Station Wagon Plunged Over Ravine, Killed Father

Car Hits Ravine; 3 Hurt

Two Huntington Beach men died Sunday after their station wagon plunged over a 40-foot cliff into an Irvine ravine. Both were crushed. Three other passengers—two Irvine men and the 10-year-old son of one of the killed men—were hospitalized with serious injuries.

Police said driver Mark Alan Karneke, 23, of 16722 Blanton St., was dead at the scene. The front-seat passenger, Donald A. Rick, 43, of 8021 Sail Circle, was pronounced dead at 7:22 p.m. at Costa Mesa Memorial Hospital, about an hour after the accident.

Police identified the injured passengers, all of whom were riding in the back seat when the car struck head-first on the bottom of the ravine, as:

—Dean Richard Rick, 10, son of Donald Rick.
—Dennis Wayne De Mars, 21, of 21 Songsparrow.
—Mike Shelton, 19, of 4262 Sandburg Way.

All sustained head and face cuts, and possible internal injuries; they were taken to Saddleback Community Hospital. Dean Rick was transferred to Huntington Intercommunity Hospital. All were reported in stable condition.

Police said De Mars ran from the open field of the crash, near Turtle Rock and Starcrest drives, about three-quarters of a mile to a residence to telephone for help.

Police said the men had been (See PLUNGE, Page A2)

Call Tragic Fire Victim His Brother

SEATTLE (AP) — Firefighter Ed Shaw saw the dead man in the bedroom and realized he was beyond help. He went on to fight the blaze. Later, Shaw learned the victim was his brother, Robert, 39. "And just then I ran out of air for the mask and I had to go out," Shaw said. He said he didn't know the fire was at his sister's house until he arrived. "When I realized it was her house, I worried about my sister's children, Julie and her sister, Laurie," Shaw said. The girls were away. When Shaw searched the house, he found the victim, whom he did not recognize. "I went right to my brother, but I didn't know him. I thought maybe it was my niece's boyfriend," he said.

2-hour Standoff

HB Gunman, 52, Gives Up to SWAT

A Huntington Beach man who police allege shot at a neighbor Sunday night, then barricaded himself in his home with an arsenal of weapons and ammunition for more than two hours, remained jailed today.

Nick Urban, 59, of 15591 Toway Lane, held the police's SWAT team and a force of regular uniformed officers at bay but no shots were exchanged during the tense standoff.

He was arrested and booked on suspicion of assault with a deadly weapon in connection with the earlier shooting incident which reportedly climaxed 30 minutes of talk with the victim, Justin Scott Cate. Bail was set at $10,000.

Police said they were informed that Urban had been depressed over his son's own personal difficulties and had been drinking before the episode.

Investigators said they were hampered severely at times by neighbors who refused to realize the seriousness of the situation after being ordered to evacuate their homes.

Desk officers using criss-cross telephone directories contacted residents all along the block ordering them to leave the area but some refused to believe any danger existed.

One family refused to believe it was really a police officer calling.

Carrier Returns

SAN DIEGO (P) — The aircraft carrier Kitty Hawk returned today after 6½ months in the western Pacific. Her pilots flew back Sunday. A total of 6,000 officers and men were aboard the ship.

Others complied with orders to get out of immediate range of the Urban home, where police said the barricaded suspect kept several guns including a 30.06 rifle with a telescopic sight.

Police established a command post in a nearby home and made repeated attempts to contact Urban but he apparently refused to answer the telephone.

3 El Capitan Climbers Die; Probe Due

YOSEMITE NATIONAL PARK (AP) — Three Minnesota men fell 1,400 feet to their deaths while trying to climb El Capitan in Yosemite National Park, Park Superintendent Leslie Arnerberger said.

The three killed Sunday were identified by Arnerberger as John Paul Garton, 24, and John Edward Nygard, 22, both of Bloomington, and Jeffrey Joseph Graves, 22, of Fridley.

They had begun a registered climb of the rock Saturday, he said.

The three were roped together and when one man fell, the other two were pulled out of their securing devices and also fell, Arnerberger said.

He said the cause of the accident is under investigation. The men were experienced climbers. Arnerberger also said there was a witness to the accident.

Clearing Skys Due In North

By The Associated Press
Rains that began falling through Northern California on Sunday afternoon were expected to end by tonight as skies start to clear, the National Weather Service said.

An offshore cold front kept coastal areas at least partly cloudy Sunday. Rain spread over the northwest corner of the state and the Siskiyou on Sunday afternoon, reaching as far south as San Francisco by nightfall.

Wind gusts up to 55 mph were recorded at South Lake Tahoe Airport and gusts up to 30 mph were reported over the Northern Sacramento Valley. The Sierra was expected to remain windy through today.

Occasional showers today should end by tonight, although Tuesday's skies may still be partly cloudy, the Weather Service said.

Sunday's high temperatures around Northern California were: San Francisco 66; Oakland 71; San Jose 78.

Brown on Coast, Attacks Prop. 13

By JACKIE HYMAN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff
Governor Edmund Brown Jr. renewed his attack on Proposition 13 today in a speech to the California Peace Officers Association convention in Newport Beach.

Brown, speaking at the Newporter Inn, referred to the controversial Jarvis-Gann property tax cut bill as causing "a serious economic dislocation. UCLA predicted an unemployment rate of 10.1 percent if it passes."

He said that in addition to cutting off $7 billion in property taxes, Prop. 13 would return to the federal government at least $2.7 billion the state now receives in revenue sharing.

The governor expressed his support for Proposition 8 which, coupled with the Behr Bill, is the Legislature's alternative tax relief proposal.

"The Behr bill is a cut, squeeze and trim bill," Brown said. "Our legislative analyst says that he doesn't think Ronald Reagan would have dared to propose this bill."

Brown expressed several criticisms of Prop. 13 saying it would cause uncertainty, cutbacks in vital services and eventually an unfair distribution of the property tax burden.

Citing a provision that raises taxes when property is sold under Prop. 13 Brown said "in five years more than half the people would be paying more under Prop. 13 than under Prop. 8."

Lawmen Get 4 More Nudes In S. Laguna

Four more people were arrested Sunday on charges of sunbathing in the buff in South Laguna.

Arrested Sunday at 1 p.m. at Ninth Street Beach were Clark Baleh, 20, of Fullerton, Eric Spangletz, 27, of Pasadena, Evelyn Berger, 35, of Los Angeles and a 17-year-old Los Angeles girl who was released later to her parents.

A spokesman at the sheriff's South County substation said 15 people have been cited for nude sunbathing on South Laguna beaches during the past month.

Judge John Griffin, of the South County Municipal Court, has been handing out $50 fines and two-year probation sentences to people found guilty, a sheriff's spokesman said.

Hughes Speculations Emerge as Truth

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — On April 5, 1976, a frail, emaciated man was carried aboard a chartered jet at Acapulco, Mexico, for what was to become the last of his countless flights, a desperate journey to a hospital at Houston, Texas.

The man died on that flight, setting off a complex series of legal entanglements that may not be resolved for years — but which have given the public a glimpse at the sometimes bizarre and always private life of one of the world's most secretive men.

TWO YEARS AFTER THE death of Howard Robard Hughes — and as final arguments begin Tuesday in a trial to determine the validity of an alleged Hughes will — it is clear that much of the speculation about the multimillionaire recluse may indeed have been correct.

The few who saw Hughes in his last years say he did wander about half-naked, he was scared of death of germs and, yes, he did have shoulder-length hair and long fingernails.

Speculation about Hughes was fanned by his years in the public eye, as playboy pilot, escort to Hollywood starlets, aircraft designer and builder of a corporate empire. All that was before the mid-1950s, when Hughes became a virtual hermit.

FOR THE TWO DECADES UNTIL his death at 70, Hughes occupied the top floors or penthouses of resort hotels — in Las Vegas, Acapulco, Nassau, London, Vancouver, and Managua, Nicaragua. The few who gained access to him had to pass through elaborate security systems.

A half-dozen Hughes aides testified during the six-month trial aimed at determining if he actually wrote the so-called Mormon Will. Final arguments in the case, which pits several Hughes relatives against a former associate, Noah Dietrich, are expected to last all week. An estate conservatively valued at about $168 million is at stake.

Of the aides who testified, John Holmes, said to be one of the closest to Hughes, gave perhaps the most revealing testimony.

NO MATTER WHAT CITY, Hughes' hotel rooms were similar and his days in them followed a dreary routine. Hughes took to his bed around the mid-1960s, Holmes said, and never again walked a city street.

"I do remember that he stayed pretty much in bed," Holmes said of Hughes' life in Bel Air in the early 1960s. "To my knowledge, I can't remember once that I saw him dressed in street clothes."

"When he was not in bed, where did he spend his time," Holmes was asked by an attorney.

"The bathroom," Holmes replied. "It was either the bed or the bathroom."

At another point, Holmes reluctantly admitted that Hughes frequently walked around nude.

"Occasionally, we would see him in that state of dress or undress," he said.

Another aide, LeVar Myler, testified that frequently Hughes wore only pajama tops, if anything.

Myler said Hughes had a beard that went to the center of his chest, shoulder-length hair and inch-long fingernails.

At another point, Holmes testified that two days before Hughes' death he saw the industrialist inject himself with a drug that was probably codeine. Since that testimony, Holmes and one of Hughes' physicians have been indicted by a federal grand jury on charges they illegally supplied Hughes with codeine for nearly 20 years.

HUGHES NEVER SAW HIS WIFE, actress Jean Peters, or any other woman the last 10 years of his life, Holmes testified.

He said bottles of Hughes' urine sometimes were kept in the millionaire's penthouse.

Another former Hughes employee, Ron Kistler, said in a deposition that Hughes' rumored aversion to germs was true. He said Hughes shunned contact with people and handled everything with tissue paper.

"Mr. Hughes touched very few doorknobs in my memory," he said.

While Hughes was living in California Kistler said, his aides were forbidden to go to Nevada because Hughes feared it was "hot" from nuclear testing.

KISTLER, WHO WROTE A BOOK about his experiences titled "I Caught Flies For Howard Hughes," said that Hughes once spent four hours cleaning a telephone receiver with tissues. At another time, he said in his deposition, Hughes spent 26 hours in a bathroom.

While living at the Beverly Hills Hotel, Kistler said, Hughes "worked as hard as possible to keep the bungalow germ free." Yet, he said it was never cleaned in the 18 months Hughes lived there.

Dietrich, who served Hughes for 32 years until he had a falling-out with the industrialist in 1957, testified that Hughes enjoyed political clout and used his money in an attempt to buy power.

He said profits from a Canadian subsidiary of Hughes were channeled back into the United States for political contributions and among those who received part of an estimated $400,000 a year were former presidents Nixon and Johnson.

OTHER TESTIMONY HAS DISCLOSED that Hughes also lobbied intensely to have nuclear testing halted in Nevada.

Despite the stories of Hughes' eccentric lifestyle, he apparently remained in firm control of his empire.

Nevada Gov. Mike O'Callaghan, who visited Hughes in London in 1973 to check rumors he had lost control of his empire, said then that there was "no doubt in that meeting of who was telling who what to do."

O'Callaghan, who still refuses to discuss Hughes' appearance, would say only that Hughes' "eyes were bright that night, he gave me a firm handshake and he seemed to be in firm control of the situation."

Privacy Case

Court Upholds Sexual Law

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Supreme Court let stand today North Carolina's sodomy law by refusing to hear arguments that the law violates the constitutional rights of homosexuals.

The court, which has not granted full review to a case involving the rights of homosexuals in more than a decade, let stand the conviction of a Jacksonville, N.C., man for an

"abominable and detestable crime against nature."

Today's action is a significant setback for civil liberties forces which urged the justices to use the case to reach a major decision on the rights of sexual privacy.

"This case involves the question whether the government may constitutionally prohibit private consensual homosexual activity between adults," the court was told by lawyers for Eugene Enslin.

Enslin, owner of a combination massage parlor-adult bookstore in Jacksonville, was convicted in 1974 of a sex act with a young Marine from nearby Camp Lejeune. He was sentenced to one year in prison.

Enslin was freed after serving nine months of his sentence, one of his New York lawyers reported.

The North Carolina law used to prosecute Enslin states: "If any person shall commit the crime against nature, with mankind or beast, he shall be guilty of a felony and shall be fined or imprisoned in the discretion of the court."

A similar sodomy law in Virginia was upheld by the Supreme Court in 1976, and although the justices' action was taken without comment it was widely interpreted as the definitive word on the constitutionality of such state laws.

But in a decision last year that struck down a New York law banning the sale of contraceptives to minors, the court noted that it had "not definitely answered the difficult question whether and to what extent the Constitution prohibits state statutes regulating private consensual sexual behavior among adults."

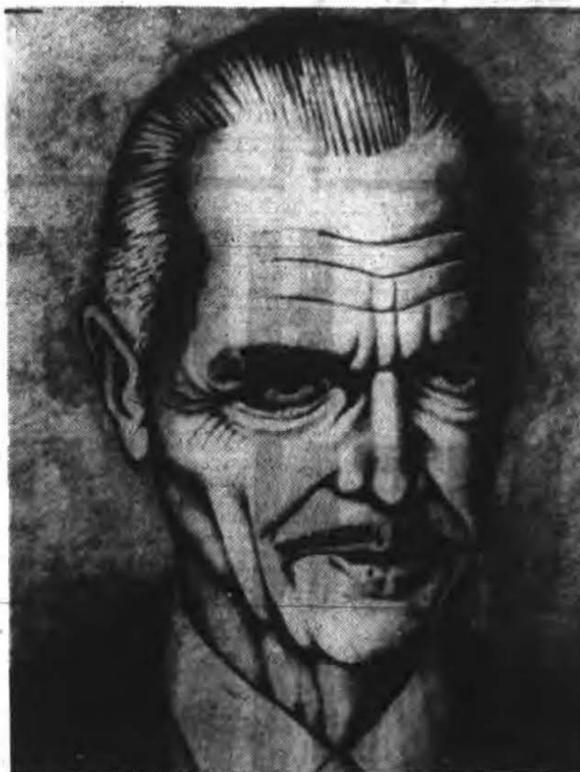

Enslin's attorneys seized upon that wording and the fact that the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals relied on the 1976 Virginia ruling in dismissing Enslin's appeal — to urge the justices to further clarify the legal rights of homosexuals.

The upholding of Virginia's sodomy law came on a 6-3 vote by the court, with Justices William J. Brennan Jr., Thurgood Marshall and John Paul Stevens voting to fully review the issue.

Four such votes are needed to grant review.

The nation's highest court has not considered "gay rights" since the justices in 1967 ruled that aliens found to be homosexuals could be deported as persons "afflicted with a psychopathic personality."

The American Psychiatric Association has since criticized the court's finding, voting in 1974 to eliminate homosexuality as a mental disorder and reclassify it as a "sexual orientation disturbance."

Appeals Lost

Patty to Resume Prison Sentence

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Convicted bank robber Patricia Hearst, who lost appeals to the nation's highest court, is returning to prison today to serve the remainder of a seven-year sentence, according to U.S. Attorney G. William Hunter. Hunter said the newspaper heiress would go to the Federal Correctional Institute at Pleasanton, 30 miles east of San Francisco, under terms of an agreement between U.S. District Court Judge William H. Orrick Jr. and her attorneys.

She has been free on $1 million bail while her attorneys exhausted legal appeals of her 1976 conviction of joining her terrorists kidnappers, the Symbionese Liberation Army, in an armed San Francisco bank robbery.

Dennis Harvey, executive assistant to the Pleasanton Warden, said this morning the prison had not been notified of Miss Hearst's arrival, the standard procedure with most surrenders.

Miss Hearst, 24, has served 14 months of the sentence, part of it at the campus-like minimum security Pleasanton facility. She would need to serve another 14 months before becoming eligible for parole.

Miss Hearst lost her last chance to remain free when the U.S. Supreme Court refused March 24 to review her 1975 conviction for an April 15, 1974 bank robbery.

Since her release on bail, Miss Hearst has been living with her parents in a San Francisco apartment and recently in a home in suburban Hillsborough. On her rare public appearances, she has been accompanied by bodyguards, as specified in the court order setting conditions for her bail.

Her new attorney, George Martinez, was unavailable for comment.

Boston lawyer Al Johnson, who has been a friend of Miss Hearst, officially withdrew from the case three weeks ago but was in San Francisco today, according to his Boston office.

Miss Hearst spent Mothers Day and her final hours as a free woman today closeted with her entire family at their Hillsborough home. The Times in San Mateo reported.

She was described by a family source as "extremely depressed" about the prospect of returning to prison, according to The Times.

The paper said the 24-year-old heiress spent the past week at the family estate at San Simeon quietly preparing for her return to custody.

Companions at the famous estate, built by her grandfather, William Randolph Hearst, included two sisters, Anne and Vicki. She reportedly expressed concern that all but 15 days of her previous time in jail was spent in solitary confinement.

Collectors' Bid Refused

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Supreme Court let stand today a Texas law making it a crime for debt collectors to repeatedly use telephone calls to spur consumers to pay debts.

The justices refused to review the appeal of a Houston collection agency and one of its employees convicted of criminal harassment in pressing for payment in a $32.73 bill.

Collection Consultants Inc. and employee Stella Thornton were convicted after a jury trial in 1975. The collection agency was fined $1,000. Ms. Thornton was fined $150 and given a probationary jail sentence.

Ted Kennedy At Ole Miss

OXFORD, Miss. (AP) — Several dozen blacks were among the graduates and the commencement speaker talked of "painful accommodation to the imperative of racial justice." But the most obvious sign of change at Ole Miss was the speaker himself — a Kennedy.

Sen. Edward Kennedy quoted from author William Faulkner, telling graduates at the University of Mississippi on Sunday. "Never be afraid to raise your voice for honesty and truth and compassion, against injustice and lying and greed."

He did not mention the fall of 1962, when his brothers President John Kennedy and Attorney General Robert Kennedy ordered federal marshals and more than 20,000 troops to enforce the desegregation of Ole Miss, ensuring that James Meredith be registered as the school's first black student.

Court Denies Canal Appeal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Supreme Court today rejected the fourth attempt — and most likely last — by 60 House members to scuttle the Panama Canal Treaties.

The justices turned down an appeal by the congressmen contending that the Senate's ratification of the treaties April 18 was unconstitutional.

The treaties give Panama permanent control of the canal in the year 2000.

Patrol Lt. John Foster said SWAT Team Officer Patrick Gildea finally made contact with Urban and was largely responsible for coaxing the suspect to surrender.

Investigators said among other weapons in the house were a .357 Magnum revolver, a .45 caliber automatic pistol, a .44 Magnum pistol, a shotgun, two Winchester 30-30 rifles and the 30.06 rifle.

Calls of Love Earn Jail Term

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Cheryl Davis is serving five days in jail, close to the ones she loves. The 27-year-old has been jailed for making harassing telephone calls to the Tampa Police Department — she called officers repeatedly to say, "I love you."

She was convicted after officers said she called them 19 times during an eight-hour period.

"We tried not to be rude to her," said Lt. J.C. Perkins. "But her frequent calls tied up our lines, and while she was saying, 'I love you' someone could have been trying to get in touch with us because of an emergency."

Brown Flays Fluor's Letter on Jets

By PHILIP ROSMARIN

Charges by Governor Brown that the Irvine-based Fluor Corp. is meddling in international affairs with its support of the Middle East arms pact proposal brought a response today from J. Robert Fluor, chairman, chief executive and president of the company.

company employees, shareholders and vendors urging them to write Congress expressing support for the sale of jet warplanes to Saudi Arabia, Egypt and Israel.

On Sunday, Brown told an audience of 10,000 Jews in San Francisco celebrating the 30th anniversary of Israeli independence, that the Fluor letter was improper.

"It sets a very dangerous precedent," Brown said, "when a California corporation, for its own profit, begins to meddle in the Middle East in a way that could be quite adverse to the interests of this country."

Brown charged that because the letter was sent as a tax-deductible expense, "The people of California are subsidizing Fluor's adventure into foreign policy."

Brown urged Fluor to cancel its mailing campaign, which he said is applying "corporate pressure in an area better left to the president and Congress."

Fluor responded today, "As an American citizen, I am quite certain that I have as much right as Governor Brown to speak on the Middle East arms pact.

"I wrote a letter...with reasons why I thought (Fluor employees and associates) should urge their congressmen to support the sale of F-15s to Saudi Arabia.

"Our legislators are being comprehensively exposed to the opposite point of view.

"Does Governor Brown honestly believe our lawmakers should hear only one side of an issue that so crucially affects the future energy supply of not only the United States, but the free world as well?"

Fluor called the letter "a legitimate corporate expense."

The Fluor Corp., one of the world's largest construction engineering firms, is involved in a $5 billion-plus natural gas conservation project in Saudi (See JETS, Page A2)

Freeway Decision Awaited

Costa Mesa citizens and city officials awaited word from the state today about the future of the Costa Mesa Freeway.

State Transportation Chief Adriana Gianturco has promised a final decision today on the city's request for completion of Route 55 into the downtown area.

Among the nine options in a CalTrans report is "no project" and a 20-foot high viaduct slicing through the downtown area over the existing Newport Boulevard.

These two alternatives have drawn city protests as opposed to the most-favored alternative, the so-called "full freeway" route first envisioned in 1944.

This proposal would lead the freeway on a westerly loop from Bay Street through the downtown redevelopment area. It would reconnect with Newport Boulevard near 15th Street.

The expected decision from the state would deal specifically with the allotment of funds for an Environmental Impact Report on the freeway.

With state approval, the EIR process would take nearly two years before actual construction would begin on one of the nine alternatives.

Failure to receive funding for the EIR would mean another setback in the city's long fight to complete the freeway which presently ends at Mesa Drive.

The traffic accident rate on Route 55 is four times above the state average, according to a CalTrans report.

2 HB Men Killed In Irvine Collision

Two Huntington Beach men died Sunday after their station wagon plunged over a 40-foot cliff into an Irvine ravine.

Both were crushed. Three other passengers—two Irvine men and the 10-year-old son of one of the killed men—were hospitalized with serious injuries.

Police said driver Mark Alan Karneke, 23, of 16722 Blanton St., was dead at the scene. The front-seat passenger, Donald A. Rick, 43, of 8021 Sail Circle, was pronounced dead at 7:22 p.m. at Costa Mesa Memorial Hospital, about an hour after the accident.

Police identified the injured passengers, all of whom were riding in the back seat when the car struck head-first on the bottom of the ravine, as:

—Dean Richard Rick, 10, son of Donald Rick.

—Dennis Wayne De Mars, 21, of 21 Songsparrow.

—Mike Shelton, 19, of 4262 Sandburg Way.

All sustained head and face cuts, and possible internal injuries; they were taken to Saddleback Community Hospital. Dean Rick was transferred to Huntington Intercommunity Hospital. All were reported in stable condition.

Police said De Mars ran from the open field of the crash, near Turtle Rock and Starcrest drives, about three-quarters of a mile to a residence to telephone for help.

Police said the men had been working on the car during the day, and, according to some of the passengers' statements, were test-driving the car through an open field on Irvine (See PLUNGE, Page A2)

Governor in Newport

Brown Continues Prop. 13 Attack

By JACKIE HYMAN

Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. renewed his attack on Proposition 13 today in a speech to the California Peace Officers Association convention in Newport Beach.

Brown, speaking at the Newporter Inn, referred to the controversial Jarvis-Gann property tax cut bill as causing "a serious economic dislocation. UCLA predicted an unemployment rate of 10.1 percent if it passes."

He said that in addition to cutting off $7 billion in property taxes, Prop. 13 would return to the federal government at least $2.7 billion the state now receives in revenue sharing.

Brown expressed several criticisms of Prop. 13 saying it would cause uncertainty, cutbacks in vital services and eventually an unfair distribution of the property tax burden.

Citing a provision that raises taxes when property is sold under Prop. 13 Brown said "in five years more than half the people would be paying more under Prop. 13 than under Prop. 8."

Brown Veto Assailed By Younger

A governor should place "an absolute priority" on strengthening law enforcement, California Attorney General Evelle J. Younger said today in Newport Beach.

Younger, who is seeking the Republican nomination for governor, told the California Peace Officers Association at the Newporter Inn that law enforcement deserves a higher priority to the governor than it has had.

Younger did not identify Gov. Edmund Brown Jr., who had finished speaking to the same group only a few minutes before, but his remarks were clearly intended as a criticism of the governor.

"Law enforcement should never again have to undertake the almost impossible task of overriding a governor's veto on a major public law such as the death penalty," Younger said.

Among the steps Younger said a governor should take are to extradite fugitive felons, back passage of laws authorizing electronic eavesdropping and witness immunity, and try to shorten the "seemingly endless rounds of pretrial motions and delays" in criminal cases.

Younger won a round of applause when he said "a governor should appoint (to judgeships and other legal boards) only people who believe that punishment is a legitimate means of controlling human behavior."

Developers spent more than $30,000 in their unsuccessful bid to stop Costa Mesa voters from rezoning their land for single-family homes in the city's March 7 municipal election, according to financial disclosure documents now on file at city hall.

And new City Councilwoman Arlene Schafer was the biggest spender among 10 council candidates who ran for two seats in the election.

Documents show that Mrs. Schafer spent $6,167 on her campaign as compared to $2,231 spent by the top vote getter, Norma Hertzog.

But it was the Active Taxpayers Association that emerged as the biggest campaign spender, putting more money on the line than all 10 council candidates combined.

Vote Set Tonight

Carter Confident Of Jet Sale Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, after talking with several senators, is predicting that the Senate tonight will refuse to block his plan to sell sophisticated U.S. warplanes to Israel and two Arab neighbors. The Senate vote is to come after 10 hours of debate that includes a two-hour closed-door meeting of the Senate to discuss classified aspects of the pending sale.

Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., who asked for the closed session, said he wants the lawmakers to discuss the security implications for "the entire Middle East" of the presence in the area of Soviet-backed Cuban troops.

Even if the Senate should vote to kill the sale of planes to Israel, Egypt and Saudi Arabia, the proposal would survive if the House refuses to block the sale, too.

Such proposals are automatically approved unless both the Senate and the House vote to reject the sales.

On the eve of the Senate showdown vote, Carter lobbied his $4.8 billion plane sale proposal with several senators.

Carter also telephoned several senators today. White House press secretary Jody Powell said the calls were made to members of both parties and that Carter stressed to them the "importance he attaches to this vote."

That brought to "a dozen or more" the number of senators Carter has called in recent days, Powell said.

Carter wants to sell 60 F-15s to Saudi Arabia, 50 less advanced F-5Es to Egypt and 15 F-15s and 75 F-16s to Israel.

Trash Strike 'Over;' Work Begins Again

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A strike by Orange County trash collectors that affected more than a million people in 14 cities "is, for all practical purposes, over," a Teamsters Union spokesman said today.

It was reported last week that the walkout, which began April 17, was collapsing as many strikers crossed their own union's picket lines to return to work rather than have their jobs filled by permanent replacements.

"Reports from stewards are that the majority went back to work," said Carl Lindeman, a spokesman for Teamsters Local 396, which is headquartered in Los Angeles. Our job is to represent the majority of the people, so if the majority wants to go back that's exactly what we'll do."

He added: "The strike is, for all practical purposes, over."

Building Resumes At Onofre Plant

Construction was to resume today on the $2.4 billion San Onofre nuclear plant south of San Clemente, after a restraining order issued late Friday banned striking Southern California Edison Company employees from picketing five plant gates.

Elsewhere on the Orange Coast, the strike includes the Edison Company plant in Huntington Beach, where pickets were posted again today.

The San Onofre restraining order was issued in San Diego by U.S. District Judge Leland Nielsen. It will be in effect until May 30, when Nielsen has scheduled a hearing on the matter.

While supervisory personnel have worked 12-hour shifts to keep the power plant running despite the strike by 125 utility workers, strikers picketing gates to the adjacent construction project had halted progress on two more generators.

Striking workers, who belong to Utility Workers Union Local 246, include maintenance, operating, clerical and technical employees at the nuclear plant.

The restraining order limits pickets to those gates used by Edison Company employees and bans them from the five gates used only by construction employees of Bechtel Power Company, which is building two nuclear generators scheduled for completion in 1981.

The strike began last week, after negotiations broke down over proposed changes in work schedules. No resumption of negotiations has been scheduled, David Barron of the Edison Company said today.

Ted Kennedy At Ole Miss Graduation

OXFORD, Miss. (AP) — Several dozen blacks were among the graduates and the commencement speaker talked of "painful accommodation to the imperative of racial justice."

But the most obvious sign of change at Ole Miss was the speaker himself — a Kennedy. Sen. Edward Kennedy quoted from author William Faulkner, telling graduates at the University of Mississippi on Sunday, "Never be afraid to raise your voice for honesty and truth and compassion; against injustice and lying and greed."

He did not mention the fall of 1962, when his brothers President John Kennedy and Attorney General Robert Kennedy ordered federal marshals and more than 20,000 troops to enforce the desegregation of Ole Miss, ensuring that James Meredith be registered as the school's first black student.

Arabia. Paul Etter, Fluor vice president in charge of public relations, said good U.S. relations with Saudi Arabia are the concern not only of Fluor, but of "many other companies who are doing business" in that country.

Of Fluor's support of the arms deal, he said, "It seems pretty logical."

The U.S. Senate was expected to vote late this afternoon on the arms pact.

As proposed by President Carter, the $4.8 billion package calls for selling 60 F-15s to Saudi Arabia, 50 F-5s to Egypt, and 15 F-15s and 75 F-16s to Israel.

In addition, Carter has offered to sell Israel an extra 20 F-15s to bring that country's total of the warplane to 60, the same as Saudi Arabia.

Bandit Hits Irvine Eatery; $200 Taken

A robber who threatened a cashier with a holstered revolver escaped from the Red Onion Restaurant in Irvine Sunday with about $200 cash, police said.

Police said the man entered the restaurant, 18512 MacArthur Blvd., at about 8:25 p.m. and demanded that the woman clean out the cash register and put the money in a paper sack he handed her.

She did and he then sprinted out the front entrance.

The robber was described as 28 to 30, tall and thin, with a mustache, and wearing a light tan jacket and a gold chain around his neck.

3 El Capitan Climbers Die; Probe Due

YOSEMITE NATIONAL PARK (AP) — Three Minnesota men fell 1,400 feet to their deaths while trying to climb El Capitan in Yosemite National Park, Park Superintendent Leslie Arnberger said.

The three killed Sunday were identified by Arnberger as John Paul Garton, 24, and John Edward Nygard, 22, both of Bloomington, and Jeffrey Joseph Graves, 22, of Fridley.

They had begun a registered climb of the rock Saturday, he said.

The three were roped together and when one man fell, the other two were pulled out of their securing devices and also fell, Arnberger said.

He said the cause of the accident is under investigation. The men were experienced climbers, Arnberger said.

The superintendent also said there was a witness to the accident.

MONEY...

known as the "Arnel" dispute staged a pre-election media blitz of mailers and phone calls that many citizens claimed were misleading and the basis of a voter backlash against the developers.

