geoff Zahn, coming off arthroscopic knee surgery, returned with a performance good enough to solve some still-unanswered questions about the team's pitching staff. Rod Carew, playing for the first time since Aug. 7 because of a pinched nerve in his neck, delivered a key hit in the Angels' five-run eighth inning. And Rick Burleson, who hadn't played since Sept. 8 of last year, laid down a perfect pinch-hit sacrifice bunt in the eighth.

Yankee starter Phil Niekro's knuckleball began dancing its way out of the strike zone in the seventh as he walked two batters, the second of which — a two-out walk to Carew — proved damaging.

Manager Yogi Berra called upon reliever Dave Righetti who promptly walked Fred Lynn, setting the stage for Doug DeCinces' two-run double that gave the Angels a 6-5 lead.

Carrying the go-ahead run, Lynn made it close, running through third base coach Preston Gomez's stop sign and barely beating the relay by sliding

Martina, Lloyd overpower foes

Lendl also romps, but several seeds upset at U.S. Open

NEW YORK (AP) — Martina Navratilova and Chris Evert Lloyd continued their collision course Saturday, easily advancing into the fourth round of the U.S. Open Tennis Championships.

Czechoslovakia's Ivan Lendl, who has lost in the men's singles final in each of the last two years, also cruised past his third-round opponent, but several seeds were ousted on the hardcourts at the National Tennis Center in Flushing Meadow.

Eighth-seeded Aaron Krickstein, the 17-year-old who reached the fourth round here a year ago, was eliminated in a night match by Greg Holmes, the 1983 NCAA champion, 6-1, 4-6, 6-2, 7-6, and Tim Mayotte of Springfield, Mass., upset 10th-seeded Eliot Teltscher, 6-4, 6-3, 6-4 in men's play, while West Germany's Sylvia Hanika knocked out No. 7 Zina Garrison, 6-3, 6-2, and Austria's Petra Huber ousted No. 16 Andrea Temesvari of Hungary, 6-1, 6-4, in the women's singles.

Navratilova crushed South Africa's Jennifer Mundel, 6-0, 6-0, and Lloyd cruised past Bettina Bunge of West Germany, 6-1, 6-3.

After a devastating 35-minute appearance, raising her 1984 match record to 55-1 and her consecutive winning streak to 51 matches, Navratilova said: "I feel I can get a lot better."

Mundel was outclassed in every phase of the game, winning 16 points in the first set and only four in the second.

"She wasn't pressing me on her serves, so I was able to do what I wanted," admitted Navratilova, who is seeking her second straight U.S. Open title and her sixth consecutive Grand Slam singles victory.

Lloyd, a six-time U.S. Open champion, took one hour to dispatch Bunge, who has yet to return to the form she displayed before an ear operation last year.

"It's a little bit windy out there — very windy, very, very windy," Lloyd said. "I don't think that she's a good wind player because she hits with so much spin — topspin and slices. It's easier if you hit more of a flat ball. So I just played the wind better."

Brown, 19, played a baseline game against Lendl, who probably is the best baseliner in the game today. The Czech's powerful serve and ferocious forehand were too much for Brown, who is ranked 107th in the world.

Gerulaitis, on the other hand, had to scramble to get past his third-round foe.

"It was pretty easy until 3-2 in the third (set) and I just kind of ran out of steam," Gerulaitis said. "I didn't have too much time for breakfast this morning and I just went flat."

"They brought me a fruit cup on the court and I felt better. It was a little late for the tie-breaker, but I felt OK by then."

"I played two bad points and went to the fifth set. You cannot dwell on what you have done wrong. You hang in there for the next set."

Ranked 14th in the world on the ATP computer, Gerulaitis is having his best U.S. Open since he reached the semifinals in 1981.

"I think that I played one of the best matches I've ever played," said Mayotte, a semifinalist at Wimbledon in 1982.

Sweden's Mats Wilander sticks out his tongue as he follows through on backhand shot at U.S. Open Saturday.

Australian capital bracing for invasion

A million visitors expected to visit Perth for America's Cup challenge in 1986-87

PERTH, Western Australia (AP) — Until a white-green-and-gold 12-meter yacht called Australia II — the wonder from Down Under with the winged keel — sailed off with the 132-year-old America's Cup last year, few had ever heard of Perth, capital of Australia's huge state of Western Australia.

Today, the city of 900,000, which nestles on the banks of the Swan River, is preparing to play host to an estimated one million visitors during the southern summer of 1986-87.

