Jury Clears Patrolman In Youth Assault Case

MESAN PINNED BY CAR IN HUNTINGTON HIT-RUN

Apollo Ready For Blastoff; 'Sub' Gets OK

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — America's Apollo 13 astronauts are ready to fly man's riskiest moon-landing mission today after a rookie spaceman earned a seat with a remarkable and unprecedented rehearsal.

Navy Capt. James A. Lovell Jr., 42, and civilians Fred W. Haise Jr., 36, and John L. Swigert, 38, were set to ride a giant Saturn 5 rocket away from their home planet at 11:13 a.m. PST.

Their goal is a search for clues to the origin of the moon-and the solar system-in the rugged and ancient Fra Mauro highlands.

In the most difficult space maneuver ever attempted, Lovell and Haise are to steer their lunar lander toward a precision touchdown in a narrow valley surrounded by high hills, ridges, craters and rocks as big as automobiles.

The countdown for America's third moon-landing expedition proceeded because Swigert proved in a crash two-day trial that he could move from the Apollo 13 backup team to the first team.

The decision to fly Swigert was made less than 24 hours before the scheduled launching.

If Swigert hadn't made it, the launching would have been postponed until May 9 at a cost of at least $800,000.

He got his chance when another backup astronaut, Charles Duke, exposed the prime crewmen, Lovell, Hause and Thomas K. Mattingly II, to German measles. Because he had no immunity, Mattingly faced the danger of being disabled by the disease in space.

Lovell and Hause were immune, as was Swigert. Throughout the week, space agency officials considered postponing the mission, but decided to give Swigert a trial despite initial objections from mission commander Lovell, who wanted to keep his team intact.

Lovell, Haise and Mattingly had trained together for two years and were described as a superbly conditioned unit.

But Lovell agreed, and Swigert slipped into a spaceship simulator with Lovell and Hause on Thursday to practice critical maneuvers that require split-second timing by all three astronauts.

The suspense built Friday morning when NASA Administrator Thomas O. Paine flew to Cape Kennedy to review the training and all other aspects of the flight.

After 2½ hours, including a half-hour private meeting with Lovell, Paine gave the go-ahead to continue the mission with Swigert moving into the center couch of the command module as its pilot.

'It's Over at Last'

Officer Cleared In 'Force' Case

By TOM BARLEY
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

A Superior Court jury late Friday cleared Patrolman Richard E. Faust of charges that he used excessive force to subdue and capture an escaping juvenile.

It took only 10 minutes for the panel to return the verdict that sent Officer Faust and his wife into each other's arms with tears of joy.

"It's over at last," said the Santa Ana police officer. "Thank God, Thank God."

The jury's verdict ended the week long trial of the Santa Ana officer by throwing out charges contained in the indictment issued last November by the 1969 Orange County Grand Jury.

Those charges of assault with a deadly weapon followed claims by witnesses that Faust, 27, repeatedly clubbed 17-year-old Jesse Gilmore while the Negro youth lay helpless in the grip of two officers on the sidewalk in front of the Orange County Probation Department building, directly across from Juvenile Hall.

One witness told the jury that Gilmore was struck "12 or 15 times with all of his (Faust's) might." Others said that Gilmore was struck two to four times at the close of an escape attempt that began when he bolted from Faust's patrol car.

Faust's attorney, Ron Owen, in his closing argument branded the charges against his client as charges that should never have found their way into a court of law.

"Officer Faust was doing his duty as he was trained to do it when he used his baton to halt the flight of this boy and, incidentally, protect himself," he said. "Remember, ladies and gentlemen, that you hired this officer, you gave him a club and you asked him to protect you, the general public.

"Police officers are today being shot, stabbed, beaten and killed in fours on our highways," Owen argued. "They are shot at midnight on the streets of Santa Ana and they are the obvious victims of mounting violence that cannot be condoned and can not be tolerated."

Prosecutor Russell Iungerich reminded the jury that Faust had "only the right to bring Jesse Gilmore to justice and not to punish him.

"The baton in the hands of any police officer is a potentially deadly weapon" Iungerich argued, "and all the testimony we have had in this case shows that it became one in the hands of Officer Faust.

"The absence of any serious injury (to Gilmore) does not mean that the boy was not the victim of an assault with a deadly weapon," the prosecutor said. "It means that he was very lucky to escape with just cuts and bruises."

A Juvenile Hall physician testified Thursday that all he could find on Gilmore in an examination immediately after the incident last July 8 were slight bruises and abrasions and "a red spot."

Iungerich unintentionally brought laughter to a tense courtroom when he drew comparisons between the Faust named in the charges and the Faust who, in literature, is the victim of Mephistopholes' wiles.

He referred to Jesse Gilmore, during his narrative, as "the Prince of Darkness." That allusion to the young Negro brought a temporary halt to the embarrassed prosecutor's closing argument.

Doomed Mesa Boy, 8, Dies After Coming Back to Life

A tragic chain of circumstances — revival of a doomed little boy after he was pronounced dead once—has turned a humanitarian gesture into a nightmare for his family.

Mark A. Browne, 8, was incurably stricken with a brain tumor.

His obituary appeared in the DAILY PILOT Friday. He died at 2:05 a.m. today.

His mother, Mrs. Sandra Lee Kindred of Costa Mesa, telephoned Westcliff Mortuary shortly after being notified at 6:30 a.m. Friday that he had died at Children's Hospital of Los Angeles.

Authorities there had asked if Mrs. Kindred and the boy's father, Marine Sgt. Fredrick Browne of El Toro MCAS, would consent to transplanting his healthy kidneys and eyes. They agreed.

Moving swiftly, physicians resumed—in a fashion—the vital processes and sophisticated machinery began circulating his blood to keep the organs ready for transplant.

Gradually, the spark of life ignited.

The boy had literally returned from the dead.

"They thought at first it was a good idea," said his grandmother, Mrs. Patrick Carson of Costa Mesa, of the transplant offer. "But now it's a nightmare. My daughter is in shock," she said Friday.

"She's afraid of too much publicity. She doesn't want people calling about it," added Mrs. Carson.

Stricken last July, Mark gradually worsened — the malignancy could not be surgically removed — and he was admitted to Hoag Memorial Hospital in early February.

He was transferred Wednesday to Los Angeles.

Mark's parents accepted his eventual death as a fact of their own lives, but his unexpected revival Friday brought the family a cruel, double sorrow. Now the waiting is done.

Mesa Officer Foils Bribe Try on Case

A Costa Mesa lawman has been credited with foiling a $10,000 bribery attempt designed to wreck the prosecution in a grand theft trial by framing the star witness.

One principal in the case involving the Newport Beach restaurant which bears the name of blind entertainer Jose Feliciano has been jailed while the hunt widens for a second suspect.

Samuel C. Rosman, 27, of 29351 San Briso Drive, Laguna Niguel, was held at Orange County Jail in lieu of $25,000 bail. He faces arraignment Monday or Tuesday.

Rosman and Eugene C. Rondondo,, 44, of 2422 East 22nd St., Newport Beach, are charged with attempted bribery of a police officer and conspiracy to falsely arrest.

All-points bulletins have been issued for Rondondo named in a bench warrant Wednesday when he failed to appear in court for trial on 12 counts of grand theft.

Rosman is also charged with furnishing dangerous drugs as the result of the bizarre case.

Officer Gary Barwig, 26, notified Costa Mesa Police Department intelligence officers when approached March 24, District Attorney Cecil A. Hicks revealed Friday.

Barwig said he had been offered $10,000 to nail Charles S. Dreyer, 32, of 1645 Sunset Ridge Drive, Laguna Beach, with a narcotics frameup.

Dreyer was arrested last year along with Rosman, Rondondo and a third defendant on charges of conspiracy to commit grand theft and burglary.

The case — involving $25,000 worth of liquor from Feliciano's, 1617 Westcliff Drive, and two other restaurants — is still in progress.

"Mr. Dreyer had agreed to testify against Rondondo in a forthcoming trial," the DA said Friday, noting that Dreyer was an electrician for the restaurant.

Rondondo was a part-owner.

Investigators said Rosman provided Officer Barwig with specific information about Dreyer, plus 2,000 drug pills after the initial contact, instructing him in framing the star witness.

Hicks said lawmen conferred with Dreyer and his attorneys, Marshal Shulman and Robert Brody of Santa Ana, who agreed to stage the bum rap right on cue.

"On April 3, Officer Barwig made a mock arrest of Mr. Dreyer for possession of dangerous drugs for sale," Hicks explained.

Rosman was arrested at home late Thursday. Dreyer has been cleared of any criminal charges involving the drug frameup.

Details of the alleged theft operation involving alcoholic beverages from Feliciano's, the Surf and Sand Tower, and former Saddleback Inn in Laguna Beach, remain secret.

Authorities noted that prosecution against Rondondo and Rosman in that case is still open.

Two other men arrested at the time have since been cleared.

NY Times Moving To Shut Down

NEW YORK (UPI) — The New York Times was "rapidly approaching" the point of shutting down operations today because of a work slowdown by one of 10 unions threatening to strike the city's four major newspapers.

Another union, the Newspaper Guild of New York City, prepared to call a walkout at the New York Post Monday unless progress was made at Sunday talks between the union, the publishers and federal mediator A. A. Dresser.

Some 13,000 memebrs of nine craft unions an dthe Guild have been working without a contract since March 30. All had turned down a management offer of a 16.5 percent pay increase over three years. The publishers have made no further offers.

'Stranger' Attacks Pair On Highway

An unprovoked attack by a stranger behind the wheel of a red Javelin left a young Costa Mesa man sprawled along Pacific Coast Highway in Huntington Beach early today with a broken leg and other injuries.

Police said James W. Hawkes, 21, of 2983 Ceylon, was a passenger in a friend's car which was run off the road by the assailant in the westbound lanes of Pacific Coast Highway near Brookhurst Road.

The assailant then emerged from his car and met the two victims between the two autos.

The unidentified driver became combative, officers said, then darted back to his car.

He then sped into Hawkes, pinning him between the two cars.

The attacker then fled toward downtown Huntington Beach.

Hawkes was taken to Huntington Intercommunity Hospital where he was treated for the leg fracture and cuts. He was admitted in satisfactory condition.

His friend's identity was not immediately available.

Order Question Case Now Closed

SAIGON (UPI) — Military spokesmen said today the case of the U.S. soldiers who questioned orders to march through an open field at night is closed.

The incident occurred the night of April 5 in the Tay Ninh province northwest of Saigon. Spokesmen said the lead platoon of A Company commanded by Capt. Arthur A. Rice of Kingsport, Tenn., questioned his orders to move rapidly down a road to a helicopter pickup zone.

Rice, who had recently taken command of the company, had received the orders from his battalion headquarters.

Spokesmen for the U.S. command in Saigon said members of the lead platoon questioned the order because it required them to "move rapidly at night through an open area and this was contrary to what they normally applied."

Ann Landers

Mistake Keeps Raising Price

DEAR ANN LANDERS: You have repeatedly advised women to tell a fiance about a previous marriage, out-of-wedlock child or prison record. What about an abortion?

I'm going with a fine man who wants to marry me. He knows I'm not a virgin but he doesn't know I've had an abortion. I've already paid a big price for my mistake and I don't want to pay any more. My mother says I shouldn't tell him because it might spoil my chances. I think I should. Yes or no?

—BERNADINE

DEAR BERNADINE: Tell him. If it spoils your chances figure it as part of "the price." This sort of information should not be withheld. Moreover, if you become pregnant after marriage your doctor will surely ask about your gynecological history. You can't fool him. The abortion will be part of your medical record and records are never 100 percent secure.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Thelma, a woman I work with, bought a lovely knitted dress on a trip to Canada but her husband didn't like it on her. Thelma and I are the same size. She asked me if I would like the dress. I was overwhelmed by her thoughtfulness and said I'd certainly like to try it on and see if it fits.

The next day Thelma brought the dress, we went to the ladies lounge and I tried it on. It fit perfectly. I told her I was thrilled and thanked her. She then said, "You misunderstood. I didn't mean it as a gift. This dress cost me $110. I will sell it to you for $75." I had a hard time concealing my shock. I told her I had indeed misunderstood and that I could not afford the dress.

I've never sold a thing to a friend in my life. The idea offends me. Now Thelma looks the other way when we pass in the hall. This incident has made her uncomfortable, and I'll never feel the same about her. Am I wrong or is she? — ONE FRIENDSHIP LOUSED UP

DEAR ONE: this is not a matter of right or wrong, but rather a lash-up in communication. Thelma should have made it clear at the outset that she wanted to sell the dress. You, on the other hand, should have asked if she meant the dress as a gift instead of assuming so.

It is unwise to offer to sell used apparel to friends. If a friend asks if you'd be willing to sell something, it's another matter.

Give in or lose him . . . when a guy gives you this line, look out! For tips on how to handle the supersex salesman, check Ann Landers. Read her booklet, "Necking and Petting What Are the Limits?" Counter Spying On Counterspies

By PVT. A. R. VINSEL US56362742 (RET.)
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

THE U.S. ARMY Intelligence School at Fort Holabird, Md., has ordered its junior varsity James Bonds to do an about-face in spying methods.

The Associated Press (April 9) quotes Surveillance Guide SupR3922, Rule C, as discouraging movie-type espionage maneuvers and hokey disguises.

"The surveillant must avoid a slinking, sleuthing, creeping 'Hawkshaw' manner, jumping behind trees or parked cars or peeping around corners."

Strange how times change.

Such absurdity was SOP when I was at Fort Holabird, which is about seven miles — I walked it once at 3 a.m. — from beautiful downtown Baltimore. My job was to keep Uncle Sam informed about maintenance of eight of his jeeps, operate a mop and perform other strategic duties.

AMATEUR ESPIONAGE saturated one's very existence, however, to complicate the business of defending the post against litter.

One couldn't go to the mess hall without being shadowed or photographed by a potbellied Argentine major who thought he was hiding behind a tree.

Military men from all services and many western nations attend the school, not far from historic Fort McHenry, where Francis Scott Key wrote the National Anthem.

Sometimes, being tailed was funny and sometimes—like being questioned about your off-duty visit to a radical bookstore — it was not.

SO WE COMMITTED our own counter-espionage, either by design or accident.

I didn't really intend to gas a tent full of second lieutenants with mosquito spray out on that field exercise.

But portraits of superior officers and LBJ kept vanishing from the walls, only to turn up in toilets. One of my colleagues handled computer-graded tests for officers who failed — despite instructions — to press down hard when marking the little answer box.

Amazing how many flunked the class.

SECURITY AT FORT Holabird is rigid, but how about the time three black GIs brought a couple of innocent young things back to the barracks, right past MP headquarters?

Navigating with impaired faculties one night, I even climbed the barbed wire perimenter fence to avoid walking an extra two miles, although I did tear my shirt.

One night a rebel force of permanent party personnel engaged a hostile element — the MPs — bent on destroying our beer bust in the picnic grounds and seizing our supplies.

We held our position with valor and drove off the MPs with volleys of empty ammo cannisters.

TIMES CHANGE, but I'm certain if the great concrete barn that allegedly contained archives of suspicious persons still stands at Holabird, my name is recorded in a dossier there.

And even though skulking and slinking is now passe among the amateur spies one can rest easily, knowing the permanent party draftees will carry on tradition..

Nixon's Next Pick From Minnesota?

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Federal Judge Harry Andrew Blackmun of Minnesota is President Nixon's choice for the Supreme Court vacancy remaining after the Senate's rejection of G. Harrold Carswell, the Los Angeles Times said Friday.

The Times said "the highest sources" identified Blackmun, an appellate judge with headquarters in St. Paul, as the choice.

Blackmun checked into the Cosmos Club in Washington Thursday night, the Times said.

The newspaper said Blackmun, a native of Nashville, Ill., and a graduate of Harvard College and Harvard Law School, had ben high on Nixon's list for a Supreme Court vacancy.

Blackmun has sat in civil rights cases. In 1957, in the case of Jones vs. Mayer testing an 1866 civil rights law as a guarantee of open housing, Blackmun rejected the complaint of a Negro couple refused a house in a subdevelopment.

The Supreme Court overruled Blackmun.

The Times said that though the White House wouldn't confirm its report, "an official in a position to know said that Blackmun would be the nominee."

Youth 'Workshop' To Map Demands To City Council

A band of youths called "Free Us" will meet Sunday in Balboa to plan demands they intend to present April 27 to the Newport Beach City Council.

Don Elder, 23, a spokesman for the group, said his organization already has plans to seek council approval for a citizens' police review board and the setting aside of a beach area for youth concerts and meetings.

Sunday's meeting will be a workshop to plan for the April 27 council appearance, Elder said. It will be at Balboa Pier Park, which he calls "Peoples Park."

A rally last Sunday at the park drew 250 persons by police count — 500 to 600 by Elder's count.

Elder, a Santa Ana Heights resident, faces a preliminary hearing April 29 in Harbor Judicial District Court on charges stemming from an article which appeared in the underground newspaper "Sherwood Forest."

He is charged with soliciting to commit grand theft and burglary, plus contributing to the delinquency of a minor in an article police allege advocated shoplifting. The article appeared under the byline "Robbin' Hood" and one of the key issues in the case is whether or not Elder was editor of the paper at the time, as police assert.

Elder maintains the paper has no editor, only contributors.

Burglary Suspects Arrested in Mesa

The men, both booked on burglary charges, were ack Armand Rallo, 28, of 1779 Westminster Ave., Apt. 9, Costa Mesa and George Joseph Waldhauser, 30, of 1640 S. Lyon St., Santa Ana.

Patrolman Kresa said the alarm was set off at about 3:25 a.m. and the officers arrived at the store to discover five glass louvers kicked out of a door.

Patrolmen said they arrested Waldhauser inside the building, then set out to look for more suspects.

Rollo, officers reported, was found in a car outside.

Neither man had loot in his possession, police said.

Doomed Mesa Boy, 8, Dies After Coming Back to Life

A tragic chain of circumstances — revival of a doomed little boy after he was pronounced dead once—has turned a humanitarian gesture into a nightmare for his family.

Mark A. Browne, 8, was incurably stricken with a brain tumor.

His obituary appeared in the DAILY PILOT Friday. He died at 2:05 a.m. today.

His mother, Mrs. Sandra Lee Kindred of Costa Mesa, telephoned Westcliff Mortuary shortly after being notified at 6:30 a.m. Friday that he had died at Children's Hospital of Los Angeles.

Authorities there had asked if Mrs. Kindred and the boy's father, Marine Sgt. Fredrick Browne of El Toro MCAS, would consent to transplanting his healthy kidneys and eyes. They agreed.

Moving swiftly, physicians resumed—in a fashion—the vital processes and sophisticated machinery began circulating his blood to keep the organs ready for transplant.

Gradually, the spark of life ignited.

The boy had literally returned from the dead.

"They thought at first it was a good idea," said his grandmother, Mrs. Patrick Carson of Costa Mesa, of the transplant offer. "But now it's a nightmare. My daughter is in shock," she said Friday.

"She's afraid of too much publicity. She doesn't want people calling about it," added Mrs. Carson.

Stricken last July, Mark gradually worsened — the malignancy could not be surgically removed — and he was admitted to Hoag Memorial Hospital in early February.

He was transferred Wednesday to Los Angeles.

Mark's parents accepted his eventual death as a fact of their own lives, but his unexpected revival Friday brought the family a cruel, double sorrow. Now the waiting is done.

Order Question Case Now Closed

SAIGON (UPI) — Military spokesmen said today the case of the U.S. soldiers who questioned orders to march through an open field at night is closed.

The incident occurred the night of April 5 in the Tay Ninh province northwest of Saigon. Spokesmen said the lead platoon of A Company commanded by Capt. Arthur A. Rice of Kingsport, Tenn., questioned his orders to move rapidly down a road to a helicopter pickup zone.

Rice, who had recently taken command of the company, had received the orders from his battalion headquarters.

Spokesmen for the U.S. command in Saigon said members of the lead platoon questioned the order because it required them to "move rapidly at night through an open area and this was contrary to what they normally applied."

Perot Plans Campaign Of Prisoner Messages

DALLAS (UPI) — Billionaire H. Ross Perot said Friday he would "saturate" North Vietnam with radio messages about their men held prisoner in South Vietnam and Laos to force the Communists to release information about Americans held prisoner in the North.

"We're going to saturate the North (Vietnam) with information about these men," Perot said. He announced the new plan after a mission to deliver letters from the prisoners to the North Vietnamese failed.

Bribe Try in Feliciano Case Foiled

A Costa Mesa lawman has been credited with foiling a $10,000 bribery attempt designed to wreck the prosecution in a grand theft trial by framing the star witness.

One principal in the case involving the Newport Beach restaurant which bears the name of blind entertainer Jose Feliciano has been jailed while the hunt widens for a second suspect.

Samuel C. Rosman, 27, of 29351 San Briso Drive, Laguna Niguel, was held at Orange County Jail in lieu of $25,000 bail. He faces arraignment Monday or Tuesday.

Rosman and Eugene C. Rondondo,, 44, of 2422 East 22nd St., Newport Beach, are charged with attempted bribery of a police officer and conspiracy to falsely arrest.

All-points bulletins have been issued for Rondondo named in a bench warrant Wednesday when he failed to appear in court for trial on 12 counts of grand theft.

Rosman is also charged with furnishing dangerous drugs as the result of the bizarre case.

Officer Gary Barwig, 26, notified Costa Mesa Police Department intelligence officers when approached March 24, District Attorney Cecil A. Hicks revealed Friday.

Barwig said he had been offered $10,000 to nail Charles S. Dreyer, 32, of 1645 Sunset Ridge Drive, Laguna Beach, with a narcotics frameup.

Dreyer was arrested last year along with Rosman, Rondondo and a third defendant on charges of conspiracy to commit grand theft and burglary.

The case — involving $25,000 worth of liquor from Feliciano's, 1617 Westcliff Drive, and two other restaurants — is still in progress.

"Mr. Dreyer had agreed to testify against Rondondo in a forthcoming trial," the DA said Friday, noting that Dreyer was an electrician for the restaurant.

Rondondo was a part-owner.

Investigators said Rosman provided Officer Barwig with specific information about Dreyer, plus 2,000 drug pills after the initial contact, instructing him in framing the star witness.

Hicks said lawmen conferred with Dreyer and his attorneys, Marshal Shulman and Robert Brody of Santa Ana, who agreed to stage the bum rap right on cue.

"On April 3, Officer Barwig made a mock arrest of Mr. Dreyer for possession of dangerous drugs for sale," Hicks explained.

Rosman was arrested at home late Thursday. Dreyer has been cleared of any criminal charges involving the drug frameup.

Details of the alleged theft operation involving alcoholic beverages from Feliciano's, the Surf and Sand Tower, and former Saddleback Inn in Laguna Beach, remain secret.

Authorities noted that prosecution against Rondondo and Rosman in that case is still open.

Two other men arrested at the time have since been cleared.

Ann Landers

Mistake Keeps Raising Price

DEAR ANN LANDERS: You have repeatedly advised women to tell a fiance about a previous marriage, out-of-wedlock child or prison record. What about an abortion?

I'm going with a fine man who wants to marry me. He knows I'm not a virgin but he doesn't know I've had an abortion. I've already paid a big price for my mistake and I don't want to pay any more. My mother says I shouldn't tell him because it might spoil my chances. I think I should. Yes or no?

—BERNADINE

DEAR BERNADINE: Tell him. If it spoils your chances figure it as part of "the price." This sort of information should not be withheld. Moreover, if you become pregnant after marriage your doctor will surely ask about your gynecological history. You can't fool him. The abortion will be part of your medical record and records are never 100 percent secure.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Thelma, a woman I work with, bought a lovely knitted dress on a trip to Canada but her husband didn't like it on her. Thelma and I are the same size. She asked me if I would like the dress. I was overwhelmed by her thoughtfulness and said I'd certainly like to try it on and see if it fits.

The next day Thelma brought the dress, we went to the ladies lounge and I tried it on. It fit perfectly. I told her I was thrilled and thanked her. She then said, "You misunderstood. I didn't mean it as a gift. This dress cost me $110. I will sell it to you for $75." I had a hard time concealing my shock. I told her I had indeed misunderstood and that I could not afford the dress.

I've never sold a thing to a friend in my life. The idea offends me. Now Thelma looks the other way when we pass in the hall. This incident has made her uncomfortable, and I'll never feel the same about her. Am I wrong or is she? — ONE FRIENDSHIP LOUSED UP

DEAR ONE: this is not a matter of right or wrong, but rather a lash-up in communication. Thelma should have made it clear at the outset that she wanted to sell the dress. You, on the other hand, should have asked if she meant the dress as a gift instead of assuming so.

It is unwise to offer to sell used apparel to friends. If a friend asks if you'd be willing to sell something, it's another matter.

Give in or lose him . . . when a guy gives you this line, look out! For tips on how to handle the supersex salesman, check Ann Landers. Read her booklet, "Necking and Petting What Are the Limits?" Manila Refuses Writer Entry

MANILA (AP) — Peking-born Miss Han Suyin, who wrote "Love Is a Many Splendored Thing," has been barred from entering the Philippines because of her political beliefs.

The authoress, who has written frequently about Communist China in recent years, had sought a visa to attend a meeting of the Press Foundation of Asia opening Saturday.

PILOT LOGBOOK

Counter Spying On Counterspies

By PVT. A. R. VINSEL US56362742 (RET.)
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

THE U.S. ARMY Intelligence School at Fort Holabird, Md., has ordered its junior varsity James Bonds to do an about-face in spying methods.

The Associated Press (April 9) quotes Surveillance Guide SupR3922, Rule C, as discouraging movie-type espionage maneuvers and hokey disguises.

"The surveillant must avoid a slinking, sleuthing, creeping 'Hawkshaw' manner, jumping behind trees or parked cars or peeping around corners."

Strange how times change.

Such absurdity was SOP when I was at Fort Holabird, which is about seven miles — I walked it once at 3 a.m. — from beautiful downtown Baltimore. My job was to keep Uncle Sam informed about maintenance of eight of his jeeps, operate a mop and perform other strategic duties.

AMATEUR ESPIONAGE saturated one's very existence, however, to complicate the business of defending the post against litter.

One couldn't go to the mess hall without being shadowed or photographed by a potbellied Argentine major who thought he was hiding behind a tree.

Military men from all services and many western nations attend the school, not far from historic Fort McHenry, where Francis Scott Key wrote the National Anthem.

Sometimes, being tailed was funny and sometimes—like being questioned about your off-duty visit to a radical bookstore — it was not.

SO WE COMMITTED our own counter-espionage, either by design or accident.

I didn't really intend to gas a tent full of second lieutenants with mosquito spray out on that field exercise.

But portraits of superior officers and LBJ kept vanishing from the walls, only to turn up in toilets. One of my colleagues handled computer-graded tests for officers who failed — despite instructions — to press down hard when marking the little answer box.

Amazing how many flunked the class.

SECURITY AT FORT Holabird is rigid, but how about the time three black GIs brought a couple of innocent young things back to the barracks, right past MP headquarters?

Navigating with impaired faculties one night, I even climbed the barbed wire perimenter fence to avoid walking an extra two miles, although I did tear my shirt.

One night a rebel force of permanent party personnel engaged a hostile element — the MPs — bent on destroying our beer bust in the picnic grounds and seizing our supplies.

We held our position with valor and drove off the MPs with volleys of empty ammo cannisters.

TIMES CHANGE, but I'm certain if the great concrete barn that allegedly contained archives of suspicious persons still stands at Holabird, my name is recorded in a dossier there.

And even though skulking and slinking is now passe among the amateur spies one can rest easily, knowing the permanent party draftees will carry on tradition..

Efforts With East

Nixon Endorses Brandt's Policy

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon, in the first of two days of policy talks with West German Chancellor Willy Brandt, has endorsed Brandt's efforts to seek "a more normal relationship" with the Communist nations of Eastern Europe.

It was the first public endorsement by Nixon of the West German policy of reconciliation with the East.

The two leaders were scheduled to meet again private at the White House today at 6:30 a.m. PST before the chancellor flies to Cape Kennedy for the Apollo 13 launch.

Nixon, in a toast at a White House dinner Friday following a two-hour conference with the West German leader, praised Brandt for "pursuing a policy of negotiation which we hope will take the place of confrontation in the heart of Europe."

Brandt, in an after dinner speech, hailed the President's announced policy of replacing an era of confrontation with an era of negotiations during his administration.

"This is the concept on which my government's policy is based," he said.

Brandt also stressed the importance of German-American ties and said that because Germany believed in freedom, democracy and self-determination, "We have made the Atlantic alliance the cornerstone of our policy and consider the cultivation of German-American relations an overriding interest of ours."

The chancellor said that in his look to the East he was fully aware of the need to deal with realities "in order to arrive at a more normal relationship with our Eastern European neighbors. We pursue this task free from illusion but with perservance."

In addition to the West German relations with the East, the high-level U.S.-German talks dealt mainly with the European Common Market and the presence of U.S. troops in Germany.

German press spokesman Conrad Ahlers said the question of U.S. troop withdrawal with only marginally.

U.S. Plane Crashes; 10 Die on Base

BANGKOK (UPI) — A crippled U.S. F4 Phantom reconnaissance plane whose two crewmen had bailed out crashed into the American air base at Udorn Friday, killing 10 GIs and wounding 40.

The jet destroyed nine small huts built to accommodate two to five officers apiece and damaged another. Fire ranged out of control for 40 minutes after the crash, thought to be the worst accident at any of the six American air bases in Thailand.

Reports from Udorn, in northern Thailand, said the plane had been hit by ground fire during a reconnaissance mission over Laos. The crewmen tried to nurse it back home but bailed out at the last minute and were not hurt.

The huts that were destroyed housed officers from the rank of lieutenant to lieutenant colonel. There was no indication how many of them were inside when the $2.8 million Phantom hit.

A spokesman for the U.S. embassy in Bangkok said the names of the dead were being withheld until their relatives are notified. Some of the victims were thought to have been in a radio shack that was destroyed in the crash.

Body of Slain Diplomat Home

BONN (AP) — The body of Ambassador Count Karl von Spreti, slain in Guatemala by leftist guerrillas, arrived here today aboard a West German air force plane.

Foreign Minister Walter Scheel accompanied the body of the 63-year-old diplomat on the flight from Guatemala City.

Count von Spreti was shot Sunday by members of the Rebel Armed Forces after the Guatemalan government refused to release 22 political prisoners and pay $700,000 in exchange for his freedom.

West Germany recalled its diplomatic mission from Guatemala following the slaying. Bonn also suggested that Guatemala's ambassador leave West Germany.

Before leaving Guatemala City, Scheel delivered a stiff protest to the government, charging that it "did not find itself in a position to protect the highest German representative and save his life."

Von Spreti's widow, her three children and the count's brother flew to Bonn with Scheel. A memorial service is planned in parliament Monday. Burial will be Tuesday in the ambassador's native Bavaria.

Japan's foreign ministry disclosed in Tokyo today that the Japanes eambassador to Guatemala has been authorized to withdraw his seven-man staff from the country any time at his own discretion.

Space Rocket Delivery Delays Flood Control

An Orange County Flood control project is going to wait on America's moon shot.

County authorities said Friday that North American Rockwell will be shipping the bulky second stage of a Saturn II rocket in mid-September from its Seal Beach facility to Cape Kennedy via Anaheim Bay.

The route to the dock is on Bay Boulevard, and the flood control project schedule calls for construction to go under Bay Boulevard sometime in July. But NASA, North American and the flood control district have agreed on a postponement

"The present problem is unique," said the Flood Control District's Chief Engineer George Osborne, "in that the Saturn II rocket is the last major space rocket component scheduled for fabrication at the Seal Beach facility under current Apollo programs, thus marking an end to complications of this type.

The flood control project, designed to serve southern Seal Beach, includes construction of a storm conduit under Bay Boulevard from the vicinity of its intersection with Pacific Coast Highway to a point on the western edge of Anaheim Bay where a pumping station is to be built.

Shooting Figure Released on Bail

Randall Greg Allen raised $1,500 balFirday and was released pending further Superior Court action related to the shooting in Huntington Beach last March 12 of Thomas C. Astorina.

Judge James F. Judge reduced the bail of the Costa Mesa man, but refused to grant Allen's plea that he be freed on his own recognizance — no cash needed.

Allen is supposed to be back before the same judge Wednesday for a ruling on his motion that conspiracy and kidnaping charges against him be dismissed. He was indicted by the Orange County Grand Jury last March 30.

Allen, 25, of 350 Avocado St., is one of three men accused of involvement in the shooting death of Astorina, 25. The former Anaheim man's body was found in a boggy area near Sunset Aquatic Park.

Lawmen are looking for Robert W. Liberty, 25, and Robert P. Connolly, 45, both of the Avocado Street address, in connection with the slaying. They were also indicted by the Grand Jury following investigation of the killing which was, officers say, sparked by a fracas over a $30 television set.

MRS. INA BLISS, SAMUEL LEGESSE DISCUSS ETHIOPIAN MATS
Student From African Nation Looking to Writing Career

Baycrest Family Hosting Teenager From Ethiopia

By JOANNE REYNOLDS
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Few of Nat and Ina Bliss' Baycrest neighbors are probably aware they've got an aspiring playwright living in their midst.

But that's exactly what Samuel Legesse, an Ethiopian high school student who lives with the Blisses, does when he's not studying.

"Right now I'm working on trying to produce one of my plays at Harbor High. Actually, I would be happy to have it produced anywhere in the Harbor area," the nineteen-year-old playwright said.

Sam got his start writing plays when he was ten. "I wrote a short play on Ethiopian folk customs which my school put on for the Emperor (Haile Selassie)," he noted.

When he's not writing plays, Sam is completing his senior year at Harbor High School as a guest of the Bliss family.

"We are involved with the Council of World Affairs International Visitors Program, where we provide escorts or drivers for people traveling under the auspices of the State Department," Mrs. Bliss explained.

"Samuel's father, who is Ethiopia's vice minister of elections, was our dinner guest while he was here about a year ago," she said, "and we just hit it off famously.

"About three months after he returned to Ethiopia, we got a letter from him saying his eldest son was anxious to come to school in the United States and inquiring how he should go about finding a school and so on.

"We talked it over and wrote back saying Sam was more than welcomed if he wanted to come stay with us and go to school here," Mrs. Bliss said.

Sam has fit into the Bliss household like a member of the family. The eldest of nine children, he gets along very well with the two Bliss children, Erika, 2, and David, 5.

Adjusting to life in an English speaking country is no problem for the teenager. "In Ethiopia all classes to the sixth grade are taught in Amharic, the native tongue. After that all classes are taught in English," he noted.

"School here is not much different than at home. Ethiopian schools follow western curriculum pretty closely, except three the teacher moves from class to class instead of the students."

The young man said he hopes to stay in Newport and attend Cal State Fullerton in the fall. "I have a lot of plans, but nothing's definite yet. I will probably go back to Ethiopia for a visit the summer after next," he speculated.

Sam said he has not picked a career yet. He said he has considered going into politics like his father or sticking with his playwriting.

"I haven't decided yet, but there is plenty of time to make a decision. I'm still quite young," he stated.

Proving he was a diplomat's son, the visitor said he thought life in America was "very nice."

He said he likes hamburgers, hot dogs and tacos. "We have hamburgers at home, but the name is different and the shape is a little different. Of course the way it is served is different, and we don't have catsup."

The young student said Ethiopian food is very highly spiced and so he finds he has no trouble eating Mexican food. "Italian food is very popular in Ethiopia, so that is one thing that is not different," he explained.

Threat Against Queen Revealed in Australia

SYDNEY (AP — Anonymous callers telephoned two newspapers in Brisbane Saturday and said Queen Elizabeth II will be assassinated during her visit to Austrailia next week if any Irishmen are shot in Northern Ireland.

Fuming at Form?

IRS Says 'Bugs' Out by Next Year

WASHINGTON (AP) — The new income tax forms may have troubled some citizens, the Internal Revenue Service concedes, but the bugs should be worked out by next year.

IRS Commissioner Randolph W. Thrower says this year's experience with the new red, white and blue Form 1040 booklet will help in smoothing out the wrinkles.

The new booklet replaced both the old long Form 1040 and the punchcard-size Form 1040A and has been criticized as confusing and more complicated.

Thrower said the IRS will commission an outside study of the new forms to help work out problems which arose this year.

"We would contemplate for next year remaining with the same basic structure that we have," Thrower said in an interview.

"But we have found some bugs in the present presentation and certainly those will be removed.

"We have found some points and areas that can be clarified so that I think there will be two factors working together next year," he said. "One, we will have had the benefit of testing by 77 million returns this year; Two, people will have a familiarity with the return.

"Basically," he added, "we believe that the new structure is better, and terminating the dual form system of the past certainly was necessary."

Thrower also said the Tax Reform Act of 1969 will make things easier for many people in the low income bracket who will be taken off the tax rolls entirely and won't have to file a return.

Some high income taxpayers with sophisticated types of income will experience more difficulty under the act, Thrower said, but these are people who would be expected to have accounting help.

But Relief Arrives

U.S. Calls B-52s To Break Siege

SAIGON (UPI) — The U.S. command called in six armadas of B52 bombers today in an attempt to deal a death blow to the 11-day North Vietnamese siege of the Green Beret camp at Dak Seang.

Official spokesmen who announced the early morning raids said there was no fighting or shelling reported at the outpost and described the situation there as "very good. . .beautiful."

Still, the presence of an estimated 10,000 Communist troops around the garrison 292 miles northeast of Saigon forced U.S. Air Force cargo planes to use parachute drops to keep the defenders supplied with food, water and ammunition.

A battalion of Cambodian mercenaries led by Australian special forces soldiers drove through the encirclement to the camp Friday after three days of heavy hand-to-hand fighting en route. This helped take the pressure off the allied bastion.

The B52s, dropping up to 900 tons of bombs, were brought in this morning to try to break the encirclement for good. Their targets were described as weapons positions two miles east and nine miles southwest of Dak Seang.

Spokesmen said the new raids brought to 24 the number of stratofort missions flown in support of the base — similar to B52 strikes that helped break such other sieges as the one at Khe Sanh in early 1968 and at Ben Het, near Dak Seang, last spring.

Commanders in the Dak Seang area claimed more than 1,300 North Vietnamese have been killed since the seige opened 11 days ago on the opening night of what was referred to officially as the guerillas' spring "high point."

Allied losses among the Green Beret and South Vietnamese defenders at Dak Seang have been estimated at 50 dead and 175 wounded, most of them government soldiers.

Badham Proposes Fuel Tax Hike

SACRAMENTO — Assemblyman Robert E. Badham, (R-Newport Beach), has introduced a bill to hike the tax on diesel fuel by two cents per gallon and drop the motor vehicle transportation tax.

Diesel fuel taxes have not been increased by the state since 1953. The gasoline tax paid by most motorists was boosted in 1953 and again in 1963. Both are now seven cents a gallon.

The motor vehicle transportation tax is a one and one-half percent levy on the gross receipts of firms hauling for-hire cargo or passengers outside city limits. Badham said Friday it is a bad tax because administrative costs eat up 5.5 percent of the nearly $22 million in revenue it produces annually.

The increase in diesel fuel taxes and a 15 percent increase in vehicle weight fees paid by truckers. The biggest rigs, with six axles, now pay $446 annually.

If Badham's bill wins Assembly approval, it would still face a major hurdle in the Senate, whose transportation committee is headed by Sen. Randolph Collier, (D-Yreka).