The rezoning initiative passed 4,365 votes to 3,091 in citywide balloting, thus rezoning to single-family homes 68.3 acres near South Coast Plaza.

The properties were to be developed by the Arnel Development Company, Henry Segerstrom and Henry Roberts. Roberts did not contribute to the pre-development effort.

Developers have filed a suit against the city claiming that the area rezoned is too small to be constitutional.

The lawsuit opened Friday in Orange County Superior Court and may end up at the state Supreme Court level, according to legal observers.

Arnel partner George Argyros, according to disclosure statements filed at the city clerk's office, spent $7,880 to defeat the initiative sparked by the North Costa Mesa Homeowners Association.

Contributions from Arnel partner Harry Rinker totaled $1,450, with an additional $4,345 kicked in by his son, Bart.

The C.J. Segerstrom and Sons Development Company spent a total of $8,510 to try and beat the initiative.

All together, the developers spent $30,204, documents show.

In the councilmanic election, it was Mrs. Schafer, followed by third-place finisher Don Bull, who spent the most on their campaigns.

Bull, a College Park resident, spent $3,733 in his second unsuccessful bid to win a seat on the council.

Fifth-place finisher K. Paul Raver spent $2,155, including $1,146 out of their own pocket.

Christopher M. Steel accepted no contributions and spent $1,908 of his own money. He finished fourth.

Of the five remaining candidates in the March 7 election, only student Carl Merkle received or spent more than $200 on their campaigns.

Merkle raised $216 and spent $81.

Other candidates in the election were Michael Ellis, Thomas Keefer, G. Godfrey Sandeen and Darryln Oliver.

Opera Stars Escape Harm

DALLAS (AP) — Three stars of the New York Metropolitan Opera tour narrowly escaped injury during a performance at the State Fair Music Hall here when scenery crashed to the stage.

A shouted warning enabled Sherill Milnes and Donald Gram to leap forward to the footlights.

CLA Acts 'Mistake'

Ex-director Reviews Vietnam War

NEW YORK (AP) — In the days when the CIA's paramilitary skills were freely in use around the world, he sent the first sabotage teams into North Vietnam.

From those clandestine beginnings grew the intense American bombing of North Vietnam and the commitment of 550,000 U.S. ground troops. The man who admits to starting it all, William Colby, later director of the CIA, now believes it was all a mistake.

In his book published today by Simon & Schuster, "Honorably Men: My Life in the CIA," Colby argues that "whether we could have won or lost," the only way to have sensibly fought the Vietnam war was at the village level as a political struggle against the communists, using only Vietnamese forces.

Colby went on to play a major role in counterinsurgency and pacification programs in Vietnam, but in his book he clearly believes that it was then a lost cause.

As CIA station chief in Saigon in 1963, Colby writes of attending a Hawaii conference where plans were discussed to escalate the war. He tried to convince then Secretary of Defense Robert MacNamara that the sabotage teams sent into North Vietnam had disappeared quickly from radio contact and possibly were captured "and that putting such teams into the north did not and would not work."

Colby wrote that MacNamara "listened to me with a cold look and he rejected my advice. The desire to put pressure onto

VIETNAM 'A MISTAKE'

But Colby also believes that Kennedy "would at the very least, had he lived, recognized the futility of a massive military buildup as a way to fight a guerrilla war... We would not have had half a million American soldiers involved, nor experienced the casualties they suffered and inflicted by their operations."

On a visit to the White House after Kennedy's death, Colby tried to persuade presidential adviser McGeorge Bundy "to get our programs back to the village level and build up from there, instead of endlessly debating where to bomb North Vietnam."

Colby said Bundy replied that "I might be right in my approach but he thought the structure of the American government would never permit it to be applied. But the result was the Vietnam war as we now know it."

President Richard Nixon also believed in maximum force. He writes in his memoirs, which went on sale last week in advance of today's official publication date, that on a visit to Vietnam in 1964, then U.S. Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge "argued against pursuing Viet Cong forces into Laos or Cambodia. Even more surprising to me," Nixon wrote, "Lodge said American troops should avoid fighting the Viet Cong except to retaliate when Americans were killed. I could hardly believe that I was hearing this from one as versed as Cabot Lodge in the tactics and techniques of international communism."

North Vietnam prevailed, and there and then the United States military started the planning and activity that would escalate finally to full-scale air attacks."

Colby criticizes the late President Kennedy for going along with "what I still consider the worst mistake of the war, the American-sponsored overthrow of President Ngo Dinh Diem," and writes that earlier two "high ranking" United States officials clearly implied that the CIA should assassinate Ngo Dinh Nhu, Diem's brother and opponent of American plans for reform.

2-hour Standoff

HB Gunman, 59, Gives Up to SWAT

A Huntington Beach man who police allege shot at a neighbor Sunday night, then barricaded himself in his home with an arsenal of weapons and ammunition for more than two hours, remained jailed today.

Nick Urban, 59, of 15591 Toway Lane, held the police's SWAT team and a force of regular uniformed officers at bay but no shots were exchanged during the tense standoff.

He was arrested and booked on suspicion of assault with a deadly weapon in connection with the earlier shooting incident which reportedly climaxed 30 minutes of talk with the victim, Justin Scott Cate. Bail was set at $10,000.

Police said they were informed that Urban had been depressed over his son's own personal difficulties and had been drinking before the episode.

Investigators said they were hampered severely at times by neighbors who refused to realize the seriousness of the situation after being ordered to evacuate their homes.

Desk officers using criss-cross telephone directories contacted residents all along the block ordering them to leave the area but some refused to believe any danger existed.

One family refused to believe it was really a police officer calling.

Others complied with orders to get out of immediate range of the Urban home, where police said the barricaded suspect kept several guns including a 30.06 rifle with a telescopic sight.

Police established a command post in a nearby home and made repeated attempts to contact Urban but he apparently refused to answer the telephone.

Patrol Lt. John Foster said SWAT Team Officer Patrick Gildea finally made contact with Urban and was largely responsible for coaxing the suspect to surrender.

Urban walked out peacefully, following police orders to keep his hands in the air, at 10:07 p.m. to end the standoff.

Investigators said among other weapons in the house were a .357 Magnum revolver, a .45 caliber automatic pistol, a .44 Magnum pistol, a shotgun, two Winchester 30-30 rifles and the 30.06 rifle.

3,500 Flee Train Crash

NACOGDOCHES, Texas (AP) — About 3,500 persons evacuated when railroad tank cars carrying volatile chemicals derailed returned to their homes in this east Texas town today.

Police said an evacuation order was lifted at midnight Sunday, about eight hours after 16 cars of a 117-car Southern Pacific freight train went off the track.

Eleven of the 16 cars burned following three explosions, and nine were still smoldering today, said Southern Pacific spokesman Joe Bart.

HOWARD HUGHES' BIZARRE PRIVATE LIFE SURFACES After His Death, a Glimpse Into His Lifestyle

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — On April 5, 1976, a frail, emaciated man was carried aboard a chartered jet at Acapulco, Mexico, for what was to become the last of his countless flights, a desperate journey to a hospital at Houston, Texas.

The man died on that flight, setting off a complex series of legal entanglements that may not be resolved for years — but which have given the public a glimpse at the sometimes bizarre and always private life of one of the world's most secretive men.

TWO YEARS AFTER THE death of Howard Robard Hughes — and as final arguments begin Tuesday in a trial to determine the validity of an alleged Hughes will — it is clear that much of the speculation about the multimillionaire recluse may indeed have been correct.

The few who saw Hughes in his last years say he did wander about half-naked, he was scared of death of germs and, yes, he did have shoulder-length hair and long fingernails.

Speculation about Hughes was fanned by his years in the public eye, as playboy pilot, escort to Hollywood starlets, aircraft designer and builder of a corporate empire. All that was before the mid-1950s, when Hughes became a virtual hermit.

FOR THE TWO DECADES UNTIL his death at 70, Hughes occupied the top floors or penthouses of resort hotels — in Las Vegas, Acapulco, Nassau, London, Vancouver, and Managua, Nicaragua. The few who gained access to him had to pass through elaborate security systems.

A half-dozen Hughes aides testified during the six-month trial aimed at determining if he actually wrote the so-called Mormon-Will. Final arguments in the case, which pits several Hughes relatives against a former associate, Noah Dietrich, are expected to last all week. An estate conservatively valued at about $168 million is at stake.

Of the aides who testified, John Holmes, said to be one of the closest to Hughes, gave perhaps the most revealing testimony.

NO MATTER WHAT CITY, Hughes' hotel rooms were similar and his days in them followed a dreary routine. Hughes took to his bed around the mid-1960s, Holmes said, and never again walked a city street.

"I do remember that he stayed pretty much in bed," Holmes said of Hughes' life in Bel Air in the early 1960s. "To my knowledge, I can't remember once that I saw him dressed in street clothes."

"When he was not in bed, where did he spend his time," Holmes was asked by an attorney.

"The bathroom," Holmes replied. "It was either the bed or the bathroom."

At another point, Holmes reluctantly admitted that Hughes frequently walked around nude.

"Occasionally, we would see him in that state of dress or undress," he said.

Another aide, LeVar Myler, testified that frequently Hughes wore only pajama tops, if anything.

Myler said Hughes had a beard that went to the center of his chest, shoulder-length hair and inch-long fingernails.

At another point, Holmes testified that two days before Hughes' death he saw the industrialist inject himself with a drug that was probably codeine. Since that testimony, Holmes and one of Hughes' physicians have been indicted by a federal grand jury on charges they illegally supplied Hughes with codeine for nearly 20 years.

HUGHES NEVER SAW HIS WIFE, actress Jean Peters, or any other woman the last 10 years of his life, Holmes testified.

He said bottles of Hughes' urine sometimes were kept in the millionaire's penthouse.

Another former Hughes employee, Ron Kistler, said in a deposition that Hughes' rumored aversion to germs was true. He said Hughes shunned contact with people and handled everything with tissue paper.

"Mr. Hughes touched very few doorknobs in my memory," he said.

While Hughes was living in California, Kistler said, his aides were forbidden to go to Nevada because Hughes feared it was "hot" from nuclear testing.

KISTLER, WHO WROTE A BOOK about his experiences titled "I Caught Flies For Howard Hughes," said that Hughes once spent four hours cleaning a telephone receiver with tissues. At another time, he said in his deposition, Hughes spent 26 hours in a bathroom.

While living at the Beverly Hills Hotel, Kistler said, Hughes "worked as hard as possible to keep the bungalow germ free." Yet, he said it was never cleaned in the 18 months Hughes lived there.

Dietrich, who served Hughes for 32 years until he had a falling-out with the industrialist in 1957, testified that Hughes enjoyed political clout and used his money in an attempt to buy power.

He said profits from a Canadian subsidiary of Hughes were channeled back into the United States for political contributions and among those who received part of an estimated $400,000 a year were former presidents Nixon and Johnson.

OTHER TESTIMONY HAS DISCLOSED that Hughes also lobbied intensely to have nuclear testing halted in Nevada.

Despite the stories of Hughes' eccentric lifestyle, he apparently remained in firm control of his empire.

Nevada Gov. Mike O'Callaghan, who visited Hughes in London in 1973 to check rumors he had lost control of his empire, said then that there was "no doubt in that meeting of who was telling who what to do."

O'Callaghan, who still refuses to discuss Hughes' appearance, would say only that Hughes' "eyes were bright that night, he gave me a firm handshake and he seemed to be in firm control of the situation."

Judge Delays Move On Waddill Retrial

By TOM BARLEY
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Orange County Superior Court Judge H. Warren Knight refused today to order a new trial for Dr. William Baxter Waddill until he has had a chance to talk to the judge who presided over the first trial.

Judge Knight told Deputy District Attorney Robert Chatterton today that he will not grant the prosecutor's request for a second trial until he confers with Judge James K. Turner.

Judge Turner, who declared a mistrial in the first trial after the jury deadlocked, is on vacation.

Judge Knight said he will talk to Turner when he returns this week and then announce his decision June 2.

"There are many sensitive issues involved in this trial," Judge Knight said from the bench. "I want to give this case some very careful consideration and I need some background from Judge Turner."

Defense attorneys Malbour Watson and Charles Weedman said they are ready for a second trial if that is what Judge Knight decides and they will again defend Waddill.

Waddill, 42, of Huntington Harbour, is accused of strangling a newborn baby girl in the Westminster Community Hospital nursery on March 2, 1977.

The prosecution has alleged that he killed the infant when he realized that his attempt 12 hours earlier to abort the 18-year-old mother by injecting a saline solution into her had failed.

Waddill commented today that he is "bitterly disappointed" about Chatterton's determination to retry the case.

TRIAL DECISION DELAYED Dr. William Waddill

"But I'm not surprised," he said. "This seems to have become a very personal thing with the prosecutor and he's determined to punish me one way or the other."

Waddill clarified the comment by explaining that the first trial had cost him $500,000. He said he would raise the same amount of money for a second trial, if necessary, "but I don't know where I'm going to find it all yet."

"It's a shame that this decision should have been taken by the prosecution," attorney Watson said. "Dr. Waddill should not have been forced to undergo a second trial after the jury made it clear in the first trial that they could not accept the prosecution's case."

Huntington Office Building Torched

A fire set by arsonists who first ransacked two adjoining suites caused an estimated $8,000 damage to a Huntington Beach office building owned by actor Telly Savalas, fire department spokesmen reported today.

The blaze wrecked two units in the structure at 20902 Brookhurst St., occupied by real estate saleswoman Zoe Mathies, investigators said.

Firemen were dispatched to a report of smoke in the building Saturday at 7:16 a.m. but when they arrived they found flames raging inside the realty office.

"We had to tear out one whole wall," Fire Inspector Jim Merrill said today, in detailing how firemen brought the blaze under control.

He said it was clearly an arson-set fire based on evidence found at the scene which is still being studied today.

Inspector Merrill said the offices had been completely ransacked with business papers strewn about and then apparently ignited with matches.

Victim's Ex Held in Death

The ex-wife of a Santa Ana man whose body was found floating in an apartment house swimming pool Saturday has been booked on suspicion of murder, police said today.

Officers said they are still awaiting results of an autopsy to learn the cause of death of Donald A. McCullough, 48, of 200 W. Keller Ave.

However, officers said they believe a blunt instrument may have been used to kill McCullough.

Booked on suspicion of murder was McCullough's ex-wife, Barbara L. Burns, 47, of the same Keller Avenue address.

Appeals Lost

Patty to Resume Prison Sentence

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Convicted bank robber Patricia Hearst, who lost appeals to the nation's highest court, is returning to prison today to serve the remainder of a seven-year sentence, according to U.S. Attorney G. William Hunter. Hunter said the newspaper heiress would go to the Federal Correctional Institute at Pleasanton, 30 miles east of San Francisco, under terms of an agreement between U.S. District Court Judge William H. Orrick Jr. and her attorneys.

She has been free on $1 million bail while her attorneys exhausted legal appeals of her 1976 conviction of joining her terrorists kidnappers, the Symbionese Liberation Army, in an armed San Francisco bank robbery.

Dennis Harvey, executive assistant to the Pleasanton Warden, said this morning the prison had not been notified of Miss Hearst's arrival, the standard procedure with most surrenders.

Miss Hearst, 24, has served 14 months of the sentence, part of it at the campus-like minimum security Pleasanton facility. She would need to serve another 14 months before becoming eligible for parole.

Miss Hearst lost her last chance to remain free when the U.S. Supreme Court refused March 24 to review her 1975 conviction for an April 15, 1974 bank robbery.

Since her release on bail, Miss Hearst has been living with her parents in a San Francisco apartment and recently in a home in suburban Hillsborough. On her rare public appearances, she has been accompanied by bodyguards, as specified in the court order setting conditions for her bail.

Her new attorney, George Martinez, was unavailable for comment.

Boston lawyer Al Johnson, who has been a friend of Miss Hearst, officially withdrew from the case three weeks ago but was in San Francisco today, according to his Boston office.

Miss Hearst spent Mothers Day and her final hours as a free woman today closeted with her entire family at their Hillsborough home, The Times in San Mateo reported.

She was described by a family source as "extremely depressed" about the prospect of returning to prison, according to The Times.

The paper said the 24-year-old heiress spent the past week at the family estate at San Simeon quietly preparing for her return to custody.

Companions at the famous estate, built by her grandfather, William Randolph Hearst, included two sisters, Anne and Vicki. She reportedly expressed concern that all but 15 days of her previous time in jail was spent in solitary confinement.

Lawmen Get 4 More Nudes In S. Laguna

Four more people were arrested Sunday on charges of sunbathing in the buff in South Laguna.

Arrested Sunday at 1 p.m. at Ninth Street Beach were Clark Balch, 20, of Fullerton, Eric Spangletz, 27, of Pasadena, Evelyn Berger, 35, of Los Angeles and a 17-year-old Los Angeles girl who was released later to her parents.

A spokesman at the sheriff's South County substation said 15 people have been cited for nude sunbathing on South Laguna beaches during the past month.

Judge John Griffin, of the South County Municipal Court, has been handing out $50 fines and two-year probation sentences to people found guilty, a sheriff's spokesman said.

It's Her Day

Baby Born at Valley Park

A large Mother's Day crowd got an idea of what Mother's Day is all about Sunday when an unidentified woman was visited by the stork at Fountain Valley's Mile Square Park.

A WITNESS SAID the mother went into the restroom of the large recreational facility near Euclid Street and apparently went into labor pains.

Fountain Valley paramedics were summoned and the baby was apparently born without incident while a crowd of 1,000 concerned citizens milled about.

The mother and baby, both unidentified at press time, were treated at Fountain Valley Community Hospital and transferred to UCI Medical Center. Their condition is not known.

A CITY SPOKESMAN said the stork arrived at about 4:30 p.m. with an eight-pound baby. Another witness said the baby was a boy.

Paramedics who were summoned to the birth were out of town today and not available to shed light on the blessed event.

Clearing Skies Due in North

By The Associated Press
Rains that began falling through Northern California on Sunday afternoon were expected to end by tonight as skies start to clear, the National Weather Service said.

An offshore cold front kept coastal areas at least partly cloudy Sunday. Rain spread over the northwest corner of the state and the Siskiyou on Sunday afternoon, reaching as far south as San Francisco by nightfall.

Wind gusts up to 55 mph were recorded at South Lake Tahoe

Airport and gusts up to 30 mph were reported over the Northern Sacramento Valley. The Sierra was expected to remain windy through today.

Occasional showers today should end by tonight, although Tuesday's skies may still be partly cloudy, the Weather Service said.

Sunday's high temperatures around Northern California were: San Francisco 66; Oakland 71; San Jose 78; Bakersfield 97; Fresno 94; Marysville 80; Red Bluff 79; Sacramento 76; Stockton 84.

BLUE MONDAYS: One thing I've promised myself to do this week is attend the annual convention of the National Society of Columnists. This is going on in Louisville. But I've been frightened off.

The cause of my dismay and reluctance to join this esteemed group is the description of the event offered by Bob Greene, the noted syndicated columnist of Field Newspaper Syndicate. Greene suggests of the gathering:

"IT PROMISES TO BE the biggest collection of pathological liars, manic depressives, con artists, hypochondriacs, social outcasts, rum-dum braggiants, morality-free vipers, bleary-eyed alkiens, alimony-dodging mashers and flat-out deadbeats since the day they merged the original Georgia Prison Farm with the State Dungeon for the Hopelessly Addled."

Obviously, Mr. Greene thinks a lot of the group.

He goes on to note that, "Newspaper columnists are a notoriously desperate lot. Taken one by one, they are relatively harmless. All you have to do is turn the page."

How harmful they might be as a group, however, Greene does not speculate. He does go on to suggest a profile of the typical columnist:

"If you are lucky, you have never known a newspaper columnist. If you are unlucky, you know that: —If you tell a newspaper columnist that you are dying of a dread disease, he will ask you to keep a diary and give it to him.

—A newspaper columnist would trade away the First Amendment, the people's right to know, and his mother's virtue in exchange for two ideas that will put him a couple of days ahead of deadline.

—IF YOU SAY SOMETHING funny to a newspaper columnist, he will steal it and claim it for his own; if you say something that makes sense, he will twist it around, misquote you and make you sound dumb.

—A newspaper columnist is as good as his word, unless he needs to betray you for a dedication.

—A newspaper columnist is dedicated to his profession because he loves the underdog, believes in truth, and no one has ever offered him a real job."

THUS AT THE CONVENTION of these sterling characters, seminars will be conducted on such heavy topics as, "Adjusting Your Margins in a Metric World" and "Outdoor Writing: The Importance of Properly Grounding Your Electric Typewriter During Thunderstorms."

One of the key workshops to be conducted at the convention will probe the techniques whereby one columnist may steal ideas from another.

Maybe that's why I don't need to attend the conclave. I already know how to do that. Obviously.

U.S. Aid Asked Zaire Battles Rebel Forces

KINSHASA, Zaire (AP) — Zaire's army is battling rebel invaders in mineral-rich Shaba province for the second time in 14 months and reports today from foreigners in the area indicate the government's position is "deteriorating."

Reliable Belgian sources in Brussels said the rebels have seized the town of Mutshatsha and part of Kolwezi, the copper-mining center of the southeastern province of this central African nation, formerly the Belgian Congo. Zairean sources denied Mutshatsha had fallen.

ZAIRE'S OFFICIAL news agency AZAP claims Cuban troops are with the Katangan rebels, and President Mobutu Sese Seko's Kinshasa government has asked the United States and other nations for help.

The Belgian sources also said the invaders were heading toward the town of Kamina and its Zairean military base. Kamina is about 100 miles north of Kolwezi, which lies 25 miles north of the Zambian border. Mutshatsha is 60 miles west of Kolwezi.

An American construction company with 100 employees and dependents at Kolwezi said they were unharmed.

BELGIAN AUTHORITIES would give no official indication of the extent of the rebel advance, saying their information was sketchy.

But a Belgian Foreign Ministry spokesman said that, according to reports from Belgians in Shaba, the situation "which had seemed rather reassuring in the first hours of the attack seems to be deteriorating."

AZAP said Katangan exiles and Cuban troops crossed Zaire's southern border with Zambia on Thursday night. The Belgian ministry said 4,000 invaders in civilian clothes came from Angola, crossed northern Zambia, infiltrated Kolwezi and seized part of the town in an attack.

AZAP said Zairean troops repelled an attack Sunday at Mutshatsha. It claimed Cuban troops aided the invaders there.

Death Watch

Its plumage impregnated with oil from the Greek tanker Eleni V, a guillemot waits for death on the beach at Great Yarmouth on the east coast of England. Because of the oil, the bird is unable to dive for food and will starve. The tanker broke in half a week ago. So far more than 100 birds have washed ashore dead.

Learjet Inventor Dies

75-year-old Pioneer 'Met Life With Confidence'

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Jim Greenwood remembers once telling multimillionaire inventor William Lear that he should go back to school to learn the meaning of the word "impossible."

The reply: "I don't want to."

"HE FELT THAT life could be met with confidence and the supreme doing of anything could be done and any challenge could be met," said Greenwood, vice president of corporate affairs for Gates Learjet Corp. in Wichita, Kan.

Lear, who died of leukemia here at age 75 Sunday, represented the "true Horatio Alger story," said Greenwood in a telephone interview Sunday night. "I don't think there's any other man who reflected the true American pioneering spirit."

Lear, whose fortune was estimated at $75 million, pioneered the small corporate jet that took his name. He also invented the car radio, the eight-track stereo and the autopilot, which enables an airplane to fly a set course without the manual steering of a pilot.

In all he held about 150 patents.

LEAR THRIVED ON work but also had a reputation as play boy. He was known for his parties, his gambling binges and his flamboyance.

His death interrupted his most recent transportation dream — a seven-passenger, 400 mph turboprop plane built mostly of plastic.

The one major project to stymie Lear was the steam-powered car. His effort to develop a steam turbine engine for cars and buses, begun in a period of boredom and depression, cost him about $17 million. A prototype automobile was made but never put into production.

LEAR'S DRIVE TO succeed was largely shaped by the economic deprivations of his childhood in Hannibal, Mo. At age 12, Lear prepared a "blueprint" to overcome those hardships.

"I resolved first to make enough money so I'd never be stopped from finishing anything," Lear said several years ago. "Second, that to accumulate money in a hurry — and I was in a hurry — I'd have to invent something that people wanted, and third, that if I ever was going to stand on my own feet, I'd have to leave home."

At the age of 16, Lear joined the Navy, where he was a radio operator during World War I. He said he gave up the Navy after deciding it would "take too long to become an admiral."

LEAR FOUNDED HIS first company, the Radio Coil and Wire Corp., in 1926. He traded it in 1930 for one-third interest in the Galvin Manufacturing Co. of Chicago. After Lear developed the car radio, Galvin Manufacturing became the Motorola Corp.

Lear Developments, later Lear Inc., was formed in 1930. It had 5,000 employees producing aerospace and other electronic equipment at plants in California, Ohio and Germany when he sold his interests to a subsidiary of The Gates Rubber Co. of Denver in 1963 for an estimated $28 million. It became Gates Learjet Corp.

Boy Drowns In Bucket

BRIDGEPORT, Conn. (AP) — A 15-month-old boy apparently drowned in a mop bucket in a bathroom after he wandered from the living room where his father had dozed, police said.

A relative found the body of Sebastian Morales head-first in the bucket, said police Sgt. Arthur Buchanan.

He called the death accidental.

'Daring Game' TV Porn Upsets Audience

BONITA SPRINGS, Fla. (AP) — The TV directory listed it as "Daring Game," a Lloyd Bridges thriller set in Latin America. But viewers tuning in WEVU-TV saw instead naked men and women frolicking in a hay loft and shouting obscenities at each other and police.

The movie was taken off the air at midnight Sunday after running a half an hour, said Joseph Buerry, the station's general manager, who blamed the incident on a mix-up at the film distributors. The title of the film was not known.

BUERRY SAID THE originally scheduled movie was accidentally returned to the distributor and was replaced by the pornographic film which was not previewed before air time.

Swain Denies Royal Troth With Margaret

LONDON (AP) — Princess Margaret's brewery heir companion, Roddy Llewellyn, says he doesn't consider himself responsible for Margaret's divorce and that he won't be marrying her.

It was announced last week that Princess Margaret will divorce her husband of 16 years, Lord Snowdon.

"I do not consider myself in any way responsible for the divorce," Llewellyn told British reporters in Tangier, Morocco, the London Daily Telegraph reported Sunday.

The 30-year-old nightclub singer was quoted as saying he will continue to see the 47-year-old sister of Queen Elizabeth II, but, he added, "There is no chance of my marrying Princess Margaret."

Llewellyn, who has been staying at York Castle in Tangier for several weeks, was also quoted by the newspaper as saying his friendship with the princess was "greatly exaggerated."

Minister In Power Struggle

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Evangelist Garner Ted Armstrong, stripped of power within his father's Pasadena-based religious and college empire last week, says he will bow to Herbert W. Armstrong's authority.

"I prefer to honor my father and will defer to his authority," the 48-year-old television and radio evangelist said.

HE WAS QUOTED by the Los Angeles Times in a telephone interview from Texas.

"There would have been a power struggle if I had struggled against my father's authority," he said.

The younger Armstrong, who had long been regarded as heir apparent in his father's empire, has been silent since last week when he was told he would no longer be doing his weekly half-hour television program.

IT WAS ALSO reported that the younger Armstrong's March announcement that Ambassador College's undergraduate program would be transferred to Texas had been rescinded, but that the program would end this summer.

Because these decisions were made without the younger Armstrong's participation, there has been speculation that a power struggle is under way for control of the 65,000 member church and the college, which takes in more than $60 million annually.

"I WAS TOTALLY surprised by the nature of these decisions," Garner Ted Armstrong said Sunday, breaking his week-long silence.

He said he had no desire to be stripped of his authority, nor to stop his television broadcasts, but added that these decisions were apparently part of his father's move to "take back the reins of leadership."

All are members of Marine Air Support Squadron 4 and Marine Air Traffic Control Unit 71, both part of Marine Air Group 46. Gunmen Surrender

5 Hostages Freed in 6-hour Standoff

CARSON (AP) — Three gunmen released five Von's supermarket employees unharmed and surrendered to sheriff's deputies today after a six-hour standoff in this Los Angeles suburb.

Sheriff's spokesman Jim Borland said authorities negotiated by telephone with the gunmen, who made no demands except that they should not be photographed by the media when they emerged from the store, 15 miles south of Los Angeles.

ALL THREE GUNMEN and a fourth accomplice, who was taken into custody when he came out of the supermarket earlier, were booked at the Carson sheriff's substation for investigation of robbery and kidnapping.

The four were identified as George Levingston, 24; Curtis Cuberson, 38; Greg Speech, 22, and Tyrone Washington, 24, all of Los Angeles.

BORLAND SAID Levingston was carrying a shotgun when he was taken into custody Sunday night by two California Highway Patrol officers, whose suspicions were aroused by the way he and an accomplice entered the store.

Authorities would not disclose whether any money was recovered from Levingston or from any of the other three gunmen.

Borland said the store employees told deputies the men holding them were armed with a second shotgun and two handguns.

BORLAND SAID there was some confusion initially on the number of gunmen and victims inside the supermarket.

"After one suspect was arrested outside, deputies saw one more suspect back in the store with a hostage. So, they could definitely say there was one armed man but they could only assume there were more," he explained.

Borland said a Special Weapons and Tactics unit was in position outside the supermarket but no shots were fired in the incident and no one was injured.

Hot Weather Jams Southland Beaches

By The Associated Press

Summer-size crowds jammed county beaches over the Mother's Day weekend, clogging roads and keeping lifeguards busy with rescues. At least two people lost their lives on weekend outings.

Lifeguards rescued about 700 people Saturday and about 300 Sunday.

ONE 12-YEAR-OLD BOY collapsed on Zuma Beach after wading in the water and died later Sunday at Westlake Community Hospital.

The youngster's name was not immediately released. Officials said cause of death would be determined by an autopsy.

A BICYCLIST WAS KILLED Sunday when he was struck by a car on Pacific Coast Highway near Malibu. California Highway Patrolmen said Robert Van Hove, 47, was hit by a car which went out of control and flipped over, hitting him. The unidentified driver suffered minor injuries and was not held or cited, the CHP said.

At Legg Lake in the Whittier Narrows area of South El Monte, a Los Angeles man was rescued from drowning but remained in critical condition at Greater El Monte Community Hospital.

AUTHORITIES SAID JOSE GOMEZ, 32, decided to take a dip despite a prohibition against swimming in the lake.

Sunday's crowd ran to about 800,000 at county beaches, down from more than 1 million the day before. Saturday's hot weather and heavy smog was probably responsible for the larger crowd. The mercury reached 93 at Los Angeles Civic Center Saturday, while Sunday's peak was 10 degrees cooler.

REMEMBERS THAT IT WAS Mother's Day were all around, from children selling flowers to special Mother's Day menus. One sky writer over West Los Angeles painted the letters M O M in huge white puffs, and underneath created a giant white heart.

Santa Monica area beaches drew the biggest crowd, with about 400,000 visitors reported. South Bay beaches had about 225,000 people, with about 130,000 sunlovers in the Malibu area.

