Fleeing Police

Cross Nearly Chokes Youth

A San Diego youth apparently tried to swallow the rosary he had been clutching and kissing for protection Thursday as he led California Highway Patrol cars on a high speed freeway chase from Los Alamitos to Laguna Hills.

When the pursuit ended in a crackup at 5:15 p.m., just north of Lake Forest Drive, CHP officers reported finding the string of religious beads wedged into the mouth of 20-year-old Carlos Lomeli Santana.

When officers pulled the beads out, they found that the crucifix normally attached to rosaries was missing and presumed caught in the suspect's throat.

Laguna Hills paramedics were summoned to the scene but couldn't find the cross. A county fire department spokesman said today they presumed it had been swallowed and would "show up eventually."

Santana miraculously suffered only minor injuries and was taken to Orange County Jail.

A CHP spokesman said Santana was booked on charges of driving under thinfluence of drugs and reckless driving.

The suspect was allegedly first spotted driving at more than 60 miles an hour along the center divider shoulder of the San Diego Freeway near Los Alamitos.

Officers gave chase in the rush-hour traffic but Santana allegedly floored the accelerator and reached speeds of more than 110 during the 20-mile pursuit.

Cox Defends UC Medical School Act

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox told the U.S. Supreme Court today that a special admissions program at a University of California medical school was needed to help minorities because "the other alternatives suggested simply will not work."

In oral arguments in the case of Allan Paul Bakke, Cox defended the so-called affirmative action program used by the university's medical school at Davis. He said the program aided minorities "long victimized by racial discrimination."

He was the first of three attorneys in the oral arguments to address the court in the Bakke "reverse discrimination" case, which many constitutional scholars believe will produce the court's most important statement on race relations since it outlawed segregation 23 years ago.

Bakke, who is white, successfully challenged the university's program before the California Supreme Court. He claimed the special admissions policy made him a victim of racial discrimination.

At stake in Bakke's case is the future of affirmative action programs, begun in the last 15 years to give special preference to minority members and women in education and business.

The California court ruled that such race-conscious programs are unconstitutional.

Cox argued today that the university's program — and most such programs — are not

Gangland Slaying Reported

BAY HARBOR ISLAND, Fla. (AP) — The stepson of underworld figure Meyer Lansky was shot to death today in what police speculate was a gangland revenge killing.

Richard Schwartz, 47, was shot once as he sat in his car behind a restaurant he owned in this exclusive resort city between Miami and Miami Beach, police said.

His body was found shortly after 9 a.m. EDT behind the Inside restaurant. Details of the slaying were not immediately available.

Schwartz, son of Lansky's wife, Thelma, had been scheduled to go on trial Nov. 28 on charges of killing his drinking companion, 29-year-old Craig Teriaca, son of underworld figure Vincent Teriaca.

A number of known mob figures attended Teriaca's funeral.

"The motive doesn't seem to be robbery or anything of that nature," police spokesman Ralph Page said. "It would be a logical conclusion that revenge is a good possibility. Considering who he is and the incident with Teriaca, we have to look at the revenge theory."

Teriaca was shot June 30 at the bar of The Forge restaurant before several witnesses. Police said Teriaca and Schwartz had been drinking together and the shooting occurred during an argument over a $10 bill left on the bar.

Three Orange Coast women were arrested on suspicion of conspiracy to commit prostitution Tuesday night by Newport Beach police.

Vice investigator John Simon said the three were taken into custody at a hotel during a meeting arranged with an undercover investigator.

Booked into city jail were Marjorie Reyburne, 30, of 19007 Vermont Lane, Huntington Beach; Vernell Lou Laurence, 41, of 1101 W. MacArthur Blvd., Santa Ana, and Toni Marie Lorance, 29, of 1935 Sherington Place, Newport Beach. All three were released after posting $250 bail.

Teen Girls Lured Into Prostitution?

NEWTON, N.J. (AP) — A cabinet maker and his wife have been accused of luring high school girls into a prostitution operation they ran from their home in Wantage Township.

Sussex County authorities charged Frank Barone, 57, Tuesday with impairing the morals of a minor, carnally abusing females under the age of 16 and prostitution. His wife, Diane, was charged with aiding and abetting him.

Authorities said at least nine girls were lured into prostitution since September 1976.

"He would pick up young female hitchhikers or he would use young girls as babysitters and in each case he would try to talk them into working for him as a prostitute," said prosecutor George Daggett.

Barone, reached at his attorney's office Tuesday, denied the charges. "They are blowing nothing into a big thing up there." About six girls "hung" around his house for a time, he said, adding they were friends of his live-in babysitter.

Daggett said charges would not be brought against any of the nine teen-agers, all high school students living with their parents in the general vicinity. "We are looking upon them as victims," he said.

He added, however, that the office was examining whether

Philippine 'Massacre' Asserted

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — A Moslem rebel leader claimed today that Philippine troops massacred about 400 Moslem civilians to avenge the deaths of an army general and 34 other government soldiers.

A government spokesman in Manila denied the claim made by Hatimil Hassan, highest-ranking leader of the Moro National Liberation Front, in a telephone interview from Zamboanga City.

Military authorities in Zamboanga ordered an "intensified punitive campaign" against rebels responsible for killing Brig. Gen. Teodulfo S. Bautista and his men. The government said they were on a peace mission with rebel leaders in Paticul on Jolo island when they were attacked Monday.

Hassan said "very reliable sources" had reported to him that "immediately after the incident, several families evacuating from the area, some of them riding in jeeps, were told to come down and were killed by the army."

Jolo island is 100 miles southwest of Zamboanga in the southern Philippines, where a nine-month-old cease-fire between government forces and Moslem rebels fighting for autonomy broke down last month.

HB Purchase

County Backs Bolsa Project

By KATHY CLANCY
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Orange County supervisors took additional steps Tuesday toward the purchase of park land which could link Huntington Beach Central Park with the Bolsa Chica marsh.

Supervisors unanimously ordered a study aimed at finding out how much it might cost to acquire 120 to 150 acres of park land stretching from Central Park to Pacific Coast Highway.

In addition, county planners will seek agreements with both state authorities and Huntington Beach city officials for joint planning in the marsh area.

Last June supervisors set aside $2 million to help finance what is envisioned as a possible 380-acre park stretching south from Central Park and around the marsh.

The link would run along Huntington Mesa bluff seaward and also stretch around the marsh reaching Warner Avenue.

Supervisors' action Tuesday included steps toward obtaining the first link, that running directly seaward from Central Park.

Action on the remainder will depend on how successful state authorities are at obtaining up to 924 acres of the Bolsa Chica marsh, as well as Huntington Beach city plans for the area along Warner and adjacent to Huntington Harbour.

This year's state budget includes $4.6 million to buy the marsh.

Jack Rayhart, a spokesman for the Anne Arundel County police, said citizens also would be shown photographs of the victims: Deborah Ann Hogan, 10; her 8-year-old sister, Theresa, and their friend Ann Marie Brzeszkiewicz, also 8.

Police said the sheath was found Monday near the small stream in a densely wooded area where the parka-clad bodies were discovered. The girls had disappeared Sunday while playing.

Authorities say they have not found the murder weapon.

Flags at Southgate Elementary School, which the girls attended, flew at half-staff Tuesday. "If they can fly them for generals, they can fly them for kids, too," said custodian Jim Winters.

Meanwhile, about 50 miles away in Carroll County, state police said a 9-year-old boy was found safe this morning more than 18 hours after he disappeared. Troopers said Thomas Doehrer was found wandering along a road about two miles from his rural Finksburg home. He had last been spotted about 4 p.m. Tuesday, playing in front of the house.

The youngster apparently had run away from home after a fight with a family member, they said.

More than 100 persons, along with a bloodhound and a state police helicopter, had taken part in the Carroll County search, they said.

Besides the knife sheath, police said they had only reports of a stranger in a blue Volkswagen and some undisclosed autopsy details to guide them in their investigation of the girls' murders.

"What we're withholding is very important to us. It's all we've got going for us," Sgt. William Chaplin of the Anne Arundel County homicide squad said of the autopsy reports.

"All indications are that it is somebody in the community," was all Lt. Robert Russell would say of the search for a suspect. "We are concentrating on the neighborhood."

Russell said two of the victims had been stabbed more than 40 times each.

Carter Signs Housing, City Aid Measure

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter signed a bill today providing $14.7 billion for housing the needy and revitalizing the cities, calling it "a giant step forward" in improving living conditions for low-income, elderly and handicapped families.

The measure includes $1.2 billion to help the families pay their rent.

Recalling his visit last week to the South Bronx slums in New York, Carter said he saw living conditions that are "a disgrace to our great country — enough to shake our confidence in the structure that we've evolved."

While there are no instant solutions to such housing problems, the President said, "This bill takes a giant step forward."

"In general, this is a very excellent piece of legislation," Carter told them. But he said one part of it, removing restraints on building homes in flood plains, caused him concern.

The President said he would determine whether to reinstate the restraints with corrective legislation next year or try to deal with the matter administratively.

The signing ceremony followed Carter's weekly breakfast with congressional leaders.

Employment Up; Jobless Rate Down

SACRAMENTO (AP) — California employment hit an all-time high in September while the jobless rate edged downward to 7.4 percent, the state reported today.

The Employment Development Department said there were 9,452,400 job-holders in the state last month, an increase of 100,000 since August.

Meanwhile, the total of unemployed looking for work dropped from 720,300 in August to 675,200 in September, the lowest since October 1974, the department said.

The jobless rate had been 7.5 percent in August. The national rate in September was 6.9 percent.

The department said all major industries in the state showed employment gains. It also said statistics from the 12-month period ended in September indicate a strong improvement in the job picture.

During that period, employment increased by 419,000, unemployment dropped by 132,000, and the jobless rate dropped from 9.2 percent to 7.4 percent.

That rate, however, does not include persons who have given up looking for work.

Carter Says Crisis 'Severe' in Energy

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter said today the energy crisis is "much more severe than it was six months ago" when he unveiled his energy program.

He promised to "go back to the country" to gain support for his proposals, many of which have been rejected by the Senate.

Carter told reporters that ever since he announced his energy program last April, "the oil companies have . . . on an almost hourly basis presented their point of view." He called that "completely legitimate" and said he didn't criticize the firms for the practice.

But, he said, "the basic struggle is whether or not the average family will be treated fairly," whether supplies will be adequate and international stability and national security will be maintained "or whether a special interest group can derive unwarranted advantage at the expense of the American people. . .

"I think it is important for me again to go back to the country and reaffirm the reasons, which have not changed, for the comprehensive energy policy we have adopted," Carter said.

Asked whether this meant he would go over the heads of members of Congress in appealing directly to the people for support, he replied: "No, I think I'll be working with most of the members of Congress."

only constitutional but virtually necessary.

He contended that special admissions program was "not a quota, at least as I would use the word."

Pressed by Justice Potter Stewart to explain his view, Cox said that the university's program "does not point a finger to any people, telling them 'you are inferior.' "

He said that unlike quotas against Jews and blacks used in the recent past, the special admissions program challenged by Bakke did not stigmatize any group.

"It did put a limit on the number of white people, didn't it?" Stewart asked.

Cox said the program was justified because it served the "objective of breaking down isolation," giving minorities the chance to join America's mainstream.

Solicitor General Wade McCree, arguing for the Carter administration as a friend-of-the-court, also urged the justices to overturn the California court ruling.

"To be blind to race today is to be blind to reality," he said.

He said that a supposedly neutral society cannot expect to see minorities who for so long have suffered discrimination to make significant gains.

Chief Justice Warren E. Burger asked McCree whether any racial discrimination had been practiced by the UC Davis medical school before the special admissions program was begun.

One of the worries civil rights leaders had over the Bakke case was that it could not be proven that the school, established in 1969, had any discriminatory history to be remedied.

Nixon Complex

Amtrak Wants Faster Speed

Amtrak officials say they'd like to step on it when they reach a five-mile stretch of railroad track near the 22-acre Nixon complex in San Clemente.

But a 40-mile-per hour limit for north and southbound Amtrak trains was imposed sometime during the Nixon presidential years for security reasons, says Arthur Lloyd, Western regional manager for the national rail system.

Lloyd said Amtrak would like to see that speed limit increased to 75 miles per hour from a curve in the tracks just north of San Clemente to just past the Nixon enclave.

"The Federal Railroad Administration and Amtrak itself have jurisdiction on speed limits on curves and the maximum speed that the track will allow," Lloyd said today.

"But where you have trackage that will allow more speed, local ordinances will restrict speed, for instance at grade crossings and for safety.

"And in the case of the Nixon thing, it was for security," Lloyd said.

But, he added, "We have shown that 40 miles per hour is not very practical north of town."

He said the maximum speed between San Diego and Santa Ana is 90 miles per hour, saying trains pick up that speed just past Del Mar and barrel along to San Clemente, with a few slowdowns on curves and crossings.

"Then they hit that 5.1 mile stretch that really slows them down," Lloyd said.

He said a 75-mile-per hour limit along the Nixon stretch, plus some other revised speeds, would save San Diego to Los Angeles travelers about 18 minutes.

Amtrak presented the increased speed plan proposal as part of a five-year plan issued in Washington. The plan also calls for increased service between the two cities and an increase from five daily roundtrips to seven.

U.S. Space Shuttle Successful

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE (AP) — In its most realistic test and fastest flight to date, the Space Shuttle Enterprise landed safely today after a diving descent simulating a return from space.

Flying for the first time without a streamlined tailcone used in the three previous flights to extend its gliding range, the shuttle dropped more steeply and swiftly, touching down only 2½ minutes after separating from the 747 jet that bore it aloft.

Minus the tailcone, the shuttle was about 30 feet shorter with a blunt, instead of pointed, rear end. This made the bulky space transport craft less buoyant and also caused the carrier to strain and shake while taking the Enterprise to launch altitude.

The added drag during the climb over the desert caused the separation to be delayed by minutes while the 747 struggled higher.

After casting free of the mother ship, the shuttle was guided by astronauts Joe Engle, 45, and Richard Truly, 39, through a few quick maneuvers before touching down on a dry lake bed at about 250 miles per hour, somewhat faster than previous landings.

Unlike the previous flights, today's glide, carried live on national television, was so short that the shuttle was unable to make a leisurely U-turn and many test maneuvers before landing.

All previous U.S. manned space flights ended with costly and complex ocean splashdowns.

High Court Hears Bakke 'Race Case'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox told the U.S. Supreme Court today that a special admissions program at a University of California medical school is needed to help minorities because "the other alternatives suggested simply will not work."

In oral arguments in the case of Allan Paul Bakke, Cox defended the so-called affirmative action program used by the university's med school at Davis. He said the program aided minorities "long victimized by racial discrimination."

Bakke, who is white, successfully challenged the university's program before the California Supreme Court. He claimed it made him a victim of racial discrimination.

Bakke's "reverse discrimination" case is considered by many constitutional scholars to set the stage for the high court's most important statement on race relations since it outlawed segregation 23 years ago.

At stake in Bakke's case is the future of affirmative action programs, begun in the last 15 years to give special preference to minority members and women in education and business.

Bakke's attorney, Reynold Colvin of San Francisco, urged the justices to affirm the California Supreme Court decision.

Colvin argued that the Constitution's guarantee of "equal protection" for all citizens is violated when a school takes into account an applicant's race — making that factor a "crucial" one.

"The use of race as a basis for admission to a medical school, or for granting any other rights, is improper," he argued.

Race should be considered only as it provides a clue to the applicant's total evaluation, he said.

Considering race, Colvin said, "is permissible only to the extent it gives some clue to the admissions committee whether there was a prior history of economic or educational deprivation or persecution."

Bakke's legal briefs have contended that in such cases, giving special preference to economically or educationally deprived applicants would be acceptable.

Colvin appeared to displease at least one member of the court, Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr., by devoting the first 20 minutes of his allotted 45 minutes to reciting the case's facts.

"I'm here primarily to hear constitutional arguments," Powell said in a gentle rebuke. "I would like some help with the constitutional issues."

Colvin quickly complied, stressing that Bakke was deprived admission to the medical school solely because he is white, an automatic violation of the Constitution.

ELVATON, Md. (AP) — A teen-age youth was arrested and charged today in the stabbing murders of three young girls who disappeared while playing and were found lying by a stream near their homes in this Baltimore suburb, police said.

A spokesman for Anne Arundel County police identified the suspect as Stuart Kreiner, 16, of the same Southgate community where the girls lived and where their bodies were found Monday.

Authorities said Kreiner had been charged with three counts of first-degree murder. They said they had no other suspects in the case.

Investigators said they had found a knife and jacket that led to the youth's arrest. They also said the suspect's family had been extremely cooperative in the investigation.

Immediately after separation, Engle and Truly were told from the ground they were some 1,500 feet higher than planned for the course.

The pilots then opened the speed brake, a pair of hinged flaps on the shuttle's tail that slowed it and dropped it to the desired position.

Mesans Ask Zone Change

Citizens Seek General Plan Amendment

About 100 residents of Costa Mesa came to a planning meeting Tuesday to tell commissioners they want their neighborhood below 17th Street left lone.

More than 24 citizens stood up to speak about a request to the planning commission to amend their area's general plan designation, and a recommendation by the city planning staff for some zoning changes.

Residents told commissioners Tuesday that they like things the way they are. Most people in lots zoned for medium-density use said they want to keep the option of building a second unit or duplex on their property.

Speakers who live in single-family zones said they prefer to keep their neighborhoods that way.

Commissioners, who did recommend the general plan change to the city council after the public hearing, told the audience that this change was necessary to preserve the area's character.

However, commissioners also recommended that the council rezone part of the area to preserve open space.

The issues were so complicated that staff members and commission Chairman C. C. Clarke had to explain the details twice. Even then, some speakers seemed confused.

Clarke explained that there is a difference between a general plan designation and zoning. Zoning indicates what may be built and for what uses on a specific piece of property.

Low-income Housing Eyed

Members of Costa Mesa's Housing and Community Development Committee said Tuesday they would like to spend $500,000 in federal funds to help develop low-income housing in the city.

That figure represents more than half of the $900,000 in federal funds available to the city for housing.

The committee is seeking the public's opinions and will hold a public hearing at 7:30 p.m. Oct. 20 at Rea Middle School, 601 Hamilton St., Costa Mesa.

Agents Recover $600,000 in Stolen Goods

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — More than 100 people have been indicted as the result of the biggest "sting" in the history of U.S. law enforcement, the FBI said today.

Local, state and federal agents manned phony fencing operations in an apartment in Virginia Beach and a pool hall in Newport News. They took in more than $600,000 in stolen goods, and most of the transactions were videotaped, said Herb Clough, special agent in charge of the Norfolk FBI office.

The goods ranged from a bottle of baby formula, stolen during a house break-in, to a forklift truck. There were hubcaps, tape recorders and luxury cars.

Clough said 107 people faced 276 charges ranging from homicide to robbery. The indictments were returned Tuesday by special grand juries.

Sixty-six of those charged had been arrested by this morning, Clough said, in Norfolk, Virginia Beach, Newport News, Richmond, Fredericksburg and upstate New York.

The operation, code-named Talon, involved seven local police departments, the FBI and state police.

Federal money left over from Operation Seawall, a similar operation in Norfolk earlier this year, was used to fund the "sting."

The number of indictments from Operation Talon is the biggest ever, Clough said.

In some cases, the alleged sellers of stolen merchandise talked freely with the undercover agents, and one man reportedly confessed to a murder before the hidden camera.

New State Law

District Must Pay

Newport Beach and Costa Mesa taxpayers will have to pay out more than $1.3 million to other school districts by 1981 under a new law, Newport-Mesa school trustees were told Tuesday.

Norman R. Loats, deputy superintendent of the Newport-Mesa Unified School District, said the money must be paid under AB 65, a new law aimed at equalizing expenditures per student between wealthy and poor school districts.

A schedule presented to the board shows that the district must turn over to the state $782,540 in 1978-79, $1.2 million in 1979-80, and $1.3 million in 1980-81.

Jean Harmon, executive assistant to the superintendent, said the Newport-Mesa district's budget growth is also restricted under the law, with 2.3 percent growth permitted next year. That is not enough to offset inflation, she said.

"The effect of the law is to penalize wealthy districts, and we are that," Mrs. Harmon said.

The school finance law is a result of the Serrano vs. Priest court decision, which held that it is unfair to penalize students financially just because they live in poor school districts.

The bill's goal, Mrs. Harmon explained, is to bring the amount spent per student in each California school district to within $00 of that spent in all other school districts in the state.

Planners Seeking East Mesa Rezone

Planning commissioners recommended Tuesday that a chunk of east Costa Mesa be redesignated in the city's general plan for multiple-family rather than single-family dwellings.

Ten residents of the area stood up to speak, most requesting that the area remain designated single-family. However, the area is zoned in part for multiple-family units and in part for single homes and commissioners said the general plan designation must be one that permits both types of zoning.

The area in question is bounded by Mesa Drive, Irvine Avenue, Santa Isabel Avenue and Orange Avenue.

The area was studied after George Woods Jr. and Peter Nourse requested permits to build condominium units on Santa Ana Avenue that were permitted under current zoning but not by the general plan.

The city's zoning in many cases predates the 1970 general plan. Under a 1974 state law, zoning and general plan designations must be brought into agreement.

In other action, commissioners recommended that the city council rezone property between the San Diego Freeway and Yukon Avenue west of Bear Street from commercial to residential, to conform to the general plan.

Also recommended was a change from neighborhood commercial and medium density residential to high density residential for some land between Newport Boulevard and Elden Avenue along Monte Vista Avenue.

Commissioners said they would like to see more housing developments adjacent to Newport Boulevard. Townhouses are proposed for that property.

REZONE. . .

indicates on a larger scale what types of uses the city believes should be developed in the long run in different areas.

However, much of the zoning now in existence predates the general plan, which was adopted in 1970. Under a state law passed in 1974, zoning and general plan designations must be compatible. Where they are in conflict, one or the other must be changed.

The area in question is bounded by 17th Street, Tustin Avenue, 15th Street and Orange Avenue. Most of the area is zoned for either single-family homes or medium-density residential development.

However, the general plan designated the area for low density, which would permit single homes only.

The issue arose when developer Peter Nourse sought to build a 10-unit condominium project, which would meet zoning requirements but not the general plan.

Chairman Clarke said that changing the general plan designation to medium-density residential would permit both types of existing zoning.

However, the commission also recommended to the city council that most of the area between 15th and 16th streets and between Orange and Santa Ana Avenues, currently zoned for medium density, be rezoned so that multi-family dwellings could only be built if lots were combined.

Planning Director Charles Roberts said this change was requested because if multiple units were built there, as is currently permitted, on the present lots there would be little usable open space. He said that in larger projects the space can be better planned.

Commissioners also pointed out that at present most of the lots can't have units added because water mains are inadequate and, until they are replaced, a fire hazard would exist.

Police said the sheath was found Monday near the small stream in a densely wooded area where the parka-clad bodies were discovered. The girls had disappeared Sunday.

Meanwhile, about 50 miles away in Carroll County, state police said a 9-year-old boy was found safe this morning more than 18 hours after he disappeared. Troopers said Thomas Doehrer was found wandering along a road about two miles from his rural Finksburg home. He had last been spotted about 4 p.m. Tuesday, playing in front of the house.

The youngster apparently had run away from home after a fight with a family member, they said.

More than 100 persons, along with a bloodhound and a state police helicopter, had taken part in the Carroll County search, they said.

Employment Up; Jobless Rate Down

SACRAMENTO (AP) — California employment hit an all-time high in September while the jobless rate edged downward to 7.4 percent, the state reported today.

The Employment Development Department said there were 9,452,400 job-holders in the state last month, an increase of 100,000 since August.

Meanwhile, the total of unemployed looking for work dropped from 720,300 in August to 675,200 in September, the lowest since October 1974, the department said.

The jobless rate had been 7.5 percent in August. The national rate in September was 6.9 percent.

The department said all major industries in the state showed employment gains. It also said statistics from the 12-month period ended in September indicate a strong improvement in the job picture.

That rate, however, does not include persons who have given up looking for work.

Teen Girls Held In Mesa Burglary

Two 14-year-old Costa Mesa girls were arrested Tuesday after they allegedly stole $326 from a gas station and hid the money in a planter.

Police said the incident occurred about 1 p.m. at the Exxon station at 2600 Newport Blvd. The station attendant reported that the two girls, after chatting with him,, took the money from a drawer while he was helping a customer.

CHP Nabs Speeder In Laguna Hills

A San Diego youth apparently tried to swallow the rosary he had been clutching and kissing for protection Thursday as he led California Highway Patrol cars on a high speed freeway chase from Los Alamitos to Laguna Hills.

When the pursuit ended in a crackup at 5:15 p.m., just north of Lake Forest Drive, CHP officers reported finding the string of religious beads wedged into the mouth of 20-year-old Carlos Lomeli Santana.

When officers pulled the beads out, they found that the crucifix normally attached to rosaries was missing and presumed caught in the suspect's throat.

Laguna Hills paramedics were summoned to the scene but couldn't find the cross. A county fire department spokesman said today they presumed it had been swallowed and would "show up eventually."

Santana miraculously suffered only minor injuries and was taken to Orange County Jail.

A CHP spokesman said Santana was booked on charges of driving under thinfluence of drugs and reckless driving.

The suspect was allegedly first spotted driving at more than 60 miles an hour along the center divider shoulder of the San Diego Freeway near Los Alamitos.

Bomb Threat Quelled in NY

NEW YORK (AP) — A bomb that police say could have hurt "thousands" of lunchtime strollers outside the General Motors building was found five minutes before it was set to go off. But another bomb did explode outside the New York Public Library, damaging a statue and fountain.

Police blamed a Puerto Rican terrorist group, FALN, for both incidents Tuesday because of a letter found in a telephone booth near Central Park.

A Costa Mesa woman returned after a brief absence Tuesday and found that $4,820 in camera equipment and jewelry had been stolen, police said.

Speedup Sought

Amtrak Raps 'Nixon Limit'

Amtrak officials say they'd like to step on it when they reach a five-mile stretch of railroad track near the 22-acre Nixon complex in San Clemente.

But a 40-mile-per hour limit for north and southbound Amtrak trains was imposed sometime during the Nixon presidential years for security reasons, says Arthur Lloyd, Western regional manager for the national rail system.

Lloyd said Amtrak would like to see that speed limit increased to 75 miles per hour from a curve in the tracks just north of San Clemente to just past the Nixon enclave.

"The Federal Railroad Administration and Amtrak itself have jurisdiction on speed limits on curves and the maximum speed that the track will allow," Lloyd said today.

"But where you have trackage that will allow more speed, local ordinances will restrict speed, for instance at grade crossings and for safety.

"And in the case of the Nixon thing, it was for security," Lloyd said.

But, he added, "We have shown that 40 miles per hour is not very practical north of town."

He said the maximum speed between San Diego and Santa Ana is 90 miles per hour, saying trains pick up that speed just past Del Mar and barrel along to San Clemente, with a few slowdowns on curves and crossings.

"Then they hit that 5.1 mile stretch that really slows them down," Lloyd said.

He said a 75-mile-per hour limit along the Nixon stretch, plus some other revised speeds, would save San Diego to Los Angeles travelers about 18 minutes.

Amtrak presented the increased speed plan proposal as part of a five-year plan issued in Washington. The plan also calls for increased service between the two cities and an increase from five daily roundtrips to seven.

FORMER PRESIDENT NIXON'S SAN CLEMENTE ESTATE TO BE TOURIST ATTRACTION
A Single-day Charity Event to Boost the City's 50th Birthday Celebration

Nixon Estate Opened

Public Tours of Grounds Historical First

By The Associated Press

The grounds of former President Richard Nixon's 22-acre San Clemente estate will be opened to tourists for the first time during a one-day charity event this winter, a San Clemente Chamber of Commerce official says.

The bus tours, set for Feb. 26, 1978, were announced Tuesday by Alex Goodman, executive manager of the chamber of commerce. He described them as a fund-raising and educational venture celebrating this seaside city's 50th anniversary.

"We appreciate this offer from the Nixon family and want the public to know we are not paying them anything for the privilege," Goodman said.

"All proceeds from the ticket sales will go to the chamber to cover expenses for the birthday celebration," including a cocktail party and a beer party for the city's 28,000 residents.

Goodman estimated that 4,300 people would pay $2.50 for the 25-minute bus tour through Nixon's La Casa Pacifica, a $1.4 million dollar estate that includes a Spanish-style mansion and guest house, swimming pool, golf course and helipad.

Nixon moved into the mansion in 1969, and four years later a group of prominent Republican businessmen financed construction of the $200,000 golf course.

The buses will leave San Clemente High School at 10-minute intervals between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m., and guides will provide commentary on the history of the area and the Nixon family, Goodman said.

Goodman said no one will be allowed off the tour buses. It is not known yet whether Nixon himself will greet the tourists.

Other homes in the area in the fenced Cypress Shores seaside development where Nixon's house is located may be included in the tour, Goodman said.

"I think a lot of people would like to see a little bit of history," Goodman said. He added that during the summer, more than 500 people a day stand outside the gates of the Nixon complex taking photographs.

The chamber executive said arrangements for the opening were made by Jack Brennan, a former Marine Corps colonel and Nixon's top aide. Brennan was unavailable for comment on the tour Tuesday.

A handful of Secret Service are assigned to Nixon, as they are to all former Presidents or their widows, and a guard at the gate of Cypress Shores provides additional security for the complex.

Theater Closure Sought

An Orange County Superior Court hearing into allegations that the Mitchell Brothers Santa Ana theater is showing obscene movies resumed today before a judge who is being asked to issue an injunction.

If Judge Lester Van Tatenhove signs the order sought by the city of Santa Ana, the Honer Plaza theater would be closed until trial of the issue raised in the city's civil action.

Lawyers for the city said they intend to include in their courtroom evidence a number of still photographs depicting scenes from movies shown at the theater between October of 1975 and March of 1977.

They claim that the photographs will prove that at least 48 movies shown during that 18 month period are obscene, without redeeming social value and in violation of the city's anti-obscenity ordinance.

Lawyers for the Mitchell Brothers chain argue that the city ordinance is unconstitutional and that any closure of the Honer Plaza theater would amount to denial of free speech.

They have pointed out that similar attempts by other California communities to prevent showing in Mitchell theaters of movies condemned as obscene have been unsuccessful.

Judge Van Tatenhove is expected to rule today on the issue of whether the coming trial will be before jurors or will be nonjury.

Lawyers for defendants James and Artie Mitchell would prefer a jury. Lawyers for the city feel that Judge Van Tatenhove should rule on the obscenity issue.

Mondale Named, Not Carter

NEW YORK (AP) — Vice President Walter Mondale made it onto the Custom Tailors Guild of America's Best Dressed List. His boss won't get there until he stops being "indifferent and careless" in his sartorial habits.

"Although he has considerably improved his dress habits since becoming president, Jimmy Carter is a far cry from being a well-dressed man," the Guild said in releasing its list.

The men who won a spot on the list are hardly a consistent field of blue serge. Vess Duro, president of the guild, noted that they range from "the conservative, dignified tastes of Vice President Mondale to the flamboyancy and contemporary elegance of Joe Namath."

The Guild's Top Ten: Mondale, in politics; Namath, in sports; Burt Reynolds, in motion pictures; Don Rickles, in television; Percy Foreman, Houston, Tex., attorney, in law; Monty Hall, in philanthropy; singer John Denver, in music; comic Frank Gorshin, in night clubs; Mel Boldt, head of the Chicago industrial design firm of Mel Boldt & Associates, in industry and Vito Pascucci, president of Leblanc Corp., Kenosha, Wis., in business.

Spiders Encircling SF

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — As San Francisco Bay area residents gaped skyward Tuesday at massive white webs floating above them, experts dismissed the phenomenon as an eons-old ritual performed annually by millions of baby spiders.

The mysterious white stuff, spotted in blobs as huge as 20 feet long and a few feet wide, appeared in the clear blue skies and draped itself over cars, homes, trees and people.

Stanley Bailey, a retired University of California entomologist, said that while the webs are not unusual in central California, even he was surprised by the hundreds spotted along the Pacific coast. He said they portend a population boom among spiders.

"All the environmental conditions are probably right," speculated Lennie Vincent, a graduate entomologist specializing in spiders at UC Berkeley.

Vincent explained that the huge webs are made up of millions of smaller ones woven by spiders so they can use the wind to migrate.

Residents as far as 100 miles from San Francisco reported seeing the webs float by their moving cars, wrap themselves around light poles and cling to building facades and trees. The web was described as a cross between a spider web, cotton candy and fiberglass, although some people said it was "super thick" or had "big white wads on it."

Pilots landing at San Joe Airport said their crafts caught parts of the webs at 4,000 feet, and Ron Knarr, 21, said it whomped his tennis ball in nearby Pleasant Hill.

"One came down, a big one, about four feet long, and covered my tennis ball. I threw it up to serve it and it went 'Whoop!' It was really weird," he said.

OC to Hire Lawyers for Noise Claims

Private attorneys will be hired to assist County Counsel Adrian Kuyper in defending 265 personal damage claims brought against the county because of Orange County Airport noise, supervisors decided Tuesday.

Kuyper was asked to prepare a list of private law firms with the expertise to handle upcoming airport jet noise lawsuits. He also is to submit another list of adjustor-investigator firms to assist in trial preparation.

Kuyper told supervisors he did not know how much the outside help might cost but he was told to report those costs every two months.

He said his own office is not staffed to handle all of the legal and clerical work necessary.

The plaintiffs, who reside near the airport, contend jet noise has had an adverse effect on their health and has lowered property values.

Two Plead Guilty

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Two former officials of a defunct Arizona land firm have pleaded guilty in federal court to reduced charges in a $5.3 million swindle by New Life Trust Inc. Cecil Bateman, 59, of Oklahoma City, and Donald F. Steward Jr., 35, of Novato, Calif., were among five persons indicted by a federal grand jury last April on charges of mail fraud.

Slow-flow Faucets Planned in County

As a means of conserving water, new homes and offices in Orange County soon will be equipped with low-flow faucets and have water heaters no farther than 25 feet from hot water spigots.

Tuesday Orange County supervisors ordered revisions to the county uniform plumbing codes to require the water-saving technique in new construction.

The revisions were recommended to supervisors by the six-member committee, which included building officials from three county cities, as well as building and plumbing experts.

Supervisors also asked county planners to require the maximum possible use of landscaping that requires little water in new developments.

The committee, created last May, also studied a proposal to require that new buildings be equipped with toilets using 3.5 gallons of water per flush instead of the current five to seven gallons.

State law starting next January will require the water-conserving toilets in new homes.

But committee members said manufacturers have not yet perfected the device and those currently available sometimes cause sewer problems.

Buena Park police said Gordon McDowell, 51, of Mira Loma, was attempting to climb aboard his moving engine when he slipped and fell.

Officers said McDowell's left leg was severed at the knee and the train wheels also severed several toes on his right foot.

He underwent surgery after the 11:10 a.m. accident at West Anaheim Community Hospital, police said. The accident occurred on the Southern Pacific Railway crossing near Western Avenue.

FATIMA, Portugal (AP) — Pilgrims jammed this village in central Portugal today and spilled over into the fields around as they prepared for the closing Thursday of the annual holy season at the Roman Catholic shrine of Fatima. More than 20,000 persons were expected for the rites at the chapel on the spot where the Virgin Mary is said to have appeared before three little shepherd children on May 13, 1917, and to have returned on the 13th of the month for the next five months.

DIAMOND FREEDOMS
'don't flush them away'

Anytime you think that the American system is tightening the screws too much on your personal freedoms, consider this:

When a Russian bigshot got promoted to the top position in the Communist Party of Soviet Georgia, he went at his new job bare-handed. You see, Mr. Bigshot didn't like jewelry. So, he called a meeting of other party bigwigs, sat them down, and had them place their hands on the table. Mr. Bigshot's hands were bare, but the other leaders of the "classless society" showed fingers and wrists that glittered with diamonds. "Get rid of them" was the order. We don't know if they flushed them down the drain, or what. But, if they did, they were acting like capitalists, because, according to insurance reports, more than $25 million in diamonds has been lost in American sewers and garbage cans during the past 20 years. So be careful. In America you can keep your diamonds. Don't flush your freedom down the drain!

DEATH AND TAXES: Our coastal assemblyman, Ron Cordova, the Democrat from El Toro, is back in our region and still banging away at the issue of property tax reform.

Cordova was down in our coastal southerly section only yesterday, speaking before the Capistrano Valley Exchange Club on the property tax situation.

In this area, the freshman assemblyman graded the California Legislature on how it attacked the problem.

He suggested that the Legislature flunked.

You may recall back when the solons were in Sacramento session, our man Cordova ended up in the eye of the property tax reform hurricane when he refused to support a measure that was the darling of most of the Democrats.

FOR HIS TROUBLE, he got verbally flayed on the Assembly floor by one Willie Brown, the Democrat from San Francisco. Brown, of course, isn't going to have anything loving to say about any legislator who doesn't line up with his own liberal viewpoint.

Cordova had taken the view that the alleged tax reform measure was in reality more of a Robin Hood bill — giving no tax relief to those who pay the most and aiding only the lower brackets.

In his talk down in the Capistrano Valley, Cordova declared he plans to introduce a homeowner's tax exemption bill in the next round when the lawmakers gather in Sacramento.

This plan would carry many of the ideas suggested by our own Orange County Assessor Bradley Jacobs.

Thus the homeowners tax exemption would be increased from $1,750 to $2,500 each year.

Then the exemption would be allowed to "float." Maybe this is something like floating currency.

ANYWAY, WHAT it means is that as the property value on a home is increased by the county assessor, the exemption would increase in direct proportion.

Additionally, the Cordova-Jacobs proposal would also allow an extra $125 exemption for each year a homeowner files for an exemption on the same property.

That might be envisioned as a slight curb against those who would be tempted to sell off on speculation of a fat profit.

Despite his having locked horns with Willie Brown and others of the liberal wing, Cordova still envisions some form of property tax relief being passed by our august Legislature before the solons fold up in September of 1978.

THAT LEAVES JUST about one year for a lot of pondering. And you can bet on considerable speech-making in the interim.

Cordova, however, probably went to the core of the question when he warned, "I'm not going to support a bill that would bankrupt the state."

And that means if you reduce taxes, then government has only three choices: 1. Go into debt; 2. Reduce spending a like amount; 3. Find a new source to tax.

It's that third choice you have to worry about.

Israelis Accept Proposal

JERUSALEM (AP) — The Israeli cabinet has unanimously accepted the Carter administration's tentative proposal for Palestinian representation at a new Geneva peace conference.

A State Department spokesman in Washington said the Israeli decision Tuesday was a step forward, but he cautioned that the Arab states may demand changes in the still-secret "working paper" the Israelis accepted.

THE KEY POINT of dispute is expected to be the question of participation by the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) in the proposed Arab-Israeli peace talks. In announcing the Israeli decision, cabinet Secretary Arieh Naor renewed Israel's refusal to negotiate with the PLO.

Meanwhile, PLO spokesman Faruk Kaddumi told the United Nations General Assembly in New York that there will be "no peace without the Palestinians and no Palestinians without the PLO." He also said Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan's statement Monday that Israel will not give up the West Bank of the Jordan and the Gaza Strip means the PLO's "armed struggle will continue."

THE STATE Department spokesman said the working paper would now be presented to the Arabs for consideration. The proposal deals only with the procedures for reconvening the suspended Geneva conference and not with the substantive issues to be negotiated at the peace conference.

It is understood that the working paper, completed in talks between President Carter and Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan last week, calls for a three-stage peace conference.

IN THE OPENING phase, Israel would face a unified Arab delegation including Palestinian representatives. The talks would then break up into bilateral working groups in which Israel would negotiate relevant issues with each Arab state individually. Finally, the Israelis would meet with Jordan, Egypt and the Palestinians to decide the future of the Gaza Strip and the West Bank.

New Treaty To Reduce Nuke Arms

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new treaty being worked out with the Russians would reduce nuclear weapon stockpiles, slow the development of new arms and set separate ceilings on major missile systems, according to Carter administration officials.

They told The Associated Press that while the negotiations now centered in Geneva are far from over, the emerging pact represents major achievements toward the goal of arms reduction.

BUT ON Capitol Hill, as details emerged, there were predictions of a clash with Congress. One knowledgeable source said the U.S. position had collapsed since March, when Carter proposed a comprehensive mutual weapons cutback that was rejected by the Kremlin.

Initial questioning will begin Thursday when Secretary of State Cyrus Vance appears before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee to testify on weapons negotiations as well as on administration efforts to arrange a Middle East peace conference by Christmas.

VANCE IS to be questioned on Friday by the Senate arms control subcommittee, headed by Henry Jackson (D-Wash.), a leading hard-liner who has warned of concessions to the Russians in past Republican administrations as well as the present Democratic one.

Among the principal features of the new treaty are restraints on the development of Russian intercontinental ballistic missiles that pack multiple warheads and a temporary range limit on cruise missiles carried by the American bomber force.

BOTH POINTS could be considered concessions to the United States as the Soviets had resisted constraints on modernizing their missiles and wanted to impose permanent limits on the jet-powered cruise drones.

However, it was learned the Soviets would be allowed about 300 heavy missiles, double the total initially pushed by the Carter administration.

Jody Powell, the White House press secretary, said on Tuesday that the administration would not make any concession not matched by the Russians.

Crime Rate Drops

FBI Reports Decline of 7 Percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's crime rate dropped 7 percent in the first half of this year compared with the first six months of 1976, the FBI reported today.

New York, Detroit, Philadelphia, Los Angeles, Chicago and Boston all posted lower crime rates than during the same period a year ago.

But the trend, while encouraging, was not conclusive.

Rape soared 8 percent, and assaults were up 4 percent. Although most big cities reported lower overall crime rates, Houston listed an unexplained 12 percent increase, and some smaller Sun Belt cities also had higher crime rates.

The statistics are contained in the FBI report on the number of murders, rapes, assaults, robberies, burglaries, larcenies and motor vehicle thefts reported to more than 9,700 law enforcement agencies across the country.

The overall national crime rate for the first six months of 1977 was 7 percent below the figure for the same period a year ago.

The FBI reports covering the last nine months have shown declining crime rates, compared with the same periods of the previous year.

"This is encouraging evidence that the surge of crime in recent years is ebbing," said Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell. "However, the number of violent crimes — those against persons — remains high."

The latest report showed murder was down 2 percent and robbery dropped 5 percent, but the number of assaults rose 4 percent.

NATO Undecided on Warhead

Neutron Bomb in Limbo

BARI, Italy (AP) — NATO's Nuclear Planning Group ended a two-day meeting today without any decision on deployment of the controversial neutron bomb.

Despite urging from U.S. Defense Secretary Harold Brown, alliance defense ministers considered political objections far too important for any quick decision on the weapon. It is designed for use against troops but spares buildings except in the impact area.