The 26th defense of yachting's most prestigious trophy will be at least three times bigger than any previous challenge since the schooner America won the cup in a race against the British around the Isle of Wight in 1851.

When the Royal Perth Yacht Club syndicate headed by multi-millionaire Alan Bond won the cup, it broke the New York Yacht Club's stranglehold on the Auld Mug, as it is known to yachtsmen.

It was the first time the club had been defeated, and now yacht clubs around the world sense that the trophy is up for grabs.

Twenty-four foreign syndicates, including 10 from the United States, have paid $10,000 each to challenge. That is four times as many challengers as ever before, although cup organizers believe five or six challengers might drop out.

There are also nine Australian syndicates vying for the defender's role, since Bond's victory does not give him the automatic right to defend the cup.

The Royal Perth Yacht Club, which has previously organized only local regattas, faces a massive job in planning and running the challenge series, almost as big as running the Olympic Games, says state minister Des Dams, who has been appointed to coordinate the event.

The West Australian Tourism Commission estimates the cup challenge could generate $1.5 billion in revenue for the city, built on the Indian Ocean coast of Australia. The commission estimates there will be 375,000 foreign visitors in Perth for the cup and double that from elsewhere in Australia.

Raiders shoot for Moon in Houston

Super Bowl champs open title defense against Oilers today

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oilers quarterback Warren Moon will try to prove he can play in the National Football League and the Los Angeles Raiders will try to disprove the myth about the difficulty defending a Super Bowl title when the two teams open the regular season today.

Kickoff is at 1 p.m. in the Astrodome and the game will be televised locally on Channel 4.

Moon, the $6 million man from the Canadian Football League, has survived all previous milestones in his rookie season in the NFL but he's still anxious to get the regular season under way.

"The adrenalin will be flowing a little more because it is the first regular season game," said Moon, who led Edmonton to five CFL titles before signing with the Oilers. "I'm pretty familiar with the offense, that's been my main concern. But as long as I know where everyone is supposed to be, then I'm all right."

Los Angeles Coach Tom Flores recalls the Raiders' 1980 Super Bowl season and the lackluster 7-9 1981 season that followed.

He doesn't expect it to happen again.

"We intend to go out and have a good season and destroy the myth that occurs around the world as to how it's almost impossible to repeat," Flores said.

Although the Raiders finished with preseason schedule with a 1-3 record, Flores doesn't think the Raiders are gearing themselves for another 1981 lapse.

"I don't think we can be overconfident, we've won only one preseason game and that was by a narrow margin," Flores said. "But in some ways we are stronger than last year."

The game will match the best with the worst of 1983. While the Raiders were posting a 12-4 regular season record and advancing to a 38-9 victory over Washington in the Super Bowl, the Oilers were rolling to a 2-14 season, tying Tampa Bay for the worst record in the NFL.

The Oilers are hoping to rebound behind a youthful offensive line, Moon and a hearty Earl Campbell, recovering from arthroscopic knee surgery in May.

Gerlach eliminated in surfing

Eight men remain to compete for the championship of the Op Pro Surfing Championship today at Huntington Beach Pier following Saturday's round of competition, but Brad Gerlach of Huntington Beach is not among them.

Gerlach, who upset highly-regarded Terry Richardson of Australia on Friday, was defeated by Dave Parmenter of Cayucos in the first heat of Saturday's competition.

Meanwhile, it was a good day for Hawaiian surfers as brother Derek and Michael Ho were eliminated by Willie Morris (Woodland Hills) and the event's defending champion Tom Curren (Santa Barbara), respectively. Also, Hawaiian Hans Hedemann was beaten by Glen Winton of Australia.

Jimmy Hogan of San Clemente lost by default to South African Mark Potter when Hogan arrived late and missed his heat.

In the top upset of the day, Mark Occhilupo, currently ranked No. 1 in the Association of Surfing Professionals standings, was ousted by Wes Lane of Virginia Beach.

Other to advance were Mike Lambres of Carlsbad and Australian Shane Horan (who won the event two years ago).

On the women's side, defending champion Kim Mearig of Santa Barbara knocked off Sherry Gross of Hawaii.

Winslow may quit after game

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Charger tight end Kellen Winslow will retire after San Diego's opening game today against Minnesota because negotiations failed to get the highly regarded player a $500,000 annual salary increase, a newspaper reported.

The highly-regarded Winslow decided to quit after he failed in attempts to get his contract renegotiated. The San Diego Union reported.