TWO WEEKEND BRUSH FIRES burned a total of 3,700 acres in Kern County before being brought under control Sunday.

One of the fires, about 60 miles east of Bakersfield, burned about 1,200 acres of grass and sage brush. Another fire, touched off by exhaust sparks from a motorcycle, burned 2,500 acres near Elk Hills Naval Petroleum Reserve.

Gov. Brown Endorsed By Mexican-Americans

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. has won an expected endorsement from Mexican-Americans, and San Diego Mayor Pete Wilson was endorsed by moderate Republicans in the race for the GOP nomination for governor.

Endorsements were the major political activity of the weekend, as the campaign for the June 6 primaries entered the final three weeks.

THE MEXICAN-American Political Association and the California Republican League also both endorsed Proposition 8 and opposed Proposition 13.

Both groups said the $1.4 billion homeowner's tax cut proposed in Proposition 8 can be financed without damaging local government or raising other taxes.

AND BOTH groups agreed with critics of Proposition 13 who say that $7 billion property tax cut plan, sponsored by tax critic Howard Jarvis, will lead to increases in other taxes and disruption of local government.

Wilson and the Democratic governor were also endorsed Sunday in their respective primaries for governor by the San Jose Mercury-News.

Honors Won

Paul G. Gilmer of Costa Mesa, an Estancia High School graduate, has been honored for a straight-A average during the winter term at Michigan State University. Gilmer is a junior.

Association's vote Sunday for Brown was never in doubt. The 40-year-old governor has close ties with farm labor leader Cesar Chavez and other Mexican-American leaders, and has been endorsed by MAPA in earlier campaigns.

MAPA also endorsed Democrat Abe Tapia of Rosemead, a longtime activist in Mexican-American political circles, over incumbent Mervyn Dymally for lieutenant governor.

BUT MAPA delegates deadlocked and failed to endorse in the closely fought race between Yvonne Burke and Burt Pines for the Democratic nomination for attorney general.

The statewide non-partisan group also voted on endorsements in Republican races, but no Republican won the 60 percent needed for endorsement in any statewide race.

Wilson's endorsement Saturday at the California Republican League convention was a needed boost for his campaign.

WILSON HAS slipped to fourth in polls among GOP voters for the nomination for governor, trailing former Los Angeles Police Chief Ed Davis, Attorney General Evelle Younger and Assemblyman Ken Maddy of Fresno.

But Wilson scored a surprisingly easy 315-178 victory over Maddy, another moderate, in CRL balloting. Younger, a member of the CRL's advisory board, received only 42 votes from CRL delegates, and Davis 6 votes.

Jarvis Can't Halt Most Tax Waste

As taxpayers we have every right to be fed up with the apparent misuse of our tax money at all levels, right?

A dozen examples come to mind immediately. Our Congressmen vote themselves a huge pay raise, then complain because they're asked to limit their outside earnings and stop junketing around the globe at our expense.

Billions are poured into foreign aid and new armaments. Every month Sen. Proxmire comes out with a new list of crazy-sounding federal research projects, all financed with tax money.

Up in Sacramento, our legislators, while they may not be so grossly overpaid, augment their pay with juicy fringe benefits like per diem allowances, travel allowances, use of state cars, and gasoline and telephone credit cards.

The freeways are degenerating into a mess and the state doesn't even bother to smooth out the bumps or fix the directional signs when the lights go out.

And those soaring paycheck deductions — wow! The list is endless.

So isn't it great that the taxpayers will finally get a chance to correct these inequities by voting for the Jarvis Initiative/Prop. 13 and teach these clowns a lesson by shutting off the flow of tax dollars?

It would indeed be great, but unfortunately it doesn't work that way.

The expenditures that irritate us so much come from tax money, but not a penny from property tax. And property tax is all that Jarvis is about.

Property tax doesn't pay congressmen or finance foreign aid excesses or federal boondoggles. Property tax doesn't pay state legislators or their fringe benefits. Property tax doesn't pay to build or fix freeways. Property tax is not a paycheck deduction.

What is property tax used for? It provides much of the money for elementary, high school and community college districts.

It finances most of county government, including the sheriff-coroner office, the county fire department, the municipal and superior courts, district attorney offices, public defenders, probation and health departments, county water and sanitation systems.

It finances most of municipal government, including administration, police and fire departments, water service, sewage treatment, trash collection, local street maintenance, street lighting and park maintenance.

It is not "scare" talking to say that these unique local services are the ones — the only ones — that would be directly affected by the huge reduction in property tax proposed in the Jarvis Initiative/Prop. 13. It's a simple fact of life.

We'd all like to clean up the act of the politicians and bureaucrats in Sacramento and Washington, but that act will go on, Jarvis or no Jarvis. And so will the paycheck deductions.

Our concern, if Prop. 13 passes June 6, will only be which, if any, of the local services now financed by our property tax are we ready to relinquish or have cut back? Or, alternatively, which are we ready to hand over to state control if we decide we just can't do without them?

This, not state or federal misuse of tax money, is what Prop. 13 is about.

A Costly Scheme

Some day a limit will be put on the amount of public money that will be spent avoiding the major issues at Orange County Airport.

Latest spending scheme is county Supervisor Thomas Riley's proposal to subsidize air traveler bus service from a various points in Orange County to Ontario International Airport.

Theory behind Riley's proposal is that transporting air travelers away from the county airport will help relieve overcrowding pressures.

But the public cost of 11 bus round trips daily is estimated at $390,000 a year and the cost of 15 such daily journeys has been set at $503,000. Those costs would be offset by whatever fare revenue could be generated.

Riley has proposed that money from the Orange County Airport enterprise fund be used to subsidize the costly bus service.

That's ridiculous. The enterprise money comes from airport users and rightfully is earmarked for use either in needed public improvement projects at the airport or to help in the settlement of pending lawsuits.

Taken as a whole Riley's busing plan appears to be little more than an expensive scheme that in no way comes close to solving existing and future problems at Orange County Airport.

Boyd/Wisecracks

By L. M. BOYD

Wilson Mizner made a name for himself early in this century mostly with his putdowns. Wisecracks such as: "He'd steal a hot stove and come back for the smoke." "A demitasse would fit over your head like a sun-bonnet." "Another pot of coffee, waiter, and bring it under your arm to keep it warm." "He's the only man I ever knew who had rubber pockets so he could steal soup." And of a thin man: "He's a trellis for varicose veins."

"Kowtow" in Chinese literally means "to knock on the head." Comes from a ritual out of ancient China. When the leader of an inferior state visited the Chinese court to pay tribute, that emissary was required to kneel and thump his forehead on the ground nine times.

"I'm the piano tuner," said the man at the door. The lady said, "I didn't send for a piano tuner." Said he, "I know, but the neighbors did." That is one candidate for the oldest joke in living memory. Do you, too, have a candidate?

A clothing store that caters to teenagers in Toronto is called "Mother Wouldn't Like It."

Do you realize how many fires could be averted if the makers of electric wire insulation would put bitter rat poison in it?

Satellites Evade Human Rights

A batch of documents smuggled from behind the Iron Curtain portrays chillingly the dire risks dissidents run for speaking out against the Soviet satellite regimes in Eastern Europe.

They give the lie to pledges made by the governments of Poland, Rumania and Czechoslovakia in the Helsinki Accord to protect human rights.

Encouraged by the pact, people in those countries dared to question their governments and incurred harsh totalitarian retaliation. Newspapers in Poland have been subjected to police state censorship, which prohibits any mention of health hazards from the use of toxic chemicals on agricultural products.

IN ROMANIA, critics of the puppet regime are carted off to mental hospitals for barbaric treatment. In Czechoslovakia, children of politically suspect parents are deliberately discriminated against in their schooling.

Official government edicts and personal accounts of dissidents have been obtained by Commission on Security and Cooperation in Europe, set up by Congress to monitor communist compliance with the Helsinki Accord.

Details of the Polish censorship crackdown were smuggled out by a former censor, Tomasz Strzyzewski, who fled his native land. Polish authorities are also using iron-fisted police tactics to prevent "self-education" classes for the people. Many lecturers and political activists have been arrested and victimized by "brutal police terror."

In Romania, the persecution of the dissidents is more nightmarish. Those who speak out against the regime are clapped into mental hospitals and are rendered docile by drugs, beaten with rubber clubs and kept manacled in handcuffs.

ANY INMATE trying to escape is thrown into solitary confinement and administered "special treatments." In one year, six patients died from the "special treatments." A respected mathematician was found distributing mildly anti-government tracts and shipped to a psychiatric ward. He was promptly diagnosed as a "lunatic" and detained in the madhouse.

In Czechoslovakia, the wrath of the state is being visited on the children of those who ventured to sympathize with political reform requests in 1968. Some state-operated secondary schools refuse to accept offspring of politically proscribed parents no matter what their intellectual qualifications.

In such cases, an applicant with high grades may be ranked below one with poorer marks solely because the authorities have ordained that the brighter student fails to fulfill "class-political criteria."

TORTURE BY MAIL: Soviet commissars are callously using the mails now as a subtle instrument to torment Jewish dissidents who are sent letters of friendship and encouragement from the outside world. Censorship has long been practiced in the communist world, but the pettiness of the Kremlin's latest mail obstruction campaign goes beyond censorship.

We have obtained evidence from a number of sources that Soviet bureaucrats are trying to destroy the letter link between the dissidents and their relatives or friends.

For example, a New York Jewish congregation recently sent postcards of support to the celebrated dissident Anatoly Shcharansky. They were mailed back, torn into tiny pieces, in envelopes from the Soviet Union.

Another example of mailbox persecution involves a harmless, elderly Jewish couple named Liberman. Their son managed to emigrate to Israel. But for a long time, Soviet authorities refused to accept any letters from him. Then in 1973, the Libermans were falsely informed by Soviet authorities that their son was dead.

Two years later, they received their first letter from him in years. Almost every word was obliterated by malicious communist censors. The son had sent his parents photos of their grandchildren whom they had never seen. Ominously, the eyes of the four youngsters had been stabbed out by Soviet postal authorities.

INSIDE RUSSIA, a registered letter may be signed for by anyone. It has also become common practice for a Soviet postal worker to forge the recipient's name and send it back as undeliverable to save the $15 registration penalty. U.S. postal authorities often end up footing the bill.

The importance of outside communication to the morale of the dissidents is underscored time and again by Moscow watchers. Soviet Jews who are refused permission to leave the country, commented one source, are in "a prison without a cage. The letters are a lifeline to the West."

Footnote: Recently, Reps. Benjamin Gilman, R.-N.Y., and James Scheuer, D.-N.Y., met privately in Geneva with Elfin Motin, chief postal authority in the Soviet Union, about the high-handed Russian tactics. Motin blustered that their complaints involved internal Soviet matters and were undiscussable as an international issue. Gilman, however, was unsatisfied with the explanation and will hold House hearings on the Soviet tampering.

Move Would Curb 'Legislative Incest'

Decrying what he termed "legislative incest," veteran Pasadena Assemblyman Frank Lanterman attempted to strike yet another blow for good government before he bows out at the end of his term after 28 years in the Legislature.

He proposed a constitutional bar for anyone running for legislative office until two years after leaving the legislative payroll.

Unlike many of his other efforts over the years which have aided the handicapped, mentally ill, the school children and other deserving while still maintaining his conservative posture, Lanterman's move this time was doomed before he started and he knew it.

For the transition of paid legislative employees from workers to elected members has been a rising phenomenon which commenced in the '60s and has been rapidly increasing to the point, according to Lanterman, that 25 former aides now serve as elected members. In the forthcoming elections 17 more are seeking to win office, two brazenly running against incumbent members who are, in effect, their employers.

IT IS NOT surprising then that Lanterman's bill was quickly rejected. The entrenched aides rushed out not only to defeat his bill but defend their "right" to gain office through this method of infiltration.

One of these, San Francisco Assemblyman Art Agnos, a former aide to Speaker Leo McCarthy, complained that Lanterman was attempting to hold "experience" against the staffers. He contended that it takes a new member two or three years to learn the legislative process and argued that inexperienced citizens elected to the Legislature lend themselves to "manipulation" by "those who would control government."

Such a patronizing view is self-serving for the aides but ignores the basics. Those who would wrest control of government from the people are the bureaucrats. And the legislative aides now constitute a new form of bureaucracy. The important experience one needs to be a good lawmaker can only be gained by long residence and service within the community one wants to represent.

It is the lack of that kind of background on the part of the aides, most of whom move into a district in anticipation of running for office just barely soon enough to qualify as a candidate, that sparked Lanterman's criticisms.

THEY ARE not of the people," he said, adding, "They are more fanciful than real. Their legislative proposals reflect their own philosophies rather than any need for the bill."

But Lanterman was poking at the symptoms rather than the disease itself while Agnos, because of his own inexperience, unwittingly went to the heart of the matter when he said the idea that legislators should be part-time citizen-lawmakers persists.

For the problem stems from the advent of the full-time

Legislature which has created jobs attractive by their compensation alone. This has encouraged a new breed of lawmakers who are interested in holding office more for the benefits to them than the honor of serving. Under the citizen-representative, part-time Legislature, outstanding community leaders could afford to give a few months out of every two years to come to Sacramento to solve major state problems, leaning on the wisdom acquired from long experience and the intimate knowledge of the wishes of the people.

TODAY'S full-time "professional legislator" neither knows his district nor has been a community leader. Instead, applying a pseudo "expertise" based upon unproved theories, they are deciding what is good for the people rather than carrying out their wishes as dutiful representatives. Continuation of the full-time Legislature can only breed more of the kind of legislative incest about which Lanterman complains.

A Wonderful Little Wife Deserves the Best

It being our 25th wedding anniversary, I stopped by Tiffany's the other day to buy my wife a head of lettuce.

The impeccably-groomed salesman sized me up, unlocked a cabinet and took out a tray of small heads of iceberg lettuce for my inspection.

"One of these on a fine gold chain would make a lovely, sentimental gift," he said. "I was thinking of something in romaine or limestone," I said. "Perhaps set between baguettes of plum tomatoes."

He shook his head. "You couldn't afford them," he said. I examined the price tag of a 50-carat iceberg and whistled.

"That's highway robbery!" I cried.

"Don't forget, sir," said the salesman, "that lettuce these days is an excellent hedge against inflation."

WELL, there went that trip to Spain I'd planned. But when my dear wife opened the leather Tiffany box and saw her precious gift lying on the white satin, her gratitude made it all worth while.

"Oh, darling," she sobbed, clasping her hands in rapture, "what have I done to deserve a head of lettuce?"

"That's for being the most wonderful little wife in the world," I said grandly. And I must say she looked ravishing when she wore it that very evening to the Hotchkins' dinner party.

Of course, Mrs. Hotchkins — wouldn't you know? — was resplendent in a white asparagus tiara, but, frankly, I thought this an ostentatious display of wealth that bordered on the vulgar. Definitely nouveau riche.

I made the mistake of telling my wife how pretty young Miss Goightly seemed in her deep green brussels-sprout earrings.

"THEY'RE artificial," my wife whispered testily. "Sally Peters says they are really just some old emeralds she had carved to look like brussels sprouts. And I'll bet her bosom isn't hers either."

Old Mr. Petcher, who's head of our First National Bank, interrupted with a rumor that the Gnomes of Zurich were hoarding zucchini. My attention was diverted by the sight of his cufflinks. Mounted on each was a good half ounce of flawless smoked salmon!

I was making a mental note to transfer our savings to another bank when disaster arrived in the persons of Bill and Peggy Jones. She was wearing a head of iceberg lettuce twice as big as my poor wife's — at least 100 carats! Naturally, she was the center of a circle of admirers for the rest of the evening.

"I'LL BET it was a fake," I told my wife on the way home. "I'd sure like to get it under a jeweler's glass."

"Never mind, dear," she said, bravely holding back her tears. "I love my little head of lettuce best of all."

As I lie awake nights worrying about burglars and keeping up with the Joneses, I sometimes wonder if I did the right thing.

But, then, as the ad says: "A diamond is only a lump of coal, but a head of lettuce is forever."

Is College a Burden?

Cost of Education 'Matter of Perception'

By The Associated Press

True or false: It's harder to put kids through college today than it used to be.

The answer: True AND false. Like a lot of other things, it all depends on your point of view.

Parents who have to put out $20,000 for four years at a private college will argue that it is more difficult to find the money for education today than 10 years ago.

BUT THE CONGRESSIONAL Budget Office says statistics show the cost of a year in college in 1976 actually represented a slightly smaller proportion of the median income of families with college-age children than in 1967.

NEWS ANALYSIS

Both sides are telling the truth. The stories about the high costs of college are accurate and so are the stories that reported the budget office's finding: "There is no evidence to indicate that the financial burden of sending children to college has been increasing."

"Part of it is a perception problem," said Elizabeth Suchar, director of Financial Aid Services of the College Scholarship Service, discussing the apparent contradiction.

SAVING FOR COLLEGE OFTEN used to be at the top of the list when a family set spending priorities, she said. Today that is not always true. Vacations, a new car or a second home may come first.

"Living expectations are higher," Mrs. Suchar said.

The budget office noted something similar in its report, which was designed to measure the impact of various proposals to help the middle class meet costs for higher education.

"Financial burden is a relative concept," the office said. "What is considered a reasonable financial obligation at one time may be considered an unreasonable financial burden at another time."

RAPID PRICE RISES ALSO have affected the way people perceive saving and spending. Families are more aware than they used to be of the fact that inflation may erode the value of their savings; what is the point of putting $100 away toward a college education if, even with interest, it will be worth less than $100 by the time you need it?

Other factors that come into play include personal involvement. The problem is worse because it is happening to YOU. It is YOUR family that must make the sacrifices, not your neighbor's or your brother-in-law's.

"Those people who have kids ready for college today, didn't 10 years ago," noted David Longanecker of the Congressional Budget Office.

THE LARGE NUMBERS INVOLVED in paying the bills for college today can make the situation look worse than it really is — the perception problem again.

The budget office found, for example, that the median income of families with 18- to 24-year-old dependents was $7,923 in 1967. Total student costs — tuition, living expenses, books, etc. — for a year at a private college averaged $2,205. By 1976, the median income of the same types of families was $14,164 and student costs were $3,896. Income went up 78.8 percent; costs rose 76.7 percent.

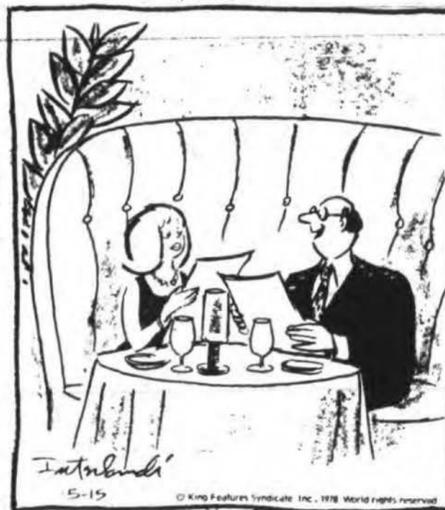

People do not usually think in percentages, however. They think in dollars. When you multiply the annual college cost figure by four you get $8,820 for someone starting school in 1967 and $15,584 for someone beginning in 1976. The latter figure — nearly $16,000 — sounds much worse than the former — about $9,000 — even if it does not represent as big a proportion of your income. But statistics still do not tell the whole truth.

THE CONGRESSIONAL BUDGET Office used median income of American families with college-age children for its study. Median income means half the people earned more and half less.

But median income and middle class are not necessarily the same thing. The budget office itself describes middle income as $15,000 to $25,000 a year. The Labor Department said recently that the average urban family of four in the United States must earn $17,106 a year to maintain a middle-level standard of living. And a lot of people with incomes of more than $25,000 think of themselves as middle class, making ends meet but having nothing left over for the extras.

The statistics also leave a lot of things unmeasured. For example: How many of those families making the median income had two wage-earners? Other surveys indicate there are far more two-income families today than there were

HOW TO TELL WHEN YOUR CAR NEEDS A TUNE-UP

AND HOW TO BE SURE YOU DON'T PAY FOR MORE SERVICE THAN YOU NEED.

Remember the old Spring and Fall tune-ups? There was a time when GM cars needed tune-ups every year. But that was a long time ago. Since 1973, we've been building cars that don't need anywhere near as much routine maintenance as they used to.

Now, a lot of people are getting tune-ups they don't really need. Probably out of habit.

Break the habit, and you'll save yourself some money. The maintenance schedule and the owner's manual your GM dealer gives you with your new GM car will tell you exactly what scheduled maintenance is required and when. Some of the newer schedules may surprise you.

For example, spark plugs used to have to be changed every 12,000 miles. Now it's every 22,500 or 30,000, depending on which new GM car you bought. For most drivers that means changing plugs every two years instead of every year.

When you bought your first car, you probably changed oil every 1,000 miles. We upped it to 6,000 a few years ago; and now it's 7,500 on all new GM cars except diesels.

Or take distributor points and condensers. They never need replacing with GM's new high energy ignition system. It doesn't have any points or condensers.

If you do have trouble with your car, just fix what needs fixing. When you take your car in for service, tell the mechanic exactly what's happening. If it's hard to start "hot," but starts okay when it's "cold," say so. If it doesn't perform the way you expected, describe just how and where it doesn't live up to your expectations. Then it'll be easier for the mechanic to pinpoint what's wrong, and he won't have to make unnecessary repairs. That can save you time and money.

Some things have to be watched more carefully, depending on how and where you drive your car. For example, if you do a lot of driving on dry, dusty roads, you may need to change the air cleaner and oil filter more often than the maintenance schedule indicates. Remember, the maintenance schedule that comes with your car is based on average driving conditions.

If you have an older car that still needs an annual tune-up, what should it include? There are some basic things to be checked: spark plugs, points, condensers, idling speed, and drive belts.

It can't hurt to check the air cleaner and fuel filter, tire pressure, and brake fluid, either. And when you do take your car in for a tune-up, don't be shy. Find out exactly what you need and what you're getting for your money.

We're trying to make GM cars easier and more economical to service. We've been able to stretch out the maintenance intervals for new GM cars, which should reduce the cost of routine maintenance, and we're working on engineering improvements that should reduce the amount of required maintenance even further. We want to be sure our cars perform well for their entire lifetime, without costing you a lot of time and money in maintenance. That's better for you and better for us.

10 years ago, but the budget office report does not include any breakdown.

AND WHAT ABOUT TAXES? From 1967 to 1976, the Consumer Price Index — which does not measure taxes — went up 70.5 percent. A study by the non-profit Tax Foundation Inc., based on the median income for all families showed that federal taxes went up 141 percent in the same period. And, says the Tax Foundation, state and local taxes are rising even faster than federal levies. The statistics do not tell you what proportion of a family's disposable or after-tax income the cost of a year in college represents.

The Congressional Budget Office said the downturn in college enrollment rates for middle-class students during the early 1970s may have been a result of non-economic factors like the end of the draft and the temporary impact of the recession. The office said, therefore, that the middle class is not being squeezed out of higher education by rising costs.

That does not mean people are not suffering, said Longanecker of the budget office. They may be. And even if the problem is no worse than it was 10 years ago, "that's not to say it wasn't bad then."

Global War Causes Studied

By PHILIP ROSMARIN

Two UC Irvine historians may be making a contribution to peace by studying war.

The professors, Keith Nelson and Spencer Olin, have written a book about the causes of global conflict. They say their book can help people understand and avoid it.

"Why War?: Ideology, Theory and History" is scheduled for publication in January by the University of California Press.

It focuses on World Wars I and II, but the authors say it examines, the principles it examines, and the principles it examines, can be applied to any war.

Because the book examines both causes and effects of war, their collaboration was a happy one: Olin's specialty is in periods before the great wars; Nelson is a specialist in post-war affairs.

Their original intention was to examine everything that had been written about war, but they found the task so massive — so much had been written already about war — that they focused on the causes of war in general, and upon the two world wars in particular.

"It's a theoretical guidebook," Olin said, "a preliminary step in permitting people to develop a better explanation for the phenomenon of war."

Nelson suggests that historians have erred in viewing wars as separate entities. They are related by their causes, according to Nelson, and because of that, generalities about war can be developed that may help predict — or prevent — them.

By studying what led nations to war in past times, statesmen today could recognize similar conditions.

Both men urge historians and statesmen to pay more attention to each other in the hope of preventing further war.

History, they say, is not made in a vacuum. It does little good for historians to study war if statesmen are busy blundering in isolation toward the next one.

Purchase Probed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government wants to find out who paid for a $104,000 suburban Washington home belonging to Ray Schoessling, the Teamsters union's secretary-treasurer. The Labor Department confirmed that it is looking into the possible misuse of funds in the deal.

State's Growth Continues

SACRAMENTO (AP) — More people are still coming to California than leaving it, and they've raised the population to 22,077,000, the State Finance Department estimates.

The report said California's population rose by 359,000 or 1.65 percent during 1977, only half caused by an excess of births over deaths. The birth rate was 16 per 1,000, twice that of the death rate.

ABOUT 180,000 more persons came into the state than left it.

State population expert W. Nelson Rasmussen said about 500,000 Californians left during 1977, mostly people over 45 who moved to other Western states. Tax and motor vehicle records indicate that Oregon led the list of destinations.

BUT 680,000 people moved into the state during the year, he said. They included 80,000 from foreign countries, half from Mexico.

THE FAR East, notably the Philippines, Korea and Taiwan, contributed most of the others.

Rasmussen said most of the immigrants from other states came from the northeast section of the country. Also, most were under 44.

THE CITY of Los Angeles grew by about 25,000 last year to 2,787,900.

The other top 10 largest cities and their populations Jan. 1 were: San Diego 797,400, San Francisco 666,500, San Jose 587,700, Long Beach 344,200, Oakland 327,800, Sacramento 241,500, Anaheim 204,800, Fresno 194,800 and Santa Ana 183,900.

Of the 10 largest, Fresno was the fastest growing. It picked up nearly 7,000, or 3.89 percent. Anaheim grew by 2.4 percent and San Jose by 2.4 percent.

The 10 fastest growing cities over 50,000 population were:

Escondido 57,100 up 6.33 percent, Thousand Oaks 64,800 up 5.88, Ontario 70,600 up 5.85, Bakersfield 88,100 up 5.64, Oceanside 88,200 up 5.58, Santa Rosa 73,500 up 5.15, Modesto 94,500 up 5.12, El Cajon 67,800 up 4.79, Oxnard 96,400 up 4.44, and Fresno 194,800 up 3.89.

The fastest growing cities under 50,000 were: Merced 1,860 up 91.75 percent, Suisun City 7,050 up 44.76, Clayton 3,310 up 24.91, Morgan Hill 14,950 up 22.54, Rancho Mirage 6,250 up 19.82, Robert Park 18,000 up 18.42, Irvine 45,950 up 17.32, San Marcos 14,000 up 17.12, Woodland 10,700 up 15.99, and Desert Hot Springs 4,210 up 15.86.

SUBURBAN growth in Southern California was still pushing from Orange into Riverside and San Bernardino counties. San Bernardino grew 4.5 percent last year to 756,800. Riverside added 4.3 percent to 590,200. Orange County added only 2.2 percent to 1,808,200.

Other fast-growing counties were Sonoma, up 3.6 percent; Solano and Ventura, up 3.4 percent, and San Diego, up 2.9 percent.

Some Architects Spoiled by Sparing the Rod?

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

NEW YORK—A bankrupt railroad has argued before the U.S. Supreme Court that it should be paid off in revenue losses for not building a 53-story office tower on top of Grand Central Terminal.

Well, in lieu of a horse whipping, that might be one solution. Pay them to go away and not inflict another architectural monstrosity on the Big Apple, which already is rotten to the core with glazey high rise vulgarities protruding from its innards.

STILL, DESPITE THE RULING of the European Court of Human Rights in Strasbourg, there is a lot to be said for horse whipping, especially of architects, developers and people who run railroads.

More than 100,000 people turned out for the public whipping of a couple of rapists in Pakistan recently. New York hasn't seen that kind of a crowd since a gifted gelding named Kelso was unfailingly rewarded the $2 supporters of better horse breeding at Aqueduct nearly two decades ago. Even the incomparable Pele in his farewell address to the soccer ball didn't pack that many into the Jersey Meadows.

Imagine how many cheering New Yorkers would turn up at the Big "A" or Meadowlands for a horse whipping of the architects who dreamed up those ugly tower blocks on New Jersey Palisades, of the developers who inflicted Co-op City on the Bronx and whichever rail executive is responsible for the chronic "equipment trouble" on Conrail's 7:03 out of Brewster?

REVIVING HORSE WHIPPING AS public retribution for bureaucratic bungling or corporate greed came along too late to save Penn Station, an architectural gem modeled after the Roman Baths of Caracalla, but it's not too late to flagellate in behalf of Grand Central Terminal, which has been designated a historic landmark by the city, as time-honored and immovable as most of its trains.

And let's not fret over the breast-beating those Eurocrats in Strasbourg did over the behind beatings administered with birch rods for noble reasons by the noble pedagogues on the Isle of Man.

I have been to the Isle of Man, and it is a most civilized place. Except for random beats of hard rock from transistor radios permanently attached to their earlobes, its urchins pursue civilized ways, which may or may not be attributed to some remedial birching or even head start (behind start?) birching now and then.

NOT LONG AGO in New York City, a 12-year-old boy threw a 93-year-old grandmother to her death down a tenement staircase in a robbery attempt.

It is alleged here that if more 93-year-old grandmothers were permitted the disciplinary application of a 40-inch birch rod, the length favored by the Manx educators, on 12-year-old muggers, fewer of the former would wind up D.O.A. at the bottom of a stairwell and fewer of the latter would be inconvenienced in Family Court for an hour or so.

By a 6-1 vote, the seers sitting unbirched on the European Court of Human Rights in Strasbourg condemned the school master's rod on the Isle of Man as a "degrading punishment that must be banned." Unlike the walrus for the oysters, the Strasbourg judges weep profusely for the woes of this world without sorting out the larger ones: genocide in Cambodia, Idi Amin's butchery, birchings on the Isle of Man, it's all in a day's docket.

UNFORTUNATELY, MORE BRITISH politicians will rend their garments on the floor of the House of Commons over the Manx spankings than the Asian and African slaughters.

Agreed, birching is degrading. That's the whole idea. What punishment isn't meant to be degrading? Having a kid stand in the corner or waltz off to the principal's office isn't meant to be a minor variant of a canonization.

I have been to Strasbourg, on the Ill River, no less, which bodes something. In addition to its Eurocrats, it is also famous for its overstuffed geese and ducks.

THE GEESSE ARE STUFFED to death to provide pate de fois gras (liverwurst to the masses) for the cocktail hour delectation of bureaucrats, architects, railroad magnates and the like in Strasbourg, London, Paris, New York and wherever serious consideration is given to overstuffed penitents proposing to inflict more towering atrocities left in our cities.

It beats me why a good birching isn't in order for the poulticers and provisioners who make a profit out of stuffing the craws of harmless geese and ducks?