THE CLOSED meeting in this southern Italian city on the Adriatic raised no objection to the "military utility" of the warhead for tactical use, particularly against any Soviet tank thrust in Europe.

But "emotional and political" opposition was reported in most NATO countries, including the United States.

Objections have been raised, particularly by western Europe's growing and outspoken left, that the nuclear warhead is immoral.

ANOTHER POINT of the weapon's opponents is that because it is compact and designed for battlefield use in Europe, temptation may be greater for its fast use, thus increasing the likelihood of a larger nuclear confrontation.

The seven-nation group did not need unanimity to decide for or against the weapon. The United States had considered "substantial consensus as being sufficient to begin production."

BUT KEY NATIONS where the warhead would be deployed — West Germany, Britain and Italy — seemed far away from any yes-or-no decision on the matter.

And the United States told the allies that the neutron warhead is only for European use and it won't be produced until there is a decision on its deployment by European allies.

AFTER ANOTHER delay, no decision seemed likely for some months, but it may figure during President Carter's Brussels stopover on his four-continent swing next month.

The warheads are for use in ground-to-ground Lance missiles or firing from 155-millimeter howitzers. Some 7,000 nuclear warheads are already deployed in Europe but equipped with different and what NATO officials call "dirtier" warheads.

BROWN TOLD allied defense ministers that the small neutron warhead would "kill fewer people to accomplish the same military effect." Within its impact area, it would kill humans while doing only limited damage to objects, but civilian population in adjacent areas would be spared along with objects.

The Alliance's Nuclear Planning Group is composed of seven members, with the United States, West Germany, Britain and Canada permanent and three rotating ones, this time Belgium, Denmark and Greece.

State Legal Aid Rejected by Senate

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate today rejected a move by opponents of a federally financed program of legal service for the poor to have the program administered by the states.

The vote was 67-to-23.

Sen. Jesse Helms (R-N.C.), proposed the state administered program, arguing that "as much responsibility as possible ought to be returned to the states and the local communities."

SEN. JACOB JAVITS (R-N.Y.), argued against the proposal, saying: "We should treat the poor, wherever they may be, on an equal basis.

"If we interpose the states, we will have different programs in different states and perhaps in some states no program at all," Javits said.

A compromise bill granting a three-year extension to the Legal Services Corporation, which administers the program, appeared headed for Senate passage.

Freedom In Our Hands

When you read your local newspaper, you hold freedom in your hands; and we, as America's newspaper publishers and editors hold much of your freedom in our hands as we exercise freedom of the press.

When a government desires to preempt some or all of the freedoms of its people, it moves first to restrict the press so that its later actions will escape the scrutiny of public attention. If you value your vote or your privacy, your right to your own religious beliefs or your right to petition your government — or any of the many individual rights we enjoy as Americans — then a free press is essential to safeguard your freedoms.

At the Daily Pilot we have a direct personal interest in your freedom for we share it with you. Freedom of the press is not ours alone. It is yours, too. A free press and a free people are inseparable.

Energy Savings Proposed

SACRAMENTO (AP) — The California Energy Commission is being urged to publish the names of energy gluttons, which presumably would embarrass them into taking conservation to heart.

Another energy-saving proposal calls for fiberglass window screens instead of expensive double-paned glass.

RICHARD MAULLIN, chairman of the commission, recently solicited comment from the public on how the commission should spend its $20-million annual budget, which comes from surcharges on electricity bills.

About 125 responses came in, by mail or at public meetings.

Stephanie Bradfield, commission spokeswoman, said Tuesday that some of the suggestions may be followed up.

But she said information about how much electricity an individual uses cannot be published because it is private.

ROY J. SMITH, PROFESSOR emeritus at the University of California, Riverside, suggested making public a list of who uses exorbitant amounts of energy.

Phifer Western Co. of the City of Industry has developed fiberglass window screen that the company says performs almost as well as double-paned glass, Ms. Bradfield said.

"They want the commission to make standards that require the industry to double the weave in a window screen," she said.

THE COMMISSION would be interested "if that really works as well as double-paned windows in a more inexpensive way to build conservation into buildings," Ms. Bradfield said.

Among other suggestions was one from a Mission Viejo woman who says a lot of energy can be saved by making coffee, then putting it into a vacuum bottle.

A Sacramento man complained that gas is wasted by lines of cars at drive-through fast-food restaurants or banks with drive-up windows.

ANOTHER SUGGESTION would call for the building of 30 percent of a structure's windows so they can be opened.

One writer wants the commission to set up a new department devoted to the public's ideas.

Ms. Bradfield said the list of ideas will be "real interesting for the commissioners to see. We may do more things like this."

Power Struggle Cited

SAN DIEGO (AP) — California Atty. Gen. Evelle J. Younger says there is an apparent struggle under way for control of the Mafia or organized crime in California.

There have been 125 gang-related slayings in the state in the past three years, although many appear related to prison-gang activities, Younger said Tuesday.

"THERE IS SERIOUS competition for leadership, serious competition initiated by increased activity" among mob members in California, he said.

Younger also pointed to a heavy influx of so-called "retired Mafia" members into California, but he added that many law enforcement authorities believe that it is impossible for any Mafia member to retire.

IN A SPEECH TO THE Chula Vista chapter of the National Management Association, Younger said California is very attractive to organized crime of all kinds and residents have the same frailties they do in other states — they gamble, bet, buy narcotics and engage in other illicit activities.

"That just makes the syndicate drool," he said.

"MOB PROFITS FROM rackets such as gambling, loan sharking, narcotics, prostitution, pornography and cigarette bootlegging are approximately $48 billion yearly," the attorney general said.

The San Diego area is a likely target for organized crime, Younger said, because of its proximity to Mexico, major businesses and a major airport.

Ex-Mongol Target Of Bomb Threat?

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Police demolition experts have safely dismantled a bomb found strapped to a car belonging to a man described as a former Mongol motorcycle gang member, authorities reported.

A San Diego mechanic had been preparing to service the car when he found six sticks of dynamite attached to the transmission, police said Tuesday.

THE IDENTITY OF THE VEHICLE'S owner was being withheld, but officer Dale Clark said it was likely the attempted bombing was related to an ongoing feud between members of the Hell's Angels and Mongols motorcycle clubs in San Diego.

Last week, a sweeping county-wide roundup netted 34 members and associates of the Hell's Angels.

Earlier, an undercover officer turned over to police a dynamite bomb stored in a Pacific Beach apartment house that was powerful enough to "have leveled the complex," police said.

THE BOMB REPORTEDLY was meant for the Mongols in retaliation for an incident last month in which a car reportedly driven by a Mongols member allegedly knocked over a motorcycle driven by a Hell's Angel.

Clark said police were still investigating Tuesday's bomb, and that no arrests had been made.

Youth Wanted

Advisory Panel Planned

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Lt. Gov. Mervyn Dymally is looking for 15 young people to form the new California Advisory Commission on Youth.

They will advise the state legislature and executive branch on what's good and bad for their age group.

Dymally said Tuesday he is accepting applications until Nov. 15 from 15- to 25-year-olds. He said the panel will represent the state geographically, ethnically and by sex.

Forums will be held and studies conducted on such issues as youth unemployment, crime and education, Dymally said. Members will serve for two or three years and will be reimbursed for expenses.

Dymally established the panel by executive order last month while acting in Gov. Edmund Brown Jr.'s absence.

Brown's office said the governor didn't object.

Crime Rate Drops

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — San Jose recorded a 12.7 percent drop in serious crimes during the first six months of 1977, while San Francisco was down 5.6 percent and Oakland down 3.8 percent, the FBI reported Wednesday.

The total serious crimes in San Jose for the first six months were 19,001 compared with 21,769 a year earlier. San Francisco dropped from 37,844 to 35,724 and Oakland was down from 20,300 to 19,527.

Berkeley showed an increase of about one-half percent from 5,833 to 5,863, while Sacramento had a 7.5 percent drop from 13,814 crimes to 12,765.

Fresno was up 2.6 percent from 10,002 to 10,265 and Stockton up 1.2 percent from 6,100 to 6,173.

Los Angeles registered a decline in serious crimes of nearly 5.3 percent for the six months from 111,400 to 105,513, and San Diego had a 1.5 percent increase.

San Jose reported an increase in murders from 18 to 24, while San Francisco was up from 64 to 68, Oakland down from 51 to 43, Berkeley up from four to nine, Sacramento down from 28 to 26 and Stockton up from six to 12 for the six month period.

Board Missed on McNally Decision

The problem of relocating the McNally Continuation School increasingly dominates Newport-Mesa Unified School District affairs.

Where to put the school came up more than a year ago, but the school board was unwilling to make a swift and clear decision on a new location from its present site at 19th and Harbor in Costa Mesa.

Citizens around other low-enrollment schools in the district didn't like the idea of moving McNally into their neighborhoods.

They protested and the protests have gotten louder.

The school board pushed the matter onto a citizen committee which held several meetings and spent many hours on the question. Members were unable to decide where the continuation school should go.

Now the matter is back in the school board's lap, hotter and more difficult than it ever was.

How much easier things would be now if trustees had disposed of the relocation matter when it first came before them.

They should have swallowed the medicine and gotten it over with.

Street Not for Storage

If you have a neighbor who leaves his three cars, boat and recreational vehicle on the street and takes up half the block, you're not alone.

At this week's Costa Mesa City Council study session, Mayor Norma Hertzog recommended a city cleanup effort to persuade citizens not to use the streets for storing little-used vehicles.

Council members cited the problems such vehicles cause street sweepers and the danger of blocked sight-lines for motorists. They also cited cases where citizens rebuild buses and jalopies on driveways and lawns, causing an unsightly mess.

The council is wise to test a soft approach to the problem. While large boats and vehicles should be towed away if they pose a safety hazard, most of the problems are esthetic and subjective.

It's really a matter of people taking pride in their neighborhood and showing consideration for others.

Paving the Way

It would appear the local cities won a victory of sorts after skirmishing with CalTrans over two major highway resurfacing projects.

City people in Huntington Beach, Newport Beach and Costa Mesa got their hackles up when the state agency announced plans to re-pave four miles of Newport Boulevard and nine miles of Pacific Coast Highway this summer.

The screams of outrage and anguish apparently carried all the way to Sacramento because work is just now getting under way.

In spite of the delay of schedule to miss summer traffic, we shouldn't be overwhelmed by the thoughtfulness of the folks at CalTrans.

They may be paving at night, to avoid blocking traffic, but they're painting the newly paved lanes on Newport Boulevard in the middle of the peak traffic hours during the day.

What will happen when they start on Coast Highway?

Boyd / Trick Questions

By L.M. BOYD

"Trigger queries" are those questions which have been known to start family fights. Our Love and War man is collecting a list of same. From divorce records. They're not necessarily critical, insulting or degrading, not in themselves. It's what they lead to, however mysteriously. These are trigger queries: "Pancakes again?" "Isn't the game over yet?" "A melon ball cutter? How Much?" "Don't you want plain gingerale tonight?" And: "Do you think it's a little too small?"

Surveys prove a lot of tourists pick motels with swimming pools even though they have no intention of going swimming. They just believe the places with the pools will also be better equipped otherwise.

The average automobile of the three biggest car rental agencies is driven by about 90 persons before it's sold out of the fleet after 10 months.

Quick, name any fruit that comes most swiftly to mind. If you didn't say apple, you're not among the majority so queried.

Q. "How long was the Old West cowboy's lariat, typically?"

A. About 50 feet.

Q. "Which states permit personalized car license plates?"

A. Easier to name the states that don't: Alabama, Colorado, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Mississippi, Missouri, Montana and South Dakota.

Q. "How many teeth has a horse?"

A. 40.

Q. "Has anybody ever really disproved Adolf Hitler's theory that selective breeding could produce a super human being?"

A. In a way, it was disproved. Long ago. But not with humans, because humans don't breed selectively. On the contrary. It was disproved with dogs, which have been selectively bred for centuries, still without ever turning out a super dog.

One of these chess books cites studies to prove that a good memory is not the most significant faculty a top chess player can possess, not at all. Imagination is, according to this authority. The most remarkable chess performances, it's said, are not executed, the way a pianist renders a tune, but are created, the way a composer dreams up such.

Energy Chiefs Tilt to Nuclear

WASHINGTON — James Schlesinger's rise from political obscurity to political power has been smooth and subtle. He has the air more of a college professor than an energy czar. But behind the pipe smoke and contemplative manner, he has the heart of an industrial tycoon.

He has been an unabashed advocate of nuclear power, for example, ever since he came out of the Atomic Energy Commission in the early 1970s. The big utility companies desperately want to develop energy, of course, that will utilize their existing grid systems and permit them to go on selling electricity to the populace. A more revolutionary form of energy, such as solar power, might put the utility industry out of business.

There is disquieting evidence that Schlesinger may be quietly stacking the new Energy Dept. with subordinates who share his enthusiasm for nuclear power. Top policymaking positions will go, for example, to John O'Leary and Dale Myers, who are regarded as nuclear proponents.

Dr. James Liverman, a nuclear apologist, has been mentioned as Schlesinger's choice to be his new environmental chief. This possibility has so outraged environmentalists that a coalition has dashed off a private letter to Schlesinger, warning that they "would oppose" Liverman's nomination.

SCHLESINGER'S most controversial choice, however, may turn out to be Robert Thorne, who heads the San Francisco office of the Energy Research and Development Administration (ERDA). Schlesinger has Thorne in mind as his assistant secretary in charge of technology, an office that will control the Energy Dept.'s nuclear operations.

Thorne not only was in charge of nuclear affairs in San Francisco but allegedly funded an apparently "improper" lobbying effort to influence Congress to look kindly upon nuclear power.

He used $113,250 of the taxpayers' money to establish the Energy Awareness Project — an idea advanced by a registered nuclear lobbying group known as the California Council for Environmental and Economic Balance (CCEEB).

There is a suspicion that the Energy Awareness Project was really supposed to make the public and Congress more aware of nuclear energy, although a CCEEB spokesman told us the project was intended to inform the public on all energy alternatives.

THE CCEEB stated in its original proposal, without mentioning nuclear power, that "we would want participants to write their congressmen to ask them to support specific legislation, pass resolutions, write letters to the editor."

Thorne's office adopted this idea to the tune of $113,250 over the objections of at least one subordinate who warned in an internal memo: "I believe such an effort to be both ill-conceived and misdirected." He added with emphasis: "The logic of the proposal not only escapes me; but, its outline would appear to be an excellent plan for one of the greatest political boondoggles of modern times."

The suspicions of Rep. James Jeffords, R.-Vt., have also been aroused. He has asked the General Accounting Office to investigate the project. The taxpayers' money was used, he charges, for what appears to be "improper purposes, including possibly the use of appropriated funds to lobby the Congress on legislative matters."

POT POLICY — The men around President Carter have been quarreling behind the scenes over what words to put in his mouth on the marijuana question.

One faction favored a more sympathetic attitude toward pot smoking. They managed to get their ideas into an early draft of the drug policy message that Carter asked his aides to write for him. This was approved by the president's health adviser Dr. Peter Bourne.

It included such sentences as "marijuana has become an established fact throughout our society and the sky has not fallen" and "research studies indicate it may have beneficial uses in the treatment of certain types of illness."

THE PROPOSED message also contained a suggestion that the states should repeal their criminal prohibitions, "thus bringing to a close an unhappy and misguided chapter in our history."

But these sentences were too strong for scholarly Stuart Eizenstat, the President's top domestic policy adviser. He dashed off a confidential memo to Carter, declaring: "I am very concerned about the marijuana section of this message."

Eizenstat protested that "the section on marijuana is written in almost laudatory tone, which I believe is unfortunate." Some of the sentences, he objected, "almost seem to be a positive recommendation of the drug."

The president struck out the sentences that Eizenstat didn't like. Nevertheless, the final message endorsed decriminalization of small amounts of pot.

Perhaps Panama Should Reimburse U.S.

To the Editor:

Have read your editorial of Oct. 4 anent the Panama Canal with much interest. Yes, you noted some facts, but omitted some other facts.

You mentioned the fact that some of our Navy ships and some freighters are too large for the canal locks. These ships are only a very small percentage of our Navy fleet, also commercial fleet. We can always build larger locks (if we hang on to the canal, that is).

Another fact: Under the proposed treaty, we must refrain from planning another canal anywhere through the Isthmus except with Panama's consent.

IF THE Canal Zone is such a thorn in her side, why doesn't Panama offer to reimburse us for our investments? That would be the decent, businesslike thing to do. Why not give the U.S. taxpayer a break for once?

It looks very much as if this treaty gives Panama all the goodies on a silver platter while the U.S. gets nothing but obligations!

I'm afraid that the world would judge Uncle Sam as a paper tiger who caves in to blackmail and is afraid to stick up for his rights.

Not So Cheap

To the Editor:

Zenith TV manufacturers are moving part of their operation overseas where they can get assembly workers for $2,000 a year. Now we can buy Zenith TVs cheaper, but we will have to pay more taxes for unemployment insurance to the unemployed workers and there will be fewer taxpayers.

Multiply this by thousands of other companies from steel to automobiles and you will have a small idea of the problem. What does this do to balance of trade?

Let's face up to it. Those bargains we are getting from overseas aren't so cheap. They are breaking us.

JAMES W. BOLDING

The Real Heroes

To the Editor:

The cartoon published on the Comment page of Oct. 1 concerning the Kent State situation was silly.

I had occasion recently to visit the memorial above the sunken battleship Arizona where over 1,100 U.S. sailors have been entombed since December, 1941. I wish everyone connected with the Kent State happening could make that same pilgrimage.

I sailed and fought with many survivors of Pearl Harbor. One of the men from the torpedoed cruiser Helena was with me during that recent visit. We both agreed that, if the country was threatened again, we would fight again to defend it and its freedoms.

MANY OF US were rebelling against the status quo before WWII. The difference was that we were smart enough to realize that desired changes could be made because of our system of government, not in spite of it. We were smart enough only because we were patient enough to wait until we had enough knowledge to assess the facts and arrive at a logical plan of action. Alexander Pope was so right when he said: "A little knowledge is a dangerous thing. . ." The word "little" needs underlining.

And Kent State? The whole thing was so useless, so utterly stupid. There were no heroes there, nothing to be proud of, no memories that stir the marrow of man such as the marrow is stirred standing over the rusting hulk of the Arizona. May they not have died uselessly.

Religious Confusion

To the Editor:

Your article entitled "Self Help Class Set for San Juan" (Daily Pilot, Oct. 3) confuses two distinctly different religious denominations, and would leave your readers quite puzzled unless corrected.

PERHAPS Ms. Carman has already mentioned this to you, but Christian Science, discovered by Mary Baker Eddy in 1866, is the religion represented by some 3000 branches of the Church of Christ, Scientist, throughout the world. It has no connection with the Self-Help Foundation in San Diego. Neither does it sponsor the singles group or leadership training course that your article implies.

I am sure Ms. Carman, as well as all of the Christian Science churches in Orange County, will appreciate your publication of this clarification.

Fan Letter

To the Editor:

I must compliment you and your staff for consistently turning out such a fine publication. Being an avid reader of newspapers from all over the nation, I realize how fortunate the citizen of the South Coast area are to have such an informative and well-rounded quality local newspaper. The wide variety of topic matter, international, national and local, is most satisfying and your entertainment section is superb.

I'm sure I speak for many thousands who also anxiously look forward every day to the stimulating and enjoyable experience of the Daily Pilot when I say, "Thank You" and keep up the good work.

Phone Invasion

To the Editor:

Junk mail is a nuisance, but a junk phone call is a deplorable invasion of my privacy! I have been interrupted from naps, baths, preparing or eating dinner and intimate conversations with my husband to turn down pitches for air conditioning, swimming pools, life insurance, charity balls, selling my home and a Sunday paper I already subscribe to.

ALL THIS is very irritating, but I am just recently experiencing the ultimate in disturbing phone calls. After recently suffering a miscarriage, I am painfully reminded of my baby's approaching due date by phone calls offering diaper services!

Surely there are others in our community equally bothered by these exasperating interruptions into our private lives. Isn't there anything we can do about it?

SUSAN TURNER

Badham Right

To the Editor:

I must take exception to your editorial of Oct. 6, entitled "A Foolish Mistake," concerning a resolution in Congress calling for Andrew Young's impeachment.

I sincerely believe the "foolish mistake" was made by President Carter when he did not demand the resignation of Young the first time he openly insulted a nation friendly to our country.

He, (Young) so obviously predisposed with Communist countries and causes has made justifiable the reasons that 10 Congressmen have called for his ouster. (You can't for one moment believe that Young has been razzled permanently!)

I say "three cheers" for Representative Badham for his forthright stand and, "alas" we don't have more of his ilk, strong enough to speak out and be counted as true and caring Americans!

MARY O. MOORE

Other Problems

To the Editor:

In this era of continuing national crises: energy, world peace, nuclear proliferation, pollution, unemployment, racial prejudice, violence, urban decay etc etc., it is indeed heartening to learn that my Congressman, Bob Badham, is hard at work back in Washington backing resolutions to impeach our U.N. Ambassador, Andrew Young.

Good going, Bob! Keep your eye on the old ball and perhaps the other 434 Congressmen will have time to get around to the problems that really count?

'Skull, Crossbones' For Cigarette Ads?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two consumer groups have suggested that cigarette advertising should carry something like the skull-and-crossbones symbol that warns of poison.

A spokesman for the Consumers Union and the Consumer Federation of America made the proposal to the Federal Trade Commission Tuesday.

WARREN BRAREN, the spokesman, urged the FTC to require more effective warnings in cigarette advertising about the health hazards of cigarette smoking. If all attempts at health warnings are demonstrated to be ineffective, then the FTC should recommend to Congress a ban on cigarette advertising and promotion, he said.

Another group, Action on Smoking & Health, called on the FTC to restrict cigarette ads to the "tombstone" format used for most ads relating to stocks and bonds. Such ads merely state the name of the company issuing the security, the offering price and the names of brokerage houses offering the investments.

The recommendations about cigarettes were made at a public hearing before members of the FTC staff seeking comments on a report which said the American public is not well informed about various aspects of smoking and nonsmoking.

THE REPORT TO the FTC by Martin Fishbein of the University of Illinois last May said the public needs more information concerning the specific health hazards of smoking and specific benefits of not smoking.

Cigarette advertising has been barred by law from radio and television since 1971. In addition, since 1970 all cigarette packages have been required by law to carry the statement "Warning: The Surgeon General has determined that cigarette smoking is dangerous to your health."

Long ago, in a distant galaxy, dentists were permitted to advertise their prices. And such was the power of this Force that good dental health abounded.

Things are a little different on our planet now. Dr. Arnold H. Flanzer isn't able to advertise his prices. If he did, someone on the force might cite him. Rather than force the issue, Dr. Flanzer just continues to treat his patients as though the Force was with him. How else could so many get their entire dental program taken care of at no cost to themselves? Or at a lot less than they might have imagined?

Student Job Survey Cited

BERKELEY (AP) — If you go to the University of California, the odds are nearly one in two that you divide your out-of-class hours between homework and a paying job.

The first such survey says 57,264 UC students, or 46.6 percent of this fall's enrollment at the nine campuses, hold jobs.

The average work week is 17.1 hours. Only 3.7 percent hold full-time jobs.

THE HIGHEST EMPLOYMENT rates are at UC Irvine, 56.6 percent, and UCLA and Riverside, 56 percent. The lowest is at Santa Cruz, 32.4 percent.

The survey found that married students have a higher employment rate and work more hours than unmarried students.

Men are slightly more likely to hold jobs than women, and also work longer hours. And the longer the students stay at the university, the more likely they are to have a job.

The leading employer of students is the university itself, which hires 49.3 percent of all students holding jobs, the survey said.

'Lucky Day'

Search Team Finds Cyclist

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Michael Cruz got lost in the back country of Baja California. His prospects looked dim until a search plane spotted him and dropped water.

It was Cruz's lucky day. The searchers had been looking for someone else.

CRUZ, A 24-YEAR-OLD motorcyclist from Riverside, became stranded Monday about the same time as a relative notified the San Diego County Sheriff's Department that a party of five adventurers had failed to return from an outing in the rugged desert area.

The search started for Michael Rose and Don Campbell, both 19 and from El Cajon, and three other persons trailing the two motorcyclists in a van.

Their cross country bikes had failed and became separated from the van carrying Mr. and Mrs. James Rose — Michael's parents — and Charlene Jennings of Lakeside, a girlfriend of one of the bikers.

ROSE AND CAMPBELL TURNED up safely in Calexico after hitchhiking.

The van occupants made it to El Chinero, 30 miles north of San Felipe on the Gulf of California, a sheriff's spokesman said.

Meanwhile, a search plane spotted Cruz, believing him to be one of the five missing persons. A sheriff's deputy said Cruz was picked up in good condition and identified.

"It's lucky they were out looking for these other people, or this other guy (Cruz), would have been in real trouble," said a deputy. "He might even have died."

Proposal 'Has Merit'

Air Expansion Shelved

Orange County supervisors agree there may be merit in a proposal to expand a private airplane sales and service operation at Orange County Airport.

But they also said Tuesday it is too early to decide whether officials of Mission Beechcraft can expand their five- acre airport facility to 10 acres.

Supervisors concurred with a report prepared by officials of the county General Services Agency (GSA) which is responsible for airport operations.

THE REPORT SAID WHILE Mission Beechcraft's four-year-old request "appears to have a great deal of merit," no decision should be made until completion of an environmental impact report (EIR) aimed at helping chart the airport's future.

Mission Beechcraft officials asked July 1 if they either could expand their operation to make it more profitable or be given permission to sell their airport lease and move elsewhere.

But GSA officials said they could make no recommendation about the airplane firm's request until the airport EIR is completed.

They noted it probably will be about three months before the revised EIR is submitted to county planning commissioners who must take action before the report goes to supervisors.

GSA OFFICIALS SAID they agreed that Mission Beechcraft's current space "is inefficient for the current level of service."

But it probably would be about 18 months after supervisors take action on the airport's future before a lease to either provide another five acres of land or a new 10-acre site could be arranged.

The report noted, "Mission Beechcraft is one of the largest operators on the Orange County Airport and has been doing a very satisfactory job in providing services to the flying public."

GSA OFFICIALS SAID depending on what decision supervisors make on the airport's future it could be that the Mission Beechcraft land would be used by the county for its own airport services.

In that case, officials said, they would recommend that another 10-acre parcel be made available for Mission Beechcraft.

The report said county officials would not oppose Mission Beechcraft's sale to another party so long as the same level of public service is continued and providing the buyer is fully qualified and financially capable of assuming the operation.

United Crusade's Offices Changed

The West Orange County United Crusade has moved to new and larger headquarters in Garden Grove.

Serving charitable institutions in Huntington Beach, Fountain Valley, Westminster-Midway City, Surfside, Sunset Beach and Seal Beach, the agency is now located at 8100 Garden Grove Blvd., just east of Beach Boulevard.

IT HAD BEEN LOCATED for the last 10 years at 8th Street and Stanford Avenue in Garden Grove but the need for more space led the move to larger facilities.

Also located in the center that houses the United Crusade are the Salvation Army, Voluntary Action Committee, Jewish Family Services and the Dayle McIntosh Center for the Disabled.

THE NEW CENTER WAS dedicated Sept. 27 in ceremonies marking the opening of the crusade's fall campaign to raise $750,000 for the agencies it serves.

The new telephone number of the United Crusade is 898-0029.

Cash Can Mean Discount

DEAR PAT: I heard that when one pays cash for a retail item, a new regulation entitles him to a cash discount. Is this true? I usually pay cash and want to know if I can demand a discount.

J.W., Huntington Beach

In stores that accept credit cards, the federal Fair Credit Billing Act of 1975 allows consumers to ask for and merchants to offer a 5 percent discount for a cash purchase. This law does not require stores to give a discount and does not apply to merchants who issue their own credit cards. Many credit-card companies previously refused to let stores participate in their plans unless the latter promised not to offer discounts to cash-paying customers. This now is illegal. Also, merchants who were allowed to offer discounts often chose not to do so because they had to fill out lengthy truth-in-lending disclosure forms. This regulation is no longer in effect.

Credit Coding Explained

DEAR PAT: Does the credit bureau or the creditor rate a credit account for report? I'd also like to know what the various number ratings in a credit report mean.

L.L., Laguna Niguel

The credit bureau does not rate an account. It just keeps records of each creditor's rating according to the way an account is paid. The code system is fairly simple to understand and it is used nationwide. You have a "1" rating with a merchant if you pay your account within 30 days of billing. If you pay within more than 60 but less than 90 days, you'll get a "3" rating. A "9" means an account has been placed for collection or written off as a bad debt. Letter codes also are used to indicate the kind of business and account involved. If you do not understand any particular number or letter rating, ask the credit bureau for an explanation. This rating, system may seem complicated, but it is more objective than the old "Satisfactory/Unsatisfactory" method, because what's unsatisfactory for one kind of business might be acceptable for another.

Company Gets Pat on Back

DEAR PAT: How about a good word for a company that does value its customers? The cartridge in my Cross desk pen wouldn't insert properly so I asked a local stationery store what to do. The clerk said all Cross products are unconditionally guaranteed and even supplied me with a special envelope to mail the pen to A.T. Cross in Lincoln, R.I. I sent it and a short note about three months ago, but received no pen, no answer. Last week I sent a follow-up letter and six days later received in return a NEW pen from Cross along with a typed message saying there was no record of my package, but they assume that it was lost in transit. No questions, no nonsense — a new pen and thanks for writing.

M.T.K., Newport Beach

Your letter was a renewal of faith for me! Most reputable businesses still respond to their customers. This column has learned that the postal system often causes more problems between business and consumer than it solves. Mailings seem to go astray more than they should, and everyone concerned becomes upset. As in your case, when no response is received to an initial letter or merchandise mailing for refund or replacement, a follow-up letter usually receives an answer from a reputable company. If not, there's always Pat Dunn. Believe it or not, it's very rewarding to hear that this column's assistance is not required.

Rebel Leaving Russia

Amnesty Leader 'Heartened' by Nobel Prize

MOSCOW (AP) — The leader of the Moscow chapter of Amnesty International says the award of the 1977 Nobel Peace Prize to the parent organization has heartened his small group of human-rights activists. But he is quitting the country Friday because he says life as a Soviet dissident has become unbearable.

"The term of life of a dissident is rather limited here," said Valentin Turchin. "It is somewhat surprising that during four years I have managed to be organizationally active."

Turchin spoke in an interview Tuesday, the day after the Nobel prize was announced, in his half-empty apartment on the edge of Moscow, open suitcases around him.

Expenses Disclosed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The first public accounting of a $2,000-a-year expense account given members of the House shows that tax money paid for concert tickets, bar association dues, car insurance and even a rented tuxedo.

The expenditures were in the first semi-annual report of the House clerk since the chamber passed a series of reforms in January. The report covers the first six months of 1977.

IN SHORT

Mother, Tot Slain

BOWIE, Md. (AP) — A young woman and her infant daughter were murdered as part of a plot by two men to kill each other's wives, authorities say.

An investigator for the state's attorney's office gave that motive Tuesday at a bond hearing for Lon A. Lewis and Gene T. Meyer, arrested last Friday in the Sept. 23 stabbings of Lewis' wife Carol, 27, and 4-month-old Heather Lewis.

Yemen Holds Steady

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Western diplomats in North Yemen's capital predicted today that the assassination of President Ibrahim al-Hamdi would not result in any significant change in the policy of the Yemeni government, including its ties with Saudi Arabia and the United States.

The diplomats, reached by telephone, said the three-man military council Radio San'a announced Tuesday had taken control of the government were all three members of the presidential council which al-Hamdi had headed since he took over in a bloodless coup in 1974.

Prison Entered

GUADALAJARA, Mexico (AP) —Guards armed with night sticks entered Jalisco state prison today after it was held for two days by rebellious inmates in a bloody uprising.

Warden Pedro Parra said 14 inmates were slain by fellow prisoners in the rebellion. He said those who were killed were trusties who had abused and extorted money from fellow inmates.

Tucson Under Water

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Flooding in the Tucson and Nogales areas has left roads, bridges, homes and cotton crops damaged. A town on the Mexican border has lost much of its water service and a score of families had been evacuated from an area southeast of Phoenix.

No deaths were reported. Nogales residents were still without normal water service today.

Reagan-style?

Parks Chief 'Traditional'

By THOMAS D. ELIAS

Governor Brown's most recent major appointment represents a shift back to some of the ideas that, ironically, prevailed under Ronald Reagan.

The appointee is Russell Cahill, named state parks director in a move that may help mollify environmentalists. Many who had been strong Brown backers have been unhappy with Brown's response to the now-famous decision of the Dow Chemical Company not to build a factory in California.

SINCE THEN, BROWN HAS used every public relations and legislative device available to convince business and labor that he favors their continued good health.

The Cahill appointment will not spur industrial or labor disfavor, but will bring a more traditional approach to the state park system.

Brown's first parks director, Herbert Rhodes, pushed development of urban parks and tried to encourage inner city residents to get out into the country, where most state parks are.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA FOCUS

HE ALSO ENCOURAGED DEVELOPMENT of new off-road vehicle (ORV) parks, opening three in the last three years.

Now comes Cahill, who sounds much like William Penn Mott Jr., the Reagan parks director.

He favors "energy-conserving" use of parks, a direct slam at motorcycles and dune buggies, which use gasoline.

Mott's hottest battles also were against ORV enthusiasts, who wanted large parts of new parks set aside for them.

"I'M NOT VERY ENTHUSIASTIC about ORVs," Cahill said in an interview. "But I know there's three million of them out there. I would like to let them recreate without wrecking the land."

REAGAN

ORVs also conflict with one of Cahill's other avowed goals — "getting people out of their cars and onto their feet and bicycles."

Mott also tried to do that, even proposing a state-long system of hiking and biking trails.

Says Cahill, "We can look at that as a puzzle. We ought to be fitting pieces into it every chance we get, even if it takes 40 to 50 years."

THE IDEA WAS ALMOST completely neglected under Rhodes.

Cahill, however, won't turn his back on everything Rhodes attempted.

He says he'll continue pushing for urban parks and may even try to replace some abandoned shopping centers and gas stations with greenery.

"We can't force cities to do that," he said, "but we can prioritize some of the dough that goes to the cities."

WITH A SHAGGY BEARD, a cabin in rural Alaska and a background as that state's parks director, he is notably more countrified than Rhodes, a black Korean war amputee from the ghetto of East Palo Alto.

Even if Cahill's appointment wasn't a direct effort by Brown to mollify conservationists, it should do that.

Few things worry environmental groups like the Sierra Club as much as ineffective and unprofessional administration of the state park system, one of the largest such networks in the world.

That is the type of leadership many felt Rhodes gave the parks at the key moments just after passage of the $250 million 1974 park bond act.

"IT HAS BEEN DIFFICULT for the department to cope with so much money," Cahill opined. "It should have been used faster."

Where Mott had skillfully used matching funds from the federal Land and Water Conservation Fund to acquire tens of thousands of new parkland acres, the last three years saw a significant dropoff in effective use of that money.

Now Cahill foresees large increases in the program and will even try to up California's per-capita share.

ALL THIS WILL OFFEND almost no one but ORV enthusiasts, who have never been a politically potent interest group.

And the net effect can do nothing but help Brown in his re-election bid.

Golden Gate Tab Now $1

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Beginning Nov. 1, it will cost $1 to cross the Golden Gate Bridge spanning the entrance to San Francisco Bay.

Bridge district directors voted 12-4 with three absent to raise the toll from 75 cents. All four 'no' votes were by Marin County representatives.

DISTRICT secretary Carney Campion said cars containing three or more passengers still will be allowed to cross the bridge free on weekdays during the commuting hours of 6 a.m. to 10 a.m.

Campion also announced a new fare schedule for the district's 248 buses and four ferry boats.

TO TAKE a bus from San Francisco to southern Marin County the fare will be $1; to central Marin, $1.25; to western and northern Marin, $1.50; to southern Sonoma County, $2; and to central Sonoma, $2.25.

Those who purchase discount coupons will get 20 percent off.

A RIDE on the ferries, which run from Sausalito and Larkspur to San Francisco, will cost $1 on weekdays and $1.25 on weekends and holidays. All increases take effect Nov. 1.

Directors have not determined how to spend the estimated $1 million the increases are expected to generate, Campion said.

SACRAMENTO (AP) — A half-cent sales tax extension to keep the San Francisco Bay Area Regional Transportation District in business has been signed into law.

Balloon Ends Journey

OXNARD (AP) — A free-floating balloon will help the South Coast Air Quality Management District decide the future of a proposed Standard Oil of Ohio tanker terminal in Long Beach.

The balloon "America" ended a 28-hour journey Tuesday — a journey that indicated sulphur dioxide emissions from Alaskan supertankers travel down the coast and build up at sea to turn into more dangerous pollutants.

"This has given us plenty to think about," said James Birakos, deputy executive officer for the SCAQMD.

Probation Eased

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A Municipal Court judge has listed two probation conditions he imposed on a Los Angeles man which barred the man from associating with known homosexuals and frequenting places where known homosexuals gather.

In an order signed Tuesday, Judge Jack Tso revised the terms of probation for Edwin Womble, 37, to state only that he must obey all laws.

Parents Guilty

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Two Long Beach parents accused of imprisoning their adopted 16-year-old daughter in a filthy bedroom for four years have pleaded guilty to three felony charges.

Randolph and Willie Johnson each pleaded guilty Tuesday to one count of false imprisonment and two counts of child endangering.

Comic Gets Damages

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Comedian Jack Carter has been awarded nearly $100,000 in damages from a money manager he claimed defrauded him, court records show.

Los Angeles Superior Court Commissioner Leo S. Rich Tuesday awarded Carter $49,290 in actual damages, $15,000 in attorney and accountant fees, and $12,000 in punitive damages.

Police Burglarized

LONG BEACH (AP) — As many as four jail inmates may have been involved in three weeks of smuggling raids that looted the police department's evidence room of cash, narcotics and valuables, authorities said.

"We aren't sure yet how much is missing," Deputy Chief Robert Hill said Tuesday.

Bond to Challenge For Cup in 1980

PERTH, Australia (AP) — Millionaire property developer Alan Bond announced plans for the 1980 challenge for the America's Cup Wednesday.

At a news conference on arrival here from Newport, R.I., he announced the formation of the Australia America's Cup Foundation to raise funds for the 1980 challenge.

This year's challenger Australia would be shown around Australia to help raise funds to pay off debts incurred during the recent challenge, Bond said.

"The new foundation will have the job of raising this year's deficit as well as raising funds for the next challenge," he said.

The cost of the new challenge would depend on how much money had to be spent on modification, he said.

"The America's Cup can be won and we believe we can do it," Bond added.

Long Beach's Boating Show Sees Boost

Indicative of the growth of the Southern California Boat Show, opening Oct. 22 at the Long Beach Convention Center, is the fact that 24 companies will be exhibiting the first time at the show.

The Southern California Marine Association event will fill nearly 150,000 square feet — three times the area of the 1976 all-sail show.

It will be the first public event in the new Convention Center located on the shore off Ocean Boulevard.

The 24 new companies represent a high for new exhibitors, according to show chairman Jerry Sehi. He also said that 90 percent of those who exhibited at the 1976 show have renewed their space reservations.

More than 30 1978 model craft will be introduced at the show, along with 200 booth exhibits showcasing nearly everything that goes on a sailing craft.

Catalina Race To Cat's Pajamas

Cat's Pajamas, skippered by Carl Last, Voyagers Yacht Club, was the Class A winner in Bahia Corinthian Yacht Club's Catalina Race, the sixth of the seven race Angelman Series for Performance Handicap Racing Fleet yachts.

The fleet raced to Avalon on Saturday and after an overnight rendezvous had an informal race back to Newport.

Marine Electronic Class Set at OCC

A non-technical lecture series dealing with marine electronics for boat owners will be offered at Orange Coast College this fall beginning Friday at 7:30 p.m. Admission is free.

Series lecturer is Gordon West, a well-known Newport Beach author and lecturer on marine electronics. His articles have appeared in such yachting publications as Yachting, Sea & Rudder, and Motor Boating and Sailing.

"This series is for everyone, not just the owner and skipper," said West. "For the 'first mate' we'll discuss radar ranges afloat, how to operate kitchen accessories aboard with voltage converters, and other topics for the women.

"The series will not be technical. We'll demonstrate how to use marine electronics at sea. We won't concern ourselves with how electronics equipment is put together."

West's lectures are spiced with humor, slides, tape recordings and equipment demonstrations. The opening lecture will be concerned with marine radio communications. Radio navigational devices will be examined on Oct. 21, and the Oct. 28 session will focus on depth sounders and sonar. The final lecture, Nov. 4, will look at the maintenance of electronic equipment.

On Saturday, Nov. 5, a special review session will be held on the water. For further information on the series call 556-5880.

Police Chief Sets Peninsula Talk

Newport Beach police chief Charles Gross will be the guest speaker at a Thursday meeting of the Balboa Peninsula Point Homeowners Association.

The meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m. at the Balboa Peninsula Racquet Club. The public is invited to hear the police chief discuss the community's role in crime prevention and law enforcement.

Pollution Attack

Dirty River Attacked

EASTON, Md. (AP) — It's been two years since it became known that the James River was polluted by a toxic white powder called Kepone. Today hundreds of scientists, engineers and health officials are working to clean up the James, once one of America's richest sources of marine life.

The federal Environmental Protection Agency estimates $4 million in tax money has been spent to evaluate the problem caused by a small company in Hopewell, Va., that manufactured Kepone in an abandoned service station. The chemical was used to kill potato bugs in Ireland and banana pests in Central America.

AT A RECENT conference here, nearly 130 of those involved in the clean-up met to discuss the work.

A representative of the Army Corps of Engineers discussed 15 mechanical cleanup options involving dredging, filling, damming or laying concrete over the 1,000 acres of land around Bailey's Bay.

THE ENGINEER SAID the cost would be as high as $35 million, not counting a treatment plant for the contaminated dredge spoil, a dump site, or the loss of 360 acres of swamp and marsh, five known archeological sites, and several buildings on the National Register of Historical Places.

Much of the 100,000 to 200,000 pounds of Kepone in the James is as far as 70 miles downstream.

ECOLOGY

There were also reports on trying to collect the Kepone with metallic resins, coal or a field of barley. Researchers said the first two showed promise, but the barley — and the use of radiation to break down the toxin — didn't.

THE CONFERENCE WAS also told that Kepone research and testing have nearly bankrupt the Virginia Institute of Marine Science.

And, officials said, the poisoning of several workers at the plant and the clean-up of a contaminated municipal treatment plant has severely strained the resources of several state agencies.

Much of the meeting was devoted to reports which attempted to predict the fate of the Kepone if it were left alone. The consensus was that the river would take decades to clean itself.

Job Bias Charged

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A federal suit accuses Imperial County of job discrimination against blacks, women and Mexican-Americans and asks $745,000 in back pay for eight of them.