Cambodia Viets Under Strict Curfew Orders

PHNOM PENH (AP) — The government clamped a curfew on the Cambodian capital's 120,000 Vietnamese today after what it described as a stepup in "subversive activities."

The Phnom Penh military command said the curfew would run from 6 p.m. to 6 a.m. until further notice. Most prudent Vietnamese had stayed off the streets after dark anyway.

Phnom Penh's population is about 600,000, including about 100,000 Chinese. Brought here by the French colonial administration, the Vietnamese are active in small businesses.

A government statement charged that the Viet Cong had ordered Vietnamese children to tear patriotic posters from walls and trees, and that a number of them had been arrested. The children were said to have told the police that the Viet Cong paid them $2-$4 for each poster.

Other Vietnamese children reportedly were told to sabotage administrative and military buildings.

For the past week, Cambodian primary, high school and university students had been decorating Phnom Penh with hundreds of anti-Viet Cong posters and banners and marching in support of abolishing the monarchy in favor of a republic.

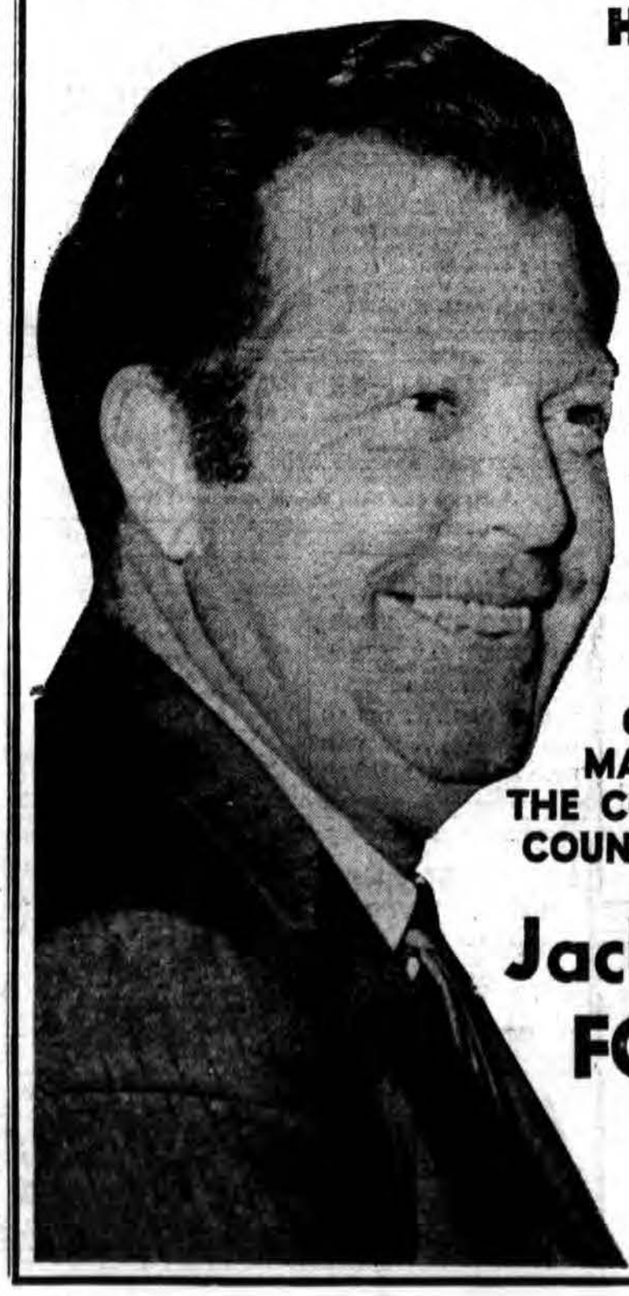

In announcing the curfew, the government radio declared:

"To avoid all danger, the commander of the military region has decided to forbid all of Vietnamese orgin, young or old, to circulate from 1800 hours to 6 in the morning until further orders."

The government also said the Viet Cong were responsible for an explosion that wrecked a locomotive Thursday night in the capital's railroad yard. It was the first major act of terrorism reported in the city since the overthrow of Prince Norodom Sihanouk as chief of state on March 18.

PAID POLITICAL ADVERTISING

You know, at the eleventh hour politician's promises are more numerous than mosquitoes on a June night. Maybe this time you ought to pass up the talker for the Doer.

Here's Jack Hammett's 10 year record in Costa Mesa:

- 10 Years ACTIVE participation in the Costa Mesa Chamber of Commerce
- 3 Years ACTIVE chairmanship of the Legislative Committee
- 2 consecutive terms as President of the Costa Mesa Chamber of Commerce
- 10 Years ACTIVE experience as an administrator of a successful business.
- 7 Years as an ACTIVE member of the Costa Mesa Planning Commission
- 2 Years as an ACTIVE chairman of the Planning Commission.
- 9 Years ACTIVE service on the Costa Mesa Police Reserve, including presidency of that organization
- 25 Years as an ACTIVE pilot, rated flight instructor multi-engine aircraft.

He knows the real airport problems.

SUNDAY
APRIL 12

By SYDNEY OMARR

Taurus can be moody. But many born under this sign are extremely successful and attractive to opposite sex. Taurus collects — both debts and favors. The Taurus man thinks nothing of keeping more than one girl waiting for a yes or no. The Taurus woman is sensuous, gains joy in keeping a man wondering. Taurus invented the guessing game. Celebrities include Glenn Ford, Janet Blair, Joe Louis.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Blocks, obstacles can be expected. But if you want to perfect techniques, you will have to hurdle, skip and hop. Not easy. But you could find out that what you own is quite valuable.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Some confusion exists. Relatives make unusual requests. You gain. But you also have added pressure, responsibility. Older person would like to better understand you. Try to cooperate.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Money you get comes from trusting your own hunches. Financial advisers today tend to be gun-shy. Be specific. Get rid of outmoded, expensive procedures. Streamline operations.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You get some deserved breaks. Refuse to be restricted, tied down or a victim of groundless fear. Obtain fresh viewpoint. Stress originality and independence. No real need to doubt.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your ideas are not clearly formed. Take time to crystallize desires. Your hunches are accurate. But you may be holding back real purpose. Please take time to be analytical.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Friends could provide money-making advice. Time to expand. Be versatile. Have fun but sharpen powers of observation. Someone may try some heavy flattery. Keep feet on ground.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Be aware of apparent minor details. Emphasis on ability to adjust to variety of responsibilities. There may be challenge by one who wants to replace you. Maintain balance.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You are delighted to find that what was feared should be welcomed. Study Libra message. Be friendly, but prepared. Changes are due — in your favor.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Emotions tend to rule logic. Keep reins on self-control. Family member deserves special attention. Be

Nixon Endorses Brandt's Policy

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon, in the first of two days of policy talks with West German Chancellor Willy Brandt, has endorsed Brandt's efforts to seek "a more normal relationship" with the Communist nations of Eastern Europe.

It was the first public endorsement by Nixon of the West German policy of reconciliation with the East.

The two leaders were scheduled to meet again private at the White House today at 6:30 a.m. PST before the chancellor flies to Cape Kennedy for the Apollo 13 launch.

Nixon, in a toast at a White House dinner Friday following a two-hour conference with the West German leader, praised Brandt for "pursuing a policy of negotiation which we hope will take the place of confrontation in the heart of Europe."

Brandt, in an after dinner speech, hailed the President's announced policy of replacing an era of confrontation with an era of negotiations during his administration.

"This is the concept on which my government's policy is based," he said.

Brandt also stressed the importance of German-American ties and said that because Germany believed in freedom, democracy and self-determination, "We have made the Atlantic alliance the cornerstone of our policy and consider the cultivation of German-American relations an overriding interest of ours."

The chancellor said that in his look to the East he was fully aware of the need to deal with realities "in order to arrive at a more normal relationship with our Eastern European neighbors. We pursue this task free from illusion but with perservance."

In addition to the West German relations with the East, the high-level U.S.-German talks dealt mainly with the European Common Market and the presence of U.S. troops in Germany.

German press spokesman Conrad Ahlers said the question of U.S. troop withdrawal with only marginally.

U.S. Plane Crashes; 10 Die on Base

BANGKOK (UPI) — A crippled U.S. F4 Phantom reconnaissance plane whose two crewmen had bailed out crashed into the American air base at Udorn Friday, killing 10 GIs and wounding 40.

The jet destroyed nine small huts built to accommodate two to five officers apiece and damaged another. Fire ranged out of control for 40 minutes after the crash, thought to be the worst accident at any of the six American air bases in Thailand.

Reports from Udorn, in northern Thailand, said the plane had been hit by ground fire during a reconnaissance mission over Laos. The crewmen tried to nurse it back home but bailed out at the last minute and were not hurt.

The huts that were destroyed housed officers from the rank of lieutenant to lieutenant colonel. There was no indication how many of them were inside when the $2.8 million Phantom hit.

A spokesman for the U.S. embassy in Bangkok said the names of the dead were being withheld until their relatives are notified. Some of the victims were thought to have been in a radio shack that was destroyed in the crash.

Body of Slain Diplomat Home

BONN (AP) — The body of Ambassador Count Karl von Spreti, slain in Guatemala by leftist guerrillas, arrived here today aboard a West German air force plane.

Foreign Minister Walter Scheel accompanied the body of the 63-year-old diplomat on the flight from Guatemala City.

Count von Spreti was shot Sunday by members of the Rebel Armed Forces after the Guatemalan government refused to release 22 political prisoners and pay $700,000 in exchange for his freedom.

West Germany recalled its diplomatic mission from Guatemala following the slaying. Bonn also suggested that Guatemala's ambassador leave West Germany.

Before leaving Guatemala City, Scheel delivered a stiff protest to the government, charging that it "did not find itself in a position to protect the highest German representative and save his life."

Von Spreti's widow, her three children and the count's brother flew to Bonn with Scheel. A memorial service is planned in parliament Monday. Burial will be Tuesday in the ambassador's native Bavaria.

Japan's foreign ministry disclosed in Tokyo today that the Japanes eambassador to Guatemala has been authorized to withdraw his seven-man staff from the country any time at his own discretion.

Space Rocket Delivery Delays Flood Control

An Orange County Flood control project is going to wait on America's moon shot.

County authorities said Friday that North American Rockwell will be shipping the bulky second stage of a Saturn II rocket in mid-September from its Seal Beach facility to Cape Kennedy via Anaheim Bay.

The route to the dock is on Bay Boulevard, and the flood control project schedule calls for construction to go under Bay Boulevard sometime in July. But NASA, North American and the flood control district have agreed on a postponement

"The present problem is unique," said the Flood Control District's Chief Engineer George Osborne, "in that the Saturn II rocket is the last major space rocket component scheduled for fabrication at the Seal Beach facility under current Apollo programs, thus marking an end to complications of this type.

The flood control project, designed to serve southern Seal Beach, includes construction of a storm conduit under Bay Boulevard from the vicinity of its intersection with Pacific Coast Highway to a point on the western edge of Anaheim Bay where a pumping station is to be built.

Shooting Figure Released on Bail

Randall Greg Allen raised $1,500 bal-Firday and was released pending further Superior Court action related to the shooting in Huntington Beach last March 12 of Thomas C. Astorina.

Judge James F. Judge reduced the bail of the Costa Mesa man, but refused to grant Allen's plea that he be freed on his own recognizance — no cash needed.

Allen is supposed to be back before the same judge Wednesday for a ruling on his motion that conspiracy and kidnaping charges against him be dismissed. He was indicted by the Orange County Grand Jury last March 30.

Allen, 25, of 350 Avocado St., is one of three men accused of involvement in the shooting death of Astorina, 25. The former Anaheim man's body was found in a boggy area near Sunset Aquatic Park.

Lawmen are looking for Robert W. Liberty, 25, and Robert P. Connolly, 45, both of the Avocado Street address, in connection with the slaying. They were also indicted by the Grand Jury following investigation of the killing which was, officers say, sparked by a fracas over a $30 television set.

MRS. INA BLISS, SAMUEL LEGESSE DISCUSS ETHIOPIAN MATS
Student From African Nation Looking to Writing Career

Baycrest Family Hosting Teenager From Ethiopia

By JOANNE REYNOLDS
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Few of Nat and Ina Bliss' Baycrest neighbors are probably aware they've got an aspiring playwright living in their midst.

But that's exactly what Samuel Legesse, an Ethiopian high school student who lives with the Blisses, does when he's not studying.

"Right now I'm working on trying to produce one of my plays at Harbor High. Actually, I would be happy to have it produced anywhere in the Harbor area," the nineteen-year-old playwright said.

Sam got his start writing plays when he was ten. "I wrote a short play on Ethiopian folk customs which my school put on for the Emperor (Haile Selassie)," he noted.

When he's not writing plays, Sam is completing his senior year at Harbor High School as a guest of the Bliss family.

"We are involved with the Council of World Affairs International Visitors Program, where we provide escorts or drivers for people traveling under the auspices of the State Department," Mrs. Bliss explained.

"Samuel's father, who is Ethiopia's vice minister of elections, was our dinner guest while he was here about a year ago," she said, "and we just hit it off famously.

"About three months after he returned to Ethiopia, we got a letter from him saying his eldest son was anxious to come to school in the United States and inquiring how he should go about finding a school and so on.

"We talked it over and wrote back saying Sam was more than welcomed if he wanted to come stay with us and go to school here," Mrs. Bliss said.

Sam has fit into the Bliss household like a member of the family. The eldest of nine children, he gets along very well with the two Bliss children, Erika, 2, and David, 5.

Adjusting to life in an English speaking country is no problem for the teenager. "In Ethiopia all classes to the sixth grade are taught in Amharic, the native tongue. After that all classes are taught in English," he noted.

"School here is not much different than at home. Ethiopian schools follow western curriculum pretty closely, except three the teacher moves from class to class instead of the students."

The young man said he hopes to stay in Newport and attend Cal State Fullerton in the fall. "I have a lot of plans, but nothing's definite yet. I will probably go back to Ethiopia for a visit the summer after next," he speculated.

Sam said he has not picked a career yet. He said he has considered going into politics like his father or sticking with his playwriting.

"I haven't decided yet, but there is plenty of time to make a decision. I'm still quite young," he stated.

Proving he was a diplomat's son, the visitor said he thought life in America was "very nice."

He said he likes hamburgers, hot dogs and tacos. "We have hamburgers at home, but the name is different and the shape is a little different. Of course the way it is served is different, and we don't have catsup."

The young student said Ethiopian food is very highly spiced and so he finds he has no trouble eating Mexican food. "Italian food is very popular in Ethiopia, so that is one thing that is not different," he explained.

Threat Against Queen Revealed in Australia

SYDNEY (AP — Anonymous callers telephoned two newspapers in Brisbane Saturday and said Queen Elizabeth II will be assassinated during her visit to Austrailia next week if any Irishmen are shot in Northern Ireland.

Fuming at Form?

IRS Says 'Bugs' Out by Next Year

WASHINGTON (AP) — The new income tax forms may have troubled some citizens, the Internal Revenue Service concedes, but the bugs should be worked out by next year.

IRS Commissioner Randolph W. Thrower says this year's experience with the new red, white and blue Form 1040 booklet will help in smoothing out the wrinkles.

The new booklet replaced both the old long Form 1040 and the punchcard-size Form 1040A and has been criticized as confusing and more complicated.

Thrower said the IRS will commission an outside study of the new forms to help work out problems which arose this year.

"We would contemplate for next year remaining with the same basic structure that we have," Thrower said in an interview.

"But we have found some bugs in the present presentation and certainly those will be removed.

"We have found some points and areas that can be clarified so that I think there will be two factors working together next year," he said. "One, we will have had the benefit of testing by 77 million returns this year; Two, people will have a familiarity with the return.

"Basically," he added, "we believe that the new structure is better, and terminating the dual form system of the past certainly was necessary."

Thrower also said the Tax Reform Act of 1969 will make things easier for many people in the low income bracket who will be taken off the tax rolls entirely and won't have to file a return.

Some high income taxpayers with sophisticated types of income will experience more difficulty under the act, Thrower said, but these are people who would be expected to have accounting help.

But Relief Arrives

U.S. Calls B-52s To Break Siege

SAIGON (UPI) — The U.S. command called in six armadas of B52 bombers today in an attempt to deal a death blow to the 11-day North Vietnamese siege of the Green Beret camp at Dak Seang.

Official spokesmen who announced the early morning raids said there was no fighting or shelling reported at the outpost and described the situation there as "very good. . .beautiful."

Still, the presence of an estimated 10,000 Communist troops around the garrison 292 miles northeast of Saigon forced U.S. Air Force cargo planes to use parachute drops to keep the defenders supplied with food, water and ammunition.

A battalion of Cambodian mercenaries led by Australian special forces soldiers drove through the encirclement to the camp Friday after three days of heavy hand-to-hand fighting en route. This helped take the pressure off the allied bastion.

The B52s, dropping up to 900 tons of bombs, were brought in this morning to try to break the encirclement for good. Their targets were described as weapons positions two miles east and nine miles southwest of Dak Seang.

Spokesmen said the new raids brought to 24 the number of stratofort missions flown in support of the base — similar to B52 strikes that helped break such other sieges as the one at Khe Sanh in early 1968 and at Ben Het, near Dak Seang, last spring.

Commanders in the Dak Seang area claimed more than 1,300 North Vietnamese have been killed since the seige opened 11 days ago on the opening night of what was referred to officially as the guerillas' spring "high point."

Allied losses among the Green Beret and South Vietnamese defenders at Dak Seang have been estimated at 50 dead and 175 wounded, most of them government soldiers.

Badham Proposes Fuel Tax Hike

SACRAMENTO — Assemblyman Robert E. Badham, (R-Newport Beach), has introduced a bill to hike the tax on diesel fuel by two cents per gallon and drop the motor vehicle transportation tax.

Diesel fuel taxes have not been increased by the state since 1953. The gasoline tax paid by most motorists was boosted in 1953 and again in 1963. Both are now seven cents a gallon.

The motor vehicle transportation tax is a one and one-half percent levy on the gross receipts of firms hauling for-hire cargo or passengers outside city limits. Badham said Friday it is a bad tax because administrative costs eat up 5.5 percent of the nearly $22 million in revenue it produces annually.

The increase in diesel fuel taxes and a 15 percent increase in vehicle weight fees paid by truckers. The biggest rigs, with six axles, now pay $446 annually.

If Badham's bill wins Assembly approval, it would still face a major hurdle in the Senate, whose transportation committee is headed by Sen. Randolph Collier, (D-Yreka).

Cambodia Viets Under Strict Curfew Orders

PHNOM PENH (AP) — The government clamped a curfew on the Cambodian capital's 120,000 Vietnamese today after what it described as a stepup in "subversive activities."

The Phnom Penh military command said the curfew would run from 6 p.m. to 6 a.m. until further notice. Most prudent Vietnamese had stayed off the streets after dark anyway.

Phnom Penh's population is about 600,000, including about 100,000 Chinese. Brought here by the French colonial administration, the Vietnamese are active in small businesses.

A government statement charged that the Viet Cong had ordered Vietnamese children to tear patriotic posters from walls and trees, and that a number of them had been arrested. The children were said to have told the police that the Viet Cong paid them $2-$4 for each poster.

Other Vietnamese children reportedly were told to sabotage administrative and military buildings.

For the past week, Cambodian primary, high school and university students had been decorating Phnom Penh with hundreds of anti-Viet Cong posters and banners and marching in support of abolishing the monarchy in favor of a republic.

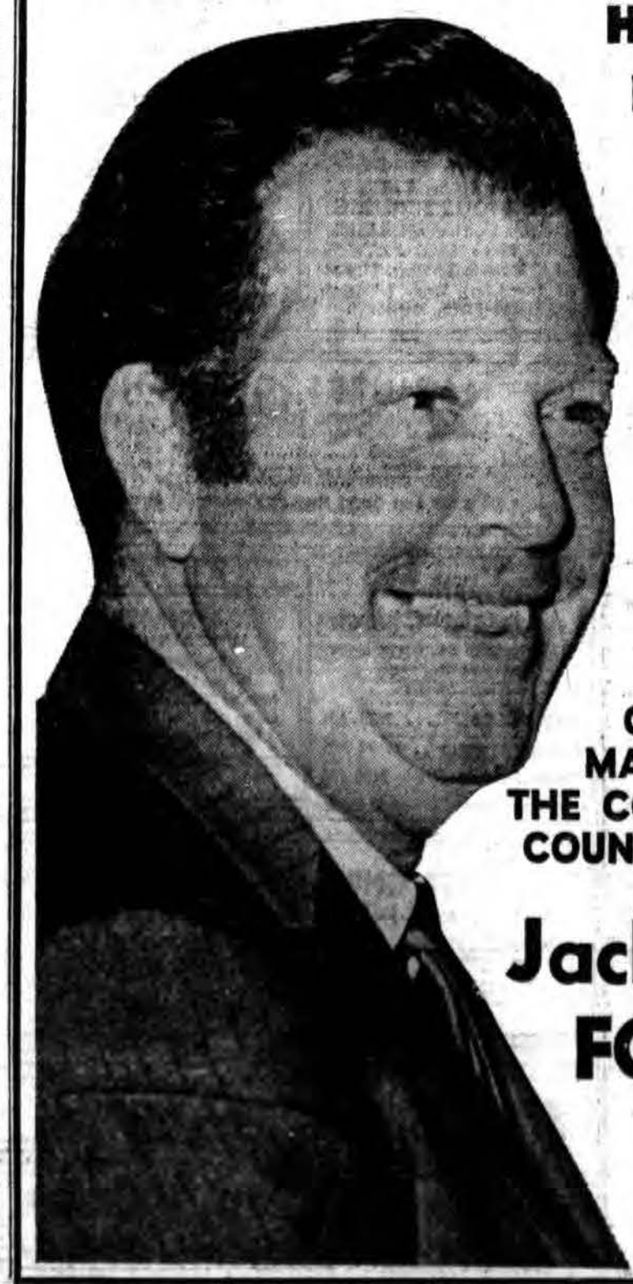

In announcing the curfew, the government radio declared:

"To avoid all danger, the commander of the miltary region has decided to forbid all of Vietnamese orgin, young or old, to circulate from 1800 hours to 6 in the morning until further orders."

The government also said the Viet Cong were responsible for an explosion that wrecked a locomotive Thursday night in the capital's railroad yard. It was the first major act of terrorism reported in the city since the overthrow of Prince Norodom Sihanouk as chief of state on March 18.

PAID POLITICAL ADVERTISING

You know, at the eleventh hour politician's promises are more numerous than mosquitoes on a June night. Maybe this time you ought to pass up the talker for the Doer.

Here's Jack Hammett's 10 year record in Costa Mesa:

SUNDAY
APRIL 12

By SYDNEY OMARR

Taurus can be moody. But many born under this sign are extremely successful and attractive to opposite sex. Taurus collects — both debts and favors. The Taurus man thinks nothing of keeping more than one girl waiting for a yes or no. The Taurus woman is sensuous, gains joy in keeping a man wondering. Taurus invented the guessing game. Celebrities include Glenn Ford, Janet Blair, Joe Louis.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Blocks, obstacles can be expected. But if you want to perfect techniques, you will have to hurdle, skip and hop. Not easy. But you could find out that what you own is quite valuable.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Some confusion exists. Relatives make unusual requests. You gain. But you also have added pressure, responsibility. Older person would like to better understand you. Try to cooperate.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Money you get comes from trusting your own hunches. Financial advisers today tend to be gun-shy. Be specific. Get rid of outmoded, expensive procedures. Streamline operations.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You get some deserved breaks. Refuse to be restricted, tied down or a victim of groundless fear. Obtain fresh viewpoint. Stress originality and independence. No real need to doubt.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your ideas are not clearly formed. Take time to crystallize desires. Your hunches are accurate. But you may be holding back real purpose. Please take time to be analytical.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Friends could provide money-making advice. Time to expand. Be versatile. Have fun but sharpen powers of observation. Someone may try some heavy flattery. Keep feet on ground.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Be aware of apparent minor details. Emphasis on ability to adjust to variety of responsibilities. There may be challenge by one who wants to replace you. Maintain balance.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You are delighted to find that what was feared should be welcomed. Study Libra message. Be friendly, but prepared. Changes are due — in your favor.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Emotions tend to rule logic. Keep reins on self-control. Family member deserves special attention. Be

School, 425 E. 18th St., Costa Mesa, at 10:45.

On Sunday at the 9 and 10:30 a.m. worship services, Rev. Fred Morse, new pastor at Central Bible Church, 23rd and Orange, Costa Mesa, will bring the first in a new series of messages entitled, "What It Means To Be in Christ." Pastor Morse will begin a series on "The Miracles of Christ" at the 7 p.m. Sunday evening service.

"How Can I Make My Faith Work?" is the sermon topic of the Rev. Norman L. Brown on Sunday at the Plymouth Congregational Church of Newport Harbor, 3262 Broad Street, Newport Beach, at 10 a.m. worship service.

Church, Not God Dead To Many Collegians

By LOUIS CASSELS
UPI Religion Writer

God isn't dead on college campuses. But the church, as an institution, enjoys very little favor among students.

That is the finding of James and Robert Foley, two enterprising undergraduates who polled 3,000 students at 100 colleges on their attitudes toward everything from religion to race relations and the draft. The results are published in a book, "The College Scene" (Cowles).

In reply to the question, "Do you believe in God or a Supreme Being?", 73 percent answered yes, 19 percent said no, and 8 percent registered indecision.

Responses to other questions indicated that most students draw a sharp distinction between believing in God as a necessary hypothesis to explain the existence and order of the universe, and being actively "religious."

Being religious was generally understood to mean, or at least to include, going to church. In reply to the question, "have you been to church services of any kind in the last seven days?, only 36 percent answered yes, and 64 percent said no. Many of the latter indicated they never went to church.

In volunteered comments and in response to follow-up questions, the non-churchgoers said that traditional patterns of corporate worship strike them as being dull and pointless.

Many said they'd be attracted to the church if they felt that its primary purpose was serving mankind. But they made clear it is here-and-now service, combatting social ills, that they want to see the church involved in, not preparing people for a future life.

Although most of the students said they believed in a life hereafter, relatively few seemed to think it would involve rewards or punishments for things done (or left undone) in this life.

The Foley findings are corroborated, in the main, by the observations of college chaplains and religion teachers.

The Rev. Dr. Robert McAfee Brown, professor of religion at Stanford, says he encounters "a remarkable degree of what I must call religious commitment on the campus," even among students who do not profess belief in any conventional concept of God.

"Jesus is 'in' with students," Dr. Brown says, because he met the fundamental campus test of sincerety by "putting his body where his words were."

"But there is not a similar interest in the institutional church. Students feel that the church equivocates on important issues, such as race and Vietnam, and thus betrays Jesus. For that reason, on most campuses, chapel attendance is very low."

One of the interesting sidelights of the Foley poll is that young people brought up in certain religious faiths continue to describe themselves as members of that faith, even though they say they have repudiated its doctrines and practices.

This determination to cling to the label of a supposedly abandoned faith was particularly evident among Catholics, Episcopalians, Presbyterians and Jews.

St. Andrew's Hosts County Film Premier

St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, 600 St. Andrew's Road, Newport Beach, will be the host for a premier Orange County showing of the World Wide Pictures new movie, "His Land."

The one hour film in Eastmancolor has just been released. It will be shown at the church Sunday night at 7:30 p.m.

"His Land" takes the viewer the length and breadth of Israel in the company of Cliff Barrows and a young British recording star, Cliff Richard, who sings six new Ralph Carmichael songs. During the movie the two relate the happenings of today to the scripture of yesterday.

The film was made to graphically depict Israel today as living testimony to the words of the prophets.

Admission to this special showing at St. Andrew's is free and everyone is welcome.

OCC Chorale Sets Music

The Orange Coast College Chorale and Chamber Singers will present a program of sacred and secular music at 8 p.m. Sunday in Laguna Beach.

Chorale director Walter E. Gleckler said that the program, which will be held at the Neighborhood Congregational Church in Laguna, will help finance the group's Canadian tour later this semester.

Each year the members of the chorale stage concerts and conduct fund raising projects to finance a tour.

Pope Tells Faith Crisis

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Paul VI said today that the drain of priests from the Roman Catholic Church would not be stopped by the abolition of the mandatory celibacy rule.

"The crisis of Church vocations is an aspect of the crisis of faith which is rocking the whole world," the Pope said in a message marking the seventh world day of prayer for priestly vocations Sunday.

"The access to priesthood will not become more desirable by just making it easier — for example by freeing it from the rule which the Latin Church considers its supreme honor — celibacy," the Pope said.

Vatican Lists Basic Laws

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — Vatican legal experts have completed a revolutionary and possibly explosive book that for the first time lists "fundamental laws" of the Roman Catholic church.

Vatican sources said Monday night the volume would be an introduction to the entire Canon Law Code that is undergoing its first major revision in half a century. It contains 2,414 articles pertaining to the canons, or church laws.

"One cannot speak of a constitution for an organization which was divinely inspired and which is ruled by an absolute monarch," one Vatican source said. "But this volume would be the nearest thing the church would have to a constitution."

The Pontifical Commission for Revision of the Canon Law Code sent copies of the book to the 125 theologians, canon lawyers and other advisers to the commission.

They were asked to comment and replies received so far have been favorable, the sources said.

The establishment of fundament] laws could provoke strong reaction from liberal Catholics who oppose legislating church practices and beliefs. The book is reported to include pronouncements on priestly celibacy and the role of the Pope — two subjects the liberals feel are far from closed.

The fundamental laws and reactions from advisers will be discussed at the next plenary meeting of the Canon Law Commission in October. Vatican sources said the volume would then have to be approved by the Pope and the world's 3,000 bishops — few of whom have seen it.

The revision of Canon Law began in 1963 and is still far from complete. It is the first revision since 1918 when a Papal commission completed a 12-year work of codifying the law.

Pope John XXIII announced the revision in 1959 and appointed the commission in March 1963.

BIBLE THOUGHTS

JUDGMENT DAY: Lk. 16:19-31 shows that those who die go IMMEDIATELY into a state of eternal bliss or punishment. Then WHY will there be a JUDGMENT DAY? (2 Cor. 5:10, Rev. 20:12, 2 Tim. 4:8). Judgment is as much for JUSTIFICATION of a sentence as for pronouncement of it. At the Judgment day, some rewarded will not realize WHY, and some condemned will not know WHY — there, they will be told the reason. (Matt. 25: 36-41). This knowledge of the JUSTICE of their eternal state will increase the joys of the saved, and the remorseful suffering of the condemned. A man on earth, falsely condemned, may rejoice in his innocence and remain un-bowed, though punished. But one who KNOWS his guilt will bow in regretful recognition of it as he is punished. In the Judgment, every secret deed shall be revealed, every evil thought will be made plain (Rom. 2:16, Heb. 4:13). Every man's book of works shall be opened (Rev. 20:12).

ONLY the blood of Jesus can blot out existing evil deeds in YOUR book of works now recorded in Heaven (1 Pet. 1:18, 19, Heb. 9:14). His blood was freely poured out on the cross as a sin offering for man. But you must ACCEPT this offering. One contacts Christ's blood in Christ's death. We are BAPTIZED int Christ's death (Rom. 6:3-5). We "put on Christ" in bestism (Gal. 3:27) and thereby are in his body. Christ's blood is in his body, the church (Eph. 1:22-23). OUR FILTHY OCEAN

Pollution Taking Its Toll, DDT Is the Principal Offender

By DAVID EPEL

The author is a professor at the Hopkins Marine Station near Monterey. He made these remarks in an address before the Commonwealth Club.

The oceans are beginning to die from chemical pollution. However, nothing is being done about it; and very few even know about it. No one is watching the world. This chemical contamination has begun to wipe out some species of oceanic birds.

This whole concept of oceanic contamination is difficult to imagine. When we talk of pollution of the seemingly endless oceans, we are really talking about global pollution. There are already two well-documented examples of the chemical contamination of our entire planet.

Nuclear testing released Strontium 90 and other isotopes into the atmosphere. It was carried by the wind patterns and came down over the earth with rain and dust as radioactive fallout.

Strontium 90 was concentrated by living organisms and got into our food. Being radioactive, continued exposure to this radiation would have resulted in an increased incidence of cancer.

BECAUSE OF this global contamination by these radioactive elements, an international agreement was made to stop atmospheric nuclear testing.

The next example, which is still all too current, is the global DDT pollution. DDT is released into the air during spraying or evaporates into the air after spraying. It too, is concentrated by living organisms.

DDT gets into microscopic sea plants. The sea plants — with its DDT — are eaten by small fish. These fish — with their DDT — are eaten by still larger fish. Thus the DDT level gets higher and the highest levels are in those animals at the tops of food chains — such as the fish-eating birds.

The reasons this contamination is of such concern is that DDT is a poisonous chemical — which, of course, is the reason it is used as an insecticide. The farmer assumes it stays in or near the field where he sprayed it. The contamination of the globe by DDT tells us that this is not the case.

Now, did anyone in any government realize the extent of this pollution? There were quite a few clues. First, DDT was found in Antarctic penguins; it was found in Arctic seals and whales as well as in Eskimos. In other words, in areas where it was never used. One would think that government agencies responsible for our welfare would have therefore looked at the oceans; but instead the bulk of government surveillance was with freshwater and terrestrial organisms.

THE FIRST SOLID evidence for the massive extent of this global pollution came from the laboratories of several university scientists, who looked beyond the immediate and more dramatic fish and bird kills. Through their investigations it has now become apparent that the oceans are heavily polluted with DDT. The most extensive survey has been made along the Pacific Coast.

What have these researchers found? First, as I already mentioned, DDT and its derivatives are spread all over the globe.

Secondly, a group of industrial chemicals, chemically related to DDT, are also being found everywhere. These chemicals are known as polychlorinated biphenyls, or abbreviated as PCB's. They are used as electrical insulators, as cutting oils, and as plasticizers. Hundreds of millions of pounds of these chemicals have been produced and have somehow escaped.

THIRDLY, THE heavy metal, lead, may also be a problem. More than a half-billion pounds of lead are released each year into the air during the combustion of gasoline. This lead comes from the gas additive tetraethyl lead. It too is escaping into the world. Research from Caltech and the Scripps Institute of Oceanography has shown that large amounts of lead fallout are in snow in Greenland, and that the oceans contain very high lead concentrations near coastal cities, such as Los Angeles.

Obviously, something must be done to correct this situation, since the preceding examples show the ease with which the globe can be polluted. I would like to propose a three-point program.

First and most pressing is the establishment of an international commission or agency to watch the world. This agency has to be international, since this global pollution respects no boundaries. Thus, the only manufacturer of the PCB's in the U.S. is Monsanto Chemical; but they are made by other chemical companies in Germany, France and Japan. Monsanto is apparently trying to find out how the PCB's are escaping and to provide substitutes. Will responsible actions be taken by the companies in Japan and France? Obviously some sort of international controls are needed.

Secondly, we must make international treaties or establish international agencies regulating the types of cargoes which can ply the oceans. Basically, such regulations are no different than those governing transport of explosives over bridges. Such agencies would never have allowed construction of the present generation of supertankers, or at least would have postponed their use until methods were available to prevent oil spills. Santa Barbara will be like nothing if one of these supertankers goes down. The amount of oil in one of these supertankers is about 20 times that released at Santa Barbara. Furthermore, since the release would occur at one time, the effects could be even more disastrous.

The third part of this program is support of research leading to technology which does not result in long-lived contaminants. This must come from both the universities and private industry. Both basic and applied research are needed.

We now have ample warning that, if left unchecked, the death of the oceans will result. Coal miners used to take canaries down into the mines with them to warn about carbon monoxide poisoning. When the canaries keeled over, they knew they were in trouble and better leave fast. The oceans have also shown us their canaries. We also have the pelicans not reproducing because of DDT and North Sea birds dying because of PCB's. Can we afford to wait for greater irreversible tragedies?

These are not insurmountable problems. As I have pointed out today, our chemical technology is so powerful as to have polluted the globe, and to have begun the destruction of the oceans. Surely, knowing this, our response can also be powerful enough to prevent the death of the oceans.

Our Man in San Francisco

The Street Sleeps

By HERB CAEN

SAN FRANCISCO — Nobody who lives around Geary and Franklin was getting much sleep last week. A street repair crew covered a deep hole with steel plates — and from 4 p.m. to 7 a.m., night after dreadful night, it was boom-boom-boom as cars rumbled across them. Then, one midnight, came sweet succor! Airline stewardess Gabrielle Kepler, who lives on the 16th floor at Cathedral Hill East, went down to the boom-boom scene, wrestled seven heavy barricades off the sidewalk and arranged them around the steel plates . . . The Great God Buddha may say "Don't Just Do Something, Stand There," but Gabrielle Kepler did something, and thanks to this unsung heroine, sleep returned to Geary and Franklin. Wake up, everybody.

EASY COME, EASY GO: Roy Storey understands that the Muni had to put on five extra cable cars after the news broke that a lady is claiming that a cable car accident turned her into a nymphomaniac . . . Merry Mortician Neil Brown, with a body to be shipped to Fargo, N.D., phoned United Air Lines and was told by a brisk girl: "We can fly it as far as Ogden, and then there's a transfer to Western, which flies to Fargo. Now, then, will that be one-way or round-trip?"

PACIFIC TELL & TELL: "Pornography in Denmark," which cost Alex de Rezny a piddling $15,000 to produce, has already grossed about $115,000 here — even though it has been police-busted. Meanwhile, Alex and Les Natali have retained Stanley Fleishman of L.A., the country's leading obscenity lawyer, to defend the film. Fleishman's fee: a percentage of the gross!

SPECIALIZATION: Publicist Henry Alexander, working late last Sat., found himself locked inside 244 California, so he stepped into the elevator and used the emergency phone. Girl on the other end: "Are you trapped in the elevator?" Henry: "No, I'm locked in the building." Girl: "Sorry, that phone is just for people stuck in the elevator." Henry: "Look, if I lock myself in the elevator, will you send somebody?" Okay. Done.

PLANNED PARENTHOOD, which buys lists of potential contributors, apparently doesn't check too closely because His Holiness, Pope Paul VI, wound up as just another name on an addressograph plate — and off went a letter of solicitation to the Vatican! The local office eventually received a guarded reply, as follows: "The Secretariat of State presents its compliments and takes the occasion to acknowledge receipt of the letter sent to His Holiness." That's all. No money.

A LOCAL railroad buff writes me excitedly that he has just ridden Canadian National's Rapido from Montreal to Toronto — "and what a train! The best feature is the Bistro Bar, a beautifully-decorated car with overhead gas lights, shaded red lamps, a honky-tonk piano player, posters of Chaplin, Valentino, Fairbanks and Theda Bara and wonderful food and drinks. I think you should call this to the attention of the Southern Pacific." I'd be happy to, but what would be the point?

PRESENT-DAY papers may strike you as irreverent at times, but that's nothing new in local journalism. Author Kenneth Cruce Smith, browsing thrugh the S.F. Bulletin of May 26, 1896, found this needly gem: "It takes six policemen to guard President Cleveland — presumably one on each side."

STATISTICIAN Harry London to a young girl applying for a job: "Have you had any experience with the Random Digit?" "No," replied the girl after some thought, "but I've done a lot of bobbing and weaving."

THIS IS NO JOKE: Up there in Marysville, where he's filming "Kane," Sidney Poitier has taken to wearing a broad-brimmed farmer's hat between takes. The cameraman complained that Poitier was getting too tan.