The poultry involved find it very degrading. A public hiding of the pate stuffers would give Strasbourg another tourist attraction besides its airy graceful one steeple Gothic cathedral and the pouter pigeons in striped pants on the lawn of the Court of Human Rights.

Singer 'Accountable' For Product's Claim

WASHINGTON (AP) — Singers Pat Boone and daughter Debby Boone come into millions of homes via a television commercial for an acne preparation.

"I'm one of the lucky ones. I never had much of a skin problem," says Pat Boone. "But I do have four daughters. We've tried a lot of skin cleansers and medications around our house and nothing ever really seemed to work, did it, Deb?"

PAT BOONE

"No, not until my sisters and I met a Beverly Hills doctor and got some real help through a product she developed called Acne-Statim," Debby Boone responds.

That commercial and similar magazine advertisements have inspired a case that may discourage other celebrities from making future product endorsements.

AS PAT BOONE was agreeing to be financially accountable for the product's claims, the Federal Trade Commission, in a companion action, said the product does not cure acne and initiated legal steps that could potentially result in Boone contributing to restitution to users of the product.

Many show business and sports personalities make such endorsements, which often net them high fees, because some advertisers feel a customer will believe a famous person more readily than a stranger.

Albert H. Kramer, director of the FTC's bureau of consumer protection, said a highly paid celebrity may profit from a false advertisement just as much as the manufacturer. Therefore, he said, it is not unreasonable to obligate the star to ascertain the truthfulness of the claims he is being paid to make and to share in restitution if the advertising is proven false.

KRAMER SAID THE agreement with Boone "while not a binding legal precedent, stands for the principle that an endorser must verify the claims made about the advertised product before the first commercial goes on the air or appears in print, or else risk FTC action."

The FTC complaint against the manufacturer said "there was no reasonable basis for claims that Acne-Statim will cure acne and result in skin free of acne blemishes or for various other performance claims."

The product is made by Karr Preventive Medical Products Inc. of Beverly Hills, whose president, Dr. Atida H. Karr, was referred to by Debby Boone in the television commercial.

7 Yacht Clubs Hold Opening Rites

By ALMON LOCKABEY
Daily Pilot Boating Writer

Seven local yacht clubs which have been open for business all year adhered to the tradition of eastern yacht clubs — which are usually closed during the winter season — and held colorful and noisy "opening day" ceremonies Saturday.

Average attendance at all six clubs was more than 300 members and guests who took advantage of the warm summer weather to partake of food and drink and traipse aboard full-dress yachts drawn up alongside docks for inspection and open house.

Observing opening day rites were Voyagers Yacht Club, South Shore Yacht Club, Shark Island Yacht Club, Lido Isle Yacht Club, Bahia Corinthian Yacht Club and Balboa Yacht Club.

FOLLOWING THE ceremonies in midafternoon most of the clubs participated in a colorful boat parade throughout the harbor.

Most significant opening day was for Lido Isle Yacht Club which was celebrating its 50th anniversary. Commodore Dave Tingler greeted a host of members and guests, presided over the traditional flag-raising rite and introduced the club's flag officers. (A picture on the Lido ceremonies will appear Tuesday.)

Other flag officers of LIYC are John Franco, vice commodore; Edwin Koll, rear commodore; Lorenzo Miller, fleet captain, and William Caine, port captain.

Voyagers Yacht Club led off the day's festivities with its traditional breakfast meeting at the clubhouse, 2616-A Newport Blvd. VYC is one of the oldest clubs in the area, founded in 1947. Commodore Ron Deacon presided over the flag-raising and introduced flag officers Bill Rohrs, vice commodore; Howard Stevens, rear commodore; David Palmer, fleet captain, and Ralph Tomblin, port captain.

SHARK ISLAND Yacht Club, the area's only exclusively power boat club, also had something special to celebrate with the enlargement of the clubhouse at 1099 Bayside Drive. SIYC commodore is Gordon Burrows. Other flag officers are Russell Keslinke, vice commodore; James Bridges, rear commodore; Bill Hickman, fleet captain, and Harrison Breyer, port captain.

Commodore Dennis Burnett conducted the ceremonies at South Shore Yacht Club, 2527 W. Coast Highway. Other flag officers participating were Howard Anderson, vice commodore; John Belcher, rear commodore; Glenn Reed, fleet captain, and Dan Nordstrom, port captain.

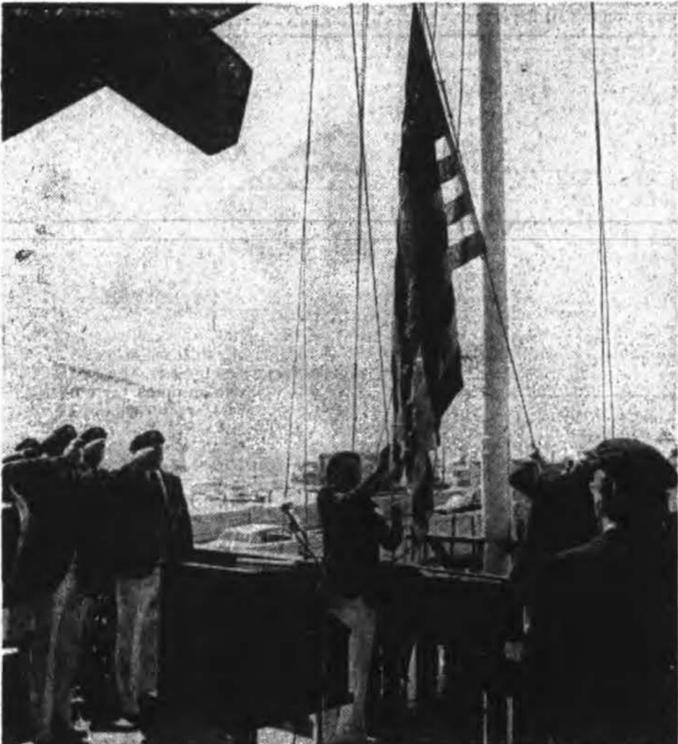

BAHIA CORINTHIAN Yacht Club celebrated its 20th anniversary at the clubhouse, 1601 Bayside Drive, with commodore Hobart Denny presiding. Other flag officers were Walter Schroeder, vice commodore; Robert Hartman, rear commodore; Jack Larson, fleet captain, and Llewellyn Copp, port captain.

For Balboa Yacht Club, second oldest in the Harbor Area, it was the 54th opening day. Commodore Bill Carlson greeted members and guests at the clubhouse, 1801 Bayside Drive, introducing flag officers and a long line of staff commodores. Flag officers are Bob Williamson, vice commodore; Phil Glasgow, rear commodore; Bob Wheeler, fleet captain, and Dick Lawrence, port captain.

Observing opening day on Sunday was Capistrano Bay Yacht Club with Commodore Richard Hougham conducting the ceremonies. Other flag officers at Capo BYC are Bill Murray, vice commodore; Carlos Williams, rear commodore; Pete Meade, fleet captain, and Pat Drake, port captain.

Adapter Checks Fusing Errors

DEAR PAT: I know it's important not to replace fuses with ones of a higher amperage, but my family doesn't. My son replaced a 15-amp with a 30-amp fuse the other day, and I'm still worrying about the fire hazard he caused. Is there any way to solve this problem other than locking up the fuses and always changing them myself?

T.N., Mission Viejo
Your solution is to buy S-type fuses. They come with adapter rings which are inserted into the sockets so they can't be removed or displaced easily. The S-type fuse then screws into the adapter ring. When the fuse blows out, anyone replacing it unscrews it in normal fashion. The ring stays in place, making it impossible for any fuse of the wrong size to be used.

Diet Gimmicks Lighten Wallets

DEAR PAT: My daughter wants to try every new weight reduction gimmick on the market. Do you know of any consumer information that might discourage her from thinking she can buy a miracle product that will actually make her lose weight?

F.B., San Juan Capistrano
"Health Consciousness: A Consumer Guide to Health Products and Medical Quackery" might help. Aimed at consumers who are interested in avoiding the pitfalls of false but alluring claims by manufacturers of weight reducing plans and equipment, this pamphlet provides common sense guidelines for weight reduction, physical fitness and "medical self defense." For a free copy, contact the Fraud Division, Sacramento County District Attorney's Office, 981 G St., Sacramento, 95814.

Long Wait for Replacement Check

DEAR PAT: What happens when a tax refund check is stolen or forged? This subject came up the other day at work, and we'd all like to know what a person should do if this happens, and how long it would take to get a replacement.

L.S., Fountain Valley
If a tax refund check has been stolen or its endorsement forged and the check has been cashed, the check claims division of the Treasury Department will send the taxpayer photo copies of both the check and its endorsement, together with a questionnaire that must be completed, signed and returned to the check claims division immediately. No further investigation will be made and no action taken to replace the check unless the form is returned. This is because the taxpayer often is able to identify the individual who endorsed the check as someone against whom he does not wish to take legal action. After the questionnaire is returned, the check claims division will send the taxpayer a notice assigning a file number to the investigation. Subsequent investigations are made by the Secret Service and/or the Postal Service.

Time involved depends on the workload of the investigating office. A replacement check is not issued until the investigation has been completed. This may take as long as 18 months, according to the IRS. The address for inquiries is Treasurer of the United States, Check Claims Division, 401 14th St. S.W., Washington, D.C. 20226.

Phone Soliciting Rules Toughened

DEAR PAT: I understand there are some new regulations regarding telephone sales calls. What are they?

S.D., Costa Mesa
Junk phone calls were stopped recently by the state Public Utilities Commission after the Department of Consumer Affairs petitioned the PUC to issue regulations to: prohibit commercial solicitation telephone calls, or so-called "junk" calls; require makers of the calls to pay costs of any survey to determine who wants to receive these calls; require any machine-made call to begin with a statement that it is recorded; and, permit only automated dialing devices which do not tie up the receiver's line after the party hangs up.

Park Passport Address Changed

DEAR READERS: Cleveland National Forest's Trabuco Ranger District Office (34-Civic Center Plaza, Santa Ana) has moved from Room 926 to Room 526. This office issues free "Golden Age" Passports to U.S. citizens, aged 62 or older, who are permanent residents.

Personal application with proof of age is required for the passport which entitles the holder to free lifetime admission to all national parks, monuments and recreational areas. Holders also receive a 50 percent discount on federal use fees and facilities such as parking and camping permits.

Registration Safe, DMV Says

DEAR PAT: I've heard that a person's car registration can be suspended if he falls behind in payment of a court judgment. Is this true?

No. State law has prohibited this since Jan. 1, 1975. AB 4085 eliminates the authority of the Department of Motor Vehicles to suspend the vehicle registration of any judgment debtor against whom there is an unsatisfied judgment or who has failed to pay any installment of a judgment.

Sterilization Most Used

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sterilization is the most widely used contraceptive method in the world, with 80 million couples relying on it to prevent births, the population information program of George Washington University Medical Center said.

The center said in a report that 55 million couples use oral contraceptives, 35 million rely on condoms and 15 million use intra-uterine devices.

Martin, Munson in Hassle

BILLY MARTIN

CHICAGO (AP) — The battling New York Yankees are at it again.

On the airplane ride here from Kansas City, where the team lost two of three games, manager Billy Martin and catcher Thurman Munson engaged in a shouting match and each had to be restrained, it was reported today by the New York Daily News.

According to The News, Martin and Munson began shouting at each other after Munson made several trips through the aisle of the airplane. The Yankee manager asked Munson, "What's your argument? I don't have an argument with you. If you have an argument with me, you can meet me in my room."

"I don't care about those other guys," answered Munson. "I play as hard as I can."

It was then that coach Elston Howard restrained Munson and Martin was held back by administrative assistant Bill Kane, according to The News.

Martin was livid after the Yankees lost a sloppy 10-9 game to the Royals Sunday. He said he was benching regular center fielder Mickey Rivers and wanted to trade pitcher Ken Holtzman.

"Rivers will sit down in Chicago and in Cleveland and in Toronto and longer than that," said Martin. "Paul Blair will be in center field

"I want a guy out there who tries. Rivers says his leg hurts but until he tells me he can play, he'll sit on the bench."

About Holtzman, Martin said, "I'm going to get rid of him within a week. He's gone, you can bet on it."

The Yankees endured a much-publicized inner turmoil last season, and emotions reached a zenith when Martin and outfielder Reggie Jackson engaged in a shouting match during a national television game.

The in-fighting didn't appear to hinder New York's performance on the field, however, as the bickering club won the World Series over a team with more overtly harmonious relationships, the Los Angeles Dodgers.

During the winter Munson expressed desires to be traded, and he has also had contract squabbles with the organization.

Martin's job was reported to be in jeopardy last season but through it all, the Yankees keep winning. New York is 17-12 going into today's game at Chicago, and trails division-leading Boston by three games.

Dodgers' Park Home To Kingman

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Of the six teams that Dave Kingman has played for in his big league career, none has been the Los Angeles Dodgers. Yet the Chicago Cubs' slugging left-fielder says, "I consider Dodger Stadium my home."

It's little wonder he feels that way.

Kingman blasted three home runs Sunday, the third one in the top of the 15th inning, to lead Chicago to a 10-7 victory over Los Angeles. Kingman drove in eight of the Cubs' 10 runs.

"I can recall a lot of times coming here to end a long drought," said the rangy Kingman, who also hit three home runs and drove in eight runs at Dodger Stadium in 1976 while a member of the New York Mets.

The loss, the Dodgers' sixth in their last eight games, dropped them two games behind San Francisco in the National League West.

Los Angeles begins a three-game series against Pittsburgh tonight, sending Burt Hooton, 2-4, against the Pirates' Bert Blyleven, 2-3.

Kingman, who entered Sunday's game with a .221 batting average, hit a two-run homer in the sixth inning off Doug Rau, then dramatically tied the game with two outs in the top of the ninth with a two-run shot off Mike Garman that nearly left the stadium on the fly. He won the game with his three-run homer in the 15th off Rick Rhoden, the sixth Los Angeles pitcher.

"Unbelievable," said Los Angeles manager Tom Lasorda. "That's as tough a loss for me as I've ever been involved in. To have a two-run lead in the ninth inning and then..."

Reggie Smith's two-run single in the bottom of the eighth had given the Dodgers an apparent victory. Ivan De Jesus led off the ninth inning with a walk, but the next two Cubs were retired. Kingman then thundered his second homer of the day, a shot that struck the wall enclosing the stadium. It was estimated at 430 feet.

"That time, I was thinking home run," said Kingman. "But in the 15th, all I was trying for

DENVER'S BOBBY JONES SCORES OVER JACK SIKMA.

Thompson Regains Touch, Confidence

DENVER (AP) — Some minor adjustments, such as a switch in defensive assignments, and one major change, an effort to set picks for superstar David Thompson, helped extend the Denver Nuggets' season at least another game.

With Thompson regaining his shooting touch and his confidence to score 35 points, the Nuggets held off a second-half Seattle comeback and beat the SuperSonics, 123-114, Sunday in their National Basketball Association semifinal playoff series.

The triumph reduced the Sonics' lead to 3-2 in the best-of-seven Western Conference finals. Game six will be played

Wednesday night in Seattle. Game seven, if necessary, would be played Friday night in Denver.

The winner of the series meets the Washington Bullets in the championship round, which begins Sunday at the home of the Western champion.

"Now the monkey's on their back," said Thompson after the Nuggets bounced back from three straight defeats to stay alive in the series. "Seattle has to win up there. I'm sure they don't want to come back here for the seventh game. We can go up there Wednesday and be loose, just play our game."

Denver coach Larry Brown said Thompson, who had kept busy guarding Seattle guard Dennis Johnson in previous games, switched to the less-active Gus Williams because "we didn't want David working so hard at both ends of the floor."

bizarre turn of events at the 14th and 15th holes that ended a tense duel in the Texas sun.

"The turning point was the 14th," said Trevino, who was nursing a two-shot lead, flirting with a bogey five and looking at Heard's second shot resting 10 feet from the cup.

"Everything was up for grabs until the 14th hole," he said. "It looked like Heard was going to get even and instead he went three down."

Trevino holed out from 30 feet and Heard, the 1972 Colonial champion, missed his 10-footer.

A double bogey at the par-4 15th ended the Heard threat. "I looked at the board when I stepped on the 16th tee and I had a six-shot lead," Trevino marveled. "That was it. I put my marbles away... I bogeyed the 17th but by then it was all over."

What does one think about with a six-stroke lead?

LOS GATOS—Orange Coast College captured the overall team title of the Western Sprints crew championships Sunday with three gold and two silver medals while UC Irvine won its first-ever individual title with a victory in the junior varsity eight race.

UCI finished second to British Columbia in the varsity eight race with a time of 6:06.89.

"We were even for about 750 meters," coach Bob Newman of UCI said. "But they have a powerful crew and gradually eased away."

Angel Pitcher Wanted Shutout

CLEVELAND (AP) — California Angels' pitcher Frank Tanana says he's mad at himself for not making his team's 4-3 defeat of the Cleveland Indians a shutout.

The win for the California pitcher was his sixth of the season. The game was a shutout until the Indians rallied for three runs in the ninth inning.

"I've always claimed that I am a better pitcher in tight ball games," Tanana said. "I seem to lose my concentration and drive when I have a big lead. I'm upset at myself for not going all the way."

"IF THE SCORE had been 1-0, Tanana would have shut them out," said California manager Dave Garcia. "If he gets a lot of runs, he lets up a little. That's no knock on him, he's just that kind of pitcher."

The Indians' loss snapped a four-game winning streak and dropped the Tribe six games behind the Boston Red Sox and the Detroit Tigers in the American League East.

Five of the last six Cleveland victories came on late-inning rallies that erased deficits.

The Angels got their first run Sunday in the fourth inning when rookie Carney Lansford led off with a triple and Terry Humphrey followed with a sacrifice fly.

California put the game away with three runs in the eighth on three walks, a hit batsman, an error and Tony Solaita's two-run single.

TED COX OPENED the Indians' ninth with a single and Larvell Blanks forced him at second. Ron Pruitt singled to put runners at first and second and Paul Dade followed with a run-scoring single.

Tom Verzyer then forced Dade at second. At that point, Paul Hartzell replaced Tanana. Jim Norris, batting for Buddy Bell, then singled, making the score 4-2, and Andre Thornton followed with another RBI single before Mike Vail hit a soft liner to second baseman Bobby Grich to end the game.

Surf's Up, 5-2

OAKLAND—Three quick first half scores gave the California Surf an early lead and two second half mistakes by the host Oakland Stompers added two more goals as the Anaheim-based Surf won a 5-2 North American Soccer League game at the Oakland-Alameda Coliseum Sunday before 8,724.

The victory for the Surf gives them a 7-3 record in NASL play this season and 57 points in the standings. This is 13 ahead of runnerup San Diego.

J.O. Tobin, Slew Look Impressive

Seattle Slew is back and J.O. Tobin gave notice that he is ready for a showdown in the Hollywood Gold Cup...

Seattle Slew came back to the races at Aqueduct Racetrack in New York Sunday in what amounted to a public workout...

"He's back, Slew is back," an excited owner Mickey Taylor said. Concerning the future, he added: "We'll run in the Met Mile at Belmont Park May 29 and we've talked about racing three more times this spring and pointing for the Marlboro Handicap in the fall. We'll take the summer off."

It would appear from this statement that Slew will not come to Hollypark in July.

Meanwhile, J. O. Tobin was an easy winner in Sunday's Californian before 36,251 at Hollypark with Steve Cauthen aboard.

Trainer Laz Barrera said: "If Seattle Slew wants to come to California, we'll be ready for him. If not, maybe we'll meet him later in the year in New York."

J. O. Tobin holds the only win over Seattle Slew, a victory in the Swaps Stakes at Hollypark last July.

Cardenal's parents spent some time in Mexico visiting their other son and came here several weeks ago. Their visa expires July 2.

The Phillies treated the Cardenal family to dinner last Sunday, and on Mother's Day, the club presented Mrs. Cardenal with some jewelry and flowers.

Playoffs Resume Area Nines in Action Tuesday

Huntington Beach High's Oilers, the Mater Dei Monarchs and the Mission Viejo Diablos return to CIF baseball playoff action Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

The Huntington Beach Oilers of coach Don Terranova, Sunset League tri-champions and 4-2 conquerors of Long Beach Millikan Saturday afternoon, won a coin flip and are the host team to St. Francis (La Canada) High. Site for the game is Golden West College.

Mater Dei is at home to Covina High in 4-A action. Covina advanced by virtue of an 8-4 victory over 1977 CIF 4-A champion San Geronimo (San Bernardino) High.

In 3-A play Mission Viejo, which provided the upset of the day in the opening round with a 4-1 shocker over No. 1 seeded Glendale Hoover, draws a home assignment and tangles with Upland High at Saddleback College.

Coach Ron Drake's Diablos, who trailed off with five losses in their last eight South Coast League games, will be coming back with Ed McCann on the mound, says Drake.

McCann, a senior right-hander, was especially sharp against Hoover, throwing 85 strikes amidst 104 pitches and Drake feels he'll have had enough rest by game time.

Should McCann require aid, available are right-handers Bob Mackell and Jeff Newton. Upland's Highlanders entered the CIF playoffs as the San Antonio's No. 2 representative and have a 12-9-1 overall record after edging North High (Riverside) Friday night, 1-0.

Terranova has Scott Gudmundson again ready for action after the senior right-hander handcuffed Millikan on six hits. Gudmundson racked up his eighth victory in 10 decisions. Also available for pitching duty is Rico Thompson.

Jim Thomas continued his hitting barrage, collecting his 30th safety of the campaign Saturday, a school record.

The Oilers, 13-9 for the season, rely on the batting of Thomas, Joe Gies, Shawn Cisco, Steve Lawrence and catcher Shawn Gill.

Gill shared player of the year laurels with Fountain Valley's Mike Empting and Edison's Wayne Justl on selections from the circuit coaches.

Mater Dei coach Bob Ickes says he'll start Vic Martin again on the mound, with Greg Brown and sophomore Joe Maduena available.

Steve Yeager was on second base after a double and Bill Russell hit a sharp grounder to Kelleher's right. He smothered the ball, preventing Yeager from scoring. Smith then popped up for the third out.

"They made some great plays," said Lasorda. Asked if he considered walking Kingman in the 15th, Lasorda snapped, "He was hitting .221 when he came in here. Right? I wouldn't walk Babe Ruth in that situation."

Rhoden, 4-2, suffered the first loss of his career to Chicago. Paul Putschel, 1-0, the seventh Chicago pitcher, earned the win.

Business Blames Carter's Policy

By JOHN CUNIFF, AP Business Analyst. 'What we do in our pricing is not as important as a $60 billion budget deficit,' said C. William 'Bill' Verity Jr., chairman of Arco Inc., in response to a question on inflation.

Verity permitted no misunderstanding in his view: steel pricing was not a cause of inflation but a response to it. The source of inflation, he indicated, was in Washington. In the budget deficit.

HIS PRESIDENT, HARRY Holiday Jr., agreed in a conversation earlier, he had commented on the dangers of running such a deficit while the country was at the peak of its most recent economic expansion.

Holiday blamed the situation on President Carter and said he looked beyond to the day when a more decisive president would recognize that a deficit of such magnitude can only force prices higher.

'We have to balance the budget,' Verity said again to the small audience of news people, gathered by Arco for a traditional annual dinner and presentation about steel and the economy's future.

'WASHINGTON'S SOLUTION' To everything is to spend more,' he continued, after explaining that inflation is the top economic concern of his company. 'The people will rebel,' he said.

Asked how he would correct it, Verity suggested a moratorium on new spending and a 'good look' at existing commitments 'until we can get inflation out of the system.'

These were not isolated views but rather indicative of much business commentary. Business tends to view the budget as the inflation engine and itself as the hapless victim tied to the railroad tracks.

The view suggests that public support for the president's anti-inflation efforts may be only a practical measure, not in camaraderie with the administration against a common evil.

The evil, business is saying over and over again, is the deficit. To blame business, they say, is to blame the victim for not breaking the shackles and getting off the railroad tracks.

NATION'S BUSINESS, A MONTHLY magazine published by the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, tested the thinking of its readers and then produced an article for its current issue that begins:

'President Carter's plan to curb inflation with voluntary wage and price constraints gets a no vote from readers.'

'Many are blunt in saying the government should look to its own deficit spending actions as a big first step in halting inflation.'

In a report just issued, Merrill Lynch Economics concedes that some of the increasing inflation pressures are typical of the latter stages of most expansions. But the chief culprit, it says, is government action.

With such forecasts circulating, you can draw your own conclusions of business attitudes toward an invitation from Washington to participate in a voluntary program of inflation restraints.

Tension on the Line

'Acting Producer' Cracks Sex Barrier

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — In the early 1950s, Nancy Malone, then, 16, acted in CBS' "I Remember Mama," produced by Doris Quinlan. Now, she's in a CBS movie, "Like Mother, Like Me," also produced by a woman.
 And it's not hard for actress Malone to consult with the producer. She is the producer of this as-yet scheduled film starring Linda Lavin and young Kristy McNichol.
 Miss Malone is among the handful of women who in recent years have cracked the traditional old-boy network of actual and apprentice moguls making television shows here.

HER ACTING credits go from "Kraft Theater" to "77 Sunset Strip." Her producer credits include "Bionic Woman," an NBC kiddie special; two NBC movies, two CBS comedies, and now "Mother."
 A red-haired, articulate New Yorker of Irish-American heritage, she says she began the transition from acting to producing five years ago because of gripes she made earlier to a pal, Tom Moore.
 He ran ABC at the time. Her gripes at the time concerned the dreadful or demeaning roles usually offered women on TV.

"I was generally mouthing off," she grinned. "And he said,

"Well, I wish you'd get off my back about all this and do something about it." I said, "I'm an actress, what can I do?"

SHE FOUND OUT when he left ABC to head Tomorrow Entertainment, the firm that did "Miss Jane Pittman." He offered Miss Malone a job as a story analyst and the chance to learn the producing business.

She said she gave it much thought, as the weekly pay was $200, not the $1,500 she could get for just one series episode. But she took a big breath, then the Tomorrow job, and commenced learning.

Since then, in addition to producing, she's been director of TV development and later vice president for comedy at 20th Century-Fox, which she left last July to resume independent production work.

She agrees with a theory that the recent emphasis on TV films with strong roles for women — such as "Mother" — indicates the networks suddenly realize that women usually rule the TV set at home.

"SURE," SHE SAID, "I don't know why they weren't aware of that, because so much advertising is geared toward the women in the family."

Driving Away From 'Hartman'

By JAY SHARBUTT
 MALIBU (AP)—It was a lovely day outside Louise Lasser's beach home. The blue Pacific rumbled rhythmically, the air was crisp and salty. An occasional seagull cried by, seeking free eats.
 But inside, Miss Lasser, the spacy heroine of "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman," sat chain-smoking. She seemed tired, wan, and generally resembled a new, nervous writer. Which is what she is.

On May 22, NBC airs her first script, "Just Me and You." It's a film whose auburn-haired author, off TV work since the spring of 1977, makes her return to the tube. She'll co-star with Charles Grodin.

THE FLICK IS a kind of road romance. Two strangers, a daft damsel and an uptight computer salesman, team up for one of those "drivers-wanted" car trips from New York to Los Angeles.

Miss Lasser said she finished the script's first draft in 1976, ceased scribbling when she began "Hartman," then did the hard part — rewriting — after leaving her syndicated series.

The New York-born actress has formally studied emoting, but never writing. She was married four years, though, to a pretty fair scribe, Woody Allen, of Oscar-winning "Annie Hall" fame.

A VETERAN OF five Allen films, from "Bananas" to "Everything You Always Wanted to Know About Sex," Miss Lasser was asked what prompted her to try her hand at the scripting dodge.

"It just seems a nice thing to do when you're alone," she said. "I did it in the morning, when there's not too much noise." How'd the first script take shape? She shrugged and smiled.

"I don't know," she said in her soft, little-girl's voice. "I just did it as an exercise first. I'd get up every morning, and I wrote two characters, what one would say to the other."

"EVEN, I DON'T feel like writing this morning." Then, "Why don't you feel like writing this morning?"

Movie's Cast On 'Squares'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Eight of the stars of "The Cheap Detective" will appear on six "Hollywood Squares" on NBC during the week of June 19.

It is the first time the entire guest panel has been composed of stars from one film. Joining regular Paul Lynde will be Eileen Brennan, Sid Caesar, Dom DeLuise, Louise Fletcher, Fernando Lamas, Marsha Mason, Vic Tayback and Abe Vigoda.

Peter Falk stars in the title role of the film written by Neil Simon. It opens June 23.

Such could lead to a fitting for a canvas shawl. In her case, it led to a two-character movie on which filming began in January. The final product was printed just three days before her interview.

The previous night, there'd been a private screening for various Hollywood folk. Unlike most new authors, Miss Lasser didn't lurk in the wings, trying to eavesdrop on reactions to the two-hour movie.

ONE REASON IS that she didn't want to intimidate anyone. And, she says, "I was too scared. I saw it earlier and the biggest shock I saw on the screen was: 'Written by Louise Lasser.'"

Miss L., who has a three-picture NBC deal, seemed pleased when told one screener, a woman who works for Norman

Lear and is regarded as a tough, honest critic-in-mufti, lavishly praised the movie.

The interview moved on to other matters. But the rookie wordsmith, during a lull in the chat, proved she is no exception among new authors who can't wait for the reviews.

"Tell me," Louise Lasser, the writer, said shyly. "What did she say about the movie, again?"

Another 'Lord' Gets His Big Break

Rapping With Ryan

Actor Ryan O'Neal takes a break in the filming of his new movie, "Oliver's Story," to talk with youngsters watching on a New York street.

By BOB THOMAS
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Five years ago Columbia Pictures released a modest street-gang movie, "The Lords of Flatbush." While the film made little dent on the market, its talent had: Martin Scorsese, Sylvester Stallone, Henry Winkler, Susan Blakely.

Now it's Perry King's turn. Not that he has been ignored; he is one of Hollywood's busiest actors. But he hasn't yet made the impact of his fellow workers from "Lords."

"A Different Story" could make the change. The title tells it: A couple of gays, male and female, share a house as a matter of convenience, meanwhile pursuing their own sexual persuasions. The two fall in love, get married and have a baby — but do they live happily ever after? That's the crux of the film.

THE AVCO EMBASSY release could have been aimed at the exploitation market. Fortunately, Henry Olek's script avoids cheap shots, and the work of first-time director Paul Aron is tasteful and touching. Gay or straight, the acting of Meg Foster and Perry King is totally convincing.

King, 29, has a blond, Arrow collar-ad handsomeness that may have been a drawback in a film world that favors off-beat looks. His striking appearance may have overshadowed his acting skill, developed at Yale, Juilliard and in repertory.

James Mason, with whom he appeared in "Mandigo," once told me, "Perry King is the best all-round actor to appear in years."

If "A Different Story" does make it for King, it will be a triumph of perseverance. Alan Belkin, producer for Petersen Co., a TV commercial house, planned to star King and Susan Sarandon in the film two years ago.