14.6%* INTEREST

In May of 1977 Ajax investors earned 14.6% interest on trust deed payoffs. The average yield on Ajax trust deed payoffs from January 1, 1977 thru July 1977 was 13.8%.

It's hard to believe, but high yields have been earned by Ajax investors for more than 16 years. Ajax has arranged more than 8,000 loans, all secured by trust deeds on southern California real estate. And there has never been any loss to the investor.

Regulations won't permit us to promise more than 10%, but many Ajax trust deeds payoff early, earning the investor a prepayment bonus of up to 6 months interest on 80% of the loan balance. This combination of bonus and interest produce the high rate of return.

To find out how your invested savings can enjoy these high earnings, phone or come in.

CAB Rule Penalizes Airlines?

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Airline seats are empty because government regulations require it, says Rep. Norman Y. Mineta (D-Calif.), a member of the House subcommittee on aviation.

He said international airlines such as Pan American Airways are prohibited from carrying Americans in certain domestic flights.

"It is a compelling example of the damage which can result from the interference of unnecessary Civil Aeronautics Board regulations," Mineta told the Flight Engineers' International Association.

He has introduced a bill in Congress to allow international carriers to fill empty seats and cargo space on more flights.

NASA Probe Project to Cost $350 Million

LONDON (AP) — The British Aerospace Company has won two major contracts for work on a giant American telescope that will probe deep space and possibly tell scientists what life was like billions of years ago.

The company said Tuesday it will lead a consortium of 11 companies from eight European countries to fulfill the contract.

The telescops, to be operated by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, is considered by Western experts as the world's most ambitious space astronomy project. Estimated cost is $350 million.

British Aerospace's Electronic and Space Systems Division at Bristol was awarded the contracts, totalling $23.275 million by ESA, the European Space Agency.

Under the terms of an agreement between NASA and ESA, approximately 15 percent of the Space Telescope project will be developed in Europe, and European astronomers will get not less than 15 percent of the total telescope observing time.

The Lockheed Missiles and Space Company is the main contractor for the structure and support systems, while the Perkin-Elmer Corp., of Norwalk, Conn., will build the optical telescope assembly.

Complex Planned

SAN DIEGO (AP) — San Diego Gas and Electric Company has offered $5 million in "seed" money to plan construction of a proposed major electrical generating plant on the west coast of Baja California.

The San Diego utility would like to buy excess electricity from the proposed $1.2 billion coal-fired plant that would be located in the Ensenada area.

The project is represented as mutually beneficial to both the United States and Mexico, and officials say it would provide cheap and abundant power for Baja and huge export revenues for Mexico.

SDG&E spokesmen say the 1200-megawatt power complex would not replace the need for SDG&E's Sundesert Nuclear Power Plant.

Coors Campaigning

GOLDEN, Colo. (AP) — The Adolph Coors Company, which has traditionally relied on low-key advertising for its beer, is launching a youth-oriented campaign featuring four different styles of music and suggestings "Make it yours, make it Coors."

Officials say a radio and print media blitz will spread into all 14 Coors market states this month as the nation's fifth largest brewer gears up to bolster sales and meet encroaching competition from larger brewers.

The musical spots were prepared by Cadco, Coor's in-house ad agency, and taped at ABC studios in Nashville. They feature the same basic message with a backdrop of soft-rock, country-western, pop or modified soul music.

"We started on this in February with the thought we'd been missing a segment of the market in terms of appeal," said Cadco president Lee Shelton.

"In the past we haven't had to advertise so much. Production couldn't keep up with the demand. Now production is really in gear and we have to get in gear."

Credit Card Issue

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Thirty-two of the nation's 22,500 credit unions have been accepted as card-issuing members of Visa, formerly BankAmericard, and could begin issuing the bank credit cards soon.

Visa president Dee W. Hock said the credit unions are the first to join the card system, which includes banks, savings and loan associations, and the nation's largets brokerage firm, Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith.

The Credit Union National Association says 23 of the credit unions, most of them in Ohio, Michigan and California, will begin a three-month pilot program with the cards early next month.

Credit unions in the program would charge Visa card-carriers interest of 12 percent a year on purchases and cash advances. That is less than the usual 18 percent annual rate allowed in many states.

Credit unions would earn interest on outstanding balances of the card-carriers. In addition, they would be reimbursed for their handling expenses by banks who sign up merchants from whom card-carriers make purchases.

New Flights Slated

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Pacific Southwest Airlines plans to launch flights Friday between San Diego, Fresno and Stockton.

The jetliners will go nonstop to Fresno from both Stockton and San Diego, a spokesman for the San Diego-based airline said.

Similar flights are planned on Sundays.

Biggest Jaws Survive Time

by MILTON MOSKOWITZ

Of the top 100 industrial companies in 1917, only 35 remain in that class.

That's what Forbes magazine discovered when it dug up data for its 60th anniversary issue, published last month. The moral Forbes drew from this high rate of attrition was that the big guys don't always win.

"Corporate heft is no guarantee of survival," said the magazine.

THAT MAY BE SO. But a close examination of the 1917 roster reveals that while there were some companies that couldn't hack it and dropped out — Central Leather, United Verde Extension Mining, American Locomotive, for examples — a much larger number disappeared because they were acquired or merged or otherwise captured by another giant.

Armour & Company was our fourth largest industrial company in 1917. And six years later it acquired another company on that list, Morris & Company, which ranked 65th. Today, Armour is part of Greyhound (oh, how the mighty have fallen).

Swift & Company, another meat packer, was No. 5 on the 1917 list. Now it's part of a mixed bag called Esmark.

Both Greyhound and Esmark are among the 50 leading industrials today.

No. 3 on the 1917 list was Bethlehem Steel. Our second largest steel maker, Bethlehem is still around, ranking 33rd, right behind Esmark. But three other steel makers on the 1917 list — Midvale Steel, Cambria Steel and Lackawanna Steel — are gone. What happened to them? Bethlehem scooped them up in 1922 and 1923.

Money Tree

A COMPANY CALLED CHILE COPPER, which did just what its name implies, ranked 29th in 1917. Another mining company on the 1917 list was Greene Cananea Copper — it ranked 89th. They were both enveloped in 1929 by Anaconda Copper, which ranked 13th, and Anaconda now belongs to Atlantic Richfield, which is the survivor of at least four companies on the 1917 list: Atlantic Refining, Sinclair Oil, Prairie Oil and Sinclair Gulf.

In other words, seven of the leading companies of 1917 are now combined into one, which ranks 15th.

Standard Oil of New York was No. 14 in 1917 and Vacuum Oil was No. 75. They joined forces in 1931 to form Socony Vacuum Oil, which later became Socony Mobil, which later became Mobil, which now also owns Montgomery Ward and Container Corp. of America. Two other companies on the 1917 list — Magnolia Petroleum, No. 37, and Virginia Carolina Chemicals, No. 46 — are today also part of Mobil.

MEXICAN PETROLEUM RANKED 64TH on the 1917 list. In 1919, it was acquired by Pan American Petroleum and Transport, which had ranked 99th. And in 1954 Pan American was absorbed by Standard Oil of Indiana, which was No. 36 in 1917 (today it's No. 12).

The moral might be that in a swamp filled with alligators, the ones with the biggest jaws survive.

Market Suffers Another Drubbing

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices took a solid drubbing today in a selloff blamed on concern over rising interest rates.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which had dropped 8.40 points on Tuesday to a 22-month low, fell another 10.48 to 823.98 today.

Declines overwhelmed advances by about a 6-1 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said the market was unsettled by fears that interest rates might be headed for levels at which they could cause problems for both business activity and investments like stocks and bonds.

High rates increase businesses' costs and also can discourage borrowing for expansion.

Hooton Tries to Get Dodgers Even

It Wasn't SC's Day: Robinson

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Coach John Robinson says although his Trojans lost to Alabama, they passed a test of another sort.

"We did not play up to our capability," the USC coach said of last Saturday's 21-20 loss to the Crimson Tide. "But we tried to. It would have been unforgivable if we hadn't tried. When you try and lose, it's disappointing but not indictable.

"We just didn't have the refined edge you need in a game like that," Robinson continued.

"We certainly didn't underestimate Alabama, but we didn't play with the same focus, the same fanaticism we did against UCLA last year, or in the Rose Bowl.

"It's funny, but I felt before the game during warmups that it wasn't going to be our day. I think anybody who's involved in sports knows the feeling. It was indescribable, but it was there."

The USC coach said the setback hurt, but that his outlook for the Trojans wasn't dimmed.

"The pain we felt after our loss to Missouri last year is with us again," said Robinson, who has lost but two games since he started coaching the Trojans in 1976. "Our pride is wounded."

But then he added, "That game does nothing to our confidence. We're okay.

"We have a positive outlook about the rest of the season. We're just getting started as a football team, and all our goals are still attainable. We still have an opportunity to have a great season. The key is how we improve from now on, and I think we'll get better. I think we'll rebound very well from the loss."

The defeat cost the Trojans their No. 1 national ranking, as they slipped to sixth in the poll this week and Alabama advanced from seventh to fourth.

USC, which resumes Pacific-8 play Saturday against Oregon, has a 4-1 record and is 2-0 in the conference. Oregon is 1-4 overall and winless in two Pac-8 contests.

Robinson, who played football at Oregon then was an assistant coach there for 12 years, said the Ducks are an unpredictable team this fall.

"They played good games against some tough opponents, Georgia, Wisconsin and Stanford," Robinson said. "Then they had that bad game last weekend."

The Ducks lost to Georgia 27-16, beat TCU 29-24, lost to Wisconsin 22-1 and Stanford 20-10 before being humbled 54-0 by Washington last Saturday.

"They're like those young guys on the golf tour," Robinson said. "They can shoot a 65 and 68, then a 79. They may come down here and shoot a 65 again, or they may just come down here and die."

Bullets Trade Ellis

LANDOVER, Md. — The Washington Bullets of the National Basketball Association traded rookie forward Bo Ellis to the Denver Nuggets Tuesday for a No. 1 draft choice in 1978.

Mission Viejo Nadadores coach Mark Schubert will serve as an assistant coach for the United States swimming team in the 1978 World Aquatic championships in West Berlin. George Haines of UCLA is the head coach. The team will be selected at the 1978 long course outdoor championships in Woodland, Texas.

CONTROVERSIAL PLAY — Steve Garvey appears to slide home ahead of the tag by Yankees catcher Thurman Munson, but umpire Nestor Chylak called him out, igniting an argument.

Garvey Claims Ump Was Not in Position

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Yankees got in the first blow of the World Series, but Mike Garman thinks the Los Angeles Dodgers have a counter-punch coming.

"There's no reason to be down," the Dodgers relief ace said Tuesday night after Los Angeles was beaten by the Yankees, 4-3, on Paul Blair's 12-inning single in the World Series opener.

"We lost the first game of the National League playoffs to the Philadelphia Phillies, but bounced back and beat them three straight. We blew them out, and we're the type of club that can blow out the Yankees, or any other club. I feel there'll be no problem coming back."

In charge of the hopeful Dodgers comeback tonight will be Burt Hooton, a 12-game winner with a world of confidence. Hooton will face Jim "Catfish" Hunter.

"We're a great comeback team," said Hooton. "We go out and play good baseball all the time and don't give away runs. You have to earn them against us."

Hooton, though, shows great respect for the American League champions, especially the hitting talents of Thurman Munson.

"Munson looks like the toughest hitter in their lineup," Hooton noted. "He hits the ball to all fields, and consistently gets a piece of the ball. He's definitely their toughest out."

One of the things that Hooton will try not to do is pitch Willie Randolph high and tight. The slender Yankees second baseman adjusted to that pitch from Don Sutton Tuesday night and belted the ball into the left field seats for New York's second run.

"It was a fastball right up here," said Sutton, indicating a high pitch with his right hand. "It was in a perfect location but I didn't have a lot on it."

If Sutton would like to have that pitch back, Steve Garvey would appreciate the same on a slide he made in the sixth inning. Attempting to score from first on a single to right by Glenn Burke, Garvey was called out at home by umpire Nestor Chylak on a close play.

"There's no doubt in my mind I was safe on that play," Garvey said. "Thurman Munson tagged me high on the thigh and that meant that my foot was into the base."

The play turned out to be the most crucial of the game for the Dodgers, because it would have been their eventual winning run in regulation time.

"He was safe," said Los Angeles manager Tommy Lasorda. "But we can't worry about that now. That's all behind us. There's nothing we can do about it. We'll bounce back tomorrow. I've got great faith in this team."

Garvey claimed that Chylak was in no position to see the play.

"He was blocked out," said Garvey. "He was too far up the first base line. He should have been closer to home on that play. I don't know what they teach at umpiring school but that's where I would be on a play like that."

Although the Dodgers didn't argue much at the time, they had a lot to say about it after the game.

The out call on Garvey wasn't the only thing that hurt the Dodgers in game one at Yankee Stadium. Two other bad things that happened to them were Don Gullett and Sparky Lyle.

"Let's face it, Gullett had pretty good success against us in the National League," said Garvey of the Yankees starter.

Gullett, once a Dodgers beater while a member of the Cincinnati Reds, gave up two runs in the first inning but was virtually untouchable until he left in the ninth.

NY Lefty Sharp

I Never Gave Up, Says Yanks' Gullett

NEW YORK (AP) — Don Gullett didn't give up on Don Gullett, Billy Martin didn't give up on Paul Blair and, as a result, the New York Yankees went one-up over the Los Angeles Dodgers in the World Series Tuesday night.

Gullett, who had to leave the American League playoff opener against Kansas City last Wednesday with an aching shoulder after allowing four runs in two innings, came back in a big way as the Yankees nipped the Dodgers, 4-3, in the 12-inning Series opener.

The winning run came on a single by the 33-year-old Blair, a defensive genius during a decade in center field for the Baltimore Orioles and a key utility man with both glove and bat in this his first season with the Yankees.

"I'm gonna be the last guy to give up on myself," said Gullett, who yielded two quick runs just as he did in his only playoff appearance.

But this time there was no pain and when someone asked the 26-year-old left-hander how his arm felt, he replied:

"Someone told me I was throwing at 96 miles an hour; does that answer your question?"

It certainly answered any questions the Yankees might have had when Gullett issued a leadoff walk to Davey Lopes, a triple to Bill Russell, another walk and Ron Cey's long sacrifice fly to Yankee Stadium's celebrated Death Valley.

"He threw real good," said catcher Thurman Munson, "but he was hyper when the game started, real excited, he wanted to pitch real bad.

"During the first inning, he told me, 'If we get them out, they're in trouble.' His velocity was there and he spotted his fastball real well but he didn't have command of all his pitches. He couldn't get his curve over until the last few innings. He didn't throw like he could throw."

At one point while the Dodgers were jumping to a 2-0 lead, Munson motioned to the dugout to let them know there was nothing to worry about.

"I didn't want him out of the game," Munson said. "I didn't care if they got three more runs off on him."

DiMaggio Miffed Over Ticket Hassle

NEW YORK (AP) — Joe DiMaggio, one of the all-time greats on the New York Yankees, was scheduled to throw out the first ball of the first World Series game Tuesday night. Instead, he watched the New York-Los Angeles opener on television — if at all.

Upset by a hassle over tickets, the Hall of Fame outfielder declined to go to Yankee Stadium and one friend quoted him as saying: "I don't care if I ever go to the Stadium again."

DiMaggio had come to the ball park early Monday to pick up tickets for friends and, like scores of others, was left to cool his heels. He was unable to get through to his friend, owner George Steinbrenner of the Yankees.

"I will watch the game from my room on television," he told a friend after leaving the park.

DiMaggio was registered at a midtown hotel but was not available immediately for comment.

Steinbrenner said it was all a misunderstanding.

"Joe had requested 20 special tickets and we had set them aside for him," said the Yankees' owner. "The special tickets are handled by assistant ticket director Jerry Waring. Waring was in Kansas City for the final game of the playoffs. With the rest of the team, he didn't arrive until around 4:30 Monday morning at the Newark Airport.

"He came to the Stadium and was so tired that he went to sleep on one of the training tables. DiMaggio showed up at 8:30 in the morning and asked for his tickets. The office staff told him that Waring had the tickets and he could pick them up as soon as Waring was available.

It was learned that the former Yankees star contacted the New York Mets and got tickets through the National League team.

Hard Work Paying Off For Raff

Dedication and hard work during the off-season has paid off for young Eric Raff of Corona del Mar High.

Raff, a starting middle guard on defense all season in his sophomore year, will be the only CdM player going both ways Friday night when the Sea Kings meet surprising Dana Hills in a South Coast League football outing at San Clemente High.

"He's the anchor man in the middle of our line," coach Dick Morris says. "So far, he's averaged between eight and 10 tackles a game and has been in on at least 50 others. He's usually in on every tackle that is made in the middle of the line.

"We do a lot of stunting and he's in the middle of our defensive line, usually over the center. He's real quick and it's hard for the opposing center to block him because of this."

Raff will also start on offense at a guard position. But offensive action is not new to the 5-10, 185-pound junior classman. He is also the center on punts and conversions and is on the field with the kickoff team.

"He's a team leader," Morris adds. "We don't usually select juniors as game captains but he's already had that honor this year in the Newport game."

Morris says that Raff moved up to the varsity as a starter in every game last season because of his off-season work.

"He ran in the hills and on the beach and did a lot of extra work in the weight room," Morris says. "He put in a lot more extra work than the average guy and it paid off for him. Without the hard work of lifting and running, he wouldn't have made it as a sophomore."

Raff has confined his athletic accomplishments to the football field in the past but this year plans on trying out for the varsity wrestling team as well. Morris will also be his wrestling coach.

In the summer, he works for a private club on Balboa Island where he's in charge of training younger children in swimming.

As a sophomore, he was a second team all-league selection at middle guard. He could make the first unit this season.

UNIVERSITY HIGH QUARTERBACK DAVID LANGMADE.

Versatile Star

Langmade Big Key In Uni's Offense

Versatility is a rare quality in football and University High (Irvine) quarterback David Langmade may be the most versatile athlete in the South Coast League.

Until three weeks ago, Langmade had never played quarterback. He was forced into the job when starting QB John Davis fractured a thumb.

In three games Langmade has completed 16 of 36 passes for 100 yards, respectable figures for a junior who had never played the position before.

Langmade is also the team's punter, placekicker, defensive cornerback and kickoff specialist. Before the switch to quarterback, he was touted as University's finest running back.

He was also University's starting catcher as a sophomore on the baseball varsity and a starter for the sophomore basketball team.

That's a lot of action for someone who has been bothered by injuries since his sophomore season.

Langmade is still recovering from a sprained ankle but University is lacking in depth so he keeps playing. The ankle injury has curtailed his kicking, but he remains the starting QB.

"I feel Langmade is the finest placekicker in Orange County," says University coach Dick Roche. "Last year he kicked one from 33 yards to win a game for us and he also kicked a 45-yarder."

Davis could be sufficiently recovered to take back his quarterback job in two weeks, and when that happens Langmade will return to halfback.

"Next year we may keep him at a running back because we'll have Ron Marvick, who's a junior now, to play quarterback," Roche says.

"We feel Langmade has done a fine job at quarterback, considering he's never played there before and all the intricacies of reading defenses that he's had to learn," Roche says. "We put him in there because he's our best all-round athlete."

Filling the void at halfback for Langmade is Gil Zaldivar, who was originally penciled in as a platoon-player to alternate with Langmade.

"Zaldivar has emerged as one of the finest running backs in the league," Roche says. "He'll keep playing after Langmade moves to halfback. Maybe I'll use them both or alternate them."

But for now, as University prepares for a South Coast League game with El Toro Friday night (8) at Mission Viejo, Langmade is the quarterback.

Lions, Tars Similar In Style

Two teams with reputations for intimidating defenses collide Friday night at Newport Harbor High where Westminster invades in the Sunset League opener and Westminster coach Bill Boswell says both elevens are similar.

"We're very similar," says Boswell. "We are defensive-oriented and defense has really carried both teams so far."

The Lions of Westminster enter with a 3-1 mark, with defense providing both touchdowns last week in a 14-9 win over Long Beach Wilson.

The two have one common opponent — Long Beach Millikan. Millikan was stopped by Newport in the opener, 3-0, but upset Westminster, 21-7.

"Newport presents quite a challenge with its defense against the run," says Boswell. It has been the running game that has provided Boswell with his bright moments on offense. The aerial game has not set the world on fire.

Westminster features big players, as usual, with tackles John Bell (6-1, 210), Rob Parchinski (6-1, 225), defensive ends Charlie McNeill (6-5, 230) and Mitch Siemens (6-4, 200) and Sean Williamson (6-2, 195) the mainstays.

The only juniors in the starting lineup are tailback Eddie Remele (5-10, 165) and fullback Dan Abbott (6-0, 200) and it is these two who figure to give Newport's line the test over the tackles.

Past Newport-Westminster clashes have resulted in hard-hitting struggles. "I don't know why that is," says Boswell. "But Newport always gives us, and Edison (Huntington Beach), for that matter, a rough game."

Westminster has won the last three times with a defense that has allowed Newport no more than seven points.

Barons Seeking Another Shutout

Despite Fountain Valley High's spectacular scoring output the past 34 games, the Barons have prided themselves in defense and they're eyeing a fourth straight shutout Friday night (8) at Huntington Beach High.

"We're looking forward to Sunset League action after four non-league games," says Fountain Valley coach Bruce Pickford.

"But we aren't taking Huntington Beach lightly. Huntington Beach is well coached and it is not undermanned. Huntington Beach is as big as we and you can rest assured we're not taking the Oilers lightly."

The only touchdown allowed in four games was in the opener at Redlands and Pickford admits his first reserves to see action, if they do, will be on offense.

"We shut out five teams last year and we'd like to break that record. Our defensive players get pretty upset when I put in someone who might hurt the shutout factor. They have a lot of pride. I know this, we'll be in trouble when our defense doesn't do the job."

Tough defensive play is nothing new for a Pickford eleven at Fountain Valley, however. The '69 team chalked up four straight shutouts and the '76 outfit allowed only two teams (Edison and Fontana) as many as two touchdowns. Each occasion resulted in a Fountain Valley defeat.

Willie Gittens (11 touchdowns and a 9.9 yards per carry average) is the major focal point at Fountain Valley, but Pickford says he has more.

"It concerns us that talk always centers around Willie and Tim Holmes," says Pickford. "We have some others who are not getting much recognition...but they are as good as anyone in Orange County.

"Larry Budgen at linebacker and guard Bryan Caldwell on defense, our defensive ends, Bob Stanton, Carlos Reyes and John Nicholson, our tackles Al Koenig and Pete Chinnici, and our secondary, with Ron Padilla and Stan Shibata. Both of those cornerbacks are major college prospects."

Also there are fullbacks Brad Wood, Tim Henigman and Jim Freeman, who double on defense.

Friday that group, along with quarterback Doug Thompson and the rest of the Barons invade Huntington Beach as heavy favorites—but Pickford warns: "Huntington Beach has the best quarterback (Marco Pagnanelli) we've faced this year and that creates problems."

Estancia Foe Small

Santa Ana Has Tough Obstacle

Santa Ana High is still reeling from big football losses to Villa Park and Foothill of Santa Ana, and the trend doesn't figure to change Friday night when the Saints host Estancia High of Costa Mesa at the Santa Ana Bowl at 7:30.

Estancia is 4-0 and listed among Orange County's top 10 teams, while Santa Ana is 1-3. Villa Park beat the Saints 19-0 and last week Foothill stopped them in the Century League opener, 28-7.

"We're a small team and we took a heck of a beating against those guys," says Santa Ana coach Bob Larson. "We only have two guys over 200 pounds and those bigger kids can just wear us down sometimes."

He figures to get the same kind of treatment from Estancia, although the Eagles won each of their last two games by just two points.

"Estancia has a very fine running game and we have to stop that and control the ball as much as possible if we expect to win," Larson says.

Santa Ana runs its veer offense under the direction of quarterbacks Jerry Wallbridge (6-0, 185) and Ken Cast (5-11, 185). They alternate each series and trade off starting assignments.

"They're practically dead even in ability," says Larson. "They're both seniors and they both deserve to play, so I switch almost every series of downs."

The running backs are Sam Masania (5-10, 185) and Ken Peterson (5-9, 165), and the top receivers are John Carlyle (5-7, 160) and Matt McLaughlin (5-9, 160).

Standouts on the line are David Reyes, a 220-pound tackle, and Danny Baldwin a a 5-7, 140-pounder.

Hornets Edge Pirates, 13-11

Orange Coast College scored six goals in the final 2:55 but came up short Tuesday afternoon as the visiting Fullerton College Hornets captured a 13-11 South Coast Conference water polo decision.

Steals and fouls in the closing three minutes brought the game to an exciting climax after the Pirates had trailed the Hornets, 12-6.

Fullerton put the decision out of reach with seven goals in the first period and while the furious OCC fourth quarter rally matched this total, it wasn't quite enough.

Goalie Bob Kuegemann had five saves during the action for the Pirates.

The Hornets now have a 36-22 edge in the series which started in 1953 and a 3-0 South Coast Conference mark this season.

Orange Coast, the defending champion, is now 1-1 in conference play and 12-6 on the season.

In other area junior college action, Golden West College ran its Southern California Conference record to 2-0 with a 19-7 victory over Santa Monica. Tony Wooten scored three of his game-high five goals in the third period for the Rustlers, now 7-5 overall.

Saddleback College had a case of missed opportunities in its 11-7 Mission Conference defeat to Palomar. The Gauchos had four man-advantage situations and couldn't cash in on any of them as they watched their overall record dip to 10-9.

Defense

GREG KOHLER, Corona del Mar — Kohler was credited with eight unassisted and seven assisted tackles, intercepted two passes, caused a fumble and recovered another in a 7-6 victory.

MIKE KENNEDY, Costa Mesa — A junior, Kennedy's defense against the power play to his side and the pressure he applied to the Mission Viejo quarterback earned him special recognition.

RANDY COLLINS, Capistrano Valley — A safety in the Cougars' secondary, Collins intercepted a pass, recovered a fumble and had two sacks on the opposing quarterback.

DAVE EHLOW, Dana Hills — Ehlow was involved in 12 tackles at linebacker and played with fewer errors than any Dolphins defender.

JOHN BOGDAN, Edison — Bogdan, a linebacker, had 10 tackles, sacked the quarterback once and blocked a punt in his third straight solid performance for Edison.

JOHN HESS, El Toro — Hess, who turned in a solid game with his tackling and pressuring the Corona del Mar passer, was credited with seven unassisted tackles and eight assisted tackles.

EARL HEWELL, Estancia — A cornerback in the Eagles secondary, Hewell saved a 14-12 victory by knocking down a last-minute two-point conversion attempt by Orange, in addition to his usual consistent game.

RON PADILLA, Fountain Valley — Padilla came up with his third interception in four games and did an outstanding job tackling on sweeps and provided the Barons with good pass coverage.

SHAWN VONESH, Huntington Beach — Vonesh, who has been consistent since the season began, had five unassisted tackles from his position in the HB secondary.

HERB THOMPSON, Irvine — Also the offensive player of the game, Thompson stopped the running of Elsinore on his side and forced the opposition to pass to the other side of the field.

BILL GOMPF, Laguna Beach — A two-way standout at quarterback and linebacker, Gompf caused and recovered a fumble, blocked a punt and was the catalyst of the Laguna Beach defense.

LEE KNOWLES, Marina — A sophomore middle guard, Knowles started his first game and had seven lead tackles, three assisted tackles and caused an interception with a hard pass rush.

CRAIG OLSON, Mater Dei — Olson knocked down two passes, had six unassisted and six assisted tackles and pursued well.

DAN CHARNITSKI, Mission Viejo — Charnitski had seven unassisted tackles, four assisted tackles, intercepted a pass, recovered a fumble, caused an interception and caused a fumble in a 14-6 victory over Costa Mesa.

DON BARKER, Newport Harbor — Barker, with a whopping 17 lead tackles, played a superb all-round game despite the Sailors' 24-0 loss.

MIKE MURPHY, San Clemente — Murphy at defensive tackle plugged up the holes effectively in sealing off Laguna Beach's offense and played a near mistake-free game in terms of execution.

JOHN ORTMAN, University — Ortman graded out as University's top defender. He had four first hits and came up with a key quarterback sack. He was the most consistent University defender in a 25-12 loss.

Secondary Strong For Gauchos Rival

RIVERSIDE—A week ago, Saddleback College looked like a sure bet to defeat Riverside City College this Saturday night in Mission Conference football play.

But after an impressive RCC performance last Saturday, Saddleback's odds of winning have decreased considerably.

Riverside's Tigers rolled to a 31-0 victory over Southwestern last week and RCC coach Jim Kross called the win "a complete performance. We played very well, we didn't have the breakdowns that hurt us in earlier games."

RCC has a 2-2 record for the season, defeating College of the Desert, 26-14, while losing to Antelope Valley, 28-0, and Moorpark, 21-7.

"We're attempting to make some strides with our program and the win last week could have been a turning point," says Kross, in his second year as Riverside's head coach.

The Tigers are led by running back Ray Jackson (6-0, 210), the leading ground gainer, and freshman quarterback Tim Carter (5-10, 170), who completed 11 of 20 passes last week for 115 yards.

Defensively, Riverside is strong in the secondary with three of the four starters sophomores. "Our secondary has played super. We got four interceptions last week and now have 12 for the year," says Kross.

The Tigers also have a good linebacker in freshman Tobin Hood (6-2, 215), an All-CIF 3-A selection last year at Riverside Poly.

As for Saddleback, Kross says the key to beating the Gauchos is stopping quarterback Billy Yancy.

"I'm amazed at Yancy's improvement. He's throwing well. Now he's a complete player. He really puts pressure on the defense. We have to contain Yancy to beat Saddleback and we've got to get to him quickly," says Kross.

Vikes Back Averaging 11.4 Yards

Greg Karman didn't play football at Marina High (Huntington Beach) last season but he is making up for lost time this campaign despite the won-lost record of the Vikings.

Karman will be the starting fullback for coach Mike Henigan's Marina squad Friday night (8) when the Vikes tangle with Edison High's (Huntington Beach) Chargers in opening Sunset League action at Orange Coast College.

He was an outstanding football player as a freshman at Marina, was hurt as a sophomore and opted to play soccer last year in place of football.

"He was a little disillusioned after his sophomore season," Henigan says. "But he stayed with our weight program and we all felt he was a good prospect for this year. I talked to him a lot to get him out and he has done a super job for us."

Checking the statistics for the 5-10, 185-pound fullback, he has scored four touchdowns and is averaging 11.4 yards per carry. He has carried the ball 37 times for 423 yards and had his biggest night against Magnolia when he picked up 225 yards in 15 attempts.

Last week he was out with the flu during much of the practice time and only carried six times for 35 yards.

Where does his ability come from?

"He's got tremendous leg strength and good quickness," Henigan says. "He is able to find the open hole, too, but his main assets are his strength and quickness.

"Last summer he was able to lift 295 pounds in the power clean event. There are very few college players who could do that," the coach adds. "You have to be able to use your legs in that event.

"He's also a good student and one of our seniors who is doing a fine job for us. I think he can play junior college football and potentially can play for a four-year school."

Mesa Could Go Bananas, Says Schaff

San Clemente High football coach Allie Schaff, despite the fact his South Coast League team is undefeated, says his Tritons have a major obstacle to overcome Saturday night (8).

The Tritons invade Orange Coast College to duel Costa Mesa High's pass-happy Mustangs and Schaff cites the passing of Mesa, a two-platoon system and the odds Mesa will not be turning the ball over as much as it did last week.

"Turnovers have hurt Costa Mesa," says Schaff. "It hasn't been so much the interception as it has been the fumble. Mesa has fumbled away many scoring opportunities.

"Costa Mesa quarterback Jerry Cribbs was the leading passer in Orange County until last week and if he gets a hot hand against us they could go bananas.

"His passing puts pressure on us everywhere with the short passing game and they beef up their running game with two tight ends.

"We'll just continue to try to do the things we do best."

What San Clemente does best is run...with only an occasional pass thrown in. However, when San Clemente goes to the air, it's usually effective.

The Tritons completed two of three passes in an 18-14 win over Laguna Beach and have averaged two completions a game for 30 yards.

"We don't throw on third and big yardage. But we have won games with the passing game," says Schaff.

San Clemente figures to enter with the same unit that knocked off Laguna Beach, with the exception at halfback where Nate Rowsey assumes a starting role.

5 Area Polo Teams Win

It was a day for high scoring on the high school water polo scene Tuesday as three games were won with 16 or more goals and five players had five or more markers.

Mitch Kahn had six goals as San Clemente edged Monte Vista (Whittier) 16-15 in overtime, Bob Cuttle had half a dozen goals as El Toro whipped visiting Capistrano Valley 17-5 and Bob Dolan scored six times to lead Costa Mesa past host Foothill (Santa Ana) 11-4.

Dave Varney had five goals and Joe Delaney four as Dana Hills cruised past Cypress 17-3 while Doug Pickford scored five goals to lead Edison of Huntington Beach past Esperanza (Anaheim) 11-5.

Sunset League action kicks off tonight with three games on tap at the Orange Coast College pool. Huntington Beach and Fountain Valley square off at 6 followed by Edison against Marina (Huntington Beach) at 7 and defending champion Newport Harbor meeting Westminster at 8.

HUME CRONYN AND JESSICA TANDY PLAY 'THE GIN GAME'
Bitterness and Comedy Among the Geriatric Set

New Broadway Play

'Gin Game' a Grabber

By WILLIAM GLOVER

NEW YORK (AP) — "The Gin Game" is a small, funny play with a sharp finale wallop.

Two ranking Broadway performers, Hume Cronyn and his wife Jessica Tandy, are the whole cast of the seemingly innocuous trifle that premiered at the Golden Theater.

The production originated at the Long Wharp company in New Haven, Conn., which is becoming a regular contributor to Main Stem well-being, though the script has also been tested by several other regional companies.

IT WAS WRITTEN by D. L. Coburn, a native of Baltimore now resident in Dallas, and is reportedly his first excursion into dramaturgy. Besides having a keen ear for dialogue, Coburn shows rewarding compassion and understanding for the way in which the minor irritations of every day life can become time bombs that destroy a person.

The locale is an old age welfare home where over a span of three weeks his two lonely characters meet, warily reach out to each other over a card table and then quite unintentionally smash down the poignant, private illusions of self-survival.

Through three scenes, Tandy and Cronyn sustain a level of surface amity, two crotchety elders in mutual flight from the petty, patronizing aggravations of institutional existence. Once in a while a fragment of detail about the lives they have left behind is dropped, hurriedly covered while another rummy hand plays out.

COBURN'S DRAMATIC device, a bit too pat, is to have the woman win constantly as the man grows increasingly wrathful. In scene four bitterness reaches a violent peak, and as she wins — if anyone has been counting — the 13th hand, the last shreds of Cronyn's pride rip apart. He totters off designer David Mitchell's tattered gray veranda, leaving her to ponder the moral of this excursion into solitary dismay.

Until the ultimate grimness develops. Nichols and his stellar players keep "The Gin Game" lightly diverting, and make the comments about geriatric life more amusing than they really are. Cronyn is a fidgety marvel, Miss Tandy a wonder of grandmotherly aplomb.

"The Gin Game" is miniature drama, presented with superbly professional artistry.

'Rocky' and His 'Jaws' Diet

Q: Success, fame and fortune seem to agree with Sylvester Stallone. Seeing him at poolside in Beverly Hills, he looked fantastic. If he's on a secret diet — I'd like to know what it is. Will you ask him? — Flo Levy, Beverly Hills, Calif.

A: Here's the diet. But I doubt if you'll like it. Three times a day Rocky eats shark meat and alfalfa!

Q: Wasn't there a fatal accident that caused W.C. Fields to quit making jokes about his loathing children? Do you have any details? — H.C., Memphis, Tenn.

A: In 1941, Christopher, the 4-year-old son of Anthony Quinn, fell into W.C. Fields' lily pond and drowned. The comedian was so distressed at the tragedy that soon afterwards he gave up his rented house and moved elsewhere. The heartbroken mother was actress Katherine DeMille, adopted daughter and an assistant to her father — the famous movie director, Cecil B. DeMille. Anthony and Katherine Quinn divorced in 1964.

Q: Hasn't a Georgia neighbor of Jimmy Carter's been voted Penthouse magazine's "Pet of the Year"? — M.T. Thomas, Norfolk, Va.

A: Not exactly a neighbor, her name is Victoria Lynn Johnson, a native of Georgia, who used to display her 34-23-34 lines modeling in Atlanta before she made dozens of TV commercials and three films. You may have seen her latest, "Grizzly," where she comes to an untimely end at the paws of a killer-bear who didn't care for lady forest rangers. Vicky's hobby is jogging. Knowing that she'd be a beauty queen someday, she took up karate and is now quite an expert.

JOHNSON

Q: We remember watching you trying to interview the late Leopold Stokowski on TV and getting into a slight dispute right on the air with him. Was the maestro really such a feisty fellow? And how did he pronounce his name? — Mrs. T. Suchinlas, Long Island.

A: That's what started the argument. We pronounced his name "stuh-kow-sky." He interrupted to correct us. Saying it was "STORK-kow-sky." Decades before the conductor had been asked by the New York Times whether it was true that "full name was Leopold Boleslawawicz Antoni Stanislaw Stokowski, or was he in reality a cockney named Lionel Stokes? His answer, we're told, wasn't fit for the Times to print." Stokowsky was born in London on April 18, 1882, and to give you an idea of how long ago that was, Queen Victoria was on the throne and Wagner, Liszt and Tchaikovsky were still alive. His father was a Polish anthropologist and his mother Irish.

Q: Who said "When you are down and out, something always turns up—usually the noses of your friends"? —H. Golden, Columbus, Ohio.

A: Orson Welles.

Q: In which war did actor Peter Falk lose his eye? — Elizabeth D., Trenton, N.J.

A: No war at all. Peter lost his eye as the result of a tumor — when he was only 3 years old.

Q: Wasn't the Korean National Anthem stolen from "Auld Lang Syne"? — Sue R., Sacramento.

A: Not stolen — borrowed. The Korean Anthem is from an old Scottish Air. The same to which "Auld Lang Syne" is traditionally sung. The lyrics of "Auld Lang Syne" are credited to Robert Burns, who said, when he sent them to the British museum, he had copied them down from a song sung by an anonymous old man.

'Elvis in Concert' Tops TV Ratings

NEW YORK (AP) — More people watched "Elvis in Concert," the taped highlights of two of Elvis Presley's last live concerts, than any other program during the week ending Oct. 9, A. C. Nielsen figures show.

But three consistently popular programs, "Laverne & Shirley," "Happy Days" and "Charlie's Angels," finished close behind and left ABC where it has been since the new season began in September — at the top of Nielsen's weekly ratings, released Tuesday.

ABC maintained its firm grip on TV's prime time audience despite "Elvis in Concert" the night of Oct. 3 and a strong No. 5 finish for the final game in the American League baseball playoffs Sunday night.

ABC HAD AN OVERALL Nielsen rating of 20.6 for the week ending Oct. 9, followed by NBC at 19.8 and CBS at 19.4.

"Elvis in Concert," seen in an estimated 24.1 million homes, was taped in June at concerts in Rapid City, S.D., and Omaha, Neb. Presley died in August.

Sports specials were popular with prime time viewers through the entire week. ABC's Monday Night Football game between Oakland and Kansas City ranked No. 21 for the week, and the second game of the National League championship series between Los Angeles and Philadelphia, Wednesday evening, was No. 24.

IN ORDER, THE TOP 10 shows of the week were:

"Elvis in Concert," a 33 rating, representing 24.1 million homes, CBS; "Laverne & Shirley," 28.7 or 20.9 million, "Happy Days," 28.6 or 20.8 million, and "Charlie's Angels," 26.6 or 19.4 million, all ABC; Baseball Playoffs Oct. 9, New York vs. Kansas City, 25.5 or 18.6 million, NBC; "All in the Family," 24.2 or 17.6 million, CBS; "Three's Company," 23.8 or 17.4 million, ABC; "60 Minutes" and "The Betty White Show," 23.3 or 17 million, both CBS, and "The Six Million Dollar Man," 23.1 or 16.8 million, ABC.

Victor French

Heavy Turns Humorous

By WINIFRED ELZE
TV DATA SERVICE

"I've always played killers, bank robbers, rapists, perverts...crowds would part when I walked out of the theater. They'd ask everybody else for autographs," says Victor French, star of the new series "Carter Country." French says he had "20 years of this" treatment, and called it "painful." He finds his role as Police Chief Roy Mobey a welcome change.

"It's my own show and that's a difference," French says. Because of all his villainous portrayals, he feels "no one got to see another side of me until 'Little House On The Prairie.'"

Beginning in 1974, French co-starred as a regular on "Little House, On The Prairie" in the role of Mr. Edwards, and has directed several episodes of the series.

"Carter Country" is set in a fictional small town. French says, "It takes place in Clinton Corners, a little Southern town supposedly a stone's throw from Carter's home town in Georgia."

The protagonists around whom conflict centers in the series are a young, black policeman (Kene Holliday as Curtis Baker) from New York City, and the old fashioned police chief (French) of a typical Southern town.

THE SERIES, says French, has "all of the trials and tribulations of that kind of conflict: my being from a small town, him being from the big city; my being white, him being black. We have a mayor who is trying to pattern himself after Jimmy Carter, expecting that will get him to the same place."

SHOWS FUNNY SIDE
Victor French

French says that, so far, they have done shows dealing with "unionization of the police force, the homosexual issue, old age, tax relief and a dream sequence show which is really farcical. Like 'Barney Miller,' which reflects New York, we're trying to reflect this small Southern town."

French emphasized that "We are not doing a show based on one-liners. It's based on situations. We're trying to keep the characters real. The basis of comedy is conflict; we're not trying to bring in joke writers. There are problems between the police department and the mayor's office."

FOR YEARS, French has directed the Victor French Drama Workshop, a weekly get-together in Hollywood at which he and other actors meet to learn, rehearse, perform, and generally just "stay in shape."

Because of the new demands on his time, French says, "I don't have the workshop any more. I miss it incredibly; I may start one day on a weekend. I lecture in colleges and high schools as much as I can."

This summer he directed and starred in "After The Fall" at Company of Angels Theater in Hollywood.

"I JUST FINISHED 'After The Fall,'" he said. "Mimi Cozens played Louise, my wife...It was such a smash here, so well received. You've never seen such reviews. I'd love to bring the whole company to New York."

Of the differences between live theater and TV or films, he said, "They're two different mediums. Theater is just an actor's medium; television is a director's medium. We do our shows in front of a live audience (for 'Carter Country'). I love that...I want to do good films and I love funny people because they're in funny situations."

A 'Comeback' for Leslie

By JAY SHARBUTT

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It seems only yesterday that Lesley Ann Warren helped fight international evil in "Mission Impossible" and guested so often in other series you felt six of her were at large in TV.