JASON ROBARDS, here to film "Fools," is renting the $3000-a-month penthouse atop Arthur Lachman's apt. house on Pacific Ave. — the same pad wherein dwelled Steve McQueen during the making of "Bullitt."

AT A TETE-A-TABLE for two in Perry's: Screenstar Dustin Hoffman and Faith Mason, the ex-Mrs. Dick Tuck.

IT'S A NEW SCENE at MGM, all right. Boss Jim Aubrey has assigned S. F. poet Michael McClure and singer Jim Morrison of the Doors to a posh office high above Sunset Blvd., there to collaborate on a screenplay. As they ramble away, the most beautiful secretary in the world takes down their every word.

DIRECTOR ALFRED HITCHCOCK, lunching at Jack's a couple of moons ago, explaining why his latest movie, "Topaz," contains a quick shot of him arising from a wheelchair and walking nimbly away: "That's my answer to those narsty film critics who think I'm dead on my arse."

Women Narrow the Sex Gap

By RICHARD L. WORSNOP
Editorial Research Reports

Americans, the mass media proclaim, are front-line troops in a sexual revolution. Taboos against homosexuality, pre- and extra-marital relations, and depiction of sexual activity on stage and screen have weakened under the onslaught.

The champions of permissiveness say that a "new morality" is in the making —a morality grounded in tolerance and freed of hypocrisy and fear. But many psychologists and sexual behaviorists are not so sure. They note that anxiety about sex is as high as ever. Some go so far as to say that the sexual revolution is a myth and that today's permissiveness is simply a new form of Puritanism.

Comparing 19th century morality with that of today, psychologist Rollo May has stated that "the Victorian person sought to have love without falling into sex; the modern person seeks to have sex without falling into love." Neither approach leads to fulfillment or happiness.

THE SEXUAL revolution, if it can be called that, is in essence a women's revolution. Old assumptions about the nature of female sexuality and women's place in society are being challenged — primarily by women themselves. Naomi Weinstein, an assistant professor of psychology at Loyola University (Chicago), bluntly states that the traditional American view of women amounts to a minority-group stereotype — "woman is nigger."

Woman, in other words, is supposed to be weak, unstable, intuitive rather than intelligent, and happy and childlike "if she knows her place," which invariably is the home.

Militant women's rights organizations argue that sexual and social passiveness was forced upon women as a result of the need for a high birth rate to offset a high infant death rate.

TODAY, of course, medical science has drastically reduced the infant mortality rate in advanced countries. And while the birth rate has declined also, it remains sufficiently high to justify concern about overpopulation. Thus, women today have a socially valid reason for avoiding pregnancy. They also have, in birth control pills, an almost totally effective way of avoiding it.

The institution of marriage is another target of the women's liberation movement. A small but apparently growing number of women have elected to become "bachelor mothers" — that is, they have forsworn marriage even after giving birth to a child. Two prominent persons who have done so are actresses Mia Farrow and Vanessa Redgrave.

'Sure you can marry my daughter . . . Who's this?"

Agitation for full equality for women seems to have had an unsettling effect on many men. Rollo May has reported that an increasing number of male patients in psychoanalysis complain of impotence and "feel like drone bees." It has been suggested also that some men are disturbed by indications that women's sexuality, once thought feeble, probably is stronger and more complex than that of men, and that women gain in potential with age, while men lose.

A BELIEF that sexual mores are changing is attributable in large part to the work of scientists engaged in sexual research. Pioneers in the field were Richard von Krafft-Ebbing, Sigmund Freud, and Havelock Ellis. However, the studies of these men and their contemporaries were limited in that they were based on the subjective reports of sexually disturbed individuals.

Publication in 1948 of the first so-called Kinsey Report, "Sexual Behavior in the Human Male," represented a new departure. Kinsey and his colleagues talked to "the average Joe Smith" as well as to the not-so-average and thereby gained a more rounded view of the subject. More importantly, perhaps, Kinsey made sexual research respectable.

The latest landmark in sexual research was "Human Sexual Reponse" (1966), by Dr. William H. Masters and Virginia E. Johnson, a clinical study of both sexual intercourse and auto-eroticism. Over a period of 11 years, Masters and Johnson observed and measured the reactions of 382 women and 312 men, aged 18 to 89, as they engaged in sexual activity in the laboratory.

REACTION to the Masters-Johnson project was mixed. It was praised in some quarters as an important breakthrough in a field that had been little explored. But persons who contend that current morality amounts to sex-without-love Puritanism thought Masters and Johnson had dehumanized sex by disregarding its psychological aspects.

Similar criticism — that of implicit antisexualtiy — has been leveled against marriage manuals and Playboy magazine, whose "Playboy Philosophy" celebrates the advantages of sexual liberation. Liberation from — and for — what? the critics ask.

No one argues with Freud's contention that repression of sexual urges can lead to mental disturbance.

But such sexual liberation as has occurred to date has led to similar disturbances. In an ideal world, all would enjoy sex and love in equal measure. That would seem far from becoming real, to judge by the feeling of anxiety that still surrounds the subject of sex.

Kids Dig Smoking Cures

From the Orange County Branch
American Cancer Society

"Dear American Cancer Society: Last year I stopped my dad from smoking cigarettes and now he smokes cigars! I'm trying to stop him.

"Could you write him a letter and tell him to quit but don't let him know that I told you to send the letter? Tell him how it can give him mouth cancer or lip cancer."

Typical of hundreds which have poured into the American Cancer Society mailroom, this letter from a 9-year-old boy shows that Orange County youngsters have developed a keen interest in the hazards of smoking.

Some explain that cancer television commercials and studies in school make them worry about their smoking parents, relatives and family friends. Others need moral support to keep from starting the habit themselves.

"MY MOM and dad are heavy smokers and I would like them to see some information," wrote a Westminster youth. "And if you have any posters, maybe they would give them a better idea of what smoking can do to you."

"I have a grandfather who smokes a lot," a little girl wrote. "I have a uncle who has a cancer sore. It would be nice if I could know more about it."

"Would you please send me a comic book called "Where There's Smoke There's Danger?" asked a La Habra girl. "Thank you. I don't smoke but my friends might like to read it."

A girl named Irma said she wanted to know about "cigerette smoking and merrowhana. And if you know about drugs, narcotic, LSD and alcholholices, please let me know."

MIKE, an eighth grader, wanted literature because he was "trying to become informed on the many dangers of smoking cigarettes." He also asked "how many smokers died last year from causes due to smoking?"

More than 100 young people a month write to the Orange County Branch for posters and literature. Between 500-800 posters including full-color designs by Peter Max, are distributed each momth. Some youngsters visit the ACS office; others call on the phone.

Many students need information to write reports and speeches. Nearly all of them are "in a hurry" to meet a deadline. Steve, a Fullerton boy, enclosed 25 cents "for postage and any other cost. If you send it, could you speed it up?"

"Could you send it as fast as you could?" begged Linda, a Brea student. "Because I need it in a hurry. So please hurry." At the end of her letter she added: "P.S. Hurry, please!!!"

A GARDEN GROVE youngster said his teacher told him he could write for free posters. "If you are wondering who my teacher is, his name is Mr. Opalek," he added. A girl from Cypress wrote that teacher said "If you want any poster, go to your place. Because you have shelves of them."

Another named Jamie said her teacher put some posters on her classroom wall and she thought they were "groovy" (underlined six times) so she wanted a "whole bunch" for herself. "P.S. If you send me some," she added, "Don't say Master, say Miss. Because I am a girl."

Many young people want to help the American Cancer Society. A Tustin boy formed a club to make anti-smoking "commercials" with movie cameras and tape recorders. Some send cartoons and slogans "in case you can use them" ("If you smoke, then you will choke. This is no joke.") A few want to distribute literature in their neighborhoods. Several praise the ACS tv spots and "hope you'll keep up the good work."

LETTERS ARE always promptly answered but occasionally the American Cancer Society staff receives letters with no return addresses. For instance, a letter mailed from Garden Grove Nov. 20, 1969 asked for posters, buttons and information on cancer. It was written in childish scrawl, but each word was printed very carefully. There was no address inside and the letter and envelope was simply marked "Clay."

The ACS staff is still looking for "Clay" and wonders if he still needs his literature.

Rabbits Have Good Home

"Lady," 10-year-old female Collie in Wilmington, N.C. shows her protective or "mother" instincts as she watches over five infant rabbits — three white, one brown, and one black — here. "Lady" took over the "mother" chores after the mother rabbit died shortly after the litter was born. Lady grooms the wee ones constantly, lets them sleep between her forelegs, and even tries to nurse them. However, the latter chore is one the pets' mistress, Emsley Underwood, 13, performs much better with doll bottles and formula.

Reno to Vegas

His Note Finally Arrived

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — It was 12 years ago that Corky Poole, then a college student in Reno, sent a letter to his girl friend in Las Vegas. They are now married and have two children, and the letter arrived last week.

"My mother called me and said that I had gotten a letter from my boyfriend," Mrs. Poole said Sunday. "I was puzzled. Even when she said it was 12 years old, I just couldn't imagine who it was from."

Poole was at first unwilling to drive across town to pick up the letter, until his wife told him whom it was from.

The letter came complete with a Reno postmark, dated "3 p.m. Mar. 4 1958," and a "give. Red Cross Fund" cancellation. It also came with a three cent stamp. It was delivered last Monday to the home of Mrs. Poole's family, where she lived at the time it was mailed.

Poole said he remembers writing the errant letter when he was a student at the University of Nevada, Reno. Neither he nor his wife missed it when it was not delivered.

"Since it arrived right after the mail strike," Mrs. Poole said "we did joke about whether the mailmen really deserve a raise."

Postal officials in Las Vegas said it happens occasionally that a letter is misplaced and delivered late, but seldom 12 years late, even across the 450 miles of desert that separates Reno and Las Vegas.

"The mail will be stuck between the cases and remain there, maybe for years," said E. J. Trenda, assistant postmaster in Las Vegas. "Ordinarily, it happens around Christmas time when he hired a lot of part time help."

The post office in Reno is now moving to a new location, shifting sorting racks and moving cases. They might have found the letter in moving, said Renda, "but I wouldn't want to put the blame on Reno."

No Chance in Games

Carnivals Not Always on Up and Up

RIVERSIDE (AP) — Those carnival games may look easy. . .but watch out, friends.

Dwight Colley, a vice and narcotics detective who has made a study of games, says not all the operators of games are on the up and up.

He cited the following.

—The bucket game. Throw three balls into a pail. Win a prize. Unknown to the thrower, the bucket has a springy bottom which can be activated by the operator. On the first two throws, the bottom is dead and the balls stay in. On the third try, the base is springy and the ball bounces out.

—The swinger. You're supposed to knock over a bowling pin by hitting it, on the backswing, with a bowling ball suspended by a chain from the ceiling. This is physically impossible. If you miss on the first swing, you've got to miss on the backswing.

—The coin pitch. Just toss a large coin or disc so it exactly covers a circle the same size. But there's a slight problem. The circle is minutely out of round, and always peeks out. The operator makes a perfect demonstration throw by using a disc similarly out of round.

College says a Riverside man complained not long ago that he lost $113 throwing darts.

The idea was to throw four darts at a time at a scoreboard. Getting 100 points in a throw was worth $400 or a television set. The cost of the throw doubled each time. When the tab reached $16, the man complained, the operator told him that he was sure to win on another $16 toss. He didn't. But still he tried three more times at $16 each.

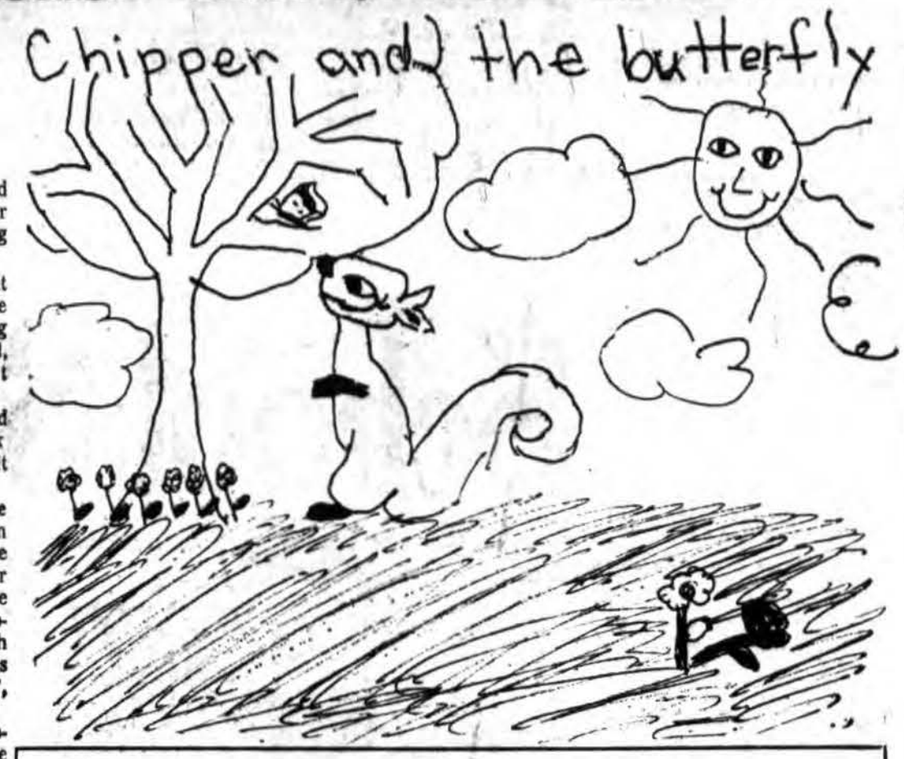

On virtually every throw, he barely missed 100 points.

How did he lose.

The dart game, Colley says, is known in the trade as an "alibi store." The operator constantly supplies alibis and encouragement.

And if the man actually does hit 100, the operator is so fast a' manipulator he totals the score incorrectly in a way the victim never suspects.

UNCLE LEN'S CORNER

Good morning boys and girls, and welcome to another Saturday of fun and learning with Uncle Len and his gang.

I was happy to see that many of you who wrote in are reading such interesting books. I was a little sad, though that more of you didn't enter the contests this week.

There was a pretty good turnout but the old mail sack wasn't bulging the way it usually is.

Before we talk about the topic for this week, Uncle Len wants to congratulate Joe Sinkula, 11, of Corona del Mar for his winning entry to the "Ask Andy" column that appears with Uncle Len each week. His question, "Was there really a lost continent", wins him a fine world globe.

As you know, may people today are fighting to make the air we breathe, the land we use and the water we swim in and drink as clean as possible so that everyone for years to come will be able to enjoy them too.

To help them out, the government has set aside a special week, just like the one for libraries, to make the earth we live on a better place to live.

Beginning next Saturday is National Garden Week. During this week, with all the flowers and trees in bloom, people will be planting many flowers and trees to make damaged areas pretty again.

Many boys think gardening is just for the girls but that is not true. In fact, many of the most beautiful gardens in the world were created by men. Most of the prize-winning flowers each year are grown by men, too.

But the girls are the ones who like flowers the most because they are pretty and smell so good.

In nearby San Marino, Calif., is one of the most famous of all gardens. It is seen on the grounds of the Huntington Art Museum. Here you can see gardens copied from countries all over the world with more flowers than you could count in a year.

In Japan, gardening is known as one of the finest arts and treasures of the country. They even grow miniature trees there that are less than two feet high when they are fully grown. These are called "Bonsai" trees.

So you can see that gardening is more than just the thing that makes our lands beautiful. It is also a hobby and an art which is done by both men and women all over the world.

Next week's Kennedy half dollars will go to the entries best depicting beautiful land, trees and flowers or anything to do with gardening. Many beautiful pictures have been done by famous men and women using nothing but flowers and rolling hills for subjects.

Honorable mentions in this week's drawing contest go to Robert Lee Ross, 10, Huntington Beach; Geoff Koteles, 8, Newport Beach; Meri Hayos, 11, Newport Beach; Tammy Koteles, 11, Newport Beach; and Gregory Dayman, 9, Costa Mesa.

Honorable mention in this week's poetry contest goes to Vanessa Halloran, 10½, Costa Mesa, who submitted two poems about her pets.

★ PRIZE WINNER ★

Gwendolyn Hare, 8½, 1900 Rimrock Canyon Road, Laguna Beach

Any child under 12 can enter Uncle Len's Art Contest. Here's all you do: (1) Draw picture on piece of plain, white paper 5½ inches wide and 4 inches deep. Use black ink and make lines black. (2) Do not copy or trace picture. It must be your own work. (3) Put your name, age and address on back of drawing. Mail it to Uncle Len's Art Contest, Box 1560, DAILY PILOT, Costa Mesa. Winner will receive Kennedy half dollar.

SPRING MORNING

You wake up one morning,
To hear the Bird's sing,
Wake up, wake up to a beautiful morning
For now it is spring.
You open the window wide;
Winter's no longer there;
But Spring's there;
And Flowers are everywhere.
You laugh as you run out the door;
Jumping in grass so green;
This is the best spring,
That you have ever seen.

A Kennedy half dollar goes to Patricia Halloran, 10, 1965 Orange Ave., Costa Mesa, for the winning entry in the story and poem contest. Mail your poem or story to Uncle Len, Box 1560 Costa Mesa, California.

Andy sends a World Book Globe to Joe Sinkula, age 11, of Corona del Mar, California, for his question:

Was there really a lost continent?

Certainly our few major land masses have remained sedately in place in recent history, but human history is merely a drop in the bucket compared with four billion years of restless planetary history. Earth scientists have traced back mountainous upheavals and immense reversals of land masses and seas. What's more, slowly through the ages the continents have been global travelers. Even the experts no longer discount the idea of a lost continent.

But one thing is impossible to explain. It is the lingering old legend of Atlantis, a continent or large island lost in the Atlantic Ocean. On the basis of our present knowledge the loss of a major land mass during the short span of human history seems most unlikely. Yet mankind has told and retold the old story. As of now, we have a double mystery. We have no positive proof of Atlantis and certainly no reliable explanation of how even our earliest ancestors could have witnessed the event, if it occurred at all.

Andy sends a complete 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia to Rusty Leonard, age 11, of Wichita, Kansas, for his question:

How can I attract purple martins?

Andy suspects that our American Indians know more about the ways of nature than the rest of us. He consults them on certain important topics, including how to attract nature's children. Sure enough, in this case they revealed the basic secret. It seems that they discovered the merits of the purple martin long before the first white settlers arrived, and the Indians shared their secret with the early colonists of New England. The basic trick is to help these handsome birds with their building chores. In colonial days, this was done by stringing gourds between two high poles. The martins used them as nests.

This does not mean that Mr. and Mrs. Martin have a lazy streak. Far from it. When they have no helpful human friends, they construct a very fine nest by lining cavities in trees and cliffs with twigs and soft grasses. There they share an amiable social life with a whole colony of neighboring relatives. Their friendly social attitude extends to people — and ages ago they learned that humans have a talent for home construction as well. They were very happy to nest in those gourds, and, what's more, they like being around people. This is pleasant to remember when humanity's miserable failures get you down. If the splendid purple martin likes us, then we can't be all bad.

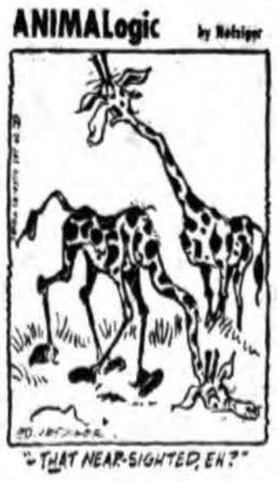

When the settlers learned why gourds attract purple martins, they improved on the idea. On high posts they fixed wooden boxes fitted inside with 10 to 30 rooms for separate nesting couples. Maybe these were America's first apartment houses. In any case, the purple martins knew just what they were for and moved in. And the best way to attract them is still a sturdy martin house, lovingly constructed by human hands. So get out your tool kit. The late arrivals from South America are due back before the end of April.

However, don't do a sloppy rush job. Purple martins inspect the property for flaws before moving in. The supporting post must be strong, perfectly steady and too high for cats. The house must be wind and rain-proof and should have a pointed roof. Each apartment requires eight square inches of space and a round opening to serve as a door. Balconies or ledges for perching purposes are appreciated, so are ornaments and fancy extras. If your martin house passes inspection, the handsome tenants will move in and gratefully return each spring. While in residence, they will repay you by devouring an assortment of flying insects considered to be garden pests.

55 Enter OCC Jazz Festival

A $1,200 bass flute — with a voice like a 500-pound canary — will be the top prize in the second annual Orange Coast College jazz festival this month.

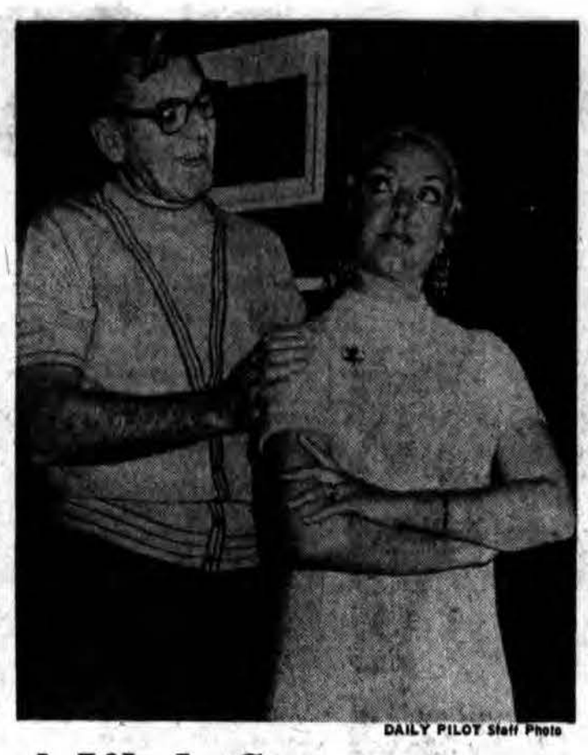

The festival, slated for April 17-18 in the OCC auditorium, will feature Duke Ellington and his big band in concert April 17 at 8 p.m. Tickets are on sale in the OCC Bookstore at $3 per non-student and $2 for students.

Festival director Dr. Charles Rutherford of the OCC Music Department said that music companies from throughout the U.S. have donated prizes to the festival. Thus far, Rutherford said, more than 55 high school, junior college and university jazz bands have accepted invitations to compete. They will come from California, Oregon, Washington, Nevada and Arizona.

In addition to the bass flute, Rutherford said that prizes include a Getzen Fluegel horn, a set of Zildjian cymbals, a Slingerland Snare Drum, a Fender Jazz bass guitar, recordings and numerous trophies.

Rutherford said that each band will get 20 minutes to perform. They will be judged, and finalists will perform Saturday night for the prizes. Awards will be given for best trumpet soloist, flute soloist, big band drummer, combo drummer, bass soloist, jazz pianist and student composer-arranger.

The festival will be MC'ed by Jimmy Lyons, originator and manager of the Monterey Jazz Festival.

Mack's Amateur Hour Keeps Rolling Along

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — In television they figure if a new series is pre-empted four times in its first season, it has no chance to survive. Here's a show that gets bumped off the network 20 times but manages to continue.

No freshman entry is this: It's Ted Mack and the Original Amateur Hour, which seems to have been on television since Dr. Lee De Forest invented the audion tube.

The show is scheduled on CBS at 5:30 p.m. Sundays, which means that it runs smack-dab into the National doubleheaders and playoff games through most of the fall and winter.

"Sometimes I think the only way I can get back on the air is to put on a football helmet and jersey," cracked the genial Mack. "It's kinda tough when you've got a staff of 20 who have spent their lives with this little turkey, and they have to remain idle for 20 weeks."

The Amateur Hour will make it back to the network on Jan. 25, after the pros have finally wrapped up the season. Mack has been going about the country to call attention to his return and was in Hollywood for an appearance Saturday night with Lawrence Welk — "we're the heroes of the support-stocking set."

Thousands upon thousands of amateurs, including Frank Sinatra, Teresa Brewer, Robert Merrill, Pat Boone, Frank Fontaine and Connie Francis, have poured through the Amateur Hour since it started on radio with Major Edward Bowes in 1935.

When Bowes died in 1946, the enterprise seemed ended. But in 1948 the organization was reassembled for a try at television. Mack, a former clarinetist and vaudeville emcee who had been on Bowes' staff since the mid-1930s, was elected to head the show.

"We went on the air in January of 1948, and I think that makes us the oldest commercial program in television — Ed Sullivan started in June of that year," said Mack. "When we started, we were doing the show from the furniture section of Wanamakers Department Store.

"My partner, Lloyd Marx, and I didn't know what to charge for the show. At the beginning he was getting $25 per show and I was getting $35."

What changes has he noticed in the contestants over the years?

"They're much more sophisticated nowadays," he replied. "We don't get the one-man bands that we used to.

"That's only natural, because today's kids can see everything from the Bolshoi ballet to the New York Philharmonic. The quality of the performances is no different. When Frank Sinatra was the rage, the singers all sounded like Sinatra. When the Beatles came along, the acts had the Beatle sound."

Madness 'Normal' To Astin

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Actor John Astin lives in a spooky world of sanity-madness that gives the appearance of Jack Armstrong to his role of Gomez in the wierdo and defunct video series, "The Addams Family."

Astin, bearded and wearing a Gomez-type pin-stripe suit, is nothing if not slightly batty which is at once compelling and unsettling.

"It would be a waste of time to attain total sanity," Astin said with a grin that wasn't completely conventional.

Nonetheless, Astin has sneaked into the backdoor of movies from the imperfect world of television where he starred in a pair of lunatic series, "I'm Dickens, He's Fenster," and the aforementioned "Addams Family."

Astin formed his own company and made "Prelude" which won an Academy Award nomination for live short subjects.

He had little to do with the production outside of writing it, producing it, directing it and starring in it.

Now this multi-faceted man is appearing in Commonwealth United's "Viva Max" playing a Mexican army sergeant who helps recapture the Alamo in Texas in the present day.

The theme, assuredly is made and suits Astin like a straight jacket. His co-stars are Peter Ustinov and Jonathan Winters, which cinches the case.

"Ustinov plays an ineffectual general in the movie," Astin said. His voice was filled with conspiracy. "As a sergeant, the soldiers are terrified of me. If they get out of line I hit them.

"The film is a comedy but it has something serious to say. It says people matter."

Astin matters in Hollywood. He is beseeched by television networks and producers to star in another series.

"I don't want to, but I may have to," Astin said, keeping his voice low despite the fact no one within earshot would give a hoot.

"One of my problems is having my own company — Prelude Films. It prevents me from going to the unemployment office."

Littler, Yancey Tied in Masters

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Gene Littler and Bert Yancey swept into a tie for the second round lead at 139 in the Masters golf tournament Friday, but it was a couple of diminutive foreigners who made the greatest gains on the tough Augusta National layout.

The veteran Littler and Yancey, who was slapped with a $150 fine for an improper withdrawal from a tournament last week, each had a two-under-par 70 as they moved past scrambling first leader Tommy Aaron.

Aaron, who had an opening 68, lost four strokes to par on the first four holes, but rallied coming home and finished with a 74 for 142, three strokes off the pace.

Burley Bob Lunn, with a 70, and steady Billy Casper, 68, were tied for third, one shot off the pace in their quest for the famed green jacket that goes to the winner of this, the first of the world's four major championships.

But it was little Gary Player and even smaller Takaai Kono who did the best job of solving the famed, hilly course that snapped back at such giants of the game as Arnold Palmer and Jack Nicklaus.

Player, the crewcut South African who has been the focal point of intense security precautions at this staid, old club, cut four strokes off par with a 68 for a tie with Aaron at 142.

"I played famously," said Player, the subject of rumored threats because of his nation's racial policies, "but I putted miserably. I could have been three shots better if I'd putted."

Kono, a tiny Japanese, also had a 68 and barged into contention at 143. Kono was five under par going into the last hole, but three-putted for his third bogey. He had seven birdies, including all four par fives.

Most of the leaders said the course, which is suffering from a long, hard winter, played easier Friday than in Thursday's windy opening round.

"I looked for some real good scores today," said the 39-year-old Littler, playing in his 17th Masters.

"The greens held much better today," said Casper. "There seemed to have been some water put on them."

But the fairways still were patchy on the usually lush layout and the greens remained very fast.

Jack Nicklaus, the Golden Bear from Ohio and the man picked by many to win this one, took a horrendous eight on the eighth hole and finished with a 75 for 146, far back in the pack.

"I lost a ball and had 38 putts," Nicklaus said. "That's it."

He hooked his second shot on eight "and we just never found the ball. The whole gallery was looking for it, but we couldn't find it. It's a first for me."

He put his next in a trap, blasted out and three-putted.

Arnold Palmer had a 73 for 148, far back in the field: "I had more opportunities for birdies today," said Littler, a former U.S. Open champion and possessor of one of the most envied swings on the pro tour. "I putted better in the first round, but you just don't putt that good every day."

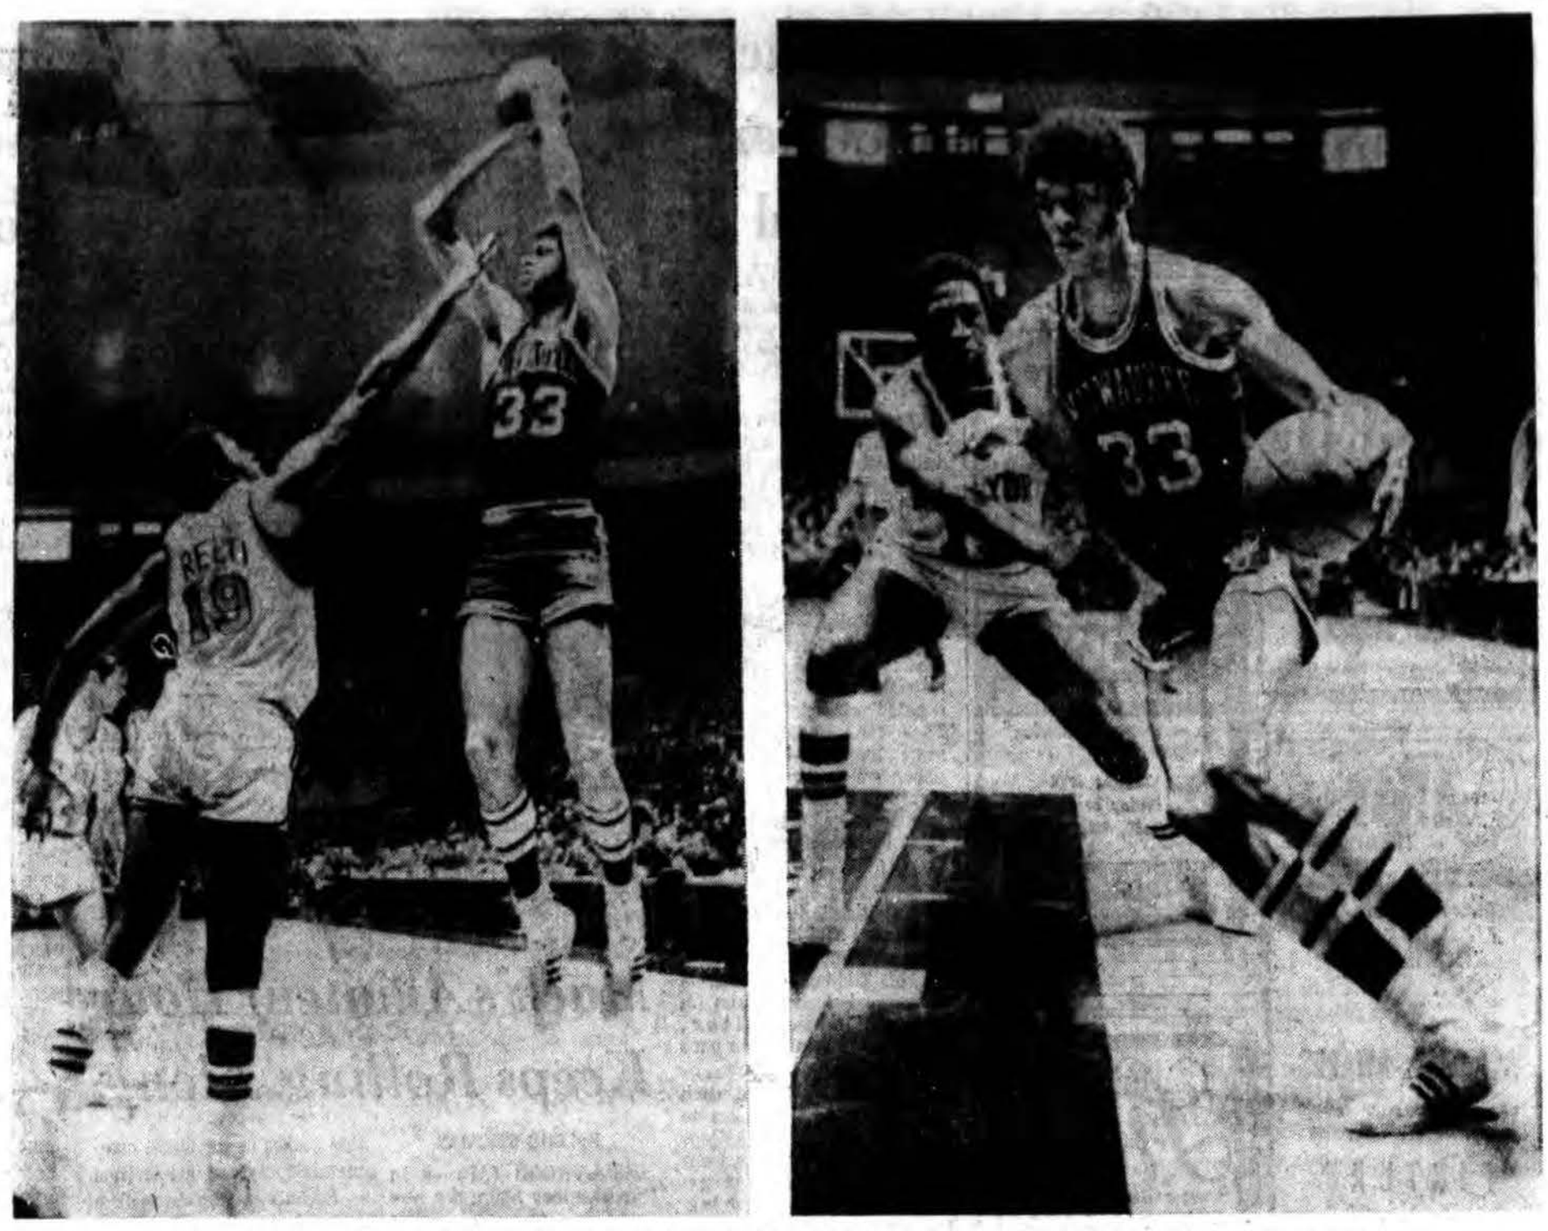

He birdied the first two holes, running in putts of 12 and eight feet, but bogeyed the third when his second shot clipped the branch of a tree and he missed the green.

He got it back on the eighth, chipping to within 18 inches, then matched a three-putt bogey on the 12th with a two-putt birdie on the par five 13th.

Dodgers Suffer Fourth Straight Setback, 7-2

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Nate Colbert's two-run homer highlighted a four run first inning and Dave Roberts retired 17 consecutive batters in relief as the San Diego Padres trimmed the winless Los Angeles Dodgers, 7-2, Friday night.

The Padres jumped off quickly against Alan Foster as Tommy Dean hit the first pitch of the game for a single and Van Kelly tagged Foster's next serve for a run-scoring double.

Kelly took third on a passed ball by Bill Sudakis, a convered third baseman making his catching debut, and scored on a wild pitch. Al Ferrara then singled before Colbert drove a towering shot into the center field seats beyond the 400-foot sign.

Actually, Roberts picked up 18 outs while retiring the first 17 batters he faced. He came on in relief of Mike Corkins with the bases loaded and San Diego on top 5-2 in the second and got Willie Davis to bound into an inning-ending double play.

The 25-year-old lefthander retired every Dodger hitter until he walked Maury Wills with one out in the eighth and Davis singled for the only hit off Roberts. Willie Crawford hit into a double play and Roberts got the Dodgers 1-2-3 in the ninth.

The Dodgers, who have lost four in a row, scored two unearned runs in the first inning on two hits and two errors. But San Diego added a run in the second and two more in the fourth on RBI singles by Dave Campbell and Chris Cannizzaro.

Bellamy-Wilt Duel Opens

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Coach Richie Guerin of Atlanta says his big center, Walt Bellamy, will be a key factor when the Hawks play Los Angeles here Sunday afternoon in the first game of the Western Division finals of the National Basketball Association playoff.

"There is no doubt in my mind that Walt will be the big key for us in this next series," Guerin said. "Walt will more than minimize Wilt Chamberlain."

The game will be televised, 10:55 a.m. (PST), Channel 7.

Guerin's praise of the 6-foot-11, 265-pound Bellamy doesn't minimize Atlanta's respect for Chamberlain, the 7-2 ace who returned for the final three games of the Lakers' regular season after being hurt.

"Chamberlain makes Los Angeles a different ball club," said Guerin. "During the season, they were a running club, and now they're more of a pattern club in coming down and setting up and working off Chamberlain."

Guerin said Chamberlain's return also means Atlanta will have to change its offense somewhat to counter Wilt's ability to lay back under the basket and block some of the opponent's driving game.

However Guerin is confident Bellamy can hold his own under the basket with Chamberlain and can make him come out on the floor more, thus allowing Atlanta easier access to the close in shots.

Bellamy looks forward to what some have billed as a duel between him and Chamberlain.

"I consider him the greatest player in the game," said Bellamy. "Over the years, he has been the best at getting the ball in the basket."

Possibly overshadowing the center battle between Bellamy and Chamberlain will be the duel between high-scoring Joe Caldwell of the Hawks and ball-hawking Jerry West of the Lakars. They are two of the more exciting players in the game and should help pack the 6,966 seats in Alexander Memorial Coliseum.

Guerin has expressed concern about the week's layoff his Hawks have had since winning the first round from Chicago, 4-1. He put the team through hard practice sessions Thursday and Friday but commented "There is nothing like playing an actual game."

Hall Snaps Own Mark In AAU Swim Meet

CINCINNATI — Two more American records and three heat marks fell Friday night as the National AAU Men's and Women's Indoor short-course swimming championship participants continued their attack on the record book.

Indiana University freshman Gary Hall, swimming unattached, snapped his national 400-yard individual medley record with a time of three minutes and 59.36 seconds.

Hall's old mark set last year was 4:00.8. Hall attended Rancho Alamitos High in Garden Grove.

Santa Clara Swim Club's unit of Mitch Ivey, Brian Job, Steve Doyle and Fray Heath lowered the American record for the 400 medley relay to 3.24.14. The old record was 3:25.8 by Indian University in 1969.

Both were meet records too.

The third meet standard went to Illinois high school whiz John Kinsella when he traveled the 200 freestyle in 1:40.76. However, that was short of Mark Spitz' American mark of 1:39.5.

Hall, Kinsella and Debbie Meyer—the three-time gold medalist in the 1968 Olympics—became double winners on the second of four days competition in the St. Xavier High School pool.

The host Orange County Lacrosse Club will square off against the defending California Lacrosse Association champion Los Angeles Lacrosse Club Sunday in the Howard Henry Memorial Game at UC Irvine's athletic field. Both squads enter the confrontation with 4-0 records.