"ALAN HAD LINED UP financing from a Lebanese businessman," King recalled. "We had rehearsed the script, and two weeks before the start of filming, the Lebanese civil war broke out. Our banker headed for the hills and we never heard from him again."

"Next Alan lined up tax-shelter money. Two days before the picture was to start, Senator Long came out against tax-shelter financing of movies, claiming it helped the porno market. Our investors vanished, and the pornos went untouched."

Belkin then enlisted hundreds of investors to supply small amounts, adding up to the film's $1 million cost. King had already been paid his fee for the aborted film; the producer gave him a small percentage of the profits for sticking with the project. Sarandon was not available, so Meg Foster ("Washington: Behind Closed Doors") was cast as the woman.

"A DIFFERENT STORY" seems certain to evoke attacks from the gay community, since the two characters turn to heterosexual love.

"I suppose the picture will be criticized by the radical gays who will argue that it should be radically pro-gay," observed King, who is married and who has a 7-year-old daughter. "But 'A Different Story' is not about homosexuality; it's about a couple of people who try to find a life together."

"I never thought of Albert as being no longer gay when he marries Stella. He's simply a gentle, loving person who doesn't judge anyone and doesn't want to be judged. The message of the picture is: Be true to yourself, be true to whatever you are."

KING HAS APPEARED in "The Wild Party," "Lipstick," Andy Warhol's "Bad," "The Choirboys," as well as the TV miniseries "Captains and Kings" and "Aspen." He has mixed feelings about superstardom.

"If it doesn't happen, it doesn't matter," said the actor. "I'll still be able to find work. The one advantage would be having greater choice of roles; producers are always looking for names."

HIS TURN NOW Perry King

Women's Musical Staged

By WILLIAM GLOVER

NEW YORK (AP) — The songs and patter of "My Mother Was a Fortune Teller" amiably concern that eternally fascinating topic, the feminine mystique at middle-age.

Phyllis Newman, a chic and somewhat brassy veteran of many musicals and television appearances, is all by herself on stage in the show at off-Broadway's Hudson Guild Theater.

Apparently to assure proper handling of the subject, nine technicians, an unusually large number, get program credit for creative collaboration.

THE MELODIES DELIVERED by Miss Newman with relentless enthusiasm, as she ranges about a bedroom setting, include familiar pieces by Richard Rodgers, Jule Styne, Jerry Bock and less known items by others. For the title number by John Clifton, Miss Newman herself provided the lyrics.

To string them all together, an unspecified someone has provided Miss Newman with monologues that involve her in conversations with an invisible 13-year-old daughter, with others and sometimes the audience directly.

All relate to search for self-identity, the itch for an extra-marital affair "when roughly 30 or 40" and rebellion against male dominance.

PARTICULAR GEMS of wisdom are "yes, you can be ashamed of your parents and love them," and "don't wish too hard for what you want or you might get it and find you don't want it."

It's all mildly diverting and the best item is a medley ironically assembled from such songs as "My Lord and Master" and "The Girl That I Marry," any one of which could chafe a liberator.

Playwright Arthur Laurents is listed as the director; Craig Anderson, production supervision; Herbert Kaplan, musical direction; John Clifton, musical continuity; Elizabeth Keen, John Clifton, Philipp Jung, set; Bill Kellard, costumes; Toni Goldin, lighting designs; Fran Albus, multi-media.

Weaving portrays story from ancient Indian lore. Each item in picture is symbolic.

Alberto Vasquez

Everyone weaves in his village, but he is 'Numero Uno.' The Mexican craftsman is known for his traditional, symbolic hangings.

By JUDITH OLSON
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

When Alberto Vasquez sets out to color his yarn for weaving he doesn't just run down to the nearest drugstore for a package of dye.

Preparing each of the seven major colors is a painstaking process which can take months of preparation.

Vasquez, the primary weaver in the little Mexican village of Teotitlan del Valle in the state of Oaxaca, uses vegetable dyes made of leaves, plants, insects and shells.

The indigo dye, which is one of Vasquez' favorites (the other is red), must be planned for use many weeks ahead. The indigo grass is grown to a height of about one meter by farmers in another village then harvested. It is next put into a large tank with water to soak for two weeks.

After the first soaking period it is stirred daily for three months so all the water evaporates to leave a paste.

THE PASTE is dried, cut into large blocks and sold to weavers such as Vasquez, who then must prepare it for their own use in a month-long process.

"After all this time you submerge the yarn for just two minutes and the color is fast," Vasquez said.

He accompanied a collection of his works to Orange Coast College, where they were on display during Cinco de Mayo festivities last week.

Vasquez, a beaming 35-year-old man of Indian heritage, spoke with the aid of OCC professor Eustace Rojas, who interpreted for the interview.

The weaver's primary language is Zapotec but he is fluent in Spanish and speaks a little English as well.

He began weaving 23 years ago when he was 13 and barely tall enough to reach the loom. He still is short but manages to turn out one wall hanging in approximately 28 days.

of his village are weavers, including his family (brothers, uncles, cousins) of 18. Vasquez' wife Soledad helps him by carding, washing and dyeing the wool.

He uses traditional designs, some of which are inspired by codices illustrating ancient Indian mythology and folklore.

Each design is made only once and Vasquez draws a pattern to follow. The colorful hangings depict the gods of the mountains, wind, sun, water and walking. They are symbolic and rich in legend.

Vasquez also makes copies of paintings by such modern artists as Miro, Matisse and Picasso and likes these because they offer him opportunities to learn new techniques.

"I was asked by people from the Metropolitan Museum of Art to make these," he said.

The codices are favored because they "inspire me for new designs. I like to bring out their beauty," he added.

VASQUEZ USED to do much of the preparation of the wool but he now spends his time exclusively weaving and teaching his family. He begins his day at 8 a.m. and weaves six hours a day, which is a full day, and admits that "there are no Saturdays or Sundays for me."

The finished products are sold at his home, where he does all of his work and displays it. Vasquez has had exhibits in Colorado, Northern California and Mexico City and is negotiating for a trip to Germany.

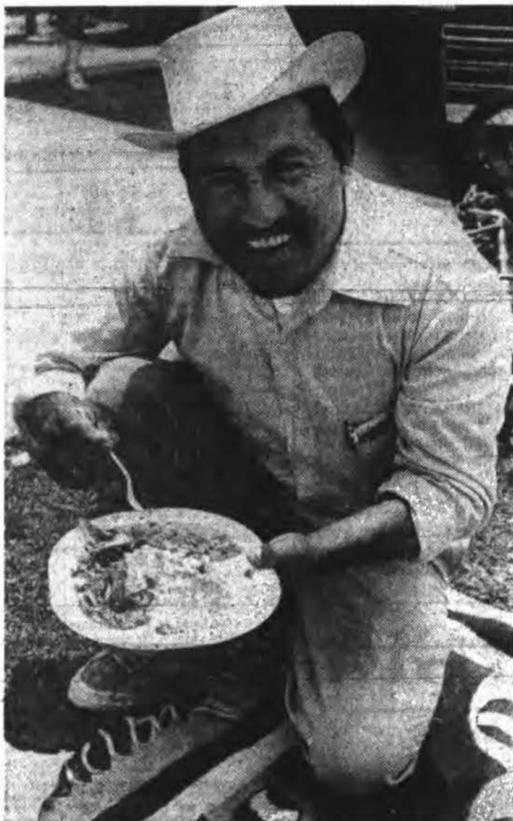

But the average shopper must make a long trek south to find his work. After flying to Mexico City, one changes planes for Oaxaca, 250 miles away, and then catches a local bus for the hour-long ride to his village.

Since there are no hotels in Teotitlan del Valle, visitors must be sure they are ready by the time the last bus leaves at 6 p.m. for Oaxaca.

"There are only houses there," Vasquez says of his Natural dyes are used for hangings.

Video Tape Recorders

You can tape the 'Tonight' show while you sleep, then watch Johnny with your morning coffee.

By DENNIS McLELLAN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Roger Davis likes Humphrey Bogart, W.C. Fields and the Marx Brothers.

In fact, he likes Bogart, Fields and the brothers so much that he spent close to $1,000 on a new electronic gadget that allows him to watch these movie greats whenever the mood strikes him.

Last January Davis joined the burgeoning number of Americans who own video tape recorders, perhaps the biggest boon to television since the advent of color.

VTRs, as they are dubbed, are the size of standard audio tape recorders. At the push of a button, they can record hours of television programs on paperback-sized cassettes.

Since he bought his unit, Davis has spent about $400 on tapes. In addition to old movies he records "specials and, once in a while, late-night concerts and 'Saturday Night Live'."

THE ABILITY to record favorite programs—whether or not you're in front of the TV set or even while watching another channel—is the motivation behind the demand for VTRs, whose sales skyrocketed last year.

An improved model with a four-hour tape capacity and lower prices—thanks to an aggressively-competitive market—made last Christmas the biggest-selling period yet.

And despite a pending lawsuit questioning the legality of recording copyrighted movies from television, industry officials predict sales of more than 750,000 this year.

Help for Arthritics

The UCI Arthritis Clinic has two main concerns: rehabilitation of victims and relief for the painful effects of the disease.

By MARCIA FORSBERG
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

The patient is being taught to get up out of a chair. She scoots to the edge, then, with palms open and wrists down, she pushes on the sides of the seat.

Taking three warm-up rocks forward, the patient finally stands up after gaining momentum.

The pain is excruciating — she has arthritis, a condition that can disable, cripple and make simple tasks such as lifting a cup of coffee a major feat.

Cases of arthritis can be mild or severe, and can occur at any age. The impact of the disease is enormous — it claims a new victim every 52 seconds, and there are more than 168,000 people suffering from it in Orange County.

JUST WHAT IS the disease? The word arthritis literally means inflammation of a joint. However, it is also extended to include a broader range of illnesses which cause aching and pain in joints and connective tissues throughout the body, not all of them necessarily involving inflammation, according to the Arthritis Foundation.

Because it can cause such suffering (both physical and mental) the Arthritis Clinic at the University of California Irvine Medical Center has two main concerns — rehabilitation of arthritis victims and working to relieve the painful effects of the disease.

"The purpose of the clinic is to provide comprehensive care other than surgical to persons with musculoskeletal diseases," says Dr. Michael Reynolds, acting chief of rheumatology.

"THOSE DISEASES are significant not because they cause people to die, but because they cause disability and they limit a person's ability to do things.

"Rehabilitation in the broad sense is just medical treatment intended to restore the ability to function as much as possible, so nothing other than rehabilitation treatment would be appropriate for a disease such as arthritis," he explains.

Surgery, he adds, is also a form of rehabilitation.

Purposes of treatment can be categorized as "restoring function, relieving pain or preventing progression of the disease," he says.

"THE EMPHASIS in the clinic is on how well the patient is able to do things. Everything from combing hair to having sex is involved," says Dr. Reynolds.

The UCI Clinic has occupational and physical therapists and a social worker on staff to assist patients with rheumatoid diseases.

Currently, between 20 and 30 patients visit the clinics which are held weekly on Wednesday and Thursday afternoons.

"We're concerned with people's ability to carry out skills used in daily living," says Mary Ellen Harkins, occupational therapist. "We help them adapt to arthritis problems that affect their basic living."

Miss Harkins and Debbie Winston, physical therapist at the clinic, both make "functional assessments" of patients to determine how well they are able to perform daily activities.

PHYSICAL THERAPY involves "looking for how well they walk, get up and down from bed, what kind of strength and flexibility they have in their joints, how comfortable they are moving around. Physical therapy is concerned with physical mobility and with the patient achieving a maximum level of independence," explains Ms. Winston.

"We design an exercise program for the patient because it's important to maintain flexibility and muscle strength so joints have free movement and are supported," she adds.

'Some days they feel good, some days they don't. It's often hard on the family.'

Self-ranging exercises "take a patient through his full range of motion. We take each joint through movements that stretch them out," she says.

Other exercises are isometrics (for strengthening) and swimming — "In the water, you're buoyant and you don't have the forces of gravity aggravating joint inflammation," says Ms. Winston.

Besides planning a program of therapeutic exercise, Ms. Winston "checks to see if the patient needs assistive devices, such as a cane, crutches, walker. We look at the feet and prescribe shoe modifications."

OCCUPATIONAL therapy, says Miss Harkins, involves basic functional skills — "those things to make daily living and self care skills easier, such as feeding, dressing, bathing, hygiene, grooming."

She evaluates the patient's need for "adaptive devices like a button hook, if the patient's hands are stiff and it's difficult to manipulate a button. Also, things like extended handles for combs and brushes, because it's hard to do things like that if you can only raise sells video tape recorders in Costa Mesa—also envisions a bright future for VTRs. "It will be like audio tape recorders. I would imagine, but probably even more popular than those."

"America does appear to be on the threshold of a video revolution: VTRs are changing the habits of thousands of television viewers who for years have felt chained to their TV sets."

"TONIGHT SHOW" FANS, for example, can now set the automatic timer on their VTR and go to bed at a reasonable hour. The next day, or month for that matter, they can pick a time of their choice to watch Johnny.

How many times have family squabbles erupted over who is going to watch whose favorite program? The Merv vs. "Charlie's Angels" syndrome is a thing of the past. Now, while one show is being watched, the VTR can record the other program off another channel for later viewing.

They're ideal for a person whose occupation is such that he can't be home during prime viewing time, notes salesman Ed Burgess.

And for those all-too-frequent nights when viewing is anything but prime, Davis will, for example, "put movies on and watch them again and again."

WHEN THE FIRST home-use video tape recorder, the Sony Betamax, came out about three years ago at a cost of several thousand dollars, it was considered an expensive toy for the person who had everything.

Now four Japanese electronic manufacturers are supplying machines to about a dozen U.S. television firms. And the resulting flurry of competition has lowered prices to a somewhat more reasonable $800-$1,000. It also spurred refinements in quality and taping capability. The recorders are no longer a luxury item of the rich, says Corona del Mar salesman Jim Pettey.

"Now it's people who are really just avid TV watchers," he says, "and $800 to $900 is within the ability of most people."

While there is a price war on now, Pettey predicts the next step will be a "features" war. Among the refinements are reverse and forward slow motion and stop action.

MOST PEOPLE BUY blank tapes (they range from $14 to $26, depending on length). But prerecorded tapes, mostly educational and sporting events, also are available.

Twentieth Century-Fox is the first major studio to offer a catalogue of its films, at a cost of $50-$70 per film.

One salesman noted that prerecorded X-rated movies advertised in magazines also are going over big. "Almost everyone who comes in here says, 'Can I get some more?'"

Yet another facet of the VTR craze are black and white cameras, priced at about $300, which allow for making instant home movies. Color cameras, which require bright spotlights, still sell at a restrictively high price of $1,500-$3,000.

And while two movie studios are battling in court over use of their copyrighted material, VTRs reportedly also have ruffled the advertising industry.

One VTR feature allows for the elimination of that bane of television viewing: the commercial.

A mere flick of the pause button wipes out any trace of meowing cats, acid indigestion, constipation and waxy yellow build-up.

... Weaver

home town, where he was born.

TOURISTS FIND a rich blend of crafts in Oaxaca and the surrounding area, which has been declared a national monument because of its abundance of arts.

Oaxaca is famous for its pottery and there are the weavers of Vasquez' village, embroiderers and other artists nearby.

Many of the artists, like Vasquez, are following the steps of many generations in their crafts and arts. Vasquez' own ancestors all were weavers, though there is no work left from their productive days. "They sold it or used it," he said.

Weaving now is a male domain exclusively. "In pre-Columbian times women wove but since the Spanish arrived it has been a man's job. It is a tiring job for women," Vasquez said, pointing to his abdomen, where the pressure is felt from the loom.

THERE IS PLENTY to do for the women, however. Wool is purchased about every four months from shepherds then cleaned up and prepared for the loom in a long process which includes many washings in the stream.

First, all the thorns and grasses are removed, then the wool is washed, combed, carded, washed again, threaded, washed, dyed, washed a fourth time and finally ready for use.

Each of the tints has an interesting story. Red, Vasquez' most important color, comes from an aphid-like insect called the cochinitilla.

Because of its intricate manufacturing process, the magenta yarn is as valuable to Vasquez as gold thread. He begins by cultivating cactus in his home during the rainy season. After the rains the cactus is planted outside with the cochinitilla on them.

AS THE COCHINITILLA begin to multiply they are put on many fronds then harvested with corn husks. The "crop" is killed by exposure to the sun then dried for two weeks.

The cochinitilla are ground, combined with dried lemon and water and boiled for three hours all together. "Then we are ready to dye the yarn," Vasquez explained.

Other ingredients for the tints are moss, walnut shells or husks and certain tree leaves.

Vasquez, who admits to enjoying being in Southern California with its hustle and bustle and astounding roads, is content to stay in his work and give him new inspiration each day.

He dabbles in oil painting and plays a form of prehistorical handball for relaxation.

He has never been tempted to quit his loom, he said, but there is one other kind of work he has enjoyed. "I used to like to be a barber," he conceded with a grin.

... Arthritis

your arm to here," she says, demonstrating by lifting her arm to chin level. Patient education plays a large part in both physical and occupational therapy, Ms. Winston and Miss Harkins agree.

In addition to providing the patient and his or her family with information on the disease process, they also offer emotional support.

"THEY ARE COPING with constant pain," says Miss Harkins. "They are weak, and might all of a sudden find themselves dependent on someone else. We listen and try to let them know that they are not alone."

"Some days they feel good, some days they don't. It's often hard on the family. For example, one day a patient might be able to clean the house and cook dinner, then the next day she's in bed. Families often think the patient is faking." A new organization, the UCI Arthritic Self Help Group, is designed "to provide an avenue for learning to live with arthritis through shared experiences and solutions," according to David Javits, a third year medical student who has set up the group.

Its objectives are educational, recreational and social, says Ms. Winston. "It's an opportunity for arthritis and their families to get together and discuss problems. A lot of people have a lot of questions, and if they don't feel comfortable asking a doctor, they can talk to each other," she says.

The meetings, open to the public, are held at 7 p.m. the second Monday of the month in the Green Room of the UCI Medical Center cafeteria.

To Get You Have to Give

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am so ticked off by "Honest Sister's Franksness" that I had to write. I agree, some men may be lousy lovers but plenty of women are lousy lovers, too. I'm no stud but I've had considerable bedroom experience and more than half of my partners could be declared legally dead.

It is very difficult (if not impossible) for a man to be a satisfactory lover when a woman shows no sign of life. Good lovemaking has to be mutual. In order to get something you have to give something. This is so basic I can't understand why every woman in the world doesn't know it and act accordingly. Explain it to me, will you, Annie? —SITKA SENTINEL

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a 20-year-old junior at Boston University. When I was 17, I fell in love with a boy 19. (He's a senior at Tufts.) I may still be in love but I doubt it.

ORANGE COUNTY FIREMEN TEND INJURED MAN AS OTHERS WORK TO FREE PASSENGER Roof of Station Wagon Was Crushed to Within Inches of Car Body in Irvine Accident

Two HB Men Crushed

Irvine Car Plunge Injures Three Others

Two Huntington Beach men died Sunday after their station wagon plunged over a 40-foot cliff into an Irvine ravine.

Both were crushed. Three other passengers—two Irvine men and the 10-year-old son of one of the killed men—were hospitalized with serious injuries.

Police said driver Mark Alan Karneke, 23, of 16722 Blanton St., was dead at the scene. The front-seat passenger, Donald A. Rick, 43, of 8021 Sail Circle, was pronounced dead at 7:22 p.m. at Costa Mesa Memorial Hospital, about an hour after the accident.

Police identified the injured passengers, all of whom were riding in the back seat when the car struck head-first on the bottom of the ravine, as:

- Dean Richard Rick, 10, son of Donald Rick.
- Dennis Wayne De Mars, 21, of 21 Songsparrow.
- Mike Shelton, 19, of 4262 Sandburg Way.

All sustained head and face cuts, and possible internal injuries; they were taken to Saddleback Community Hospital. Dean Rick was transferred to Huntington Intercommunity Hospital. All were reported in stable condition.

Police said De Mars ran from the open field of the crash, near Turtle Rock and Starcrest drives, about three-quarters of a mile to a residence to telephone for help.

Police said the men had been working on the car during the day, and, according to some of the passengers' statements, were test-driving the car through an open field on Irvine Company land.

Police said they were crossing the field at 40 miles per hour, driving into the sun, when Karneke, who apparently did not see it, drove over the edge of the ravine.

HB Man Captured After 2-hour Siege

A Huntington Beach man who police allege shot at a neighbor Sunday night, then barricaded himself in his home with an arsenal of weapons and ammunition for more than two hours, remained jailed today.

Nick Urban, 59, of 15591 Toway Lane, held the police's SWAT team and a force of regular uniformed officers at bay but no shots were exchanged during the tense standoff.

He was arrested and booked on suspicion of assault with a deadly weapon in connection with the earlier shooting incident which reportedly climaxed 30 minutes of talk with the victim, Justin Scott Cate. Bail was set at $10,000.

Police said they were informed that Urban had been depressed over his son's own personal difficulties and had been drinking before the episode.

Investigators said they were hampered severely at times by neighbors who refused to realize the seriousness of the situation after being ordered to evacuate their homes.

Desk officers using criss-cross telephone directories contacted residents all along the block ordering them to leave the area

Governor in Newport

Brown Continues Prop. 13 Attack

By JACKIE HYMAN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Governor Edmund Brown Jr. renewed his attack on Proposition 13 today in a speech to the California Peace Officers Association convention in Newport Beach.

Brown, speaking at the Newporter Inn, referred to the controversial Jarvis-Gann property tax cut bill as causing "a serious economic dislocation. UCLA predicted an unemployment rate of 10.1 percent if it passes."

He said that in addition to cutting off $7 billion in property taxes, Prop. 13 would return to the federal government at least $2.7 billion the state now receives in revenue sharing.

The governor expressed his support for Proposition 8 which, coupled with the Behr Bill, is the Legislature's alternative tax relief proposal.

"The Behr bill is a cut, squeeze and trim bill," Brown said. "Our legislative analyst says that he doesn't think Ronald Reagan would have dared to propose this bill."

Brown expressed several criticisms of Prop. 13 saying it would cause uncertainty, cutbacks in vital services and eventually an unfair distribution of the property tax burden.

Citing a provision that raises taxes when property is sold under Prop. 13 Brown said "in five years more than half the people would be paying more under Prop. 13 than under Prop. 8."

Judge Delays Move On Waddill Retrial

By TOM BARLEY
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Orange County Superior Court Judge H. Warren Knight refused today to order a new trial for Dr. William Baxter Waddill until he has had a chance to talk to the judge who presided over the first trial.

Judge Knight told Deputy District Attorney Robert Chatterton today that he will not grant the prosecutor's request for a second trial until he confers with Judge James K. Turner.

Judge Turner, who declared a mistrial in the first trial after the jury deadlocked, is on vacation.

Judge Knight said he will talk to Turner when he returns this week and then announce his decision June 2.

"There are many sensitive issues involved in this trial," Judge Knight said from the bench. "I want to give this case some very careful consideration and I need some background from Judge Turner."

Defense attorneys Malbour Watson and Charles Weedman said they are ready for a second trial if that is what Judge Knight decides and they will again defend Waddill.

Waddill, 42, of Huntington Harbour, is accused of strangling a newborn baby girl in the Westminster Community Hospital nursery on March 2, 1977.

The prosecution has alleged that he killed the infant when he realized that his attempt 12 hours earlier to abort the 18-year-old mother by injecting a saline solution into her had failed.

Waddill commented today that he is "bitterly disappointed" about Chatterton's determination to retry the case.

"But I'm not surprised," he said. "This seems to have become a very personal thing with the prosecutor and he's determined to punish me one way or the other."

Waddill clarified the comment by explaining that the first trial had cost him $500,000. He said he would raise the same amount of money for a second trial, if necessary, "but I don't know where I'm going to find it all yet."

"It's a shame that this decision should have been taken by the prosecution," attorney Watson said. "Dr. Waddill should not have been forced to undergo a second trial after the (See WADDILL, Page A2)

FV Boy Hurt In Fall From Ortega Bridge

A 16-year-old Fountain Valley boy was reported in good condition at Fountain Valley Community Hospital today after tumbling off an Ortega Highway bridge and plunging 60 feet onto rocks Friday.

A hospital spokesman said David Currier, 9535 Smoke Tree Ave., suffered multiple facial lacerations, fractured vertebrae and a possible concussion in the fall.

Fire officials said Friday the youth apparently went to a pond near Ortega Highway to swim with friends. He reportedly climbed up to the bridge but no one could explain why or how he fell onto the rocks.

Young Currier was transported to the hospital from the scene in a Marine Corps Search and Rescue helicopter.

It's Her Day Baby Born at Valley Park

A large Mother's Day crowd got an idea of what Mother's Day is all about Sunday when an unidentified woman was visited by the stork at Fountain Valley's Mile Square Park.

A WITNESS SAID the mother went into the restroom of the large recreational facility near Euclid Street and apparently went into labor pains.

Fountain Valley paramedics were summoned and the baby was apparently born without incident while a crowd of 1,000 concerned citizens milled about.

The mother and baby, both unidentified at press time, were treated at Fountain Valley Community Hospital and transferred to UCI Medical Center. Their condition is not known.

A CITY SPOKESMAN said the stork arrived at about 4:30 p.m. with an eight-pound baby. Another witness said the baby was a boy.

Paramedics who were summoned to the birth were out of town today and not available to shed light on the blessed event.

Realty Offices Torched

A fire set by arsonists who first ransacked two adjoining suites caused an estimated $8,000 damage to a Huntington Beach office building owned by actor Telly Savalas, fire department spokesmen reported today.

The blaze wrecked two units in the structure at 20902 Brookhurst St., occupied by real estate saleswoman Zoe Mathies, investigators said.

Firemen were dispatched to a report of smoke in the building Saturday at 7:16 a.m. but when they arrived they found flames raging inside the realty office.

"We had to tear out one whole wall," Fire Inspector Jim Merrill said today, in detailing how firemen brought the blaze under control.

He said it was clearly an arson-set fire based on evidence found at the scene which is still being studied today.

Inspector Merrill said the offices had been completely ransacked with business papers strewn about and then apparently ignited with matches.

Investigators declined to speculate whether it was an attempt to cover up a burglary or possibly a vengeful act against Miss Mathies for some unknown reason.

No possible motive for the latter could be furnished by the victim, Inspector Merrill said.

The modern, California architecture-style professional building houses a number of other firms but apparently none of them were broken into, investigators said.

Inspector Merrill confirmed the building is owned by Savalas, who gained fame as television's "Kojak."

jury made it clear in the first trial that they could not accept the prosecution's case."

Defense attorneys raised the possibility today that the second trial, if ordered, may be held in some other county on the grounds that heavy publicity stemming from the first trial may prevent Dr. Waddill from getting a fair second trial.

"It's something that Dr. Watson and Dr. Waddill and I must talk about," Weedman said. "I think we'll have an answer by June 2."

HOWARD HUGHES' BIZARRE PRIVATE LIFE SURFACES After His Death, a Glimpse Into His Lifestyle

Hughes Viewed Trial Airs Recluse's Habits

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — On April 5, 1976, a frail, emaciated man was carried aboard a chartered jet at Acapulco, Mexico, for what was to become the last of his countless flights, a desperate journey to a hospital at Houston, Texas.

The man died on that flight, setting off a complex series of legal entanglements that may not be resolved for years — but which have given the public a glimpse at the sometimes bizarre and always private life of one of the world's most secretive men.

TWO YEARS AFTER THE death of Howard Robard Hughes — and as final arguments begin Tuesday in a trial to determine the validity of an alleged Hughes will — it is clear that much of the speculation about the multimillionaire recluse may indeed have been correct.

The few who saw Hughes in his last years say he did wander about half-naked, he was scared to death of germs and, yes, he did have shoulder-length hair and long fingernails.

Speculation about Hughes was fanned by his years in the public eye, as playboy pilot, escort to Hollywood starlets, aircraft designer and builder of a corporate empire. All that was before the mid-1950s, when Hughes became a virtual hermit.

FOR THE TWO DECADES UNTIL his death at 70, Hughes occupied the top floors or penthouses of resort hotels — in Las Vegas, Acapulco, Nassau, London, Vancouver, and Managua, Nicaragua. The few who gained access to him had to pass through elaborate security systems.

A half-dozen Hughes aides testified during the six-month trial aimed at determining if he actually wrote the so-called Mormon Will. Final arguments in the case, which pits several Hughes relatives against a former associate, Noah Dietrich, are expected to last all week. An estate conservatively valued at about $168 million is at stake.

Of the aides who testified, John Holmes, said to be one of the closest to Hughes, gave perhaps the most revealing testimony.

NO MATTER WHAT CITY, Hughes' hotel rooms were similar and his days in them followed a dreary routine. Hughes took to his bed around the mid-1960s, Holmes said, and never again walked a city street.

"I do remember that he stayed pretty much in bed," Holmes said of Hughes' life in Bel Air in the early 1960s. "To my knowledge, I can't remember once that I saw him dressed in street clothes."

"When he was not in bed, where did he spend his time," Holmes was asked by an attorney.

"The bathroom," Holmes replied. "It was either the bed or the bathroom."

At another point, Holmes reluctantly admitted that Hughes frequently walked around nude.

"Occasionally, we would see him in that state of dress or undress," he said.

Another aide, LeVar Myler, testified that frequently Hughes wore only pajama tops, if anything.

Myler said Hughes had a beard that went to the center of his chest, shoulder-length hair and inch-long fingernails.

At another point, Holmes testified that two days before Hughes' death he saw the industrialist inject himself with a drug that was probably codeine. Since that testimony, Holmes and one of Hughes' physicians have been indicted by a federal grand jury on charges they illegally supplied Hughes with codeine for nearly 20 years.

HUGHES NEVER SAW HIS WIFE, actress Jean Peters, or any other woman the last 10 years of his life, Holmes testified.

He said bottles of Hughes' urine sometimes were kept in the millionaire's penthouse.

Another former Hughes employee, Ron Kistler, said in a deposition that Hughes' rumored aversion to germs was true. He said Hughes shunned contact with people and handled everything with tissue paper.

"Mr. Hughes touched very few doorknobs in my memory," he said.

While Hughes was living in California, Kistler said, his aides were forbidden to go to Nevada because Hughes feared it was "hot" from nuclear testing.

KISTLER, WHO WROTE A BOOK about his experiences titled "I Caught Flies For Howard Hughes," said that Hughes once spent four hours cleaning a telephone receiver with tissues. At another time, he said in his deposition, Hughes spent 26 hours in a bathroom.

While living at the Beverly Hills Hotel, Kistler said, Hughes "worked as hard as possible to keep the bungalow germ free." Yet, he said it was never cleaned in the 18 months Hughes lived there.

Dietrich, who served Hughes for 32 years until he had a falling-out with the industrialist in 1957, testified that Hughes enjoyed political clout and used his money in an attempt to buy power.

He said profits from a Canadian subsidiary of Hughes were channeled back into the United States for political contributions and among those who received part of an estimated $400,000 a year were former presidents Nixon and Johnson.

OTHER TESTIMONY HAS DISCLOSED that Hughes also lobbied intensely to have nuclear testing halted in Nevada.