The newspaper said negotiations between Winslow's agent, Jim Steiner, and Charger officials broke down Friday after nearly a week of bargaining.

Marshall delivers in an unusual role

His pinch single helps Dodgers halt losing streak, 4-3

MONTREAL (AP) — Pinch-hitting isn't something Mike Marshall wants to do every day.

"It's very tough; I wouldn't want to make a living out of it," Marshall said after coming off the bench in the eighth inning Saturday to deliver a one-out, pinch-hit single, driving in Rafael Landestoy with the winning run in a 4-3 triumph over Montreal Expos.

The victory ended a six-game losing streak for the Dodgers.

Dodgers Manager Tom Lasorda said he decided to sit Marshall down because he has been struggling lately.

"I came to the park thinking I was going to play," said Marshall, who batted for shortstop Dave Anderson. "I don't know what to say."

"I'm not going to say anything because Tom has been good to me. He's stuck with me through good times and bad."

Mike Scioscia opened the eighth by walking against starter Charlie Lea. Scioscia was replaced by pinch-runner Landestoy, who advanced to second on a sacrifice bunt before Marshall muscled a pitch just over the infield, into right field.

"I wanted to pitch him up and in, and that's what I did," said Lea. "He just fisted it."

"That's the way things have been going for me in the second half, but they'll turn around."

Fernando Valenzuela, 11-15, scattered 10 hits while pitching into the ninth. He also stroked his second homer to tie the game 1-1 in the third.

The left-hander struck out five, walked five and stranded 10 runners, including three in the fifth.

Ken Howell got the last three outs for his fifth save. He stranded the tying run at third.

The Dodgers, after falling behind 3-1 on Andre Dawson's 13th home run in the third, tied it in the fourth. Scioscia singled home Pedro Guerrero, who had doubled, and Scioscia, after stealing second base, scored on Anderson's single.

The Expos scored a first-inning run when Gary Carter singled for his league-leading 96th RBI.

Mariners' ship has new captain, as Crandall fired

From AP dispatches

SEATTLE — The Seattle Mariners, in last place in the American League West, fired Manager Del Crandall Saturday and replaced him on an interim basis with third-base coach Chuck Cottier.

The firing of Crandall, the Mariners' fourth manager in their eight seasons, came less than two weeks after Mariners' owner George Argyros had solidly endorsed him. Argyros emphasized at the time that club President Chuck Armstrong and General Manager Hal Keller were running his operation.

"I was informed at 10:30 a.m.," Crandall said. "It is a disappointment when things don't work out because I enjoy managing."

"... This is the way baseball works. Obviously there were some differences. This is the thing they felt they had to do."

Crandall said he was heading home to Fullerton "and then we'll just see what happens in the future."

The decision to dismiss Crandall, a five-time National League All-Star as a catcher, was made by Armstrong and Keller.

"Sure there was reluctance on Mr. Argyros' part to do this," Armstrong told a news conference Saturday. "He hired Del and Del was his guy. But he told us, 'You guys are running the franchise and if that's your decision, then that's your decision.'"

Crandall had one year left on his contract and said he would be paid through next season. The Mariners had an option for a fourth year.

Quote of the day

Lee Trevino, 44, after his four-stroke victory in the PGA National Championship in Birmingham: "When you're young, you think it's inevitable that you're going to win. When you're old, the inevitable is over with, you never know if you're going to win again."

Sutton holds narrow B.C. lead

Steady Hal Sutton shot a 3-under-par 68 Saturday and took a one-shot lead in the B.C. Open golf tournament at Endicott, N.Y. His 54-hole total of 7-under 206 was good for a stroke edge over second-round leader Fred Couples, who matched par-71 on the tricky, 6,966-yard municipal course. Linda Miller, playing in only his sixth tournament after losing his card last year, also shot 68 to hold sole possession of third at 208.

In the opening round of the LPGA Rail Charity Classic at Springfield, Ill., Vicki Ferguson took advantage of 20-mph winds to notch an eagle and join four other tour veterans posting 4-under-par 68s for the lead. Ferguson joined Becky Pearson, Vicki Alvarez, Therese Hession and Cindy Hill for the lead in the 54-hole tournament.

Colleagues Scott Verplank of Oklahoma State and Sam Randolph of Southern California won their semifinal matches and will meet today in the 36-hole championship of the U.S. Amateur tournament in Edmond, Okla. Verplank sizzled through the front nine in 33 to go 4-up on Randy Sonnier but had to hold off the 35-year-old Houston airline pilot down the stretch, 1 up. Randolph took his semifinal round over Jerry Haas 7 and 5, for the biggest victory margin in the tournament.