Nope, says Miss Warren, there's only one her. And that one hasn't done a TV show in over a year, the last being a sitcom called "Snip," which NBC dumped before it even had a chance to premiere.

But she returns to the tube Oct. 16, 17 and 18 when NBC airs its adaptation of Harold Robbins' potboiler, "79 Park Avenue."

MISS WARREN, WHO FIRST scored big in a TV version of "Cinderella," now will be playing a poor New York girl who, to survive, successively becomes a prostitute, a stripper and a madam.

Demure in a blue dress and sporting a small powder burn she suffered on the cheek while taping a CBS musical last week, she was asked what she's been doing during her self-imposed hiatus from TV.

WARREN

Well, she said, she was in a three-woman play in Chicago, "Vanities," a film called "Harry and Walter Go to New York," and made her debut as a night club singer in a saloon here, Studio One. She didn't recall the last as time of much joy.

WHILE SHE'S FACED LIVE audiences before, in Broadway musicals, she said she had a severe case of the willies when, backed by a four-piece combo, she stepped before the Studio One crowd to sing.

"It was a heavy experience," said the brown-eyed actress, laughing about it now. "I was unsure of what I wanted to do, and that came through in the act. I didn't feel comfortable ....."

"One reviewer said I looked like a lost little girl, trying to look funky on the stage. And that was not far wrong."

But Miss Warren, who has perfect pitch and says she once recorded an album Capitol never released, plans to have another go at singing soon — but not in a saloon.

THIS TIME, SHE SAYS, it'll be in a recording studio making another album with new songs by a composer friend, Allee Willis.

Lesley, who sets off Sunday on a four-city tour to publicize "79 Park Avenue," admitted that in her earlier years of TV acting she wasn't exactly picky about proffered roles.

"I used to take whatever I was offered because I was crazy to work," the 30-year-old Manhattan native said. "I love to work, so I'd do it all the time. But there was no career direction."

"I'D DO EPISODIC television, a series, without any long-term goal. Ultimately, it became unsatisfying creatively. And that's what really put a stop to it. I got so I'd hate to do episodic shows. I dreaded it."

Now, she says, she's going to be lot more selective about her roles.

And, she adds, "I'm trying to find a balance between work and real life — and there is a difference — so that I can hold on and not jump into things I'll be sorry about later."

Young French Actress American Movie Buff

By BOB THOMAS

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "What kind of a character do I play?" muses French actress Isabelle Adjani about her first American film, "The Driver."

"It reminds me of some dialogue in 'To Have and Have Not.' Bogart says to Bacall, 'Who are you and where do you come from?' She answers, 'Well, it's a long story,' and she never does respond to the question.

"THAT'S THE WAY it is in this picture. Ryan O'Neal is The Driver, Bruce Dern is The Detective, I am The Gambler. The people are anonymous; there are no first names. That is an indication of what is going on. They are not into each other's personna. They are independent but not indifferent."

ADJANI

It is surprising to hear a French actress, just turned 22, quoting a 34-year-old American movie. Not only that, she can cite over vintage films with the ease of a third-year student at the UCLA Film School. She may play The Gambler in "The Driver," but her real addiction is movies.

How did she become a filmoholic?

"WHEN I WAS 14, I discovered the Cinematheque in Paris," she explained. "Along with other students I spent my days in the theater, taking along food to sustain me — at that time I was living on grapefruit juice. I couldn't get enough films. My favorite directors? Murnau, Hitchcock, Lubitsch, Tourneur."

The daughter of a car salesman, she appeared in a children's movie at that time. Two years later she was chosen by the Comedie Francaise for a role in Moliere's "School for Wives."

"They asked me to sign a contract — for 20 years," Miss Adjani recalled. "Twenty years! I couldn't imagine signing my life away for 20 years, yet there are actors who do that. It is very prestigious to appear in the Comedie Francais. You can appear in films as well, but only if the Comedie doesn't need you.

"I TOLD THEM, 'I'm sorry but I can't sign for 20 years.' They were upset and couldn't understand why I would refuse."

Francois Truffaut had seen her on the stage and in films, and he offered her the role of Victor Hugo's love-obsessed daughter in "The Story of Adele H." Truffaut had written the script years before and had been waiting for an actress with youth and fire to play the demanding role.

"Are you sure you don't want Glenda Jackson?" Miss Adjani inquired.

Truffaut assured her he wanted Isabelle Adjani. "The Story of Adele H." drew a good, though not sensational response in France — "the French are used to Truffaut and the other New Wave directors."

AMERICAN CRITICS went bananas over Miss Adjani's tour de force performance; the New York Critics, National Society of Critics and National Board of Review named her best actress of 1975, and she was nominated for an Academy Award. Louise Fletcher was the winner for "One Flew over the Cuckoo's Nest."

Miss Adjani has appeared in other French films and in Roman Polanski's "The Tenant." Director-writer Walter Hill ("Hard Times") brought her to Hollywood for "The Driver," a co-production of 20th Century-Fox and EMI Films.

Nostalgia Series

'Fourth of July' Slated on NBC

By JAY SHARBUTT

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Dan Curtis, TV producer, says he went through a time in 1952 as an NBC barnstormer, selling syndicated TV series to various stations in various towns in the Midwest.

"What shows," he recalled with a sad sardonic grin. "'Dangerous Assignment,' 'Hopalong Cassidy,' 'Douglas Fairbanks Theater,' 'His Honor, Homer Bell'..."

But while hawking this vast sonata of entertainment, he had this comedy series idea about his boyhood in Bridgeport, Conn. And when he got back to New York, he commenced writing it.

He says he called it "When Every Day Was the Fourth of July."

FOUR REJECTIONS and 25 years later, he's just finished filming it as an NBC movie for next year — as a pilot for a possible one-hour family series set in Bridgeport in the late 1930s.

It still has the original title. But there's less emphasis on comedy and more emphasis on serious matters, namely a little girl who persuades her father, a lawyer, to defend a brain-damaged World War One veteran accused of a murder she knows he didn't commit.

It's a change of pace for Curtis, a horror show specialist. He used to produce the old soap-opera-cum-vampire series, "Dark Shadows," then made about 16 TV thrillers, movies like "Dracula" and "The Night Stalker."

A stocky, casually dressed man of 49, he says he never gave up on making "When Every Day Was the Fourth of July" even after his old employer, NBC, first rejected it in 1952.

HE GOT A SECOND rejection two years later from MCA, the giant entertainment conglomerate, when he worked there. CBS then got interested, he says, but the project never panned out.

"Now, the best thing that happened was that I never sold it, because I never would have done this kind of show," says Curtis, referring to the program in its present form.

"The whole idea always was a kind of 'Leave It to Beaver' set in the 1930s. But my thinking hadn't matured enough then."

He said he pitched it to NBC for a second time two years ago, still as a sitcom idea. But after initial interest, NBC passed again.

LAST YEAR, HE said, he started thinking about it as a pilot for an hour-long family show, "still with humor, warmth and all the rest of it.

"But also we'd be taking on more serious subjects, things that really happened or could have happened in the '30s, and not just things involving only kids."

Whereupon he again pitched it to NBC — successfully this time.

"OF ALL THE things I've ever made, I've never had a better time than in making this one," he said. He was asked what happens if NBC decides not to order it as a series.

"Well," Curtis said after a long pause, "I did what I've always wanted to do. If it goes as a series it'll be a hit. If it doesn't go, that's life. I just had the greatest trip in the world."

San Diego Nixes $2,000 Tab for Dinah TV Show

SAN DIEGO (AP) — San Diego County has refused to pay $2,000 as its share of the Dinah Shore show to be aired from San Diego in mid-November.

Supervisors rejected the bill after the City Council agreed to pay $20,000 instead of $30,000 asked. A total of $105,000 was billed to the Convention and Visitors Bureau, and it is asking for help.

Supervisor Roger Hedgecock, a board member who refused to contribute, said the county's study of the money request "probably cost $2,000 already.

Can Housewife Find Happiness as Phoenix Mayor

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Margaret Hance describes her first two years as mayor of Phoenix this way: "Can a middle-aged housewife find happiness as the mayor of the nation's 15th largest city? Or, if you can't stand the heat, get back in the kitchen."

Slim and honey-haired, Mrs. Hance, 54, has won a place nationally as a double rarity — a woman mayor and a Republican one.

She has administered one of the nation's fastest growing cities with what she terms a conservative approach, focusing on a balanced budget with no tax increase while maintaining basic services.

"As I say to women's groups everywhere, don't be afraid of tokenism. Use your uniqueness to further yourself and women in the future," she said during a recent interview.

Mrs. Hance fits neither the stereotype of the rabid female feminist nor the self-description of middle-aged housewife.

Named to WomenSports magazine's "Tomboy's Who's Who," the Phoenix native says youthful competition in sports helped steer her from a strictly feminine role as homemaker and encouraged her involvement in public life.

Mrs. Hance was a television producer before working her way into politics as a volunteer. The all-consuming role of mayor, however, has usurped Mrs. Hance's ambitions only in her later years, free from family duties.

Beer Here

Beer tasting parties haven't caught on like wine tasting. That's because if you got a good bottle of Bud in '74, you get a good bottle of Bud in '75.

By DENNIS McLELLAN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Most beer drinkers have a favorite brew and stick to it religiously.

Paul Newman is noted for his unquenchable craving for Coors. And Billy Carter, one of the nation's all-time great beer drinkers, has a decided preference for Pabst.

But how do the Billys and Pauls of the world come to prefer one brew over the other?

Like anything else, it all boils down to personal preference, usually obtained over years of imbibing various brands.

One way to speed up the process considerably and even become something of a connoisseur is to hold a beer tasting party.

Gather friends over for the afternoon or evening, supply them with test forms and start passing around the unmarked glasses of brew.

ONE WAY TO judge beer is visually. Is it clear or cloudy? Is it light or dark? Is the sediment visible or invisible? Does it or doesn't it have a head? Is the head small, full or too full?

The preference test is made by judging on a scale from one to five these factors: body, foam, color, aroma, taste and bitterness.

Although beer is one of the nation's most popular beverages among the adult population, beer tasting parties have not caught on like wine tasting.

"One of the reasons," says Irwin Newton, regional representative for the U.S. Brewers Association, "is you have so many varieties of wines and they change from year to year.

"Beer is more standardized. If you got a good bottle of Bud in '74, you get a good bottle of Bud in '75."

Still, whatever brand's taste, body, color and aroma is most appealing to an individual all gets back to personal preference, says Newton.

"I LIKE A good head of foam on my beer," he says. "The main thing to serving a good glass of beer is to have a clean glass that hasn't been washed with any kind of detergent because that leaves a film and kills the foam."

Regardless of whatever brand proves to be a hit, the Brewers Association offers these tips for serving a "perfect" glass of beer:

•To get glasses sparkling clean use a soap-free odorless cleaning agent or a detergent. Baking soda also is good.

•A clean glass is necessary to acquire the proper foam and flavor. If washed properly, there will be no bubbles clinging to the side of the glass. The foam will adhere to the inside of the glass in a ring design.

•Rinse glasses thoroughly in clean, cool water, preferably running water. Do not dry glasses. Instead, allow them to drain so air can circulate.

ANOTHER SUGGESTION is to rinse the glass in cold water before serving to eliminate dust.

Beer connoisseurs say there is an art to pouring beer. A high foamy head is preferred by some; others like a short head.

To get a fine creamy head pour the beer directly into the glass instead of down the side. One way to get the foam the way you want it is to tilt the glass and begin pouring the beer down the side, then straighten the glass and pour into the center.

By varying the distance between the can or bottle and the glass you can learn how to build a high or low head.

NEWTON NOTES that sunlight can have a bad effect on beer. It should not be kept out in the sun for any great length of time and also should not be kept in the trunk of a car.

The Association recommends storing beer in a cool, dark place, away from the light. This helps protect the rich body and strength of the brew.

When chilling it in the refrigerator, it should be kept away from the freezer.

Most people prefer drinking the beverage when it has been chilled to about 42 degrees. Experts say this is when it is most delicious.

Beer is a perishable product, adds Newton, and often has a shelf life of about 90 days, depending on the brand.

Brewing Dinner

Cooks who routinely use wine in preparing meals often overlook cooking with another liquid that is just as versatile: Beer.

The beverage, which varies in color and character from the pale and delicate to the dark and full-bodied, has been used for basting, flavoring and as marinades for centuries.

Following are some favorite recipes using the centuries-old beverage:

MEDIEVAL SHRIMP

3 pounds jumbo shrimp in the shell
1 cup beer
6 scallions or shallots, chopped
2 cups chopped celery (tops and all)

Place shrimp in a deep saucepan. Add beer. Strew top with scallions and celery. Cover; simmer 6 minutes or until shrimp are pink and tender. Serve hot or cold with Dill Butter or Sherry Garlic Butter.

Dill Butter

¼ pound butter
½ cup beer
1 tablespoon dill weed

Heat in a small saucepan. Serve in individual dishes with shrimp.

Sherry Garlic Butter

¼ pound butter
½ cup sherry
½ tablespoon garlic salt

Heat in small saucepan. Serve in individual dishes with shrimp.

PRAIRIE BEER CAKE

1 cup shortening
2 cups brown sugar, firmly packed
2 eggs, well beaten
3 cups sifted flour
½ teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons baking soda
1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon allspice
½ teaspoon cloves
2 cups (1 pint) beer
1 cup chopped walnuts or pecans
2 cups finely chopped dates or prunes

Cream shortening until soft in a large bowl;

The Lunch Bunch

If you forgot your lunch or can't go out, one service will bring it in a basket.

By JUDITH OLSON
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Forgot your lunch again today? Tired of grabbing a sandwich from the vending machine? Too busy to slip out for a salad?

Lori's Kitchen to the rescue. A good soldier bearing a wicker basket piled high with home-made sandwiches and salads will be at your desk at the mere turn of a telephone dial.

For those who haven't seen the traveling baskets, they're quite a sight. Appealing vegetarian and meat salads, large sandwiches on extra-sized bread and containers of carrot cake are arranged attractively in red-checked linings.

Nineteen saleswomen currently serve customers in the Newport Beach, Costa Mesa, Santa Ana, Irvine, Huntington Beach and Tustin areas, dropping in on beauty shops, office buildings and factories to deliver their wares.

"PEOPLE THINK we're Red Riding Hood," commented Eileen Hale — "They get really excited. It's like Christmas."

All of the saleswomen are asked frequently if they prepared all the food at home themselves, and most of them have been called Lori at one time or another.

Though the sales force has not made the sandwiches and salads, the food is as close to homemade as it can be. The items are put together fresh each morning at Lori's Kitchen, which is the domain of Charlene Johnson, a Costa Mesa resident.

There is a real Lori, too. She is the 17-year-old daughter of Mrs. Johnson and a senior at Estancia High School.

The kitchen opened its doors in December of 1973.

A NEIGHBOR of Mrs. Johnson and her husband, Eric, had the idea of taking food out in box lunches but decided they didn't want to follow through. Johnson, who is in the meat supply business, thought it would be a good opportunity and asked his wife if she'd like to try.

"I had 45 minutes notice," Mrs. Johnson recalled. "I thought it would be a good idea so we started with sandwiches on three choices of bread.

"We didn't quite make ends meet that first year," she added, "even though we did all kinds of extra catering."

They soon moved into salads, to appeal to a wider spectrum of lunch eaters, and added carrot cake "before people knew what it was."

Today the menu leans heavily toward vegetarian recipes, even though there are the old standbys of roast beef, turkey, and salami.

"WE'RE ALWAYS hunting for more vegetarian items," Mrs. Johnson said. "We get requests from our customers, too. They tell us what they want. They send recipes and say 'Why don't you do this or that?'"

The preparation begins at 5 a.m. and the sales force is out by 9:45. Most food is delivered by noon because the saleswomen have found that many gradually add sugar, creaming until light and fluffy. Add beaten eggs and beat well. Sift together flour, salt, soda and spices; reserve about 2 tablespoons, and beat remainder into batter. Slowly add beer (it may foam while beating) and blend thoroughly. Toss nuts and fruits with reserve flour mixture to coat lightly. Fold into batter, blending thoroughly. Pour batter into a greased and floured 10-inch tube pan. Bake in a pre-heated oven at 350 degrees for 1 hour and 15 minutes, or until cake tester comes out clean. Cool in pan for 10 minutes and carefully turn out of pan to cool completely. Cover and refrigerate overnight. Yield: 12-14 servings.

...Beer

Lemon Glaze

1½ cups sifted confectioner's sugar
4 Tablespoons melted butter
Lemon juice

Gradually add lemon juice to sugar, beating until smooth and of spreading consistency. Spread on top of cake to make a thin glaze.

Beer Bread

1 cup beer
1 pkg. dry yeast
4 tablespoons melted butter
½ cup light brown sugar
2 cups all-purpose flour
1 cup whole wheat flour
½ cup wheat germ
½ teaspoon salt

Preheat oven to 375 degrees. Heat beer to lukewarm in a 1-quart pan. Remove from fire and sprinkle on the dry yeast. Add pinch of sugar to start the fermentation and set pan aside until mixture bubbles. In a large 4-quart bowl, place 2 tbsps. of the melted butter, sugar, flours, wheat germ and salt. Add beer and yeast mixture. Stir quickly to incorporate the ingredients. Turn out on a working area and knead a minute or two.

Grease bowl with 1 tbsp. of the melted butter, return dough to bowl and let rise until double in bulk (about 1 hour). When risen, turn out again on working area and knead another minute. Shape into a loaf and place in greased bread pan, approximately 8 x 4 x 2½ inches. Brush top of loaf with butter and let rise again until it reaches the top of the pan. Bake for about one hour or until the top of the loaf is crisp and brown. Makes one loaf.

...Lunch Bunch

eople aren't willing to wait much ast then for lunch.

Some days the baskets come back ompletely empty and other days not uch is sold. But business has been isk lately, with hundreds of andwiches and salads moving out ach day.

The saleswomen have funny stories o tell about peddling their wares. ne, who was stuck in an office uilding elevator, kidded her fellow risoners, "At least we won't starve."

ANOTHER HAD car trouble with a ull load in her basket and sold her unches to employees at the dealership where it was towed for repairs.

Since it is relatively difficult to plan how much food to buy each day to the last sandwich and salad, there are usually some lunches left each day.

"The salesgirls are very hungry when they get back," Mrs. Johnson said, "and they can buy the food. We discount everything to them."

There is a little walk-in trade and everything left at the end of the day is taken home to several of Mrs. Johnson's neighbors who have large families to feed.

"I wish I knew when people would be hungry," she said after answering one phone call to cancel an order and another to place one.

Mushrooms 'n' Beef

Mushrooms have been coming to the aid of the party for many years, centuries in fact, but obviously never more than last year when the U.S. crop of mushrooms zoomed to 347.1 million pounds, 12 percent more than the year before. The modern dinner party menu would be lacking distinction without at least one dish smartened up with mushrooms.

Whether for guests or the family, mushrooms are excellent sauteed, broiled, steamed, pickled, marinated raw, or cooked in stuffings, stews, soups and sauces. Mushrooms, fresh or canned, can almost always be added to a dish during the last few minutes of cooking — just in case there are a couple of extra guests and you feel you must "stretch" the main dish.

MUSHROOMS AND BEEF BURGUNDY

¼ cup oil
4 pounds boneless beef shoulder, cut in 1-inch cubes
2 cloves garlic, minced
½ cup all-purpose flour
2 cans (10½ oz. each) condensed beef broth
1½ cups red burgundy wine
2 bay leaves
2 teaspoons salt
½ teaspoon thyme leaves, crumbled
¼ teaspoon ground black pepper
4 cups carrots cut in 2-inch chunks
1½ pounds small white onions, peeled
2 pounds fresh mushrooms or 4 cans (6 to 8 oz. each) whole mushrooms

In a large heavy saucepot or a Dutch oven heat oil. Add beef; brown well on all sides, a few pieces at a time; return all beef to saucepot. Sprinkle with garlic and flour. Stir to blend in all of the flour. Add broth, wine, bay leaves, salt, thyme and black pepper. Bring to the boiling point.

Reduce heat and simmer, covered, for one hour. Stir in carrots and onions. Cover and simmer until meat and vegetables are tender, about 45 minutes. Rinse, pat dry and halve fresh mushrooms or drain canned mushrooms. Stir mushrooms into saucepot. Cover and simmer for 15 minutes. Serve with parslied noodles and tossed salad, if desired.

COMPANY CHICKEN BREASTS WITH MUSHROOMS

6 tablespoons flour
1½ teaspoons salt, divided
¼ teaspoon ground black pepper
6 chicken breasts, skinned, boned and split (12 pieces)
3 tablespoons oil
8 tablespoons butter or margarine, divided
1 cup chopped onions
1 can (10¾ oz.) condensed mushroom soup
¾ cup water
¾ cup dry white wine, divided
1½ pounds fresh mushrooms or 3 cans (6 to 8 oz. each) whole mushrooms
2 packages (9 oz. each) frozen cut green beans or tiny peas

On waxed paper combine flour, 1 teaspoon of the salt and black pepper. Cut each chicken breast in half. Coat with flour mixture. In a very large skillet heat oil and 2 tablespoons of the butter. Add chicken a few pieces at a time; brown about 3 minutes on each side. Remove and set aside. In same skillet saute onions until golden. Add mushroom soup, water and ½ cup of the wine and remaining ½ teaspoon salt. Bring to the boiling point. Return chicken to skillet.

Reduce heat and simmer, covered, until chicken is tender, about 10 minutes. Rinse, pat dry and halve fresh mushrooms or drain canned mushrooms. In a large skillet melt remaining 6 tablespoons butter. Add mushrooms; saute until golden, about 5 minutes. Stir green beans into skillet with chicken. Cover and simmer until beans are crisp tender, about 5 minutes. Stir in sauteed mushrooms and remaining ¼ cup wine. Heat until hot. Serve over boiled brown rice, if desired.

Mushrooms and beef burgundy are a company dish.

Amtrak Kitchen Used

By JOY TOPPIN

HELENA, Mont. (AP) — Grandma wouldn't be baffled in the kitchen of a gleaming red, silver and blue Amtrak train speeding across the country. She was an artist at turning out wholesome meals on wood-burning, cast-iron stoves — and so are many Amtrak cooks.

The stoves are standard on most of Amtrak's older dining cars — the ones inherited in 1971 when the National Railroad Corp. took over most of the country's passenger service from private railroads.

Barbara Halliday, an Amtrak spokeswoman in Washington, D.C., said some of the dining cars are more than 30 years old, and many of the cooks were inherited with the cars.

An Amtrak chef, using a stove filled with flaming pressed-wood logs, must have a quick eye and a sharp nose because the stoves have no temperature controls.

"Once you get it hot, you just know when to add one more log at a time to maintain the temperature," said Ulysses Harper, one of Amtrak's chefs, as he sweated over a stove on a run between San Francisco and Denver.

Amtrak started operations with 286 diesel and 40 electric locomotives and 1,275 cars, all bought or leased from existing railroad lines. During the past six years, Amtrak has spent or committed $582.7 million to buy new equipment.

The newer Amfleet kitchens operate on electric power provided by the locomotive. Individual meals are prepared by a caterer and frozen on the train. The food later is heated in a modern oven.

Later this year, Amtrak will begin to use the first of its new bi-level Superliner cars, the first long-distance passenger cars to be built in the United States in decades, Ms. Halliday, who prefers that title, said.

Each Superliner will have an electric kitchen with microwave and standard oven, an electric grill, toaster, coffeemaker and warming table. Superliner kitchens will be on the lower level of the dining car, while dining passengers will sit on the upper level.

Turbocafes on the French-designed Turboliners also have modern cooking equipment. Coach passengers order over a counter and dine at their seats on fold-down tables. The Turboliners are used primarily in New York State, Amtrak said.

Ronald Humble, an Amtrak reservation agent in Los Angeles, said menus vary with each line, though some standard dishes are available.

Humble said breakfasts are priced up to $3.75, with lunches from $3 to $4.50 and dinner from $4.50 to $7.

Nutty Desserts

When are desserts not just desserts?

When packed with protein as well as good taste.

Usually thought to be just a flavorful finale, more than 60 pounds of desserts are consumed each year by the average American. But, their nutritional contribution to meals is often ignored.

How to improve it? How about slipping a little extra protein and other important nutrients into the family's meal by ending with peanut butter?

Treat Taste Buds to Chicken While Reducing

Are you on a lo-cal diet that lowers your morale more than your weight? There's no need to give up the joy of satisfying your taste buds while trying to slim down.

Here's a great way to entertain friends or feed a hungry family without anyone even quessing that you're counting calories — 240 per serving to be exact!

In a matter of minutes you can mix together a flavorful sauce consisting of an envelope of au jus gravy mix and canned tomatoes with mushrooms, green peppers, and sherry added for extra appeal. Spoon the sauce over the chicken and let the oven do the rest of the work while you take an invigorating bicycle ride or a long walk.

Keep your slimming secret by serving this Creamy Low Calorie Salad Dressing over individual wedges of iceberg lettuce. To prepare the dressing, combine buttermilk with prepared yellow mustard and place in an attractive cruet. Only you will know this zesty dressing contains just 15 calories per tablespoon.

To complete your menu, add green peas, plus sliced peaches, and skim milk, black coffee, or tea with lemon.

LO-CAL BAKED CHICKEN

1 frying chicken, cut up
1 envelope (¾-oz.) Au Jus gravy mix
1 can (1-lb.) tomatoes
¼ cup chopped green pepper
1 can (3-oz.) mushrooms, undrained
¼ cup sherry, if desired

Remove excess fat from chicken; arrange chicken, skin side up in shallow pan. Stir together contents of gravy mix envelope, tomatoes, green pepper, mushrooms, and sherry; spoon over chicken. Bake at 375 degrees for 50 to 60 minutes, until tender. 4 to 5 servings.

CREAMY LOW-CALORIE DRESSING

½ cup buttermilk
2 tablespoons prepared yellow mustard
1 tablespoon vinegar
1 tablespoon oil
¼ teaspoon salt

Combine all ingredients, stirring until well blended. Serve as dressing with lettuce. Makes ¾ cup dressing.

GERMAN CHICKEN BURGUNDY

2 small broiler-fryer chickens, cut in parts
¼ cup butter
1 large onion, cut into rings (1 cup)
1 stalk celery, diced (½ cup)
1 cup chicken broth
½ cup burgundy wine
6 peppercorns
2 cloves
1 bay leaf
1 lemon

Brown chicken parts in melted butter over medium high heat in large skillet for about 10 to 15 minutes. Add onion rings and diced celery, and saute 5 more minutes. Drain off all but 2 tablespoons of butter. Add chicken broth, wine, peppercorns, cloves and bay leaf. Sprinkle with lemon juice. Simmer covered for 30 minutes. Serve hot on prepared noodles. Serves 6-9.

DELUXE GERMAN CHICKEN AND SAUERKRAUT

6 broiler-fryer chicken thighs
½ cup vegetable oil
1 medium onion, sliced (½ cup)
½ cup sliced celery
1 pound can sauerkraut
Salt and pepper
2 tablespoons sour cream

Heat oil in large skillet on high heat. Brown thighs very brown on all sides, about 15 minutes. Remove to warm platter. Remove all but 2 tablespoons of oil from skillet. Add onions and celery to skillet oil and saute three minutes. Drain can of sauerkraut and rinse with cold water. Pat dry. Stir sauerkraut into sauteed onion and celery. Sprinkle all sides of chicken thighs generously with salt and pepper. Return thighs to skillet on top of sauerkraut. Cover and simmer over low heat for 20 to 40 minutes until thighs are done. Remove thighs. Stir the 2 tablespoons sour cream into sauerkraut; heat thoroughly. Pour sauerkraut into center of serving dish and place thighs on top. Serve piping hot. Serves 4.

Hot Potato Skillet.

Tater Skillet

Create tempting Hot Potato Skillet...a hearty main dish with the built-in convenience that modern cooks look for. This specialty takes its lead from the tangy-sauced hot potato salads that hold revered places on German menus. But from that point on, there are new twists galore.

There's no blending, stirring, or straining needed to "prepare" a flavorful minute-ready sauce, canned chicken gravy assures that.

To complete this tasty main dish, embellish with generous-sized pieces of browned franks and the subtle flavor of garlic.

HOT POTATO SKILLET

1 pound frankfurters, cut in thirds
1 large clove garlic, minced
¼ cup butter or margarine
1 can (10¾ ounces) chicken gravy
1 pound raw new unpeeled potatoes, sliced
1 cup celery cut in 1-inch pieces
1 tablespoon chopped chives

In skillet, brown frankfurters with garlic in butter. Add remaining ingredients. Cover; cook over low heat 35 minutes or until vegetables are tender. Stir now and then. Makes four servings.

The Creative Cabbage

The addition of fall vegetables to a main dish is a clever way to stretch a pound of ground beef while adding both international flavor and variety to your menu.

Here are two quick and easy recipes using eggplant and cabbage. Both are thrifty and tantalizing yet much less time-consuming than their traditional ethnic counterparts.

Stuffed cabbage rolls come of age in this modernized, easy-fix, and attractive Meatloaf Stuffed Cabbage. The flavorful meatloaf mixture is a cinch to prepare using an envelope of potato pancake mix which takes the place of both the crumbs and the seasoning. Rather than the tedious job of preparing individual cabbage rolls, simply fill two cabbage halves with the meatloaf mixture for a spectacular open-faced main dish.

MEATLOAF STUFFED CABBAGE

1 medium-size head cabbage
1 egg, slightly beaten
½ cup water
1 pound ground beef
1 envelope (4 servings) potato pancake mix
½ teaspoon salt
1 can (1-lb.) tomatoes
4 slices process American cheese, diced

Cut cabbage in half. Remove core and cut out center of cabbage, leaving a shell about 1-inch thick. Cover and simmer cabbage shells in salted boiling water for 15 to 20 minutes, until almost tender. Drain. Chop ½ cup cabbage using center of cabbage removed from head. (Save remainder to use for coleslaw.)

Combine egg, water, ground beef, contents of potato pancake mix envelope, salt and chopped cabbage; spoon into cabbage shells. Combine tomatoes and diced cheese in shallow baking dish. Place stuffed cabbage shells on top of tomatoes. Cover with foil. Bake at 400 degrees for 30 to 35 minutes, until tender. Remove cover; bake 10 minutes longer, until meatloaf is browned. 6 servings.

BEEF AND EGGPLANT PATTIES

1 egg, slightly beaten
½ cup soft bread crumbs
½ teaspoon salt
1 pound ground beef
2 cups diced, unpeeled eggplant
1 tablespoon oil or shortening
1 ¾ cups water
1 can (6-oz.) tomato paste
1 envelope (1½-oz.) spaghetti sauce mix
Mozzarella cheese, if desired.
½ pound spaghetti, cooked

Combine egg, bread crumbs, and salt. Add beef and eggplant; mix lightly. Shape into 6 patties; brown in oil in large skillet. Add water, tomato paste, and contents of sauce mix envelope; simmer, uncovered, 10 minutes, stirring occasionally. Top patties with cheese and serve with sauce on cooked spaghetti. 6 servings.

Meatloaf-stuffed cabbage uses potato pancake mix.

Easy to Go Bananas

Don't hesitate to stock up on bananas. They'll never go to waste. Even the very ripe ones will serve you, as these are the bananas that work best in any number of bread, cake and muffin recipes.

BANANA PANCAKES

Prepare pancake batter from a mix, following package directions, or with favorite recipe. Add 1 diced banana to batter and bake as directed.

BANANA BISCUITS

¼ cup butter or margarine
¼ cup apricot jam or orange marmalade
⅓ cup flaked coconut
2 bananas
1 package (9.5 ounces) refrigerated buttermilk biscuits

Divide butter among 10 muffin pan cups. Place muffin pan in 400 degree oven until butter melts. Divide jam and coconut among muffin cups. Peel bananas and cut into slices. Place about three banana slices in each muffin cup and place a biscuit in each cup. Bake in 400 degree oven for 20 minutes or until biscuits are golden brown and a cake tester inserted in center comes out clean. Cool for 10 minutes, turn out of pan and serve warm. YIELD: 10 biscuits.

Vegetables, Fruits Affected by Summer Rains

Produce

The fresh fruit and vegetable market will be somewhat mixed for the next few days. Less acreage planted because of water problems, the unseasonable August rain and the anticipation of Florida vegetables are all having an effect on prices in the area.

VEGETABLES

Local supplies of fresh vegetables are all but exhausted as we enter the fall-winter months. Cucumbers are very short with industry buyers looking to Florida suppliers to fill the void.

Iceberg lettuce supplies are short at the present time as the Salinas Valley dwindles in volume and the Yuma area has yet to begin heavy volume. This is just a temporary situation barring weather problems in the Arizona area.

In the next few days consumers can look for a price break in green onions and radishes. The celery market is as cheap as it's been all year and remains one of the best buys in the produce department. Excellent items in terms of quality and price include: eggplant, cabbage, romaine, potatoes and brown onions.

Florida corn is expected within the week. Quality can be expected to improve but prices will remain high during the initial stages of the harvest.

Items in short supply at this time, but expected to improve within a short period of time, include: hot house cukes, broccoli and squash.

FRUIT

The citrus market is beginning to change as supplies from Florida and Texas enter the area. Consumers can expect good quality grapefruit with low prices and improved quality oranges, again with prices reflecting a better supplied market. In shopping, consumers should be aware that out-of-state fruit is not as blemish free as California products but nevertheless have excellent eating quality. The Indian River grapefruit from Florida is considered the finest of the season.

Many varieties of pears are available. The Comice variety from Oregon and Washington will be relatively inexpensive and the eating quality is excellent. The Bosc and Winter Nellis will also be appearing on the scene and crop indications point to moderate prices. A newcomer not usually appearing in the Southern California area is the Seckel pear. It too is very sweet and is a favorite for canning and fancy desserts. The fruit is small, averaging about two inches in diameter.

Item Pricing Battled

By SUSAN SWARD

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Take a look at the box of cereal or the can of frozen lemonade you buy. There may be a little square box full of lines and numbers on the side of the package.

Behind that little box is the story of one of this Capitol's long-standing consumer issues, the battle over item pricing.

At issue is the nationwide grocery industry's drive toward the use of electronic scanners to tabulate your bill at the checkout stand, using a mechanical eye to read the code in the little box.

So far, 15 supermarkets in California use the scanner system, but almost all stores carry items marked with codes for scanners' eventual use.

For the last two years consumer and labor groups have tried to win passage of a bill assuring that the grocery industry will keep individual price tags on items even if they use scanners.

But the bills have always been killed or pared down to measures requiring the grocery industry to continue item pricing for another year or two-year period.

Each time, the grocery industry officials have fought a permanent requirement for item pricing, saying they need more time for testing to see if the law is really needed.

"It's unnecessary labor forced on the businessman that the consumer is going to have to pay for. To mandate individual pricing is nothing short of featherbedding by legislation," said Merle Goddard, lobbyist for the California Grocers Association.

Grocery representatives have also argued that putting the price of an item on the shelf below it is a sufficient guide for shoppers.

"The grocery industry has some hope, I think, that consumers at some future date will accept having prices taken off items. And we see absolutely no chance of that happening," said Roy Alper, lobbyist for the California Citizen Action consumer group.

Recently, Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. signed a bill requiring item pricing to continue from Jan. 1, when the existing item pricing requirement would run out, through Jan. 1, 1980.

A November survey by the Assembly Office of Research found that customers wanted item pricing continued and that elimination of the pricing system would mean little savings to supermarkets.

State Sen. David Roberti, the Los Angeles Democrat who has pushed item-pricing legislation, cited the study in a floor debate on the bill.

"Consumers view item pricing as a necessity rather than a convenience," he said.

Alper said the Roberti bill would "protect consumers for another two years. That means in another year and half, consumer groups will have to put together another effort and get another extension adopted."

Alper said he could not understand "why the grocery industry continues to press for removal of item pricing as an essential feature of the introduction of scanner systems."

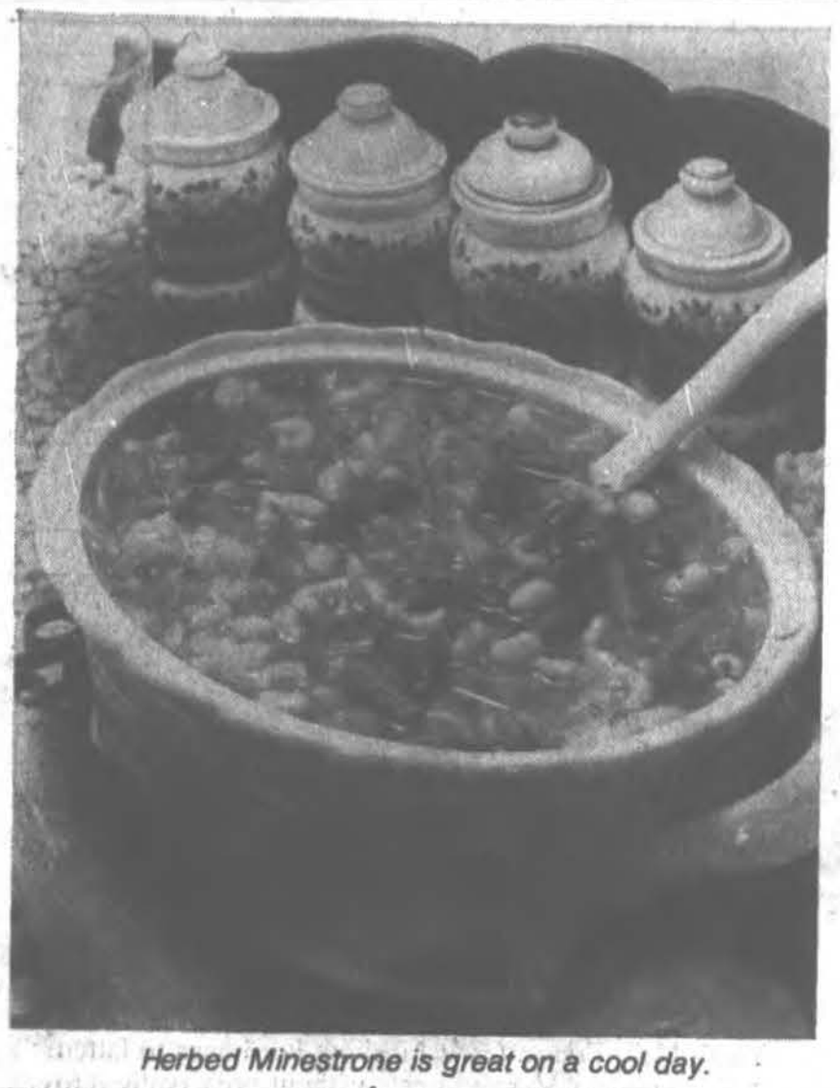
COSTA MESA 2701-B HARBOR BLVD. FOUNTAIN VALLEY 18100 BROOKHURST



Herbed Minestrone is great on a cool day.

Herbed Soup Is Hearty

"Soup is a healthy, light, sustaining food which is good for everyone," wrote the great Brillat-Savarin a century and half ago, "it soothes the stomach and encourages it to receive and digest more nourishment..."

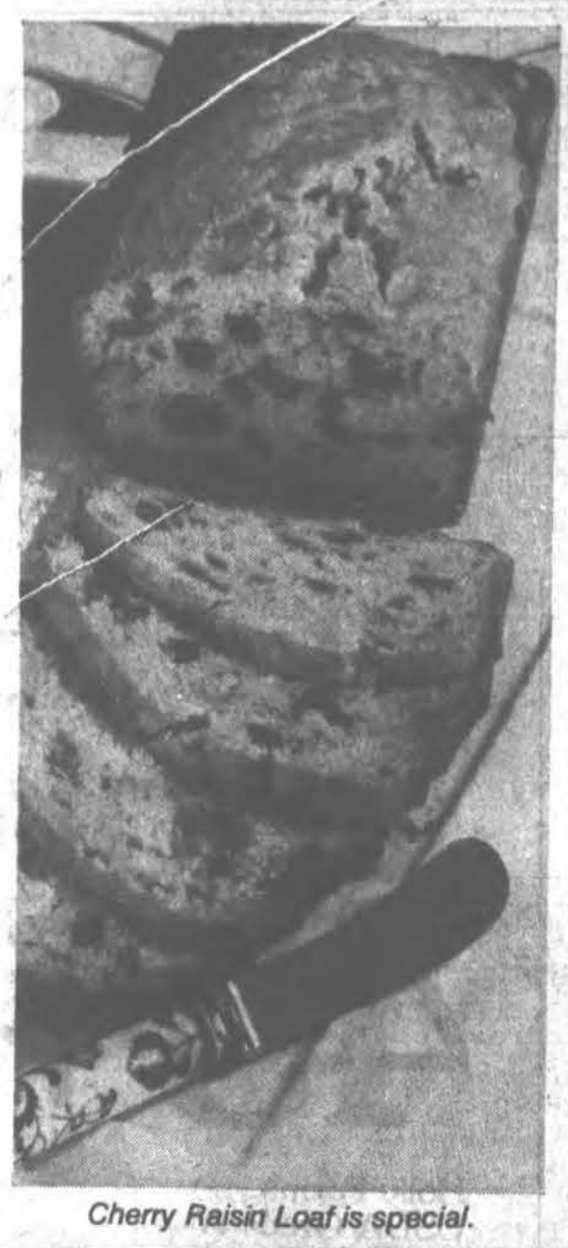
Herbed Minestrone is, of course, of Italian origin and so is seasoned in Italian fashion with basil and oregano leaves, parsley flakes, black pepper, a bay leaf and instant chopped onion and instant minced garlic. This is a hearty bowlful and a comforting food for a cold winter day.

HERBED MINESTRONE

2 pounds beef soup bones
½ cup dried white kidney beans
½ cup dried red kidney beans
¼ cup instant chopped onion
½ teaspoon instant minced garlic
1 bay leaf
2 quarts water
1 can (1 lb.) tomatoes, broken up
5 teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon ground black pepper
1 cup diced peeled carrots
1 cup diced peeled potatoes
1 cup diced zucchini
1 cup fresh cut green beans or 1 package (9 oz.) frozen cut green beans
½ cup elbow macaroni
¼ cup parsley flakes
1 tablespoon basil leaves
1 teaspoon oregano leaves

In a large heavy saucepan or a Dutch oven combine soup bones, white and red kidney beans, onion, garlic, bay leaf, water, tomatoes, salt and black pepper. Bring to boiling point; skim foam; reduce heat. Cover and simmer for 2 hours or until beans are tender. Remove soup bones and bay leaf; skim fat from soup. Add remaining ingredients. Return to boiling point; reduce heat. Cover and simmer 30 minutes longer, or until vegetables are fork-tender.

Yield: 10 portions.



Cherry Raisin Loaf is special.

Cheery Cherry Bread

Weekend breakfasts ought to start with something special, just because weekend breakfasts are special. Generally, there's more time to enjoy the morning meal so it's worth a little extra effort.