Despite the stories of Hughes' eccentric lifestyle, he apparently remained in firm control of his empire.

Nevada Gov. Mike O'Callaghan, who visited Hughes in London in 1973 to check rumors he had lost control of his empire, said then that there was "no doubt in that meeting of who was telling who what to do."

O'Callaghan, who still refuses to discuss Hughes' appearance, would say only that Hughes' "eyes were bright that night, he gave me a firm handshake and he seemed to be in firm control of the situation."

16,000 Jam HB Beaches

Summer came down hard on west county beaches Saturday and Sunday as beleaguered lifeguards and state park rangers counted about 160,000 visitors both days.

Vicious rip currents near the Huntington Beach Pier kept city beach lifeguards busy with 302 rescues logged Saturday and 58 Sunday, when attendance was lighter.

Lifeguard Capt. Doug D'Arnall said the worst spot re-

Lifeguards at Bolsa Chica and Huntington state beaches estimated about 50,000 visitors for the two-day period with many rescues and one near-drowning logged.

"We thought we'd lost him, but they brought him back," said Chief Ranger Bill Stalberg, adding that a report identifying the hospitalized swimmer was not immediately available.

Seal Beach lifeguards said they had about 30,000 visitors Saturday and Sunday combined, logging an estimated 50 rescues. They also towed two disabled boats away from the surf.

Sheriff's Harbor Patrol Deputy Richard Lara said activity at Sunset Aquatic Park Sunday was reminiscent of a fleet operation.

"We had a heck of a lot of traffic," he said, noting patrolmen were kept busy towing boats that cruised away with cranky engines that conked out in mid-channel.

said the barricaded suspect kept several guns including a 30.06 rifle with a telescopic sight.

Police established a command post in a nearby home and made repeated attempts to contact Urban but he apparently refused to answer the telephone.

Patrol Lt. John Foster said SWAT Team Officer Patrick Gildea finally made contact with Urban and was largely responsible for coaxing the suspect to surrender.

Urban walked out peacefully, following police orders to keep his hands in the air, at 10:07 p.m. to end the standoff.

Investigators said among other weapons in the house were a .357 Magnum revolver, a .45 caliber automatic pistol, a .44 Magnum pistol, a shotgun, two Winchester 30-30 rifles and the 30.06 rifle.

3,500 Flee Train Crash

NACOGDOCHES, Texas (AP) — About 3,500 persons evacuated when railroad tank cars carrying volatile chemicals derailed returned to their homes in this east Texas town today.

Police said an evacuation order was lifted at midnight Sunday, about eight hours after 16 cars of a 117-car Southern Pacific freight train went off the track.

Eleven of the 16 cars burned following three explosions, and nine were still smoldering today, said Southern Pacific spokesman Joe Bart.

HB Golf Pro New Trustee

NAMED TO SCHOOL POST Huntington Beach's Lake

Brian W. Lake, vice president and general manager of the Seacliff Country Club in Huntington Beach, has been appointed to fill a vacancy on the Huntington Beach Union High School District Board of Trustees.

Lake, who has been the golf professional at Seacliff since 1967, won the unanimous approval of trustees Saturday after he was nominated for the post by a special selection committee.

Lake, who will be 39 Friday, is scheduled to fill a vacancy created when former trustee Don MacAllister was elected to the Huntington Beach City Council in April.

He will be able to participate in school board meetings, but will not be able to vote until June 13.

Lake was described as a compromise choice of the committee which screened a list of 40 applicants.

He was believed to stand the best chance of being accepted by teachers and by the board which has been divided in recent months.

Board President Zita Wessa said today that members of the community "have spoken" through members of the blue-ribbon committee.

"It was an excellent way of choosing a candidate," she said.

He is scheduled to serve the remaining portion of MacAllister's term, which ends next March.

Lake is treasurer of the Southern California Professional Golfers Association and is a member of the Huntington Beach Kiwanis Club.

He said Lake Street and Lake Park in Huntington Beach were named after his grandparents and great-uncles who were pioneers in the city.

San Onofre Building To Resume

Construction was to resume today on the $2.4 billion San Onofre nuclear plant south of San Clemente, after a restraining order issued late Friday banned striking Southern California Edison Company employees from picketing five plant gates.

Elsewhere on the Orange Coast, the strike includes the Edison Company plant in Huntington Beach, where pickets were posted again today.

The San Onofre restraining order was issued in San Diego by U.S. District Judge Leland Nielsen. It will be in effect until May 30, when Nielsen has scheduled a hearing on the matter.

While supervisory personnel have worked 12-hour shifts to keep the power plant running despite the strike by 125 utility workers, strikers picketing gates to the adjacent construction project had halted progress on two more generators.

Striking workers, who belong to Utility Workers Union Local 246, include maintenance, operating, clerical and technical employees at the nuclear plant.

The restraining order limits pickets to those gates used by Edison Company employees and bans them from the five gates used only by construction employees of Bechtel Power Company, which is building two nuclear generators scheduled for completion in 1981.

The strike began last week, after negotiations broke down over proposed changes in work schedules. No resumption of negotiations has been scheduled, David Barron of the Edison Company said today.

Brown Flays Fluor's Letter on Jets

By PHILIP ROSMARIN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Charges by Governor Brown that the Irvine-based Fluor Corp. is meddling in international affairs with its support of the Middle East arms pact proposal brought a response today from J. Robert Fluor, chairman, chief executive and president of the company.

Fluor had authored a letter to company employees, shareholders and vendors urging them to write Congress expressing support for the sale of jet warplanes to Saudi Arabia, Egypt and Israel.

On Sunday, Brown told an audience of 10,000 Jews in San Francisco celebrating the 30th anniversary of Israeli independence, that the Fluor letter was improper.

"It sets a very dangerous precedent," Brown said, "when a California corporation, for its own profit, begins to meddle in the Middle East in a way that could be quite adverse to the interests of this country."

Brown charged that because the letter was sent as a tax-deductible expense, "The people of California are subsidizing Fluor's adventure into foreign policy."

Brown urged Fluor to cancel its mailing campaign, which he said is applying "corporate pressure in an area better left to the president and Congress."

Fluor responded today, "As an American citizen, I am quite certain that I have as much right as Governor Brown to speak on the Middle East arms pact.

"I wrote a letter... with reasons why I thought (Fluor employees and associates) should urge their congressmen to support the sale of D-15s to Saudi Arabia.

"Our legislators are being comprehensively exposed to the opposite point of view.

"Does Governor Brown honestly believe our lawmakers should hear only one side of an issue that so crucially affects the future energy supply of not only the United States, but the free world as well?"

Fluor called the letter "a legitimate corporate expense."

The Fluor Corp., one of the world's largest construction engineering firms, is involved in a $5 billion-plus natural gas conservation project in Saudi (See JETS, Page A2)

Senate's Jet Sale Vote Set

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, after talking with several senators, is predicting that the Senate tonight will refuse to block his plan to sell sophisticated U.S. warplanes to Israel and two Arab neighbors.

The Senate vote is to come after 10 hours of debate that includes a two-hour closed-door meeting of the Senate to discuss classified aspects of the pending sale.

Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., who asked for the closed session, said he wants the lawmakers to discuss the security implications for "the entire Middle East" of the presence in the area of Soviet-backed Cuban troops.

Even if the Senate should vote to kill the sale of planes to Israel, Egypt and Saudi Arabia, the proposal would survive if the House refuses to block the sale, too.

Such proposals are automatically approved unless both the Senate and the House vote to reject the sales.

On the eve of the Senate showdown vote, Carter lobbied his $4.8 billion plane sale proposal with several senators.

Carter also telephoned several senators today. White House press secretary Jody Powell said the calls were made to members of both parties and that Carter stressed to them the "importance he attaches to this vote."

That brought to "a dozen or more" the number of senators Carter has called in recent days, Powell said.

Bandit Hits Irvine Eatery; $200 Taken

A robber who threatened a cashier with a holstered revolver escaped from the Red Onion Restaurant in Irvine Sunday with about $200 cash, police said.

Police said the man entered the restaurant, 18512 MacArthur Blvd., at about 8:25 p.m. and demanded that the woman clean out the cash register and put the money in a paper sack he handed her.

She did and he then sprinted out the front entrance.

The robber was described as 28 to 30, tall and thin, with a mustache, and wearing a light tan jacket and a gold chain around his neck.

2 HB Men Killed In Irvine Collision

Two Huntington Beach men died Sunday after their station wagon plunged over a 40-foot cliff into an Irvine ravine.

Both were crushed. Three other passengers — two Irvine men and the 10-year-old son of one of the killed men — were hospitalized with serious injuries.

Police said driver Mark Alan Karneke, 23, of 16722 Blanton St., was dead at the scene. The front-seat passenger, Donald A. Rick, 43, of 8021 Sail Circle, was pronounced dead at 7:22 p.m. at Costa Mesa Memorial Hospital, about an hour after the accident.

Police identified the injured passengers, all of whom were riding in the back seat when the car struck head-first on the bottom of the ravine, as:

- Dean Richard Rick, 10, son of Donald Rick.
- Dennis Wayne DeMars, 21, of 21 Songsparrow.
- Mike Shelton, 19, of 4262 Sandburg Way.

All sustained head and face cuts, and possible internal injuries; they were taken to Turtle Rock and Starcrest Hospital. Dean Rick was transferred to Huntington Intercommunity Hospital. All were reported in stable condition.

Police said De Mars ran from the open field of the crash, near Turtle Rock and Starcrest drives, about three-quarters of a mile to a residence to telephone for help.

Police said the men had been working on the car during the day, and, according to some of the passengers' statements, were test-driving the car through an open field on Irvine Company land.

Police said they were crossing the field at 40 miles per hour, driving into the sun, when Karneke, who apparently did not see it, drove over the edge of the ravine.

De Mars told police he yelled (See PLUNGE, Page A2)

Governor in Newport

Brown Continues Prop. 13 Attack

Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. renewed his attack on Proposition 13 today in a speech to the California Peace Officers Association convention in Newport Beach.

Brown, speaking at the Newport Inn, referred to the controversial Jarvis-Gann property tax cut bill as causing "a serious economic dislocation. UCLA predicted an unemployment rate of 10.1 percent if it passes."

He said that in addition to cutting off $7 billion in property taxes, Prop. 13 would return to the federal government at least $2.7 billion the state now receives in revenue sharing.

The governor expressed his support for Proposition 8 which, coupled with the Behr Bill, is the Legislature's alternative tax relief proposal.

"The Behr bill is a cut, squeeze and trim bill," Brown said. "Our legislative analyst says that he doesn't think Ronald Reagan would have dared to propose this bill."

Brown expressed several criticisms of Prop. 13 saying it would cause uncertainty, cutbacks in vital services and eventually an unfair distribution of the property tax burden.

Citing a provision that raises taxes when property is sold under Prop. 13 Brown said "in five years more than half the people would be paying more under Prop. 13 than under Prop. 8."

Brown Veto Assailed By Younger

A governor should place "an absolute priority" on strengthening law enforcement, California Attorney General Evelle J. Younger said today in Newport Beach.

Younger, who is seeking the Republican nomination for governor, told the California Peace Officers Association at the Newport Inn that law enforcement deserves a higher priority to the governor than it has had.

Younger did not identify Gov. Edmund Brown Jr., who had finished speaking to the same group only a few minutes before, but his remarks were clearly intended as a criticism of the governor.

"Law enforcement should never again have to undertake the almost impossible task of overriding a governor's veto on a major public law such as the death penalty," Younger said.

Among the steps Younger said a governor should take are to extradite fugitive felons, back passage of laws authorizing electronic eavesdropping and witness immunity, and try to shorten the "seemingly endless rounds of pretrial motions and delays" in criminal cases.

Younger won a round of applause when he said "a governor should appoint (to judgeships (See PRIORITY, Page A2)

Building Resumes At Onofre Plant

Construction was to resume today on the $2.4 billion San Onofre nuclear plant south of San Clemente, after a restraining order issued late Friday banned striking Southern California Edison Company employees from picketing five plant gates.

Elsewhere on the Orange Coast, the strike includes the Edison Company plant in Huntington Beach, where pickets were posted again today.

The San Onofre restraining order was issued in San Diego by U.S. District Judge Leland Nielsen. It will be in effect until May 30, when Nielsen has scheduled a hearing on the matter.

While supervisory personnel have worked 12-hour shifts to keep the power plant running despite the strike by 125 utility workers, strikers picketing gates to the adjacent construction project had halted progress on two more generators.

Striking workers, who belong to Utility Workers Union Local 246, include maintenance, operating, clerical and technical employees at the nuclear plant.

The restraining order limits pickets to those gates used by Edison Company employees and bans them from the five gates used only by construction employees of Bechtel Power Company, which is building two nuclear generators scheduled for completion in 1981.

The strike began last week, after negotiations broke down over proposed changes in work schedules. No resumption of negotiations has been scheduled. David Barron of the Edison Company said today.

Opera Stars Escape Harm

The capacity audience gasped Saturday night as wooden beams and canvas hurtled from the roof during the second act scene of Mozart's "Don Giovanni."

A shouted warning enabled Sherill Milnes and Donald Gramm to leap forward to the footlights.

Two-way TV Helps Greentree Pupils

Second grade students at Greentree School in Irvine swap songs and stories with residents of a L a g u n a Beach nursing home. They show Japanese students what their school looks like and get a look at today's life in Japan in turn.

They take their fellow students on a tour of UC Irvine's biology building and someday may be able to meet people all over the world, face to face.

Television is their magic carpet.

The students in Nancy Wold's class are using videotape equipment to learn about the world around them and to help them see the connections among history, science and reading.

"I think it's important to teach kids how to talk back to their television," Miss Wold said. "To my kids, TV is no longer a one-way project."

The equipment consists of a video tape recorder, a black and white camera and a monitor TV screen, all of which can be operated by the children.

Since September, her students have used the video equipment in ways ranging from personal studies to exchanges with other groups.

Students have filmed tours of the UC Irvine biology department and of fire and police stations, which they share with other students.

Via a two-way television system, they can also listen to a talk on cancer by a UCI professor and responded with questions.

Gunman Gives Up In HB

A Huntington Beach man who police allege shot at a neighbor Sunday night, then barricaded himself in his home with an arsenal of weapons and ammunition for more than two hours, remained jailed today.

Nick Urban, 59, of 15591 Toway Lane, held the police's SWAT team and a force of regular uniformed officers at bay but no shots were exchanged during the tense standoff.

He was arrested and booked on suspicion of assault with a deadly weapon in connection with the earlier shooting incident which reportedly climaxed 30 minutes of talk with the victim, Justin Scott Cate. Bail was set at $10,000.

Police said they were informed that Urban had been depressed over his son's own personal difficulties and had been drinking before the episode.

Investigators said they were hampered severely at times by neighbors who refused to realize the seriousness of the situation after being ordered to evacuate their homes.

Desk officers using criss-cross telephone directories contacted residents all along the block ordering them to leave the area but some refused to believe any danger existed.

One family refused to believe it was really a police officer calling.

Others complied with orders to get out of immediate range of the Urban home, where police said the barricaded suspect kept several guns including a 30.06 rifle with a telescopic sight.

Police established a command post in a nearby home and made repeated attempts to contact Urban but he apparently refused to answer the telephone.

Patrol Lt. John Foster said SWAT Team Officer Patrick Gildea finally made contact with Urban and was largely responsible for coaxing the suspect to surrender.

Urban walked out peacefully, following police orders to keep his hands in the air, at 10:07 p.m. to end the standoff.

Investigators said among other weapons in the house were a .357 Magnum revolver, a .45 caliber automatic pistol, a .44 Magnum pistol, a shotgun, two Winchester 30-30 rifles and the 30.06 rifle.

Candidates Air Views In El Toro

Saddleback Valley area residents are invited to meet and question some June primary candidates at a public issues forum scheduled for 7 p.m. May 25 at Los Alisos Intermediate School, 25171 Moor Avenue, El Toro.

Sponsored by the Saddleback Valley Board of Realtors' Governmental Relations Committee, the forum will allow candidates to present their views to the public, representative Loretta McVey said.

Republican assembly candidates, James Green, Anthony Matano, Marian Bergeson, Lee Watkins and Robert Wilkes and Democratic assembly candidate James Parker have confirmed their attendance.

John Schmitz, Gil Ferguson, James Martindale, George Scott, and Jon S. Brand, Republican senatorial candidates, and Ron Cordova and Gregory Kuczynski, seeking the Democratic senatorial nomination, are to present their views, Miss McVey said.

A guest appearance by incumbent supervisor Thomas Riley is expected, she said.

TELEVISION HELPS...

Lessons on Haiku poetry and Cinco de Mayo have been exchanged with University Park School students via the two-way system.

One result of the video, Miss Wold said, is that students "are much more able to communicate. They're forced to put down the information so someone else can understand."

To make the subject of geography more immediate, she arranged with the English-speaking Canadian Academy in Japan to exchange videotape "letters" about local foods and locales.

There are key differences between seeing a tape made last week by Japanese students and watching a commercial film strip, Miss Wold said.

"It's much more immediate," she said. "Also, the kids have more control. They can say, 'I was interested in your harbor. Could you show us more?'"

One of the projects Miss Wold is especially excited about is an exchange with residents of the Laguna Beach Nursing Home.

She spends her own time visiting the home with the portable video pack and interviewing the residents.

"One of the things I wanted to do was expose my students to aspects of life they may not be familiar with," Miss Wold said. "I also felt that these people have a lot to offer."

The older people tell about their lives and childhoods, while the students in turn make films about their current activities.

Using tapes instead of actual visits is easier because it eliminates transportation problems and because the children feel relaxed in a familiar environment, Miss Wold said. Eventually some of the children will visit their new friends.

"Today we looked on the map to find where the people said they were born," Miss Wold said. "We had one lady who turned 100. Can you imagine talking to someone who's 100?"

"The students love to hear the stories, the fact that these people had horses when they were little. What it was like without television. One of the kids asked, 'How did you have fun without Disneyland?'"

Privacy Case

Court Upholds Sexual Law

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Supreme Court let stand today North Carolina's sodomy law by refusing to hear arguments that the law violates the constitutional rights of homosexuals.

The court, which has not granted full review to a case involving the rights of homosexuals in more than a decade, let stand the conviction of a Jacksonville, N.C., man for an "abominable and detestable crime against nature."

Today's action is a significant setback for civil liberties forces which urged the justices to use the case to reach a major decision on the rights of sexual privacy.

"This case involves the question whether the government may constitutionally prohibit private consensual homosexual activity between adults," the court was told by lawyers for Eugene Enslin.

Enslin, owner of a combination massage parlor-adult bookstore in Jacksonville, was convicted in 1974 of a sex act with a young Marine from nearby Camp Lejeune. He was sentenced to one year in prison.

Enslin was freed after serving nine months of his sentence, one of his New York lawyers reported.

The North Carolina law used to prosecute Enslin states: "If any person shall commit the crime against nature, with mankind or beast, he shall be guilty of a felony and shall be fined or imprisoned in the discretion of the court."

A similar sodomy law in Virginia was upheld by the Supreme Court in 1976, and although the justices' action was taken without comment it was widely interpreted as the definite word on the constitutionality of such state laws.

But in a decision last year that struck down a New York law banning the sale of contraceptives to minors, the court noted that it had "not definitely answered the difficult question whether and to what extent the Constitution prohibits state statutes regulating private consensual sexual behavior among adults."

Enslin's attorneys seized upon that wording — and the fact that the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals relied on the 1976 Virginia ruling in dismissing Enslin's appeal — to urge the justices to further clarify the legal rights of homosexuals.

The upholding of Virginia's sodomy law came on a 6-3 vote by the court, with Justices William J. Brennan Jr., Thurgood Marshall and John Paul Stevens voting to fully review the issue.

The nation's highest court has not considered "gay rights" since the justices in 1967 ruled that aliens found to be homosexuals could be deported as persons "afflicted with a psychopathic personality."

The American Psychiatric Association has since criticized the court's finding, voting in 1974 to eliminate homosexuality as a mental disorder and reclassify it as a "sexual orientation disturbance."

Arabia. Paul Etter, Fluor vice president in charge of public relations, said good U.S. relations with Saudi Arabia are the concern not only of Fluor, but of "many other companies who are doing business" in that country.

Of Fluor's support of the arms deal, he said, "It seems pretty logical."

The U.S. Senate was expected to vote late this afternoon on the arms pact.

As proposed by President Carter, the $4.8 billion package calls for selling 60 F-15s to Saudi Arabia, 50 F-5s to Egypt, and 15 F-15s and 75 F-16s to Israel.

In addition, Carter has offered to sell Israel an extra 20 F-15s to bring that country's total of the warplane to 60, the same as Saudi Arabia.

3 El Capitan Climbers Die; Probe Due

YOSEMITE NATIONAL PARK (AP) — Three Minnesota men fell 1,400 feet to their deaths while trying to climb El Capitan in Yosemite National Park, Park Superintendent Leslie Arnerberger said.

The three killed Sunday were identified by Arnerberger as John Paul Garton, 24, and John Edward Nygard, 22, both of Bloomington, and Jeffrey Joseph Graves, 22, of Fridley.

They had begun a registered climb of the rock Saturday, he said.

The three were roped together and when one man fell, the other two were pulled out of their securing devices and also fell, Arnerberger said.

He said the cause of the accident is under investigation. The men were experienced climbers, Arnerberger said.

Brown Flays Fluor's Letter on Jets

By PHILIP ROSMARIN

Charges by Governor Brown that the Irvine-based Fluor Corp. is meddling in international affairs with its support of the Middle East arms pact proposal brought a response today from J. Robert Fluor, chairman, chief executive and president of the company.

company employees, shareholders and vendors urging them to write Congress expressing support for the sale of jet warplanes to Saudi Arabia, Egypt and Israel.

On Sunday, Brown told an audience of 10,000 Jews in San Francisco celebrating the 30th anniversary of Israeli independence, that the Fluor letter was improper.

"It sets a very dangerous precedent," Brown said, "when a California corporation, for its own profit, begins to meddle in the Middle East in a way that could be quite adverse to the interests of this country."

Brown charged that because the letter was sent as a tax-deductible expense, "The people of California are subsidizing Fluor's adventure into foreign policy." Brown urged Fluor to cancel its mailing campaign, which he said is applying "corporate pressure in an area better left to the president and Congress."

Fluor responded today, "As an American citizen, I am quite certain that I have as much right as Governor Brown to speak on the Middle East arms pact.

"I wrote a letter... with reasons why I thought (Fluor employees and associates) should urge their congressmen to support the sale of D-15s to Saudi Arabia."

"Our legislators are being comprehensively exposed to the opposite point of view."

"Does Governor Brown honestly believe our lawmakers should hear only one side of an issue that so crucially affects the future energy supply of not only the United States, but the free world as well?"

Fluor called the letter "a legitimate corporate expense."

Senate's Jet Sale Vote Set

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, after talking with several senators, is predicting that the Senate tonight will refuse to block his plan to sell sophisticated U.S. warplanes to Israel and two Arab neighbors.

The Senate vote is to come after 10 hours of debate that includes a two-hour closed-door meeting of the Senate to discuss classified aspects of the pending sale.

Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., who asked for the closed session, said he wants the lawmakers to discuss the security implications for "the entire Middle East" of the presence in the area of Soviet-backed Cuban troops.

Even if the Senate should vote to kill the sale of planes to Israel, Egypt and Saudi Arabia, the proposal would survive if the House refuses to block the sale, too.

Such proposals are automatically approved unless both the Senate and the House vote to reject the sales.

On the eve of the Senate showdown vote, Carter lobbied his $4.8 billion plane sale proposal with several senators.

Carter also telephoned several senators today. White House press secretary Jody Powell said the calls were made to members of both parties and that Carter stressed to them the "importance he attaches to this vote."

That brought to "a dozen or more" the number of senators Carter has called in recent days, Powell said.

Junior High Burglarized In San Juan

Between $3,000 and $5,000 in cash and equipment were reported taken from Marco Forster Junior High School, 25671 Camino del Avion, San Juan Capistrano, by burglars early Sunday or late Saturday.

County sheriff's deputies believe two or three people entered the school by prying open a door with a heavy crowbar.

Entered, deputies said, were the business office, photo lab, a music room, a science lab and several classrooms.

Taken were cameras, tape recorders, television taping equipment and cash from drawers and desks.

BUTTERFLIES ASSEMBLED INTO WORKS OF ART Eunice Du Maurier With Three-dimensional Creation

Butterflies Topic Of Laguna Artist

By STEVE MITCHELL

What began as a lifetime hobby has turned into a lucrative profession for a Laguna Beach artist who dabbles in lepidoptera and Lucite.

Those are butterflies and clear plastic sheets and Eunice Du Maurier is a pro at combining the two to create works of art.

The 14-year Laguna Beach resident carefully selects colorful butterfly specimens, matches them for color compatibility, and places them in natural settings within clear plastic boxes.

The end result is a lot better looking than the supply of pinned insects, in her Laguna Beach shop which she calls Butterfly Safari.

Miss Du Maurier receives exotic tropical butterflies, scorpions, giant beetles and spiders from all over the world, and her crowded shop would make an exterminator green with envy.

When she was 10 years old, Eunice used to run around the San Gabriel Mountains near her home, collecting insects and colorful Southern California butterflies.

By the time she was into her teens, she had an impressive collection of insects, most of which she could identify, using the Latin classifications as well as the common names.

She's a little rusty on the names today, but her taste in beautiful insects is apparent in her displays.

"These spectacular blue ones are called Morphodidius," she said, pointing to a pair of iridescent wings attached to a large South American butterfly.

"They go for about $10 each," she said. Miss Du Maurier ordered 100 of the beauties last year, but that wasn't enough and she said she couldn't get any more from her suppliers.

"Nobody had any," she shrugged. "They're seasonal, and when they're gone, they're gone."

She said she'll sometimes go (See ARTIST, Page A2)

Capistrano City Hall Hit By Burglars

Burglars who chopped through a San Juan Capistrano city hall wall to rifle cash drawers and beat open a safe could be the same ones who broke into an auto agency and tennis club in the Mission City late last month, sheriff's investigators say.

Hacked open late Thursday or early Friday morning was the north wall of the city's council chambers, deputies reported. The burglars showed "no finesse" in beating open the safe, a deputy added. Taken was $85 in cash.

Deputies had characterized burglars who broke into Bill Yates Volkswagen-Porsche and the Capistrano Racquet Club last month as "pros" in deactivating alarm systems but "amateurs" in opening safes.

He was promoted to district superintendent in the Capistrano Unified District, but stepped down in 1975, following an illness, to his present position as deputy superintendent.

fective June 30. Supt. Jerome Thornsley presented Benedict with the original door handle from Las Palmas School, mounted and engraved as a memento of his start with the school district.

Charleen Wert, president of the Capistrano Council of Parent-Teacher-Student Associations, presented Benedict with his second continuing service award at the banquet — a donation in his name to the California State Loan and Scholarship Fund.

Benedict received an honorary life membership in the fund in 1956 and his first continuing service award in 1978. "This was the first time we have ever made two continuing service awards to one person," said Mrs. Wert, "but Truman Benedict is a very special person."

"I have great faith in public education," Benedict told those gathered Saturday to honor him. "And I'm confident that we will carry on the tradition in this district that children come first."

The retiring administrator said he and his wife plan to travel, now that he'll have more time. As a farewell gift, district and community friends presented the Benedicts Saturday with two mo-peds for added mobility.

Laguna Eyes 'Austerity' Budget

The Laguna Beach City Council will review a nearly $8.3 million budget Tuesday night, a financial plan they label "bare bones."

The preliminary budget, presented to the council for the first time last week, shows city manager recommendations for $8,297,138 in expenditures for fiscal 1978-79 — about $125,000 less than this year's budget of

The 178-page budget document shows an increase of three employees in the city's ranks, which would bring the number of municipal employees on the payroll to 191.

Department heads had requested an additional eight employees.

In a budget message authored by Acting City Manager George Fowler council members were warned that the budget might have to be cut by 40 percent should the Jarvis-Gann property tax initiative be approved in June.

That would mean the general fund budget of $5 million would have to be reduced by $2.17 million.

"The passage of Proposition 13 would require that an amended budget be submitted to the council," Fowler wrote.

He said many of the cuts shown in the budget were made "with the thought that whether Prop. 13 passes or not, the citizens of Laguna Beach want tax reform."

Finance Director Richard Reese said he expects a 10 percent increase in assessed valuations this year, although the preliminary budget shows no increase.

Beaches Packed

Guards Rescue At Least 100

The warmest weekend this year combined with crowded beaches kept South Coast lifeguards jumping Saturday and Sunday with more than 100 rescues reported from Laguna Beach to San Clemente.

Laguna Beach lifeguards said more than 20,000 sunworshippers visited beaches on Saturday, with lifeguards pulling between 15 and 20 persons from the water.

Javier Cabajar, 22, Rialto, was listed in stable condition at South Coast Community Hospital this morning after nearly drowning at Rock Pile in Laguna Beach Saturday morning.

Peter Brightman, 30, from Los Angeles, is also in stable condition at the hospital after going "over the falls" on a wave off Laguna Royale, injuring his back.

Scuba diver Keith Zonstrom, 23, of Vista was pulled from the water at Mountain Road Beach after becoming fatigued in the water, lifeguards said today.

A somewhat cooler Laguna Beach visitors, but ocean temperatures of 64 were warm enough to keep many in the water.

San Clemente Lifeguard Larry Moore said 12,000 people visited city beaches and another 16,000 sunbathed on county beaches Saturday, with somewhat fewer people at the beaches on Mother's Day.

Guards pulled 35 people from the water on Saturday and another 22 Sunday, he said, with 15 rescues alone at Trafalgar Lane beach (T Street).

Water temperatures were near 69 degrees in San Clemente Saturday, dipping to 66 Sunday.

Lifeguards said Walter Taylor, 21, of 17441 Jacqueline Drive, Huntington Beach, was pulled from the water at Niguel Beach Park Saturday after he fainted in chest-deep water. His wife pulled him to the surface, and lifeguards brought him to shore where paramedics administered first aid.

Dave Perry, seasonal lifeguard supervisor for San Clemente State Park, said it was the biggest weekend turnout of the year, with state park rescues totaling 35 for the weekend.

He said more than 4,500 visited San Clemente State Park Saturday and Sunday, with 6,200 arriving at Doheny State Park and another 5,000 at San Onofre.

"We were expecting big crowds," Perry said. "After all, summer's only two weeks away."

The budget does not account for employee pay raises except for merit increases, Reese said.