Opening face off is scheduled for 2 p.m.

An impressive halftime is planned with Glenn Davis, the Mr. Outside of West Point grid fame, serving as master of ceremonies.

The halftime plans call for a posthumous awards presentation to Henry's widow and six children and the appearance of such notables as El Toro Marine base commander Brig. Gen. Henry Hise and UCLA cage ace John Vallely.

MINNEAPOLIS — George Hanson officially became Minnesota Gophers' basketball coach Friday, but admitted laying the groundwork for his takeover the past few weeks.

Hanson revealed at a press conference, that he already has hired Al Nuness, 1968-69 Gopher captain, as the top assistant.

WASHINGTON — The American Basketball Association has agreed to pay $11 million indemnity to the National Basketball Association in the forthcoming merger of the leagues, the Washington Post said in its Saturday edition.

In a report from Pittsburgh, Post writer Mark Asher said the NBA had been hoping to get $1 million each from the ABA's 11 teams since merger talks began last August. The money will be paid out over 10 years.

BALTIMORE — "Ridiculous," said Detroit Tigers' manager Mayo Smith Friday when asked about a possible Frank Howard-Denny McLain trade.

Smith echoed Tiger vice president and general manager James A. Campbell's remark in Detroit.

Smith, reached at Memorial Stadium before the Tigers-Orioles game, commented "there's nothing to it. It's ridiculous."

The shortest and longest races of the day this afternoon figure to decide the California-Oregon dual track meet in Berkeley at Edward Track Stadium.

Oregon is unbeaten this year in dual competition. The Golden Bears have lost only once—77-76 last week to Southern California. The 100 and the three-mile may be the keys to the meet.

Angels Spank Royals, 11-7, With 14 Hits

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Roger Repoz drove in two runs with a homer and Alex Johnson doubled home a pair in powering the California Angels to their third straight victory, 11-7 over the Kansas City Royals Friday night.

Joe Azcue drove in two runs as the Angels continued their lusty hitting with 14 safeties. They collected 26 in their sweep of a two-game series in Milwaukee.

The Angels scored five times in the fifth inning, and were coasting along with a 9-1 margin. But Kansas City solved Clyde Wright for three runs in the sixth and pushed over three unearned runs against Rudy May, also a lefthander, in the seventh.

Wright, who gave up a home run to Ed Kirkpatrick in the fourth and a two-run triple to Luis Alcaraz in the sixth, gained credit for the victory.

In all three games this early season, California manager Lefty Phillips has used the same starting lineup, with the exception of the pitcher. And that group of eight has proved enormously successful at the plate.

UCI Hosts San Diego Nine Today

Dave Wollos and Dennis Nicholson ove to the firing line against the niversity of San Diego, winner of 11 of s last 13 games, this afternoon when the C Irvine baseball team entertains the order City team in a doubleheader eginning at 12 o'clock.

Wollos, undefeated righthander, has osted seven victories and a nifty 1.54 r.a. in 69 2/3 innings. He will work the ne-inning opener against San Diego.

Nicholson, the man called upon against e toughest foes the Anteaters have fac- d this season, sports a 5-2 record and a 57 e.r.a. and owns victories over UCLA od USC.

The University of San Diego under coach John Cunningham, has an overall record of 12-9-1. It has defeated San Diego State twice this season and has 11 wins in its last 13 games.

Irvine has won eight of its last 10 outings and has a season record of 19-8-1.

Coach Gary Adams said he would go with his regular lineup against San Diego. This means Bobby Farrar will open in left field and bat leadoff. He is currently hitting at a .301 clip.

Mike Sykora (.258) opens at third with the team's leading hitter, Rocky Craig, batting third and playing center field. Craig is hitting .379 with 33 base hits in 87 appearances at the plate.

Slugger Tom Spencer bats cleanup (.283) and is the team RBI leader with 24. He plays first base.

Mike Saska (.221) goes in right field with Dan Hansen (.289) batting sixth and starting as shortstop.

Jim Greenway (.278) will start at second base and bat seventh the lineup, followed by Joe Anderson (.149) the Anteater catcher.

Mike Sheline, starting catcher earlier in the campaign, is sidelined with a back injury. Anderson has filled in behind the plate since the Anaheim tournament and has done a creditable job defensively.

JC Spikers In Circuit Setbacks

Saddleback and Orange Coast colleges got some outstanding individual performances Friday in losing conference track and field meets.

Saddleback finished second in a triangular meet at Oceanside, totaling 77 points. Host Mira Costa had 84 and College of the Canyons scored 18. OCC was upended by Sai Diego, 102-43.

Saddleback super star Paul Cox won five events, capturing the shot put (42-7¾), javelin (194-3), long jump (21-20¼), discus (137-½) and triple jump (42-4¼).

Kurt Clemens of Orange Coast tossed the javelin 187-8 for his best effort of the season. Other winners for the Pirates included Fred Skirde (880) and Kevin Manix (pole vault).

NO PLACE LIKE HOME — Mike Adams, Corona del Mar outfielder, slides safely across home plate in front of a throw from the outfield to score against Loara Friday. Don Standley, Saxon relief pitcher, awaits the throw that came too late. Loara won the Irvine League decision, 6-3, to remain undefeated with a 5-0 record.

Loara Deals Corona 6-3 Irvine Setback

Defending champion Loara moved back into sole possession of the Irvine League baseball lead Friday with a 6-3 win over host Corona del Mar.

Loara improved its Irvine record to 5-0, while Corona dropped to 4-1.

In other Irvine diamond activity involving area teams, Fountain Valley seriously diminished Estancia's fading title hopes with a 3-0 road shutout over the Eagles and Edison dropped a 9-5 decision to visiting Costa Mesa.

At Corona, Loara demonstrated its awesome attack for the second straight outing against an Orange Coast area foe, plucking Sea King pitching for 11 hits.

Last Tuesday against Estancia, the Saxons powdered the Eagle mound staff for a dozen safeties and Friday's victory over Corona was similar to it in many ways, mostly offensively.

Loara hitters slugged a pair of triples and a double and were constantly in motion on the basepaths enroute to the win.

Starter Dave Vilas and reliever John Palmer shared the hill chores for Tom Trager's Sea Kings with Vilas toiling the first four frames and the latter finishing out the last three stanzas.

The Sea Kings picked up two runs in the fourth when Bill Mayer singled home teammates Claudio Garcia and Larry Denner. Palmer accounted for an RBI in the fourth by singling home Mike Adams, who had gotten aboard on a walk and moved down to second on a fielder's choice.

Mike Roberts paced the Baron attack with three hits while pitchers Jim Watson and Clay Mahoney and second baseman Jeff Zelsdorf collected the only Estancia hits.

After Edison had gone on top 4-0 in the first inning, Costa Mesa came back with a single run in the third and exploded for eight more in a wild fourth inning rally. The losers also picked up their only other run in the fourth.

Mesa took advantage of doubles by Glenn McKinley and Dale Kubeska, a single by Kevin Morrow, walks issued to Dave Barton, Rich Fielder and Jim Safstrom and three Edison errors to highlight its big fourth inning surge.

Mark Lindner picked up the win for Mesa with relief help from Dave Barton while Dan Maurel, John Fisher and Ed Winn saw mound action for Edison.

Lions, Vikes Win Extra-inning Tilts

Westminster High barged into a tie for first place in the rugged Sunset League Friday afternoon on the strength of the Lions' harrowing 1-0 decision of host Anaheim in 10 innings.

And, Marina came up with its first circuit win with a nine-inning 2-1 victory over invading Newport Harbor while Santa Ana was dealing luckless Huntington Beach a 3-0 defeat on the losers' diamond.

Eddie Bane, the lefthanded strikeout artist for Westminster, whiffed 14 enemy batters and stroked a leadoff double in the 10th frame to set up the winning run.

Wayne Van Every, pinchrunning for Bane, came in with the only tally of the day on Mike Dodd's single to right.

Bane upped his league strikeout mark to 34 in 19 innings and has yet to give up an earned run.

The victory puts Westminster in a tie with Santa Ana at 3-1.

Newport Harbor lost a heartbreaker when the Vikings came up with a single tally in the bottom of the seventh and then scored the winning run with two out in the last of the ninth.

Catcher Ed Anderson was the hero for the winning Vikes, smacking a double to right center to score Steve Miller, who had led off the ninth with a base hit.

Dave Klungreseter went all the way on the mound for Marina, striking out 12 and walking none.

It was the free pass that eventually did in Newport, as the winners collected eight of them. Marina had runners on in eight of the nine frames.

Brock Pemberton scored the tying run in the seventh after leading off with a walk and scoring on Newport's only error.

Jeff Malinoff and Gary Foster led Newport with a pair of hits, each accounting for a triple.

Fullerton Holds Big Swim Lead

By CRAIG SHEFF
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Orange Coast College swimmers captured four of the seven events during the second day of the South Coast Conference swim championship Friday, but Fullerton JC's overall depth put them in the driver's seat for team honors.

Fullerton had 113 points after Friday's seven events while OCC totaled 84. Seven events were scheduled today with the finals slated for 3 p.m. in the OCC pool.

OCC's Chris Gammon, Bruce Johnston, John Reeg and Steve Schwer all won Friday.

Gammon clocked 2:06.3 to win the 200 butterfly while Johnston captured the 100 breaststoke in 1:05.2. Reeg had 216.8 points in the diving competition and Schwer swam 4:46.2 in the 400 individual medley.

The other three events were won by Fullerton swimmers. The Hornets' Jim Fergus went 1:52.0 in the 200 free and teammate Byron Reidenbaugh captured his second win of the three-day swimfest with a 56.5 clocking in the 100 backstroke. His prelims time of 56.1 will stand as a conference record.

Reidenbaugh won the 200 indo Thursday.

Fullerton scored big in the 200 free, 200 fly and 100 back.

The Hornets captured the first four places in the 200 free (19 points), had a 1-2-3 finish in the backstroke and went 2-3-5 in the fly.

Tritons Down Tustin, 5-0; Hold Crestview Loop Lead

San Clemente High School moved into undisputed possession of first place in the Crestview League Friday with a 5-0 victory over host Tustin while Mission Viejo and Foothill were losing to Laguna Beach and El Modena.

Visiting Mission Viejo dropped a 6-2 decision to Laguna's Artists and Foothill lost to El Modena, 6-2, to drop from a first place tie with San Clemente (4-1).

Orange High pounded out a 14-1 decision over host Villa Park in other Crestview action.

Ron Allen went all the way on the mound for San Clemente to record the victory. He struck out four hits while giving up three base hits on one walk and also contributed a pair of hits.

The Tritons opened the scoring in the first inning when Dan Cludy singled with two away. Robin Reschan then drilled a line drive over the Tustin leftfielder's head and raced around the bases for an inside-the-park home run to give San Clemente a 2-0 lead.

This was all Allen needed as he set Tustin down without a run.

Cludy scored a third run in the third on a base hit and a three base outfield error and the Tritons added single markers in the fourth and sixth.

Laguna Beach won its first league game after dropping three straight extra-inning decisions.

Mission Viejo scored in the top half of the first on an infield single by outfielder Val Moreno. He stole second, went to third on a passed ball and scored on Mike Gray's single up the middle.

Denny Schmitz of the Artists drilled the first pitch over the right field fence for a home run to tie the score in the bottom of the inning.

An unearned run in the fourth put Laguna ahead and a four-run outburst in the fifth put it away.

Foothill, Mission Viejo and Tustin are tied for second with 3-2 records followed by Villa Park, El Modena and Orange at 2-3.

GWC Nine Drops 5-3 Circuit Tilt

Golden West College's baseball team plunged deeper into the Southern California Conference cellar Friday with a 5-3 loss to LA Harbor on the Rustlers' diamond.

The winners jumped out to a 4-0 lead after two and a half frames. Golden West scored single runs in the third, fourth and sixth innings, but Harbor added an insurance tally in the ninth.

Singles by Rick Russell and Gil Henry and Noel Paulson's double got the first Rustler run home. A triple by Wayne Kiefer and a passed ball scored the second. In the sixth, a walk to Kiefer, a sacrifice and a single by John Hogan plated the third run.

Some Snow Still Remains In Southland Mountains

By ESTHER BILLINGS

Flying over our Southland snow giants, Mt. Baldy, San Gorgonio, and San Jacinto this past weekend, it looked as though skiing might continue a bit longer. Our local ski resorts have closed down, however, until more snow falls — still a possibility.

At Mammoth Mountain, skiing will continue at least until the Memorial Day race, while June Mountain with two to eight feet of snow has decided to close this weekend with a party.

On the West Sierra Nevada, Bear Valley will operate daily through April 19. Bear Valley Ski Club will host the first annual Vets Round Up race at Bear Valley-Mt. Reba Sunday, a giant slalom for all classes of veterans to be set on Super Cub and Rodeo runs.

On Interstate 80, Sugar Bowl will host the famous Silver Belt April 18-19, with the area operating daily through those dates.

Along Highway 50, Sierra Ski Ranch will operate weekends through April, while Heavenly Valley projects daily operation through May as a result of the long lasting snow on the Nevada side as well as up top.

Along Highway 89, Squaw Valley will operate daily through April 26, weekends thereafter, and Alpine Meadows will hang on as long as interest does.

Squaw will host an Interline party Sunday through April 17, with carnival planned for April 18-19 and the Slush Cup races, April 25-26.

In the Reno-Tahoe area, Mt. Rose will operate daily through April, weekends thereafter; Slide Mountain will open weekends with areas planning to close up when skiers lose interest.

Mt. Shasta is operating weekends through April 26.

Utah ski areas will remain open through the first of May. Alta will host the Gelandesprung body bender (pumping on regular skis with poles off a snow jump) April 18-19 for amateurs to age 18, April 25-26 for 19 and over and all pros.

Brian Head, closest Utah area to California (about the same as to Mammoth Mountain), is hosting its third annual Spring Fiesta this weekend.

There will be a costume parade today, with lift tickets at half price with a costume. A snow dance in the afternoon and evening parties will follow with the Stynes, a commercial rock group

Sunday the Slush Cup will be held at 11 a.m., a gelandie contest into water.

At Vail, Colo., the annual ski picnic is set Sunday through April 17, with the North American Ski Instructors Congress overlapping April 16-19.

Ski School Director Ernie Blake of Taos Ski Valley, N.M., has planned a GLS (graduated length ski) demonstration for the convention featuring three of his ski school members. He has tried his own version of the GLS, or short ski, method this season with great success.

Aspen Mountain and Snowmass, Colo., will operate through this weekend, with Aspen Highlands continuing through April 19. Purgatory, Colo., will operate at least through this weekend, since new snow keeps falling and crowds keep coming.

The Western States Junior Alpine championship will be hosted by the Kalispell Ski Club this weekend at The Big Mountain, Whitefish, Mont.

The meet is the largest junior race in the country next to the United States Ski Association Junior National championships. It originated in the late 1930s as the American Legion junior state ski championships.

Unlike the USSA Nationals, racers in the event represent their state rather than their USSA division. The 13 states eligible to enter teams are Washington, Oregon, California, Idaho, Nevada, Utah, Montana, Wyoming, New Mexico, Colorado, Texas, North Dakota and South Dakota.

Arizona Snow Bowl, closed through today, reopens today.

If you can picture expert skiing combined with Southwestern United States of America culture and history, Taos Ski Valley, N.M., is the place to visit. You fly to Albuquerque, N.M., then drive to Albuquerque's Old Town as your first stop. Next stop north is the Pueblo of Santo Domingo and the Indian Trading Post, just past Sandia Peak.

A few miles farther north is Santa Fe, capital of New Mexico, with its pueblo style architecture and monuments. Santa Fe Ski Basin is nearby.

Continue north to Taos, loaded with charm, culture, and gourmet restaurants both there and nearby.

Monarchs Upended, 6-5

Mater Dei High School dropped four games off the pace Friday afternoon when invading Bishop Amat dealt the Monarchs a 6-5 eight-inning Angelus League loss at Memorial Park.

Amat came up with four runs in the fourth inning to tie it up and then used a double and single in the eighth to pull it out.

Gary Simpson was the leading hitter for Mater Dei with three hits, including a triple.

Mate Rick Sheldon also had a triple, which knocked in two runs in the second inning to give the Monarchs a temporary 5-1 lead over the league leaders.

ORDINANCE NO. 70-14
AN ORDINANCE OF THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF COSTA MESA, CALIFORNIA, PROVIDING FOR THE REGULATION OF BUSINESS ACTIVITIES IN THE FORM OF CLOSE OUT SALES AND MAKING PROVISIONS FOR FEES, REGULATIONS AND OTHER MATTERS IN CONNECTION THEREWITH.

THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF COSTA MESA, CALIFORNIA, DOES HEREBY ORDAIN AS FOLLOWS:

SECTION 1. Section 6217 of the Costa Mesa Municipal Code is hereby repealed.

SECTION 2. There is hereby added to Chapter VI of the Costa Mesa Municipal Code the following Article which shall read as follows:

CHAPTER VI
Businesses, Professions and Trades
Article 14
CLOSING OUT SALES

Sec. 61400. Purpose

This ordinance is intended to regulate any business activity irrespective of name which is designed and intended by the applicant to permanently conclude business operations at a designated location within a specified time.

Sec. 61401. False Advertising.

It shall be unlawful for any person to advertise or otherwise represent to the public, or any part thereof, in any manner a reduction in price of any goods, wares, merchandise, service, facility, or accomodation, whether such price reduction be represented in complete price figures or by percentage reduction unless the price from which the reduction is calculated is the price customarily charged by applicant for the goods, wares, merchandise, service, facility, or accommodation so offered to the public.

Sec. 61402. Permit Required.

It shall be unlawful for any person to advertise or conduct a business activity, as herein defined, without first obtaining a permit therefore from the City Council of the City of Costa Mesa in the manner hereinafter provided.

Sec. 61503. Persons Exempt.

The provisions of this ordinance shall not apply to, or effect, the following persons:

(a) Persons acting in their official capacities as public officials.

(b) Persons acting pursuant to process issued by a court of competent jurisdiction.

(c) Duly licensed auctioneers, selling at auction.

(d) Any publisher of a newspaper, magazine, or other periodical or publication, who publishes in good faith any advertisement without knowledge of its false, deceptive, or misleading character, or without knowledge that compliance has not been had with the provisions of this ordinance.

Sec. 61404. Application for Permit.

Any persons, desiring to advertise and conduct a sale regulated by this ordinance shall make a written application therefore, under oath. There shall be no fee charged for said permit. No business activity may continue beyond 90 days unless and until the person conducting the activity as set forth herein has applied for and been granted an extension by the City Council for a fixed period or periods of time. Any permit or renewal thereof granted as herein provided shall not be assignable or transferable. The following is required:

The application shall be made upon forms devised by the Director of Finance for the City of Costa Mesa and shall be completed and filed in accordance with administrative regulations established by that office for this purpose.

Sec. 61405. Investigation.

Upon the filing of the application for a permit as hereinabove provided, the Finance Department shall make or cause to be made such examination, audit, or investigation of the applicant and his business, history, and affairs in relation to the proposed activity as it shall deem necessary. If the Finance Department finds that the statements in the application are true, and that the methods proposed to be used by the applicant in conducting the activity are not such as, in its opinion, will work a fraud or deception upon prospective purchasers, it shall recommend to the City Council the issuance to the applicant of a permit to conduct such activity in conformity with the provisions of this ordinance; otherwise, it shall recommend to the City Council a denial of the application. The Finance Department may also refuse to issue a permit to the applicant because of the insufficiency of the information set forth in the application, but in the event of a denial for insufficient information, the Finance Department shall grant the applicant permission to file an amended application.

No permit may be issued by the Director of Finance to any applicant who has been convicted of any crime involving fraud or moral turpitude within 5 years preceding application. The Finance Department also may refuse to issue a permit to any person who has heretofore violated any provisions of any ordinance of the City of Costa Mesa regulating the conduct of activities of this type. Any applicant dissatisfied with the ruling of the Director of Finance may appeal to the City Council.

Sec. 61406. Duties of Permittee.

A permittee hereunder shall:

(a) Refrain from any false, deceptive, or misleading advertising.

(b) Conduct such activity in strict conformity to any advertising or holding out relating thereto.

Sec. 61407. Revocation of Permit.

The Director of Finance shall have the right to suspend the permit as granted herein until the next regular council meeting at which time the council shall take whatever action on the permit that is necessary.

The City Council shall have the power to revoke any permit granted herein in accordance with the provisions of this ordinance and after a public hearing whenever any such activity is being conducted in violation of any of the provisions of this ordinance; or in such a manner as to deceive or defraud the public; or if:

(a) The holder of any such permit has been guilty of any fraudulent practice or practices in the conduct of the activity authorized by such permit.

(b) The holder of any such permit has made any material misstatement in the application for such permit.

(c) The holder of any such permit has violated any of the provisions contained in this ordinance.

The Director of Finance shall have the discretion to require an inventory or to conduct an inventory of permittee's goods which are the subject of this ordinance if in his opinion said inventory is necessary.

Sec. 61408. Penalty.

Any violation of the provisions of this ordinance shall be deemed a misdemeanor, and the violation of this ordinance shall be punishable by a fine not exceeding $500.00 or imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months or by both such fine and imprisonment. Every day any violation of this ordinance shall continue shall constitute a separate offense.

SECTION 3. This ordinance shall take effect and be in full force thirty (30) days from and after its passage and prior to the expiration of fifteen (15) days from its passage shall be published once in the Orange Coast Daily Pilot, a newspaper of general circulation, printed and published in the City of Costa Mesa, together with the names of the members of the City Council voting for and against the same.

PASSED AND ADOPTED this 6th day of April, 1970.

A. L. PINKLEY
Mayor of the City of Costa Mesa

Real Estate

Questions and Comment By Realtor Randall McCardle

My husband and I are in our sixties. Our children are raised. We are thinking of buying a trailer and living in a trailer park. Do you have any thoughts pro or con on this?

Mrs. H. C. B. — Costa Mesa

There are many advantages to mobile home life. According to a recent issue of Time magazine, nearly 1/6 of the new houses being built this year are mobile homes. They are shedding their old image as cramped trailers. Mobile homes are moving in rapidly on the market for low priced housing. This has happened so fast, largely because factory-built mobile homes escape such hobbles as distribution of materials, costly onsight construction and building codes, all of which boost the cost of traditional housing. Half of the industry sales are to young married couples who need inexpensive shelter.

Mobile homes are growing bigger and more luxurious. Some carpeted, air-conditioned models command $16,000. Twelve-foot lodge units now account for 21 percent of the sales versus seven percent last year. Mobile homes are a long way from becoming the prevailing United States' way of life, but they are a major part of that life.

There are also many disadvantages to mobile home life. Your mobile home will depreciate much like a car. Mobile homes are not built to travel. It takes a truck to haul them. They must be licensed by the Department of Motor Vehicles in the same manner as a car or truck. In your trailer park or "mobile home estates" your rent will average between $50 and $80 per month. This includes your real estate tax that must be paid by the owner of the mobile home estate; therefore, you are paying real estate taxes as well as paying for your Department of Motor Vehicles license.

Many parks have definite restrictions on the younger visitors. Your 13-year-old grandson is, of course, allowed to visit you in your mobile home, but may not be allowed to use the recreational facilities such as the swimming pool.

These are just some of the factors to take under consideration before you decide to buy or not to buy what is jokingly called "wheel estate" rather than "real estate."

We have a few dollars to invest. I have been thinking about investing in real estate. Please give me a word of wisdom to help convince my husband.

Mrs. R. F. — Newport Beach

"A moment's reflection must convince you of two things: First, that lands are of permanent value, that there is scarcely a possibility of their falling in price, but almost a moral certainty of their raising exceedingly in value." This excerpt was written October 12, 1778, by George Washington to his stepson, J. P. Custis.

Editor's Note. Randall R. McCardle is an investment analyst, president of the Real Estaters, a director of the National Association of Real Estate Teachers, a college lecturer, author of "Real Estate in California." Many Waiting for Trailers

The first extensive survey of the mobile home park market in Orange County reveals that the majority have established waiting lists, according to a report released this week by the marketing research department of First American Title Insurance Company.

The overall vacancy factor was a scant 0.2 percent in the sampling covering over 21 percent of all such residential projects in the county.

The 22 mobile home parks included in the survey contain 3,904 spaces, or an average of 177 per park, Dale J. Post, First American's marketing research director, said. The units listed in the study are located in central Orange County — Santa Ana, Anaheim, Orange, Tustin, Huntington Beach, Garden Grove and Placentia.

Average monthly rent for a double space was $76.50 and for a single space, $62.00, the report indicates. Several charge an additional amount for corner lot spaces.

Only two of the parks allow children, although nine permit pets, generally on a limited or conditional basis as to size and type of animal. A charge for maintaining a pet is made by some of the parks.

Parks over five years old contain from nine to 13 spaces per acre, while newer parks, consisting of nearly all double spaces, have eight to nine spaces per acre. The average age of the parks included in the study was six and one-half years.

Twelve parks, or 55 percent, have some restrictions on age or condition of mobile homes entering the park.

Post noted that the last official state government count, as of January 1,1969, tabulated 187 operational parks containing 18,640 spaces in Orange County. Local government agencies and mobile home associations estimate that some 55 new mobile home parks have been developed or approved in the county since that date, he reported.

Sandpointe Exceeds $1 Million in Sales

In the first two months of 1970 Leadership Homes has set a new sales mark, exceeding the $1 million mark in home sales at Sandpointe. The master planned community in Santa Ana has recorded $6 million in sales since its grand opening in January, 1969.

Ten fully decorated model homes from both the Citation and the Today Series are on display at Sandpointe, offering buyers a choice of homes from $23,995 to $37,990. Situated near two regional shopping centers and minutes from four major freeways, the project is planned to include 1,000 homes, in addition to a five acre park, commercial shopping centers, schools and churches.

"The exceptionally low tax and utility rates plus the attractive location have all been factors in maintaining our continued success at the Sandpointe community," stated Philip Yasskin, Leadership Homes Director of Sales. "Our homes sell because we believe that building a community means building quality homes that meet family needs."

The Today Series at Sandpointe is designed for the young, growing family. Available in Spanish, Ranch, and Contemporary exteriors, the homes provide from 1,126 square feet to 2,063 square feet, with prices starting at $23,995. Indoor-outdoor living is encouraged in these three to five bedroom homes that are built flush with the lot line on one side to provide extra big, private walled-in side and rear back yards.

The Citation Series features homes from three bedrooms and two baths to six bedrooms and three baths. Built on extra large, pool sized lots, Citation includes the famous Leadership "growing room" attraction, a large upstairs rumpus room which can be finished as the fifth and sixth bedroom. The "growing room" adds more than 300 square feet and allows families to customize their homes to fit individual needs. Starting at $27,995, the Citation is available in fifteen different elevations, and include deluxe features such as double door covered entries and back yard fencing.

Sandpointe is one of eight Southern California residential communities under development by Great Southwest Corporation's real estate development subsidiary, Macco Corporation. Macco's Leadership Homes set sales records in 1969, exceeding $32 million in home sales.

To reach Sandpointe, take the Santa Ana Freeway to MacArthur Boulevard and follow the signs to the community, or take the San Diego Freeway to the Newport Freeway to MacArthur Boulevard. Sandpointe is located on MacArthur at Main Street in Santa Ana.

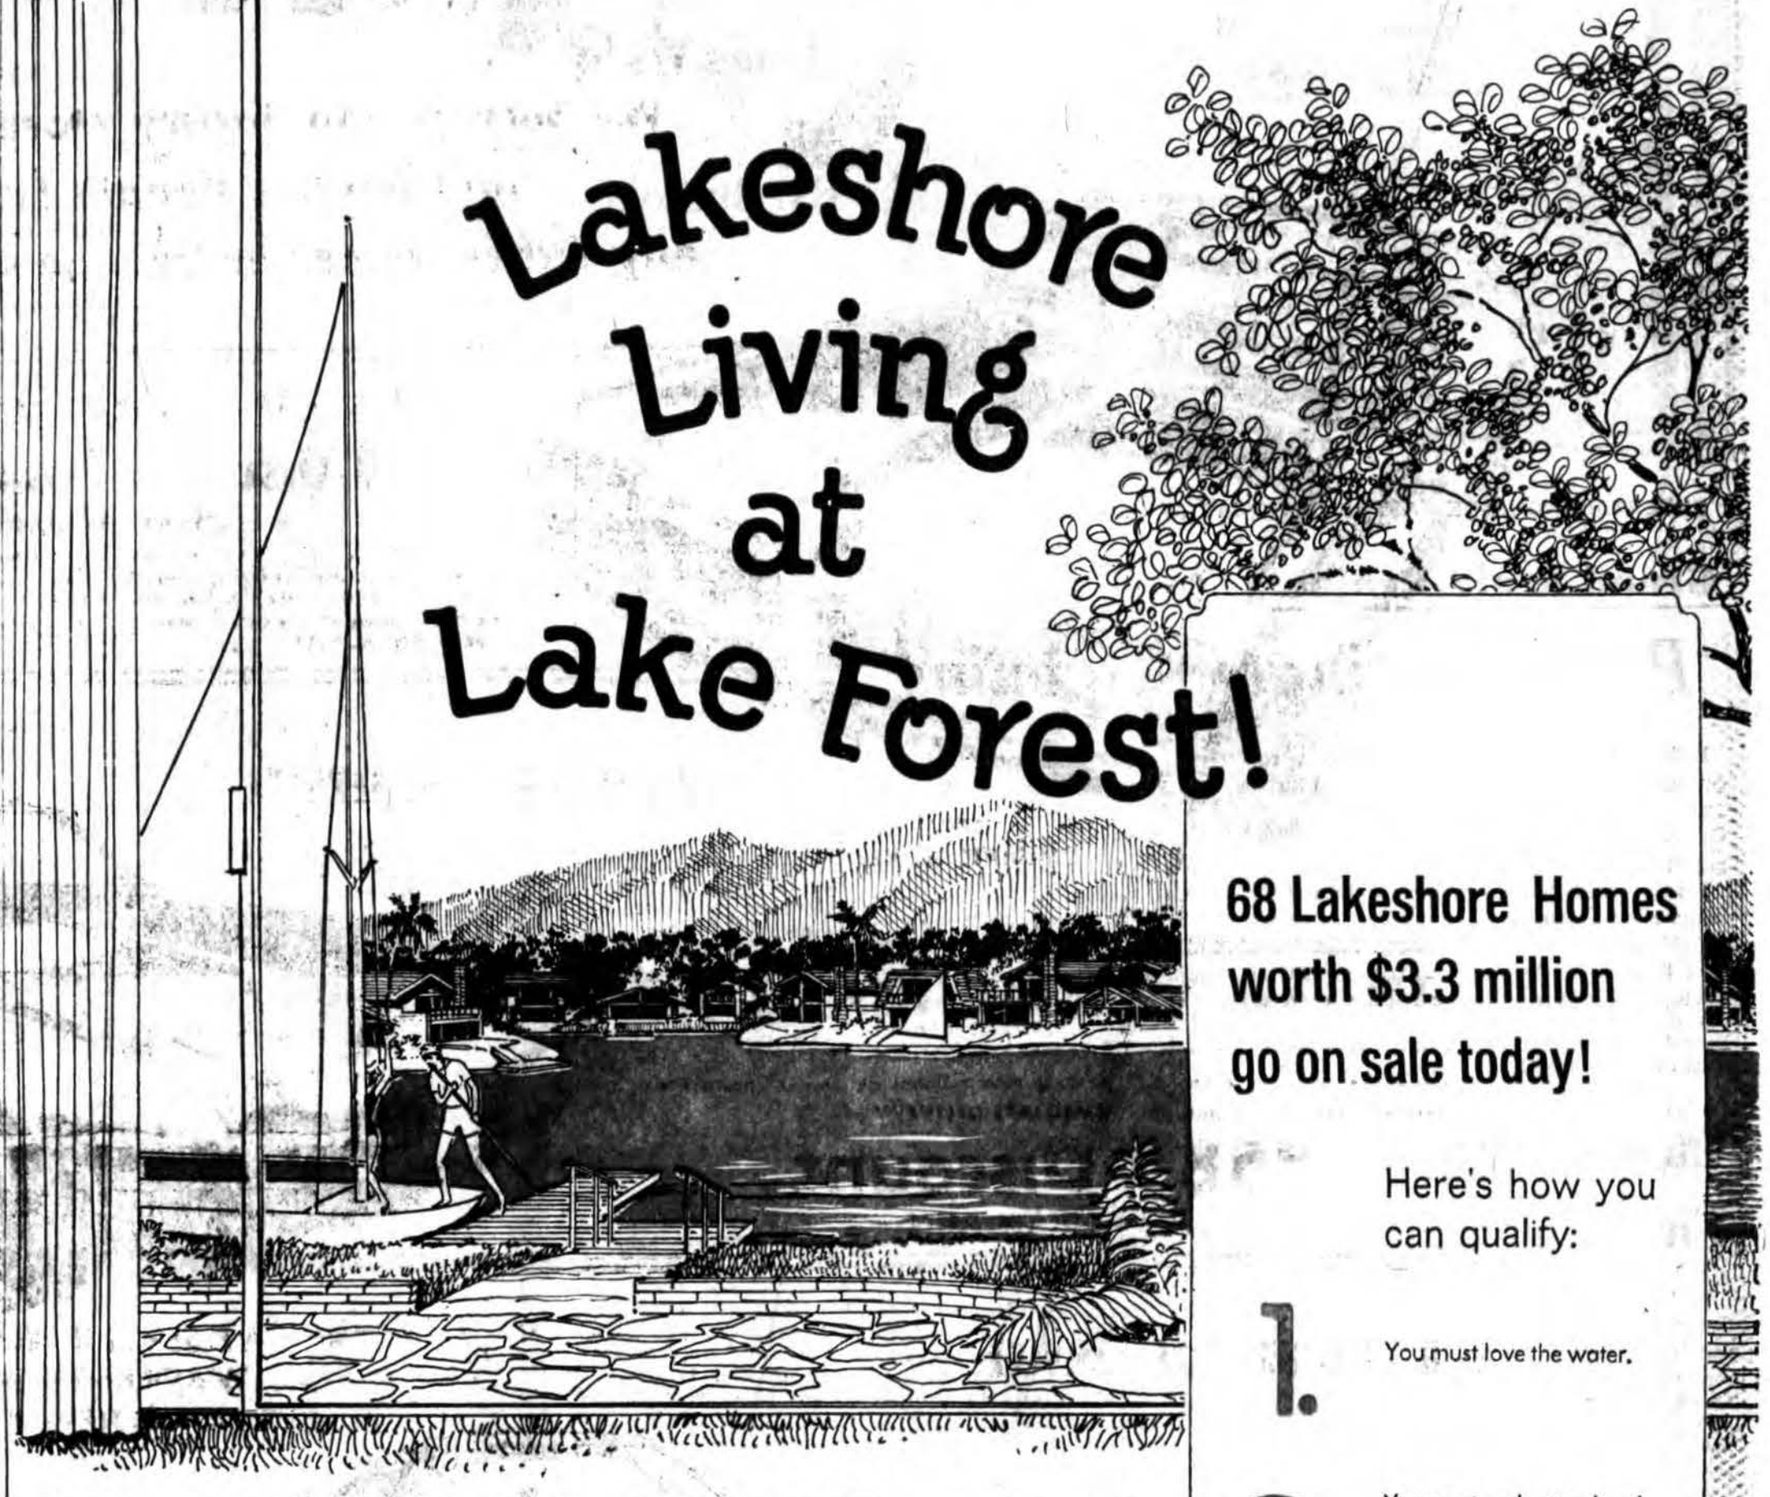

S. Bay Club Unit Opens

The $14.1 million, 768 unit South Bay Club, recreation-oriented apartment community for single adults, opens Sunday at Brookhurst and Broadway in Anaheim.

HELMSMAN ONE OF FIVE DECORATED MODELS OPEN THIS WEEKEND AT PARK HUNTINGTON

Property Increases 25 Percent Since 1963

Figures released recently by Christiana Oil Corp. for its prestigious marine community, Huntington Harbour, show that land values in the community have risen 25 percent in the seven years since its beginnings in 1963.

According to Donald L. Byrnes, vice president of Huntington Harbour Corp., Christiana expects that with the community now 70 percent complete and housing 4,000 residents, property values will increase at an even greater rate than in the past. Studies of similar properties show that absorption and valuation increases are slow in initial development stages, but accelerate as less and less of the desirable properties remain.

Estimates of increases in Huntington Harbour land values over the next 10 to 20 years can be obtained by examining a like community, Newport Harbor's Lido Isle. Here the value of home lots has risen 336 percent above the value of comparable properties in the 20 plus years since 1947.

Reasons for the expected increase in value are multiple. Huntington Harbour is part of a 44 miles stretch of Orange County coastline which is being transformed into one of the most elaborate ocean resort and recreational areas in the world.

Due to the steep incline of the continental shelf, marina developments are not compatible with most of the shoreline, making the Harbour a particularly valuable asset and the only community offering water-front lots and homes from Ventura to San Diego.

Orange County growth generally is 4½ times that of the state and 12 times the national average. This growth is expected to increase at an accelerating pace as industrial development moves away from the urban Los Angeles center, and beach communities, once primarily resort towns, attract more and more permanent residents.

A planning and architectural masterpiece, Huntington Harbour is a widely-acclaimed example of the creation of a total community from reclaimed land. Formerly a marshland and meandering complex of mud-banked estuaries, the site is being developed with the care and refinements required for creating a total environment, providing home, school, services and recreation.

ENTERTAINING MADE EASY IN CASTAWAY AT PARK HUNTINGTON

Grand Scale Project

Park Huntington Opening

Park Huntington, a 557-lot development is a new grand-scale project of S & S Construction Company in Huntington Beach.

The one and two story homes allow a maximum of versatility with a choice of from three to six bedrooms and up to 3½ baths as well as two and three-car garages. Formal dining rooms and spacious family rooms fulfill entertainment requirements on the most casual or elegant level.

The optional bonus room offers space for hobby pursuits or can be transformed into two bedrooms for a growing family. Natural wood-burning fireplaces, with an optional step-down conversation pit becomes the focal point of living room atmosphere. All electric, O'Keefe & Merritt kitchens are equipped with automatic dishwasher, built-in double ovens and range and luminous ceilings.

In the tradition of quality-building, all S & S Construction homes are built with Genuine Lath and Plaster. Other extras include wall to wall luxury carpeting, underground utilities, abundant closet space, concrete driveways and many, many other features.

Gracious living in Park Huntington is enhanced by the sunny summer sunshine all year 'round. Some of the best sailing and fishing in California is found in these coastal waters. There are three golf courses within the city and several private courses in nearby communities. Shopping centers offer the most modern, convenient shopping available anywhere, with landscaped malls and abundant parking to satisfy every desire. 35 elementary schools, three high schools and four two-year colleges and universities provide higher education for the area.

Park Huntington offers a sound investment for those who enjoy outdoor living at its best. Homes are priced from $29,900. Take the San Diego Freeway to Brookhurst, go south to Park Huntington.

Income Property Unit Constructed in Orange

An "Income Property Center," first of its kind, is now being constructed at the corner of Main and Struck in the city of Orange. Twin two-story structures containing 33,000 square feet of floor space will be occupied by tenants that sell a variety of goods and services for owners and developers of income-producing real estate.