Arroyo keeps lightweight title

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio — Harry Arroyo successfully defended his International Boxing Federation lightweight title before a hometown crowd Saturday, stopping Charlie "White Lightning" Brown in the eighth round in a battle of the unbeaten.

Arroyo, 25, from Youngstown, upped his record to 25-0, with 19 knockouts. Brown, 20, from Haledon, N.J., dropped to 23-1 with 17 knockouts.

The judges gave the first five rounds to Brown, two by 3-2 margins and one by 4-1. But Arroyo came back and won the sixth and seventh rounds with a flurry of head and body combinations.

COLLEGE FOOTBALL

Last-minute win for Miami

Two TDs in seven seconds lift Hurricanes past Florida

From AP dispatches

TAMPA, Fla. — Bernie Kosar took Miami 72 yards in 29 seconds and lobbed a 12-yard touchdown pass to Eddie Brown with seven seconds left and Tolbert Bain returned an interception 59 yards on the final play as defending national champion Miami pulled out an incredible 32-20 victory over 17th-ranked Florida Saturday night.

The 10th-ranked Hurricanes, who upset No. 1-ranked Auburn, 20-18, six nights earlier, were 41 seconds away from having the nation's longest winning streak snapped at 12 games when Florida took a 20-19 lead on a five-yard scoring pass from freshman walk-on quarterback Kerwin Bell to Frankie Neal.

But Kosar, whose pinpoint 11-of-12 passing in the second period also brought Miami from behind, was not to be denied.

In other college football action Saturday:

BYU 20, Pittsburgh 14

PITTSBURGH — Robbie Bosco, the latest in a long line of BYU's prolific passers, rifled a 50-yard touchdown pass to Adam Haysbert with 1:37 left in the game as the Cougars rallied from an 11-point deficit to shock the third-ranked Panthers.

Pitt, expected to contend for the national college football championship, turned a pair of third-quarter interceptions into touchdowns to take a 14-3 lead, but BYU came back behind Bosco to win its 12th consecutive game over two seasons.

Bosco, a junior, making his first start after playing behind All-American Steve Young in 1983, completed 25 of 43 passes for 325 yards against a Pitt defense that was nationally ranked a season ago.

Clemson 40, Appalachian St. 7

CLEMSON, S.C. — The fourth-ranked Tigers, behind a pair of touchdown passes from quarterback Mike Eppley, overcame a slow start and powered past the visiting Mountaineers en route to a non-conference victory.

Clemson, which broke the game open in the second half, sealed the game when Eppley hit his second scoring pass — a five-yard shot to tight end K.D. Dunn — that made the score 26-0.

Boston College 44, W. Carolina 24

NEWTON, Mass. — Doug Flutie tied a Boston College career record while passing for four touchdowns

Strawberry sparks Mets' sweep

Darryl Strawberry, hitless in 19 at bats at the start of the day, drilled a two-run homer in the opener and drove in four runs with three hits in the nightcap, as the New York Mets swept a doubleheader from San Diego, 7-4 and 10-6 Saturday night. The Mets closed to within five games of the Chicago Cubs with the double-win.

Elsewhere in the National League Saturday, pinch-hitter Kevin Bass rapped an RBI triple to cap a three-run rally in the sixth inning, leading Houston to an 8-4 triumph over St. Louis.

Scott Thompson and Fran Mullins drove in two runs apiece, one each during a five-run third inning, in San Francisco's 7-2 victory over Philadelphia. The loss dropped the Phillies 8½ behind Chicago.

The Cubs prevailed, as Gary Matthews' ninth-inning double snapped a 1-1 tie and sparked a three-run rally in a 4-1 win in Atlanta, the sixth victory in seven games for the East Division leaders.

Pinch-hitter Tony Perez slammed a two-run homer in the 11th inning to give Cincinnati a 7-5 victory over Pittsburgh in a battle of division tail-enders.

Hoyt snaps own losing streak

Roy Smalley's two-run home run capped a four-run third inning Saturday night to lead LaMar Hoyt and the Chicago White Sox to a 6-1 victory over Kansas City.

Hoyt, 11-15, the 1983 Cy Young winner, snapped a personal four-game losing streak and had a three-hit shutout working before the Royals scored in the eighth inning.

In other American League games, slumping Minnesota lost for the fourth straight time as Lloyd Moseby's three-run homer capped a seven-run fourth inning in Toronto's 12-4 romp over the Twins.