CHERRY RAISIN LOAF

2 cups sifted all-purpose flour
½ cup sugar
Pinch salt
½ teaspoon soda
1 teaspoon baking powder
½ cup (1 stick) butter
½ cup seedless raisins
1 cup maraschino cherries, coarsely cut
2 egg yolks, beaten
½ cup buttermilk

Combine dry ingredients. Cut in butter as for pastry. Add fruit, mixing thoroughly. Add egg yolks. Slowly add buttermilk, mixing to form a stiff batter. Pour into buttered 8½ x 4½ x 2½-inch loaf pan. Bake in preheated 350-degree oven for 45 minutes or until toothpick inserted into center comes out clean and loaf begins to pull away from sides of pan. Cool 15 minutes in pan; turn out onto wire rack.

Blintzes for That Weekend Brunch

Swedish pancakes and waffles enriched with the country goodness of real butter and milk are truly the best ever. Blintzes, hiding a sweet filling and topped with dairy sour cream are another traditional type of pancake that will please the weekend breakfast-eers. You can use the same basic batter for both the pancakes and waffles. This delicious recipe is accented with cardamom.

If you are a kitchen gadget collector and have a plett pan or an authentic heart shaped scandinavian waffle iron now's the time to use them. Otherwise a regular griddle and waffle baker will do the baking job nicely.

Some successful party givers love to entertain at a relaxing, informal brunch. When it's a large gathering you can have an extended dining time, encouraging guests to eat when hungry. For such occasions, bring out the portable appliances and invite them to bake their own waffles and pancakes whenever they're ready to eat. Assorted toppings might include such things as butter and hot syrup, whipped honey and butter and whipped cream and berries.

Blintzes are another thin pancake made with milk, butter and eggs. Fill these with brown sugar or preserves then fold and fry til golden. You can make the blintzes ahead — even the night before if desired — and refrigerate. Then fill and fry the sweet pancake envelopes at serving time. Guests can do their own if you have an electric skillet.

BLINTZES WITH SOUR CREAM

1¼ cups milk
3 eggs
¾ teaspoon salt
1 cup flour
1 tablespoon sugar
¼ cup butter
Brown sugar or raspberry preserves
Dairy sour cream

Beat milk with eggs, salt, flour and sugar until blended. Melt 2 tablespoons butter in 7 or 8-inch skillet or crepe pan. Pour into batter and beat to blend. Pour 3 to 4 tablespoons batter into hot pan, tilt to coat entire bottom. Bake over medium high heat until golden. Remove from pan. Repeat with remaining batter, stacking blintzes.

Spread blintzes on counter, cooked side up. Sprinkle a spoonful of brown sugar or raspberry preserves into center of each. Fold in two opposite sides then remaining sides to make a square envelope. Melt remaining 2 tablespoons butter in skillet. Fry blintzes until golden. Serve with sour cream. Makes 12 to 14 blintzes.

SWEDISH PANCAKES AND WAFFLES

1 cup butter
2½ cups flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon ground cardamom
½ teaspoon salt
2½ cups milk

Melt and cool butter. Mix flour, baking powder, cardamom and salt. Beat in milk and butter to form a smooth batter. Bake small pancakes on griddle or in plett pan. If preferred, pour about ½ cup measures into electric waffle iron over-the-range Scandinavian iron.

Bake as for waffles. Serve with whipped cream and fresh or thawed frozen berries or syrups. Makes about eight waffles or 2 dozen pancakes.

It's a Peachy Tapioca

Make a tapioca pudding like these below, flavored with real vanilla extract — and your family will enjoy it that much more.

The following recipe for Vanilla Peach Tapioca makes a dozen polite portions or allows a round of doubles for a family of six. It takes just minutes to make, but you will have to allow time to chill it. (Some people would prefer this pudding while still warm — it tastes sweeter, although it has a much softer consistency).

Vanilla Butterscotch Meringue Pudding is another goody made with quick-cooking tapioca. This too is a quick, easy-do pudding yielding eight portions, although it takes a few minutes to brown its meringue topping.

VANILLA PEACH TAPIOCA PUDDING

½ cup quick-cooking tapioca
1 cup sugar, divided
¼ teaspoon salt
1 quart milk
3 eggs, separated
2 tablespoons vanilla extract
1 can (1 lb. 13 oz.) sliced cling peaches
½ cup toasted shredded coconut

In a medium saucepan combine tapioca with ⅔ cup of the sugar, salt, milk and egg yolks; mix well. Let stand 5 minutes. In a mixing bowl beat egg whites until foamy; gradually beat in remaining ⅓ cup sugar. Beat until soft peaks form; set aside. Cook tapioca mixture, stirring constantly, until mixture thickens and comes to a boil. Remove from heat; stir in vanilla extract. Gradually fold hot mixture into beaten egg whites; blend quickly. Drain peaches; reserve 3 slices for garnish. Dice remaining peaches; fold into tapioca mixture along with coconut. Turn into a 1½ quart serving bowl. Chill. Garnish with reserved sliced peaches and whipped cream, if desired.

YIELD: 12 portions

VANILLA BUTTERSCOTCH MERINGUE PUDDING

¼ cup butter or margarine
⅔ cup firmly packed brown sugar, divided
3 eggs, separated
2¾ cups milk
¼ cup quick-cooking tapioca
⅛ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon vanilla extract
¼ cup butterscotch morsels

In a small saucepan melt butter. Add ⅓ cup of the brown sugar; cook until sugar is dissolved; set aside. In a small saucepan beat egg yolks. Gradually add milk, blending well. Add tapioca and salt; let stand for 5 minutes. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly until mixture thickens and comes to a boil. Remove from heat; stir in vanilla extract and reserved cooked brown sugar mixture. Turn into a 1-quart casserole; set aside. In a small mixing bowl beat egg whites until soft peaks form. Gradually add remaining ⅓ cup brown sugar; beat until stiff but not dry. Spoon meringue over tapioca mixture; spread so that it touches edge of casserole. Sprinkle butterscotch morsels over meringue. Bake in a preheated moderate oven (375 degrees) 10 to 15 minutes or until meringue is golden brown.

YIELD: 8 portions

Plan Allows 3% Bone

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bits of bone the size of ground pepper and odd scraps of meat may soon find their way into bologna, sausages and hot dogs.

The Agriculture Department wants to allow bony material from ribs, backbones and other parts of slaughtered animals to make up 20 percent of the meat portion of processed meats.

But the plan, which will take effect after the public is allowed to comment, will require labels that tell consumers just what they're eating.

The regulations will allow bones and the hard-to-remove meat clinging to them to be ground up and forced through sieves with tiny openings.

Large pieces of bone will remain behind, but the meat, marrow and "connective tissue" plus small bits of bone will survive the sieve.

The new proposal would allow up to 3 percent of bone in the reclaimed meat product. If the maximum of 20 percent of meat product was used to make a pound of salami, for example, about one-tenth of an ounce of bone would be included.

Assistant Secretary Carol Tucker Foreman, who announced the plan last week, said she expects it will be controversial.

The Agriculture Department says the process will probably add "somewhat less" than one billion pounds of beef and pork to the American food supply.

Holly Farms
USDA Grade A Fryers
whole body

The one to pick to be sure.
That's Holly Farms. Grown without hormones to fatten them up, and shipped fresh, without preservatives to cloud the flavor. USDA Grade A means the standards are high, let me tell you. Not even a wingtip may be missing. There must be no torn skin. No pin feathers. You shouldn't have to pluck away with tweezers to make this fowl beautiful. And the giblets should be there for your favorite gravy or stuffing recipe. Yes indeed, Holly Farms grows those plump and pretty cluck-clucks you can be sure of.

A bird in the pan is worth two (or three) at the takeout.

You know what the prices are for a 9-piece bucket of ready-made: between $4 and $5. But did you realize that's only about 2½ lbs. of chicken? Compare that to our prices. Thighs at 89¢ lb. total $2.23 for 2½ lbs. Wings at 59¢ lb. total $1.48. Breasts at 98¢ total $2.45. And a whole bird of 2½ lbs. would be $1.08.

Homemade chicken is obviously not an extinct bird.
With this kind of a price difference, it won't go the way of the dodo and the carrier pigeon to that feathery Valhalla in the sky. Not for our customers, it won't. Besides, for anyone with half a tastebud in his or her head, homemade is a far, far better thing than that greasy kid stuff. Sure, we're all grateful for the convenience of takeout at the end of a long, hard day. But our customers never seem to lose sight of the fact that, when it comes to a dinner worth clucking about, a home cooked meal does it, every time.

You don't have to wing it.
That is, unless you want to. We offer all sorts of parts as well as whole chicken. Purchase a package of nothing but wings, if you like. They make tasty hors d'ouevres.

Someone we know blends together a drizzle of honey with a dollop of soy sauce, adds a speck of ginger powder and a clove of garlic. The chicken gets to marinate in that as long as possible... anywhere from 20 minutes to overnight. Then she pops 'em under the broiler till they're crispy brown. Not even takeout can offer greater delight than this.

Hunt and peck through our prices.
We list a representative flock of them below. But we have lots of good prices throughout our stores. So start your shopping list now, but finish it at Lucky. Your budget will know the tasty difference. And that's what discount is all about, isn't it?

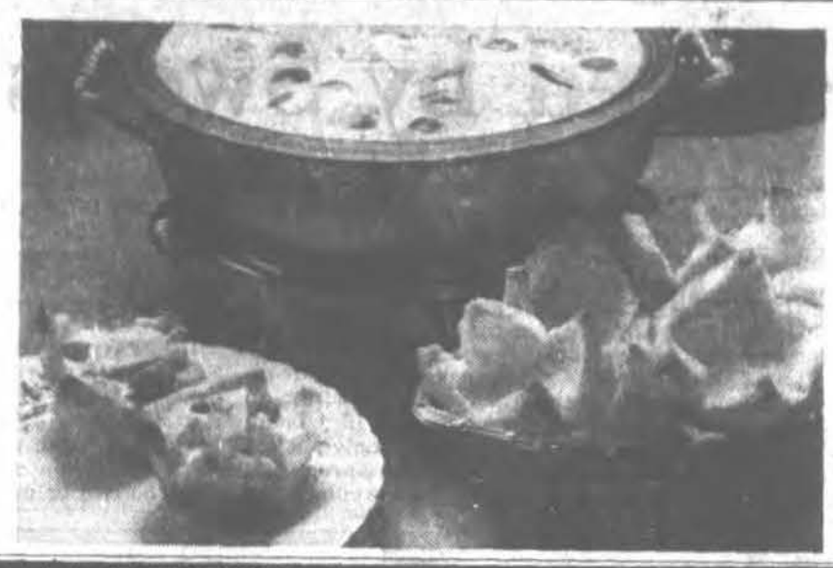
Tuna Tulips For Teens



Tuna Tulips are ideal for teenage parties.

Anytime you have a youngster's birthday party coming up — or, perhaps a teen bash — think tuna. Tuna's one of the most popular food favorites with young people of all ages. And fortunately, you can fix it in any number of interesting ways — and never have to worry about the cost!

Here's a fun recipe that even a young teenager can whip up for guests if you're involved with other household details. It's called Tuna Tulips — a very professional-looking party specialty made with canned tuna in vegetable oil — and oven-toasted bread "tulips" prettily shaped in a muffin pan. The tuna mixture is creamy and delectable, enlivened with just a bit of lemon juice.

TUNA TULIPS

1 can (3 or 4 ounces) whole mushroom caps
Milk
¼ cup butter or margarine
¼ cup green pepper strips
3 tablespoons flour
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup heavy cream
2 egg yolks, slightly beaten
2 cans (6½ or 7 ounces each) tuna in vegetable oil
¼ cup coarsely chopped pimiento
2 teaspoons lemon juice

Drain mushrooms. Add enough milk to mushroom liquid to make 1½ cups; reserve. Melt butter in saucepan. Add mushrooms and green pepper and cook, stirring occasionally, over medium heat 5 minutes. Blend in flour and salt. Gradually add reserved liquid and cook, stirring constantly, until mixture thickens and comes to a boil. Add cream to slightly beaten egg yolks; mix well and stir into sauce. Add tuna and pimiento; heat. Stir in lemon juice. Serve in Toasted Bread Tulip Cups. Serves four.

TOASTED BREAD TULIP CUPS

Brush eight large square white bread slices with melted butter or margarine. Press into muffin cups. Bake in 350 degree oven, 10 to 15 minutes, or until toasted.

Nutrition Booklets Outdated

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government spends $70 million a year to give Americans hints on nutrition. The product, say two new studies, is uniformly dull and amateurish and misses its target.

The government's nutrition publications are described as too simplistic in some cases and too complicated in others.

Two booklets are atrocious, so bad they could be replaced by a "good-looking yet informative poster," say Madison Avenue advertising experts.

The studies, by Virginia Polytechnic Institute and the Library of Congress, say 11 federal agencies operate about 30 nutrition education programs.

Publications, which account for a significant part of the $70 million cost, are among thousands of materials issued every year by the United States — one of the world's busiest printers.

One Library of Congress-VPI study found that pamphlets on infant feeding fail to address current concerns about breast feeding and new products.

In addition, federal agencies trying to spread the word about better nutrition rely on the printed word to reach consumers who do little reading, study officials say.

They also say the government distributes upper-high school and college-level pamphlets to the poorly educated.

Children Being Seduced by Sweets on Television

Slim Gourmet
By Barbara Gibbons

It's 10 a.m. Saturday. . .do you know where YOUR children are?

Safe in front of the TV? Watch out for seduction and violence. . .sweet seduction to sugary foods and violence to their eating habits!

Those are conclusions you might draw from a report in this month's "Journal of Nutrition Education," the professional publication of nutrition teachers. The report outlines the findings of 13 graduate nutrition students who sat through 27 hours of television to watchdog 580 commercials. Their aim was to see if the earlier critics of junkfood commercials have had any effect on the nutritional quality of foods promoted to children. To find out, the 13 students watched commercials aimed at children, housewives and mixed adult audiences. Here's what they discovered:

44 percent of the commercials were for things to eat.

71 percent of the food commercials aimed at children were selling presweetened cereals or snacks.

41 percent of the commercials on Saturday morning cartoon shows are for cereals.

36 percent of the commercials were for highly sugared cereals. . .those with a sugar content of 20 percent or more.

43 percent of the cereals were promoted for their sweet taste, described as "fudgey," "frosty" or some other adjective that suggests sweetness.

Cereals with a high sugar content were advertised five times more often on Saturday mornings than unswetened cereals.

49 percent of the food commercials aimed at adults over the weekend were for presweetened cereals, snacks and drinks.

47 percent of the food commercials aimed at adult evening audiences were for fast foods, snacks and drinks.

The overall nutritional value of TV-touted foods is poor, but the foods advertised to children are of even poorer nutritional value than food ads aimed at aadults.

Foods advertised on daytime game shows and soap operas were less nutritious than those promoted on evening drama, suspense and talk shows. But the most empty-caloried foods were targeted for cartoon shows.

The percentage of commercial time devoted to promoting junk food has increased since 1972.

The largest increase since 1972 is in the area of cookies, candies, gum, popcorn and snacks. That category accounted for 17 percent of Saturday morning commercial time in 1972. In the later study, junk snacks had a 37 percent share of commercial time.

High calorie junkfood manufacturers have moved in to take over the commercial time abandoned by vitamin pill makers. The vitamin companies voluntarily withdrew ads aimed at children largely because of pressure from ACT, Action for Children's Television, an activist group.

The 13 TV-watchers are graduate students in the Public Health Nutrition Program at the University of Minnesota in Minneapolis. Their findings were reported by Judith Brown, an assistant professor and acting director of the Maternal and Child Nutrition program.

How to avoid the calorific concoctions of the company cafeteria or school lunchroom. . .join the Brown Bag Brigade! Lean, light lunches from home can be quick and easy as well as weight-wary. If you lunch at your desk, here are some top-drawer ideas:

THAW 'N' SERVE SALAD BOWL — Freeze individual portions of cooked, cubed leftover lean roast meat or poultry, covered with low-cal salad dressing, in a covered plastic bowl. In the morning add some shredded lettuce or other fresh greenery. It will thaw by lunchtime. Stir 'n' eat.

HEAT 'N' EAT MEALSIZE SOUP — If your office has a hotplate, here's a hot tip: freeze single serving portions of cubed cooked lean meat. Take it to work frozen, along with a single can of vegetable soup. Heat meat and soup together.

HAVE BREAKFAST FOR LUNCH — Is cold milk available on premises? Keep a box of high protein cereal, a spoon and a bowl in your desk. Add a sprinkle of raisins, a freshly-sliced peach, or drain a can of sugar-free fruit cocktail and add it to the cereal along with some milk.

UNCANNY SEAFOOD LUNCHES are easy with canned water-packed tuna, or small cans of sardines in tomato paste. Keep a supply in your desk; they need no refrigeration. Or, for an appetizing chill, bring them from home packed in a moisture-proof bag with some ice cubes, and a few celery stalks.

DITTO HARD-COOKED EGGS, still in their shell. Just peel and eat, topped with salt and pepper. Bring a nice ripe tomato, too.

COTTAGE CHEESE SUNDAES taste like dessert! Pack icy-cold cottage cheese in an insulated wide-mouth jar. Spoon on sliced strawberries or crushed juice-packed pineapple. The jar will keep everything cold until lunchtime.

NATURAL YOGURT — For a sugar-free treat, spoon plain unsweetened lowfat yogurt into an insulated jar and top with two or three tablespoons undiluted defrosted orange juice concentrate. If available, add sliced fresh fruit, too.

COLD TURKEY, or a chilled chicken leg. . .either makes a great "maincourse" for desktop lunches! Freeze in single-serving foil packets. Take a packet each morning. Add some carrot or celery sticks for "crunch." It will thaw by lunchtime while keeping the raw vegetables chilled.

Women Producers

There are more on Broadway this year because there are fewer male investors and more benefits from women's rights.

By WILLIAM GLOVER

NEW YORK (AP) — Women prouducers are busy on Broadway in record number this season.

"With any luck" says one, "the old macho supremacy could eventually become a 50-50 proposition."

Although they still are a minority in the League of New York Theaters and Producers — 22 of 160 members — their current activity drastically revises that abstract ratio.

Five are prime forces behind current hits and 11 others are in the top management of 20 more shows announced for near-future presentation.

A producer's main tasks are three: finding a likely property, raising the essential money and hanging tough as a decision maker about everything all the way to opening night. The sort of chores that used to be regarded, with an occasional exception, as needing masculine clout.

Feminine involvement has been on the rise for several seasons. Just why is guesswork. Opinions range from the retreat of rich male investors during the recession of the early '70s to spinoff benefits from the women's liberation movement.

The new impresarios fall into two groups: well-heeled divorcees who made show business a chic outlet for their energies and long-term careerists who decided to move up in the power structure after indenture in the lower ranks as stage directors, company managers or script hounds for some of the Main Stem's erstwhile barons.

The busiest woman boss of this season is Burry Fredrik with "Night of the Tribades," a drama about lesbians that opens Oct. 13 at the Helen Hayes Theater; "An Almost Perfect Person," described as political comedy, due Oct. 27 at the Belasco and "The Dream Watcher," warming up next month in Seattle for January arrival here, the story of a boy's friendship with an 80-year-old woman to be played by Eva Le Gallienne — who, incidentally, produced plays 30 years ago.

In reserve, Miss Fredrik has dibs on "Barnum," a musical about the great showman. Like most of her distaff colleagues, the main Fredrik interest is sponsoring the efforts of creative newcomers. "That sort of thing shouldn't be left to regional theaters," she says.

Two productions are on the agenda of Doris Cole Abrahams, who notched impressive triumphs previously as a co-producer of "Equus" and "Travesties," both award-winners. In solo venture she now lists a revival of Peter Shaffer's "Black Comedy" and "One on One," a career vs. marriage drama.

Frankie Hewitt, like Mrs. Abrahams already represented on the hit parade with "Your Arm's Too Short to Box With God," is ready to enter the lists anew with "And Still I Rise," an Afro-American musical. Ms. Hewitt has been a staunch believer in the boxoffice pull of ethnic entertainment during her decade as chief of Ford's Theater in Washington, where she tests everything before Broadway sorties.

The other three women currently represented on the Rialto haven't announced subsequent plans while tending their present treasures. They are Terry Allen Kramer, who found a sleeper in the musical "I Love My Wife"; Ruth Mitchell, Hal Prince's long time partner, with "Side By Side By Sondheim" and Maxine Fox, wrapped up with her husband Kenneth Waissmen since 1972 in the spectacular success of "Grease." The pair has just sent a fifth company on national tour, leaving scant time for hunting new jackpots.

Cyma Rubin, instrumental in igniting the nostalgia fad with "No, No, Nanette," is readying reprise of another oldie, George Gershwin's "Oh, Kay."

Adaela Holzer, who has far-flung business interests outside theater, lists a brace of musical prospects, "Jam" which has to do with New Orleans jazz, and "Sarava," set in South America.

Scheduled to debut on her own is Diana Shumlin, who previously has operated in tandem with her husband Herman. The project is a musical treatment of the 1944 drama "Jacobowsky and the Colonel."

AP Wirephoto

Burry Fredrik, with Pekingese, has three plays scheduled to open.

Elizabeth McCann, like Miss Mitchell a veteran of many showbiz ventures, is moving up into the impresario ranks as a co-producer of "Dracula," set for the Martin Beck on Oct. 20. In addition she is general manager for productions presented under other auspices.

Another first-timer is Judy Gordon, preparing "A History of the American Theater."

Gladys Rackmil, undaunted after two prior flops in which she participated, is set to return as one of the sponsors of "Sunset," a charade about the recording business.

Miss Rackmil typified the attitude of the producing sisterhood by insisting that she be an active participant, not a silent partner.

Claire Nichtern, after a lengthy absence, is steering Alan Ayckbourn's "Absent Friends" to Broadway, slated to be followed with Ronald Ribman's black comedy "Cold Storage."

In other multiple partnerships, Mary Lea Johnson is en route with two Cy Coleman musicals, "20th Century" and "Encounter"; Martha Greenhouse and a partner are planning early 1978 revival of the George Kelly comedy, "The Torch Bearers."

The veteran of the group is Cheryl Crawford, who put on her first show in 1931 and at 75 is co-sponsoring "Do You Turn Somersaults?," scheduled to bring Mary Martin to Times Square in January.

Miss Crawford comments on the feminist producing trend with "it's become easier for women in all professions — anyone with the nerve, education and guts has a better chance than 15 or 20 years ago."

Detectable in her conversation, however, is a bit of wonder that the movement took so long to gain momentum.

Recalling her early days she says, "I never felt deprived or put aside because I was a woman. And it never occurred to me I was doing anything odd."

What About Daughters-in-Law?

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I just read the letter from the woman who suggested, as "The Perfect Gift" for a mother-in-law, a whole day alone with her son.

The woman wrote, "I have spent many days with my daughter-in-law but never a day alone with my son since he married several years ago. It would be a perfect gift, and it costs nothing. Please suggest this to all those daughters-in-law out there who are wracking their brains for something special to give their husband's mother."

That letter blew my mind. Please tell me, Ann, how can I get my husband to spend a day with his mother when I can't even get him to telephone her?

And why was the request directed at the daughter-in-law? It sounds like a not-so-subtle hint that she is keeping her husband away from his mother. Why didn't she suggest it to her son?

The facts are these: My husband does not have very good feelings about his mother. She is a complainer, a nag and a bore. She is also an expert at laying on the guilt. ("You always seem too busy for me. Why don't you call? Why don't you include me?")

I have tried hard to smooth things over to prevent a total rift. I'm the one who sends the flowers on Mother's Day, the gift at Christmas. I bake the birthday cake and buy her a gift from "us." If it were up to her son he wouldn't give her the time of day. And in all fairness I must admit she is a selfish, difficult woman, and I can understand his feelings, although I certainly don't condone them. A mother is a mother, and should be treated with respect and consideration no matter what.

But please, Ann, play fair. Print this letter for all the daughters-in-law who are in my spot. — OUR NAME IS LEGION

DEAR LEGION: Thank you for expressing your gut feelings. It was distressing to me to receive thousands of letters from other daughters-in-law who said the same thing. What in the world is happening to families anyway? I wish I had some easy answers, but alas — I have none.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: On April 25th, my husband asked me for a divorce. No reason — just "fed up." He moved out of the house but came by often to see our little girl. (He is crazy about her).

Last week he told me he had been living with another woman but grew tired of her and wants to come home and be a part of the family again. I was thrilled until he gave me the Big News. The girl (who is 23) went and got herself pregnant. His comment to me was, "What a dirty trick!"

I need to know how to deal with this situation. I still love my husband and our little girl needs a daddy. Please advise. — BIG TROUBLE IN TEXAS

DEAR TROUBLE: First, dear, no woman can "get herself pregnant." She needs help. And your husband helped her. He has a legal responsibility to the woman and must support their child until he (or she) is no longer a minor.

Discuss this problem with a counselor, a clergyman, or a lawyer. Take your husband along, if possible. Together you should decide what is the best course of action.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I was disturbed by the advice you gave the woman who complained about the personal hygiene of one of her co-workers. You suggested, without realizing it, a poison pen letter.

Some people have an odor that cannot be corrected with "a coat of paint." Their feelings would be terribly hurt by an anonymous letter. Anyone who cares enough to want to help people should have the courage and decency to put a signature on any letter he writes, or better yet, he should say something directly but gently. At least the exchange would be human-to-human, not an anonymous hate letter — H.M.H., D.D.S., WINNETKA

DEAR D.D.S.: As a D.D.S. you should know that perspiration on a clean body has no odor. It's when the bacteria forms that the problem begins. If a person bathes or showers before work and wears fresh undergarments he will not not have "a stench" that is "unbearable" as the writer described it. In special cases, where a physical problem exists, a little extra care at lunch time would help a lot.

Your notion that a caring person should be able to say something "directly and gently" falls short of realism. Most people, when they write, tell me they just can't do it. So the next best thing is a carefully worded message — unsigned, which I don't consider a poison-pen hate letter in any sense of the word.

Hanging In There

It looks as though Huntington Beach's Ocean View High School needs a bigger bike rack. Students, apparently figuring the "No Parking" sign doesn't apply to them, are parking their bicycles thusly at the Warner Avenue campus. One creative rider even has determined how to park in double deck fashion so he won't have to walk so far along the fence line.

County to Study Park Land Link

By KATHY CLANCY
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Orange County supervisors took additional steps Tuesday toward the purchase of park land which could link Huntington Beach Central Park with the Bolsa Chica marsh.

Supervisors unanimously ordered a study aimed at finding out how much it might cost to acquire 120 to 150 acres of park land stretching from Central Park to Pacific Coast Highway.

In addition, county planners will seek agreements with both state authorities and Huntington Beach city officials for joint planning in the marsh area.

Last June supervisors set aside $2 million to help finance what is envisioned as a possible 380-acre park stretching south from Central Park and around the marsh.

The link would run along Huntington Mesa bluff seaward and also stretch around the marsh reaching Warner Avenue.

Supervisors' action Tuesday included steps toward obtaining the first link, that running directly seaward from Central Park.

Action on the remainder will depend on how successful state authorities are at obtaining up to 924 acres of the Bolsa Chica marsh, as well as Huntington Beach city plans for the area along Warner and adjacent to Huntington Harbour.

This year's state budget includes $4.6 million to buy the marsh.

But what was not known when supervisors set aside $2 million in local funds for the linkage park in June was that the state purchase requires a $1 million contribution from local agencies.

Bob Fisher of the county Environmental Management Agency told supervisors part of the county's negotiation with state authorities would be aimed at learning if the county can provide planning assistance or other help to make up the $1 million without making a cash contribution.

The state Lands Commission so far has offered the Signal Bolsa Company, owner of the property $3.7 million, but company owners believe the property is worth $57 million, a report to supervisors said.

The owners plan no counter offer until early next year.

Fisher said the owners also are studying the possibility of residential development on portions of their holdings.

14-story Building Eyed in Huntington

Plans for a $4.3 million 14-story senior citizens apartment building — the first high rise structure in Huntington Beach — were previewed Tuesday night by the planning commission.

The tower, which will feature rooftop gardens and blacony space at each apartment, will be located at Main Street and Florida Avenue in the Five Points area near Pacifica Hospital.

Plans for the project advanced last month when the department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) selected Doty and Associates of Long Beach as the developer for the project.

Some 185 single bedroom apartment units of 540 square feet are expected to rent for $308 per month, according to Stephen Kohler of the Huntington Beach Planning Department.

The construction will be privately developed but the federal government will pay that part of the rent which is 25 percent more than the senior citizen's net monthly income.

Kohler said today that construction is scheduled to start sometime after the first of the year.

He said that an environmental impact report will be prepared by a consulting firm and must be reviewed by the Southern California Association of Governments and by state officials.

The project also requires a conditional use permit from the city when plans are completed.

Several environmental concerns were voiced at the time planning for the project was approved.

Questions dealt with overburdened sewage lines now serving the area, drainage problems and the fact that an earthquake fault lies near the area.

Kohler said that these factors will be studied by the EIR and in a special geological report required by the government.

People 62 years of age and over would qualify to live in the project.

Kohler said applications by renters can be made after construction starts with either the developer or the Orange County Housing Council.

Teen Girls Lured Into Sex Work?

NEWTON, N.J. (AP) — A cabinet maker and his wife have been accused of luring high school girls into a prostitution operation they ran from their home in Wantage Township.

Sussex County authorities charged Frank Barone, 57, Tuesday with impairing the morals of a minor, carnally abusing females under the age of 16 and prostitution. His wife, Diane, was charged with aiding and abetting him.

Authorities said at least nine girls were lured into prostitution since September 1976.

"He would pick up young female hitchhikers or he would use young girls as babysitters and in each case he would try to talk them into working for him as a prostitute," said prosecutor George Daggett.

Barone, reached at his attorney's office Tuesday, denied the charges. "They are blowing nothing into a big thing up there." About six girls "hung" around his house for a time, he said, adding they were friends of his live-in babysitter.

Daggett said charges would not be brought against any of the nine teen-agers, all high school students living with their parents in the general vicinity. "We are looking upon them as victims," he said.

He added, however, that the office was examining whether charges should be brought against any of the customers.

Gangland Revenge?

Mob Leader's Kin Slain in Florida

BAY HARBOR ISLAND, Fla. (AP) — The stepson of underworld figure Meyer Lansky was shot to death today in what police speculate was a gangland revenge killing.

Richard Schwartz, 47, was shot once as he sat in his car behind a restaurant he owned in this exclusive resort city between Miami and Miami Beach, police said.

His body was found shortly after 9 a.m. EDT behind the Inside restaurant. Details of the slaying were not immediately available.

Schwartz, son of Lansky's wife, Thelma, had been scheduled to go on trial Nov. 28 on charges of killing his drinking companion, 29-year-old Craig Teriaca, son of underworld figure Vincent Teriaca.

A number of known mob figures attended Teriaca's funeral.

Bandit Hits Burger Stand In Huntington

A scar-faced gunman robbed a Huntington Beach hamburger stand of $100 Tuesday night, police reported today.

The robbery took place about 8:25 p.m. at the Jack-In-the-Box hamburger stand at 16311 Beach Blvd., police said.

The gunman, who also had a mustache, ordered the two employes on duty to lie on the floor while he cleaned out the cash register, said police Lt. John Foster.

The robber then dashed across the street where a female with long dark hair waited in a white sedan.

7 Appointed To Vacancies In Huntington

Huntington Beach City Council members Tuesday night appointed seven residents to fill vacancies on three city boards and commissions.

The council also named former councilman Don Shipley as a lifetime adviser to the library board without voting rights.

New members named to the library board for four-year terms were Lawrence Rolon, a student at USC, and Marguerite Davenport, a teacher at Glen View School in Huntington Beach.

Dr. Marilyn Jensen, a professor at Cal State Long Beach and William Osness, a personnel analyst for the city of Santa Ana, were selected for four-year terms on the city's Recreation and Parks Commission.

Three people were appointed to the redevelopment commission for terms of varying lengths.

They are Jean-Paul Jean, a building designer; Sissel Andreassen, an interior designer and landscape architect, and Thomas Harmon, an attorney.

The library board makes recommendations to the city council for operation and conduct of the city libraries.

The recreation and parks commission makes recommendations for acquisition, development and operations of the park and the administration of the recreation program.

The redevelopment commission recommends redevelopment project areas and studies areas for "necessary improvement."

All serve in an advisory capacity to the city council.

HB Trustees Declare Land As 'Surplus'

Huntington Beach Union High School District trustees voted 3-2 Tuesday night to declare five acres of land at Westminster High School as surplus property.

Board members Doris Allen and John Hundley voted no. They said they don't believe all the land sale funds should go to Huntington Beach High School.

Because of disagreement on how the sale funds would be used, no vote was taken on actual sale of the property. At least a 4 to 1 vote is required by law to approve such a sale.

The city of Westminster wants to buy the five acres for about $500,000 if the school district will donate an adjacent five-acre parcel for a park. It is proposed that the city and school district would enter a joint use agreement in building the park.

School district officials had hoped to use the $500,000 from the land sale to buy five acres of property south of Huntington Beach High School from the Huntington Beach Company.

'Swallowed Cross'

CHP Nabs Speeder In Laguna Hills

A San Diego youth apparently tried to swallow the rosary he had been clutching and kissing for protection Thursday as he led California Highway Patrol cars on a high speed freeway chase from Los Alamitos to Laguna Hills.

When the pursuit ended in a crackup at 5:15 p.m., just north of Lake Forest Drive, CHP officers reported finding the string of religious beads wedged into the mouth of 20-year-old Carlos Lomeli Santana.

When officers pulled the beads out, they found that the crucifix normally attached to rosaries was missing and presumed caught in the suspect's throat.

Laguna Hills paramedics were summoned to the scene but couldn't find the cross. A county fire department spokesman said today they presumed it had been swallowed and would "show up eventually."

Santana miraculously suffered only minor injuries and was taken to Orange County Jail.

A CHP spokesman said Santana was booked on charges of driving under thinfluence of drugs and reckless driving.

The suspect was allegedly first spotted driving at more than 60 miles an hour along the center divider shoulder of the San Diego Freeway near Los Alamitos.

Officers gave chase in the rush-hour traffic but Santana allegedly floored the accelerator and reached speeds of more than 110 during the 20-mile pursuit.

The suspect allegedly swung off the San Diego Freeway at the Laguna Freeway junction, sped over to the Santa Ana Freeway and continued south. Officers who got close during the chase said Santana periodically kissed the rosary he was holding.

The CHP said Santana finally lost control of his car and smashed into the center divider fence just after merging back onto the San Diego Freeway north of Lake Forest Drive.

POLICEMAN CALLS FOR ORDER OUTSIDE COURT
Spectators Push for Seats at Bakke Hearing

Cox Defends UC's Admission Policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox told the U.S. Supreme Court today that a special admissions program at a University of California medical school is needed to help minorities because "the other alternatives suggested simply will not work."

In oral arguments in the case of Allan Paul Bakke, Cox defended the so-called affirmative action program used by the university's med school at Davis. He said the program aided minorities "long victimized by racial discrimination."

Bakke, who is white, successfully challenged the university's program before the California Supreme Court. He claimed it made him a victim of racial discrimination.

Bakke's "reverse discrimination" case is considered by many constitutional scholars to set the stage for the high court's most important statement on race relations since it outlawed segregation 23 years ago.

At stake in Bakke's case is the future of affirmative action programs, begun in the last 15 years to give special preference to minority members and women in education and business.

Bakke's attorney, Reynold Colvin of San Francisco, urged the justices to affirm the California Supreme Court decision.

Colvin argued that the Constitution's guarantee of "equal protection" for all citizens is violated when a school takes into account an applicant's race — making that factor a "crucial" one.

"The use of race as a basis for admission to a medical school, or for granting any other rights, is improper," he argued.

Services Set For Ingrid V. Berggren

Funeral services will be held Friday for Ingred V. Berggren of Huntington Beach, famed as a salad maker for more than 12 years, who died last Friday after a lengthy illness. She was 44.

A native of Sweden, Miss Berggren presided over a vast array of salads while working at the Villa Sweden Smorgasbord, first in Huntington Beach and later for most of her 12 years with the firm in Corona del Mar.

Born in Boliden, Sweden, she left her family to emigrate to America more than a decade ago.

"She was a beautiful person," says Mrs. Herta Blacklund, who heads the Villa Sweden organization. "She was such a happy, loving person, always so conscientious. . ."

Survivors include her father Arvid; a brother Gosta, both of Sweden; a brother, Sixter, of Australia; plus sisters Ruth Wahlund and Astrid Lundstrom, of Sweden.

"She gave herself to her work and the church," says the Rev. Richard Carlson, pastor of the Westminster Christian Assembly, of which Miss Berggren was a member.

He will conduct funeral services Friday at 10 a.m. in Pierce Brothers-Smith's Mortuary in Huntington Beach, just across the street from the restaurant where she started work in America.

Her ashes will be inurned in Sweden by members of her family, who are coming to the Orange Coast for the rites.

Miss Berggren's wish was that friends may make memorial contributions if they desire, to the Fred Weinberg Honduras Chapel through the Westminster Christian Assembly, 14642 Bushard St., Westminster, in care of the Rev. Carlson.

3 Found Guilty

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A one-time Colombian model, her 21-year-old daughter and a Swiss man have been convicted of first-degree murder in the stabbing of travel agent Donald Tubach, 47, last Christmas Eve. A jury deliberated almost three days before convicting Mrs. Tubach, her daughter Patricia and Federico Frank, 23, of Lugano, Switzerland, late Tuesday.

Quiet Night

Amplified Sounds Silenced

Fountain Valley police said Tuesday night was a quiet one.

However, a check of the police log revealed that officers were dispatched hither and yon to check out:

—A loud street sweeper operating in a shopping center.

—A loud crew of construction workers staying late on a job.

—A loud motorcycle.

—A loud burglar alarm.

—A complaint of someone playing a stereo set too loudly.

—A loud self-proclaimed musician who was practicing his bongo drums late into the night.

Police noted that Tuesday night was foggy, adding that they always get a lot of noise complaints on foggy nights because fog is a natural amplifier of sound.

SURPLUS. . .

After the split vote, Hundley said he was not really opposed to the land transaction but the method in which it was proposed. More study was needed, he said.

Hundley said some of the funds should go to projects such as athletic field improvements at newly opened Ocean View High School.

Board President Don MacAllister warned that if the school district did not act within two months to buy the land for Huntington Beach High School, "it could be lost for good."

MacAllister said if the land is not purchased by the high school district, the Huntington Beach Company may build housing on it.

"This may prove very embarrassing and could jeopardize our relationship with Westminster and Huntington Beach regarding joint use agreements," said MacAllister.

The land near Huntington Beach High School is now used for parking by permission of the Huntington Beach Company.

Ken Helfrich, the Ocean View High School booster club president, told trustees some of the land deal funds should go toward equipment for athletics at his school.

But MacAllister said state law restricts use of the funds for land acquisition.

Hundley said that if some of the land sale funds went to Ocean View High School for building projects or athletic field improvements, "it would free up more money for equipment."

Trustees will hold a special joint meeting with the Westminster City Council to discuss the proposed land deal and joint use agreement.

The meeting will be held next Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. at Westminster City Hall.

Space Shuttle Simulation 'Successful'

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE (AP) — In its most realistic test and fastest flight to date, the Space Shuttle Enterprise landed safely today after a diving descent simulating a return from space.

Flying for the first time without a streamlined tailcone used in the three previous flights to extend its gliding range, the shuttle dropped more steeply and swiftly, touching down only 2½ minutes after separating from the 747 jet that bore it aloft.

Minus the tailcone, the shuttle was about 30 feet shorter with a blunt, instead of pointed, rear end. This made the bulky space transport craft less buoyant and also caused the carrier to strain and shake while taking the Enterprise to launch altitude.

The added drag during the climb over the desert caused the separation to be delayed by minutes while the 747 struggled higher.

After casting free of the mother ship, the shuttle was guided by astronauts Joe Engle, 45, and Richard Truly, 39, through a few quick maneuvers before touching down on a dry lake bed at about 250 miles per hour, somewhat faster than previous landings.

All previous U.S. manned space flights ended with costly and complex ocean splashdowns.

Deer Permits Now Available

Thirty-eight unclaimed permits for antlerless deer hunts in the Tenaja region of the Cleveland National Forest, and on Santa Catalina Island, will go on sale Thursday, at 8 a.m. at the Long Beach regional office of the Department of Fish and Game.

Permits will be offered on a first-come, first-served basis. There are eight left for the Tenaja hunt and thirty left for the Santa Catalina Island hunt; the latter includes an $80 fee.

For further information call Information Officer of the Department of Fish and Game, Ralph Young, at 590-5126.

Board Saves Westminster High Farm

A nine-acre, student-run farm at Westminster High School received a shot in the arm Tuesday night.

Huntington Beach Union High School District officials presented a revised plan which would prevent the farm from being squeezed out by a proposed park nearby.

Trustees took no action on the plan Tuesday since the proposed park agreement with the City of Westminster could not receive final approval until next year.

The proposed plan actually adds about one-half acre to the farm. It would allow a buffer zone between the proposed park and existing animal pens, officials said.

Students were afraid the horses, steers, chickens and other animals would be endangered if the park was built.

Farm teacher Charles Ramos said he is pleased with the new plan.

Ramos said 40 baby hogs were added to the farm Tuesday.

Driver Injured In Auto Crash

Larry Dean Decker, 25, of Huntington Beach was reported in good condition today at Costa Mesa Memorial Hospital after suffering injuries in a traffic accident Tuesday.

Decker, of 311 Memphis Ave., was hurt when his car collided with one driven by Laurie Bennett Lloyd, 22, of 125½ Jade Ave., Balboa Island. The accident occurred about 10 a.m. on Fairview Road north of Baker Street.

Girls Stabbed

Suspect Held In 3 Murders

ELVATON, Md. (AP) — A suspect has been arrested in the murders of three young Anne Arundel County girls, county police said today.

Deputy Police Chief George Welihan and staff members from the state attorney's office refused to discuss the arrest further. They planned a news conference later this afternoon.

Informed sources, however, said the suspect, Stuart Kreiner, 16, was a resident of the Southgate neighborhood where the girls lived and where their bodies were found early Monday.

Before word of the arrest, police had said they would go door to door through parts of this Baltimore suburb with a photograph of a knife sheath, hoping someone could identify one of their few clues to the stabbing deaths.

Jack Rayhart, a spokesman for the Anne Arundel County police, said citizens also would be shown photographs of the victims: Deborah Ann Hogan, 10; her 8-year-old sister, Theresa, and their friend Ann Marie Brzeszkiewicz, also 8.

Police said the sheath was found Monday near the small stream in a densely wooded area where the parka-clad bodies were discovered. The girls had disappeared Sunday while playing.

Authorities say they have not found the murder weapon.