The uniqueness of the center, in addition to being first of its kind, is that two of its major occupants are competing property management firms. The two firms are each headed by individuals who are recognized leaders in the property management field, M. Douglas, President of BDF Corp. and Ray Salinas, owner of The Property Management Company.

Both individuals are best known as authorities in the apartment industry and are popular speakers before many groups. Both are past presidents of the Orange County Apartment House Association and college instructors of property management at Orange Coast and Santa Ana Colleges.

Each has expanded the services of their firms beyond management to provide investors with total service. They have dedicated much of their careers to professionalization of property management. The Income Property Center is an expression of tseir approach to modern management techniques and philosophies.

One of the other major tenants in the new Center is Trans-Coast Supply Corporation, a purchasing and supply association of income property developers. Buddy L. Rogers, well known budget analyst and purchasing agent, is the Executive Vice President of the "multi-million dollar purchasing power" firm.

Some of Orange County's largest income property developers, such as Kavanaugh-Beard Development Company, Covington Brothers Investment Company, Thoner & Birmingham Development Company, Income Property Specialists and Arnel Construction Company, are among the firms supporting Trans-Coast Supply Corporation's purchasing power.

Homes With Apartments By Buccola

George D. Buccola, builder-developer and president of Buccola Homes, is presenting his new 1970 luxury homes with separate apartment units in Costa Mesa.

These three-bedroom luxury homes feature a separate private bedroom apartment for rental and extra income, or they may be used as a haven for relative like a mother-in-law, repossessed daughter or favorite aunt.

The private separate and sound-proof apartment with 650 square feet has its own entrance, garage, living room with used brick fireplace, bath, and all electric built-in kitchen and dinette area.

Within the main home, in addition to having three bedrooms and two baths, are two used brick fireplaces—one in the living room and the other with a barbeque unit in a large 20' x 30' rustic country style beamed ceiling kitchen. This home has over 1900 square feet.

The rustic apartment-homes have heavy shake roofs with used brick and redwood exterior siding.

Both the home and the apartment have their own separate laundry service, forced air furnaces and private garden and patio area.

Each house and apartment is Bronze Medallion with an all electric Hotpoint kitchen with oven, range, dishwasher, disposal, and refrigerator.

According to M.M. La Borde, realtor and sales agent, the homes are offered with favorable financing available.

The homes are open daily from 10 a.m. to dusk on Center Street near the intersection of Center and Anaheim St. by Costa Mesa Park in Costa Mesa.

The sales information office is at 220 E. 17th St. in Costa Mesa.

Escrow Group To Hear Talk

"New Escrow Liabilities" will be discussed by Oscar H. Beasley, vice president and counsel of First American Title Insurance Company, at a meeting of the Orange County Escrow Association Wednesday, April 15, in the Golden Pheasant restaurant, Anaheim.

Dinner at 7:30 will follow the social hour at 6:30 p.m.

Voting Set For Bluffs

The annual meeting of the bluffs Homeowners' Community Association will be held Tuesday, April 14, in the Corona del Mar High School cafeteria.

The members will be voting for nine directors to operate their association for 1970-71. All homeowners are urged to either attend this meeting personally or give or send their proxy to a friend or to a member of the present board of directors.

VISTA VERDE

Home

Another fine community-by-the-sea by COAST CONSTRUCTION COMPANY.

Each VISTA VERDE home possesses that subtle but recognizable something extra in design, construction, detail and finish that sets apart "the best" from the merely "good." It's not only the right buy..., it's your best new home buy!

We'd say compare a VISTA VERDE home with its closest competition. (If anything came close.)

One and two story homes with 2-3-4 bedrooms, 2-3 baths, and 2-3 car garages are priced from $31,950.

Next to Shorecliff and Harbor Hills Country Clubs, and less than one mile from the beach.

Trailers And Homes Compatible

The compatibility of mobilehome parks and conventional residential areas is a recognized fact today, said Richard J. Martens, general manager of Boise Cascade Building Co., Mobilehome Communities, western division.

"In fact, many cities and counties are reversing previous policies and now requiring mobilehome parks be built in areas zoned for conventionally built single family dwellings," he said.

Martens said he is pleased to see this trend because it is Boise's contention mobilehome residents are first class citizens in any community and are simply choosing a different housing structure.

"Residents of Boise Cascade parks are in actuality "country-club" residents," Martens said. "Our parks offer all the amenities of a private club plus close social contact which is not generally the rule in most subdivisions," he said.

Boise Cascade is America's leading builder of mobilehome communities and has more than 90 project complete or under construction at the present time.

The basic idea of the Boise Cascade mobilehome community design is to provide a recreational center with swimming pools, billiard room, card room, therapeutic pool and other amenities around which residents can plan social activities.

"We are able to provide country club living for persons with an average income," Martens said. "This fact, coupled with the advantages mobile living offers retired persons, has made such communities extremely desirable to most cities."

Persons unfamiliar with park living tend to believe mobilehomes are placed too close together.

"A subdivision normally has about a five-foot side yard, giving about 10 feet between living units. A Boise Cascade park normally provides about 25 feet between living units."

Martens said his division is giving careful consideration to possible mobilehome community development in Canada.

"Our early research indicates Canada is becoming a very popular place and has a high growth potential. This potential, in relationship to the problems of conventional housing today, would indicate that mobilehome communities could provide Canadians with the facilities they want at a price they could well afford," he said.

SPACIOUS DINING AREA IN SAN CLEMENTE'S VISTA VERDE HOMES

Setting Enhances Vista Homes

"There's only one way to truly describe our Vista Verde Homes in San Clemente," claims Bob Ostengaard, vice-president of Coast Construction Company.

"They're ideal homes built in an idyllic setting. And they're filled with the extra touches and conveniences that make the difference in beauty and livability. It's a select community, with each home located on a view-site surrounded by gently rolling fairways."

Priced from $31,950, Vista Verde Homes offer three floor plans to choose from, with two, three and four bedrooms, two or three baths, dining rooms and three-car garages.

Functionally designed ceramic tile kitchens provide all the built-ins including self-cleaning ovens. The kitchens are oriented to patios at the back of the house, with sliding glass doors and windows playing a key role in creating an indoor-outdoor effect. Luminous ceilings keep the kitchen bright and cheery throughout the day, acoustical insulation, by absorbing noise, provides a quiet dining area.

Other appointments include woodburning fireplaces, wall-to-wall carpeting, shake and wood shingle roofs and concrete driveways.

Vista Verde Homes offer new design concepts in country club living. Every home is carefully positioned to preserve a permanent, unobstructed view of Shorecliff Country Club's fairways. In addition, all utilities have been placed underground to maintain the magnificent vistas of rolling greens.

To reach Vista Verde Homes, take the Santa Ana or San Diego Freeway to Camino Estrella turnoff in San Clemente. Simply follow directional signs to furnished models.

Cal Homes Off To Good Start

More than 10 percent of the homes in the second and final unit of California Homes, Capistrano, were sold in the first day of sales following the unit grand opening.

Robert Phillips, executive vice president of Presley Development Company, attributed the success of the development to the fact that it offers one of the last opportunities for homebuyers to purchase an ocean-view home in a prime location for as little as $23,995.

"The development is only about ¼ mile from the ocean, as the crow flies," said Phillips. "And the new marina in the Dana Point Harbor, which is under construction now, is only two miles away."

According to the Orange County Harbor District, the $24 million dollar marina will eventually house approximately 2200 boats, in addition to a boat club, boat rental agency, restaurant, dry dock and maintenance facilities, picnic areas, public beaches and park areas with recreational facilities.

One half of the 260-acre harbor will be completed by July, 1971, with the remainder to be in operation within five years.

The combination of view-oriented location and lower-end price will draw attention from several major markets. Phillips reported that their pre-construction market survey studies confirmed the appeal for at least four segments.

"First, California Homes, Capistrano, should attract the young people who are looking for a family-ready home in a nice location," said Phillips.

"Secondly, the homes are ideal for the family that is seeking a reasonably-priced second home in a virtually smog-free cool-climated recreational area," he continued.

"Third, the more mature couples that are approaching retirement, but don't like regimented retirement living, will also be attracted."

"And, naturally, the homes are suited to the potential investor who is looking for a recreationally-oriented investment that should net him good seasonal rents and a good appreciation."

The development is located about one mile south of the town of San Juan Capistrano, on Calle Juanita, on the ocean-side of the San Diego Freeway.

Fund Plan Supported By NAHB

WASHINGTON — The National Association of Home Builders has approved the idea of "Operation Self-Support," a program undertaken by one of its affiliated associations to create and restore sources of mortgage finance funds.

The Suburban Maryland Home Builders Association is urging all employes in the home building and related industries to enlarge the pool of mortgage financing by making additional and new deposits in savings and loan institutions of their choice.

In a letter to John H. Pettit, president of the Maryland HBA, Nathaniel H. Rogg, NAHB executive Vice President, said the national association had worked closely with the savings and loan industry in many efforts to increase the availability of funds for mortgage financing.

RANCHO CAPISTRANO
Land of the Dons

UNSPOILED, SECLUDED
2½ to 3 acre rancho sites amid the great oaks of Cleveland National Forest

Deep in the great oak region of the Cleveland National Forest lies a 300-acre island of rolling hills, warm valleys and grassy glades known as Rancho Capistrano. Vast reaches of the National Forest recreation area stretch in every direction, a Government-owned buffer against population and commercial encroachment.

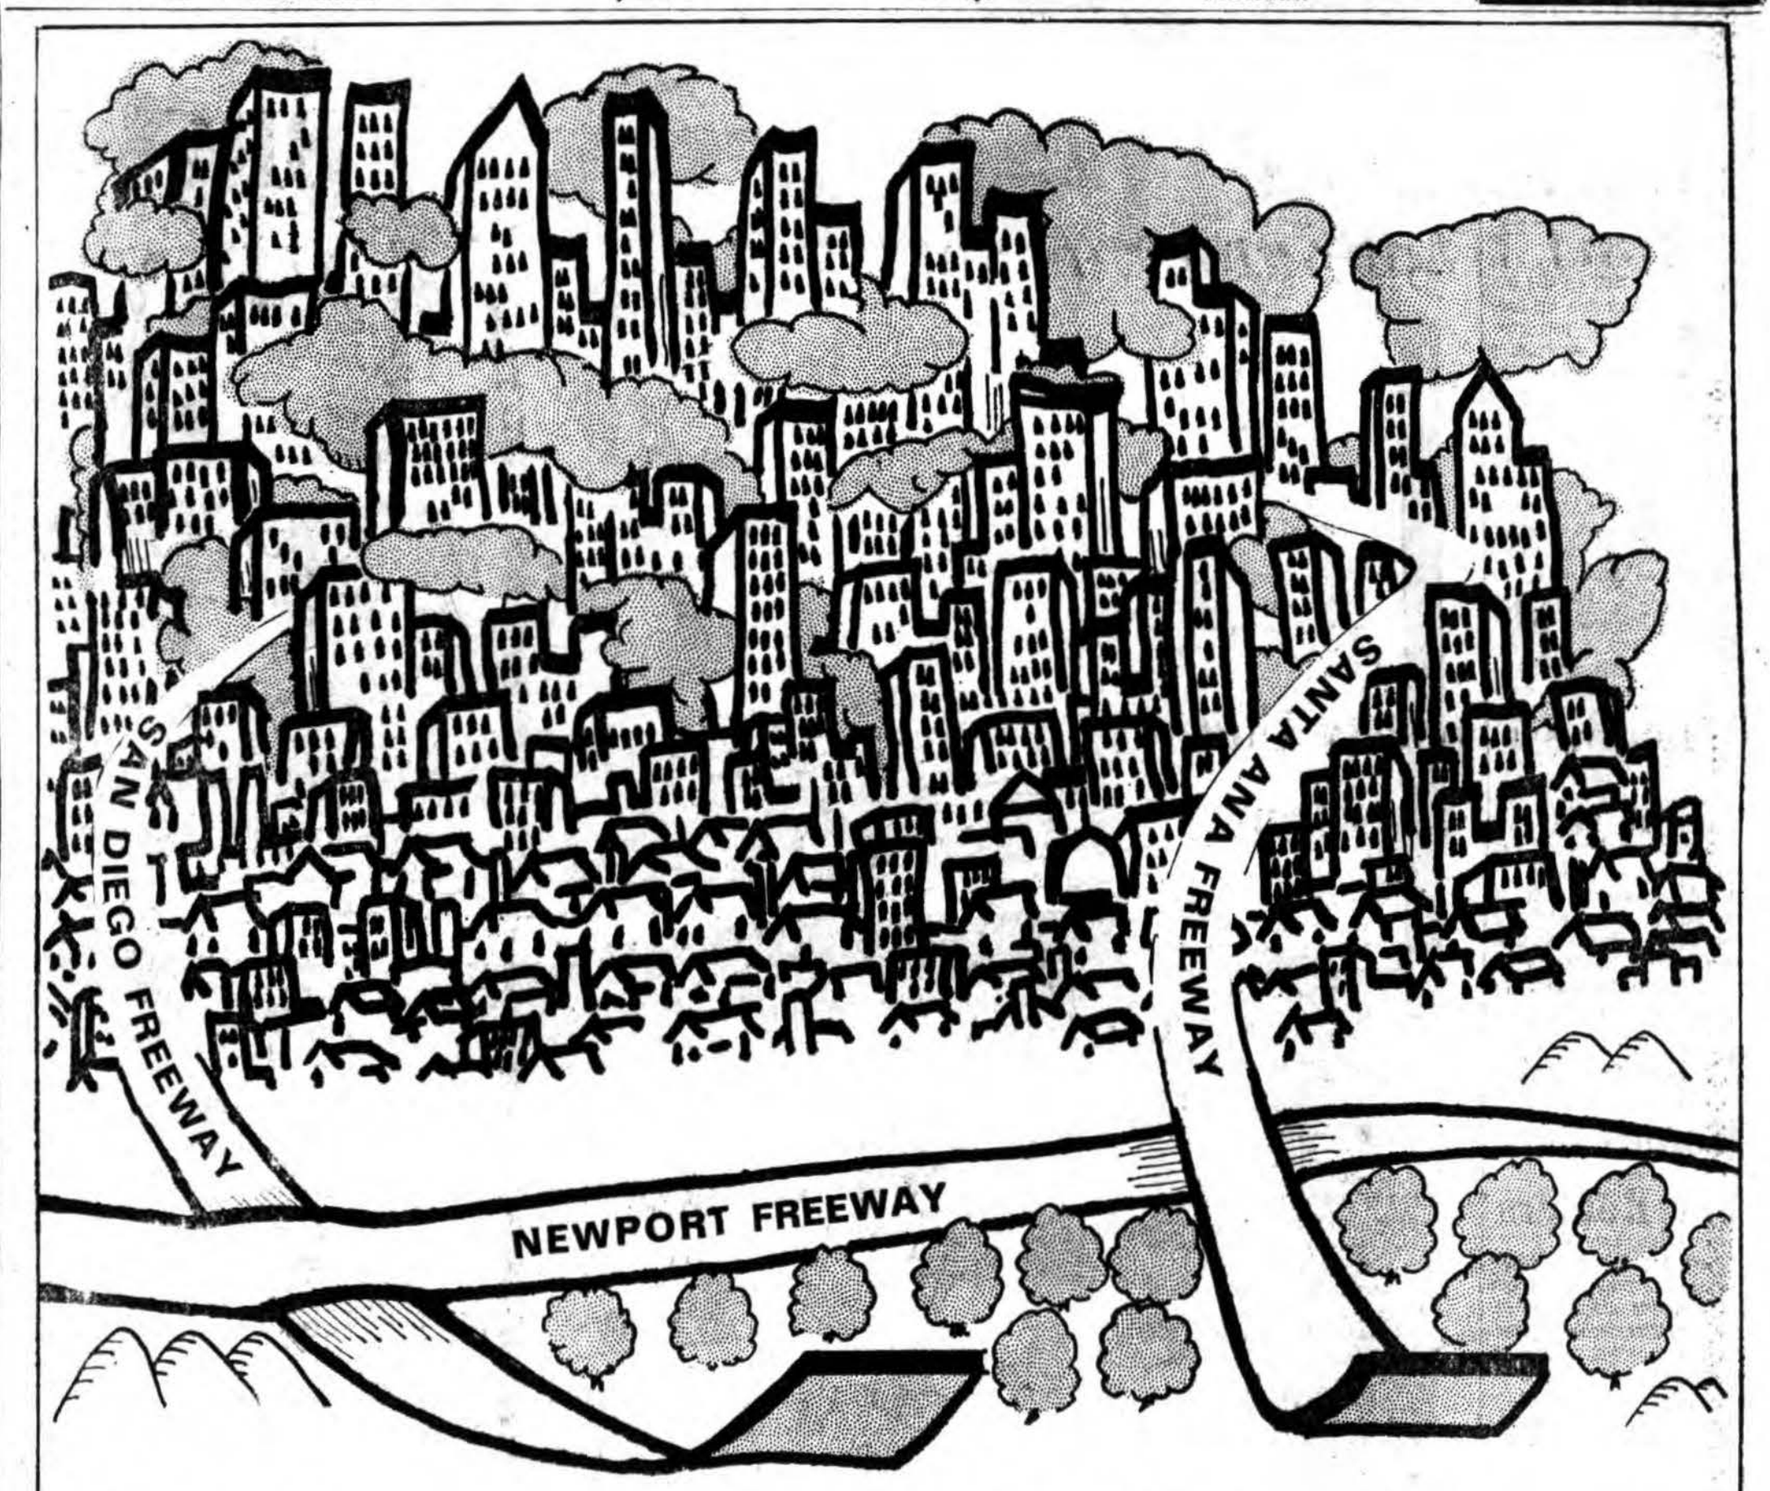

Rancho Capistrano will belong to just 133 owners, in fee simple. Each of the 2½ to 3 acre sites is cleared and accessible to utilities and graded road. Ancient Spanish oaks still stand on most of the sites. This private preserve, once sold, can never be duplicated.

At Rancho Capistrano you'll enjoy assured seclusion for an infinite future, the beauty of two private, stream-fed lakes, a temperate year-round climate at 3300-ft. elevation, and 30-minute access to coastal recreation at Laguna, Dana Point, San Clemente, and Newport Beach. Only 23 scenic miles from San Juan Capistrano. Rancho Capistrano sites are priced from $10,000 to $18,000, easy down, liberal financing.

'Total Living' Offered at Lake Forest Development

New ideas generated by major U.S. homebuilders are significantly reshaping the lifetimes of increasing numbers of the population by introducing leisuretime luxuries previously available only to the more affluent. And, not surprisingly, the modern day computer is keeping tabs on the trend and it's participants

One of the newest ideas is the "total living" community where the homebuilder offers not only a residence, but social and recreational programs and facilities that combine the qualities of a country club and family sports center.

Typical is Occidental Petroleum Land and Development Corporation's Lake Forest, a master-planned Southern California community in southeastern Orange County that contains considerable wooded countryside and other amenities.

When ground was broken in December 1967, for the 1900 acre development, plans called for the construction of a wide variety of types of residences, as well as for the creation of three lakes, a massive community recreation center, generous green belts, parks, and riding trails — all for the exclusive use of the residents. The result has been immensely successful for both builder and homeowners.

Summers and weekends, Lake Forest is a beehive of activity. The lakes offer swimming, sailing and fishing. The swim team is put through its paces in an Olympic-size pool. Housewives, escaping from homemaking routines, are whacking the ball on the tennis courts under the tutelage of a professional instructor, while duffers are sharpening golf swings in preparation for play on nearby courses. Inside the Beach and Tennis Club, a staff of seven supervises childrens' games while mothers tone their muscles at yoga and ballet classes. Outside, young boys and girls indian-file through he woods while horses and riders meander over the community's expanding bridle path.

Frequent evening socials bring forth the adult community for barbecues, luaus and dancing. These are the same people who, a few years ago, might have been living in an apartment or in a conventional tract home and whose main social contact was with immediate neighbors.

At developments such as Lake Forest, almost everyone is on a first name basis with everyone else, thanks to the contacts brought about by social and recreational activities.

One young mother put it this way: "Since moving to Lake Forest, we have met people whose ages range from 21 to 79. We consider it a privilege to meet and mix with all of them because we, as a family seem to gain something from everyone."

As the development's population expands Occidental maintains a continuing statistical, computerized, profile study of the buyers of Lake Forest homes. In general, the average family head is youngish, has a good income, and moved with his family because of a desire for a better dwelling.

More specifically, the average age of the husband is 38 years. He has an annual income of $18,000 to support his wife and nearly two children. The average income is probably high because of the 15 percent with incomes of $25,000, or more, who are at the peak of their earning capacity in high-salaried Southern Californa, or, who are retired business and professional men. At the other end of the spectrum, 15 percent earn $12,000 or less, largely representing the very youngest men.

The "whys" of relocating into the "total living" community were varied, although a preponderance (65 percent) moved for one of four reasons: a new home or larger home, in a better location, and closer to the breadwinner's work.

Eighty-six percent moved to Lake Forest from single-family dwellings, the remainder having resided in town houses, apartments, or mobile homes.

If Lake Forest is typical of the new concept of "total living" communities certain conclusions can be drawn from the profile. The residents seek a better and more satisfying way of life, and they are willing to work hard to enjoy it as soon as they can. The younger marrieds may have to forego a large family in order to enjoy fuller financial security and the relaxation it can bring. The elder couples, with earnings salted away, pursue a life of leisure and enjoyment created in an environment permitting whatever degree of social contact is desired by the gregariousness of the individuals involved.

"Total living" communities, where the emphasis is on the utilization of new leisuretime, are accepted elements of the American scene now, and will continue to be. As one young electronic engineer at Lake Forest put it, "we're never bored."

Thunderbird Homes Lure For Boaters

"Closeness of boating facilities has proven to be one of the major attractions for buyers of Thunderbird Homes at Dana Point," states George R. Meeker and Willard A. Bochte, builder-partners of the 460-acre beach community.

The Dana Point Marina, scheduled for completion this year, is located less than one mile from the development. It will have space for 2,000 small craft, boat repair facilities, restaurants, shops, motels, swimming beaches, picnic centers and special areas for fishing from the breakwater.

"Homes located in water-oriented communities have proven to increase in value more substantially than those in comparable communities not located near water," continued the partners. "For the most part our buyers plan to enjoy all the benefits of buying a house close to a major Southland marina, but they will also realize a larger appreciation in the value of their property."

Thunderbird Homes are available in four custom designed floor plans, with 15 elevations in multi-level and one-story homes. Three or four bedrooms and two or three baths are featured.

Many of the homes are on view lots. All models have family rooms, fireplaces and balanced-power kitchens with built-ins and large pantries. The rooms are large with cathedral ceilings and wide openings of floor-to-ceiling glass providing access to covered patios and taking advantage of the ocean or mountain views.

Thunderbird homes are reached via the San Diego Freeway to Capistrano Beach. North on Pacific Coast Highway to Del Obispo and East to Stone Hill Road.

More Loose Money Needed

WASHINGTON — The chief spokesman for the nation's home and apartment builders said today the prime rate reduction is only one of many actions necessary to reinvigorate the industry and the economy.

Louis R. Barba, president of the National Association of Home Builders, said the commercial banks' action was a welcome indication that inflation is being slowed.

"But," Barba added, "the industry and home buyers would be making a mistake in raising false hopes that interest rates for home mortgages will ease soon.

"While the banks' move may be an indication of some lessening in the price of money to big borrowers, it needs to be followed immediately by Federal Reserve action in easing restrictive policies, particularly in the face of the huge demands that will be made in the capital markets through new corporate and municipal bond issues.

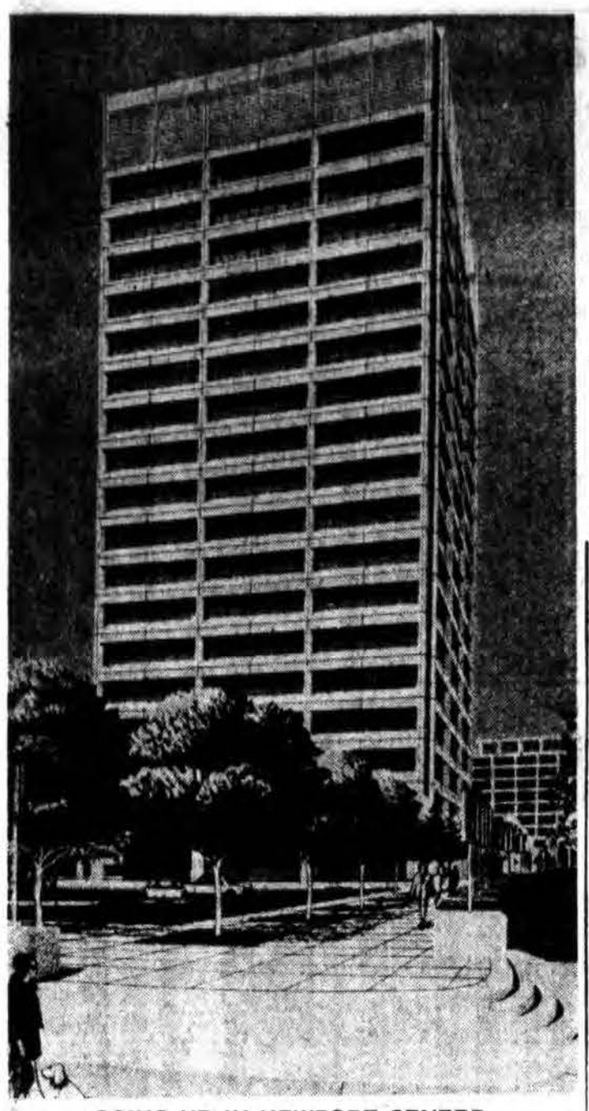

"The housing industry still will be confronted for some time with the fact that there is a scarcity of funds for mortgage lending.

"As Preston Martin, chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, pointed out just the other day it makes no sense for a family, even if it can do so, to delay purchase of a house because every month of delay just costs it more with the price of land and cost of building going up more rapidly than interest rates."

GOING UP IN NEWPORT CENTER
18-Story Office Building Under Way

New Skyline

Big Building at Center

Construction is set to begin this month on Orange County's tallest building, an 18-story office structure planned for the Irvine Company's Financial Plaza at Newport Center.

William R. Mason, president of the Irvine Company, said the new building, designed by Skidmore Owings and Merril, will cost $13.8 million. It will be part of the company's new urban financial complex overlooking the Pacific Ocean and Newport Harbor in Newport Beach.

Faced with tinted solar glass and natural aluminum, the structure will be serviced by five high speed elevators. Adjacent to it will be a parking structure with room for 1100 cars and 14,000 square feet of commercial space. Union Bank will occupy the ground floor.

The 322,676 square foot building will rise some 280 feet above the ground from the highest land elevation at Newport Center, 220 feet above sea level. Mason said, "Tenants will enjoy smog-free vistas stretching some 30 miles in all directions and including Catalina Island and the Santa Ana Mountains."

The new building will be situated in a large 26-acre sector of land which will eventually house five high rise structures. Also designed by Skidmore Owings and Merrill, the cresent-shaped block will be pedestrian oriented with tree shaded restaurants, three pedestrian courts generously planted with shade trees and brick paved auto plazas.

Mason added, "Within minutes of leaving their office suites, executives will find themselves in a beautifully landscaped complex with all the conveniences of shopping, working and entertainment. In addition, there will be two golf courses on the Plaza's perimeter adding to the area's spaciousness and making it convenient for businessmen to relax on the fairways in the middle of a working day."

The 18 story tower will be built adjacent to Avco Financial Center, a 16-story reflective glass structure already under construction. Avco's building will house Avco Financial Services; international headquarters for Seaboard Finance Company, the world's third largest consumer finance company; and headquarters for Balboa Insurance Company, a Seaboard subsidiary.

Avco is making the move from Cleveland, Seaboard from Los Angeles. In a recent announcement, Pacific Mutual Life Insurance Company, the west's largest mutual life insurance company, said it will move principal operations from Los Angeles to a 10-acre site at Financial Plaza within two years.

Three other structures, ranging in height from 16 to 18 stories, are planned, and some 30,000 square feet of commercial retail space will be added during the seventies.

All told, the future construction will add 1,230,000 square feet of space to the rapidly growing financial center. It also brings Financial Plaza's total investments — buildings completed, under construction or on the planning boards — to $70 million. The total net worth of financial institutions now located ni the Plaza and those planning to relocate there is estimated at $3 billion.

Boating Fun Increases At Capo's Troy Homes

Boating facilities will be increased soon for owners at Troy Homes by the Sea in San Juan Capistrano with the completion of the first facilities at the $9,400,000 Dana Point Marina, reports Roy Roman, subdivision sales manager.

Troy Homes by the Sea, a development of The McCarthy Company, is only a few minutes away from the marina.

The boat launching ramp at the marina will be open seven days a week beginning in May or early June, according to Orange County officials in charge of the project.

"Many of our residents who are boating enthusiasts are expected to take advantage of the new facilities every day during the summer," said Roman. "This will give our residents access to the only large-scale boat launch south of Newport. Presently, the ramp is open on weekends and holidays."

Major construction on the inner harbor will be completed by the end of this month.

The McCarthy Company has provided for the boating family at Troy Homes by the Sea through extra wide side yards, which are ample for parking boats or campers.

Construction is well advanced on the second unit of 44 homes. Prices range from $27,950 to $34,950. One story and two story homes are available for immediate occupancy.

Furnished models are open from 10 a.m. to dusk. They can be reached by turning off the Santa Ana-San Diego Freeway at San Juan Capistrano and proceeding west on Del Obispo Street to Camino del Avion, then east to the development.

If you are in the market for a NEW home, see these outstanding customized homes, built by Frank H. Ayres and Son, located in a prime area very close to Huntington State Beach. The homes are priced from $30,290 to $33,690 and vary in size from 3 to 4 bedrooms, 2 to 3 car garages and 2 to 3 baths, with shake or mission tile roofs, fireplaces, underground utilities, concrete driveways, built-ins and carpeting. There is VA and FHA financing available. There are 3 homes available because of credit rejections. Occupancy by May 1, 1970 in this unit. As added features these homes include such additional extras, as shag carpets, front lawn landscaping with sprinklers.

Our next unit is now on sale for occupancy in May and June 1970 and introduces the new 3,000 sq. ft. "El Dorado" model priced from $34,490.

HERE IT IS!
2 B/R, clean, neat, sharp. Corner lot room for boat, trailer. Electric built - ins, wall/wall. GI or FHA terms are OK here! The price? $22,000 and yes, you do own the land. What else is there to say?
PAY ATTENTION
out there and look at what we have. 3 B/R Sunkist home for only $25,780. New paint, new water heater, 5 fruit trees, wall/wall everywhere, fireplace. Its the bargain of 1970 and FHA or VA terms are OK.
LIKE TO DEAL?
To start with we admit this is not the sharpest home we ever offered but it does have a heated pool and a bonus room. After you clean it up it will be work free. We won't quote the price here; we want you to take a look at 3 B/R Westmont and then lets talk it over.
THE FUN & GAME
BONUS room is ready for the party and the rear yard is set for the big Bar-B-Que. Immaculate 3 B/R Westmont with a low payment 5¾ FHA loan for you to take over. $31,500 pays everything and we will help you with the down payment.

DISTRIBUTOR WANTED

Local territory will not interfere with present job. Devote spare time evenings or week ends. You can make up to $20.00 per hour. Age no barrier, but automobile essential. You do no selling as you take over accounts we have already contracted for. Cash requirement is $1500 part time and $6000 full time which is secured. Our new and unique method of selling color post cards through automatic merchandisers has proven a big winner. Your duties will consist of only making collections and keeping inventory in the equipment. Immediate cash income. This opportunity available only for a limited time as their are only a few territories open. There is no limit to the potential of this business.

For further details write Baron Industries, 17171 Beach Blvd., Suite G, Huntington Beach, Calif. 92647. (Please give your telephone number) or call (714) 847-7910.

ATTENTION

SMALL INVESTOR

Evidence of achievement by U.I.I. Distributors can be seen from Coast-to-Coast!

A business revolution has taken place, proving the "Little Fellow" can emerge a "Mighty Giant" in the U.I.I. money-making route system.

The Questions: Do you have a serviceable car? 6-10 hours free time a week? $1,500 to invest which, according to an authoritative source, triples in value the day you start in the vending business? Can grow to $1,000. a month income with this small cash start. Success isn't automatic . . . you have to work for it!

When you do this with U.I.I., you'll never suffer from competition. No selling or soliciting . . . just a service function.

FAMILY WEEKLY COOKBOOK

4-Page Section on Chinese-American Cookery

Ask Them Yourself

FOR MYRL E. ALEXANDER, director, Bureau of Prisons

Of the number of people in prison, what percent are repeats? What prison reform and rehabilitation would you suggest to reduce the repeats?—Mrs. R. E. Benton, Austin, Texas

● In fiscal year 1968, there were 11,653 commitments to Federal institutions. Of this number, 6,282 (53.9 percent) had at least one prior commitment to a correctional institution. To reduce the recidivism rate, we strongly recommend, among other things, more intensive correctional-treatment programs in smaller penal institutions and extensive post-release supervision.

FOR ALFRED HITCHCOCK

Why do you think people like to be frightened by your sort of movies?—Mary Roche, Atlantic City, N.J.

● The person who pays to see my movies —who pays to be frightened—is the same person who pays money to visit the haunted house at the fair. They pay to be scared! It's a psychological fact.

FOR J. METZLER, director, Arlington National Cemetery

Are women veterans buried in Arlington Cemetery because they were veterans or women killed in action, such as nurses? If not, why aren't women veterans eligible for Arlington on their own status as veterans?—Mrs. J. Soennichain, Franklin Lakes, N.J.

● Sex has no bearing on National Cemetery burial eligibility; however, most of the women buried in Arlington are the spouses of veterans.

FOR IVEY HERSHEY, yacht designer

We plan to buy a new boat this year and would like to know what to look for in terms of décor and comfort?—B. Wilson, Port Washington, N.Y.

● I like fabrics that resist dampness, don't fade, and are lightweight. Use dacron spreads, foam-rubber cushions. On smaller yachts, light colors are important for a greater illusion of space, and I choose furniture to harmonize with walls and draperies.

GOV. ROBERT SCOTT of North Carolina

How many cities in North Carolina's history have been capital cities?—Mrs. Steven Moyer, Regina, Sask., Canada

● New Bern was the capital from 1770 to 1794, when Raleigh was made the capital, and the State House was built there.

FOR E. H. BOULLIOUN, vice president, Boeing Aircraft

You have designated the new superjet "747" and the present one is "707." What do these numbers mean?—P. M., Lancaster, Pa.

● The Boeing Company assigned the "700 series" to its commercial jet airliners as engineering design numbers. The first commercial jet transport, the 707, set the precedent. The second was designated 727, a short-to-medium-range liner with three rear-mounted jet engines. Third was the 737, a short-range twin-jet transport. This brings us to the newest and biggest of the Boeing family, the 747 superjet.

FOR JOAN CRAWFORD

Why don't we see more of you on television? —Thelma McElhiney, Rock Springs, Wyo.

● I have recently appeared in a "World Premiere" television movie for NBC-tv titled "Night Gallery" and a segment of "The Virginian."

FOR JIM NABORS

Did you ever take any kind of voice lessons? —Valerie Beaupre, Green Bay, Wis.

● Yes, in my high-school glee club, but no other lessons at all.

Want to ask a famous person a question? You can through this column, and we'll get the answer from the prominent person you designate. Send question, preferably on a post card, to Ask Them Yourself, Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We cannot acknowledge questions, but $5 will be paid for each one used.

What in the World!

Cutest Cadet Loretta Mullin occupies a very special place in military ranks. She's one of only six females in the nation registered in the college R.O.T.C. (Reserved Officers Training Corps) program. At Drake University in Des Moines, Iowa, Cadet 2nd Lieut. Mullin is studying all about the Air Force. Part of her training included a six-week hitch on maneuvers at Myrtle Beach, S.C., with "198 other guys." But that didn't bother Loretta. She flew in T-33s, shot .38 revolvers, dug ditches, made a parachute jump, and underwent survival training like a trooper. "The top brass helped me survive a little," the pretty, 21-year-old blonde reported, "by putting up an 'off-limits' sign to male personnel in the sleeping dorm."

Survival of the cutest

History on the Hoof The International Equestrian Institution—the only one of its kind in America—teaches young people who excel in horsemanship how to teach others. The equitation school is located in Morven Park, Leesburg, Va., 35 miles from Washington. When the park opens this season (April 19), something new—and very old—will be added. This is its new Carriage Museum with 120 horse-drawn vehicles: stage coaches, sulkies, landaus, opera coaches, and children's carts. Many are the last of their kind. For riding buffs who prefer to watch the action, there are exciting exhibitions of dressage, stadium jumping, and cross-country jumping. Talley ho and good show!

Folklore Updated Motion sickness is as old as recorded history. So are remedies. In the fourth century, Hippocrates, the father of medicine, recommended bed rest a week before boarding ship and a draft of hellebore (used also to "cure" madness). Ancient mariners joked, "Sit for half an hour under an oak tree." World War I doughboys put cotton wool in their ears. Ernest Hemingway believed in large doses of mustard pickle. Recently the Naval School of Aviation Medicine at Pensacola, Fla., developed one with the principal active ingredient, scopolamine hydrobromide. It worked for the astronauts and is now available without prescription.

It's Their Bag Put a Southern Californian near the ocean, and he won't just swim. He'll surf, dory race, scuba dive —and now belly-bag. A belly bag is an oversized pillowcase. Take its open end and run along the beach until the plastic-type bag fills with air. Quickly tie the open end. Now you have a large, soft balloonlike object. Wait for some breakers and combine the ease and safety of floating on a comfortable inner tube with the zest of surfing.

Belly bags for safer surfing

Who can say "no" to a gorgeous brunette?

Make your first gray hair your last one and be a gorgeous brunette again. Let it happen to you–the magic of Loving Care.® The gentle haircoloring. Washes away the gray while it enriches your natural hair color.

It's different. Nothing to mix. No peroxide, so it can't really change your natural shade.

Easy to do, too. It's a lotion. Just pour it on. Even has its own wonderful conditioner to keep your hair strong and shiny. So next thing you know you're a gorgeous brunette again.

And who can say "no" to that.

Loving Care®–the gentle hair color from Clairol.–

PETE ROSE—

How to Make $100,000 on Hustle and Singles

Baseball's big money went to home-run hitters until this dynamo stormed the basepaths

By HAL HIGDON

Pete Rose may not be big on home runs but compensates as all-round player.

TWO YEARS AGO Pete Rose informed the press he planned to be the first baseball player who is not a 20-game winner or home-run hitter to make $100,000 a year.

"I made one mistake when I said that," suggests Pete now. "I should have added and up."

At age 28 the brush-topped right fielder for the Cincinnati Reds already has realized his dollar ambition. He will earn more than $100,000 for the 1970 season—and be worth it. Pete Rose led the National League in batting (with averages of .335 and .348) the last two seasons. In four out of the last five years he hit safely more than 200 times. He dislikes being branded as only a singles hitter, however.

"I'm a power hitter who just doesn't happen to hit home runs," he claims. The records prove his point. In 1969 he drove in 82 runs while batting leadoff and ranked ninth in the league in slugging percentage despite having hit only 16 homers.

"I don't want to be a home-run hitter," says Pete. "Well, it's not that I don't want to—I can't. You've got to do what you can do. If I can get 200 hits a year and win a couple of batting titles and score 100 runs, then that's how I'll play."