Mike Easler keyed a four-run sixth inning with a three-run homer to back Bob Ojeda's six-hitter as the Boston Red Sox defeated Cleveland, 4-1.

Buddy Bell hit a two-run homer and a two-run triple to lead Texas to an 8-4 victory over Milwaukee.

Mike Davis clubbed a three-run homer to wrap up a six-run, first-inning rally which carried Oakland to a 7-5 victory over Detroit.

Cal Ripken's fielding error allowed Spike Owen to score from third base with the third and deciding run in the eighth inning as Seattle outlasted Baltimore, 10-9.

Dvorak, partner fall in tourney

SEAL BEACH — Recent Olympian Karch Kiraly and partner Singin Smith were one of four teams advancing undefeated through Saturday's opening day competition of the Orange County Open pro beach volleyball tournament.

Karaly and Smith, the only team to have won two beach world championships, defeated two other Olympians, Pat Powers and former Laguna Beach High star Dusty Dvorak, 25-22, 25-16, to advance to one of the winners' bracket semifinals.

Karaly and Smith will meet the top-seeded team of Tim Hovland and Mike Dodd in this morning's semifinal action. The tournament's second-seeded tandem of John Henley and Jon Stevenson face the third seeds, Randy Stoklos and Ricci Luyties in the other semifinal match.

Lack of depth could hurt Bears

BERKELEY (AP) — The University of California Bears have a few injured football players already, with the season opener two weeks away, and Coach Joe Kapp swears he's surprised.

"We don't hit very hard at Cal. Come out to practice and it will look like a pillow fight. They say we're slow — and it's true," Kapp said, trying for some sympathy from visiting Pacific-10 Skywriters.

The truth is, Kapp believes his Bears will hold their own in the hitting department, even with All-American linebacker Ron Rivera and standout defensive backs John Sullivan and Richard Rodgers among the players whose college careers ended in last year's 5-5-1 season.

Depth is a serious problem in most areas, however, and right now, two veteran defensive linemen, Don James and John Haina, are on the sidelines. Haina has only a minor problem, a pulled hamstring, but James dislocated a shoulder early this week.

"Don't count Don out. The man wants to go on the field. He's the kind of man you want to go into foxholes with you," Kapp said, indicating he expects the senior nose tackle to be ready for Arizona Saturday.

The Bears' offense again will depend heavily on quarterback Gale Gilbert, who had some great days and also some miserable ones in 1983.

Gilbert passed for a school-record 2,769 yards, the fifth highest season total in Pac-10 history. But all conference honors went to quarterbacks on more successful teams.

"Honors go to winners. But Gale got a lot done with maybe less help," Kapp said Friday.

Gilbert, who threw for 13 touchdowns and was intercepted 17 times as a junior, says, "I'd like to improve on that ratio."

"If we get a better running game, it will take pressure off everybody. It will certainly take some pressure off me."

Memories linger of 1983 disaster for Southern Cal

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The memories of an "embarrassing" 4-6-1 season a year ago won't go away for the members of the University of Southern California football team.

Southern Cal has been criticized, maligned for its efforts last year and forgotten when contenders for the Pacific-10 Conference championship this year are discussed.

"We've been criticized, rightly so," Southern Cal Coach Ted Tollner said of last season.

The criticism surrounded Tollner, in his first year as head coach at Southern Cal, and his team, which suffered through its worst season since going 4-5-1 back in 1961.

In between, the Trojans won 11 conference championships and went undefeated three times.

"We win four games, lose six and tie one, it's pretty embarrassing, especially at Southern Cal," said Sean Salisbury, who will be the Trojans' starting quarterback in his team's season-opener against Utah State Saturday at the Coliseum. "We very rarely lose six games in two years, let alone one."

"We didn't play very well. It was a struggle, it was embarrassing, and it hurt a lot."

This season, the Trojans are anxious to silence their critics and regain the respect of the preseason pollsters.

"When you hear it, hear it, hear it for a solid year about how bad you were, it's irritating," said Salisbury. "We've got a lot of irritated, hungry guys that want to play football and can't wait until September 8th."

Southern Cal will have 17 starters returning from that team and each will be trying to push the recollections of 1983 out of their memory with a winning record this year.

Tollner said last year's disappointing season "has been a motivating factor from then until now. Their commitment to get ready has been very positive."

Southern Cal will also have an added incentive from last year. For the first time in two years, the Trojans are eligible for a trip to the Rose Bowl, the prize that goes to the Pac-10 champion.