Flags at Southgate Elementary School, which the girls attended, flew at half-staff Tuesday. "If they can fly them for generals, they can fly them for kids, too," said custodian Jim Winters.

Meanwhile, about 50 miles away in Carroll County, state police said a 9-year-old boy was found safe this morning more than 18 hours after he disappeared. Troopers said Thomas Doehrer was found wandering along a road about two miles from his rural Finksburg home. He had last been spotted about 4 p.m. Tuesday, playing in front of the house.

The youngster apparently had run away from home after a fight with a family member, they said.

More than 100 persons, along with a bloodhound and a state police helicopter, had taken part in the Carroll County search, they said.

Besides the knife sheath, police said they had only reports of a stranger in a blue Volkswagen and some undisclosed autopsy details to guide them in their investigation of the girls' murders.

"What we're withholding is very important to us. It's all we've got going for us," Sgt. William Chaplin of the Anne Arundel County homicide squad said of the autopsy reports.

Policing by Pilots May Help Airport

For years, Meadowlark Airport in Huntington Beach has been the target of residents who want it closed down because of what they believe are noise problems and safety hazards.

It seemed airport opponents were on the verge of getting their way when an airplane crashed into an airport building in August and the city council instructed its attorney to find ways to close down the private airfield as a public nuisance.

The council has changed directions recently, however, and decided to cease closure activities. Instead, a committee is to analyze and help solve specific problems.

One opponent claims this means the airport will simply continue to operate as it has in the years past.

But this may not be true.

An encouraging sign is that posture taken by the pilots themselves.

They promise to set up a Meadowlark chapter of the Orange County Pilots Association.

They say they'll install an optical device designed to cut down on levels of engine noise on landing approaches. They also say they'll help residents check out violators and will take complaints to the Federal Aviation Agency if they are blatant.

If the pilots do indeed carry out their program and can successfully apply peer pressure to other fliers, this may be the most positive step yet to emerge in the Meadowlark controversy.

Street Signals Crossed

Colonia Juarez property owners surprised a group of Fountain Valley city officials in telling them what type of public works projects they feel should be started in their 50-year-old neighborhood.

City officials were under the impression for the past two years that Colonia Juarez residents wanted three new cul-de-sac-type streets built where dirt alleyways are now.

But about 60 Colonia residents said the first thing they want is a plan to build sidewalks, gutters and other improvements on the neighborhood's four existing streets.

The 60 residents and property owners who confronted city officials made their point quite clear. The new streets can wait a while.

It is clear city officials should have been more in touch with what the Colonia residents wanted.

And Colonia residents should learn from this experience that they should keep in closer contact with officials at city hall.

Those items resolved, work on the sidewalks and other street improvements should begin as soon as possible.

Paving the Way

It would appear the local cities won a victory of sorts after skirmishing with CalTrans over two major highway resurfacing projects.

City people in Huntington Beach, Newport Beach and Costa Mesa got their hackles up when the state agency announced plans to re-pave four miles of Newport Boulevard and nine miles of Pacific Coast Highway this summer.

The screams of outrage and anguish apparently carried all the way to Sacramento because work is just now getting under way.

In spite of the delay of schedule to miss summer traffic, we shouldn't be overwhelmed by the thoughtfulness of the folks at CalTrans.

They may be paving at night, to avoid blocking traffic, but they're painting the newly paved lanes on Newport Boulevard in the middle of the peak traffic hours during the day.

What will happen when they start on Coast Highway?

By L.M. BOYD

"Trigger queries" are those questions which have been known to start family fights. Our Love and War man is collecting a list of same. From divorce records. They're not necessarily critical, insulting or degrading, not in themselves. It's what they lead to, however mysteriously. These are trigger queries: "Pancakes again?" "Isn't the game over yet?" "A melon ball cutter? How Much?" "Don't you want plain gingerale tonight?" And: "Do you think it's a little too small?"

A. Easier to name the states that don't: Alabama, Colorado, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Mississippi, Missouri, Montana and South Dakota.

Q. "How many teeth has a horse?"

A. 40.

Q. "Has anybody ever really disproved Adolf Hitler's theory that selective breeding could produce a super human being?"

A. In a way, it was disproved. Long ago. But not with humans, because humans don't breed selectively. On the contrary. It was disproved with dogs, which have been selectively bred for centuries, still without ever turning out a super dog.

Energy Chiefs Tilt to Nuclear

WASHINGTON — James Schlesinger's rise from political obscurity to political power has been smooth and subtle. He has the air more of a college professor than an energy czar. But behind the pipe smoke and contemplative manner, he has the heart of an industrial tycoon.

He has been an unabashed advocate of nuclear power, for example, ever since he came out of the Atomic Energy Commission in the early 1970s. The big utility companies desperately want to develop energy, of course, that will utilize their existing grid systems and permit them to go on selling electricity to the populace. A more revolutionary form of energy, such as solar power, might put the utility industry out of business.

There is disquieting evidence that Schlesinger may be quietly stacking the new Energy Dept. with subordinates who share his enthusiasm for nuclear power. Top policymaking positions will go, for example, to John O'Leary and Dale Myers, who are regarded as nuclear proponents.

Dr. James Liverman, a nuclear apologist, has been mentioned as Schlesinger's choice to be his new environmental chief. This possibility has so outraged environmentalists that a coalition has dashed off a private letter to Schlesinger, warning that they "would oppose" Liverman's nomination.

SCHLESINGER'S most controversial choice, however, may turn out to be Robert Thorne, who heads the San Francisco office of the Energy Research and Development Administration (ERDA). Schlesinger has Thorne in mind as his assistant secretary in charge of technology, an office that will control the Energy Dept.'s nuclear operations.

Thorne not only was in charge of nuclear affairs in San Francisco but allegedly funded an apparently "improper" lobbying effort to influence Congress to look kindly upon nuclear power.

He used $113,250 of the taxpayers' money to establish the Energy Awareness Project — an idea advanced by a registered nuclear lobbying group known as the California Council for Environmental and Economic Balance (CCEEB).

There is a suspicion that the Energy Awareness Project was really supposed to make the public and Congress more aware of nuclear energy, although a CCEEB spokesman told us the project was intended to inform the public on all energy alternatives.

THE CCEEB stated in its original proposal, without mentioning nuclear power, that "we would want participants to write their congressmen to ask them to support specific legislation, pass resolutions, write letters to the editor."

Thorne's office adopted this idea to the tune of $113,250 over the objections of at least one subordinate who warned in an internal memo: "I believe such an effort to be both ill-conceived and misdirected." He added with emphasis: "The logic of the proposal not only escapes me; but, its outline would appear to be an excellent plan for one of the greatest political boondoggles of modern times."

The suspicions of Rep. James Jeffords, R.-Vt., have also been aroused. He has asked the General Accounting Office to investigate the project. The taxpayers' money was used, he charges, for what appears to be "improper purposes, including possibly the use of appropriated funds to lobby the Congress on legislative matters."

POT POLICY — The men around President Carter have been quarreling behind the scenes over what words to put in his mouth on the marijuana question.

One faction favored a more sympathetic attitude toward pot smoking. They managed to get their ideas into an early draft of the drug policy message that Carter asked his aides to write for him. This was approved by the president's health adviser Dr. Peter Bourne.

It included such sentences as "marijuana has become an established fact throughout our society and the sky has not fallen" and "research studies indicate it may have beneficial uses in the treatment of certain types of illness."

THE PROPOSED message also contained a suggestion that the states should repeal their criminal prohibitions, "thus bringing to a close an unhappy and misguided chapter in our history."

But these sentences were too strong for scholarly Stuart Eizenstat, the President's top domestic policy adviser. He dashed off a confidential memo to Carter, declaring: "I am very concerned about the marijuana section of this message."

Eizenstat protested that "the section on marijuana is written in an almost laudatory tone, which I believe is unfortunate." Some of the sentences, he objected, "almost seem to be a positive recommendation of the drug."

The president struck out the sentences that Eizenstat didn't like. Nevertheless, the final message endorsed decriminalization of small amounts of pot.

Perhaps Panama Should Reinburse U.S.

To the Editor:

Have read your editorial of Oct. 4 anent the Panama Canal with much interest. Yes, you noted some facts, but omitted some other facts.

You mentioned the fact that some of our Navy ships and some freighters are too large for the canal locks. These ships are only a very small percentage of our Navy fleet, also commercial fleet. We can always build larger locks (if we hang on to the canal, that is).

Another fact: Under the proposed treaty, we must refrain from planning another canal anywhere through the Isthmus except with Panama's consent.

IF THE Canal Zone is such a thorn in her side, why doesn't Panama offer to reimburse us for our investments? That would be the decent, businesslike thing to do. Why not give the U.S. taxpayer a break for once?

It looks very much as if this treaty gives Panama all the goodies on a silver platter while the U.S. gets nothing but obligations!

I'm afraid that the world would judge Uncle Sam as a paper tiger who caves in to blackmail and is afraid to stick up for his rights.

HENRY R. BENNIK

Rights Eroded

To the Editor:

Your editorial entitled, "How High Is Ugly" (Sept. 21) could most probably also be associated with "The Tip of the Iceberg."

The Transceiver Antenna height restrictive ordinance represents nothing more than another minority segmented ordinance by the City of Fountain Valley, which is just one more of many dominoes being stacked by the city planning commission for the eventual ordinances to be passed which will take away the rights of property owners of the majority of the citizens in Fountain Valley covering many important aspects of our personal lives.

Of concern to all citizens of Fountain Valley should be possible future ordinances that would restrict the height of T. V. antennas, and then to be followed by an ordinance that prohibits external T. V. antennas totally. Also, what about recreational vehicles, boats and campers parking on city streets, and/or in our driveways?

AS THE present trend indicates, very few, if any, of our citizens really want to take the time to become involved. The fact is, unless all the citizens of Fountain Valley become involved in such issues as the antenna height restrictive ordinance, and all other ordinances, a very few administrators at the city hall will bloody well do what they want!

The tip of the iceberg represents the planning commission and city council's ability to pass on ordinances wherein very few, if any, citizens are present to state their views and/or opinions. As a result, most of us are not aware of these ordinances until we want to install a swimming pool, a block wall, a grape arbor, room extension, backyard gazebo, transceiver antenna, concrete front yard, or raise the overhead covers at gasoline pumps to reduce damage to campers pulling up to the gasoline pumps. Few Fountain Valley residents realize what our city ordinances have done to discourage business concerns and contractors from doing business in our city.

It is now clear, "the tail is wagging the dog." The tip of the iceberg is the city planning commission. What they want they will get unless we, the citizens of Fountain Valley, get on our hind legs, take note, speak in force, and/or write letters advising the planning commission of exactly how we feel on the issues at hand.

Two-faced

To the Editor:

Our two-faced Huntington Beach City Council did it again to the local residents. They put on a big act when we had our last plane crash. They pretended to have sympathy and concern for those in harm's way. They were going to declare the airport a public nuisance.

The city told us to only get signatures from under the flight pattern. Then they counted signatures pilots got from all over southern California.

THESE phony politicians were eyeing their future political careers. Well, it wasn't out-of-town pilots who put them in office, it was we fools who live here.

Our double dealing city council might find there are more voters that hate airports than there are pilots that fly.

J. COLLINS
A. F. COLLINS

Deceived

To the Editor:

I would like to rescind my previous letter to you complimenting Harriett Wieder. On the dangerous airport situation she did a complete turnabout when she eyed the out-of-town signatures. We were told by city attorney to only get signatures from under flight pattern as that was all courts would consider.

Let this be notice that no homeowner will attend another one of city council's stupid, useless, time-wasting ad-hoc meetings.

About 10 homeowners are keeping their cameras loaded and taking notes. We will give pictures and facts to anyone suing city or airport, whether homeowner or injured pilots and their children. We even have movie cameras going.

Religious Confusion

To the Editor:

Your article entitled "Self Help Class Set for San Juan" (Daily Pilot, Oct. 3) confuses two distinctly different religious denominations, and would leave your readers quite puzzled unless corrected.

PERHAPS Ms. Carman has already mentioned this to you, but Christian Science, discovered by Mary Baker Eddy in 1866, is the religion represented by some 3000 branches of the Church of Christ, Scientist, throughout the world. It has no connection with the Self-Help Foundation in San Diego. Neither does it sponsor the singles group or leadership training course that your article implies.

I am sure Ms. Carman, as well as all of the Christian Science churches in Orange County, will appreciate your publication of this clarification.

Badham Right

To the Editor:

I must take exception to your editorial of Oct. 6, entitled "A Foolish Mistake," concerning a resolution in Congress calling for Andrew Young's impeachment.

I sincerely believe the "foolish mistake" was made by President Carter when he did not demand the resignation of Young the first time he openly insulted a nation friendly to our country.

He, (Young) so obviously wedded with Communist countries and causes has made justifiable the reasons that 10 Congressmen have called for his ouster. (You can't for one moment believe that Young has been muzzled permanently!)

I say "three cheers" for Representative Badham for his forthright stand and, "alas" we don't have more of his ilk, strong enough to speak out and be counted as true and caring Americans!

MARY O. MOORE

Other Problems

To the Editor:

In this era of continuing national crises: energy, world peace, nuclear proliferation, pollution, unemployment, racial prejudice, violence, urban decay etc. etc., it is indeed heartening to learn that my Congressman, Bob Badham, is hard at work back in Washington backing resolutions to impeach our U.N. Ambassador, Andrew Young.

Go! going, Bob! Keep your eye on the old ball and perhaps the over 434 Congressmen will have time to get around to the problems that really count?

Irvine Town Center Start Ordered

By PHILIP ROSMARIN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

A proposal by Southern California Presbyterian Homes for a senior citizens apartment complex, may get the long-delayed Irvine Town Center project under way.

The Irvine City Council, after hearing Tuesday that the seniors project would be jeopardized by further delays in preliminary approval of development standards for the center, directed that the housing phase of the Town Center proceed.

A second phase, development of a commercial central core, would come later.

The council previously held back early approvals for the center in hopes the project might be developed as a whole, the commercial core built at the same time as the housing.

The Irvine Company claimed that was impossible, that there was no economic justification then for the commercial center. The company wanted to build houses first.

After the city's three commissions told the company they wanted to see plans for the commercial core before approving any development standards for housing, in 1974, the project hung in limbo.

But on Tuesday, Nick T. Ugrin, president of the non-profit Southern California Presbyterian Homes, surprised the council with news his group was ready to build a high-rise convalescent care and apartment project for senior citizens.

The apartments would be priced for low and moderate income seniors. That struck a responsive chord with the council, which is under pressure to find low cost housing for residents.

At Councilwoman Gabrielle Pryor's urging, the council broke the Town Center deadlock, allowing the Irvine Company to submit plans for the center in the two phases.

The vote was unanimous. Councilman David Sills said, just before, "If we try to do the whole thing at once, we're never going to get anywhere."

The project is to be on a triangle of 236 acres bounded by University, Culver and Campus drives near UC Irvine.

Irvine To Count Its Cows

The Irvine City Council has ordered city officials to estimate the costs of site improvements that will have to be made on Irvine Company agricultural lands scheduled for residential development in the next 10 to 20 years.

In a companion action, the council ordered the staff to count cows.

Object of the first exercise is to help city planners gauge what amounts of money will be needed for roads, parks, sewers, schools and other public improvements projects when housing is built.

The purpose of the cow-counting venture is to see whether the Irvine Company is abiding by terms of the Williamson Act, under which the grazing lands have preserve status.

The Irvine Company has about 50,000 acres in Williamson preserve, almost 3,500 acres of that within city limits and thousands of acres more within the Irvine political sphere of influence subject to possible annexation.

The company reports there are 3,500 cows on the property.

Councilwoman Gabrielle Pryor argued that because last month the council adopted a land use amendment to the city general plan that calls for eventual residential development of the Williamson acreage, the property ought to be removed from the preserve.

She said the taxes the city would collect could at least partly pay for public improvements needed when houses are built.

She said the Irvine Company last year paid only $2.05 per acre in taxes on the preserve lands, for a total of only $7,165. Comparably, Irvine Company farmland not under the Williamson Act protection and taxed as agricultural land

Municipal Theater Planned in Irvine

A "highly recognized" theater architect will be sought to design a municipal stage play theater planned for the Irvine Town Center near UC Irvine.

The City Council authorized the city arts committee to hunt for such a noted architect Tuesday, and commended the committee for developing initial plans which call for a 600-seat facility.

However, Mayor Bill Vardoulis failed to get the committee to reconsider giving the architect the leeway of planning for as large as a 1,200-seat theater.

Shirley Palley, chairman of the arts committee, balked, arguing that the complex is being designed primarily for community theater.

It would be "desolate-looking," Mrs. Palley said, for a little theater group to play to 200 people (considered a good crowd for such groups) sprinkled over a 1,200-seat theater.

Councilman David Sills agreed with her. When the average person considers how large a theater should be, Sills said, "We tend to think of football stadiums. A theater of 600 is a large theater.

"It's impossible to have a repertory company play in a barn of some 1,200 people."

The theater project is backed by $1.2 million in park bond funds already approved by voters. Organizers say much more money will be needed.

On Oct. 25, the arts committee is scheduled to make its recommendations to the council for funding the project.

Nude Beach OKs Dogs

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Naked dogs, but not naked people, soon will be allowed to use Black's Beach.

The City Council, in a new ordinance, is prohibiting dogs from most city beaches. But, if they're on leashes, dogs will be allowed on portions of Mission Beach and Black's.

Black's was the only "swimsuit optional" municipal beach in the United States until the City Council recently rescinded a 1974 ordinance allowing nudity.

Viejo Stars Celebrities In Challenge

Some of the brightest stars of television and the movies will come to Mission Viejo next week for the second time in six months to compete in the pseudo-sports event called Celebrity Challenge of the Sexes.

One highlight of the five-day event, which will be videotaped for a two-hour presentation on TV Nov. 13, is again expected to be Farrah Fawcett-Majors.

Farrah, the former star of television's "Charlie's Angels" series, will compete Oct 20 in a tennis match against actor Dick Van Patten, star of the show "Eight Is Enough."

Last time the tennis match drew an enormous crowd to the Marguerite Recreation Center, where it will take place again next week. The event will begin at 2 p.m.

A spokesman for the Mission Viejo Company said the public will be admitted to different events but details have not yet been worked out.

The celebrity sports events will kick off one week from today on the track at Saddleback College.

The first event to be staged for the cameras and onlookers will be an obstacle course run between Leslie Uggams and

'Speeder' Swallows Crucifix

A San Diego youth apparently tried to swallow the rosary he had been clutching and kissing for protection Thursday as he led California Highway Patrol cars on a high speed freeway chase from Los Alamitos to Laguna Hills.

When the pursuit ended in a crackup at 5:15 p.m., just north of Lake Forest Drive, CHP officers reported finding the string of religious beads wedged into the mouth of 20-year-old Carlos Lomeli Santana.

When officers pulled the beads out, they found that the crucifix normally attached to rosaries was missing and presumed caught in the suspect's throat.

Laguna Hills paramedics were summoned to the scene but couldn't find the cross. A county fire department spokesman said today they presumed it had been swallowed and would "show up eventually."

Santana miraculously suffered only minor injuries and was taken to Orange County Jail.

A CHP spokesman said Santana was booked on charges of driving under thinfluence of drugs and reckless driving.

The suspect was allegedly first spotted driving at more than 60 miles an hour along the center divider shoulder of the San Diego Freeway near Los Alamitos.

Officers gave chase in the rush-hour traffic but Santana allegedly floored the accelerator and reached speeds of more than 110 during the 20-mile pursuit.

The suspect allegedly swung off the San Diego Freeway at the Laguna Freeway junction, sped over to the Santa Ana Freeway and continued south. Officers who got close during the chase said Santana periodically kissed the rosary he was holding.

The CHP said Santana finally lost control of his car and smashed into the center divider fence just after merging back onto the San Diego Freeway north of Lake Forest Drive.

Turquoise Stone Stolen in Irvine

A 7½-pound stone of pure turquoise valued at $2,200 was stolen from an Irvine man's home Tuesday by a burglar who kicked in a locked bedroom door.

Henry E. Harjo, 46, of 17565 Hastings Ave., told police the thief also took 13 one-dollar bills. Police found no signs of forced entry into the house, but the bedroom door jamb was broken when the door was kicked, police said.

100 Indicted In Big FBI 'Sting' Raid

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — More than 100 people have been indicted as the result of the biggest "sting" in the history of U.S. law enforcement, the FBI said today.

Local, state and federal agents manned phony fencing operations in an apartment in Virginia Beach and a pool hall in Newport News. They took in more than $600,000 in stolen goods, and most of the transactions were videotaped, said Herb Clough, special agent in charge of the Norfolk FBI office.

The goods ranged from a bottle of baby formula, stolen during a house break-in, to a forklift truck. There were hubcaps, tape recorders and luxury cars.

Clough said 107 people faced 276 charges ranging from homicide to robbery. The indictments were returned Tuesday by special grand juries.

Sixty-six of those charged had been arrested by this morning, Clough said, in Norfolk, Virginia Beach, Newport News, Richmond, Fredericksburg and upstate New York.

The operation, code-named Talon, involved seven local police departments, the FBI and state police.

The number of indictments from Operation Talon is the biggest ever, Clough said.

Neighbor Youth Charged

ELVATON, Md. (AP) — A teen-age youth was arrested today in the stabbing deaths of three young girls who disappeared while playing and were found lying by a stream near their homes in this Baltimore suburb, police said.

An Anne Arundel County police spokesman identified the suspect as Stuart Kreiner, 16, of the same Southgate community where the girls lived and where their bodies were found Monday.

The spokesman said Kreiner had been charged with three counts of homicide.

Before word of the arrest, police had said they would go door to door through the town with a photograph of a knife sheath, hoping someone could identify one of the few clues in the stabbing deaths.

Jack Rayhart, a police spokesman, said citizens also would be shown photographs of the victims: Deborah Ann Hogan, 10; her 8-year-old sister, Theresa, and their friend Ann Marie Brzeszkiewicz, also 8.

Police said the sheath was found Monday near the small stream in a densely wooded area where the parka-clad bodies were discovered. The girls had disappeared Sunday.

Meanwhile, about 50 miles away in Carroll County, state police said a 9-year-old boy was found safe this morning more than 18 hours after he disappeared. Troopers said Thomas Doehrer was found wandering along a road about two miles from his rural Finksburg home. He had last been spotted about 4 p.m. Tuesday, playing in front of the house.

The youngster apparently had run away from home after a fight with a family member, they said.

Teen Sex Ring Charged

NEWTON, N.J. (AP) — A cabinet maker and his wife have been accused of luring high school girls into a prostitution operation they ran from their home in Wantage Township.

Sussex County authorities charged Frank Barone, 57, Tuesday with impairing the morals of a minor, carnally abusing females under the age of 16 and prostitution. His wife, Diane, was charged with aiding and abetting him.

Authorities said at least nine girls were lured into prostitution since September 1976.

"He would pick up young female hitchhikers or he would use young girls as babysitters and in each case he would try to talk them into working for him as a prostitute," said prosecutor George Daggett.

Barone, reached at his attorney's office Tuesday, denied the charges. "They are blowing nothing into a big thing up there." About six girls "hung" around his house for a time, he said, adding they were friends of his live-in babysitter.

Daggett said charges would not be brought against any of the nine teen-agers, all high school students living with their parents in the general vicinity. "We are looking upon them as victims," he said.

He added, however, that the office was examining whether charges should be brought against any of the customers.

Speedup Asked by Amtrak

Amtrak officials say they'd like to step on it when they reach a five-mile stretch of railroad track near the 22-acre Nixon complex in San Clemente.

But a 40-mile-per hour limit for north and southbound Amtrak trains was imposed sometime during the Nixon presidential years for security reasons, says Arthur Lloyd, Western regional manager for the national rail system.

Lloyd said Amtrak would like to see that speed limit increased to 75 miles per hour from a curve in the tracks just north of San Clemente to just past the Nixon enclave.

"The Federal Railroad Administration and Amtrak itself have jurisdiction on speed limits on curves and the maximum speed that the track will allow," Lloyd said today.

"But where you have trackage that will allow more speed, local ordinances will restrict speed, for instance at grade crossings and for safety.

"And in the case of the Nixon thing, it was for security," Lloyd said.

But, he added, "We have shown that 40 miles per hour is not very practical north of town."

He said the maximum speed between San Diego and Santa Ana is 90 miles per hour, saying trains pick up that speed just past Del Mar and barrel along to San Clemente, with a few slowdowns on curves and crossings.

"Then they hit that 5.1 mile stretch that really slows them down," Lloyd said.

brought $2.2 million, on 4,379 acres.

Mrs. Pryor said that if the city refused to renew Williamson Act contracts, it could start collecting more than $1.8 million per year when the contract expired in 10 years.

She said the taxes could be stockpiled in a fund for public improvements.

Rather than go along with that, the council majority decided first to investigate the probable costs for improvements, then study how to finance them.

Councilman David Sills said that, if the city is going to count cows as part of the exercise — to make sure the Irvine Company is using the Williamson lands for grazing — someone ought to be hired who works cheap.

He said he fears that, because the council orders were directed at city attorneys, men in pinstripe suits and briefcases might be tramping over the pastures at $100 an hour.

Bomb Threat Quelled in NY

NEW YORK (AP) — A bomb that police say could have hurt "thousands" of lunchtime strollers outside the General Motors building was found five minutes before it was set to go off. But another bomb did explode outside the New York Public Library, damaging a statue and fountain.

Police blamed a Puerto Rican terrorist group, FALN, for both incidents Tuesday because of a letter found in a telephone booth near Central Park.

The device found outside the General Motors building on Madison Avenue consisted of 1½ sticks of dynamite and a clock timer. Police said the bomb may have been dismantled unwittingly by a drifter who found the device and tossed it into a large cement tree planter.

POLICEMAN CALLS FOR ORDER OUTSIDE COURT
Spectators Push for Seats at Bakke Hearing

Court Eyes UC's Admission Policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox told the U.S. Supreme Court today that a special admissions program at a University of California medical school is needed to help minorities because "the other alternatives suggested simply will not work."

In oral arguments in the case of Allan Paul Bakke, Cox defended the so-called affirmative action program used by the university's med school at Davis. He said the program aided minorities "long victimized by racial discrimination."

Bakke, who is white, successfully challenged the university's program before the California Supreme Court. He claimed it made him a victim of racial discrimination.

Bakke's "reverse discrimination" case is considered by many constitutional scholars to set the stage for the high court's most important statement on race relations since it outlawed segregation 23 years ago.

At stake in Bakke's case is the future of affirmative action programs, begun in the last 15 years to give special preference to minority members and women in education and business.

Bakke's attorney, Reynold Colvin of San Francisco, urged the justices to affirm the California Supreme Court decision.

Colvin argued that the Constitution's guarantee of "equal protection" for all citizens is violated when a school takes into account an applicant's race — making that factor a "crucial" one.

"The use of race as a basis for admission to a medical school, or for granting any other rights, is improper," he argued.

Race should be considered only as it provides a clue to the applicant's total evaluation, he said.

Considering race, Colvin said, "is permissible only to the extent it gives some clue to the admissions committee whether there was a prior history of economic or educational deprivation or persecution."

Bakke's legal briefs have contended that in such cases, giving special preference to economically or educationally deprived applicants would be acceptable.

Colvin appeared to displease at least one member of the court, Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr., by devoting the first 20 minutes of his allotted 45 minutes to reciting the case's facts.

"I'm here primarily to hear constitutional arguments," Powell said in a gentle rebuke. "I would like some help with the constitutional issues."

Colvin quickly complied, stressing that Bakke was deprived admission to the medical school solely because he is white, an automatic violation of the Constitution.

Revenge Move?

Mob Figure's Kin Murdered

BAY HARBOR ISLAND, Fla. (AP) — The stepson of underworld figure Meyer Lansky was shot to death today in what police speculate was a gangland revenge killing.

Richard Schwartz, 47, was shot once as he sat in his car behind a restaurant he owned in this exclusive resort city between Miami and Miami Beach, police said.

His body was found shortly after 9 a.m. EDT behind the Inside restaurant. Details of the slaying were not immediately available.

Schwartz, son of Lansky's wife, Thelma, had been scheduled to go on trial Nov. 28 on charges of killing his drinking companion, 29-year-old Craig Teriaca, son of underworld figure Vincent Teriaca.

A number of known mob figures attended Teriaca's funeral.

"The motive doesn't seem to be robbery or anything of that nature," police spokesman Ralph Page said. "It would be a logical conclusion that revenge is a good possibility. Considering who he is and the incident with Teriaca, we have to look at the revenge theory."

Teriaca was shot June 30 at the bar of The Forge restaurant before several witnesses. Police said Teriaca and Schwartz had been drinking together and the shooting occurred during an argument over a $10 bill left on the bar. Teriaca put the bill in his pocket but later offered to give it to Schwartz, police said.

Angered, Schwartz pulled a pistol and shot Teriaca twice in the chest, police said.

The Presbyterian Homes development would be built on 14 acres and cost $12 million to $15 million, according to architect Don Neptune. It would include a health care building, residential cottages and a five-story apartment building.

Neptune said if the process of city review could begin this month, Presbyterian Homes could start building next September and move people into the project in November, 1979.

The project would provide housing for 521 people and employ 200 to 250 fulltime and part-time workers.

Ugrin said Irvine Company President Peter C. Kremer already has assured the group the firm is willing to sell the acreage for the project.

U.S. Space Shuttle Successful

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE (AP) — In its most realistic test and fastest flight to date, the Space Shuttle Enterprise landed safely today after a diving descent simulating a return from space.

Flying for the first time without a streamlined tailcone used in the three previous flights to extend its gliding range, the shuttle dropped more steeply and swiftly, touching down only 2½ minutes after separating from the 747 jet that bore it aloft.

Minus the tailcone, the shuttle was about 30 feet shorter with a blunt, instead of pointed, rear end. This made the bulky space transport craft less buoyant and also caused the carrier to strain and shake while taking the Enterprise to launch altitude.

The added drag during the climb over the desert caused the separation to be delayed by minutes while the 747 struggled higher.

After casting free of the mother ship, the shuttle was guided by astronauts Joe Engle, 45, and Richard Truly, 39, through a few quick maneuvers before touching down on a dry lake bed at about 250 miles per hour, somewhat faster than previous landings.

Unlike the previous flights, today's glide, carried live on national television, was so short that the shuttle was unable to make a leisurely U-turn and many test maneuvers before landing.

Instead, it nosed down at a steep angle and made a nearly straight-in approach.

Military Budget in Doubt

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress' investigative agency is skeptical that the armed services need to spend more than $100 million a year to attract enough quality volunteers.

"The basic question that still remains unanswered is how many advertising dollars are needed to attract the quantity and quality of volunteers to meet service goals," the General Accounting Office said in a new report.

The GAO told Congress that the paid advertising program's high cost and the difficulty in evaluating its effectiveness warrant continued attention.

The military budget for advertising has risen from $68.8 million in 1973, the last year of the draft, to this year's proposed allocation of $105.6 million.

Carter Signs City, Housing Boost Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter signed a bill today providing $14.7 billion for housing the needy and revitalizing the cities, calling it "a giant step forward" in improving living conditions for low-income, elderly and handicapped families.

The measure includes $1.2 billion to help the families pay their rent.

Recalling his visit last week to the South Bronx slums in New York, Carter said he saw living conditions that are "a disgrace to our great country — enough to shake our confidence in the structure that we've evolved."

While there are no instant solutions to such housing problems, the President said, "This bill takes a giant step forward."

"In general, this is a very excellent piece of legislation," Carter told them. But he said one part of it, removing restraints on building homes in flood plains, caused him concern.

The President said he would determine whether to reinstate the restraints with corrective legislation next year or try to deal with the matter administratively.

The signing ceremony followed Carter's weekly breakfast with congressional leaders.

by MILTON MOSKOWITZ

Of the top 100 industrial companies in 1917, only 35 remain in that class.

That's what Forbes magazine discovered when it dug up data for its 60th anniversary issue, published last month. The moral Forbes drew from this high rate of attrition was that the big guys don't always win.

"Corporate heft is no guarantee of survival," said the magazine.

THAT MAY BE SO. But a close examination of the 1917 roster reveals that while there were some companies that couldn't hack it and dropped out — Central Leather, United Verde Extension Mining, American Locomotive, for examples — a much larger number disappeared because they were acquired or merged or otherwise captured by another giant.

Armour & Company was our fourth largest industrial company in 1917. And six years later it acquired another company on that list, Morris & Company, which ranked 65th. Today, Armour is part of Greyhound (oh, how the mighty have fallen).

Swift & Company, another meat packer, was No. 5 on the 1917 list. Now it's part of a mixed bag called Esmark.

Money Tree

No. 3 on the 1917 list was Bethlehem Steel. Our second largest steel maker, Bethlehem is still around, ranking 33rd, right behind Esmark. But three other steel makers on the 1917 list — Midvale Steel, Cambria Steel and Lackawanna Steel — are gone. What happened to them? Bethlehem scooped them up in 1922 and 1923.

A COMPANY CALLED CHILE COPPER, which did just what its name implies, ranked 29th in 1917. Another mining company on the 1917 list was Greene Cananea Copper — it ranked 89th. They were both enveloped in 1929 by Anaconda Copper, which ranked 13th, and Anaconda now belongs to Atlantic Richfield, which is the survivor of at least four companies on the 1917 list: Atlantic Refining, Sinclair Oil, Prairie Oil and Sinclair Gulf.

In other words, seven of the leading companies of 1917 are now combined into one, which ranks 15th.

Standard Oil of New York was No. 14 in 1917 and Vacuum Oil was No. 75. They joined forces in 1931 to form Socony Vacuum Oil, which later became Socony Mobil, which later became Mobil, which now also owns Montgomery Ward and Container Corp. of America. Two other companies on the 1917 list — Magnolia Petroleum, No. 37, and Virginia Carolina Chemicals, No. 46 — are today also part of Mobil.

MEXICAN PETROLEUM RANKED 64TH on the 1917 list. In 1919, it was acquired by Pan American Petroleum and Transport, which had ranked 99th. And in 1954 Pan American was absorbed by Standard Oil of Indiana, which was No. 36 in 1917 (today it's No. 12).

The moral might be that in a swamp filled with alligators, the ones with the biggest jaws survive.

Market Suffers Another Drubbing

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices took a solid drubbing today in a selloff blamed on concern over rising interest rates.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which had dropped 8.40 points on Tuesday to a 22-month low, fell another 10.48 to 823.98 today.

Declines overwhelmed advances by about a 6-1 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said the market was unsettled by fears that interest rates might be headed for levels at which they could cause problems for both business activity and investments like stocks and bonds.

High rates increase businesses' costs and also can discourage borrowing for expansion.

'Speeder' Swallows Crucifix

A San Diego youth apparently tried to swallow the rosary he had been clutching and kissing for protection Thursday as he led California Highway Patrol cars on a high speed freeway chase from Los Alamitos to Laguna Hills.

When the pursuit ended in a crackup at 5:15 p.m., just north of Lake Forest Drive, CHP officers reported finding the string of religious beads wedged into the mouth of 20-year-old Carlos Lomeli Santana.

When officers pulled the beads out, they found that the crucifix normally attached to rosaries was missing and presumed caught in the suspect's throat.

Laguna Hills paramedics were summoned to the scene but couldn't find the cross. A county fire department spokesman said today they presumed it had been swallowed and would "show up eventually."

Santana miraculously suffered only minor injuries and was taken to Orange County Jail.

A CHP spokesman said Santana was booked on charges of driving under thinfluence of drugs and reckless driving.

The suspect was allegedly first spotted driving at more than 60 miles an hour along the center divider shoulder of the San Diego Freeway near Los Alamitos.

Officers gave chase in the rush-hour traffic but Santana allegedly floored the accelerator and reached speeds of more than 110 during the 20-mile pursuit.

The suspect allegedly swung off the San Diego Freeway at the Laguna Freeway junction, sped over to the Santa Ana Freeway and continued south. Officers who got close during the chase said Santana periodically kissed the rosary he was holding.

The CHP said Santana finally lost control of his car and smashed into the center divider fence just after merging back onto the San Diego Freeway north of Lake Forest Drive.

Neighbor Youth Charged

ELVATON, Md. (AP) — A teen-age youth was arrested today in the stabbing deaths of three young girls who disappeared while playing and were found lying by a stream near their homes in this Baltimore suburb, police said.

An Anne Arundel County police spokesman identified the suspect as Stuart Kreiner, 16, of the same Southgate community where the girls lived and where their bodies were found Monday.

The spokesman said Kreiner had been charged with three counts of homocide.

Before word of the arrest, police had said they would go door to door through the town with a photograph of a knife sheath, hoping someone could identify one of the few clues in the stabbing deaths.

Jack Rayhart, a police spokesman, said citizens also would be shown photographs of the victims: Deborah Ann Hogan, 10; her 8-year-old sister, Theresa, and their friend Ann Marie Brzeszkiewicz, also 8.

Police said the sheath was found Monday near the small stream in a densely wooded area where the parka-clad bodies were discovered. The girls had disappeared Sunday.

Meanwhile, about 50 miles away in Carroll County, state police said a 9-year-old boy was found safe this morning more than 18 hours after he disappeared. Troopers said Thomas Doehrer was found wandering along a road about two miles from his rural Finksburg home. He had last been spotted about 4 p.m. Tuesday, playing in front of the house.

The youngster apparently had run away from home after a fight with a family member, they said.

High Train Speed Asked By Amtrak

Amtrak officials say they'd like to step on it when they reach a five-mile stretch of railroad track near the 22-acre Nixon complex in San Clemente.

But a 40-mile-per hour limit for north and southbound Amtrak trains was imposed sometime during the Nixon presidential years for security reasons, says Arthur Lloyd, Western regional manager for the national rail system.

'Thirsty' Rattlesnake Invades Residence

If you want to keep rattlesnakes out of your living room, leave fresh water out for them.

That's advice from Marianne Slevin, an animal service officer from Laguna Beach who helped roust a four-foot rattler from an Emerald Bay home earlier this week.

"He was coiled and ready to strike, right in the middle of the living room," Miss Slevin said of the uninvited Monday visitor to the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Law.

The Laws' dog was barking when a family member entered the room and saw the reptile, the animal service officer said.

County Sheriff's deputies were unable to respond to the call, and it would have taken county animal control officers more than an hour to arrive, police said.

So Miss Slevin and Sgt. Dave Avers drove out to the house, pinned the snake down long enough to slip a noose around it, and carried it outside.

There, Avers chopped its head off with an ax.

"The house was near the hillside and there are a lot of animals coming down because of the drought," Miss Slevin explained.

She said the two-year dry spell is making the creatures bolder and they're coming down to drink from swimming pools and ornamental fountains.

She suggested that hillside residents place large bowls of water on the perimeter of their property.

Pageant of the Masters director Don Williamson says he can't wait until work on the new $200,000 Festival of Arts administration building is completed in January.

That's because the next step will be to tear down the old one next door, a former city engineering building moved to the festival nearly three decades ago.

Williamson says the old building has been added to, revised, and made to do for 30 years, "and it's a real eyesore to people coming into town from Laguna Canyon Road."

The 14-year pageant director, who says he has all but given up his private architectural business because of festival duties, designed the new administration building.

Work began in September on the two-story, 5,000-square foot facility which will house the festival board room on the second floor and box offices and administration rooms on the lower level.

Board members approved the spending of $25,000 to furnish the building, at a director's meeting Tuesday night.

Williamson said a new entrance to the festival grounds will fill the space left by the leveled building.

"We'll have a less congested entrance with the new gates," he said.

And what is now the festival entrance will become a garden area with a series of waterfalls cascading into separate pools.

"We think the sound of splashing water will put festival

Alcoholism Center Aided

A San Juan Capistrano counseling center was given a $75,525 contract by Orange County supervisors Tuesday to operate a detoxification center and recovery homes for alcoholics.

A report to supervisors said the service would be provided by Community Counseling Center, 32141 Alipaz Road, and would serve clients referred by law enforcement and social service agencies.

The contract will be financed with $4,431 in county funds with the bulk of costs paid with state and federal grants.

Strike Rule Told

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — An arbitrator has told West Coast dockworkers to break an earlier agreement and cross picket lines set up by striking East Coast longshoremen. In a ruling Tuesday, Sam Kagel, an arbitrator appointed by the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union and the shipping industry's Pacific Maritime Association, said the East Coast strike could not be honored here.

Silverware, Cash Taken in San Juan

Silverware and silver dollars with a total value of $6,700 were taken from a San Juan Capistrano home by a burglar who carried off a strong box.

Orange County sheriff's officers said intruders whose method of entry has not been determined took the strong box and costly silverware from the home of retiree martin McGregor Horner, 53, of 25562 Spinnaker Drive, while he was out shopping.

Petition Pending

Ag Preserve Protested

A group of San Juan Capistrano residents and property owners will circulate a petition next month calling for removal of a controversial city agricultural preservation ordinance.

The ordinance, passed by a three to two City Council vote last spring, sets aside 230 acres of farmland for preservation.

Tony Forster, spokesman for the group seeking the petition circulation, said today the group will ask voters to place the controversial ordinance on the March 7 city ballot.

"We want the voters to decide whether or not they want General Plan amendment 77-1, which sets up the agricultural preserve," Forster explained.

Forster cited a March, 1976 city ballot measure which asked city residents if they were willing to pay 10 cents per $100 assessed valuation on their property taxes to buy agricultural land in the city.

"We believe the voters expressed themselves in that election but the council just did what they wanted anyway," Forster said.

The agricultural preservation measure was defeated 2605 to 1211, Forster said.

After the 1976 election, San Juan's City Council passed a preservation ordinance and levied fees on developers in the city to provide a fund for agricultural incentives.

The agricultural preservation fee structure is $500 per residential unit and $1,000 per acre of commercial or industrial development. The city has collected $87,144 in fees as of Sept. 30.

Forster claimed residents would wind up paying for the program through costs passed on by developers.

Sent to Council

Planners Okay Parking Plans

Laguna Beach planning commissioners gave their unanimous endorsement of a complex parking management program Tuesday night before sending the proposal on to the city council for final approval.

The much-delayed proposal, which would add three multi-story parking structures to the downtown area of auto-congested Laguna Beach, would cost approximately $12 million, according to city studies.

Tuesday night's hearing was the second held by commissioners in two weeks on the program.

Planning Director Doug Schmitz said the 20-page study prepared by city planners was approved with only minor changes.

The program consists of four plans, with funding coming from taxable sales assessments based on retail sales of downtown businessmen. Other sources might include parking in-lieu fees and from federal and state sources.

The proposal calls for a three-story parking structure on the north side of Broadway near Beach Street. A two-story structure would be located on an existing city-owned parking lot on Glenneyre Street near Legion. That site is now being considered as a possible location for a community center, but planners say the building would not conflict with a parking structure at that site.

"As long as the center provides parking for its users, there's no problem," said planner Michael Gallant today.

A third two-tier parking structure is proposed for an existing private lot north of city hall offices.