Ted Kennedy At Ole Miss

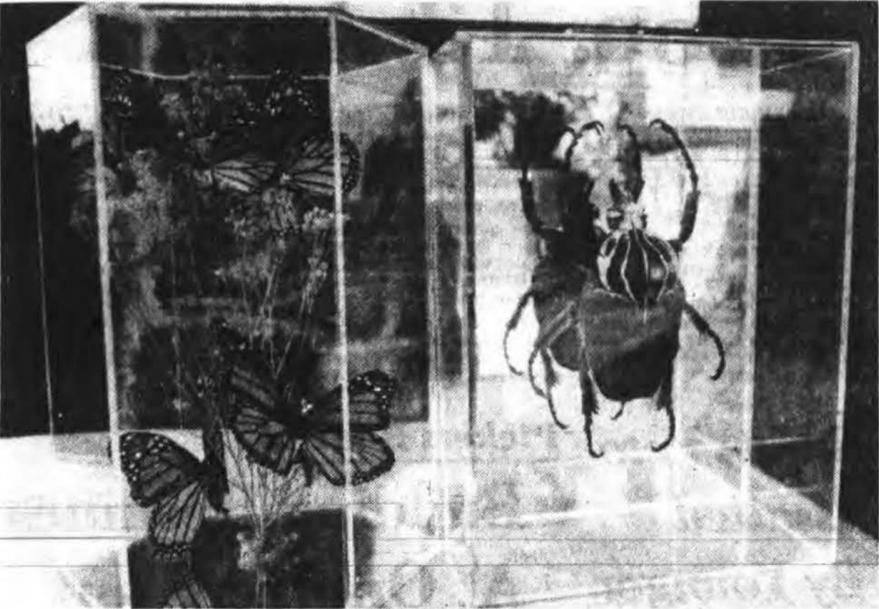

OXFORD, Miss. (AP) — Several dozen blacks were among the graduates and the commencement speaker talked of "painful accommodation to the imperative of racial justice." But the most obvious sign of change at Ole Miss was the speaker himself — a Kennedy.

Sen. Edward Kennedy quoted from author William Faulkner, telling graduates at the University of Mississippi on Sunday. "Never be afraid to raise your voice for honesty and truth and compassion, against injustice and lying and greed."

He did not mention the fall of 1962, when his brothers President John Kennedy and Attorney General Robert Kennedy ordered federal marshals and more than 20,000 troops to enforce the desegregation of Ole Miss, ensuring that James Meredith be registered as the school's first black student.

FIST-SIZED BEETLE NEXT TO BUTTERFLIES: BEAUTY AND THE BEAST Laguna Beach Artist Orders Her Raw Materials From Around the World

one or two years without some varieties, "only to find when they're back on the market they're twice as expensive as the last time I bought them."

Butterfly collecting is much like coin or stamp collecting, Miss Du Maurier says. "Specimens go up in value with age, just like stamps."

She dispels the stereotype image of a bespectacled, pith-helmeted man tromping through the jungles with a butterfly net.

"A lot of the more exotic butterflies are raised on farms," she said, adding that outsiders are not permitted to view the life cycle process.

"That green one over there was raised in some village in Madagascar," she said. But to discourage a glut of butterflies on the market, villagers won't even reveal the types of plant the caterpillar eats.

It's the law of supply and demand, and if nobody knows how to raise a certain type of butterfly, the price goes up.

Miss Du Maurier has expanded her operation since she began selling her colorful collections at the Sawdust Festival eight years ago.

Now she's doing a combination of beauties and beasts. The more nightmarish of her creations include giant African scorpions and Malayan Goliath beetles as big as a closed fist.

She started mounting the more fierce-looking insects about four years ago, but admits she's still a bit squeamish handling the dead beasts.

"I thought about it a long time before I started working with beetles and tarantulas," she said. "But now that I'm into it, I don't mind — much."

How much handling goes into mounting a butterfly or a bug? She said the butterflies come with wings folded together, and the bugs often arrive with their various appendages tucked underneath their bodies.

"You have to arrange the insects the way you want them to appear in the clear boxes," she explained. That means "relaxing" the wings and straightening out the legs, mandibles, tentacles and other parts on the larger beetles.

Pointing to an African scorpion, poised in a fighting position inside a box, Miss Du Maurier said, "that one didn't come to me looking like that."

Her posed pets are currently on display at The Orangerie, 1492 South Coast Highway in Laguna Beach. Just a short crawl away from her own shop in the same mall.

with the prosecutor and he's determined to punish me one way or the other."

Waddill clarified the comment by explaining that the first trial had cost him $500,000. He said he would raise the same amount of money for a second trial, if necessary, "but I don't know where I'm going to find it all yet."

"It's a shame that this decision should have been taken by the prosecution," attorney

Watson said. "Dr. Waddill should not have been forced to undergo a second trial after the jury made it clear in the first trial that they could not accept the prosecution's case."

Defense attorneys raised the possibility today that the second trial, if ordered, may be held in some other county on the grounds that heavy publicity stemming from the first trial may prevent Dr. Waddill from getting a fair second trial.

"It's something that Dr. Watson and Dr. Waddill and I must talk about," Weedman said. "I think we'll have an answer by June 2."

'Sam' Escapes Arson Charge

NEW YORK (AP) — It is unlikely that Berkoff Son of Sam killer David Berkowitz, who also claimed he set 2,000 fires, will be prosecuted for arson, says Bronx District Attorney Mario Merola.

Merola said Sunday that sentences for the guilty pleas would "cover" the arson charges and could "far exceed anything he would have gotten" for setting the fires, which were logged in a diary.

Berkowitz pleaded guilty last Monday to killing six persons and wounding seven others during a year-long shooting spree. He faces a maximum of 25 years to life imprisonment for each slaying and a maximum of 25 years for the attempted murder of the wounded victims.

Calls of Love Earn Jail Term

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Cheryl Davis is flying five days in jail, close to the ones she loves. The 27-year-old has been jailed for making harassing telephone calls to the Tampa Police Department — she called officers repeatedly to say, "I love you."

She was convicted after officers said she called them 19 times during an eight-hour period. "We tried not to be rude to her," said Lt. J.C. Perkins. "But her frequent calls tied up our lines, and while she was saying, 'I love you' someone could have been trying to get in touch with us because of an emergency."

Of Fluor's support of the arms deal, he said, "It seems pretty logical."

The U.S. Senate was expected to vote late this afternoon on the arms pact.

As proposed by President Carter, the $4.8 billion package calls for selling 60 F-15s to Saudi Arabia, 50 F-5s to Egypt, and 15 F-15s and 75 F-16s to Israel.

In addition, Carter has offered to sell Israel an extra 20 F-15s to bring that country's total of the warplane to 60, the same as Saudi Arabia.

Brown Flays Fluor's Letter on Jets

By PHILIP ROSMARIN Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Charges by Governor Brown that the Irvine-based Fluor Corp. is meddling in international affairs with its support of the Middle East arms pact proposal brought a response today from J. Robert Fluor, chairman, chief executive and president of the company.

company employees, shareholders and vendors urging them to write Congress expressing support for the sale of jet warplanes to Saudi Arabia, Egypt and Israel.

On Sunday, Brown told an audience of 10,000 Jews in San Francisco celebrating the 30th anniversary of Israeli independence, that the Fluor letter was improper.

"It sets a very dangerous precedent," Brown said, "when a California corporation, for its own profit, begins to meddle in the Middle East in a way that could be quite adverse to the interests of this country."

Brown charged that because the letter was sent as a tax-deductible expense, "The people of California are subsidizing Fluor's adventure into foreign policy."

Brown urged Fluor to cancel its mailing campaign, which he said is applying "corporate pressure in an area better left to the president and Congress."

"I wrote a letter... with reasons why I thought (Fluor employees and associates) should urge their congressmen to support the sale of D-15s to Saudi Arabia."

"Our legislators are being comprehensively exposed to the opposite point of view."

"Does Governor Brown honestly believe our lawmakers should hear only one side of an issue that so crucially affects the future energy supply of not only the United States, but the free world as well?"

Complex NB Lease Pondered

By JOANNE REYNOLDS Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Newport Beach city councilmen think the city is entitled to more than the $9,726.50 annual income it gets for its 19 acres of bayfront property at Beacon Bay.

Councilmen are getting organized for what promises to be a complex process of renegotiating the lease on the property.

Problems facing the councilmen include the unsettled matter of Beacon Bay homes built on tidelands, a problem that can only be solved legally if the city can get title to some property in the Upper Bay.

Two council committees have been appointed to deal with the tidelands problem and the lease renegotiation itself, but the work of both may be affected by the council's recently enacted traffic phasing policy.

Here's why: The lease cannot be renegotiated until the tidelands problem is cleared up. About 20 of the neighborhood's 72 homes are affected.

Assemblyman Ron Cordova, D-El Toro, got a bill through the Legislature that would solve the problem, but the measure is based on a land swap.

In return for the state allowing the houses to remain on tidelands — a use otherwise prohibited by state law — the city must make a contribution of land to the state's Upper Bay Wildlife Preserve.

City officials thought they had the matter in hand in a deal related to an apartment complex intended for Irvine Company land on Jamboree Road across from the Newport Inn.

2 HB Men Killed In Irvine Collision

Two Huntington Beach men died Sunday after their station wagon plunged over a 40-foot cliff into an Irvine ravine.

Both were crushed. Three other passengers — two Irvine men and the 10-year-old son of one of the killed men — were hospitalized with serious injuries.

Police said driver Mark Alan Karneke, 23, of 16722 Blanton St., was dead at the scene. The front-seat passenger, Donald A. Rick, 43, of 8021 Sail Circle, was pronounced dead at 7:22 p.m. at Costa Mesa Memorial Hospital, about an hour after the accident.

Police identified the injured passengers, all of whom were riding in the back seat when the car struck head-first on the bottom of the ravine, as:

- Dean Richard Rick, 10, son of Donald Rick.
-Dennis Wayne De Mars, 21, of 21 Songsparrow.
-Mike Shelton, 19, of 4262 Sandburg Way.

Vote Set Tonight

Carter Confident Of Jet Sale Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, after talking with several senators, is predicting that the Senate tonight will refuse to block his plan to sell sophisticated U.S. warplanes to Israel and two Arab neighbors. The Senate vote is to come after 10 hours of debate that includes a two-hour closed-door meeting of the Senate to discuss classified aspects of the pending sale.

Sen Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., who asked for the closed session, said he wants the lawmakers to discuss the security implications for "the entire Middle East" of the presence in the area of Soviet-backed Cuban troops.

Even if the Senate should vote to kill the sale of planes to Israel, Egypt and Saudi Arabia, the proposal would survive if the House refuses to block the sale, too.

Such proposals are automatically approved unless both the Senate and the House vote to reject the sales.

On the eve of the Senate showdown vote, Carter lobbied his $4.8 billion plane sale proposal with several senators.

Carter also telephoned several senators today. White House press secretary Jody Powell said the calls were made to members of both parties and that Carter stressed to them the "importance he attaches to this vote."

That brought to "a dozen or more" the number of senators Carter has called in recent days, Powell said.

Carter wants to sell 60 F-15s to Saudi Arabia, 50 less advanced F-5Es to Egypt and 15 F-15s and 75 F-16s to Israel.

Governor in Newport

Brown Continues Prop. 13 Attack

By JACKIE HYMAN Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. renewed his attack on Proposition 13 today in a speech to the California Peace Officers Association convention in Newport Beach.

Brown, speaking at the Newporter Inn, referred to the controversial Jarvis-Gann property tax cut bill as causing "a serious economic dislocation. UCLA predicted an unemployment rate of 10.1 percent if it passes."

He said that in addition to cutting off $7 billion in property taxes, Prop. 13 would return to the federal government at least $2.7 billion the state now receives in revenue sharing.

The governor expressed his support for Proposition 8 which, coupled with the Behr Bill, is the Legislature's alternative tax relief proposal.

"The Behr bill is a cut, squeeze and trim bill," Brown said. "Our legislative analyst says that he doesn't think Ronald Reagan would have dared to propose this bill."

Brown expressed several criticisms of Prop. 13 saying it would cause uncertainty, cutbacks in vital services and eventually an unfair distribution of the property tax burden.

Citing a provision that raises taxes when property is sold under Prop. 13 Brown said "in five years more than half the people would be paying more under Prop. 13 than under Prop. 8."

Brown Veto Assailed By Younger

A governor should place "an absolute priority" on strengthening law enforcement, California Attorney General Evelle J. Younger said today in Newport Beach.

Younger, who is seeking the Republican nomination for governor, told the California Peace Officers Association at the Newporter Inn that law enforcement deserves a higher priority to the governor than it has had.

Edmund Brown Jr., who had finished speaking to the same group only a few minutes before, but his remarks were clearly intended as a criticism of the governor.

"Law enforcement should never again have to undertake the almost impossible task of overriding a governor's veto on a major public law such as the death penalty," Younger said.

Among the steps Younger said a governor should take are to extradite fugitive felons, back passage of laws authorizing electronic eavesdropping and witness immunity, and try to shorten the "seemingly endless rounds of pretrial motions and delays" in criminal cases.

Younger won a round of applause when he said "a governor should appoint (to judgeships (See PRIORITY, Page A2)

Onofre Work Due to Resume After Orders

Construction is to resume today on the $2.4 billion San Onofre nuclear plant south of San Clemente, after a restraining order issued late Friday banned striking Southern California Edison Company employees from picketing five plant gates.

Elsewhere on the Orange Coast, the strike includes the Edison Company plant in Huntington Beach, where pickets were posted again today.

The San Onofre restraining order was issued in San Diego by U.S. District Judge Leland Nielsen. It will be in effect until May 30, when Nielsen has scheduled a hearing on the matter.

While supervisory personnel have worked 12-hour shifts to keep the power plant running despite the strike by 125 utility workers, strikers picketing gates to the adjacent construction project had halted progress on two more generators. (See EDISON, Page A2)

Trash Driver Strike 'Practically Over'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A strike by Orange County trash collectors that affected more than a million people in 14 cities "is, for all practical purposes, over," a Teamsters Union spokesman said today.

It was reported last week that the walkout, which began April 17, was collapsing as many strikers crossed their own union's picket lines to return to work rather than have their jobs filled by permanent replacements.

Reports from stewards are that the majority went back to work," said Carl Lindeman, a spokesman for Teamsters Local 396, which is headquartered in Los Angeles. Our job is to represent the majority of the people, so if the majority wants to go back that's exactly what we'll do."

He added: "The strike is, for all practical purposes, over." The union's 450 Orange County members struck seven disposal companies, demanding wage increases of $4 over three years. The companies had offered a $1.50-an-hour raise over three years.

CIA Acts 'Mistake'

Ex-director Reviews Vietnam War

NEW YORK (AP) — In the days when the CIA's paramilitary skills were freely in use around the world, he sent the first sabotage teams into North Vietnam.

From those clandestine beginnings grew the intense American bombing of North Vietnam and the commitment of 550,000 U.S. ground troops. The man who admits to starting it all, William Colby, later director of the CIA, now believes it was all a mistake.

In his book published today by Simon & Schuster, "Honorably Men: My Life in the CIA," Colby argues that "whether we could have won or lost," the only way to have succeeded would be the Vietnam war was at the village level as a political struggle against the communists, using only Vietnamese forces.

Colby went on to play a major role in counterinsurgency and pacification programs in Vietnam, but in his book he clearly believes that it was then a lost cause.

As CIA station chief in Saigon in 1963, Colby writes of attending a Hawaii conference where plans were discussed to escalate the war. He tried to convince then Secretary of Defense Robert MacNamara that the sabotage teams sent into North Vietnam had disappeared quickly from radio contact and possibly were captured "and that putting such teams into the north did not and would not work."

Colby wrote that MacNamara "listened to me with a cold look and he rejected my advice. The desire to put pressure onto

UPI Telephoto
VIETNAM 'A MISTAKE'
Ex-CIA Director Colby

But Colby also believes that Kennedy "would at the very least, had he lived, recognized the futility of a massive military buildup as a way to fight a guerrilla war... We would not have had half a million American soldiers involved, nor experienced the casualties they suffered and inflicted by their operations."

On a visit to the White House after Kennedy's death, Colby tried to persuade presidential adviser McGeorge Bundy "to get our programs back to the village level and build up from there, instead of endlessly debating where to bomb North Vietnam."

Colby said Bundy replied that "I might be right in my approach but he thought the structure of the American government would never permit it to be applied. But the result was the Vietnam war as we now know it."

President Richard Nixon also believed in maximum force. He writes in his memoirs, which went on sale last week in advance of today's official publication date, that on a visit to Vietnam in 1964, then U.S. Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge "argued against pursuing Viet Cong forces into Laos or Cambodia. Even more surprising to me," Nixon wrote, "Lodge said American troops should avoid fighting the Viet Cong except to retaliate when Americans were killed. I would hardly believe that I was hearing this from one as versed as Cabot Lodge in the tactics and techniques of international communism."

North Vietnam prevailed, and there and then the United States military started the planning and activity that would escalate finally to full-scale air attacks."

Paul Etter, Fluor vice president in charge of public relations, said good U.S. relations with Saudi Arabia are the concern not only of Fluor, but of "many other companies who are doing business" in that country.

Of Fluor's support of the arms deal, he said, "It seems pretty logical."

As proposed by President Carter, the $4.8 billion package calls for selling 60 F-15s to Saudi Arabia, 50 F-5s to Egypt, and 15 F-15s and 75 F-16s to Israel.

In addition, Carter has offered to sell Israel an extra 20 F-15s to bring that country's total of the warplane to 60, the same as Saudi Arabia.

'Son of Sam' To Escape Arson Charge

NEW YORK (AP) — It is unlikely that confessed Son of Sam killer David Berkowitz, who also claimed he set 2,000 fires, will be prosecuted for arson, says Bronx District Attorney Mario Merola.

Merola said Sunday that sentences for the guilty pleas would "cover" the arson charges and would "far exceed anything he could have gotten" for setting the fires, which were logged in a diary.

Berkowitz pleaded guilty last Monday to killing six persons and wounding seven others during a year-long shooting spree. He faces a maximum of 25 years to life imprisonment for each slaying and a maximum of 25 years for the attempted murder of the wounded victims.

BEACON BAY LEASE...

offered to give the city six acres next to the preserve near the corner of University Drive and Irvine Avenue if the city would make some concessions in reducing the amount of open space required in the apartment complex.

City officials privately were optimistic about the swap because they felt it would suit the state's requirements for Beacon Bay.

However, last Monday the City Council approved a policy which would prohibit issuing a building permit to the apartment complex unless it could be shown that the units will not create more than a one percent increase in traffic congestion on Pacific Coast Highway.

With a total of 226 units planned and with 120 cars making that one percent figure, it appears unlikely the complex will get a permit.

If the apartment land swap fails to materialize, councilmen will have to look elsewhere for a parcel to give to the state, either in the form of a similar tradeoff with the Irvine Company or in the form of an outright purchase.

Cordova's bill stipulates that income from the lease of the land under those 20 homes must be used in buying, developing and maintaining the city's addition to the preserve.

With other Irvine Company developments suspended by the traffic phasing policy, any immediate land swap seems questionable.

Meanwhile the question of the financial aspects of the Beacon Bay lease remains clouded.

The majority of weekend rescues took place near city piers where winter storms have gouged out deep channels and sandbars, lifeguards said.

Saturday's scorching temperatures and unusually warm water (66 degrees) drew nearly 120,000 people to the beaches from the Santa Ana River to Corona del Mar, lifeguards said.

Cooler weather and Mother's Day combined to cut beach attendance to about 90,000 people on Sunday when lifeguards logged 37 rescues, none serious, said Blauer.

HB Gunman, 59, Gives Up to SWAT

A Huntington Beach man who police allege shot at a neighbor Sunday night, then barricaded himself in his home with an arsenal of weapons and ammunition for more than two hours, remained jailed today.

Nick Urban, 59, of 15591 Toway Lane, held the police's SWAT team and a force of regular uniformed officers at bay but no shots were exchanged during the tense standoff.

He was arrested and booked on suspicion of assault with a deadly weapon in connection with the earlier shooting incident which reportedly climaxed 30 minutes of talk with the victim, Justin Scott Cate. Bail was set at $10,000.

Police said they were informed that Urban had been depressed over his son's own personal difficulties and had been drinking before the episode.

Investigators said they were hampered severely at times by neighbors who refused to realize the seriousness of the situation after being ordered to evacuate their homes.

Desk officers using criss-cross telephone directories contacted residents all along the block ordering them to leave the area but some refused to believe any danger existed.

One family refused to believe it was really a police officer calling.

Others complied with orders to get out of immediate range of the Urban home, where police said the barricaded suspect kept several guns including a 30.06 rifle with a telescopic sight.

Police established a command post in a nearby home and made repeated attempts to contact Urban but he apparently refused to answer the telephone.

Patrol Lt. John Foster said SWAT Team Officer Patrick Gildea finally made contact with Urban and was largely responsible for coaxing the suspect to surrender.

Urban walked out peacefully, following police orders to keep his hands in the air, at 10:07 p.m. to end the standoff.

Investigators said among other weapons in the house were a .357 Magnum revolver, a .45 caliber automatic pistol, a .44 Magnum pistol, a shotgun, two Winchester 30-30 rifles and the 30.06 rifle.

Brown Flays Fluor's Letter on Jets

Charges by Governor Brown that the Irvine-based Fluor Corp. is meddling in international affairs with its support of the Middle East arms pact proposal...

company employees, shareholders and vendors urging them to write Congress expressing support for the sale of jet warplanes to Saudi Arabia, Egypt and Israel.

"It sets a very dangerous precedent," Brown said, "when a California corporation, for its own profit, begins to meddle in the Middle East in a way that could be quite adverse to the interests of this country."

Fluor responded today, "As an American citizen, I am quite certain that I have as much right as Governor Brown to speak on the Middle East arms pact."

"I wrote a letter... with reasons why I thought (Fluor employees and associates) should urge their congressmen to support the sale of D-15s to Saudi Arabia."

Senate's Jet Sale Vote Set

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, after talking with several senators, is predicting that the Senate tonight will refuse to block his plan to sell sophisticated U.S. warplanes to Israel and two Arab neighbors.

The Senate vote is to come after 10 hours of debate that includes a two-hour closed-door meeting of the Senate to discuss classified aspects of the pending sale.

Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., who asked for the closed session, said he wants the lawmakers to discuss the security implications for "the entire Middle East" of the presence in the area of Soviet-backed Cuban troops.

Even if the Senate should vote to kill the sale of planes to Israel, Egypt and Saudi Arabia, the proposal would survive if the House refuses to block the sale, too.

Such proposals are automatically approved unless both the Senate and the House vote to reject the sales.

On the eve of the Senate showdown vote, Carter lobbied his $4.8 billion plane sale proposal with several senators.

Carter also telephoned several senators today. White House press secretary Jody Powell said the calls were made to members of both parties and that Carter stressed to them the "importance he attaches to this vote."

That brought to "a dozen or more" the number of senators Carter has called in recent days, Powell said.

Carter wants to sell 60 F-15s to Saudi Arabia, 50 less advanced F-5Es to Egypt and 15 F-15s and 75 F-16s to Israel.

The House International Relations Committee votes on the warplane sale Tuesday. Unless both houses disapprove the sale by May 28, however, Carter is free to go ahead with the sales.

2 HB Men Killed In Irvine Collision

Two Huntington Beach men died Sunday after their station wagon plunged over a 40-foot cliff into an Irvine ravine.

Both were crushed. Three other passengers — two Irvine men and the 10-year-old son of one of the killed men — were hospitalized with serious injuries.

Police said driver Mark Alan Karneke, 23, of 16722 Blanton St., was dead at the scene. The front-seat passenger, Donald A. Rick, 43, of 8021 Sail Circle, was pronounced dead at 7:22 p.m. at Costa Mesa Memorial Hospital, about an hour after the accident.

Police identified the injured passengers, all of whom were riding in the back seat when the car struck head-first on the bottom of the ravine, as:

—Dean Richard Rick, 10, son of Donal Rick.

—Dennis Wayne De Mars, 21, of 21 Songsparrow.

—Mike Shelton, 19, of 4262 Sandburg Way.

All sustained head and face cuts, and possible internal injuries; they were taken to Saddleback Community Hospital. Dean Rick was transferred to Huntington Intercommunity Hospital. All were reported in stable condition.

Police said De Mars ran from the open field of the crash, near Turtle Rock and Starcrest drives, about three-quarters of a mile to a residence to telephone for help.

Orange County Coroner's officials have identified the second victim of an El Toro traffic collision Saturday as Samuel Wilkeson, 43, last known address in Santa Ana.

California Highway Patrol officials said Wilkeson ran a red light at El Toro and Muirlands Boulevard, slamming broadside into a car driven by Barbara A. Potter, 58, of 24921 Muirlands Blvd., Space 51.

Wilkeson died at the scene. Mrs. Potter died a short time later at Mission Community Hospital in Mission Viejo.

Benedict Lauded Upon Retirement

Truman Benedict, retiring deputy superintendent of the Capistrano Unified School District, was lauded for "dedicated and inspired" public school service Saturday at a retirement dinner attended by 270 people — many of them longtime friends and colleagues.

Benedict, 55, came to the Capistrano area in 1949 to teach at Las Palmas School in San Clemente. After serving as Las Palmas principal and San Clemente Elementary School District superintendent, Benedict was named assistant superintendent of the Capistrano Unified School District, following unification in 1965.

He was promoted to district superintendent in the Capistrano Unified District, but stepped down in 1975, following an illness, to his present position as deputy superintendent.

Most recently Benedict has been actively involved in projecting growth trends in the fast-growing school district. His resignation, accepted with regret by the school board, becomes effective June 30.

Supt. Jerome Thornstley presented Benedict with the Governor in Newport

Brown Continues Prop. 13 Attack

By JACKIE HYMAN
Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. renewed his attack on Proposition 13 today in a speech to the California Peace Officers Association convention in Newport Beach.

Brown, speaking at the Newport Inn, referred to the controversial Jarvis-Gann property tax cut bill as causing "a serious economic dislocation. UCLA predicted an unemployment rate of 10.1 percent if it passes."

Brown Veto Assailed By Younger

A governor should place "an absolute priority" on strengthening law enforcement, California Attorney General Evelle J. Younger said today in Newport Beach.

Younger, who is seeking the Republican nomination for governor, told the California Peace Officers Association at the Newport Inn that law enforcement deserves a higher priority to the governor than it has had.

Younger did not identify Gov. Edmund Brown Jr., who had finished speaking to the same group only a few minutes before, but his remarks were clearly intended as a criticism of the governor.

"Law enforcement should never again have to undertake the almost impossible task of overriding a governor's veto on a major public law such as the death penalty," Younger said.

Among the steps Younger said a governor should take are to extradite fugitive felons, back passage of laws authorizing electronic eavesdropping and witness immunity, and try to shorten the "seemingly endless rounds of pretrial motions and delays" in criminal cases.

Younger won a round of applause when he said "a governor should appoint (to judgeships and other legal boards) only people who believe that punishment is a legitimate means of controlling human behavior."

Egypt Vote Due

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — President Anwar Sadat, bedeviled by sniping from the parliamentary opposition, plans a referendum within days to seek authorization to "crush anyone who casts doubt" on his policies.

He said that in addition to cutting off $7 billion in property taxes, Prop. 13 would return to the federal government at least $2.7 billion the state now receives in revenue sharing.

The governor expressed his support for Proposition 8 which, coupled with the Behr Bill, is the Legislature's alternative tax relief proposal.

"The Behr bill is a cut, squeeze and trim bill," Brown said. "Our legislative analyst said that he doesn't think Ronald Reagan would have dared to propose this bill."

Brown expressed several criticisms of Prop. 13 saying it would cause uncertainty, cutbacks in vital services and eventually an unfair distribution of the property tax burden.

Citing a provision that raises taxes when property is sold under Prop. 13 Brown said "in five years more than half the people would be paying more under Prop. 13 than under Prop. 8."

Judge Delays Move On Waddill Retrial

By TOM BARLEY
Orange County Superior Court Judge H. Warren Knight refused today to order a new trial for Dr. William Baxter Waddill until he has had a chance to talk to the judge who presided over the first trial.

Judge Knight told Deputy District Attorney Robert Chatterton today that he will not grant the prosecutor's request for a second trial until he confers with Judge James K. Turner.

Judge Turner, who declared a mistrial in the first trial after the jury deadlocked, is on vacation.

Judge Knight said he will talk to Turner when he returns this week and then announce his decision June 2.

"There are many sensitive issues involved in this trial," Judge Knight said from the bench. "I want to give this case some very careful consideration and I need some background from Judge Turner."

Defense attorneys Malbour Watson and Charles Weedman said they are ready for a second trial if that is what Judge Knight decides and they will again defend Waddill.

Waddill, 42, of Huntington Harbor, is accused of strangling a newborn baby girl in the Westminster Community Hospital nursery on March 2, 1977.

TRIAL DECISION DELAYED Dr. William Waddill

The prosecution has alleged that he killed the infant when he realized that his attempt 12 hours earlier to abort the 18-year-old mother by injecting a saline solution into her had failed.

Waddill commented today that he is "bitterly disappointed" about Chatterton's determination to retry the case.

Jury Remains Out on Viejo Death Suit

The jury received the case from U.S. District Court Judge David Williams Friday morning.

Attorneys for Suanne Lewis of 25241 Campina Drive contended in the civil action that the aircraft manufacturer was negligent in the death of her Marine Corps pilot husband.

They claim the company should have warned pilots that a flight control mechanism might work in reverse during certain emergency situations.

Mrs. Lewis' husband, Lt. Col. Julius M. Lewis, was killed in 1975 when the C-131 transport aircraft he flew crashed into a hillside near El Toro Marine Corps Air Station.

Call Tragic Fire Victim His Brother SEATTLE (AP) — Firefighter Ed Shaw saw the dead man in the bedroom and realized he was beyond help. He went on to fight the blaze. Later, Shaw learned the victim was his brother, Robert, 39. "And just then I ran out of air for the mask and I had to go out," Shaw said. He said he didn't know the fire was at his sister's house until he arrived. "When I realized it was her house, I worried about my sister's children, Julie and her sister, Laurie," Shaw said. The girls were away. When Shaw searched the house, he found the victim, whom he did not recognize. "I went right to my brother, but I didn't know him. I thought maybe it was my niece's boyfriend," he said.

Onofre Project Resumes

Construction was to resume today on the $2.4 billion San Onofre nuclear plant south of San Clemente, after a restraining order issued late Friday banned striking Southern California Edison Company employees from picketing five plant gates.

Elsewhere on the Orange Coast, the strike includes the Edison Company plant in Huntington Beach, where pickets were posted again today.

The San Onofre restraining order was issued in San Diego by U.S. District Judge Leland Nielsen. It will be in effect until May 30, when Nielsen has scheduled a hearing on the matter.

While supervisory personnel have worked 12-hour shifts to keep the power plant running despite the strike by 125 utility workers, strikers picketing gates to the adjacent construction project had halted progress on two more generators.

Striking workers, who belong to Utility Workers Union Local 246, include maintenance, operating, clerical and technical employees at the nuclear plant.

The restraining order limits pickets to those gates used by Edison Company employees and bans them from the five gates used only by construction employees of Bechtel Power Company, which is building two nuclear generators scheduled for completion in 1981.

The strike began last week, after negotiations broke down over proposed changes in work schedules. No resumption of negotiations has been scheduled, David Barron of the Edison Company said today.