"I think when there's no Rose Bowl at the end of the line, it makes it tough," said Salisbury. "The opportunity of going to a bowl game adds all that extra incentive."

Tollner thinks his Trojans, which won four Rose Bowls in six years ending in 1980, will be in the hunt this year.

"I think will be in the race. We are a team that is very experienced," Tollner said. "I don't think you can under-estimate that."

Southern Cal's experience shows most in its offensive line. A year ago, the Trojans had four linemen with no experience, but this year, all four are back.

And in addition to experience, senior Ken Reuters (6-5, 265 pounds), juniors James Fitzpatrick (6-8, 270) and Tom Hallock (6-6, 275), and sophomore Jeff Bregel (6-4, 270) give Southern Cal good size.

Only junior center Tom Cox (6-5, 255) has yet to start for the Trojans.

Bruins have made a home in Pasadena

UCLA sets sights on third straight Pacific-10 crown

LOS ANGELES (AP) — UCLA Coach Terry Donahue doesn't think it's just a coincidence that the Bruins have won the Pacific-10 Conference football title in each of the two years that they've played their home games at the Rose Bowl.

"I think our move to Pasadena has been the most dramatic single influence in the success of our program, certainly in the years that I've been here," Donahue said. "It gave us a chance to have our own identity, our own image."

"The Rose Bowl became our home. It's a world of difference. It's felt like we had a much better, more distinct home field advantage at the Rose Bowl than we had at the Coliseum."

Prior to the move, which came shortly before the 1982 season began, the Bruins shared the Coliseum with USC, which is located right next to the facility.

The UCLA campus is about 15 miles away.

"I see very little difference from us going to the Coliseum to play football than if USC were to come to Pauley Pavilion (on the UCLA campus) to play basketball," Donahue said.

It appears that the Bruins have a decent shot at winning the Pac-10 title for a third straight time this year. In fact, there are those who believe UCLA might win the national championship, much less the conference crown.

But Donahue says he's not thinking about such a lofty honor at the present time.

"I have not talked to our team about winning a national championship," Donahue said. "I don't think that's a realistic goal at this time."

"I have talked to our team about repeating as the Pac-10 champion. I think that's a realistic goal. I think we're one of five or six teams who can win the championship."

UCLA, which overcame a 0-3-1 start last season to win the Pac-10 title and then trounced Big Ten champion Illinois, 45-9, in the Rose Bowl game, was ranked fifth in the Associated Press preseason poll.

Sports Illustrated predicted that the Bruins would win the national title.

"I'm delighted Sports Illustrated feels the way they do. I hope they're right," Donahue said.

CARDINAL EYES IMAGE CHANGE

STANFORD (AP) — The Stanford "image" may take a beating under Jack Elway, the new head football coach.

"I don't care about the Stanford image. I don't really believe in it, anyway. I'm here to play football and to win," one of Elway's top players, linebacker Dave Wyman, said.

It couldn't have been said better at Oklahoma, the football crazy school which Stanford plays in its season opener Saturday.

Wyman, who earned second team all-conference honors last year as a sophomore, said Elway has made it clear that he wants his players minds only on football while they're on the field.

"Sometimes, maybe because this is Stanford, players were on the field worrying about their studies," Wyman said.

After losing seasons, such as last year's disastrous 4-10 campaign which led to the firing of Coach Paul Wiggins, many Stanford supporters seek comfort in the theory that, after all, athletes must be students first.

football players second at the highly-rated academic institution.

"Those academic responsibilities may be an excuse for the alumni. It's not our excuse," wide receiver Emile Harry said.

Harry, a product of Fountain Valley High School, and other veteran players said the Cardinal should have done better in 1983 and that they intend to win under Elway, the only new head coach in the Pac-10.

Elway said he expects the Stanford defense, a veteran unit, to be strong, especially up front because of returning players like Wyman and defensive tackle Garin Veris, another second team all-Pac-10 player in 1983. But the Cardinal allowed 293 points last year.

The offense will stress passing, with John Paye returning at quarterback. Harry led the Pac-10 in receiving yardage, with 829, last year.

Elway said he's concerned about lack of speed in the offensive line, and he added, "We must improve our running game."

U.S. trade balance shifts from West to East

Our trade with the Pacific Basin grew by 8 percent during past year

By JOY DEE ANTHONY
Daily Pilot Correspondent

Even to someone who has spent a lifetime in business activities in the Asian and Pacific regions, the figures are startling, says H. Monroe Browne, United States ambassador to New Zealand. In 1980, for the very first time, trade between the U.S. and the 21 nations of the Pacific basin outstripped trade between the United States and Europe, accounting for 30 percent of all U.S. trade by 1983.