The parking management program also seeks solutions to parking problems north and south of the business district and along Laguna Canyon Road.

A fourth program would include establishment of parking facilities at the two entrances to Laguna Beach, accompanied by a transit service to move people into town.

Gallant said the parking management proposal will not be on next Wednesday's City Council agenda.

PUC Orders $1 per Home Phone Refund

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Refunds averaging $1 per home were ordered today for telephone customers charged under a message unit system which has been ruled to be unreasonable.

The California Public Utilities Commission instructed Pacific Telephone Company to make the refunds to customers who were charged single message rate timing between Nov. 8, 1976, and Aug. 8, 1977.

The refunds go to those who have 30-message and 60-message service. The refunds will be made between now and March 1 in the form of a credit on billing.

The old system provides for charging for the amount of time a customer talks. It doesn't apply to flat rate customers.

Last July 12 the PUC DE-termined that the previous setup based on five-minute increments was unreasonable and changed this to one-minute increments.

At the same time, the PUC ordered a refund plan be submitted for approval.

The refund totals $1 million plus 7 percent interest.

San Clemente Man Arrested In Gun Rap

A San Clemente man was arrested Tuesday for carrying a loaded gun in public after police were alerted that someone was firing a gun near apartments at 155 W. Mariposa.

Jerry Hubbert, street address unknown, was taken into custody at the Mariposa address and a .357 magnum pistol logged into evidence, police said. Hubbert is 48.

The witness who called officers said he heard two shots at about 7 p.m. One round went into a swimming pool and the other shot was wild. As he talked to police, another round was reportedly fired.

Hubbert was booked at the San Clemente police station, where he posted $10,000 bail.

The new building is not the first designed for the festival by the pageant director. Williamson was also instrumental in the creation of the forum theater, the stage building and the original concept of the festival's restaurant.

Laguna Beach builder Charles Benton is constructing the new facility and festival officials are expected to move into the building by Feb. 1, Williamson said.

Carter Signs Housing, City Aid Measure

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter signed a bill today providing $14.7 billion for housing the needy and revitalizing the cities, calling it "a giant step forward" in improving living conditions for low-income, elderly and handicapped families.

The measure includes $1.2 billion to help the families pay their rent.

Recalling his visit last week to the South Bronx slums in New York, Carter said he saw living conditions that are "a disgrace to our great country — enough to shake our confidence in the structure that we've evolved."

While there are no instant solutions to such housing problems, the President said, "This bill takes a giant step forward."

Revenge Move?

Mob Figure's Kin Murdered

BAY HARBOR ISLAND, Fla. (AP) — The stepson of underworld figure Meyer Lansky was shot to death today in what police speculate was a gangland revenge killing.

Richard Schwartz, 47, was shot once as he sat in his car behind a restaurant he owned in this exclusive resort city between Miami and Miami Beach, police said.

His body was found shortly after 9 a.m. EDT behind the inside restaurant. Details of the slaying were not immediately available.

Schwartz, son of Lansky's wife, Thelma, had been scheduled to go on trial Nov. 28 on charges of killing his drinking companion, 29-year-old Craig Teriaca, son of underworld figure Vincent Teriaca.

A number of known mob figures attended Teriaca's funeral.

"The motive doesn't seem to be robbery or anything of that nature," police spokesman Ralph Page said. "It would be a logical conclusion that revenge is a good possibility. Considering who he is and the incident with Teriaca, we have to look at the revenge theory."

Teriaca was shot June 30 at the bar of The Forge restaurant before several witnesses. Police said Teriaca and Schwartz had been drinking together and the shooting occurred during an argument over a $10 bill left on the bar. Teriaca put the bill in his pocket but later offered to give it to Schwartz, police said.

Angered, Schwartz pulled a pistol and shot Teriaca twice in the chest, police said.

Teen Girls Lured Into Sex Work?

NEWTON, N.J. (AP) — A cabinet maker and his wife have been accused of luring high school girls into a prostitution operation they ran from their home in Wantage Township.

Sussex County authorities charged Frank Barone, 57, Tuesday with impairing the morals of a minor, carnally abusing females under the age of 16 and prostitution. His wife, Diane, was charged with aiding and abetting him.

Authorities said at least nine girls were lured into prostitution since September 1976.

"He would pick up young female hitchhikers or he would use young girls as babysitters and in each case he would try to talk them into working for him as a prostitute," said prosecutor George Daggett.

Barone, reached at his attorney's office Tuesday, denied the charges. "They are blowing nothing into a big thing up there." About six girls "hung" around his house for a time, he said, adding they were friends of his live-in babysitter.

Daggett said charges would not be brought against any of the nine teen-agers, all high school students living with their parents in the general vicinity. "We are looking upon them as victims," he said.

He added, however, that the office was examining whether charges should be brought against any of the customers.

"Then they hit that 5.1 mile stretch that really slows them down," Lloyd said.

He said a 75-mile-per hour limit along the Nixon stretch, plus some other revised speeds, would save San Diego to Los Angeles travelers about 18 minutes.

Amtrak presented the increased speed plan proposal as part of a five-year plan issued in Washington. The plan also calls for increased service between the two cities and an increase from five daily roundtrips to seven.

Sand Art Destroyed

YUCAIPA (AP) — A man spends months sculpting "The Last Supper" in sand. A vandal spends a few minutes knocking it down.

"He just wanted to show his friends how tough he was, I guess," Ted Conibear said Tuesday in describing the damage to his work at Bible Land, a non-profit tourist attraction about 90 miles east of Los Angeles.

Conibear, who has been sculpting religious figures in sand for 60 of his 72 years, said it would take a couple months to repair the work. He estimated damage at $4,000.

Burglaries Probed By Laguna Police

Laguna Beach police are investigating three commercial burglaries reported Tuesday by downtown shop keepers and by officials at the Laguna Beach Water District.

Police said burglars entered Lorie's Beauty Shop, 375 Broadway, sometime Monday evening or Tuesday morning, taking wooden statues valued at $22. The thieves entered the shop by removing four louvered windows six feet off the ground.

Employes at Live Wire Cleaners, 439 Forest Ave. told officers someone entered that business, possibly with a key, and took $55 from the cash register.

And Laguna Beach Water District officials said the night deposit box at district offices, 306 Third St., was broken open and water billing payments removed.

Police said the billings were found by children near the office soon after the crime was reported.

BAKKE. . .

California Supreme Court decision.

Colvin argued that the Constitution's guarantee of "equal protection" for all citizens is violated when a school takes into account an applicant's race — making that factor a "crucial" one.

"The use of race as a basis for admission to a medical school, or for granting any other rights, is improper," he argued.

Race should be considered only as it provides a clue to the applicant's total evaluation, he said.

Considering race, Colvin said, "is permissible only to the extent it gives some clue to the admissions committee whether there was a prior history of economic or educational deprivation or persecution."

Bakke's legal briefs have contended that in such cases, giving special preference to economically or educationally deprived applicants would be acceptable.

Colvin appeared to displease at least one member of the court, Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr., by devoting the first 20 minutes of his allotted 45 minutes to reciting the case's facts.

"I'm here primarily to hear constitutional arguments," Powell said in a gentle rebuke. "I would like some help with the constitutional issues."

Colvin quickly complied, stressing that Bakke was deprived admission to the medical school solely because he is white, an automatic violation of the Constitution.

Debate Slated For San Juan Proposal

A San Juan Capistrano councilman and a representative from the group espousing division of the mission city into seven councilmanic districts will debate the issue Thursday at 7:30 p.m.

Councilman John Sweeney will speak in opposition to the proposed change in the city's councilmanic election process.

Concerned Citizens for Responsive Government Chairman Bernie Matthey will speak in support of the proposal. The Concerned Citizens are sponsors of a March 7 city ballot measure to create seven councilmanic districts that would each elect a councilman.

San Juan currently has five councilmen elected at-large.

The debate is public and sponsored by the Capistrano Business and Property Owners Association. The discussion will begin at 7:30 p.m. at the San Juan Mobile Estates club house, 32302 Alipaz in San Juan.

Search for Center Moves into Town

Suggestions for location of a community center — primarily for Laguna Beach's senior citizens — have ranged from an abandoned sewer plant to the relocation of a church to a eucalyptus grove.

In the past year, council members and seniors alike have come up with more than a half dozen suggestions for a center. The latest, construction of a building atop the bluffs at Heisler Park, was shelved by councilmen last week. There is insufficient parking at the site and the building would damage the park atmosphere, they say.

So now the council is looking at construction of a center on a portion of the parking lot on Glenneyre Street between Legion and Laguna Avenue.

The site has the benefits of being centrally located and adequate rooftop parking could be provided. Cost of a center at that location has been estimated at roughly $380,000.

The search for a new center came after the seniors were displaced from a city-leased annex on Glenneyre Street. They were moved to the Human Affairs Department building at city hall where they still meet, amidst other activities not related to their projects.

The seniors deserve a separate community center where they can meet. And the city council has vowed to find them a home.

The latest proposal deserves full study.

Sensible Health Care

Capistrano Unified School District trustees should stick by their guns on proposed changes in district health care.

District administrators want to hire five health aides, trained by the Capistrano-Laguna Regional Occupational Program (ROP), to replace three nurses who left the district. This would spread nursing care to more students at no extra cost to taxpayers.

Nurses object, saying no one but a nurse can provide the quality of service required. We disagree. The state code allows a school nurse to do little more than wash a wound and apply a bandage. School secretaries, certified in first aid by the Red Cross, can do just about as much.

Without denigrating the skills and dedication of the nurses, we believe the health aides can fulfill virtually all ordinary needs of the district's students.

Paramedics, doctors and hospitals are immediately available if more professional treatment is needed.

Face Canyon Facts

Laguna Beach council members are seeking immediate solutions to end the slaughter along Laguna Canyon Road where 13 persons have died in collisions in the past nine months.

Those short-term solutions include seeking funds for the construction of passing lanes along the road from El Toro Road to the San Diego Freeway.

Additional signing and striped no-passing lines are being added to the winding roadway this month by CalTrans.

These are stop-gap solutions to be sure. The council plans to meet with the City of Irvine and Orange County officials — who share responsibility with Laguna Beach on the seven-mile roadway — to seek funding for the passing lane concept.

State funds for further widening of Laguna Canyon Road are not included in CalTrans' six-year plan. And some Lagunans applaud that situation because they believe improving the roadway to that extent will make Laguna more attractive to visitors and thus worsen city traffic problems.

That view will simply lead to more deaths. The road must be widened beyond patched-on passing lanes.

And so far as the tourists go, we might point out that more Lagunans than visitors have to get into and out of the city every day.

Coldly, a two-lane Laguna Canyon Road will kill more Lagunans than those from anywhere else.

By L.M. BOYD

"Trigger queries" are those questions which have been known to start family fights. Our Love and War man is collecting a list of same. From divorce records. They're not necessarily critical, insulting or degrading, not in themselves. It's what they lead to, however mysteriously. These are trigger queries: "Pancakes again?" "Isn't the game over yet?" "A melon ball cutter? How Much?" "Don't you want plain gingerale tonight?" And: "Do you think it's a little too small?"

Surveys prove a lot of tourists pick motels with swimming pools even though they have no intention of going swimming. They just believe the places with the pools will also be better equipped otherwise.

Quick, name any fruit that comes most swiftly to mind. If you didn't say apple, you're not among the majority so queried.

Q. "Has anybody ever really disproved Adolf Hitler's theory that selective breeding could produce a super human being?"

A. In a way, it was disproved. Long ago. But not with humans, because humans don't breed selectively. On the contrary. It was disproved with dogs, which have been selectively bred for centuries, still without ever turning out a super dog.

Energy Chiefs Tilt to Nuclear

WASHINGTON — James Schlesinger's rise from political obscurity to political power has been smooth and subtle. He has the air more of a college professor than an energy czar. But behind the pipe smoke and contemplative manner, he has the heart of an industrial tycoon.

He has been an unabashed advocate of nuclear power, for example, ever since he came out of the Atomic Energy Commission in the early 1970s. The big utility companies desperately want to develop energy, of course, that will utilize their existing grid systems and permit them to go on selling electricity to the populace. A more revolutionary form of energy, such as solar power, might put the utility industry out of business.

There is disquieting evidence that Schlesinger may be quietly stacking the new Energy Dept. with subordinates who share his enthusiasm for nuclear power. Top policymaking positions will go, for example, to John O'Leary and Dale Myers, who are regarded as nuclear proponents.

Dr. James Liverman, a nuclear apologist, has been mentioned as Schlesinger's choice to be his new environmental chief. This possibility has so outraged environmentalists that a coalition has dashed off a private letter to Schlesinger, warning that they "would oppose" Liverman's nomination.

SCHLESINGER'S most controversial choice, however, may turn out to be Robert Thorne, who heads the San Francisco office of the Energy Research and Development Administration (ERDA). Schlesinger has Thorne in mind as his assistant secretary in charge of technology, an office that will control the Energy Dept.'s nuclear operations.

Thorne not only was in charge of nuclear affairs in San Francisco but allegedly funded an apparently "improper" lobbying effort to influence Congress to look kindly upon nuclear power.

He used $113,250 of the taxpayers' money to establish the Energy Awareness Project — an idea advanced by a registered nuclear lobbying group known as the California Council for Environmental and Economic Balance (CCEEB).

There is a suspicion that the Energy Awareness Project was really supposed to make the public and Congress more aware of nuclear energy, although a CCEEB spokesman told us the project was intended to inform the public on all energy alternatives.

THE CCEEB stated in its original proposal, without mentioning nuclear power, that "we would want participants to write their congressmen to ask them to support specific legislation, pass resolutions, write letters to the editor."

Thorne's office adopted this idea to the tune of $113,250 over the objections of at least one subordinate who warned in an internal memo: "I believe such an effort to be both ill-conceived and misdirected." He added with emphasis: "The logic of the proposal not only escapes me; but, its outline would appear to be an excellent plan for one of the greatest political boondoggles of modern times."

The suspicions of Rep. James Jeffords, R.-Vt., have also been aroused. He has asked the General Accounting Office to investigate the project. The taxpayers' money was used, he charges, for what appears to be "improper purposes, including possibly the use of appropriated funds to lobby the Congress on legislative matters."

POT POLICY — The men around President Carter have been quarreling behind the scenes over what words to put in his mouth on the marijuana question.

One faction favored a more sympathetic attitude toward pot smoking. They managed to get their ideas into an early draft of the drug policy message that Carter asked his aides to write for him. This was approved by the president's health adviser Dr. Peter Bourne.

It included such sentences as "marijuana has become an established fact throughout our society and the sky has not fallen" and "research studies indicate it may have beneficial uses in the treatment of certain types of illness."

THE PROPOSED message also contained a suggestion that the states should repeal their criminal prohibitions, "thus bringing to a close an unhappy and misguided chapter in our history."

But these sentences were too strong for scholarly Stuart Eizenstat, the President's top domestic policy adviser. He dashed off a confidential memo to Carter, declaring: "I am very concerned about the marijuana section of this message."

Eizenstat protested that "the section on marijuana is written in an almost laudatory tone, which I believe is unfortunate." Some of the sentences, he objected, "almost seem to be a positive recommendation of the drug."

The president struck out the sentences that Eizenstat didn't like. Nevertheless, the final message endorsed decriminalization of small amounts of pot.

Perhaps Panama Should Reimburse U.S.

To the Editor:

Have read your editorial of Oct. 4 anent the Panama Canal with much interest. Yes, you noted some facts, but omitted some other facts.

You mentioned the fact that some of our Navy ships and some freighters are too large for the canal locks. These ships are only a very small percentage of our Navy fleet, also commercial fleet. We can always build larger locks (if we hang on to the canal, that is).

Another fact: Under the proposed treaty, we must refrain from planning another canal anywhere through the Isthmus except with Panama's consent.

IF THE Canal Zone is such a thorn in her side, why doesn't Panama offer to reimburse us for our investments? That would be the decent, businesslike thing to do. Why not give the U.S. taxpayer a break for once?

It looks very much as if this treaty gives Panama all the goodies on a silver platter while the U.S. gets nothing but obligations!

I'm afraid that the world would judge Uncle Sam as a paper tiger who caves in to blackmail and is afraid to stick up for his rights.

Not So Cheap

To the Editor:

Zenith TV manufacturers are moving part of their operation overseas where they can get assembly workers for $2,000 a year. Now we can buy Zenith TVs cheaper, but we will have to pay more taxes for unemployment insurance to the unemployed workers and there will be fewer taxpayers.

Multiply this by thousands of other companies from steel to automobiles and you will have a small idea of the problem. What does this do to balance of trade?

Let's face up to it. Those bargains we are getting from overseas aren't so cheap. They are breaking us.

2 Plus 2

To the Editor:

On Oct. 5, I read on your editorial page of a unique "new" way to help our children learn. This amazing discovery is to either retain them or send them to summer school. I'm all for it!

I also believe that academic achievement is not the only thing we want our children to learn. However, a correct balance is needed between academics and social events.

I WOULD much rather have my child use his time to learn that 2 plus 2 equals 4 than to learn how to skateboard safely.

Every holiday or birthday does not require a party on school time. Some movies are really learning tools while others are time fillers.

Could we please retain some sensible balance in our school curriculum?

As a parent and a former teacher, I am concerned.

Ruing San Juan

To the Editor:

I've been a resident of San Juan Capistrano for two years. In the two years that I've been in this city, I've seen too many new houses being built. Each year they build more and more houses. If they don't stop building houses, San Juan Capistrano won't be the same town I moved into two years ago. Everywhere you turn there are more new houses going up and the more new people the messier our town gets.

All the new people that have bought houses down here are scaring away our beautiful swallows because they're taking hoses and squirting the swallows' nests down. If this keeps up, the only thing left will be a dull city with a bunch of people who ruined what our city stood for.

Religious Confusion

To the Editor:

Your article entitled "Self Help Class Set for San Juan" (Daily Pilot, Oct. 3) confuses two distinctly different religious denominations, and would leave your readers quite puzzled unless corrected.

PERHAPS Ms. Carman has already mentioned this to you, but Christian Science, discovered by Mary Baker Eddy in 1866, is the religion represented by some 3000 branches of the Church of Christ, Scientist, throughout the world. It has no connection with the Self-Help Foundation in San Diego. Neither does it sponsor the singles group or leadership training course that your article implies.

I am sure Ms. Carman, as well as all of the Christian Science churches in Orange County, will appreciate your publication of this clarification.

Phone Invasion

To the Editor:

Junk mail is a nuisance, but a junk phone call is a deplorable invasion of my privacy! I have been interrupted from naps, baths, preparing or eating dinner and intimate conversations with my husband to turn down pitches for air conditioning, swimming pools, life insurance, charity balls, selling my home and a Sunday paper I already subscribe to.

ALL THIS is very irritating, but I am just recently experiencing the ultimate in disturbing phone calls. After recently suffering a miscarriage, I am painfully reminded of my baby's approaching due date by phone calls offering diaper services!

Surely there are others in our community equally bothered by these exasperating interruptions into our private lives. Isn't there anything we can do about it?

Badham Right

To the Editor:

I must take exception to your editorial of Oct. 6, entitled "A Foolish Mistake," concerning a resolution in Congress calling for Andrew Young's impeachment.

I sincerely believe the "foolish mistake" was made by President Carter when he did not demand the resignation of Young the first time he openly insulted a nation friendly to our country.

He, (Young) so obviously predisposed with Communist countries and causes has made justifiable the reasons that 10 Congressmen have called for his ouster. (You can't for one moment believe that Young has been muzzled permanently!)

I say "three cheers" for Representative Badham for his forthright stand and, "alas" we don't have more of his ilk, strong enough to speak out and be counted as true and caring Americans!

Other Problems

To the Editor:

In this era of continuing national crises: energy, world peace, nuclear proliferation, pollution, unemployment, racial prejudice, violence, urban decay etc. etc., it is indeed heartening to learn that my Congressman, Bob Badham, is hard at work back in Washington backing resolutions to impeach our U.N. Ambassador, Andrew Young.

Good going, Bob! Keep your eye on the old ball and perhaps the other 434 Congressmen will have time to get around to the problems that really count?

High Court Hears Bakke 'Race Case'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox told the U.S. Supreme Court today that a special admissions program at a University of California medical school is needed to help minorities because "the other alternatives suggested simply will not work."

In oral arguments in the case of Allan Paul Bakke, Cox defended the so-called affirmative action program used by the university's med school at Davis. He said the program aided minorities "long victimized by racial discrimination."

Bakke, who is white, successfully challenged the university's program before the California Supreme Court. He claimed it made him a victim of racial discrimination.

Bakke's "reverse discrimination" case is considered by many constitutional scholars to set the stage for the high court's most important statement on race relations since it outlawed segregation 23 years ago.

At stake in Bakke's case is the future of affirmative action programs, begun in the last 15 years to give special preference to minority members and women in education and business.

Bakke's attorney, Reynold Colvin of San Francisco, urged the justices to affirm the California Supreme Court decision.

Colvin argued that the Constitution's guarantee of "equal protection" for all citizens is violated when a school takes into account an applicant's race — making that factor a "crucial" one.

"The use of race as a basis for admission to a medical school, or for granting any other rights, is improper," he argued.

Race should be considered only as it provides a clue to the applicant's total evaluation, he said.

Considering race, Colvin said, "is permissible only to the extent it gives some clue to the admissions committee whether there was a prior history of economic or educational deprivation or persecution."

Bakke's legal briefs have contended that in such cases, giving special preference to economically or educationally deprived applicants would be acceptable.

Colvin appeared to displease at least one member of the court, Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr., by devoting the first 20 minutes of his allotted 45 minutes to reciting the case's facts.

"I'm here primarily to hear constitutional arguments," Powell said in a gentle rebuke. "I would like some help with the constitutional issues."

Colvin quickly complied, stressing that Bakke was deprived admission to the medical school solely because he is white, an automatic violation of the Constitution.

Neighbor Youth Charged

ELVATON, Md. (AP) — A teen-age youth was arrested and charged today in the stabbing murders of three young girls who disappeared while playing and were found lying by a stream near their homes in this Baltimore suburb, police said.

A spokesman for Anne Arundel County police identified the suspect as Stuart Kreiner, 16, of the same Southgate community where the girls lived and where their bodies were found Monday.

Authorities said Kreiner had been charged with three counts of first-degree murder. They said they had no other suspects in the case.

Investigators said they had found a knife and jacket that led to the youth's arrest. They also said the suspect's family had been extremely cooperative in the investigation.

"This has been a tragedy for everyone," a police spokesman said.

Diving Descent

Space Shuttle Lands Safely

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE (AP) — In its most realistic test and fastest flight to date, the Space Shuttle Enterprise landed safely today after a diving descent simulating a return from space.

Flying for the first time without a streamlined tailcone used in the three previous flights to extend its gliding range, the shuttle dropped more steeply and swiftly, touching down only 2½ minutes after separating from the 747 jet that bore it aloft.

Minus the tailcone, the shuttle was about 30 feet shorter with a blunt, instead of pointed, rear end. This made the bulky space transport craft less buoyant and also caused the carrier to strain and shake while taking the Enterprise to launch altitude.

The added drag during the climb over the desert caused the separation to be delayed by minutes while the 747 struggled higher.

After casting free of the mother ship, the shuttle was guided by astronauts Joe Engle, 45, and Richard Truly, 39, through a few quick maneuvers before touching down on a dry lake bed at about 250 miles per hour, somewhat faster than previous landings.

Unlike the previous flights, today's glide, carried live on national television, was so short that the shuttle was unable to make a leisurely U-turn and many test maneuvers before landing.

Instead, it nosed down at a steep angle and made a nearly straight-in approach with little time for tests of guidance control systems.

Immediately after separation, Engle and Truly were told from the ground they were some 1,500 feet higher than planned for the course.

The pilots then opened the speed brake, a pair of hinged flaps on the shuttle's tail that slowed it and dropped it to the desired position.

Housing Bill OK'd By Carter

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter signed a bill today providing $14.7 billion for housing the needy and revitalizing the cities, calling it "a giant step forward" in improving living conditions for low-income, elderly and handicapped families.

The measure includes $1.2 billion to help the families pay their rent.

Recalling his visit last week to the South Bronx slums in New York, Carter said he saw living conditions that are "a disgrace to our great country — enough to shake our confidence in the structure that we've evolved."

While there are no instant solutions to such housing problems, the President said, "This bill takes a giant step forward."

"In general, this is a very excellent piece of legislation," Carter told them. But he said one part of it, removing restraints on building homes in flood plains, caused him concern.

The signing ceremony followed Carter's weekly breakfast with congressional leaders.

NB Council OKs Study

Impact to Decide Fifth Avenue Completion

By JOANNE REYNOLDS
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Over the objections of a handful of residents, Newport Beach city councilmen decided Monday to have an environmental study made of the proposed completion of Fifth Avenue in Corona del Mar.

The vote was 4-2, with Councilmen Trudi Rogers and Paul Ryckoff dissenting. Councilman Don McInnis was absent.

The study, to be done by an independent consultant instead of city staff members, is to consider the effect of completing the two-lane residential roadway across the Jasmine gulch between Larkspur and Iris avenues.

The study was recommended to councilmen by members of the city's Traffic Affairs Committee (TAC) who were asked to make suggestions based on a recent survey regarding traffic taken this summer in Corona del Mar.

The survey showed that of the 600 people questioned, more favored the completion of Fifth Avenue than opposed it.

TAC members suggested the environmental impact report be made so that councilmen will have as much information as possible before deciding whether to go ahead with the project.

The homeowners who objected Tuesday said they don't want the street completed and accused councilmen of trying to make the two-lane road into a thoroughfare.

One woman, Val Morton, implied councilmen were

Carter Says Crisis 'Severe' in Energy

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter said today the energy crisis is "much more severe than it was six months ago" when he unveiled his energy program.

He promised to "go back to the country" to gain support for his proposals, many of which have been rejected by the Senate.

Carter told reporters that ever since he announced his energy program last April, "the oil companies have . . . on an almost hourly basis presented their point of view." He called that "completely legitimate" and said he didn't criticize the firms for the practice.

But, he said, "the basic struggle is whether or not the average family will be treated fairly," whether supplies will be adequate and international stability and national security will be maintained "or whether a special interest group can derive unwarranted advantage at the expense of the American people. . .

"I think it is important for me again to go back to the country and reaffirm the reasons, which have not changed, for the comprehensive energy policy we have adopted," Carter said.

Trio Facing Vice Charges

Three Orange Coast women were arrested on suspicion of conspiracy to commit prostitution Tuesday night by Newport Beach police.

Booked into city jail were Marjorie Reyburne, 30, of 19007 Vermont Lane, Huntington Beach; Vernell Lou Laurence, 41, of 1101 W. MacArthur Blvd., Santa Ana, and Toni Marie Lorance, 29, of 1935 Sherington Place, Newport Beach. All three were released after posting $250 bail.

Agents Recover $600,000 in Stolen Goods

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — More than 100 people have been indicted as the result of the biggest "sting" in the history of U.S. law enforcement, the FBI said today.

Local, state and federal agents manned phony fencing operations in an apartment in Virginia Beach and a pool hall in Newport News. They took in more than $600,000 in stolen goods, and most of the transactions were videotaped, said Herb Clough, special agent in charge of the Norfolk FBI office.

The goods ranged from a bottle of baby formula, stolen during a house break-in, to a forklift truck. There were hubcaps, tape recorders and luxury cars.

Clough said 107 people faced 276 charges ranging from homicide to robbery. The indictments were returned Tuesday by special grand juries.

Sixty-six of those charged had been arrested by this morning, Clough said, in Norfolk, Virginia Beach, Newport News, Richmond, Fredericksburg and upstate New York.

The operation, code-named Talon, involved seven local police departments, the FBI and state police.

The number of indictments from Operation Talon is the biggest ever, Clough said.

In some cases, the alleged sellers of stolen merchandise talked freely with the undercover agents, and one man reportedly confessed to a murder before the hidden camera.

New State Law

District Must Pay

Newport Beach and Costa Mesa taxpayers will have to pay out more than $1.3 million to other school districts by 1981 under a new law, Newport-Mesa school trustees were told Tuesday.

Norman R. Loats, deputy superintendent of the Newport-Mesa Unified School District, said the money must be paid under AB 65, a new law aimed at equalizing expenditures per student between wealthy and poor school districts.

A schedule presented to the board shows that the district must turn over to the state $782,540 in 1978-79, $1.2 million in 1979-80, and $1.3 million in 1980-81.

Jean Harmon, executive assistant to the superintendent, said the Newport-Mesa district's budget growth is also restricted under the law, with 2.3 percent growth permitted next year. That is not enough to offset inflation, she said.

"The effect of the law is to penalize wealthy districts, and we are that," Mrs. Harmon said.

The school finance law is a result of the Serrano vs. Priest court decision, which held that it is unfair to penalize students financially just because they live in poor school districts.

The bill's goal, Mrs. Harmon explained, is to bring the amount spent per student in each California school district to within $00 of that spent in all other school districts in the state.

Irvine OKs Planning For Town Center

By PHILIP ROSMARIN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

A proposal by Southern California Presbyterian Homes for a senior citizens apartment complex, may get the long-delayed Irvine Town Center project under way.

The Irvine City Council, after hearing Tuesday that the seniors project would be jeopardized by further delays in preliminary approval of development standards for the center, directed that the housing phase of the Town Center proceed.

A second phase, development of a commercial central core, would come later.

The council previously held back early approvals for the center in hopes the project might be developed as a whole, the commercial core built at the same time as the housing.

The Irvine Company claimed that was impossible, that there was no economic justification then for the commercial center. The company wanted to build houses first.

After the city's three commissions told the company they wanted to see plans for the commercial core before approving any development standards for housing, in 1974, the project hung in limbo.

But on Tuesday, Nick T. Ugrin, president of the non-profit Southern California Presbyterian Homes, surprised the council with news his group was ready to build a high-rise convalescent care and apartment project for senior citizens.

The apartments would be priced for low and moderate income seniors. That struck a responsive chord with the council, which is under pressure to find low cost housing for residents.

At Councilwoman Gabrielle Pryor's urging, the council broke the Town Center deadlock, allowing the Irvine Company to submit plans for the center in the two phases.

The vote was unanimous. Councilman David Sills said, just before, "If we try to do the whole thing at once, we're never going to get anywhere."

The project is to be on a triangle of 236 acres bounded by University, Culver and Campus drives near UC Irvine.

considering the completion of the roadway as the first step in turning it into a freeway.

Another resident, Margaret Wilson, who described her memories of Corona del Mar from 25 years ago, said she felt completion of the roadway would "destroy" Corona del Mar.

"I don't see any reason for accommodating other people," she said of the plan to study connecting the two dead-end portions of the street.

Jay Smith, president of the Corona del Mar Civic Association, pointed out that his organization conducted its own poll and found that of their respondents, 173 oppose the Fifth Avenue project and 121 support it.

He, like the four other area residents who spoke, said the city survey's results were suspect because they were not questioned.

One resident, Ron Kennedy, said the survey was taken in too large an area of Corona del Mar to accurately reflect the views of residents who would be impacted by the project.

But councilmen reiterated that they were not considering the road project Tuesday, just the EIR on it.

Councilman Ray Williams, an opponent of road improvements on Fifth Avenue, moved that the council go ahead with the study to answer questions raised by residents and by TAC.

"I think we should hire an outside firm to do the EIR so the city can't be accused of bias," he said.

Williams also cautioned the residents that the EIR, by law, must consider the impact of alternate projects.

"The consultant is going to include suggested alternatives but that doesn't mean that we are going to accept them. They'll be included because the law says they have to be."

Meanwhile, about 50 miles away in Carroll County, state police said a 9-year-old boy was found safe this morning more than 18 hours after he disappeared. Ingred Berggren Funeral Friday

Funeral services will be held Friday for Ingred V. Berggren of Huntington Beach, famed as a salad maker for more than 12 years, who died last Friday after a lengthy illness. She was 44.

A native of Sweden, Miss Berggren presided over a vast array of salads while working at the Villa Sweden Smorgasbord, first in Huntington Beach and later for most of her 12 years with the firm in Corona del Mar.

Born in Boliden, Sweden, she left her family to emigrate to America more than a decade ago.

"She was a beautiful person," says Mrs. Herta Blacklund, who heads the Villa Sweden organization. "She was such a happy, loving person, always so conscientious. . ."

Survivors include her father Arvid; a brother Gosta, both of Sweden; a brother, Sixter, of Australia; plus sisters Ruth Wahlund and Astrid Lundstrom, of Sweden.

"She gave herself to her work and the church," says the Rev. Richard Carlson, pastor of the Westminster Christian Assembly, of which Miss Berggren was a member.

He will conduct funeral services Friday at 10 a.m. in Pierce Brothers-Smith's Mortuary in Huntington Beach, just across the street from the restaurant where she started work in America.

Her ashes will be inurned in Sweden by members of her family, who are coming to the Orange Coast for the rites.

Miss Berggren's wish was that friends may make memorial contributions if they desire, to the Fred Weinberg Honduras Chapel through the Westminster Christian Assembly, 14642 Bushard St., Westminster in care of the Rev. Carlson.

Irvine To Count Its Cows

The Irvine City Council has ordered city officials to estimate the costs of site improvements that will have to be made on Irvine Company agricultural lands scheduled for residential development in the next 10 to 20 years.

In a companion action, the council ordered the staff to count cows.

Object of the first exercise is to help city planners gauge what amounts of money will be needed for roads, parks, sewers, schools and other public improvements projects when housing is built.

The purpose of the cow-counting venture is to see whether the Irvine Company is abiding by terms of the Williamson Act, under which the grazing lands have preserve status.

The Irvine Company has about 50,000 acres in Williamson preserve, almost 3,500 acres of that within city limits and thousands of acres more within the Irvine political sphere of influence subject to possible annexation.

The company reports there are 3,500 cows on the property.

Councilwoman Gabrielle Pryor argued that because last month the council adopted a land use amendment to the city general plan that calls for eventual residential development of the Williamson acreage, the property ought to be removed from the preserve.

She said the taxes the city would collect could at least partly pay for public improvements needed when houses are built.

She said the Irvine Company last year paid only $2.05 per acre in taxes on the preserve lands, for a total of only $7,165.

CdM Man Robbed Of Stereo, TV

A Corona del Mar man found himself without the means of watching or listening to the World Series Tuesday after thieves took his stereo system and color television set.

Services Set Thursday for Donald Smith

Memorial services will be held Thursday for Donald Smith, longtime Balboa Island resident who died Monday at the age of 80.

A native of California, Mr. Smith lived most of his life in California and summered on Balboa Island for more than 40 years.

He was an executive of the R. A. Rowan and Company insurance firm prior to his retirement. In 1966 he and his wife, Marian, moved permanently to Balboa Island. Two years ago they moved from the island to Cliff Haven.

Sunday, Mr. and Mrs. Smith observed their 56th wedding anniversary.

In addition to his widow, Mr. Smith leaves two daughters, Aileen Salisbury and Robin Lawrence; two sons, Donald D. Smith Jr. and Raymond W. Smith, and seven grandchildren.

Services will be conducted at noon at the Pacific View Memorial Park chapel.

The family has suggested memorial contributions to Hoag Memorial Hospital where Mr. Smith was a member of the 552 Club, the businessmen's support group.

Speedup Sought

Amtrak Raps 'Nixon Limit'

Amtrak officials say they'd like to step on it when they reach a five-mile stretch of railroad track near the 22-acre Nixon complex in San Clemente.

But a 40-mile-per hour limit for north and southbound Amtrak trains was imposed sometime during the Nixon presidential years for security reasons, says Arthur Lloyd, Western regional manager for the national rail system.

Lloyd said Amtrak would like to see that speed limit increased to 75 miles per hour from a curve in the tracks just north of San Clemente to just past the Nixon enclave.

"The Federal Railroad Administration and Amtrak itself have jurisdiction on speed limits on curves and the maximum speed that the track will allow," Lloyd said today.

"But where you have trackage that will allow more speed, local ordinances will restrict speed, for instance at grade crossings and for safety.

"And in the case of the Nixon thing, it was for security," Lloyd said.

But, he added, "We have shown that 40 miles per hour is not very practical north of town."

He said the maximum speed between San Diego and Santa Ana is 90 miles per hour, saying trains pick up that speed just past Del Mar and barrel along to San Clemente, with a few slowdowns on curves and crossings.

"Then they hit that 5.1 mile stretch that really slows them down," Lloyd said.

He said a 75-mile-per hour limit along the Nixon stretch, plus some other revised speeds, would save San Diego to Los Angeles travelers about 18 minutes.

Amtrak presented the increased speed plan proposal as part of a five-year plan issued in Washington. The plan also calls for increased service between the two cities and an increase from five daily roundtrips to seven.

Time for Reason In Traffic Debate

The controversy over a Fifth Avenue traffic thoroughfare in Corona del Mar is like a ghost that refuses to be laid to rest. The topic reappears every year or so, in a variety of forms, renews fear and dismay among some Newport Beach residents, then gets shoved into the background and forgotten for a while.

We can understand the feelings of residents of the homes immediately adjacent to Fifth Avenue who don't want to see their quiet neighborhood bordered by a major thoroughfare for motorists seeking to avoid driving in the congestion on East Coast Highway.

But we think they may have gotten a little too sensitive to the subject over the years and the hue and cry they raise at each mention of Fifth Avenue may not always be reasonable.

What is needed now is for all concerned to take a more reasoned approach to the problem. An environmental impact report on completion of the roadway across the Jasmine gulch doesn't mean the construction is going to start tomorrow.

It will, however, give city officials factual data they are going to need in order to make a decision that can be shown to be best for all Newport Beach residents. And that is about the only way the haunting problem of Fifth Avenue is ever going to be laid to rest.

Board Missed Bus

The problem of relocating the McNally Continuation School increasingly dominates Newport-Mesa Unified School District affairs.

Where to put the school came up more than a year ago, but the school board was unwilling to make a swift and clear decision on a new location from its present site at 19th and Harbor in Costa Mesa.

Citizens around other low-enrollment schools in the district didn't like the idea of moving McNally into their neighborhoods.

They protested and the protests have gotten louder.

The school board pushed the matter onto a citizen committee which held several meetings and spent many hours on the question. Members were unable to decide where the continuation school should go.

Now the matter is back in the school board's lap, hotter and more difficult than it ever was.

How much easier things would be now if trustees had disposed of the relocation matter when it first came before them.

They should have swallowed the medicine and gotten it over with.

Paving the Way

It would appear the local cities won a victory of sorts after skirmishing with CalTrans over two major highway resurfacing projects.

City people in Huntington Beach, Newport Beach and Costa Mesa got their hackles up when the state agency announced plans to re-pave four miles of Newport Boulevard and nine miles of Pacific Coast Highway this summer.

The screams of outrage and anguish apparently carried all the way to Sacramento because work is just now getting under way.

In spite of the delay of schedule to miss summer traffic, we shouldn't be overwhelmed by the thoughtfulness of the folks at CalTrans.

They may be paving at night, to avoid blocking traffic, but they're painting the newly paved lanes on Newport Boulevard in the middle of the peak traffic hours during the day.

What will happen when they start on Coast Highway?

Q. "Has anybody ever really disproved Adolf Hitler's theory that selective breeding could produce a super human being?"

A. In a way, it was disproved. Long ago. But not with humans, because humans don't breed selectively. On the contrary. It was disproved with dogs, which have been selectively bred for centuries, still without ever turning out a super dog.

The 20,000 books about chess exceed in number the books about all other games put together, I'm told. One of these chess books cites studies to prove that a good memory is not the most significant faculty a top chess player can possess, not at all. Imagination is, according to this authority. The most remarkable chess performances, it's said, are not executed, the way a pianist renders a tune, but are created, the way a composer dreams up such.

Energy Chiefs Tilt to Nuclear

WASHINGTON — James Schlesinger's rise from political obscurity to political power has been smooth and subtle. He has the air more of a college professor than an energy czar. But behind the pipe smoke and contemplative manner, he has the heart of an industrial tycoon.

He has been an unabashed advocate of nuclear power, for example, ever since he came out of the Atomic Energy Commission in the early 1970s. The big utility companies desperately want to develop energy, of course, that will utilize their existing grid systems and permit them to go on selling electricity to the populace. A more revolutionary form of energy, such as solar power, might put the utility industry out of business.

There is disquieting evidence that Schlesinger may be quietly stacking the new Energy Dept. with subordinates who share his enthusiasm for nuclear power. Top policymaking positions will go, for example, to John O'Leary and Dale Myers, who are regarded as nuclear proponents.

Dr. James Liverman, a nuclear apologist, has been mentioned as Schlesinger's choice to be his new environmental chief. This possibility has so outraged environmentalists that a coalition has dashed off a private letter to Schlesinger, warning that they "would oppose" Liverman's nomination.

SCHLESINGER'S most controversial choice, however, may turn out to be Robert Thorne, who heads the San Francisco office of the Energy Research and Development Administration (ERDA). Schlesinger has Thorne in mind as his assistant secretary in charge of technology, an office that will control the Energy Dept.'s nuclear operations.

Thorne not only was in charge of nuclear affairs in San Francisco but allegedly funded an apparently "improper" lobbying effort to influence Congress to look kindly upon nuclear power.

He used $113,250 of the taxpayers' money to establish the Energy Awareness Project — an idea advanced by a registered nuclear lobbying group known as the California Council for Environmental and Economic Balance (CCEEB).

There is a suspicion that the Energy Awareness Project was really supposed to make the public and Congress more aware of nuclear energy, although a CCEEB spokesman told us the project was intended to inform the public on all energy alternatives.

THE CCEEB stated in its original proposal, without mentioning nuclear power, that "we would want participants to write their congressmen to ask them to support specific legislation, pass resolutions, write letters to the editor."

Thorne's office adopted this idea to the tune of $113,250 over the objections of at least one subordinate who warned in an internal memo: "I believe such an effort to be both ill-conceived and misdirected." He added with emphasis: "The logic of the proposal not only escapes me; but, its outline would appear to be an excellent plan for one of the greatest political boondoggles of modern times."

The suspicions of Rep. James Jeffords, R.-Vt., have also been aroused. He has asked the General Accounting Office to investigate the project. The taxpayers' money was used, he charges, for what appears to be "improper purposes, including possibly the use of appropriated funds to lobby the Congress on legislative matters."

POT POLICY — The men around President Carter have been quarreling behind the scenes over what words to put in his mouth on the marijuana question.

One faction favored a more sympathetic attitude toward pot smoking. They managed to get their ideas into an early draft of the drug policy message that Carter asked his aides to write for him. This was approved by the president's health adviser Dr. Peter Bourne.

It included such sentences as "marijuana has become an established fact throughout our society and the sky has not fallen" and "research studies indicate it may have beneficial uses in the treatment of certain types of illness."

THE PROPOSED message also contained a suggestion that the states should repeal their criminal prohibitions, "thus bringing to a close an unhappy and misguided chapter in our history."