Capistrano City Hall Hit By Burglars

Burglars who chopped through a San Juan Capistrano city hall wall to rifle cash drawers and beat open a safe could be the same ones who broke into an auto agency and tennis club in the Mission City late last month, sheriff's investigators say.

Hacked open late Thursday or early Friday morning was the north wall of the city's council chambers, deputies reported. The burglars showed "no finesse" in beating open the safe, a deputy added. Taken was $85 in cash.

Deputies had characterized burglars who broke into Bill Yates Volkswagen-Porsche and the Capistrano Racquet Club last month as "pros" in deactivating alarm systems but "amateurs" in opening safes.

Huntington Office Building Torched

A fire set by arsonists who first ransacked two adjoining suites caused an estimated $8,000 damage to a Huntington Beach office building owned by actor Telly Savalas, fire department spokesmen reported today.

The blaze wrecked two units in the structure at 20902 Brookhurst St., occupied by real estate saleswoman Zoe Mathies, investigators said.

Firemen were dispatched to a report of smoke in the building Saturday at 7:16 a.m. but when they arrived they found flames raging inside the realty office.

"We had to tear out one whole wall," Fire Inspector Jim Merrill said today, in detailing how firemen brought the blaze under control.

He said it was clearly an arson-set fire based on evidence found at the scene which is still being studied today.

Inspector Merrill said the offices had been completely ransacked with business papers strewn about and then apparently ignited with matches.

Investigators declined to speculate whether it was an attempt to cover up a burglary or possibly a vengeful act against Miss Mathies for some unknown reason.

3 El Capitan Climbers Die; Probe Due

YOSEMITE NATIONAL PARK (AP) — Three Minnesota men fell 1,400 feet to their deaths while trying to climb El Capitan in Yosemite National Park, Park Superintendent Leslie Arnberger said.

The three killed Sunday were identified by Arnberger as John Paul Garton, 24, and John Edward Nygard, 22, both of Bloomington, and Jeffrey Joseph Graves, 22, of Fridley.

They had begun a registered climb of the rock Saturday, he said.

The three were roped together and when one man fell, the other two were pulled out of their securing devices and also fell, Arnberger said.

He said the cause of the accident is under investigation. The men were experienced climbers, Arnberger said.

The superintendent also said there was a witness to the accident.

said. "This seems to have become a very personal thing with the prosecutor and he's determined to punish me one way or the other."

Waddill clarified the comment by explaining that the first trial had cost him $500,000. He said he would raise the same amount of money for a second trial, if necessary, "but I don't know where I'm going to find it all yet."

"It's a shame that this decision should have been taken by the prosecution," attorney Watson said. "Dr. Waddill should not have been forced to undergo a second trial after the jury made it clear in the first trial that they could not accept the prosecution's case."

Defense attorneys raised the possibility today that the second trial, if ordered, may be held in some other county on the grounds that heavy publicity stemming from the first trial may prevent Dr. Waddill from getting a fair second trial.

"It's something that Dr. Watson and Dr. Waddill and I must talk about," Weedman said. "I think we'll have an answer by June 2."

Appeals Exhausted

Patty Hearst Back to Prison

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Convicted bank robber Patricia Hearst, who lost appeals to the nation's highest court, is returning to prison today to serve the remainder of a seven-year sentence, according to U.S. Attorney G. William Hunter. Hunter said the newspaper heiress would go to the Federal Correctional Institute at Pleasanton, 30 miles east of San Francisco, under terms of an agreement between U.S. District Court Judge William H. Orrick Jr. and her attorneys.

She has been free on $1 million bail while her attorneys exhausted legal appeals of her 1976 conviction of joining her terrorists kidnappers, the Symbionese Liberation Army, in an armed San Francisco bank robbery.

Dennis Harvey, executive assistant to the Pleasanton Warden, said this morning the prison had not been notified of Miss Hearst's arrival, the standard procedure with most surrenders.

Miss Hearst, 24, has served 14 months of the sentence, part of it at the campus-like minimum security Pleasanton facility. She would need to serve another 14 months before becoming eligible for parole.

Miss Hearst lost her last chance to remain free when the U.S. Supreme Court refused March 24 to review her 1975 conviction for an April 15, 1974 bank robbery.

Since her release on bail, Miss Hearst has been living with her apartment and recently in a home in suburban Hillsborough. On her rare public appearances, she has been accompanied by bodyguards, as specified in the court order setting conditions for her bail.

Her new attorney, George Martinez, was unavailable for comment.

Boston lawyer Ai Johnson, who has been a friend of Miss Hearst, officially withdrew from the case three weeks ago but was in San Francisco today, according to his Boston office.

Miss Hearst spent Mothers Day and her final hours as a free woman today cloistered with her entire family at their Hillsborough home. The Times in San Mateo reported.

She was described by a family source as "extremely depressed" about the prospect of returning to prison, according to The Times.

The paper said the 24-year-old heiress spent the past week at the family estate at San Simeon quietly preparing for her return to custody.

Companions at the famous estate, built by her grandfather, William Randolph Hearst, included two sisters, Anne and Vicki. She reportedly expressed concern that all but 15 days of her previous time in jail was spent in solitary confinement.

The U.S. Senate was expected to vote late this afternoon on the arms pact.

Junior High Burglarized In San Juan

Between $3,000 and $5,000 in cash and equipment were reported taken from Marco Forster Junior High School, 25671 Camino del Avion, San Juan Capistrano, by burglars early Sunday or late Saturday.

County sheriff's deputies believe two or three people entered the school by prying open a door with a heavy crowbar.

Entered, deputies said, were the business office, photo lab, a music room, a science lab and several classrooms.

Taken were cameras, tape recorders, television taping equipment and cash from drawers and desks.

Two-way TV Helps Kids

Irvine School Project Brings World to Class

By JACKIE HYMAN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Second grade students at Greentree School in Irvine swap songs and stories with residents of a Laguna Beach nursing home.

WOLD

They show Japanese students what their school looks like and get a look at today's life in Japan in turn. They take their fellow students on a tour of UC Irvine's biology building and someday may be able to meet people all over the world, face to face.

Television is their magic carpet.

The students in Nancy Wold's class are using videotape equipment to learn about the world around them and to help them see the connections among history, science and reading.

"I think it's important to teach kids how to talk back to their television," Miss Wold said. "To my kids, TV is no longer a one-way project."

The equipment consists of a video tape recorder, a black and white camera and a monitor TV screen, all of which can be operated by the children.

Since September, her students have used the video equipment in ways ranging from personal studies to exchanges with other groups.

Students have filmed tours of the UC Irvine biology department and of fire and police stations, which they share with other students.

Via a two-way television system, they have also listened to a talk on cancer by a UCI professor and responded with questions.

Lessons on Haiku poetry and Cinco de Mayo have been exchanged with University Park School students via the two-way system.

One result of the video, Miss Wold said, is that students "are much more able to communicate. They're forced to put down the information so someone else can understand."

To make the subject of geography more immediate, she arranged with the English-speaking Canadian Academy in Japan to exchange videotape "letters" about local foods and locales.

There are key differences between seeing a tape made last week by Japanese students and watching a commercial film strip, Miss Wold said.

"It's much more immediate," she said. "Also, the kids have more control. They can say, 'I was interested in your harbor. Could you show us more?'"

One of the projects Miss Wold is especially excited about is an exchange with residents of the Laguna Beach Nursing Home.

She spends her own time visiting the home with the portable video pack and interviewing the residents.

"One of the things I wanted to do was expose my students to aspects of life they may not be familiar with," Miss Wold said. "I also felt that these people have a lot to offer."

The older people tell about their lives and childhoods, while the students in turn make films about their current activities.

Using tapes instead of actual visits is easier because it eliminates transportation problems and because the children feel relaxed in a familiar environment, Miss Wold said. Eventually some of the children will visit their new friends.

"Today we looked on the map to find where the people said they were born," Miss Wold said. "We had one lady who turned 100. Can you imagine talking to someone who's 100?"

"The students love to hear the stories, the fact that these people had horses when they were little. What it was like without television. One of the kids asked, 'How did you have fun without Disneyland?'"

Graves Stay; Parking Nixed

TORRINGTON, Conn. (AP) — Community opposition apparently has buried a proposal to evict several bodies from a 19th-century cemetery to make room for a parking lot.

Alfred Waterfall, a local bank president who made the suggestion, says, "It's time the idea was dropped."

Waterfall had said relocating the graves could be done with "grace and courtesy," but some city officials said it was too expensive, some relatives of the dead objected, and an undertaker who serves on the parking authority said 150-year-old remains might constitute a health hazard.

Victim's Ex Held in Death

The ex-wife of a Santa Ana man whose body was found floating in an apartment house swimming pool Saturday has been booked on suspicion of murder, police said today.

Officers said they are still awaiting results of an autopsy to learn the cause of death of Donald A. McCullough, 48, of 200 W. Keller Ave.

However, officers said they believe a blunt instrument may have been used to kill McCullough.

Booked on suspicion of murder was McCullough's ex-wife, Barbara L. Burns, 47, of the same Keller Avenue address.

CIA Acts 'Mistake'

Ex-director Reviews Vietnam War

NEW YORK (AP) — In the days when the CIA's paramilitary skills were freely in use around the world, he sent the first sabotage teams into North Vietnam.

From those clandestine beginnings grew the intense American bombing of North Vietnam and the commitment of 550,000 U.S. ground troops. The man who admits to starting it all, William Colby, later director of the CIA, now believes it was all a mistake.

In his book published today by Simon & Schuster, "Honorably Men: My Life in the CIA," Colby argues that "whether we could have won or lost," the only way to have sensibly fought the Vietnam war was at the village level as a political struggle against the communists, using only Vietnamese forces.

Colby went on to play a major role in counterinsurgency and pacification programs in Vietnam, but in his book he clearly believes that it was then a lost cause.

As CIA station chief in Saigon in 1963, Colby writes of attending a Hawaii conference where plans were discussed to escalate the war. He tried to convince then Secretary of Defense Robert MacNamara that the sabotage teams sent into North Vietnam had disappeared quickly from radio contact and possibly were captured "and that putting such teams into the north did not and would not work."

Colby wrote that MacNamara "listened to me with a cold look and he rejected my advice. The desire to put pressure onto

UPI Telephone
VIETNAM 'A MISTAKE'
Ex-CIA Director Colby

North Vietnam prevailed, and there and then the United States military started the planning and activity that would escalate finally to full-scale air attacks."

Colby criticizes the late President Kennedy for going along with "what I still consider the worst mistake of the war, the American-sponsored overthrow of President Ngo Dinh Diem," and writes that earlier two "high ranking" United States officials clearly implied that the CIA should assassinate Ngo Dinh Nhu, Diem's brother and opponent of American plans for reform.

But Colby also believes that Kennedy "would at the very least, had he lived, recognized the futility of a massive military buildup as a way to fight a guerrilla war . . . We would not have had half a million American soldiers involved, nor experienced the casualties they suffered and inflicted by their operations."

On a visit to the White House after Kennedy's death, Colby tried to persuade presidential adviser McGeorge Bundy "to get our programs back to the village level and build up from there, instead of endlessly debating where to bomb North Vietnam."

Colby said Bundy replied that "I might be right in my approach but he thought the structure of the American government would never permit it to be applied. But the result was the Vietnam war as we now know it."

President Richard Nixon also believed in maximum force. He writes in his memoirs, which went on sale last week in advance of today's official publication date, that on a visit to Vietnam in 1964, then U.S. Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge "argued against pursuing Viet Cong forces into Laos or Cambodia. Even more surprising to me," Nixon wrote, "Lodge said American troops should avoid fighting the Viet Cong except to retaliate when Americans were killed. I could hardly believe that I was hearing this from one as versed as Cabot Lodge in the tactics and techniques of international communism."

Candidates Air Views In El Toro

Saddleback Valley area residents are invited to meet and question some June primary candidates at a public issues forum scheduled for 7 p.m. May 25 at Los Alisos Intermediate School, 25171 Moor Avenue, El Toro.

Sponsored by the Saddleback Valley Board of Realtors' Governmental Relations Committee, the forum will allow candidates to present their views to the public, representative Loretta McVey said.

Republican assembly candidates, James Green, Anthony Matano, Marian Bergeson, Lee Watkins and Robert Wilkes and Democratic assembly candidate James Parker have confirmed their attendance.

John Schmitz, Gil Ferguson, James Martindale, George Scott, and Jon S. Brand, Republican senatorial candidates, and Ron Cordova and Gregory Kuczynski, seeking the Democratic senatorial nomination, are to present their views, Miss McVey said.

A guest appearance by incumbent supervisor Thomas Riley is expected, she said.

HB Brothers Abducted Kidnap Trial Set For Gang Cyclist

A 31-year-old Buena Park motorcycle gang member is slated to be arraigned in Orange County Superior Court May 25 on charges he kidnapped two Huntington Beach brothers March 9.

Police have found no trace of Charles Duane Taylor, 20, of 1513 Alabama St., Huntington Beach, and Allan Greg Taylor, 22, of Santa Ana, since the alleged abduction at gunpoint.

Thomas Floyd Pugh, now in Orange County Jail in lieu of $50,000 bail, is charged with the kidnapping that allegedly occurred at the younger Taylor's Huntington Beach apartment.

Pugh was arrested March 10 and charged with the alleged kidnapping but was later released due to insufficient evidence.

Two witnesses, Nancy Arroyo and Ken McClasand, reportedly staying at the Alabama Street apartments at the time of the incident, testified in West Orange County Judicial District court Wednesday that Pugh and another unidentified man abducted the Taylor brothers.

Deputy District Attorney Ted Johnson said an unnamed co-defendant has also been charged with the kidnap.

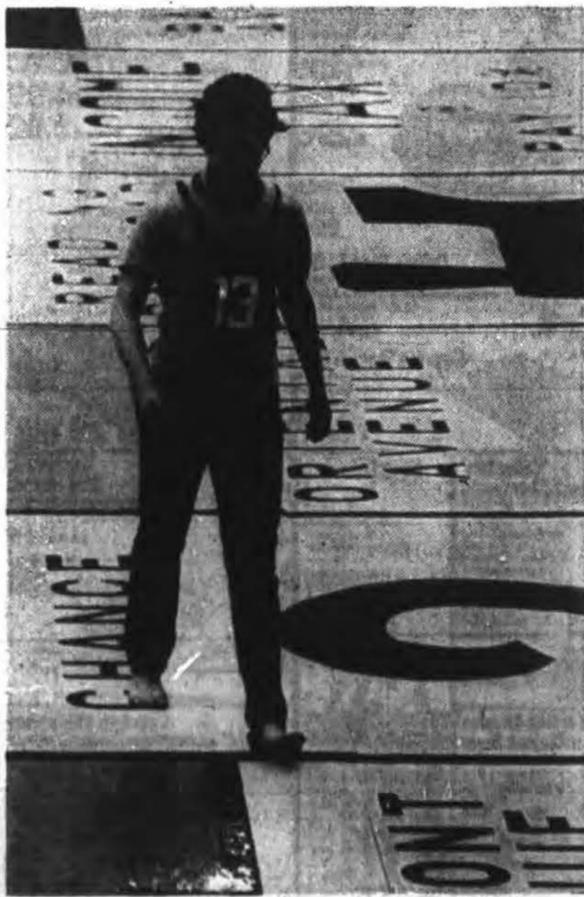

It is alleged that Pugh and an accomplice confronted the Taylor brothers, Miss Arroyo and McClasand at the rear of an apartment at about 9 p.m. and fired several shots in the air.

It is further alleged that one of the gunmen fired near the four victims after they were forced to lie face down on the ground. No one was struck by the shot, police said.

Prosecutor Johnson said Pugh also faces another separate charge of assault with a deadly weapon on the Taylor brother's stepbrother, Ryan Baker, 29, of Huntington Beach.

Orange County Sheriff's deputies arrested Pugh in a Cypress-area park March 16 and charged him again with wounding Baker and kidnapping the Taylor brothers.

Authorities have indicated that they believe the shootings and kidnappings are related to a long-standing feud between Pugh and Baker, who also is a motorcyclist with no gang affiliation.

Ahead of the Times

BLUE MONDAYS: One thing I've promised myself not to do this week is attend the annual convention of the National Society of Columnists. This is going on in Louisville. But I've been frightened off.

The cause of my dismay and reluctance to join this esteemed group is the description of the event offered by Bob Greene, the noted syndicated columnist of Field Newspaper Syndicate. Greene suggests of the gathering:

"IT PROMISES TO BE the biggest collection of pathological liars, manic depressives, con artists, hypochondriacs, social outcasts, rum-dum braggarts, morality-free vipers, bleary-eyed albies, alimony-dodging mashers and flat-out deadbeats since the day they merged the original Georgia Prison Farm with the State Dungeon for the Hopelessly Addled."

GREENE

Obviously, Mr. Greene thinks a lot of the group. He goes on to note that, "Newspaper columnists are a notoriously desperate lot. Taken one by one, they are relatively harmless. All you have to do is turn the page."

How harmful they might be as a group, however, Greene does not speculate. He does go on to suggest a profile of the typical columnist:

"If you are lucky, you have never known a newspaper columnist. If you are unlucky, you know that:

"If you tell a newspaper columnist that you are dying of a dread disease, he will ask you to keep a diary and give it to him.

"A newspaper columnist would trade away the First Amendment, the people's right to know, and his mother's virtue in exchange for two ideas that will put him a couple of days ahead of deadline.

"IF YOU SAY SOMETHING funny to a newspaper columnist, he will steal it and claim it for his own; if you say something that makes sense, he will twist it around, misquote you and make you sound dumb.

"A newspaper columnist is as good as his word, unless he needs to betray you for a column.

"A newspaper columnist is dedicated to his profession because he loves the underdog, believes in truth, and no one has ever offered him a real job."

THUS AT THE CONVENTION of these sterling characters, seminars will be conducted on such heady topics as, "Adjusting Your Margins in a Metric World" and "Outdoor Writing: The Importance of Properly Grounding Your Electric Typewriter During Thunderstorms."

One of the key workshops to be conducted at the convention will probe the techniques whereby one columnist may steal ideas from another.

Maybe that's why I don't need to attend the conclave. I already know how to do that. Obviously.

Zaire Battles Rebel Forces

KINSHASA, Zaire (AP) — Zaire's army is battling rebel invaders in mineral-rich Shaba province for the second time in 14 months and reports today from foreigners in the area indicate the government's position is "deteriorating."

Reliable Belgian sources in Brussels said the rebels have seized the town of Mutshatsha and part of Kolwezi, the copper-mining center of the southeastern province of the central African nation, formerly the Belgian Congo. Zairean sources denied Mutshatsha had fallen.

ZAIRES OFFICIAL news agency AZAP claims Cuban troops are with the Katangan rebels, and President Mobutu Sese Seko's Kinshasa government has asked the United States and other nations for help.

The Belgian sources also said the invaders were heading toward the town of Kamina and its Zairean military base. Kamina is about 100 miles north of Kolwezi, which lies 25 miles north of the Zairean border. Mutshatsha is 60 miles west of Kolwezi.

An American construction company with 100 employees and dependents at Kolwezi said they were unharmed.

BELGIAN AUTHORITIES would give no official indication of the extent of the rebel advance, saying their information was sketchy.

But a Belgian Foreign Ministry spokesman said that, according to reports from Belgians in Shaba, the situation "which had seemed rather reassuring in the first hours of the attack seems to be deteriorating."

AZAP said Katangan exiles and Cuban troops crossed Zaire's southern border with Zambia on Thursday night. The Belgian ministry said 4,000 invaders in civilian clothes came from Angola, crossed northern Zambia, infiltrated Kolwezi and seized part of the town in an attack.

AZAP said Zairean troops repelled an attack Sunday at Mutshatsha. It claimed Cuban troops aided the invaders there.

Learjet Inventor Dies

75-year-old Pioneer 'Met Life With Confidence'

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Jim Greenwood remembers once telling multimillionaire inventor William Lear that he should go back to school to learn the meaning of the word "impossible."

The reply: "I don't want to."

"HE FELT THAT life could be met with confidence and the supreme feeling that anything could be done and any challenge could be met," said Greenwood, vice president of corporate affairs for Gates Learjet Corp. in Wichita, Kan.

Lear, who died of leukemia here at age 75 Sunday, represented the "true Horatio Alger story," said Greenwood in a telephone interview Sunday night. "I don't think there's any other man who reflected the true American pioneering spirit."

Lear, whose fortune was estimated at $75 million, pioneered the small corporate jet that took his name. He also invented the car radio, the eight-track stereo and the autopilot, which enables an airplane to fly a set course without the manual steering of a pilot.

In all he held about 150 patents.

LEAR THRIVED ON work but also had a reputation at play. He was known for his parties, his gambling binges and his flamboyance.

His death interrupted his most recent transportation dream — a seven-passenger, 400 mph turboprop plane built mostly of plastic.

The one major project to stymie Lear was the steam-powered car. His effort to develop a steam turbine engine for cars and buses, begun in a period of boredom and depression, cost him about $17 million. A prototype automobile was made but never put into production.

LEAR'S DRIVE TO succeed was largely shaped by the economic deprivations of his childhood in Hannibal, Mo. At age 12, Lear prepared a "blueprint" to overcome those hardships.

"I resolved first to make enough money so I'd never be stopped from finishing anything," Lear said several years ago. "Second, that to accumulate money in a hurry — and I was in a hurry — I'd have to invent something that people wanted, and third, that if I ever was going to stand on my own feet, I'd have to leave home."

At the age of 16, Lear joined the Navy, where he was a radio operator during World War I. He said he gave up the Navy after deciding it would "take too long to become an admiral."

LEAR FOUNDED HIS first company, the Radio Coil and Wire Corp., in 1926. He traded it in 1930 for one-third interest in the Galvin Manufacturing Co. of Chicago. After Lear developed the car radio, Galvin Manufacturing became the Motorola Corp.

Lear Developments, later Lear Inc., was formed in 1930. It had 5,000 employees producing aerospace and other electronic equipment at plants in California, Ohio and Germany when he sold his interests to a subsidiary of The Gates Rubber Co. of Denver in 1963 for an estimated $28 million. It became Gates Learjet Corp.

Boy Drowns In Bucket

BRIDGEPORT, Conn. (AP) — A 15-month-old boy apparently drowned in a mop bucket in a bathroom after he wandered from the living room where his father had dozed, police said.

A relative found the body of Sebastian Morales head-first in the bucket, said police Sgt. Arthur Buchanan.

He called the death accidental.

'Daring Game' TV Porn Upsets Audience

BONITA SPRINGS, Fla. (AP) — The TV directory listed it as "Daring Game," a Lloyd Bridges thriller set in Latin America. But viewers tuning in WEVU-TV saw instead naked men and women frolicking in a hay loft and shouting obscenities at each other and police.

The movie was taken off the air at midnight Sunday after running a half an hour, said Joseph Buerry, the station's general manager who blamed the incident on a mix-up at the film distributors. The title of the film was not known.

BUERRY SAID THE originally scheduled movie was accidentally returned to the distributor and was replaced by the pornographic film, which was not previewed before air time.

The station "assumed the distributors had edited the film," said Buerry.

WEVU-TV was inundated with phone calls, as were several other neighboring television stations on Florida's southwest coast.

A switchboard operator at nearby WINK-TV said she fielded some 10 calls about the film. She said most were from viewers, who were upset because the film had been taken off the air.

Swain Denies Royal Troth With Margaret

LONDON (AP) — Princess Margaret's brewer heir companion, Roddy Llewellyn, says he doesn't consider himself responsible for Margaret's divorce and that he won't be marrying her.

It was announced last week that Princess Margaret will divorce her husband of 16 years, Lord Snowdon.

"I do not consider myself in any way responsible for the divorce," Llewellyn told British reporters in Tangier, Morocco, the London Daily Telegraph reported Sunday.

The 30-year-old nightclub singer was quoted as saying he will continue to see the 47-year-old sister of Queen Elizabeth II, but, he added, "There is no chance of my marrying Princess Margaret."

Llewellyn, who has been staying at York Castle in Tangier for several weeks, was also quoted by the newspaper as saying his friendship with the princess was "greatly exaggerated."

For Inflation Business Blames Carter's Policy

By JOHN CUNIFF
"What we do in our pricing is not as important as a $60 billion budget deficit," said C. William "Bill" Verity Jr., chairman of Armo Inc., in response to a question on inflation.

Verity permitted no misunderstanding. In his view, steel prices were not a cause of inflation but a response to it. The source of inflation, he indicated, was in Washington. In the budget deficit.

HIS PRESIDENT, HARRY Holiday Jr., agreed. In a conversation earlier, he had commented on the dangers of running such a deficit while the country was at the peak of its most recent economic expansion.

Holiday blamed the situation on President Carter and said he looked beyond to the day when a more decisive president would recognize that a deficit of such magnitude can only force prices higher.

"We have to balance the budget," Verity said again to the small audience of news people, gathered by Armo for a traditional annual dinner and presentation about steel and the economy's future.

"WASHINGTON'S SOLUTION to everything is to spend more," he continued, after explaining that inflation is the top economic concern of his company. "The people will rebel," he said.

Asked how he would correct it, Verity suggested a moratorium on new spending and a "good look" at existing commitments "until we can get inflation out of the system."

These were not isolated views but rather indicative of much business commentary. Business tends to view the budget as the inflation engine and itself as the hapless victim tied to the railroad tracks.

The view suggests that public support for the president's anti-inflation efforts may be only a practical measure, not in camaraderie with the administration against a common evil.

The evil, business is saying over and over again, is the deficit. To blame business, they say, is to blame the victim for not breaking the shackles and getting off the railroad tracks.

NATION'S BUSINESS, A MONTHLY magazine published by the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, tested the thinking of its readers and then produced an article for its current issue that begins:

"President Carter's plan to curb inflation with voluntary wage and price constraints gets a no vote from readers."

Many are blunt in saying the government should look to its own deficit spending actions as a big first step in halting inflation.

In a report just issued, Merrill Lynch Economics concedes that some of the increasing inflation pressures are typical of the latter stages of most expansions. But the chief culprit, it says, is government action.

With such forecasts circulating, can a firm draw its own conclusions of business attitudes toward an invitation from Washington to participate in a voluntary program of inflation restraints.

Skinny Real Estate Hamstrings Deal

CONCORD (AP) — A strip of land three-quarters of an inch wide has come between Concord and plans to renovate its downtown shopping area.

Ownership of the spaghetti-like property remains a mystery, because county land records show the lot but not the owner.

Nobody knows why surveyors shaped the lot three-quarters of an inch wide by 500 feet long.

The only certainty is that the parcel of land must be condemned to make way for a 103,000-square-foot business.

If the owner is found, city officials will have to bargain with him over the value of the land. Some say it's worthless.

But City Councilman Richard La Pointe said, "You could make a laser beam testing ground."

'Acting Producer' Cracks Sex Barrier

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — In the early 1950s, Nancy Malone, then, 16, acted in CBS' "I Remember Mama," produced by Doris Quinlan. Now, she's in a CBS movie, "Like Mother, Like Me," also produced by a woman.

And it's not hard for actress Malone to consult with the producer. She is the producer of this as-yet scheduled film starring Linda Lavin and young Kristy McNichol.

Miss Malone is among the handful of women who in recent years have cracked the traditional old-boy network of actual and apprentice moguls making television shows here.

HER ACTING credits go from "Kraft Theater" to "77 Sunset Strip." Her producer credits include "Bionic Woman," an NBC kiddie special; two NBC movies, two CBS comedies, and now "Mother."

A red-haired, articulate New Yorker of Irish-American heritage, she says she began the transition from acting to producing five years ago because of gripes she made earlier to a pal, Tom Moore.

He ran ABC at the time. Her gripes at the time concerned the dreadful or demeaning roles usually offered women on TV.

"I was generally mouthing off," she grinned. "And he said,

"Well, I wish you'd get off your back about all this and do something about it." I said, "I'm an actress, what can I do?"

SHE FOUND OUT when he left ABC to head Tomorrow Entertainment, the firm that did "Miss Jane Pittman." He offered Miss Malone a job as a story analyst and the chance to learn the producing business.

She said she gave it much thought, as the weekly pay was $200, not the $1,500 she could get for just one series episode. But she took a big breath, then the Tomorrow job, and commenced learning.

Since then, in addition to producing, she's been director of TV development and later vice president for comedy at 20th Century-Fox, which she left last July to resume independent production work.

She agrees with a theory that the recent emphasis on TV films with strong roles for women — such as "Mother" — indicates the networks suddenly realize that women usually rule the TV set at home.

"SURE," SHE SAID, "I don't know why they weren't aware of that, because so much advertising is geared toward the women in the family."

Driving Away From 'Hartman'

By JAY SHARBUTT

MALIBU (AP)—It was a lovely day outside Louise Lasser's beach home. The blue Pacific rumbled rhythmically, the air was crisp and salty. An occasional seagull cried by, seeking free eats.

But inside, Miss Lasser, the spacy heroine of "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman," sat chain-smoking. She seemed tired, wan, and generally resembled a new, nervous writer. Which is what she is.

On May 22, NBC airs her first script, "Just Me and You." It's a film whose auburn-haired author, off TV work since the spring of 1977, makes her return to the tube. She'll co-star with Charles Grodin.

THE FLICK IS a kind of road romance. Two strangers, a daft damsel and an uptight computer salesman, team up for one of those "drivers-wanted" car trips from New York to Los Angeles.

Miss Lasser said she finished the script's first draft in 1976, ceased scribbling when she began "Hartman," then did the hard part — rewrites — after leaving her syndicated series.

The New York-born actress has formally studied emoting, but never writing. She was married four years, though, to a pretty fair scribe, Woody Allen, of Oscar-winning "Annie Hall" fame.

A VETERAN OF five Allen films, from "Bananas" to "Everything You Always Wanted to Know About Sex," Miss Lasser was asked what prompted her to try her hand at the scripting dodge.

"It just seems a nice thing to do when you're alone," she said. "I did it in the morning, when there's not too much noise." How'd the first script take shape? She shrugged and smiled.

"I don't know," she said in her soft, little-girl's voice. "I just did it as an exercise first. I'd get up every morning, and I wrote two characters, what one would say to the other."

"EVEN, 'I DON'T' feel like writing this morning." Then, "Why don't you feel like writing this morning?"

Such could lead to a fitting for a canvas shawl. In her case, it led to a two-character movie on which filming began in January. The final product was printed just three days before her interview.

The previous night, there'd been a private screening for various Hollywood folk. Unlike most new authors, Miss Lasser didn't lurk in the wings, trying to eavesdrop on reactions to the two-hour movie.

ONE REASON IS that she didn't want to intimidate anyone. And, she says, "I was too scared. I saw it earlier and the biggest shock I saw on the screen was: 'Written by Louise Lasser.'"

Miss L., who has a three-picture NBC deal, seemed pleased when told one screener, a woman who works for Screen

Lear and is regarded as a tough, honest critic-in-mufti, lavishly praised the movie.

The interview moved on to other matters. But the rookie wordsmith, during a lull in the chat, proved she is no exception among new authors who can't wait for the reviews.

"Tell me," Louise Lasser, the writer, said shyly. "What did she say about the movie, again?"