Last year when trade with other nations was stagnating, economic activity with the Pacific Basin grew by 8 percent, something Browne says has gotten little if any attention in the media. Yet the $2 billion in U.S. exports to that region have produced an estimated 1.2 million new jobs for Americans, Browne told a gathering of the Orange County World Affairs Council in Santa Ana Wednesday.

Half of the total U.S. trade deficit, Browne says, is accounted for by the Pacific region's trade surplus with the U.S. Our strong dollar makes imports cheap. But rather than seeing this as a cause for alarm, Browne says that the economic dynamism that allows Pacific region residents to produce goods that Americans want to buy will fuel our future trade with them. If their economy were not so healthy, we could not hope to find the sort of markets for our forestry, agricultural and computer software products that we will need if the U.S. is to continue on a path of economic growth. Browne sees those areas, as well as banking, insurance, and consulting as having vast potential.

In explaining the rapidity of the Pacific region's growth, Browne said "The most successful economies are those that have adopted the same free market orientation that has served the United States so well." This has meant that in contrast to the difficulties found in Latin America and in other developing areas, the Pacific area has an extremely low debt service to exports ratio.

Those countries that have achieved the most growth, Browne said, have made it on their own. Foreign aid is not what gets a country going. In fact, it can exacerbate the problem of poverty, if it goes to increase a poorly-run government's control of the economy rather than to a country whose policies are pro-free market.

Taking one of the successful countries as an example, Browne said, "Our exports to Korea in just one year exceeded the total of all economic assistance ever given to Korea." In the case of Taiwan, it's even more dramatic, Browne said. Half a year's exports at 1983 rates exceed the total of all aid given to Taiwan from 1949 to the present.

Browne feels that the current pessimism over our ability to compete with Asian producers is greatly exaggerated. The Reagan administration, however, is striving for liberalization of the non-tariff barriers that many countries have created in recent years.

As an example of ways that countries are acting to benefit the U.S., Browne cited a recent pact between Australia and New Zealand to build over time a free market relationship between the two, termed "Closer Economic Relations" or C.E.R. Only temporarily, will this relationship give U.S. producers increased competition as we increase our imports. As the two countries become more efficient, they will become better markets for U.S. goods and services, fueling our export capabilities.

The picture is not completely rosy, however. Soviet warships a decade ago were hardly a presence in the area. Today they have the largest fleet there and one of the world's largest armies in the region. "Our military strength provides the indispensable deterrent essential to maintaining stability and a confidence among our friends," Browne said. The Reagan administration promotes the idea that "we are in the Pacific to stay."

But continuing in a note of optimism, Browne remarked that in addition to nations like Korea and Taiwan, the five free market-oriented members of the Association of South East Asian Nations are a real "economic success story." They grew, on the average, 7 percent between 1971 and 1983. Singapore is the financial and services center of the region, not by accident Browne said, but because the government's policies encourage investment.

Browne is a native of Long Beach who obtained his degrees from UCLA and UC Berkeley. In '76 he served as president of a pro-free market think tank in San Francisco known as the Institute for Contemporary Studies.

Irvine firm to deliver automatic test systems

The Industrial Products Division of Computer Automation, Inc. of Irvine has received a purchase agreement from the Electro-Optical and Data Systems Group of Hughes Aircraft Co. for automatic test systems totaling $1.5 million. The agreement calls for deliveries over a 21-month period.

The initial purchase, valued at $568,000, includes a Marathon Functional Test Station, a Digital Simulation Station, and a Marathon Resource Manager.

The Electro-Optical and Data Systems Group of Hughes Aircraft Co. manufactures laser range finders, night vision systems, and other electro-optical devices for military applications.

The Marathon Functional Test Station will be used to perform high-speed digital and analog tests on the circuit boards used in the company's range finders.

The Resource Manager will provide multi-user/multi-tasking capabilities for the programming and simulation functions. In addition, the Resource Manager, with its networking capabilities will be used to tie the test department in with this Hughes group's computer aided manufacturing system.

Tiffany returns to independent company status

NEW YORK (AP) — Tiffany & Co. will return to its independent status following an agreement by Avon Products Inc. to sell the 147-year-old jewelry retailer for $135.5 million in cash to U.S. and foreign investors, officials say.