But these sentences were too strong for scholarly Stuart Eizenstat, the President's top domestic policy adviser. He dashed off a confidential memo to Carter, declaring: "I am very concerned about the marijuana section of this message."

Eizenstat protested that "the section on marijuana is written in an almost laudatory tone, which I believe is unfortunate." Some of the sentences, he objected, "almost seem to be a positive recommendation of the drug."

The president struck out the sentences that Eizenstat didn't like. Nevertheless, the final message endorsed decriminalization of small amounts of pot.

Perhaps Panama Should Reimburse U.S.

To the Editor:

Have read your editorial of Oct. 4 anent the Panama Canal with much interest. Yes, you noted some facts, but omitted some other facts.

You mentioned the fact that some of our Navy ships and some freighters are too large for the canal locks. These ships are only a very small percentage of our Navy fleet, also commercial fleet. We can always build larger locks (if we hang on to the canal, that is).

Another fact: Under the proposed treaty, we must refrain from planning another canal anywhere through the Isthmus except with Panama's consent.

IF THE Canal Zone is such a thorn in her side, why doesn't Panama offer to reimburse us for our investments? That would be the decent, businesslike thing to do. Why not give the U.S. taxpayer a break for once?

It looks very much as if this treaty gives Panama all the goodies on a silver platter while the U.S. gets nothing but obligations!

I'm afraid that the world would judge Uncle Sam as a paper tiger who caves in to blackmail and is afraid to stick up for his rights.

The Real Heroes

To the Editor:

The cartoon published on the Comment page of Oct. 1 concerning the Kent State situation was silly.

I had occasion recently to visit the memorial above the sunken battleship Arizona where over 1,100 U.S. sailors have been entombed since December, 1941. I wish everyone connected with the Kent State happening could make that same pilgrimage.

I sailed and fought with many survivors of Pearl Harbor. One of the men from the torpedoed cruiser Helena was with me during that recent visit. We both agreed that, if the country was threatened again, we would fight again to defend it and its freedoms.

MANY OF US were rebelling against the status quo before WWII. The difference was that we were smart enough only because we were patient enough to wait until we had enough knowledge to assess the facts and arrive at a logical plan of action. Alexander Pope was so right when he said: "A little knowledge is a dangerous thing. . ." The word "little" needs underlining.

And Kent State? The whole thing was so useless, so utterly stupid. There were no heroes there, nothing to be proud of, no memories that stir the marrow of man such as the marrow is stirred standing over the rusting hulk of the Arizona. May they not have died uselessly.

Dazzling Deceptions

To the Editor:

Carter is only consistent in his inconsistency. His latest turnabout is his insistence of the Palestinians' "legitimate" rights when the Palestinians won't even recognize Israel's "legitimate" rights to exist.

He is very selective of which humans should have these "rights." His, and Vance's, surprise at Israel's reaction was surprising that they didn't expect it. Can they not even imagine what facing annihilation is like?

BUT OF course, Carter, in all his honest piety, is only listening to the Arab money. His promises have turned out to be even hollower than his humble facade.

The Jewish voters, who were as responsible for his election as the other minorities, are getting the same back of his hand. Will they question rhetoric and seek out facts when they go to the polls next time? Or will they again be dazzled by deceptions?

Religious Confusion

To the Editor:

Your article entitled "Self Help Class Set for San Juan" (Daily Pilot, Oct. 3) confuses two distinctly different religious denominations, and would leave your readers quite puzzled unless corrected.

PERHAPS Ms. Carman has already mentioned this to you, but Christian Science, discovered by Mary Baker Eddy in 1866, is the religion represented by some 3000 branches of the Church of Christ, Scientist, throughout the world. It has no connection with the Self-Help Foundation in San Diego. Neither does it sponsor the singles group or leadership training course that your article implies.

I am sure Ms. Carman, as well as all of the Christian Science churches in Orange County, will appreciate your publication of this clarification.

To the Editor:

I must compliment you and your staff for consistently turning out such a fine publication. Being an avid reader of newspapers from all over the nation, I realize how fortunate the citizens of the South Coast area are to have such an informative and well-rounded quality local newspaper. The wide variety of topic matter, international, national and local, is most satisfying and your entertainment section is superb.

I'm sure I speak for many thousands who also anxiously look forward every day to the stimulating and enjoyable experience of the Daily Pilot when I say, "Thank You" and keep up the good work.

Phone Invasion

To the Editor:

Junk mail is a nuisance, but a junk phone call is a deplorable invasion of my privacy! I have been interrupted from naps, baths, preparing or eating dinner and intimate conversations with my husband to turn down pitches for air conditioning, swimming pools, life insurance, charity balls, selling my home and a Sunday paper I already subscribe to.

ALL THIS is very irritating, but I am just recently experiencing the ultimate in disturbing phone calls. After recently suffering a miscarriage, I am painfully reminded of my baby's approaching due date by phone calls offering diaper services!

Surely there are others in our community equally bothered by these exasperating interruptions into our private lives. Isn't there anything we can do about it?

Badham Right

To the Editor:

I must take exception to your editorial of Oct. 6, entitled "A Foolish Mistake," concerning a resolution in Congress calling for Andrew Young's impeachment.

I sincerely believe the "foolish mistake" was made by President Carter when he did not demand the resignation of Young the first time he openly insulted a nation friendly to our country.

He, (Young) so obviously predisposed with Communist countries and causes has made justifiable the reasons that 10 Congressmen have called for his ouster. (You can't for one moment believe that Young has been muzzled permanently!)

I say "three cheers" for Representative Badham for his forthright stand and, "alas" we don't have more of his ilk, strong enough to speak out and be counted as true and caring Americans!

Other Problems

To the Editor:

In this era of continuing national crises: energy, world peace, nuclear proliferation, pollution, unemployment, racial prejudice, violence, urban decay etc. etc., it is indeed heartening to learn that my Congressman, Bob Badham, is hard at work back in Washington backing resolutions to impeach our U.N. Ambassador, Andrew Young.

Good going, Bob! Keep your eye on the old ball and perhaps the other 434 Congressmen will have time to get around to the problems that really count?

Biggest Jaws Survive Time

by MILTON MOSKOWITZ

Of the top 100 industrial companies in 1917, only 35 remain in that class.

That's what Forbes magazine discovered when it dug up data for its 60th anniversary issue, published last month. The moral Forbes drew from this high rate of attrition was that the big guys don't always win.

"Corporate heft is no guarantee of survival," said the magazine.

THAT MAY BE SO. But a close examination of the 1917 roster reveals that while there were some companies that couldn't hack it and dropped out — Central Leather, United Verde Extension Mining, American Locomotive, for examples — a much larger number disappeared because they were acquired or merged or otherwise captured by another giant.

Armour & Company was our fourth largest industrial company in 1917. And six years later it acquired another company on that list, Morris & Company, which ranked 65th. Today, Armour is part of Greyhound (oh, how the mighty have fallen).

Swift & Company, another meat packer, was No. 5 on the 1917 list. Now it's part of a mixed bag called Esmark.

Both Greyhound and Esmark are among the 50 leading industrials today.

No. 3 on the 1917 list was Bethlehem Steel. Our second largest steel maker, Bethlehem is still around, ranking 33rd, right behind Esmark. But three other steel makers on the 1917 list — Midvale Steel, Cambria Steel and Lackawanna Steel — are gone. What happened to them? Bethlehem scooped them up in 1922 and 1923.

A COMPANY CALLED CHILE COPPER, which did just what its name implies, ranked 29th in 1917. Another mining company on the 1917 list was Greene Cananea Copper — it ranked 89th. They were both enveloped in 1929 by Anaconda Copper, which ranked 13th, and Anaconda now belongs to Atlantic Richfield, which is the survivor of at least four companies on the 1917 list: Atlantic Refining, Sinclair Oil, Prairie Oil and Sinclair Gulf.

In other words, seven of the leading companies of 1917 are now combined into one, which ranks 15th.

Standard Oil of New York was No. 14 in 1917 and Vacuum Oil was No. 75. They joined forces in 1931 to form Socony Vacuum Oil, which later became Socony Mobil, which later became Mobil, which now also owns Montgomery Ward and Container Corp. of America. Two other companies on the 1917 list — Magnolia Petroleum, No. 37, and Virginia Carolina Chemicals, No. 46 — are today also part of Mobil.

MEXICAN PETROLEUM RANKED 64TH on the 1917 list. In 1919, it was acquired by Pan American Petroleum and Transport, which had ranked 99th. And in 1954 Pan American was absorbed by Standard Oil of Indiana, which was No. 36 in 1917 (today it's No. 12).

The moral might be that in a swamp filled with alligators, the ones with the biggest jaws survive.

Market Suffers Another Drubbing

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices took a solid drubbing today in a selloff blamed on concern over rising interest rates.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which had dropped 8.40 points on Tuesday to a 22-month low, fell another 10.48 to 823.98 today.

Declines overwhelmed advances by about a 6-1 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said the market was unsettled by fears that interest rates might be headed for levels at which they could cause problems for both business activity and investments like stocks and bonds.

High rates increase businesses' costs and also can discourage borrowing for expansion.

Rosary-kissing Speeder Gulps Cross

A San Diego youth apparently tried to swallow the rosary he had been clutching and kissing for protection Thursday as he led California Highway Patrol cars on a high speed freeway chase from Los Alamitos to Laguna Hills.

When the pursuit ended in a crackup at 5:15 p.m., just north of Lake Forest Drive, CHP officers reported finding the string of religious beads wedged into the mouth of 20-year-old Carlos Lomeli Santana.

When officers pulled the beads out, they found that the crucifix normally attached to rosaries was missing and presumed caught in the suspect's throat.

Laguna Hills paramedics were summoned to the scene but couldn't find the cross. A county fire department spokesman said today they presumed it had been swallowed and would "show up eventually."

Santana miraculously suffered only minor injuries and was taken to Orange County Jail.

A CHP spokesman said Santana was booked on charges of driving under thinfluence of drugs and reckless driving.

The suspect was allegedly first spotted driving at more than 60 miles an hour along the center divider shoulder of the San Diego Freeway near Los Alamitos.

Officers gave chase in the rush-hour traffic but Santana allegedly floored the accelerator and reached speeds of more than 110 during the 20-mile pursuit.

The suspect allegedly swung off the San Diego Freeway at the Laguna Freeway junction, sped over to the Santa Ana Freeway and continued south. Officers who got close during the chase said Santana periodically kissed the rosary he was holding.

The CHP said Santana finally lost control of his car and smashed into the center divider fence just after merging back onto the San Diego Freeway north of Lake Forest Drive.

Carter Signs City, Housing Boost Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter signed a bill today providing $14.7 billion for housing the needy and revitalizing the cities, calling it "a giant step forward" in improving living conditions for low-income, elderly and handicapped families.

The measure includes $1.2 billion to help the families pay their rent.

Recalling his visit last week to the South Bronx slums in New York, Carter said he saw living conditions that are "a disgrace to our great country — enough to shake our confidence in the structure that we've evolved."

While there are no instant solutions to such housing problems, the President said, "This bill takes a giant step forward."

"In general, this is a very excellent piece of legislation," Carter told them. But he said one part of it, removing restraints on building homes in flood plains, caused him concern.

The President said he would determine whether to reinstate the restraints with corrective legislation next year or try to deal with the matter administratively.

The signing ceremony followed Carter's weekly breakfast with congressional leaders.

Underworld Figure Slain For Revenge?

BAY HARBOR ISLAND, Fla. (AP) — The stepson of underworld figure Meyer Lansky was shot to death today in what police speculate was a gangland revenge killing.

Richard Schwartz, 47, was shot once as he sat in his car behind a restaurant he owned in this exclusive resort city between Miami and Miami Beach, police said.

His body was found shortly after 9 a.m. EDT behind the Inside restaurant. Details of the slaying were not immediately available.

Schwartz, son of Lansky's wife, Thelma, had been scheduled to go on trial Nov. 28 on charges of killing his drinking companion, 29-year-old Craig Teriaca, son of underworld figure Vincent Teriaca.

A number of known mob figures attended Teriaca's funeral.

"The motive doesn't seem to be robbery or anything of that nature," police spokesman Ralph Page said. "It would be a logical conclusion that revenge is a good possibility. Considering who he is and the incident with Teriaca, we have to look at the revenge theory."

Teriaca was shot June 30 at the bar of The Forge restaurant before several witnesses. Police said Teriaca and Schwartz had been drinking together and the shooting occurred during an argument over a $10 bill left on the bar. Teriaca put the bill in his pocket but later offered to give it to Schwartz, police said.

FBI Roundup

100 Indicted In 'Sting' Raid

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — More than 100 people have been indicted as the result of the biggest "sting" in the history of U.S. law enforcement, the FBI said today.

Local, state and federal agents manned phony fencing operations in an apartment in Virginia Beach and a pool hall in Newport News. They took in more than $600,000 in stolen goods, and most of the transactions were videotaped, said Herb Clough, special agent in charge of the Norfolk FBI office.

The goods ranged from a bottle of baby formula, stolen during a house break-in, to a forklift truck. There were hubcaps, tape recorders and luxury cars.

Clough said 107 people faced 276 charges ranging from homicide to robbery. The indictments were returned Tuesday by special grand juries.

Sixty-six of those charged had been arrested by this morning, Clough said, in Norfolk, Virginia Beach, Newport News, Richmond, Fredericksburg and upstate New York.

The operation, code-named Talon, involved seven local police departments, the FBI and state police.

The number of indictments from Operation Talon is the biggest ever, Clough said.

In some cases, the alleged sellers of stolen merchandise talked freely with the undercover agents, and one man reportedly confessed to a murder before the hidden camera.

Is Bandit Same on 2 Heists?

The Federal Bureau of Investigation is studying the possibility that the burly man who robbed a Granada Hills bank Monday is the same man suspected of holding up a Laguna Hills bank last May 24.

Dick Woolf, a spokesman for the FBI in Los Angeles, said the physical descriptions of the two suspects are generally the same.

He said the bandit in this week's Bank of America heist, which netted $42,000 in cash and checks, was about six feet, two inches tall and weighed an estimated 240 pounds.

A man of the a same build held up the same branch for $5,400 last April, leading investigators to dub him "the Heavy."

A burly blond-haired bandit in a basebball cap robbed the Laguna Hills Bank of America of $52,000 in May.

"When descriptions are this close, we always try to compare them," said Woolf. "These guys are usually repeaters."

Investigators believe the suspect wears wigs and other disguises when staging his robberies. He wore a blue ski mask in this week's Granada Hills job, Woolf said.

And in both Granada Hills and Laguna Hills, the large man vaulted the counter to confront tellers and gather his loot.

Neighbor Youth Charged

ELVATON, Md. (AP) — A teen-age youth was arrested today in the stabbing deaths of three young girls who disappeared while playing and were found lying by a stream near their homes in this Baltimore suburb, police said.

An Anne Arundel County police spokesman identified the suspect as Stuart Kreiner, 16, of the same Southgate community where the girls lived and where their bodies were found Monday.

The spokesman said Kreiner had been charged with three counts of homicide.

Before word of the arrest, police had said they would go door to door through the town with a photograph of a knife sheath, hoping someone could identify one of the few clues in the stabbing deaths.

Jack Rayhart, a police spokesman, said citizens also would be shown photographs of the victims: Deborah Ann Hogan, 10; her 8-year-old sister, Theresa, and their friend Ann Marie Brzeszkiewicz, also 8.

Police said the sheath was found Monday near the small stream in a densely wooded area where the parka-clad bodies were discovered. The girls had disappeared Sunday.

Meanwhile, about 50 miles away in Carroll County, state police said a 9-year-old boy was found safe this morning more than 18 hours after he disappeared. Troopers said Thomas Doehrer was found wandering along a road about two miles from his rural Finksburg home. He had last been spotted about 4 p.m. Tuesday, playing in front of the house.

The youngster apparently had run away from home after a fight with a family member, they said.

More than 100 persons, along with a bloodhound and a state police helicopter, had taken part in the Carroll County search, they said.

Teen Girls Lured Into Prostitution?

NEWTON, N.J. (AP) — A cabinet maker and his wife have been accused of luring high school girls into a prostitution operation they ran from their home in Wantage Township.

Sussex County authorities charged Frank Barone, 57, Tuesday with impairing the morals of a minor, carnally abusing females under the age of 16 and prostitution. His wife, Diane, was charged with aiding and abetting him.

Authorities said at least nine girls were lured into prostitution since September 1976.

"He would pick up young female hitchhikers or he would use young girls as babysitters and in each case he would try to talk them into working for him as a prostitute," said prosecutor George Daggett.

Barone, reached at his attorney's office Tuesday, denied the charges. "They are blowing nothing into a big thing up there." About six girls "hung" around his house for a time, he said, adding they were friends of his live-in babysitter.

Daggett said charges would not be brought against any of the nine teen-agers, all high school students living with their parents in the general vicinity. "We are looking upon them as victims," he said.

Farrah Coming Back

Stars Set Second Sports Challenge in Viejo

Some of the brightest stars of television and the movies will come to Mission Viejo next week for the second time in six months to compete in the pseudo-sports event called Celebrity Challenge of the Sexes.

One highlight of the five-day event, which will be videotaped for a two-hour presentation on TV Nov. 13, is again expected to be Farrah Fawcett-Majors.

Farrah, the former star of television's "Charlie's Angels" series, will compete Oct 20 in a tennis match against actor Dick Van Patten, star of the show "Eight Is Enough."

Last time the tennis match drew an enormous crowd to the Marguerite Recreation Center, where it will take place again next week. The event will begin at 2 p.m.

A spokesman for the Mission Viejo Company said the public will be admitted to different events but details have not yet been worked out.

The celebrity sports events will kick off one week from today on the track at Saddleback College.

The first event to be staged for the cameras and onlookers will be an obstacle course run between Leslie Uggams and James Franciscus, starting at 9 a.m.

That will be followed at 11:30 a.m. with a bicycle race between Valerie Perrine and James Farantino.

The last event of the first day will be a triathon competition starting at 2:30 p.m. The male competitor will be LeVar Burton, the young Kunta Kinte of "Roots." His opponent has yet to be chosen.

The first event on Oct. 20 at the Marguerite recreation center will feature Susan Saint James and Robert Culp in swimming competition. Tennis with Farrah is the only other event of the day.

Two horseback events are slated for Oct. 21 at the Mission Viejo Equestrian Center, located just off Marguerite Parkway in the south part of the community.

Linda "The Exorcist" Blair will compete against Tab Hunter in a horse jumping event at 10 a.m. Steve Ford, son of former president Gerald Ford, will compete in rodeo events against an unnamed female opponent starting at 2:30 p.m.

On Saturday, Oct. 22, the scene of the action shifts to Capistrano Valley High School.

Moslem Massacre Charged

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — A Moslem rebel leader claimed today that Philippine troops massacred about 400 Moslem civilians to avenge the deaths of an army general and 34 other government soldiers.

A government spokesman in Manila denied the claim made by Hatimil Hassan, highest-ranking leader of the Moro National Liberation Front, in a telephone interview from Zamboanga City.

Military authorities in Zamboanga ordered an "intensified punitive campaign" against rebels responsible for killing Brig. Gen. Teodulfo S. Bautista and his men. The government said they were on a peace mission with rebel leaders in Paticul on Jolo island when they were attacked Monday.

Hassan said "very reliable sources" had reported to him that "immediately after the incident, several families evacuating from the area, some of them riding in jeeps, were told to come down and were killed by the army."

Jolo island is 100 miles southwest of Zamboanga in the southern Philippines, where a nine-month-old cease-fire between government forces and Moslem rebels fighting for autonomy broke down last month.

Strike Rule Told

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — An arbitrator has told West Coast dockworkers to break an earlier agreement and cross picket lines set up by striking East Coast longshoremen. In a ruling Tuesday, Sam Kagel, an arbitrator appointed by the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union and the shipping industry's Pacific Maritime Association, said the East Coast strike could not be honored here.

Employment Up; Jobless Rate Down

SACRAMENTO (AP) — California employment hit an all-time high in September while the jobless rate edged downward to 7.4 percent, the state reported today.

The Employment Development Department said there were 9,452,400 job-holders in the state last month, an increase of 100,000 since August.

Meanwhile, the total of unemployed looking for work dropped from 720,300 in August to 675,200 in September, the lowest since October 1974, the department said.

The jobless rate had been 7.5 percent in August. The national rate in September was 6.9 percent.

The department said all major industries in the state showed employment gains. It also said statistics from the 12-month period ended in September indicate a strong improvement in the job picture.

During that period, employment increased by 419,000, unemployment dropped by 132,000, and the jobless rate dropped from 9.2 percent to 7.4 percent.

That rate, however, does not include persons who have given up looking for work.

Alcoholism Center Aided

A San Juan Capistrano counseling center was given a $75,525 contract by Orange County supervisors Tuesday to operate a detoxification center and recovery homes for alcoholics.

A report to supervisors said the service would be provided by Community Counseling Center, 32141 Alipaz Road, and would serve clients referred by law enforcement and social service agencies.

The contract will be financed with $4,431 in county funds with the bulk of costs paid with state and federal grants.

Cox Defends UC's Admission Policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox told the U.S. Supreme Court today that a special admissions program at a University of California medical school is needed to help minorities because "the other alternatives suggested simply will not work."

In oral arguments in the case of Allan Paul Bakke, Cox defended the so-called affirmative action program used by the university's med school at Davis. He said the program aided minorities "long victimized by racial discrimination."

Bakke, who is white, successfully challenged the university's program before the California Supreme Court. He claimed it made him a victim of racial discrimination.

Bakke's "reverse discrimination" case is considered by many constitutional scholars to set the stage for the high court's most important statement on race relations since it outlawed segregation 23 years ago.

At stake in Bakke's case is the future of affirmative action programs, begun in the last 15 years to give special preference to minority members and women in education and business.

Bakke's attorney, Reynold Colvin of San Francisco, urged the justices to affirm the California Supreme Court decision.

Colvin argued that the Constitution's guarantee of "equal protection" for all citizens is violated when a school takes into account an applicant's race — making that factor a "crucial" one.

"The use of race as a basis for admission to a medical school, or for granting any other rights, is improper," he argued.

Race should be considered only as it provides a clue to the applicant's total evaluation, he said.

Considering race, Colvin said, "is permissible only to the extent it gives some clue to the admissions committee whether there was a prior history of economic or educational deprivation or persecution."

Pair Named To County Women's Unit

Bernice Munson of Laguna Hills and Pauline Rangel of Fountain Valley were appointed to three-year terms on the Orange County Commission on the Status of Women by county supervisors Tuesday.

Supervisors also reappointed La Habra resident Greta Hambsch to a three-year commission term.

Mrs. Munson, of 851 P Ronda Mendoza, replaces Huntington Beach resident Helen Barrios, whose term expired.

Board Chairman Thomas Riley said Mrs. Munson, an active senior citizen, should broaden the commission's representation.

Riley noted recent commission critics have questioned whether its members represent a cross-section of county women.

Mrs. Rangel, of 9044 Bitterroot Circle, Fountain Valley, now serves as commission chairwoman.

Deer Permits Now Available

Thirty-eight unclaimed permits for antlerless deer hunts in the Tenaja region of the Cleveland National Forest, and on Santa Catalina Island, will go on sale Thursday, at 8 a.m. at the Long Beach regional office of the Department of Fish and Game.

Permits will be offered on a first-come, first-served basis. There are eight left for the Tenaja hunt and thirty left for the Santa Catalina Island hunt; the latter includes an $80 fee.

For further information call Information Officer of the Department of Fish and Game, Ralph Young, at 590-5126.

Viejo Home Looted

A burglar who pried open the front door of a Mission Viejo home carried off coins and a camera with a total value of $454. Orange County sheriff's officers said the theft occurred at the home of David E. Pierce, 39, of 22302 Platino Drive, while he was away at work.

At Nixon Complex

Amtrak Wants Faster Speed

Amtrak officials say they'd like to step on it when they reach a five-mile stretch of railroad track near the 22-acre Nixon complex in San Clemente.

But a 40-mile-per hour limit for north and southbound Amtrak trains was imposed sometime during the Nixon presidential years for security reasons, says Arthur Lloyd, Western regional manager for the national rail system.

Lloyd said Amtrak would like to see that speed limit increased to 75 miles per hour from a curve in the tracks just north of San Clemente to just past the Nixon enclave.

"The Federal Railroad Administration and Amtrak itself have jurisdiction on speed limits on curves and the maximum speed that the track will allow," Lloyd said today.

"But where you have trackage that will allow more speed, local ordinances will restrict speed, for instance at grade crossings and for safety.

"And in the case of the Nixon thing, it was for security," Lloyd said.

But, he added, "We have shown that 40 miles per hour is not very practical north of town."

He said the maximum speed between San Diego and Santa Ana is 90 miles per hour, saying trains pick up that speed just past Del Mar and barrel along to San Clemente, with a few slowdowns on curves and crossings.

"Then they hit that 5.1 mile stretch that really slows them down," Lloyd said.

He said a 75-mile-per hour limit along the Nixon stretch, plus some other revised speeds, would save San Diego to Los Angeles travelers about 18 minutes.

Amtrak presented the increased speed plan proposal as part of a five-year plan issued in Washington. The plan also calls for increased service between the two cities and an increase from five daily roundtrips to seven.

The free immunizations will be available from 1 to 4 p.m. Oct. 18, 20, 25 and 27 at the Saddleback Hospital Medical Center, suite 24. The medical center is located at 23561 Paseo de Valencia in Laguna Hills.

U.S. Space Shuttle Successful

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE (AP) — In its most realistic test and fastest flight to date, the Space Shuttle Enterprise landed safely today after a diving descent simulating a return from space.

Flying for the first time without a streamlined tailcone used in the three previous flights to extend its gliding range, the shuttle dropped more steeply and swiftly, touching down only 2½ minutes after separating from the 747 jet that bore it aloft.

Minus the tailcone, the shuttle was about 30 feet shorter with a blunt, instead of pointed, rear end. This made the bulky space transport craft less buoyant and also caused the carrier to strain and shake while taking the Enterprise to launch altitude.

The added drag during the climb over the desert caused the separation to be delayed by minutes while the 747 struggled higher.

After casting free of the mother ship, the shuttle was guided by astronauts Joe Engle, 45, and Richard Truly, 39, through a few quick maneuvers before touching down on a dry lake bed at about 250 miles per hour, somewhat faster than previous landings.

Unlike the previous flights, today's glide, carried live on national television, was so short that the shuttle was unable to make a leisurely U-turn and many test maneuvers before landing.

Instead, it nosed down at a steep angle and made a nearly straight-in approach with little time for tests of guidance control systems.

Facts Needed in Building Debate

The Aliso Water Management Agency (AWMA) has unlimbered its heavy artillery in an effort to batter down state-imposed limits on home building in the Saddleback Valley.

Citing a consultant's study and survey of valley residents, AWMA officials told Orange County planning commissioners that as many as 68,000 new industrial jobs will be created in the county by 1985.

If the workers cannot find housing in Orange County, AWMA contends, they will have to commute from elsewhere, thus causing more air pollution.

The state Water Resources Control Board limited housing by clamping a lid on sewage treatment capacity in the valley. The board's contention was that more houses would breed more air pollution. The limit is for five years or until a comprehensive air quality management plan is drafted for the the county.

On paper, AWMA's argument that fewer local houses will mean more commuting to Orange County has points to consider. However, it is purely theoretical at this point and makes some very long presumptions.

Consultant reports have a curious way of supporting the arguments put forth by those who pay for them. AWMA has yet to provide planners with hard evidence that their contentions are correct.

As we have pointed out in the past, five years is not an unreasonable time to wait. The state water board may ultimately be proved wrong but the moratorium may at least provide the impetus needed to get air quality management programs going.

'Affordable' Housing

The Irvine Planning Commission and city planners have taken a creative approach to solving problems of providing affordable housing for city residents.

Instead of merely buckling down to the state-mandated task of attempting to provide housing for all income brackets, they've been busy redefining what is "affordable" housing.

It is an attempt to reduce the apparent need for lower cost housing. In a phrase, it is juggling the figures. Here's what they've done.

Lending institutions have traditionally -- and do today -- considered housing to be affordable if monthly rent or mortgage payments are no more than 25 percent of family income.

The Irvine planners say the figure should be raised to 30 or 40 percent, since city rent records show that many people already are paying that much as a trade-off for the amenities of living in the suburban community.

That fails to recognize that those people are paying rents beyond their means -- because there is nothing else available in Irvine.

And that's what low income housing studies are about: developing housing plans to meet existing needs, not sidestepping those needs.

Dictating Taste

The City of Irvine is struggling with a proposed city arts policy to raise the cultural level of the community by requiring developers to include sculptures, paintings and other works of art in public and private building projects.

The struggle isn't worth it, at least for private projects.

Under the proposed policy, 1 percent would be added to total project costs for public works, ½ of 1 percent for private developments.

A city committee would decide what sorts of art works should be included in any project, who should do the work, and where the art should be displayed.

It's hard to imagine any government body deciding for an entire community -- even a section of it -- what is required good taste, though it might not be totally out of line for a city commission to help select art for public buildings.

But the idea of requiring the inclusion of art works in private buildings -- and even attempting to dictate their selection -- would be outrageous, if it weren't just plain ridiculous.

Boyd / Trick Questions

By L.M. BOYD

"Trigger queries" are those questions which have been known to start family fights. Our Love and War man is collecting a list of same. From divorce records. They're not necessarily critical, insulting or degrading, not in themselves. It's what they lead to, however mysteriously. These are trigger queries: "Pancakes again?" "Isn't the game over yet?" "A melon ball cutter? How Much?" "Don't you want plain gingerale tonight?" And: "Do you think it's a little too small?"

Surveys prove a lot of tourists pick motels with swimming pools even though they have no intention of going swimming. They just believe the places with the pools will also be better equipped otherwise.

Q. "Has anybody ever really disproved Adolf Hitler's theory that selective breeding could produce a super human being?"

A. In a way, it was disproved. Long ago. But not with humans, because humans don't breed selectively. On the contrary. It was disproved with dogs, which have been selectively bred for centuries, still without ever turning out a super dog.

Rapid Reply: Figure 55 percent of your grownup weight is water. Lose less than a fifth of it, you survive. Lose more, you die. Generally, generally.

The 20,000 books about chess exceed in number the books about all other games put together, I'm told. One of these chess books cites studies to prove that a good memory is not the most significant faculty a top chess player can possess, not at all. Imagination is, according to this authority. The most remarkable chess performances, it's said, are not executed, the way a pianist renders a tune, but are created, the way a composer dreams up such.

Energy Chiefs Tilt to Nuclear

WASHINGTON — James Schlesinger's rise from political obscurity to political power has been smooth and subtle. He has the air more of a college professor than an energy czar. But behind the pipe smoke and contemplative manner, he has the heart of an industrial tycoon.

He has been an unabashed advocate of nuclear power, for example, ever since he came out of the Atomic Energy Commission in the early 1970s. The big utility companies desperately want to develop energy, of course, that will utilize their existing grid systems and permit them to go on selling electricity to the populace. A more revolutionary form of energy, such as solar power, might put the utility industry out of business.

There is disquieting evidence that Schlesinger may be quietly stacking the new Energy Dept. with subordinates who share his enthusiasm for nuclear power. Top policymaking positions will go, for example, to John O'Leary and Dale Myers, who are regarded as nuclear proponents.

Dr. James Liverman, a nuclear apologist, has been mentioned as Schlesinger's choice to be his new environmental chief. This possibility has so outraged environmentalists that a coalition has dashed off a private letter to Schlesinger, warning that they "would oppose" Liverman's nomination.

SCHLESINGER'S most controversial choice, however, may turn out to be Robert Thorne, who heads the San Francisco office of the Energy Research and Development Administration (ERDA). Schlesinger has Thorne in mind as his assistant secretary in charge of technology, an office that will control the Energy Dept.'s nuclear operations.

Thorne not only was in charge of nuclear affairs in San Francisco but allegedly funded an apparently "improper" lobbying effort to influence Congress to look kindly upon nuclear power.

He used $113,250 of the taxpayers' money to establish the Energy Awareness Project -- an idea advanced by a registered nuclear lobbying group known as the California Council for Environmental and Economic Balance (CCEEB).

There is a suspicion that the Energy Awareness Project was really supposed to make the public and Congress more aware of nuclear energy, although a CCEEB spokesman told us the project was intended to inform the public on all energy alternatives.

THE CCEEB stated in its original proposal, without mentioning nuclear power, that "we would want participants to write their congressmen to ask them to support specific legislation, pass resolutions, write letters to the editor."

Thorne's office adopted this idea to the tune of $113,250 over the objections of at least one subordinate who warned in an internal memo: "I believe such an effort to be both ill-conceived and misdirected." He added with emphasis: "The logic of the proposal not only escapes me; but, its outline would appear to be an excellent plan for one of the greatest political boondoggles of modern times."

The suspicions of Rep. James Jeffords, R.-Vt., have also been aroused. He has asked the General Accounting Office to investigate the project. The taxpayers' money was used, he charges, for what appears to be "improper purposes, including possibly the use of appropriated funds to lobby the Congress on legislative matters."

POT POLICY — The men around President Carter have been quarreling behind the scenes over what words to put in his mouth on the marijuana question.

One faction favored a more sympathetic attitude toward pot smoking. They managed to get their ideas into an early draft of the drug policy message that Carter asked his aides to write for him. This was approved by the president's health adviser Dr. Peter Bourne.

It included such sentences as "marijuana has become an established fact throughout our society and the sky has not fallen" and "research studies indicate it may have beneficial uses in the treatment of certain types of illness."

THE PROPOSED message also contained a suggestion that the states should repeal their criminal prohibitions, "thus bringing to a close an unhappy and misguided chapter in our history."

But these sentences were too strong for scholarly Stuart Eizenstat, the President's top domestic policy adviser. He dashed off a confidential memo to Carter, declaring: "I am very concerned about the marijuana section of this message."

Eizenstat protested that "the section on marijuana is written in an almost laudatory tone, which I believe is unfortunate." Some of the sentences, he objected, "almost seem to be a positive recommendation of the drug."

The president struck out the sentences that Eizenstat didn't like. Nevertheless, the final message endorsed decriminalization of small amounts of pot.

Perhaps Panama Should Reimburse U.S.

To the Editor:

Have read your editorial of Oct. 4 anent the Panama Canal with much interest. Yes, you noted some facts, but omitted some other facts.

You mentioned the fact that some of our Navy ships and some freighters are too large for the canal locks. These ships are only a very small percentage of our Navy fleet, also commercial fleet. We can always build larger locks (if we hang on to the canal, that is).

Another fact: Under the proposed treaty, we must refrain from planning another canal anywhere through the Isthmus except with Panama's consent.

IF THE Canal Zone is such a thorn in her side, why doesn't Panama offer to reimburse us for our investments? That would be the decent, businesslike thing to do. Why not give the U.S. taxpayer a break for once?

It looks very much as if this treaty gives Panama all the goodies on a silver platter while the U.S. gets nothing but obligations.

I'm afraid that the world would judge Uncle Sam as a paper tiger who caves in to blackmail and is afraid to stick up for his rights.

Not So Cheap

To the Editor:

Zenith TV manufacturers are moving part of their operation overseas where they can get assembly workers for $2,000 a year. Now we can buy Zenith TVs cheaper, but we will have to pay more taxes for unemployment insurance to the unemployed workers and there will be fewer taxpayers.

Multiply this by thousands of other companies from steel to automobiles and you will have a small idea of the problem. What does this do to balance of trade?

Let's' face up to it. Those bargains we are getting from overseas aren't so cheap. They are breaking us.

The Real Heroes

To the Editor:

The cartoon published on the Comment page of Oct. 1 concerning the Kent State situation was silly.

I had occasion recently to visit the memorial above the sunken battleship Arizona where over 1,100 U.S. sailors have been entombed since December, 1941. I wish everyone connected with the Kent State happening could make that same pilgrimage.

I sailed and fought with many survivors of Pearl Harbor. One of the men from the torpedoed cruiser Helena was with me during that recent visit. We both agreed that, if the country was threatened again, we would fight again to defend it and its freedoms.

MANY OF US were rebelling against the status quo before WWII. The difference was that we were smart enough to realize that desired changes could be made because of our system of government, not in spite of it. We were smart enough only because we were patient enough to wait until we had enough knowledge to assess the facts and arrive at a logical plan of action. Alexander Pope was so right when he said: "A little knowledge is a dangerous thing. . ." The word "little" needs underlining.

And Kent State? The whole thing was so useless, so utterly stupid. There were no heroes there, nothing to be proud of, no memories that stir the marrow of man such as the marrow is stirred standing over the rusting hulk of the Arizona. May they not have died uselessly.

Religious Confusion

To the Editor:

Your article entitled "Self Help Class Set for San Juan" (Daily Pilot, Oct. 3) confuses two distinctly different religious denominations, and would leave your readers quite puzzled unless corrected.

PERHAPS Ms. Carman has already mentioned this to you, but Christian Science, discovered by Mary Baker Eddy in 1866, is the religion represented by some 3000 branches of the Church of Christ, Scientist, throughout the world. It has no connection with the Self-Help Foundation in San Diego. Neither does it sponsor the singles group or leadership training course that your article implies.

I am sure Ms. Carman, as well as all of the Christian Science churches in Orange County, will appreciate your publication of this clarification.

I must compliment you and your staff for consistently turning out such a fine publication. Being an avid reader of newspapers from all over the nation, I realize how fortunate the citizens of the South Coast area are to have such an informative and well-rounded quality local newspaper. The wide variety of topic matter, international, national and local, is most satisfying and your entertainment section is superb.

I'm sure I speak for many thousands who also anxiously look forward every day to the stimulating and enjoyable experience of the Daily Pilot when I say, "Thank You" and keep up the good work.

Phone Invasion

To the Editor:

Junk mail is a nuisance, but a junk phone call is a deplorable invasion of my privacy! I have been interrupted from naps, baths, preparing or eating dinner and intimate conversations with my husband to turn down pitches for air conditioning, swimming pools, life insurance, charity balls, selling my home and a Sunday paper I already subscribe to.

ALL THIS is very irritating, but I am just recently experiencing the ultimate in disturbing phone calls. After recently suffering a miscarriage, I am painfully reminded of my baby's approaching due date by phone calls offering diaper services!

Surely there are others in our community equally bothered by these exasperating interruptions into our private lives. Isn't there anything we can do about it?

SUSAN TURNER

Badham Right

To the Editor:

I must take exception to your editorial of Oct. 6, entitled "A Foolish Mistake," concerning a resolution in Congress calling for Andrew Young's impeachment.

I sincerely believe the "foolish mistake" was made by President Carter when he did not demand the resignation of Young the first time he openly insulted a nation friendly to our country.

He, (Young) so obviously predisposed with Communist countries and causes has made justifiable the reasons that 10 Congressmen have called for his ouster. (You can't for one moment believe that Young has been muzzled permanently!)

I say "three cheers" for Representative Badham for his forthright stand and, "alas," we don't have more of his ilk, strong enough to speak out and be counted as true and caring Americans!

MARY O. MOORE

Other Problems

To the Editor:

In this era of continuing national crises: energy, world peace, nuclear proliferation, pollution, unemployment, racial prejudice, violence, urban decay etc. etc., it is indeed heartening to learn that my Congressman, Bob Badham, is hard at work back in Washington backing resolutions to impeach our U.N. Ambassador, Andrew Young.

Good going, Bob! Keep your eye on the old ball and perhaps the other 434 Congressmen will have time to get around to the problems that really count?

Top Companies

by MILTON MOSKOWITZ

Of the top 100 industrial companies in 1917, only 35 remain in that class.

That's what Forbes magazine discovered when it dug up data for its 60th anniversary issue, published last month. The moral Forbes drew from this high rate of attrition was that the big guys don't always win.

"Corporate heft is no guarantee of survival," said the magazine.

THAT MAY BE SO. But a close examination of the 1917 roster reveals that while there were some companies that couldn't back it and dropped out — Central Leather, United Verde Extension Mining, American Locomotive, for examples — a much larger number disappeared because they were acquired or merged or otherwise captured by another giant.

Armour & Company was our fourth largest industrial company in 1917. And six years later it acquired another company on that list, Morris & Company, which ranked 65th. Today, Armour is part of Greyhound (oh, how the mighty have fallen).

Swift & Company, another meat packer, was No. 5 on the 1917 list. Now it's part of a mixed bag called Esmark.

Both Greyhound and Esmark are among the 50 leading industrials today.

No. 3 on the 1917 list was Bethlehem Steel. Our second largest steel maker, Bethlehem is still around, ranking 33rd, right behind Esmark. But three other steel makers on the 1917 list — Midvale Steel, Cambria Steel and Lackawanna Steel — are gone. What happened to them? Bethlehem scooped them up in 1922 and 1923.

A COMPANY CALLED CHILE COPPER, which did just what its name implies, ranked 29th in 1917. Another mining company on the 1917 list was Greene Cananea Copper — it ranked 89th. They were both enveloped in 1929 by Anaconda Copper, which ranked 13th, and Anaconda now belongs to Atlantic Richfield, which is the survivor of at least four companies on the 1917 list: Atlantic Refining, Sinclair Oil, Prairie Oil and Sinclair Gulf.

In other words, seven of the leading companies of 1917 are now combined into one, which ranks 15th.

Standard Oil of New York was No. 14 in 1917 and Vacuum Oil was No. 75. They joined forces in 1931 to form Socony Vacuum Oil, which later became Socony Mobil, which later became Mobil, which now also owns Montgomery Ward and Container Corp. of America. Two other companies on the 1917 list — Magnolia Petroleum, No. 37, and Virginia Carolina Chemicals, No. 46 — are today also part of Mobil.

MEXICAN PETROLEUM RANKED 64TH on the 1917 list. In 1919, it was acquired by Pan American Petroleum and Transport, which had ranked 99th. And in 1954 Pan American was absorbed by Standard Oil of Indiana, which was No. 36 in 1917 (today it's No. 12).

The moral might be that in a swamp filled with alligators, the ones with the biggest jaws survive.

Source of Energy Not Chick Feed

An agriculture Department spokesman says waste from the 160,000 chickens contains enough methane gas to provide power to 200 average homes.

THE $100,000 EXPERIMENTAL operation "is to farming what the Wright brothers' airplane was to flying — a beginning," said one of the developers.

Engraved invitations were sent out, and there were state and USDA officials present for the unveiling of the hen-power setup at the Heying Enterprises Farm. Former Iowa Sen. Hilarius Heying and his family put up half the money for the experiment.

"This is a first," noted Carl Larson, representing the USDA Department of Rural Development. "We in government are interested because we want to see farmers use such farm wastes for the betterment of our country."

ROD RIGGS, DIRECTOR OF THE Iowa State Energy Policy Council, pushed the button that sent electricity from the methane-fired generator into the laying house complex.

He said he hoped the production of methane gas from Iowa's chicken manure could offset the nation's dependence on foreign oil.