In addition to getting 218 hits in 1969, Pete walked 88 times, and one of baseball's most exciting plays is Pete Rose getting a base on balls. He flips his bat and rockets down the line at full speed. Most players stroll the distance in eight or more seconds; Pete gets there in under four.

Sports runs in the Rose family. His father boxed, then played semi-pro football until age 42. He met Pete's mother at the ballpark. Her older brother, Buddy Bloebaum, once played shortstop and while scouting for the Reds signed Pete to a contract in 1960. Pete, 5-feet 11-inches tall, weighed only 155 pounds at the time, but gained 15 pounds over the winter while lifting crates in the Railway Express Agency. He now weighs a solid 194 pounds.

"Rose doesn't have great talent," insists one member of the Cincinnati staff. "He just works twice as hard as anyone else. If he has trouble making a certain catch, he'll spend hour after hour fielding hard-hit balls in that position."

Pete shifted from the infield to the outfield in 1967, a move which he feels has improved his hitting. "At second you're under constant pressure to cover first, make the double play, and cut off throws from the outfield." Nevertheless, he continues to outhustle everybody and includes in his bag of tricks a head-first slide into third base.

Pete and Karolyn proudly hold baby boy they expect to be a ball player.

"He comes to the park every game to please the fans," says Cincinnati's new manager, George "Sparky" Anderson. "He wants to show them how good he is. If every player had that attitude, they'd all hustle like him."

Pete met his wife Karolyn (Ann Englehardt) during the summer of 1963 while spending an off day at the race track. A mutual friend introduced them. "Aren't you that football player?" Karolyn asked. He married her anyway the following January.

At home, Pete displays the same type of energy he does at the ball park. "He won't sit still," says Karolyn. "It's December before he's calmed down after the season."

He plays basketball and baseball with the kids in the neighborhood, including his five-year-old daughter Fern. Her favorite ballplayer, however, is Willie Mays of the San Francisco Giants. Whenever the Giants come to town, Fern insists that her father take her to the game. Willie usually stops by the Rose box to say hello. Willie even gave Fern the cap he wore in the All-Star game.

The Roses had their second child —Peter Edward Rose II—last November. "Pete expects him to be a ballplayer," says Karolyn. "The first thing he noticed was that his son had great hands."

Pete claims he wants not only to lead the league in hits each year but also to lead in signed autographs. This past winter he talked the Reds management into sponsoring a basketball team featuring, in addition to himself, Jim Maloney and Johnny Bench. They played 28 games (losing only two) and helped to stir up interest in the fans which should help fill Cincinnati's new 55,000 seat stadium due to open in July.

Pete Rose had to wait until the last day of the season to win his batting title in 1968, and the same proved true last year. Roberto Clemente (playing in Pittsburgh) got three hits his first three times at bat while Pete Rose (playing in Cincinnati) went 0 for 3. In the eighth inning with two out and a man on second, Pete came to bat and dumped a perfect bunt. He finished the year with .348 while Clemente had .345.

Pete Rose just might become the first .400 hitter since Ted Williams in 1941. This season the National League will have five, and possibly six, Astroturf infields, which could raise batting averages by 30 percentage points or more. Ground balls richochet across the artificial turf and past infielders faster than on regular turf. This won't help the home-run hitters much, but with his skill, determination, and hustle, it likely will help boost Pete Rose's average—and his pay demands. ✦

God in the White House—A New Controversy for

Some say President Nixon is mixing politics with prayer; others herald his ecumenical approach to religion

By JHAN and JUNE ROBBINS

MEMBERS OF the prayer meeting rose to their feet and energetically sang "Old Hundred." It is on most hymnals' best-thumbed page —the hymn that ends, "Praise Father, Son, and Holy Ghost."

Then Rabbi Louis Finkelstein, presiding clergyman, put on his yarmulka and intoned an ancient Hebrew verse—Adon Alam.

Other than this bewildering contradiction in orthodoxy, it was an ordinary meeting for worship—except that it was held in the White House. In the East Room. The one with gold tapestries. The Nixons were there.

The President and Mrs. Nixon have established their own regular church, so to speak, in the White House. It is something that's never been done before, and it's somewhat surprising that it hasn't. The idea is still in the ironing-out stage, and it has had its awkward moments. For example, the "all-are-welcome" policy endorsed by most religious services is definitely out. But a White House aide said, "It really makes sense. Presidents always have had special problems just going to church!" He may be right.

After his Presidency, George Washington had to go by horseback to Christ Church in Alexandria, Va., and complained that in the winter it was a chilly, time-consuming chore. Abraham Lincoln, it is said, was firmly led off to church by his wife —reluctantly.

Herbert Hoover, the only President other than Nixon who was of the Quaker faith, attended the Florida Street Quaker Meeting in Washington—a meeting he helped to found. But there he was sometimes embarrassed by spontaneous exhortations to do better when he believed he already was trying to do his best.

The late President Kennedy and the then Mrs. Kennedy had difficulty in attending church services at all. They usually had to scramble through a distinctly nonspiritual mob of on-lookers and photographers. Ironically, Kennedy's Secret Service bodyguard considered church duty among the toughest of all, and more than one was heard to protest that protecting a President during a public church service was impossible.

Religion has always given the U.S. President a hard time. The Constitution firmly charges him with overseeing the separation of Church and State. But the American public always takes a strong interest in his religion—and he had better have one! They expect him to be seen every Sunday practicing it.

History tells us that we have never had an atheist in the White House, although a well-known Harvard historian who has known a number of Presidents asked, "Would an atheist President be likely to admit it?"

Certainly Richard Nixon, his wife, and two children have a religious faith and follow it. However, acquaintances say that the Nixons' long years in the public spotlight have curbed it.

Pat Nixon is a Methodist by family background. The President was born into a Quaker family. He is a birthright member of East Whittier, Calif., Friends Meeting and still identifies himself as a Quaker, although he has not attended a Quaker Meeting for many years. The President's family on his mother's side—the Milhouses—have been Quakers for 300 years.

The White House First Family still treasures the quaint Quaker "plain speech." When Julie Nixon Eisenhower was married in a conventional church service, she asked to have the "thee" and "thou" forms of address retained.

She also asked to have the theme music from the movie about Quakers, "Friendly Persuasion," played at the wedding. Jessamym West, author of "Friendly Persuasion," is a cousin of the President.

Although the President lists himself as a Quaker, he has never paid a call on the Washington Quaker Meeting House. He has, however, worshipped at other Washington churches. When he is away from the capital—in Florida or California—he usually does not attend church.

The prominent religious leader he seems to admire the most is the Rev. Billy Graham, a fundamentalist Evangelical preacher. He has been a frequent visitor and officiated at the first White House service in the Nixon Administration.

President Nixon seems to relate to the Rev. Graham's dynamic humanitarianism, his firm and comprehensible definition of sin, the flat-out admonition to do right or suffer the consequences. All these speak to the President's spiritual side.

A Cabinet member who knew the Nixons particularly well during the years when Mr. Nixon was Vice President said recently, "When Dick encounters a problem, he likes to be told what's what. It doesn't matter if it's the existence of God or the plumbing in the basement. Billy Graham tells it so you can understand it with a strong reference to authority—God and the Bible. That's what Dick really likes!"

When the Rev. Graham officiated at the first regular service at the White House, he had an important audience. Present were Richard, Pat, and Tricia Nixon, Vice President and Mrs. Spiro Agnew, eight members of the Cabinet, and the White House staff. They sat on rows of dining-room chairs. There were small bowls of flowers on the fireplace mantels but no religious symbols. An electric organ accompanied the hymn singing.

The sermon was about King Solomon, "a man who had everything and yet nothing." Solomon, the Rev. Graham reminded his listeners, had 700 wives and 300 concubines plus knowledge, wisdom, and wealth—all the worldly pleasures and treasures. 'But the greatest of these was wisdom. Solomon knew that the only thing that mattered was a personal relationship to God. He advised people to remember the Creator."

President Nixon listened carefully and afterwards commended the Rev. Graham for the content of the sermon. On following Sundays, the new congregation heard the Rev. Richardson Halverson of Washington's Fourth Presbyterian Church; House of Representatives Chaplain Edward Latch; National Council of Churches General Secretary Dr. R. H. Edwin Espey; Terence Cardinal Cooke, Roman Catholic Archbishop of New York; Rabbi Louis Finkelstein of Jewish Theological Seminary; and Dr. Paul Smith, president of Nixon's alma mater, Whittier College.

As with all Presidential undertakings, the critics were on the doorstep before the dust had settled. Some called the ceremonies a religious smörgasbord. Theologian Dr. Rheinhold Niebuhr commented that the politically charged atmosphere of the White House is a rather difficult place to invite the Almighty. "By a curious combination of innocence and guile," Dr. Niebuhr (who had not been invited) said, "Mr. Nixon has circumvented the Bill of Rights' First Article and established a kind of conforming religion."

Rabbi Finkelstein was called to account for his participation in a religious service that celebrated the Trinity. He acknowledged that he didn't "exactly jump for joy" over the happening but thought it was only good manners to go along: "After all, it's his house."

Invitations, however, to this new type service are highly prized and usually go to several Cabinet members, Supreme Court justices, and members of Congress. Mrs. Nixon also invites some White House employees. The number attending rarely exceeds 350.

After a year, the White House service is well on its way to becoming a tradition. It is developing its own character. No collection plate is passed. After worship, the congregation is invited into the Green Room for orange juice, coffee, and pastry. As with all Presidential functions, it ends with everyone lining up to shake the President's hand, which caused the "Christian Century," a highly respected religious publication, to describe the service as a "coupling of spirituality and political sentimentality."

Bud Wilkinson, the former Oklahoma University football coach who coordinates the White House services, was quick to reply: "This is not a political venture. The President and Mrs. Nixon feel that this will contribute to the ecumenical picture of the nation as a whole."

The reply didn't satisfy the Rev. Harvey Cox of Harvard, who still had qualms. "We have enough trouble getting kids interested in religion," he said facetiously, "without having Nixon support it."

Controversial or not, it seems likely the White House worship service is here to stay, dining-room chairs and all. A Cabinet member who was there on a recent Sunday said, "For a President who convenes and leads a nation under God, it seems appropriate." ◆

New Hope in Finding Jobs for the Over-40 Worker

By DOUGLAS WOOD GIBSON

LET'S BE FRANK. If you're over 40, you're the wrong age, even though you may think you're not. You're at the top of your powers, you've never felt better in your life, and your wife tells you you're the greatest.

But if you're looking for work, the odds are against you.

The new litany of American life reads: "Don't trust anyone over 30" and "Don't hire anyone over 40." One statement is slightly amusing, the second deadly to a whole group of men (and women) whose judgment, creativity, and talent are at their peak, but whose chronological age has slipped past the employable point of no return. It's part of the American youth cult.

And this despite the fact that the whole population is growing steadily older. The Bureau of Labor Statistics has projected that by 1975 more than half the work force in the country will be over 40.

Viewed from a national perspective, the indiscriminate prejudice against the older worker has become one of America's most pressing problems. Ex-Secretary of Labor Willard Wirtz has said, "Refusing to hire a worker solely because he is over 40 or 45 or 50 is a waste of human resources our country cannot afford. The impact of age discrimination in hiring is apparent when we consider long-term unemployment for workers over 40. Not only are there fewer jobs available for the older worker, it takes him longer to find one."

But if the odds are against you, maybe you can shorten them a little. There are people and organizations who recognize your problem and stand ready to help you.

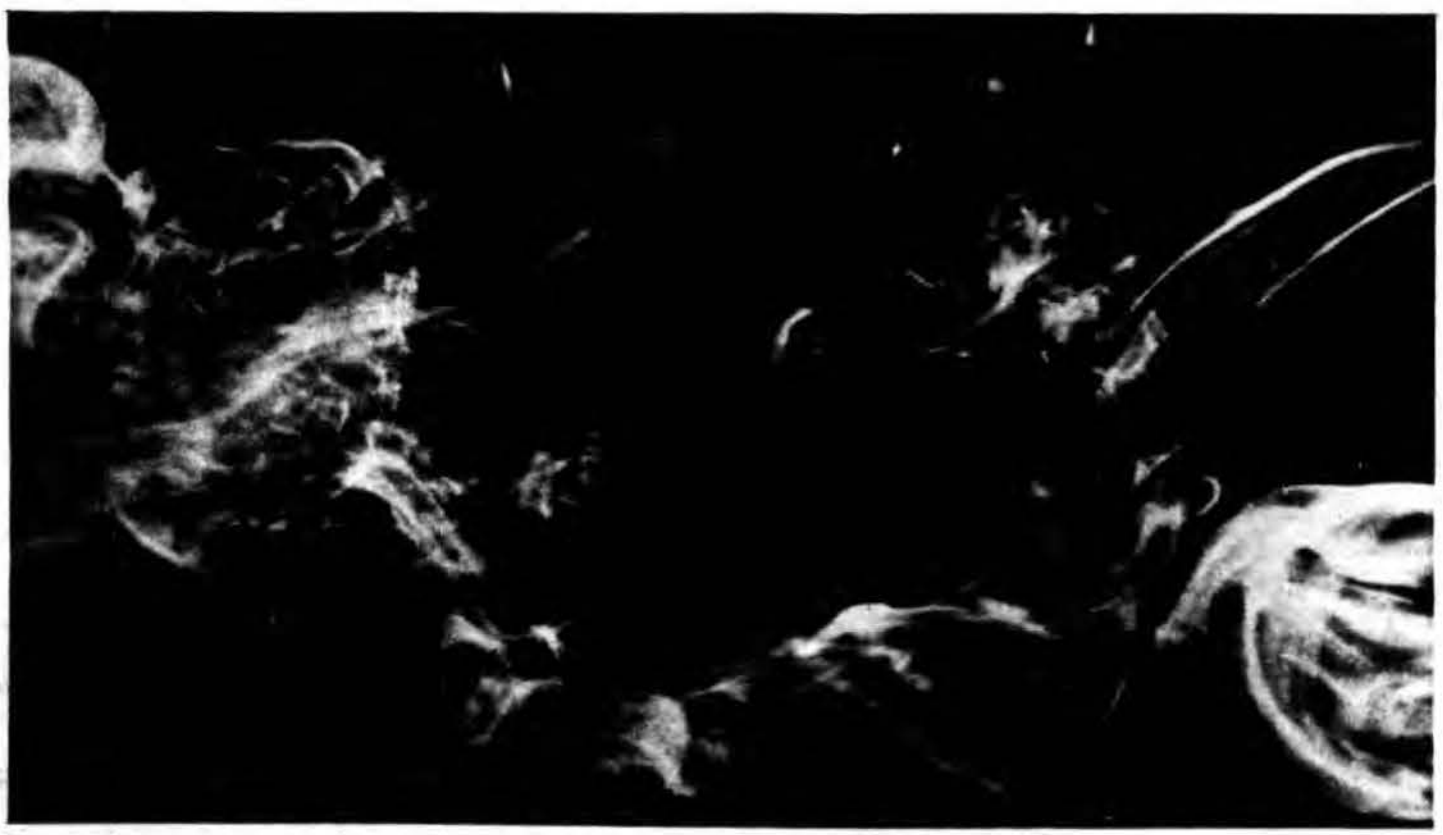

First of all, there are some enlightened legislators. In an attempt to enforce rectitude, 14 of our state governments have finally passed laws strictly prohibiting age discrimination in hiring. More states seem sure to follow. In Massachusetts, the potential employer is forbidden to ask the age of an applicant until after he is hired. In New York State, you are allowed to ask, but strict penalties have sometimes been levied, along with monetary damages to the slighted worker, in cases where prejudice could be proved. Other states that prohibit discrimination with varying degrees of vigor include Alaska, Connecticut, California, Delaware, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, and Wisconsin.

Attacking the problem from another angle, the National Association of Manufacturers said in a recent stern reminder to its 20,000 member companies: "Employers are urged to observe voluntary hiring practices which give consideration to abilities and skills rather than to an arbitrary age factor." This rather conservative statement was made as a result of a survey of its membership which asked them to rate their 45-or-older workers compared with their 35-45-year-old workers. In performance, in attendance, in safety, and in their attitude toward their work, from 92 to 99 percent of the employers viewed the oldsters as equal to or better

Panty Pair® vs Girdles on top of pantyhose.

You know the routine.

First the pantyhose for a smooth line under that clinging dress or those tight new pants.

Then a girdle to keep the pantyhose from falling down. (Not to mention the touch of control some of us need to keep our fall-out from falling out.)

Then the dress itself...

And by the time we're finished, we've got far too many layers of clothes on. And it's hot. And the whole effect has been ruined anyway because now there's a line showing all way around our thighs where the girdle ends and the pantyhose begins

Enough!

Panty Pair® from Hanes.

It comes in two parts: A two-way stretch panty with the gentle control of a panty girdle. Plus a pair of replaceable Cantrece® II stockings. All for $5.*

(Or, for women with more to control, there's a Panty Pair with more control: Panty Pair Plus™ at $8.50.*)

Putting on Panty Pair is simplicity itself. You slip on the stockings. Ease on the panty. Adjust the panty legs to the height you want. And that's it.

The stockings stay up because the panty's flat cuffs automatically grip the tops of the stockings—without putting any pressure on your thighs. And there you are with a smooth line all the way from your waist to your toes.

Which is something you were never going to get with that old girdle-over-pantyhose routine.

Over-40 Jobs

A frequent argument is that it costs more for pension plans for the older folk. But this myth was demolished by the head of the pension trust department of one of our largest life-insurance companies. He said the argument was sheer nonsense. "Of the million or so corporations in the country, not more than one-tenth of them have pension plans, not yet anyway. And even where they do, the difference in the amount of cash the company sets aside for the older workers is not substantial and, in any case, the Federal government usually subsidizes more than half the pension cost. That is, most large corporations can deduct 50 percent of it as a business expense."

Fortunately there are others who feel as he does. There is, for example, a pharmaceutical company in Virginia whose happy and industrious employees are all over 40. And there is the Hastings law school in San Francisco which has been flourishing for some years with a faculty whose members are all 65 or older.

Cheers should be rendered, too, to the unique Forty-Plus Clubs, located in Washington, Philadelphia, New York City, Chicago, Los Angeles, and Denver. Each branch is autonomous, nonprofit, and devoted to the proposition that the guy over 40 is just as good a worker as anyone else. They go after the top-priced jobs and, in fact, you must have earned $15,000 a year to be a member. The membership, of course, is constantly fluctuating and usually consists of around 100 members, depending on economic conditions.

The basic principle is that "you help the other fellow get a job." In interviewing potential employers, members are supposed to tout the qualifications of fellow members rather than themselves. This is not so much altruism as a sound business technique developed over many years.

It seems to work. The Forty-Plus Club has filled many thousands of jobs for engineers, salesmen, advertising executives, bankers, and many others. The average age of their members, by the way, is 54.

Attacking the problem somewhat differently is a new and vocationally-specialized employment service called Mature Temps (Temporary Employment for Mature Persons). It is making progress in putting older people to work, with emphasis on those 55 and older. This is a commercial enterprise, but it charges no fees to the employee. The jobs it supplies are not usually the executive-type.

So far, there are active offices in Philadelphia and New York City, with others planned for 1970 in Chicago, Boston, Washington, Baltimore, San Francisco, Los Angeles, and elsewhere. Branches are starting up in such key suburbs as Long Beach, California; Hempstead and White Plains, New York; and King of Prussia, a hamlet outside of Philadelphia.

Raymond Tanenbaum, the 38-year-old head of this job-finding organization, said recently, "The response has been fantastic."

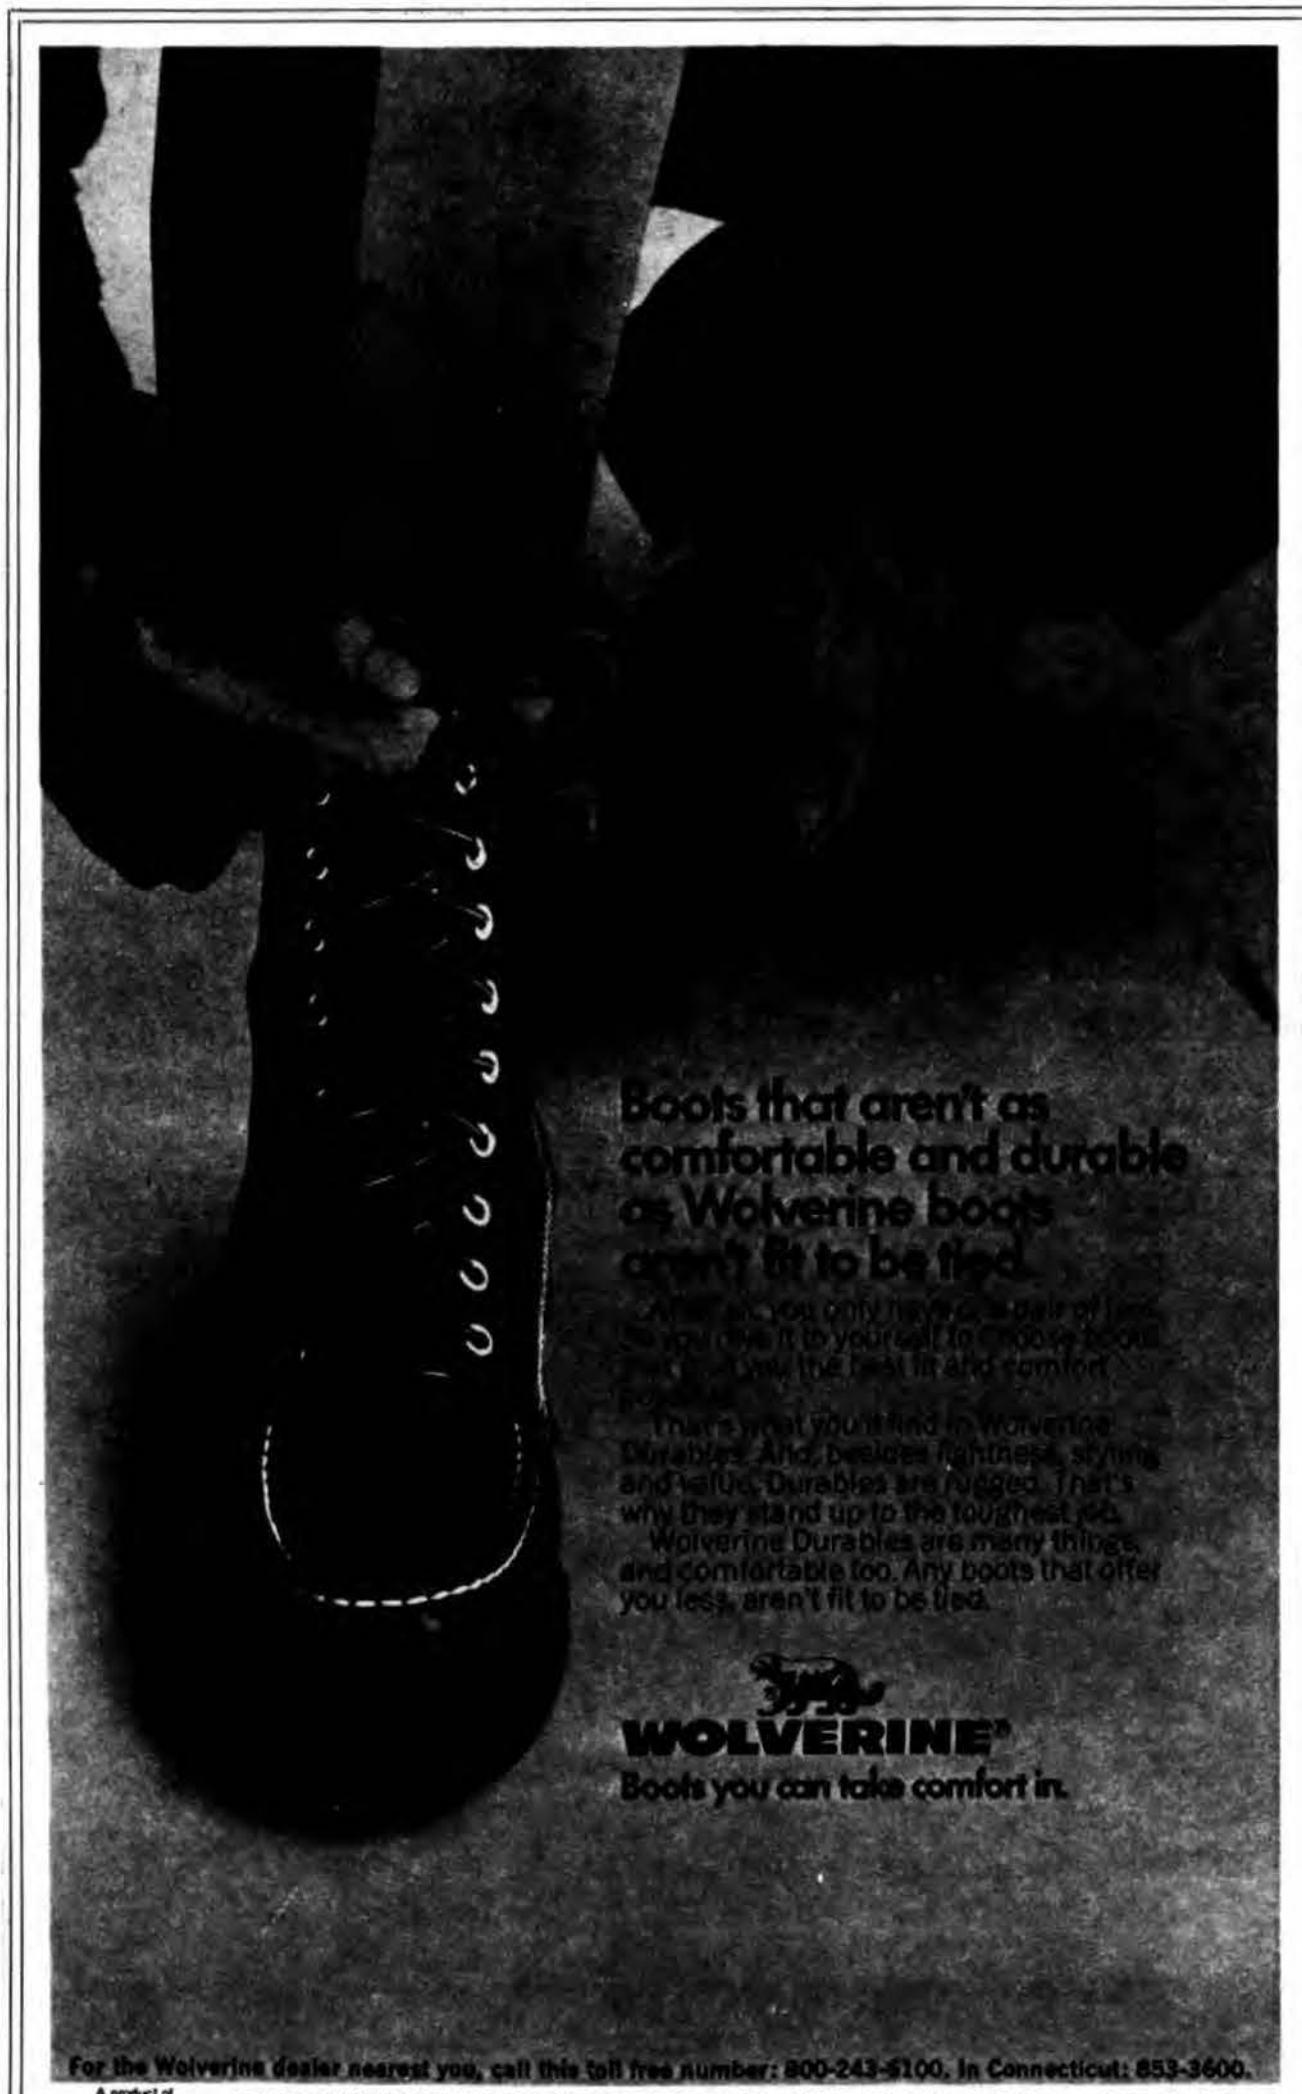

Most of the enrollees for Mature Temps are recruited by mail from lists supplied by the American Association of Retired Persons and the National Retired Teachers Association. But candidates are not limited only to these sources.

As the name of the organization would imply, it was founded primarily for temporary work, but there is nothing to prevent a temporary job from turning into a permanent one if an employer should become sufficiently impressed with a worker's ability. Tanenbaum hopes to set up a separate agency for permanent help.

The peculiarities of the Social Security law arouse the particular ire of Raymond Tanenbaum (not to mention his workers), who feels that the law restricts the energies and ambitions of older people at a time when inflation is rearing its ugly head and when no one, graybeard or otherwise, can be expected to sit still and live on any such amount as $1,680, the maximum income allowed to keep Federal benefits from being cut.

He is trying to lessen the problem by setting up an elaborate pension plan for his agency's enrollees, under which they would receive only part of their earnings at the time they work and the remainder would go into a trust fund which the worker would receive at 72, at which age the rules restricting a worker's earnings no longer apply.

Whatever justification there may have been for age prejudice in the past, there is certainly no room for it in the new America, which steadily grows older while paradoxically it also becomes more youthful. To continue to discriminate by birthdays is unnecessary, uneconomic, and immoral. ◆

Try Hostels for Low, Low-Cost Vacations

Youth shelters provide budget-priced accommodations for adventurous travelers the world over

By JEANNE TOOMEY

Roughing it is part of the fun at hostels.

G. WILLIAMS SAUNDERS, his wife, and their teen-age son and daughter spent an adventurous two-week vacation last year with friends back-packing through rugged lands of the American West.

Mrs. Nancy Saunders reports, "The trip was fraught with problems, but we had a great time. Hosteling is for us—it's inexpensive, and it brings out the best in everybody, too."

Hosteling is for a lot of people, especially students since it's so inexpensive. A hostel is simply an organized shelter for travelers, stripped to the barest essentials of living. There are some 4,200 hostels throughout the world in more than 41 countries. They lodge the traveler arriving by foot, bicycle, canoe, horse, skies, or automobile.

Youth hostels provide what seems at first to be little more than a dormitory for strangers. But a closer look reveals a type of traveling camaraderie which is rare these days.

Of course, the low fees for staying at the hostels are the main attraction. Rates range from between $1 and $2, depending on the season and type of facility. Generally it is $1.50 per adult in the summer. Children, traveling with one or both parents, pay one-half the established overnight rate.

A family pass may be obtained from the American Youth Hostel headquarters at 20 West 17th Street, New York, N.Y., 10011, for $12. This covers mother, father, and children up to 18 and is valid in the U.S. and Canada only. Individual passes for all members of the family are needed for foreign hostels.

Washroom facilities vary from just a basin to full showers. Most of today's hostels have indoor toilet facilities and each has a community kitchen which is shared with other guests. Preparing family meals at the hostel enables travelers to keep costs of an outing to a bare minimum—maybe even as low as $3 a person per day for both food and lodging.

Hostels are not luxurious spas, but you certainly cannot beat the prices. Cleanliness of each hostel is, of course, dependent upon the personal habits of its guests. While there is some maintenance at each hostel, regular housekeeping is up to people who stay there.

New England has probably more hostels than any other region in the U.S., making it possible to plan several family trips. Both Martha's Vineyard and Nantucket, off the Massachusetts coast, have plenty of good hostels with beaches and scenic attractions. In Connecticut, New Jersey, and especially the Pennsylvania Dutch country, there is an abundance of hostels for youngsters as well as whole families.

There are several hostels in Michigan and Wisconsin, and a trip along the shore of Lake Michigan is an attractive bargain. California offers many hostels in the heart of some of the most beautiful countryside anywhere.

The American Youth Hostel, a nonprofit organization, is developing three cross-country chains, and hostels are being put up in Window Rock, Ariz., on a Navaho reservation in cooperation with the tribal chiefs.

The West has seen a rapid development of hostels—Palo Alto, Tahoe Valley, Vallejo, and Riverside, Calif.,—but a handsome hostel also has been established in Washington, D.C., and is a $250,000 showplace of Eastern hosteling.

Here are some tips for good hosteling: Get an American Youth Hostel membership card; use a sheet sleeping sack (available from AYH councils) to keep blankets clean; bring your own eating utensils and towels; on hikes pack lightly—including foods (these may be bouillon cubes, powder beverages, fruit bars, packaged foods ready for boiling); remember hosteling requires volunteer work—so pitch in and help make the hostel ready for the next traveler. ◆

Before You Sign—Read the Fine Print

Here is what you should know about the small-print legalese of installment contracts, insurance policies, leases, and other documents

By JEAN CARPER

RELUCTANT to sell the house they had lived in 35 years, a couple in an Eastern state signed a contract for $2,500 to have it renovated. Unfortunately, three weeks later, their contractor died of a heart attack, and the work was never begun.

Soon afterward, the couple received notice from a finance company demanding monthly payments to fulfill the contract of $2,500. The couple wrote explaining the situation, made no payments, and thought no more about it. Two months later the sheriff served papers notifying them that the finance company had foreclosed on the house and would put it up for auction—unless they produced the cash to cover the contract, plus legal fees. They sought help in every direction but could not raise the money. Thus, incredibly—to pay for a job never done—their house was auctioned off. Worth perhaps $30,000, it was sold to an officer of the finance company for $20,000.

In another state, a 56-year-old widow bought automobile insurance from a company recommended by her insurance agent. Her policy was cancelled a year later with no explanation. Then, nearly three years later, she received a letter from a lawyer ordering her to pay the state $291.49 because she was liable for claims against this now-defunct company that had once insured her car. Out of her meager earnings, she was forced to pay a little every month until the entire amount was paid off.

How are such things possible? The explanation is: "fine print." It appears on installment contracts, insurance policies, credit cards—on almost any legal document you sign. And as many have discovered, its potential for disaster cannot be underestimated.

According to experts, here are the most insidious fine-print problems you must watch out for:

• Waiver of defenses. The fine-print clause that ensnared the couple who lost their home was buried in their contract in these seemingly innocuous words of enormous import: "We agree not to assert against any assignee hereof any claim or defense which we or any of us may have against the (contractor)." This meant that when the contract was sold to the finance company (the assignee), the couple waived their legal rights to take up any complaints against the finance company that they might have had against the contractor. In short, they agreed to pay the debt to the finance company regardless—even if the work was not completed or even begun.

This sort of thing happens every day. Nearly every credit contract sold to banks or finance companies contains such a waiver-of-defenses clause, absolving the banks and finance companies of all responsibility. And in most states the consumer has very little protection against it, except to do business with reputable companies which will make good no matter what the legal technicalities. So unfair is this clause that several states have outlawed it in certain types of consumer contracts, and many authorities believe it should be outlawed nationwide.

• Contingent liability. The elderly woman forced to help pay the insurance company's claims was a high-risk driver and unable to get a policy with established companies. Her agent directed her to one of the "assessable mutual" companies, which specialize in insuring high-risk drivers. The catch is that in most of these policies there is a bit of verbiage which in effect makes the policyholder a part owner of the company and responsible for its debts. It reads: "Each member shall assume a contingent liability equal to, and in addition to, the premium provided by this policy . . ." If the company fails, policyholders are therefore assessed by the state to help pay outstanding claims against the company.

• Written notification. When a woman in New York lost her credit card, she immediately telephoned the issuing company to report the loss. A few days later, she sent the company written notification. In the meantime, however, someone fraudulently ran up $685 worth of charges on her card. She refused to pay, arguing that she had instantly notified the company and was not liable. The case ended up in court, and the woman lost. According to the fine print on her card, the judge ruled, the woman had to give written notice of the card's loss. "It is unfortunate she did not immediately send a telegram," he remarked.

Not all companies are so strict as to require written notice (some allow telephone notice). However, with nearly any credit card, the fine print makes you responsible for all charges made "until the card is surrendered to the company or the company receives notification of loss or theft." Losses from the unauthorized use of credit cards have been estimated in excess of $100 million a year.

• Confession of judgment. No warning can possibly be strong enough against this fine-print clause. It yearly dupes millions of Americans into signing away important rights. It works this way: a Pennsylvania man bought $250 worth of carpeting for his home, agreeing to pay the local dealer in monthly payments. When the carpeting was installed, the customer found that his floors had been damaged, and that the carpet's ends were frayed. The buyer refused to make the first payment, feeling that he had been cheated.

But the finance company got a court order requiring him to pay. There was no trial, no hearing; the buyer had no chance to defend himself. For he had signed a contract containing a confession-of-judgment clause, meaning he had waived his right to a court hearing by actually agreeing in advance to the plaintiff's charges. All the company then had to do was get a lawyer to sign the papers and the court decision against the buyer was automatic. He had to pay or risk having his property attached to satisfy the debt. Under similar circumstances in certain other states, the victim's wages are routinely garnished.

Jules Jürgensen.

He didn't get to be 230 years old with a bum ticker.

Jules Jürgensen is probably the oldest brand name in continuous existence.

That says something about the performance of a product of any kind. Think of what it means in watches. Where minute differences can make or break a reputation.

Jules Jürgensen timepieces are made by highly paid Swiss craftsmen who spend hours to find a missing second.

We're tougher on our watches before they're shipped out than you'll be on them after you get them.

Each part is checked when the movement is apart. Then checked again when the parts are put together. We have inspectors who watch over the inspectors.

Our designers are just as finicky as our watchmakers. About the width of the hands, the finish of the case, the proportion of the numerals.

Small wonder so many Jules Jürgensen watches find their way into museum horological exhibits.

Remember, there's no present like the time. Especially this 2-button chronograph with stop-go-return action.