The group of investors was led by Tiffany Chairman William R. Chaney, who said the deal should be completed by mid-October.

Tiffany has been a division of Avon, the world's largest manufacturer of cosmetics and toiletries, for five years.

"Tiffany is not going to change dramatically," Chaney said Thursday.

Avon spokesman John Cox said Avon would make "a substantial profit" on the sale. It originally purchased Tiffany for stock worth $104 million in 1979.

Schroeder has top post at OC chamber federation

Carol L. Schroeder, executive director of the Irvine Chamber of Commerce, has been elected president of the Federated Chambers of Commerce of Orange County.

The federation is composed of more than 26 executive directors and managers of various city and regional chambers of commerce in Orange County. Federation members exchange ideas and discuss issues of mutual concern affecting Orange County.

Schroeder was the first employee when the Irvine Chamber was founded in 1981. She became executive director in 1981. During her tenure, the chamber has grown from 150 members to more than 750. Schroeder previously served on the staff of State Sen. Dennis Carpenter and was campaign coordinator for Orange County Sheriff Brad Gates.

Other new federation officers include vice president Doris Lindsey of the Yorba Linda Chamber of Commerce, secretary Joyce Riddell of the Huntington Beach Chamber of Commerce, and treasurer Robert Adams of the Fountain Valley Chamber of Commerce.

10 steps to a successful garage sale

1. Decide on dates.

Look at a calendar and set the dates and times of your sale. Weekends are usually good, but many successful sales have been held in the evening, just after work. Check the weather forecast in the paper, and watch for any other large event that may attract potential buyers away, such as fairs or community events. Have your sale run at least two days — some people may not be able to come on any single day.

2. What to sell.

Everything! That is, everything you haven't used in the last year. If an item has antique value, or is brand-new, or has unusual value, be sure to ask a healthy price for it. Get a pad of paper and search your whole house. Look everywhere, and list everything.

3. Write your ad.

Here is a suggested ad: "Garage Sale — desks, Benwood rocking chair, toys, infants' clothing, 1922 Victrola in original cabinet, small gadgets, lots of unusual items, rock collection and plants. Refreshments, 3 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday and Sunday, 1234 South Anywhere, Yourtown. Just west of Main and 2nd. Use this sample ad as a guide. Be sure to list unusual items. Be as specific as possible. Give directions if needed. Don't use abbreviations — many people won't bother to decipher them. CAUTION: Don't advertise anything you don't really have. Every item in the ad must be on hand at the start of the sale.

4. Where to advertise.

Place your ad where it will be seen by people who live in the area — most people shop close to home. The Daily Pilot is read by 88,000 adults in Costa Mesa, Newport Beach, Laguna Beach, Irvine, Huntington Beach and Fountain Valley — guaranteeing you wide exposure. And with the Pilot, you're not paying for waste circulation in Los Angeles or Anaheim. Plan to run your ad 3 times or more, and start it a few days before the sale so bargain hunters can have plenty of notice.

5. Make a sign.

To help make your sale successful, make a few signs from cardboard and letter with a magic marker. A good sign size is 14 x 22.

6. Placing your sign.

The morning of the sale, but not before, place your signs. Be sure and add your address and any directional arrows. This should be done about a half hour before the sale starts. Place your sign where it can be seen from both sides of the street by passing cars and pedestrians. CAUTION: Some towns have laws that restrict the placement and duration of garage sale signs. Please check with your town's planning department or clerk.

7. Marking prices.

Mark prices where they can be seen clearly. Office supply stores have various sizes and colors of stickers that work well, or you can use masking tape. However you mark them, make prices low. Garage sales are for bargain hunters. Remember, whatever you can't sell you'll have to drag back in the house and store again for another year.

8. Serving refreshments.

This doesn't have to cost much and creates a friendly atmosphere. It also encourages people to stay longer and perhaps buy more. You could even charge for expensive items like donuts, or the kids could go in business for the day, with a lemonade stand.

9. Display.

Make sure everything can be seen. Have card tables or boards used as shelves between two chairs. Don't cause people to bend over unless you can't help it. Use one table as a desk where you can see everything and take money. Use only one cash box (tin cans or boxes work fine) and make sure someone is appointed "cashier" at all times. Arrange beforehand for a friend who can help answer questions, relief for lunch, etc.

10. Check your neighbors and friends.

See if any want to join your sale. This will give you someone to share expenses with and increase interest in your sale. If others join you, be sure to include this in your ad (example: "three-family sale," "neighborhood sale"). Group sales are a lot more fun, too.