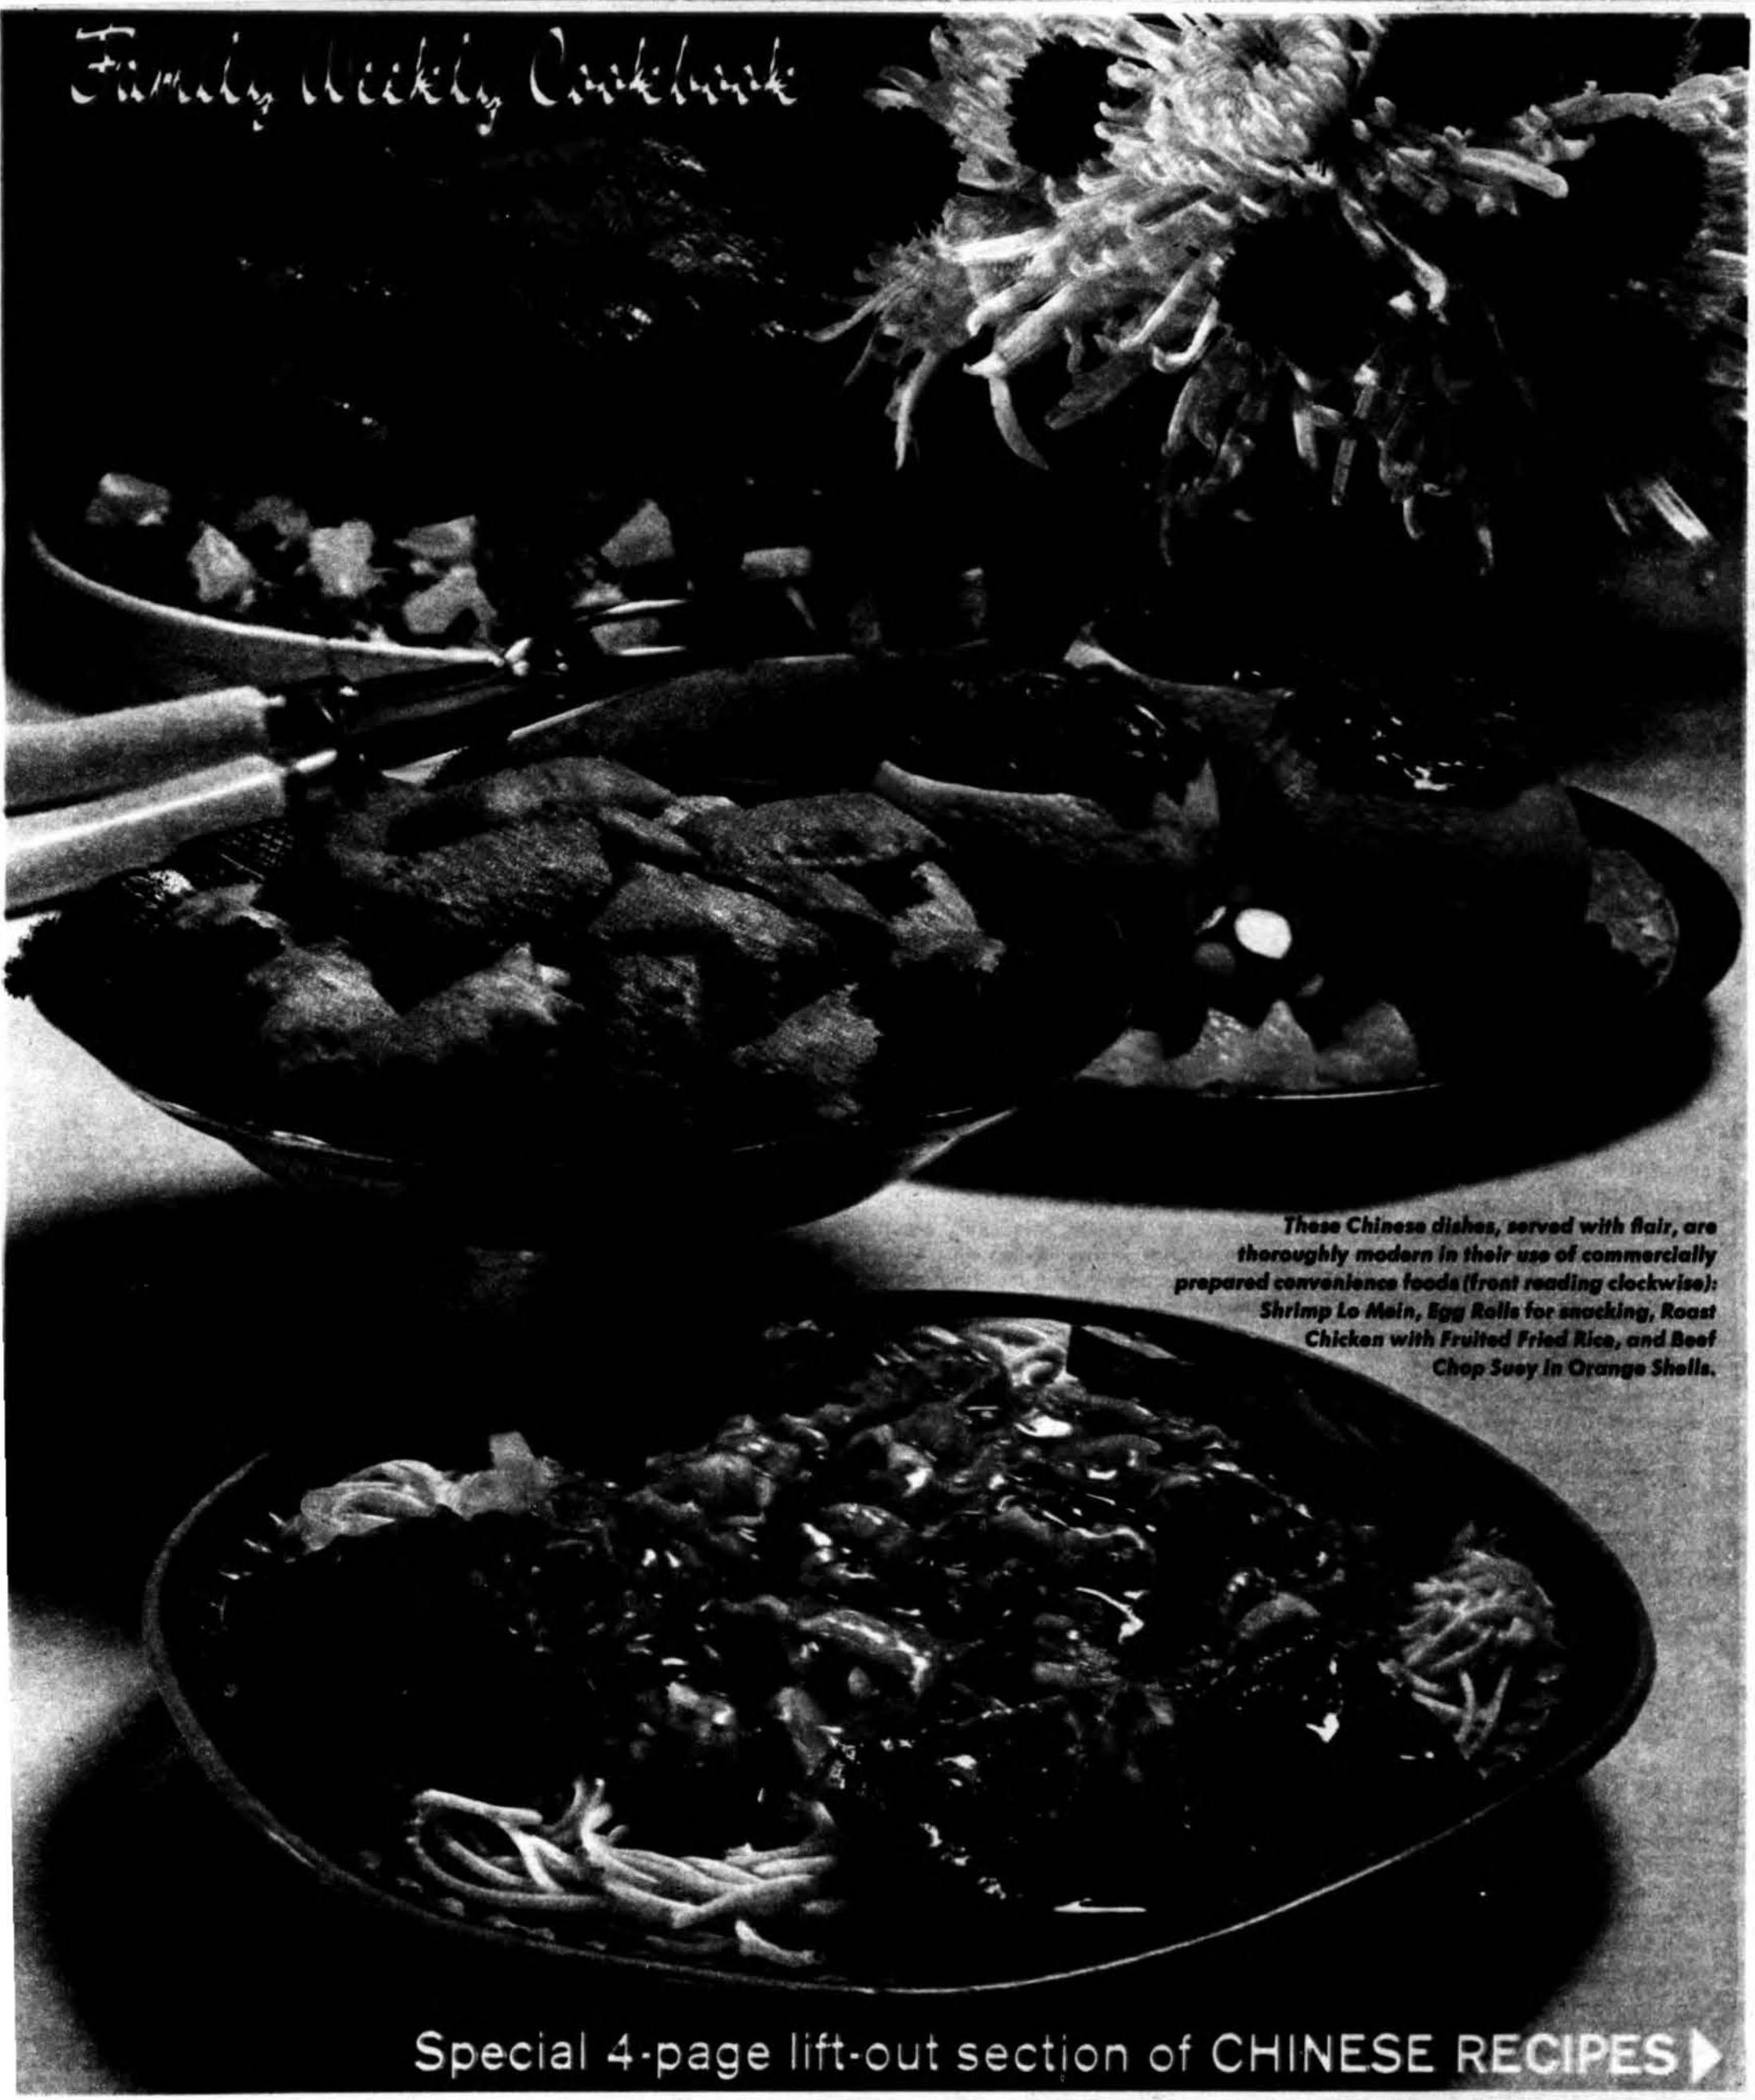

It features a 60 second dial, 45 minute indicator, and stainless steel racing attachment. 17 jewel movement, of course. Give a man the stainless steel Manor B and he'll find something to time. Surprisingly priced at about $135. Other Jules Jürgensen watches from $80 to $10,000 at fine stores everywhere. Write for an illustrated brochure and name of your nearest authorized dealer.

■ This selection of recipes combines the best traditions of two worlds. Oriental cooking is exciting in color, flavor, and texture contrasts. Today's convenience foods have captured the flair of Oriental cookery in frozen, canned, and packaged products readily available to the American homemaker. Chinese-American cooking, modern style, is easy, speedy, delightful, and delicious!

Shrimp Lo Mein

- 1 pkg. (8 oz.) vermicelli or thin spaghetti
- ¼ cup grated Parmesan cheese
- 2 boil-in-a-bag pkgs. (15 oz. each) frozen shrimp chow mein
- 3 tomatoes, sliced and slices quartered

1. Cook vermicelli or spaghetti according to pkg. directions; rinse with boiling water. Combine with the Parmesan cheese and turn onto a well-greased heat-resistant platter. Set in warm oven.

2. Meanwhile, heat shrimp chow mein in bags according to pkg. directions. Open bags and pour contents evenly over vermicelli. Arrange tomato pieces on top, brush with cooking oil, and season with salt and pepper. If desired, sprinkle generously with shredded Cheddar or Parmesan cheese. Set under broiler until heated. 6 servings

Note: Drained canned tomato slices or wedges may be substituted for the fresh tomatoes.

Molasses Horseradish Sauce

A unique, quite piquant sauce is excellent to serve as a dunking sauce along with the Chinese mustard that accompanies frozen egg rolls or over shrimp chow mein and hot rice.

- ¼ cup dark molasses
- ½ teaspoon dry mustard
- ⅛ teaspoon ground cloves
- 2 teaspoons cider vinegar
- 2 tablespoons Hawaiian punch
- 2 teaspoons prepared horseradish
- ⅛ to ¼ teaspoon Tabasco

Blend all ingredients thoroughly. About ½ cup sauce

Roast Chicken

Rub cavities of a 5-lb. young roasting chicken with salt and pepper. Set on a rack in a shallow roasting pan. Brush outside generously with teriyaki sauce. Roast at 375°F. for 2½ hrs., or until chicken tests done (drumstick feels soft when pressed with fingers and moves up and down or twists out of joint easily, or meat thermometer inserted in thickest part of thigh registers 180°F.—185°F.). Place chicken on a bed of Fruited Fried Rice (see recipe) on a large serving platter and garnish with parsley sprigs. 8 servings

Note: Any leftover chicken may be sliced and heated with any leftover fried rice.

Fruited Fried Rice

Heat 2 boil-in-a-bag pkgs. (10 oz. each) frozen fried rice as directed on package. Toss the rice with 1½ cups drained canned pineapple tidbits, ½ cup flaked coconut, and 2 tablespoons chopped pimiento. 6 to 8 servings

Beef Chop Suey in Orange Shells

Cut a slice off the top of each of 6 to 8 large navel oranges; scoop out shells, section pulp, and set aside. Prepare 1 divider-pak can (43 oz.) beef chop suey according to label directions. Mix in about one third of the orange sections and heat thoroughly. Spoon into orange shells, place on a platter, and garnish platter with remaining orange sections, radish roses, and parsley. If desired, top with chow mein noodles. 6 to 8 servings

Sweet-Tart Bean Sprout Relish

This is an excellent topper for hamburgers.

- 1 can (1 lb.) bean sprouts
- ½ cup diagonally sliced celery
- 2 tablespoons granulated brown sugar
- ⅓ cup wine vinegar
- 2 tablespoons olive oil or other salad oil
- 2 tablespoons granulated sugar
- ¼ to ½ teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon seasoned pepper
- 1 pimiento, cut in strips

1. Combine undrained bean sprouts, celery, and brown sugar in a saucepan. Bring rapidly to boiling; reduce heat and simmer about 1 min. Drain thoroughly through a colander or sieve. Set the mixture aside to cool slightly.

2. Meanwhile, mix the wine vinegar, oil, remaining sugar, salt, and pepper and pour over the cooled sprouts in a bowl. Add pimiento and toss; marinate at least overnight. About 1 pt. relish

Pork Mandarin

- 1 can (13½ oz.) pineapple chunks, drained
- ⅓ cup pineapple syrup
- 1 can (11 oz.) mandarin oranges, drained
- ½ cup mandarin orange syrup
- 3 tablespoons cooking oil
- 1½ to 2 lbs. boneless lean pork, cut in 2x¼-in. strips
- 2 teaspoons salt
- ¼ cup cornstarch
- ½ cup cold water
- 1 can (12 oz.) apricot nectar
- ½ cup cider vinegar
- 2 tablespoons all-purpose soy sauce
- ¼ cup lightly packed brown sugar
- 1 cup diced celery
- 1 large green pepper, cut in strips
- 1 can (16 oz.) whole tomatoes, drained and quartered
- 1 can (5 oz.) chow mein noodles

1. Heat oil in a large heavy skillet. Add pork and brown well on all sides. Season with salt; cover and cook until pork is done, 10 to 15 min.

2. Blend cornstarch and water in a saucepan; stir in a blend of fruit syrups, apricot nectar, vinegar, soy sauce, and brown sugar. Bring mixture to boiling, stirring constantly; cook 3 min.

3. Mix celery and pineapple chunks with meat in skillet. Pour in the sauce and cook over low heat about 5 min., stirring occasionally.

4. Stir in green pepper and tomato pieces and heat about 5 min.

5. Before serving, gently mix in mandarin oranges. Transfer to heated serving dish and top with heated chow mein noodles. Serve with hot cooked rice. 6 to 8 servings

Mandarin Vegetable Salad

- 1 cup canned lima beans
- 1 cup canned sliced carrots
- 1 cup canned cut green beans
- 1 can (16 oz.) bean sprouts, rinsed
- 1 cup (5 oz.) water chestnuts, sliced
- ½ cup prepared oil and vinegar salad dressing
- 1 tablespoon all-purpose soy sauce

Drain and put vegetables into a bowl with a blend of salad dressing and soy sauce. Toss lightly to coat. Chill, if desired, and serve on salad greens. 6 servings

Barbecued Ribs with Pineapple

- 4 lbs. spareribs, cracked through center and cut in serving-size pieces
- 2 tablespoons cornstarch
- 6 tablespoons brown sugar
- ⅔ cup light or dark corn syrup
- ⅓ cup Hawaiian barbecue sauce (a sweet-tart bottled sauce)
- ⅓ cup thawed frozen orange juice concentrate
- 2 tablespoons cider vinegar
- 2 large cloves garlic, minced
- 6 tablespoons finely chopped crystallized ginger
- 1 lemon, thinly sliced and slices quartered
- 1 can (8½ oz.) crushed pineapple

1. Put spareribs into a heavy saucepot. Add water to cover and bring to boiling; cover and reduce heat to simmer. Cook 1 hr., or until almost tender; drain.

2. Meanwhile, prepare sauce. In a large bowl, mix the cornstarch and brown sugar. Blend in the corn syrup, Hawaiian barbecue sauce, orange juice concentrate, and vinegar. Stir in the garlic, ginger, lemon, and pineapple with syrup.

3. Add the drained cooked ribs to sauce, turn to coat, and marinate at least ½ hr.

4. To broil, put spareribs in a single layer in a large shallow pan or jelly-roll pan and place under broiler with tops of ribs about 5 in. from heat source. Broil 5 to 10 min., or until richly browned, turning and brushing several times with the sauce.

5. Arrange ribs on a heated serving platter and accompany with hot cooked rice and remaining sauce. 6 to 8 servings

Note: If desired, substitute Japanese-style soy sauce for the Hawaiian barbecue sauce and omit the vinegar.

Candied Lemons

- 6 to 8 medium-sized lemons
- 2 cups water
- 4 cups sugar

1. Cut a slice from pointed end of each lemon to allow for an opening. Trim off opposite ends of lemons so that shells will stand upright.

Modern Style

2. Carefully scoop out lemon shells; avoid cutting through lemons.

3. Put lemons into a large saucepan. Cover with cold water, bring to boiling, and simmer 5 min.; drain. Repeat process twice. Rinse and drain. Cover lemons with cold water, cover saucepan, and set aside for 24 hrs.

4. Drain; cover with water; bring to boiling and simmer 15 min., or until lemons are tender. Drain, cool, and carefully remove the remaining pulp and membrane. Rinse thoroughly and invert the lemons to drain completely.

5. Heat water and sugar together in the saucepan, stirring until sugar is dissolved. Bring to boiling, add the lemon shells, and simmer 10 min., moving and turning shells frequently. Remove from heat and allow shells to stand in syrup 5 or 10 min. Gently place on a wire rack over aluminum foil until cool. Transfer to a flat-surfaced dish or pie pan, standing them upright.

6. To form petals, make 4 equally spaced cuts with scissors down about one third from tops of lemons. Taper tips of each fourth to a petal shape. Cover dish with a tent of aluminum foil. Chill until ready to fill with frozen mixture. Top with toasted almonds.

6 to 8 Candied Lemons

Almond Cookies

Serve these crisp rich cookies along with commercial fortune cookies for an Oriental twosome to accompany ice cream or other frozen desserts.

1 cup blanched almonds (about 5½ oz.)
1 cup sifted all-purpose flour
½ cup butter or margarine
½ cup sugar

1. Finely chop ⅔ cup of almonds; toast the remaining whole almonds and set aside for garnish.

2. Mix flour and chopped almonds together; set the mixture aside.

3. Cream butter or margarine until softened. Add sugar gradually, creaming until fluffy. Mixing until well blended after each addition, add dry ingredients in fourths.

4. Wrap dough in aluminum foil and chill in refrigerator until easy to handle.

5. Shape dough into 1-in. balls. Place balls on cookie sheets about 2 in. apart and flatten each until about ½ in. thick. Press a toasted almond onto top of each.

6. Bake at 325°F. 10 to 15 min., or until light golden brown.

7. Immediately remove cookies to wire racks; cool completely.

About 2½ doz. cookies

Oriental Lotus Freeze

Candied Lemons (see recipe)
2 cups Hawaiian punch
½ cup sugar
2 teaspoons grated lime peel
1½ cups cream

1. Blend Hawaiian punch, sugar, lime peel, and cream in a large bowl; stir until sugar is dissolved. Pour into a large refrigerator tray. Freeze until firm, stirring several times to blend thoroughly.

2. When ready to serve, fill the chilled candied lemons with frozen mixture. Using a wide spatula, transfer to dessert dishes or stemmed sherbet glasses. 3 cups freeze

Coconut-Green Tea Mousse

10 green tea bags (individual size)
1 cup sugar
1 env. unflavored gelatin
1 cup cookie coconut (packaged grated coconut)*
Few drops green and yellow food coloring
1 cup heavy cream, chilled

1. Heat milk to boiling in a saucepan. Add tea bags and allow to steep over medium heat 15 min., pressing the bags very gently with the back of a wooden spoon during steeping to avoid floating. Remove bags to a strainer to drain. (Do not press or break bags.) Discard bags.

2. Add a blend of the sugar and the gelatin; stir until gelatin is dissolved, 5 to 7 min. Remove from heat, blend in coconut, and let stand about 10 to 20 min. before chilling for hot mixture to absorb the full coconut flavor. Stir in enough food coloring to tint a pale green.

3. Chill in refrigerator or over a bowl of ice and water until mixture is slightly thicker. Stir frequently. Beat well.

4. Whip the chilled cream until soft (not firm) peaks are formed. Fold into gelatin.

5. Turn into a 1-qt. fancy mold and freeze 6 to 8 hrs. Or spoon into 8 individual molds. When unmolded, garnish with chopped, salted pistachio nuts.

About 1 qt. mousse

*Or use flaked coconut, finely chopped in an electric blender.

How Well Do You Discipline Your Children?

ALMOST EVERYONE has his own theory on how to rear children. Some believe they should be allowed to grow up with few if any restraints. Others follow the Biblical doctrine of "spare the rod and spoil the child." Most parents are somewhere in between.

The following quiz seeks to probe how well you discipline your children. The correct answers are based on experts' opinions in the field of parent-child relationships. Eight or more correct answers suggest you are a wise disciplinarian.

1. Should parents always punish a child who disobeys orders?
Yes____No____

2. If your child (under 8) were in satisfactory health but ate little, would you try to coax food down him by entertaining him during his meals?
Yes____No____

3. If your child (under 8) preferred to spend all of his free time with his parents, would you wait until he became a teenager before taking corrective action?
Yes____No____

4. As a result of an unpleasant experience, your child develops a fear of swimming, dancing, or meeting people of the opposite sex. Would you try, if possible, to have him exposed to this experience quickly, despite his protest?
Yes____No____

5. Do you teach children how to take disappointment by occasionally denying their requests?
Yes____No____

6. If you are uncomfortable about discussing sex with your child, should you nevertheless do so?
Yes____No____

7. Would you emphasize to a shy child that the only way to advance in our society is to be aggressive?
Yes____No____

8. Would you scold a child who expressed jealousy toward his younger brother or sister?
Yes____No____

9. If your child asked for privileges of which you disapproved but which many of his friends' parents permitted, would you agree?
Yes____No____

10. If you felt that your child's companions were not suitable for him, would you try to influence him to select better friends?
Yes____No____

ANSWERS

1. No. A child may be ill, misunderstand, or have some other compelling reason for occasionally disobeying.

2. No. If his health is satisfactory, he is probably eating all that he needs.

3. No. Why wait that long to correct an obviously unhealthy emotional situation? He should be encouraged to associate with children his age.

4. No. Immediate compliance need not be demanded without examining the reasons and allowing him some time to regain his confidence.

5. Yes. Some parents err by granting virtually everything their children request. Such children later often develop terrible frustrations when their requests are denied by others.

6. No. Your child would probably sense your discomfort, and it might influence him to regard the subject in an unhealthy manner. Better obtain appropriate literature suitable for the age of your child. If you know some qualified person who can discuss the subject in an acceptable manner with your child, it would help.

7. No. It would probably increase his feelings of inadequacy. Besides, many shy people are nevertheless successful.

8. No. Rather than scold him, you should by words and actions demonstrate that you love him as much as his younger brother or sister, but that the younger one may need more help, including his.

9. No. Although what many other parents tolerate poses difficult problems for parents and their children, if a parent is convinced that certain behavior is unwise for his child, he should hold fast and ignore what other parents allow.

10. Yes. This is tough, and some children will resist this fiercely. However, there is no question that children can be influenced for good or bad by their associates.

My Son the Pool Expert

By RAY LEAKE

Larry Leake, 11, playing with Dad.

I REALLY didn't know what I was getting my son Larry into when I bought that old billiard table and set it up in the garage five years ago. I merely wanted something I could enjoy at home here in Downey, Calif.

My friend Del Totten and I used to play a lot of three-cushion billiards. One night, as usual, Larry was out in the garage with us, watching and rolling the balls around. He was only 6 at the time and could barely peer over the table's edge. Del and I got to talking, and when we looked around, there was Larry, a big cue in his hand, making those balls do what he wanted! It dawned on me that Larry had unusual coordination, and a solid bridge in his hand.

Oddly enough, Larry didn't play on a regular pool table until we went to watch the world's straight billiards champion, Nariko Katsura, from Japan. There was a table off in one corner, and Larry started hitting balls. Since the table was smaller and the pockets bigger than the one we had at home, he really put those balls in. Mrs. Katsura was so impressed, she still writes to him.

Apparently a lot of other people were impressed, too, because Larry was invited to show his trick shots at the Tournament of Champions in Long Beach in 1966. Between games he got up on his box—he was only 4'4" and weighed 56 pounds (he's grown five inches since them)—and did 12 shots right off. A news service picked up the story, and pretty soon it seemed like people were pounding on the door for interviews and wanting him to put on exhibitions all over the country!

Larry knocks off ball atop bottle.

Frankly, I wouldn't want Larry to earn his living playing pool. I want him to go to college. That's why my wife Millie and I were somewhat concerned when the Brunswick Corporation offered Larry a contract when he was 8. We didn't want him to lose his amateur status because he wants to play other sports as well.

That was three years ago. Larry has been the corporation's West Coast representative ever since. All the fees he gets for exhibitions goes into his college savings account. He averages eight exhibitions and two or three tv shows a year. We try to turn Larry's trips into sight-seeing events. I always accompany Larry and, whenever possible, my wife and our 19-year-old son Norman go along.

I leave all decisions concerning his playing up to Larry. He has to accept or reject every offer personally. My only insistance is that once he does accept an offer, he sees it through.

We've no idea what Larry's future will hold. He has been an "A" student at San Gabriel Elementary School until last semester, when he slipped a bit in math. And even if he never picks up a cue again, he has enjoyed many memorable experiences from such trips as touring the White House, Independence Hall in Philadelphia, and places like Williamsburg and Jamestown. He's been fortunate to study America firsthand and has probably put himself through college already by his remarkable talent. ◆

QUIPS AND QUOTES

A wife, to whom golf was a total mystery, never could understand why her husband insisted on tiring himself out by walking so far every time he played. So one day she went with him to see what the game was all about. She followed him until he landed in a bunker. There he floundered about for some time in the sand.

The lady seated herself on top of the bunker, took out her knitting, and said complacently, "There, I knew you could just as well play in one place if you made up your mind to it." —Helen Harris

"How old is your sister?" queried her friend, gazing enviously around.

"She's 16," explained Mary Ellen. "Mother and Daddy promised that it would be my room some day, but she never got married." —A. T. Quigg

Our policyowners are bound to be happy.

We've declared another record-high dividend.

New York Life will be paying $269,000,000 in dividends in 1970.

Every cent of this will go to our policyowners. That's because ours is a mutual company—we have no stockholders.

Of course, dividends aren't new to New York Life. We have paid them every single year for well over a century.

The larger our dividends have grown, the lower the cost of life insurance for millions of those we protect.

We think this is a pretty good record.

We hope it will encourage you to call your New York Life Agent to "talk insurance."

One day you could be one of our happy policyowners.

The Hair to Wear for Spring

By ROSALYN ABREVAYA

IF PARIS HAS its way (and it often does), the "small head" will be the one to go with the new slinkier midi-length silhouettes that are moving onto the fashion scene.

Loosely translated, the "small head" is any hairdo as long as it's pulled back or up, away from the face. Gentle tendrils or wisps of hair usually complete the coiffure. Here, master stylist Pierre Henri interprets the new look. Always an advocate of simple, uninvolved hairdos, he does not "torture" hair to get these pretty results. They evolve first from a skilled haircut and, second, from a thorough brushing before the final comb-out (a tip to use in hairdressing forays at home). Women determined to hold out on the plunging hemline, which looks so well with the new "small head" coif, will still greet these hairdos as a welcome return to graceful, ladylike proportions.

Turn romantic in a coif drawn up into a slight puff, piled loosely on top in soft curls, and accented with wispy tendrils.

Before You Sign

This clause is found in all kinds of contracts—rental leases, installment contracts, notes—and in effect reads: "I . . . irrevocably appoint any attorney of any court of record . . . to confess judgment in favor of the seller against me for the amount due." It makes possible unbelievable exploitation, especially among the poor. In Cook County (Chicago), Ill., alone every year, more than $2 million worth of debts are collected through "confession of judgment." Consumer advocates generally agree this fine print is so abominable that it should be universally outlawed. In the meantime, avoid it if possible. Some persons have been successful in striking it out before signing contracts.

• Pre-existing health-condition clause. In applying for health insurance, a California man inadvertently failed to note on his application that he had a record of high blood pressure. Later, after he suffered a heart attack, the insurance company denied him payment for $5,000 worth of medical bills. The company claimed that there was evidence of heart disease before the policy was taken out. Therefore, under the fine-print "pre-existing health condition" clause, it was not obliged to pay. The tragedy is that many persons, unaware of the significance of the clause, believe they are covered, only to find out when they become ill that the company contests the claim.

The clause, found in individual (usually not group) health and accident policies, typically excepts from coverage any bodily disease which originated prior to a date specified in the policy. Thus, if you have a disease—sometimes unknown to you or even one that you have not noted on the application—at the time the policy is taken out, the company may invoke the clause or refuse to pay. However, in most states, the company cannot refuse to honor the claim after the policy has been in effect two (sometimes three) years unless you have knowingly concealed information.

To protect yourself when applying for accident or health insurance, don't try to hide visits to doctors or previous illnesses. Answer every question. Otherwise, a company can allege fraud and refuse to honor your claim. If you do have a known medical condition, a rider probably will be attached to your policy excluding coverage for that condition or allowing it, at a higher premium. Be wary of a company that does not make such provisions, for even though you have noted your complete medical history on your application, it may still come back later and refuse to honor the claim on the basis the condition was preexisting.

• Liability waivers. On a flight from Buenos Aires to New York, a woman's bags, which had been checked, were lost. One contained a mink stole, plus other items, worth $900. The owner thought that the airline would assume full responsibility. It didn't. It paid her only $165 for the loss. Her ticket, the management pointed out, contained fine print limiting the airline's liability to only $7.50 per pound on international flights. If she wanted additional coverage, she should have taken out insurance.

Such disclaimers of liability occur on any number of documents—from hotel-room and restaurant signs to baggage checks and rental leases. The fine print characteristically reads, "We are not responsible for any loss . . ." or, "Our liability is limited to. . . ."

Many disclaimer clauses must be taken seriously. For example, household moving companies rigidly hold to a maximum liability of only 60 cents a pound for each item. If you want additional coverage for your possessions, you must pay for it. On the other hand, as Professor Monroe H. Freedman, of George Washington University's Law School, says: "Many disclaimers are legally meaningless and put there mostly to discourage law suits. There must be thousands of people who have had their cars damaged in parking lots who have been discouraged from pressing for compensation because the attendant said, 'Read the back of your claim stub; it says right there we're not responsible.'"

Courts are taking an increasingly dim view of enforcing the fine-print liability disclaimers. One U.S. District Court ruled that the "lilliputian typography" on the back of an airline ticket was not adequate notification of liability to the holder. A California court upheld an injured hospital patient's right to sue the hospital for malpractice, even though on admittance to the hospital he had signed a contract absolving the hospital of liability for negligence.

Unquestionably, under a barrage of criticism and legal reform, some companies are simplifying the fine print, enlarging it, and putting it in a more conspicuous place where you are likely to find it. The courts are increasingly striking down rigid fine-print interpretations and siding with the consumer in fine-print disputes. Legislators are trying to abolish or modify a number of unfair fine-print clauses which are unconscionably weighted against the buyer. And such legal reform is indeed needed.

Despite this increased protection, you must still exercise extreme caution: read and understand the fine print in any contract, and make sure you understand it. Don't let a finger-drumming salesman tell you the fine print isn't important. It is, or it wouldn't be there.

If you need help, consult your lawyer or your local consumer-protection bureau. ◆

I gave up diet pills and lost 98 pounds

By JoAnne Lawrence—as told to Ruth L. McCarthy

Pounds, pounds, pounds. I just kept putting them on the first year I was married. In fact, I gained 75 in all and wound up wearing maternity clothes, even when I wasn't pregnant. It was shameful.

We had moved to Austin, Texas, and our apartment was so small there wasn't much to do. So I cooked and ate and ate and cooked. Then, when I found out I was expecting, I started eating even more. I thought that to have a healthy baby you had to eat a lot.

My doctor kept telling me the weight would be hard to get off. But I wouldn't believe it. I was sure I could take it off in no time. The "no time" lasted nine years. I just kept getting heavier and heavier, as I had another child, and another.

Occasionally, I'd buy some yard goods, and a dress pattern with a waistline, and I'd run it up. Then I'd hang the dress in the closet. It was always too snug to wear. I made things that way on purpose, hoping it would make me do something about my weight. But it never did. I'd just wind up wearing my maternity slacks, which had an elastic waistband.

By the time my last son was born, I was really in bad shape. I weighed 230 pounds. It was hard even to breathe. The doctor thought I'd lose the baby.

He even thought he'd lose me, the fat was squeezing my heart so hard. But, fortunately, we both pulled through.

It wasn't like I hadn't ever tried to reduce. Doctors had prescribed diets and reducing pills for me time and again. Sometimes, I'd stay on a diet five days, then I'd have to eat big. Fried chicken and candy. I couldn't seem to live without them. As for the pills, they made me too nervous. Besides, when you swallow them, they're gone. It's the same with liquid diets. You drink them, and they're gone. It's not like having something you can chew on.

After the baby came, I was desperate to lose. And I wanted sympathy so bad, it hurt. Finally, I made an appointment with another doctor. While in his waiting room, I picked up a magazine and suddenly saw this story about a woman who'd lost a tremendous amount of weight. When I looked at her fat picture, I said: "That's me." Then I looked at her slim picture. And I thought, if she can do it, so can I. So I read every word and I found out that she did it with the help of Ayds Reducing Plan Candy.

Now that I'm 132 pounds, even my little boys are proud of me. The oldest keeps saying to his pals: "Hey, you, this is my Mom!"

I didn't even wait to keep my appointment with the doctor. I told the nurse I was sick and left. And I went right to the drugstore and got some vanilla caramel Ayds. Later, I tried both the plain chocolate fudge type and the fudgy chocolate mint. And I started losing on the Ayds Plan.

I didn't set myself too strict in what I ate for meals. I was just careful. But I took the Ayds, as directed, and they helped me curb my appetite. They really did. I kept my Ayds in the refrigerator and that made them real chewy. And that's what I wanted. Something to chew on. Why, if I'd wake up in the middle of the night and start thinking about food, I'd just get up, get an Ayds and chew away.

When I'd gone down 26 pounds, I was able, at last, to get into one of those dresses hanging in my closet. You can't imagine how good that made me feel.

Soon I began looking at pretty dresses in magazines. Bright, bright colors, too. After all, I was just in my mid-twenties and I was tired of wearing black.

About this time, I also started doing exercises to help me firm up. But I have to admit, when it came to touching the floor, I cheated. So I decided to switch to walking — eight blocks every evening. And it made me feel real good.

When I finally lost 98 pounds, I couldn't believe it. I was like a new person. I bought myself some shorts. Some dresses with belts, to show my waistline. And even a couple of minis. Fact is, we've had to add three new closets to our house. I just can't get enough of dressing up.

I've been down to 132 pounds for some time now, but I still keep a box of Ayds in the refrigerator. When I feel myself slipping, I look at them and say: "You satisfy me, Ayds, or I'm in trouble." And they do. They've helped me cut my appetite way down. And my weight. The only thing out of line now is my clothes bill.

1969 THE YEAR IN REVIEW

Portnoy wasn't the only one with a complaint.

Students demonstrated against the war. The "silent majority" finally found its voice and protested the protesters. Others found fault with the flamboyant nudity of "Oh! Calcutta!" And just about everybody got angry about the pollution of our environment. At year's end, the protests were bringing about big changes. In a fascinating mix of color photography, reportage and bylined articles produced especially for this new book, the Editors of TIME-LIFE BOOKS review this year of protest—and change—in

TIME Annual 1969

Just off the press, TIME Annual 1969 utilizes a big, colorful format (9⅛ x 11⅜-inch page size) to provide a wide-angle look back at 1969. With more than 200 illustrations (more than a third in full color) on its 240 pages, this important volume is divided into topical and informative areas ...

The Nation.
Washington Bureau Chief Hugh Sidey on Nixon's first year. The storm-tossed Supreme Court. Chappaquiddick. Epidemic of skyjacking. Black Panthers. The Chicago Seven. The Woodstock Love-In. The marijuana debate. Spiro Agnew's criticism of newscasters.

The World.
Jess Cook, TIME's Washington correspondent, on the year-long effort to end the Vietnam War. Massacre at My Lai. Russia and China at the brink of war. Arab-Israeli confrontation analyzed by Edward H. Hughes, TIME Mideast correspondent. The Montreal Police Strike.

People.
Carlo Ponti, Jr., Sophia Loren's greatest achievement. Thor Heyerdahl and his papyrus boat, "Ra." Norman Mailer, a candidate. Comeback for Mae West. Nation mourns passing of Dwight D. Eisenhower and Everett M. Dirksen.

Environment.
The peril of DDT recognized. New threat of thermal pollution. Polluted air corroding Venice's priceless marbles. The Santa Barbara oil slick. Reprieve for two national heirlooms: the Everglades and the Mineral King Valley. Profiles of conservation leaders.

Culture.
A season of shock in the theater. Naked abandon of "Oh! Calcutta!". Movies, also sexier than ever. "I Am Curious (Yellow)" opens to big lines. The metamorphosis of the Western. On television, the Smothers Brothers smothered. Chuck Berry and Fats Domino now popular again. B. B. King, indeed "king" of old blues; Janis Joplin, queen of new blues. Photographer Raymundo de Larrain's portfolio of fashions from the flea market. TIME Associate Editor Gurney Breckenfeld on inflation. The Alaska oil rush. Nader's "raiders." The food franchising boom

Science.
Donald Neff, TIME's Houston correspondent, on the implications of the moon landing. The strange pulsars of outer space. Dr. Picard's trip beneath the Gulf Stream. The latest news of immunology. Transplants.

Sports.
The Mets. Joe Namath's tearful good-bye party. All 7'2" of Lew Alcindor arrives. Indy 500. Arts and Letters, Horse of the Year. Yale's Calvin Hill, one of pro football's top rookies.

Doctor Developes Home Treatment that

RINSES AWAY BLACKHEADS HELPS DRY UP ACNE-PIMPLES

In 15 Minutes or Your Money Back!

Queen Helene Mint Julep Masque 15 Minute Treatment Must Show Immediate Improvement or — YOUR MONEY BACK!

A leading New York Doctor working with a cosmetic laboratory, has developed a simple medicated home-treatment that rinses away blackheads and whiteheads in a matter of minutes. It was demonstrated recently on five teen-age girls and three teen-age boys. The results were breath-taking. Blackheads really rinsed away. In fact, many could be seen on the cloth used to wash off the Masque. But this wasn't all! Acne-pimples improved after one application, enlarged pores reduced, and rough, muddy complexions became cleaner, clearer and smoother looking. These results certainly indicate why teen-agers, both boys and girls, are now saying "this is one product that really works", for good, clear, clean, healthy skins . . . and why mothers of teen-agers have heartily endorsed its use. The Masque Cream Treatment is indeed a remarkable discovery, not only for healthy skins, but also for the confidence, poise and self-esteem a fine complexion brings to teen-agers!

Anyone Can Use It

If you suffer the agony of teen-age blackheads, whiteheads, acne-pimples and rough, unsightly complexions give yourself this home treatment at our risk. Apply this delightfully Mint-Scented Cream and within 2 or 3 minutes an absorbing agent called Argilla dries and turns this cream into a plastic-like masque. You will now feel as though hundreds of "tiny fingers" were softly kneading the skin, loosening pore-caked dirt, blackheads and foreign impurities. As it firms and hardens, its suction-action draws out waste matter from the pores. . . . In 15 minutes you simply rinse the masque away with lukewarm water which dissolves it immediately. When you wipe your face, you can see that blackheads and other pore "filler" actually come off on your towel. And your skin feels clean . . . really clean . . . refreshed, smooth like velvet!

Start Now to Improve Your Complexion

Now is the time for action. Don't take a back seat or be a wall-flower because of bad skin. If you want to get your full share of fun and parties . . . clear up your complexion and let Mint Julep Masque "Lead the Way"! You owe it to yourself to try a single fifteen minute home treatment to convince yourself that this new Queen Helene masque-cream can work wonders for you.

Attention! MOTHERS of Teen-Agers

Queen Helene Mint Julep Masque is a MUST for you, too! It will help tighten sagging skin on face and throat, relax tired face muscles and stimulate a fresher, cleaner, more youthful complexion. Try a Medicated Mint Julep Masque Treatment YOURSELF. You'll be delighted with the skin-tightening experience and more alive feeling that comes with every home-treatment.

Queen Helene Mint Masque is only $3.00 for the six ounce jar, enough for over 3 months of daily home treatments. Buy it today! Start using it immediately! Prove to yourself at our risk, for one full month. If, at any time during the month, you are not completely satisfied, simply return the unused portion and you will get back every penny of your purchase price.

Fidgeting, nose-picking, a tormenting rectal itch are often telltale signs of Pin-Worms, ugly parasites that medical experts say infest 1 out of every 3 persons examined. Entire families may be victims and not know it.

To get rid of Pin-Worms, they must be killed in the large intestine where they live and multiply. That's exactly what Jayne's P-W tablets do . . . and here's how they do it:

First—a scientific coating carries the tablets into the bowels before they dissolve. Then—Jayne's modern, medically-approved ingredient goes right to work—kills Pin-Worms quickly, easily. Ask your pharmacist.

Don't take chances with dangerous, highly contagious Pin-Worms which infect entire families. Arlo Guthrie's Gamble

A MEETING of the Joint Congresses of Neurological Sciences may seem an unlikely place to encounter folksinger Arlo Guthrie, star of the highly successful movie, "Alice's Restaurant," and the Woodstock music festival. But there he was, having his picture taken with the presidents of the two congresses and giving press interviews. And it wasn't a publicity stunt.

Arlo came to lend his support to the Committee to Combat Huntington's Disease. CCHD was organized by Arlo's mother Marjorie a little more than two years ago, shortly after the death of his father, Woody Guthrie. When Woody, often referred to as America's King of Balladeers, died of this genetic disease, formerly called Huntington's chorea, it was believed to be comparatively rare.

In the past, Huntington's disease was often incorrectly diagnosed. Victims were frequently confined to mental institutions because of their strange jerking, halting ambulatory movements, choked speech, and other erratic behavioral symptoms. For some sufferers, these become worse until the patient becomes totally incapacitated, unable to speak or to perform any voluntary movements. It doesn't happen the same with everyone, and there are many people who have Huntington's disease without experiencing any of the extreme progression.

New research is under way on Huntington's disease, but there are still so few facts that nothing very much has changed. There are new medications which will retard the progression of the symptoms in some cases, but virtually the only beds available for H.D. patients are in mental hospitals. This single fact often provides the final heartbreak for many H.D. patients. According to Dr. John R. Whittier, noted authority on H.D. at Creedmoor Institute in New York, where Woody died, disintegration of mental powers is not always inevitable. Patients can remain entirely lucid even after they lose all normal powers to communicate with others.

Although the committee has been in existence for only a short time, it has established that there are probably upwards of 100,000 sufferers in the United States alone, and it is impossible to speculate on the number of others who may get it since there is no H.D. genealogical registry. This is the enigma which haunts the lives of the Guthrie family as well as other potential victims. As they grow into maturity, they must decide whether they will take a chance to marry and have children.

The three Guthrie children, Arlo, 22, and his brother Joady, 21, and sister Nora Lee, 20, have known of the cloud over their genes from the time they were youngsters. They know that they stand a 50-50 chance of inheriting it some time in their adult lives. The full ugliness of all that it could mean is familiar to them, for they visited their father frequently throughout his 15 years of illness. There is one bright spot, however, and that is if they do not get it, their children are safe, and the blood line cleared forever. Huntington's disease will not reappear in future generations.

Arlo, the oldest, was a painfully introverted little boy, continually escaping into private hiding places. He has a high I.Q. but was a poor student and not at all good at organized sports. The other children loved him, but he always came off badly in competitive activities, and it gave him an inferiority hang-up which stayed with him throughout his school years. The world's recognition of Woody's compositions as great folk music probably came at the best possible time for Arlo. His pride in Woody gave him something great with which to identify and helped raise his self-esteem. He is still very shy, and his farm at Stockbridge, Mass., has become his new private place to hide.

Arlo adored Woody without reservation. It shows now in the similar style of his music, the social themes he chooses for his songs, and the general life pattern he has adopted.

When Woody was on the threshold of his teens, he ran away from home. But teen-aged Arlo went off to boarding school. Like Woody, Arlo sometimes tried communal living. At other times he took off on long, lonely jaunts, accompanied only by his guitar. Neither father nor son embraced drugs.

Unlike Woody, Arlo is very serious about his obligation to his audiences. He works hard to put on an entertaining show regardless of the size of the audience. It wasn't unheard of for Woody to fail to show up for an engagement at all, or to walk off the stage in the midst of a show if he didn't feel that it was going well. Such behavior would be unthinkable for Arlo. He's still a little surprised at the crowds that gather to hear him and does all he can to please them. This kind of audience empathy is what kept him up all night at Woodstock, wandering in the rain through rows of young people who couldn't get close enough to the platform to hear the music.

The best proof of a new, more positive self-esteem is that, in defiance of the best genetic counseling, Arlo and his pretty new wife, Jackie, have decided to have children despite the risk of their contracting H.D. When asked how he can justify the gamble, Arlo just smiles that sweet smile and says, "But I'm in the clear! I'm not going to get H.D., and if I don't, my kids can't."

It isn't just positive thinking that permits Arlo and Jackie to go ahead and start the family they both look forward to having. The fact is they have been studying spiritualism, attending seances and personal development classes. In messages received

Will the genetic disease which struck down his father also hit him and his new baby?

By THELMA THARP

through a medium whom they consult frequently, the Guthries have been assured that they have nothing to fear from H.D. Their introduction to spiritualism began simply as curiosity, but now they have both become quite serious about it.

If pressed, Arlo will play the numbers game. The way he figures it is that since medical science says he has a 50 percent chance of not getting the disease that Woody died of, his children's risk can only be half of that or 25 percent. That gives them a 75 percent chance for safety and, as he says, "No matter how you cut it, that's pretty good odds."

Arlo, as well as his brother and sister, have carried a difficult burden with them into young adulthood. Each of them is meeting the challenge of the threat of Huntington's disease in a different way, but they all seem to be meeting it very well and looking forward to life with zest. It's easy to get the idea when you talk with them that they believe they are in no greater danger from Huntington's disease than they are from all the other threats to life in our modern society. To quote Arlo, "We're not uptight at all! We're cool! We've got a scene to make and we're making it. We dig life. It's for living."

Alfresco wedding of Arlo and Jackie (the former Jackie Hyde) was held at his Stockbridge, Mass., farm last year.

The couple used ancient Greek wedding style with Arlo in white shirt and slacks. Mrs. Marjorie Guthrie is at right.

This free booklet will tell you how you can become a Computer Programmer 50,000 more programmers needed now! 500,000 more will be needed in a few years!

...and how you can train at home for big earnings in the world's newest, most exciting profession.

IF YOU'RE dissatisfied with your present job, why don't you become a programmer? So great is the demand for programmers, you'll have your choice of openings, with a growing future ahead.

For the vast majority of good positions, a high school education, a logical mind and the right preparation are all that are required. LaSalle, world leader in home education, will train you as a programmer in your spare time.

Why not plan for bigger success in the field where employers are looking for you? Authorities agree that for many years to come there will be more openings in computer programming than people to fill them! Even beginners are paid well; and with experience, programmers can fill major supervisory positions at salaries of $12,000 to $15,000 a year – often as much as $20,000.

Without leaving your present position, you can start your training now – at very low cost. You can study at home, in hours of your own choosing. Experienced LaSalle instructors will guide you by mail every step of the way. Industry experts say this is the most thorough course of its kind that they have seen. The ease and rapidity with which you learn will surprise you.

LaSalle has just published a fascinating booklet "How To Become a Computer Programmer." In simple, non-technical language this booklet tells you what computer programming is; what the programmer does; how you can train by mail through the school that has enrolled more than 2.000,000 people in its many success courses. A young semi-hippy type drove his little foreign doodle bug into a gas station and parked for quite sometime by the pump counting the change in the palm of his hand. Finally, the attendant, who had been noticing the little agricultural decals on the machine said, "Do you want some gas, or shall just water the flowers?" A young miss (who was probably the girlfriend of the boy we just mentioned) was sampling some perfume in a department store. The salesgirl guaranteed the teenager that the ingredients were sure to wean her boy friend away from his dual carburetors . . . Have you seen Ford's 1970 Thunderbird? Now there's something that will turn you on no matter what age you are. Just some of the many luxury features that are yours, automatically, are: Exclusive "fluidic-control" Power steering — Power front disc brakes — SelectShift Cruise-O-Matic transmission — Responsive 429-cu. in. 4-V V-8 — Cayman grain vinyl roof (Landau models) — Locking Steering Column which locks steering-ignition-transmission when you remove the key — AM Radio — Hidden radio antenna (bonded into windshield) — Hidden windshield wipers which park below the line of sight — Power Ventilation that freshens air with all windows up — Uni-lock Safety Harness which fastens shoulder and lap belts with one buckle, unclutters front seats — Automatic parking brake release and Radial tires . . . need we go on. 'The Panthers'

David Hilliard (bottom), Chief of Staff of the Black Panther Party, Georgia legislator Julian Bond (above), and the Rev. Andrew Young (below) of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference are interviewed on the ABC News "NOW" series presentation, "The Panthers," Monday, 10:30 PM. "The Panthers" tries to answer the question: What effect and influence do the Black Panthers have on black Americans?

"TELE-TALK"

A very special motorcycle will play a part in the building of a new wing to a school in Ojai, Calif.

Michael Parks, nomadic hero of NBC's Then Came Bronson Wednesdays, 10 PM, is donating a custom-made $5,000 motorcycle to the St. Thomas Aquinas School in Ojai to help raise money for the new wing.

The bike, a gleaming, all-chrome model specially assembled for Michael, will be the top prize in a raffle sponsored by the school. All proceeds from raffle tickets will go to the building program.

The motorcycle is the largest model made by a top manufacturer and is larger than the bike Parks rides in his television series.

The fund-raising project, headed by Father Richard K. Smith, will also be aided by Parks' records. One hundred albums of Michael's newest record release will be presented as secondary prizes in the drawing. Parks' first album, "Closing the Gap," is currently high on record charts.

Giorgio Carega, Italy's Consul General in Los Angeles, has lauded To Rome With Love for its "Italian flair" and actress Peggy Mondo for her contribution to the "Italian character" of the series, which is broadcast Sundays at 7:30 PM in color on CBS.

The consul's praise came in a letter to Miss Mondo, who plays Italian landlady Mama Vitale on the comedy program about an American widower-professor transplanted to Rome with his three daughters. The program is filmed entirely at Studio Center in Hollywood, and Miss Mondo, though descended from Italians, was born in New Haven, Conn.

Art James, host of NBC's The Who, What or Where Game, began his broadcasting career as a disk jockey in Saginaw, Mich., after "I blustered my way through the audition."

Frances Reid, featured on NBC's Days of Our Lives, recalls how, in her earlier years on the road, she picked up a copy of the Napoleon (Ohio) Signal and read the following most fitting line for performers: "Applause is about the best interruption we know."

"TELE-TALK"

When The Virginian returns next Fall for its ninth season it will have James Drury, Doug McClure and a third star, yet to be named, rotating as stars, each appearing in approximately one-third of the shows.

The NBC Television Network and Universal TV are jointly developing "The Thrill of the Fall," a one-hour color special dedicated to the stuntmen and stuntwomen of the motion picture industry, for broadcast during the 1970-71 television season.

The special, created by John Strong, will feature many prominent Hollywood stars plus unique behind-the-scenes coverage of one of the world's most exciting professions.

Mr. Strong will produce "The Thrill of the Fall," with Leslie Stevens as executive producer. Most of the program will be filmed at Universal City Studios, with other segments filmed at various locations throughout the country.

Executive producer Gary Morton has announced that Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton are currently discussing their upcoming appearance on an episode of Here's Lucy starring Lucille Ball to be filmed at a later date for broadcast in color on CBS.

Madlyn Davis and Bob Carroll Jr. have been signed to write a special script for this segment. Davis and Carroll were the original writers of I Love Lucy.

The 5th Dimension singing group originally was known as The Versatiles. Ron Townson, a member of the group, is responsible for The 5th Dimension name.

Whereas most Hollywood personalities prefer sports such as golf and tennis, Art Linkletter, co-host of NBC's Life with Linkletter regularly enjoys a fast and furious game of handball.

"I'm near-sighted," Art Linkletter told a Life With Linkletter studio audience at NBC, "and my wife's far-sighted. I help her read restaurant menus and she helps me get off the freeways."

A FREQUENT GUEST

Lee Meriwether's seven weekly appearances on Paramount Television's Mission: Impossible series this season (CBS, Sundays at 10 PM) makes her undisputed champion among distaff guests with the Impossible Missions Force. No other actress (except Dina Merrill in a two-parter) has appeared more than once with the cloak-and-dagger crew.

It also represents rare prescience on the part of executive producer Bruce Geller in choosing Miss Meriwether so frequently because her feats of derring-do with the IMF are the fulfillment of a childhood dream.

While other little girls looked toward the future in terms of more orthodox and ladylike pursuits, the adolescent Miss Meriwether harbored a burning ambition to become a policewoman, secret agent or G-Woman.

She saw the spy thriller, "13 Rue Madeleine," so often she memorized most of the dialogue. She nearly flunked in school because she tried to put her homework in code. And when she was 14 she wrote to FBI chief J. Edgar Hoover, asking about educational requirements for becoming a lady agent.

"He wrote back a nice letter," she recalled, "in which he said, 'We do not have G-Women, as you put it, but we do need conscientious, hard-working women who wish to dedicate themselves to law enforcement. Please let me hear from you when you are older.' "

Hoover didn't hear from her but a lot of other people did when Miss Meriwether blossomed into womanhood so beautifully that she was chosen Miss America in 1955, an honor which eventually led to a successful acting career.

But the story doesn't end there. A few years ago, Miss Meriwether and her husband, actor Frank Aletter, were touring FBI headquarters in Washington, D.C., with an agent friend, who introduced them to Hoover himself.

Miss Meriwether mentioned the letter she had written many years before and was astonished when the famed FBI leader readily recalled the teenager who wanted to be a G-Woman.

"I remember it well because it was so unusual," Hoover told them. "We get many letters from children but yours was the first we ever saw asking how to be a G-Woman. It gave us a good laugh and we thought it deserved an answer."

To Aletter he added: "Your gain is our loss," to which Paramount TV and Geller might further observe that the FBI's loss is the IMF's gain.

Leith Stevens: An Off-Camera Role

What is the function of a director of television music at a studio producing many hours of video entertainment every week for the consumption of millions of viewers?

Does he select the composer? How closely does he supervise the work during writing? How much of his personal touch is reflected in the finished piece?

Leith Stevens, the bearded Director of Television Music at Paramount Studios, is eminently qualified to answer these questions regarding the writing of music for television.

A child prodigy, Stevens took his first piano lesson from his father when he was five years old. He made his piano debut at 14 and when he was 18 he was a coach for the students of the legendary Mme. Schumann-Heink. He subsequently went on tour with the contralto as her accompanist.

He was 21 when he joined CBS as a vocal arranger and three years later he was made a composer and conductor for many of the network's top radio shows. In 1941 he began composing for motion pictures (he has been nominated three times for an Academy Award) and when television came along he entered that field.

Stevens says that assigning a composer is like casting an actor for a part.

"A composer is chosen whose particular talents fit certain dramatic problems," he explained. "This is usually done in conjunction with the series producer, who has specific ideas about what he wants the music to accomplish. My chore is to guide the composer right and see that he follows through.

"Bruce Geller has strong instincts in this area and almost without exception selects the composer for his productions of Mission: Impossible and Mannix.

"Bruce chose Lalo Schifrin, a comparative newcomer to the business, to write the theme for Mission four years ago. Schifrin's ability to provide the right music in the right context is why Bruce also had him write the music for Mannix."

Stevens points out how it is possible to angle music several different ways, giving mysteries as an example.

"A producer may wish to highlight the romance in a whodunit and play down the mystery. And then he may wish to go the other way.

"I usually check the score while it is in progress and supervise the recording," Stevens said. "But I try to keep my personal touch out of the work. I don't want our composers sounding like Leith Stevens. A composer's stock in trade is his own personal sound which gives a distinctive quality to his music and I wouldn't want to take that away from him."

Summing up his role as music director, Stevens says:

"My function is not to have musicians do something I want them to do but to make sure that what the composer does is in his own style and that the result is right for the show."

MOMENT OF TRUTH

April 15, Income Tax time, comes swiftly to all men—and some chimps—including Sam, top agent of APE (Agency to Prevent Evil) on Secret Chimp, a half-hour series with an all-simian cast, to be seen Saturday mornings on ABC this next September.

HOLLAND AGAINST THE SEA

Holland, the picturesque land of tulips, windmills and wooden shoes, and a vulnerable nation struggling to keep its head above water, is the subject of the fourth National Geographic Society Special, "Holland Against the Sea," on CBS, Tuesday at 7:30 PM. The focal point of the special is the relationship between the Dutch people and their greatest ally—and enemy—the sea. Here the windmills of Kinderdik are used as defense mechanisms to pump back the encroaching sea.

"TELE-TALK"

"It Couldn't Be Done," the entertainment special paying tribute to Americans who turned "impossible" projects into realities, will be exhibited in 140 countries around the world by the United States Information Agency. Plans for the exhibitions were outlined by Frank Shakespeare, director of the USIA, in conjunction with a recent preview of the program at the National Press Club in Washington

The one-hour special, with Academy Award-winner Lee Marvin serving as host and narrator, was colorcast on NBC, Thursday, April 2.

In his remarks, Mr. Shakespeare praised the special and said: "Not only is it an outstanding program, technically, but it also is upbeat. And that is refreshing, when one considers some of the distorted portraits of this country offered to the public. Here is one that emphasizes the vision and daring that have made the U.S.A. great."

Mr. Shakespeare added that the program will offer an insight into the true character of Americans for people in other lands.

"It Couldn't Be Done," co-produced by Lee Mendelson and Walt DeFaria, was sponsored by the American Telephone & Telegraph Company Long Lines Division, on NBC-TV.

Hanna-Barbera Productions will produce a half-hour animated series based on the comic-book characters of "Josie and the Pussycats" for a 1970-71 debut on CBS. A live group of musical entertainers based on the teenage cartoon stars are now being cast. This group will be available for touring performances and show promotion.

Music from the series will be released as single records and albums.

Also produced will be a series of 130 two-and-one-half minute animated and live-action mini documentaries that will be introduced and narrated by the cartoon stars of "Josie and the Pussycats." The CBS News Department will provide short subjects relating to youth-oriented contemporary affairs. Titled "Shorties," the documentaries will cover current sports, science and news-breaking events of the day.

Henry Fonda, whose histrionic laurels have made him one of the entertainment world's foremost performers, has signed a pact with Don Fedderson Productions to star in a new television program, "The Smith Family," to be featured starting next January on ABC. Announcement was made by Edmund Hartmann, creator and producer of the new series.

The story of a plain-clothes detective, his wife and three children — a 17-year old daughter, and two sons, one 15, and one 7 years of age—will touch on today's gap between generations and the urge of today's youth for identification and an opportunity to forge the world of tomorrow to conform to their ideas of what the future should be. "The Smith Family" basically will enjoy a comedic touch, occasionally delving into dramatic youth - parent situations.

In a radical departure from normal television programming, NBC in upcoming weeks will rerun milestone episodes from the eight-year history of Universal Television's The Virginian instead of solely repeating shows from this past season's first-run schedule. In addition to the regular series stars, which include Lee J. Cobb, Charles Bickford, Doug McClure and title star James Drury, the segments chosen are highlighted by performances by major guest stars.

HOPE AND DILLER

Phyllis Diller and Bob Hope are together again on Hope's last comedy special of the season, "Chrysler Presents a Bob Hope Special," Monday at 9 PM on NBC.

Phyllis is one of Bob's biggest fans and credits him as one of her "discoverers."

Bob, however, disclaims most of the credit--"I just opened a broom closet, and there she was."

Phyllis was playing a small club in Washington, D.C. in 1958 when Bob Hope and some pals walked in. "How could I forget her?" he exclaims. "Did Napoleon forget Waterloo, or Ford the Edsel?"

Phyllis also describes their first meeting as unforgettable, "The Peanut Club was a miserable, threadbare place where even the cockroaches limped. The owner was so seedy, even the Elk's tooth on his watch fob had a cavity in it. The night Bob was there, I had had more than my usual struggle with the audience. And the next time our paths crossed was on an airplane enroute to Palm Springs. Bob was walking down the aisle and I was walking across the wings." But they are two of each other's biggest fans.

Phyllis has done three movies with Bob—"Boy, Did I Get a Wrong Number," "Eight on the Lam" and "The Private Navy of Sgt. O'Farrell." Bob says, "I've made one picture with Elke Sommer, one with Anita Ekberg, two with Jane Russell, one with Lana Turner and now I've made three with Phyllis. Do you get the feeling I'm in the wrong rut?"

Bob adds, "On the last picture Phyllis and I kept peeking through the keyhole of Gina Lollobrigida's dressing room. We both wanted to see what a real girl looked like."

This is Phyllis' fifth appearance on Bob's show and they played Vietnam together in 1966. Phyllis says that General Westmorland told her that her visit cured 400,000 cases of homesickness.

On the April 13 show Bob and Phyllis spoof airlines as Phyllis becomes the first lady trans-Atlantic commercial pilot.

Another highlight will be a "Mod Squad" take-off with Bob and Ann-Margret. Buddy Greco and Les Brown and His Band of Renown will also be featured on the special.

BING CROSBY KNOWS HOW TO COOL IT

Bing Crosby has found the ideal answer to work and leisure.

"I don't postpone what I enjoy doing—golfing, fishing, hunting, traveling," he said. "I build my work schedule around my recreational schedule. It used to be the other way around. Now, when my agent calls with a work offer, I first check my calendar to see if I'm going fishing. It's an optimum position to be in."

Since his calendar is clear, he'll be doing "Bing Crosby—Cooling It," his second musical variety special for NBC, Monday at 10 PM.

Its theme is: "Leisure Time—past, present and future.

Crosby's own leisure time interests began with golf when he was a youth in Spokane, Washington, where he was raised.

"There was a fine municipal course close to home," he said. "I found a club and started to play."

Bing Crosby fills his leisure time with golfing, fishing and traveling.

He continued playing when he came to Hollywood. He joined Paul Whiteman's band in 1926—and got the musicians interested in the game.

"It's a satisfying game," Crosby commented. "You're out in the air, you're more or less in the country. Golf is a pretty personal challenge. You're playing for yourself, trying to overcome your inadequacies. Golf has a swing like no other game. It's all timing, rhythm. When you play, you have no time to think or worry about home, the office, the studio. You focus on what you're trying to accomplish. Three hours go by like minutes. It's a complete release."

It's also been a passport to the world for him.

"It's given me an opportunity to make friendships all over the world," he said. "When I go back to any place, I just have to pick up the phone."

"I also like to fish," he said. "My last trip was to Iceland, for Atlantic salmon. I've gone to England and Ireland for salmon and Mexico for salt water fishing. I like salmon fishing on a stream. I start at the bottom of the stream and walk up. By the end of the day I'm a long ways from where I started. Time passes quickly. You become absorbed. Fishing, also, offers a complete release."

There's one thing he hasn't done that he'd like to do.

"I thought I'd like to write a book," he said. "Not an autobiography, but a few chapters about some interesting persons I've met or worked with, both known and unknown. Everything about me has been done. I think this would be a good approach."

Working or relaxing, Crosby knows how to cool it.

"I think it's an inherent quality," he said. "I never thought about how to relax or made an effort at learning how. It's a disposition, an attitude. I can't get worked up over anything. Of course, if there's a crisis, you deal with it right away. I've found, though, that problems are easier to work out if you do give a matter some time and thought. I've never been one for making snap judgments. I like to think things over."

CLOSE-UP

HE'S 'SUPER-CAMP'

When Aristotle, the Greek philosopher, said, "Melancholy men are the most witty," he accurately foreshadowed the appearance, several millennia later, of Pat Paulsen, star of ABC's Pat Paulsen's Half a Comedy Hour (Thursdays, 7:30 PM).

Pat, whose melancholy appearance lends added emphasis to his bland wit, tosses off such observations as:

• On auto safety: "Should we regroup our forces and advance or should we move to the bilge part back? The crux is a stimulating ride on the lee side yet tabled on the other . . . We know that taking a firm grade is pledganous and facts will bear us out . . . We suggest simply lowering the statistics which implies we stop counting accidents. This is a necessity for all who trude and all those who glog the gains of life, and I think we should all ask ourself this question—How much?"

• On recent court decisions: "Why should we have to tell embezzlers, kidnappers, burglars, and murderers their rights? If they don't know their rights, they shouldn't be in the business."

• On firearms: "Let no man take away our liberties. Let us preserve our freedom to kill!"

Physically, Pat has been described by writers Mason Williams and Allan Blye as "the kind of guy who sits in the corner of the barbershop. He makes it look like he's really trying, as if he were making a speech at a Kiwanis picnic. With his unglib-looking leathery face, he can get a laugh without telling a joke. He's super-camp."

One newspaper critic, after meeting Paulsen, started off a column with the comment: "Don't worry: you aren't going to read here that Pat Paulsen is any different in person than he is on television. He is the same. A mess.

"He looks like a professional pallbearer, someone more comfortable with gloom than happiness. He laughs like Dracula, sometimes carefully pronouncing each 'ha.' The executive producer of his TV show complains that Pat is always losing his buttons and insists on wearing a weird old sweater an Indian gave him in Vancouver. It even has a fuzzy hat to match."

Pat says he never smiles on stage because: "I used to smile when I was working the strip joints and the folk clubs. Then, when I got into television, I just quit smiling. I don't know why, but I guess I was unhappy about working all those strip joints and folk clubs."

Pat believes that his sudden rise to popularity began with those "public service editorials" he used to read on the Smothers Brothers Comedy Hour, which drew up to 15,000 fan letters a week.

"I did 14 of those pieces," he mused recently, "and as they were nearing an end, we realized we would have to think up something new. It was just about then that the Presidential race started humming and I decided to run for the highest office in the land. It was a natural extension of what I had been doing."

Pat's contrived campaign not only kept the Smothers' show high on the Nielsen charts but eventually sent him off on a tour of 30 states in eight months in search of "votes." He estimates that he received some 200,000 to 300,000 write-in votes, including 5000 in Sacramento alone.

He admits the purpose behind the campaign was to "say something and make money." He said something, all right, but made little in the way of money because traveling expenses were higher than anticipated. But Pat's book, "Paulsen for President," sold 50,000 copies. He admits, though, that in recent months sales have fallen off.

Pat, who is 42, stands five feet, eight inches, weighs 140 pounds, and has a permanent slouch, has been described by one critic as "the antithesis of the typical TV star." The writer goes on to say that Pat has become the "in" hero of the nation's youth.

"I don't know why," Paulsen says. "I never consciously tried to appeal to the kids. I just happen to think like they do. My humor is not slanted to any special group or age, but I want the reaction of the young to what I do."

The comedian adds that his wife, Betty Jane, a one time Ohio farm girl, doesn't understand his kind of comedy at all. "But my daughter, Theresa, who is 10, understands real good. All she says is, 'Just don't be funny around the house. You can do it at work.' The boys, Monty—who is seven—and Justin, five, are just too young."

Paulsen attributes his sense of comedy to his father, a Norwegian, who had a good sense of humor and wrote well. He was called the Sage of North Cove, and his letters appeared regularly in the Aberdeen, Washington, local newspaper.

Paulsen found the going difficult when he made his first inroads into show business by appearing in a series of local coffee houses. Then he formed a comedy team with his brother Lorin and a girl, but that didn't work, either.

"But I kept coming back," he recalls, "and finally I got a week's work at Jack's Waterfront Hangout in San Francisco. That was my start as a professional comedian. Other engagements followed, but they weren't very lucrative. My price, four years ago, when I got it, was $175 a week."

Pat credits Tommy Smothers with giving him his first real break in television and, by exposing his talent, making it possible for him to be signed for his own show on ABC-TV.

"I like comedy that builds, rather than one-liners," Paulsen says. "My humor is contemporary, but not controversial. Lord knows I've had enough of controversy. What I want now is serenity—and lots of laughs."

We say it all before they come on.

Nothing's colder than warmed-over news.

Our competitor, channel two, presents their news at 6:00 pm.

This is the same channel two which recently ran an ad stating that their news was "the best news broadcast on Los Angeles television."

Our channel seven news comes on live at 4:30 pm.

And it is a fact that we're trying to make our channel seven Eyewitness News the best news in the world.

(Our attitude should speak for itself.)

When a station sets out to present the best news in the world, it has to work at it.

We know.

To keep an hour-and-a-half ahead of the competition it takes a lot more than Bill Bonds, Jim Lawrence, Stu Nahan and Alan Sloane.

It takes a hundred people you never see.

We're not going to worry about the competition.

We've said it all before they come on.

We want to bring you the best news in the world.

THE GOOD OLD DAYS ARE NOW FOR ELENA VERDUGO

"As far as my work in television is concerned, these are the good old days."

That's the fervent declaration of Elena Verdugo, co-starring in ABC's Marcus Welby, M.D. (Tuesdays, 10 PM).

During the early '50s, Elena starred in one of television's early hits, "Meet Millie."

"It ran for four years," Elena says, "and I did, too. It was done live, fifty-two weeks a year. No vacations, no residuals, no re-takes—just panic."

Her role as Consuelo Lopez, the office nurse of Dr. Marcus Welby (Robert Young) and Dr. Steven Kiley (James Brolin) is her fifth co-starring role in a series. The others—"Many Happy Returns," "The New Phil Silvers Show," "Redigo" and "Mona McCluskey."

"None of them set the world on fire," Elena says. "I was beginning to think I might be a jinx. Then along came 'Welby.' It's nice to be involved again in a hit."

One of the pleasant by-products of the show for Elena was her recent installation as Honorary Mayor of North Hollywood, at a dinner attended by 600 civic and show business luminaries. She says the evening was one of the most exciting and enjoyable of her life, but typically, she came out of it with a couple of stories to tell on herself.

"I was truly the most outstanding woman there," she says. "Most outstanding because it had not occurred to me to ask whether it was a formal affair. So there were all the men in their monkey suits, and the ladies in their beautiful gowns. I was the only woman wearing a short dress.

"And of course, I was at my social best. A group of us were talking when this handsome fellow, who looked very familiar, joined us. I said, 'I'm sure I know you. Haven't we worked together?' And my boss, David Victor, murmured, 'Not likely, dear, unless you were wearing black trunks. Miss Verdugo, meet Sugar Ray Robinson.' "

Reigning as Her Honorary Mayorship over North Hollywood, a Los Angeles suburb in the San Fernando Valley, Elena is in a sense getting some of her own back. Her great-great-grandfather, Jose Maria Verdugo, owned the entire valley, now teeming with a population of over 1,000,000. Even today, the sun never rises on the valley until permitted to do so by the Verdugo mountains.

'TOBY': A CBS CHILDREN'S HOUR PRESENTATION

When a bunch of otherwise normal youngsters on vacation from school clamor to get back into a classroom in August, it would seem to be either an hallucination or a miracle. Actually it was neither when that very thing happened one beautiful, lazy day last summer in the lovely little Connecticut town of Ridgefield. It was television.

Robert Hennessey (top) and Barry Symonds play grade schoolers whose differing sense of values brings them into conflict with each other in Art Wallace's original full-hour drama "Toby."

Specifically, it was the television production of "Toby," the third of this season's CBS Children's Hour series of original hour-long drama specials on CBS, that served as the catalyst for what appeared to be the eighth wonder of the world.

The play by veteran writer Art Wallace, airing in color Saturday, April 18 at 12:30 PM, called for several key scenes to be filmed in and around the classrooms, halls and playground of a typical grade school in a typical American community. Consistent with the desire of the "CBS Children's Hour" to lend greater interest and identification for the series' young viewing audience by avoiding studio production in favor of actual location shooting, Ridgefield was chosen as the locale for the filming of "Toby."

With production set for the two middle weeks of August, and a crew dispatched to Ridgefield, there immediately arose the problem of what to do about those key scenes in a school that was closed for the summer.

The problem was resolved through an appeal to the local schoolboard and other town officials for youngsters to function as extras in the playground and classroom scenes necessary to the script of "Toby." The production staff wasn't any too sanguine about more than a dozen kids showing up in August in surroundings they were only too happy to quit in June. But never underestimate the glamour of television.

Better than 300 of the community's vacationing grade schoolers turned out to "audition" for roles as textbook-carrying supernumeraries, all but swamping the production company's offices in nearby Danbury. Unhappily for about half of them, only some 150 were needed, and these were picked with an eye to a cross-section of age, size and hair-coloring.

But those who were rejected came around anyway to watch the shooting from the sidelines, despite an atmosphere that must have joltingly reminded them that if summer comes, can Labor Day be far behind.

BRIGHT PROMISE REGULAR—Nancy Stephens, stars as Jennifer Matthews on NBC's daytime dramatic series Bright Promise in color Mondays through Fridays.

'JUST PLAIN STANLEY'

About the only thing "for sure" about Stanley Myron Handelman is that he is very, very funny.

Since this horn-rimmed, bespectacled young man, with a warm smile, soft delivery and ever-so-present cap, catapulted into national prominence a couple of years ago, people have been searching for the proper adjectives to describe his unique brand of humor. "He's a little like him . . . and something like you know who . . . with a quality a lot like . . ." His wife, Rita Myron Handelman, however, has the most accurate description. "He is Stanley Myron Handelman."

Stanley gained national recognition following some thirty guest appearances on the Merv Griffin show, which earned him a regular berth on Dean Martin's summer series for two seasons. As one might expect, following his enormous success on the Martin show, Stanley became (and currently is) a frequent guest star on many of television's fine variety hours.

Stanley Myron Handelman did not really start at the top in show business, although his boyish appearance belies his early struggle. A veteran of many "average guy" jobs, it was his employment as an athletic-social director at a Catskill (upper New York) resort, that led to his entry into show business.

"My job was to keep the clientele active. So as a means of communicating with the hotel guests—and doing my job—I would gain their attention by kidding around. I would set them up with a story, and then trick them at the end. More than a few people said, 'Say, you know you should get into show business.' So, here I am."

Stanley's style hasn't change a bit since those early days. One description of that style is "anti-comedy." Stanley does a whole story set-up, and then turns around the ending. "When everyone else is expecting me to turn left, I turn right."

"In Stanley Myron Handelman," said one critic, "there is real American humor . . . it's plain old kidding around."

Said another critic: "He lets people relax from the sophisticated chaos of this troubled world and gives them a look at their own little fantasies."

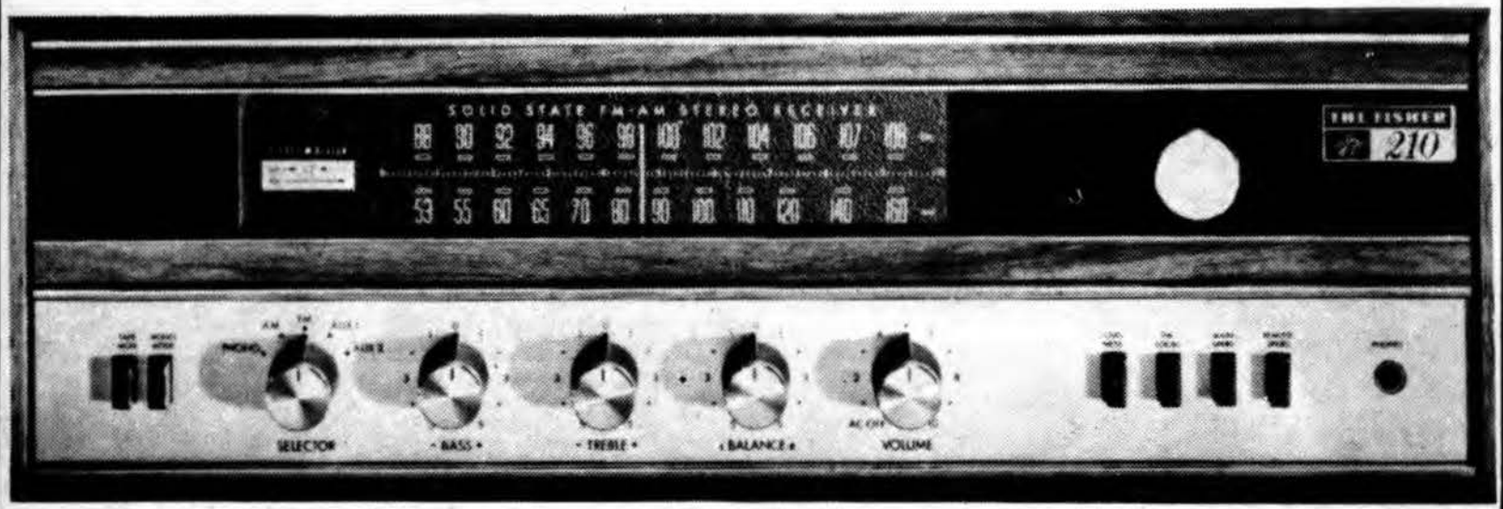

Summarized an Eastern writer: "Now how can a man with a wife named Rita Myron Handelman, a daughter Stephanie Myron Handelman, and a Beverly Hills home affectionately called "Derma," be full of nonsense?"

Stanley Myron Handelman is no mere characterization of a funny actor. He is a total, compleat person, as you see him. You don't have to meet Stanley backstage to find out who he "really" is.

He is an original.
