FORMER LOVERS WILL BE REUNITED IN COURT TODAY

Lee Marvin's 'Love Trial' Opens Today

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Eight years after they called it quits, Oscar-winning actor Lee Marvin and his former lover, Michelle Triola Marvin, met in court today for a lanrmark trial involving love, money and the changing morality of American couples.

Jury selection was to begin today in the suit filed by Miss Marvin, who legally changed her name while she lived with Marvin. She is suing for the same compensation a wife would get in a divorce — half the property accumulated during their six years together — or $1 million.

They were never married and Marvin is contesting the right to use his name.

Marvin and his attorneys were expected to argue that the mere fact that Marvin never married Miss Marvin shows he wanted to avoid the responsibilities and obligations of marriage.

Marvin has filed a countersuit asking $1 million from Miss Marvin for compensation for the companionship and other services he provided during their relationship.

"I was like a wife to Lee," she has said. ". . . I took a care of Lee like he was a baby chicken."

The case, which has already created legal precedents on appeal, is expected to have a national impact. Many others involved in non-marital relationships have filed similar suits alleging they are entitled to everything from pension rights to alimony.

Man Shot, Killed

POMONA (AP) — Police said a man was shot and killed Monday after wounding a pursuing officer three times, following an armed robbery at a mattress factory. The dead man, between 25 and 29 years old, was not immediately identified.

Tax Cut Posed

State Budget To Slash Jobs

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Gov. Edmund Brown Jr., will propose a $19.8 billion budget that eliminates 5,140 state jobs and abolishes 15 licensing boards, the Sacramento Union reported today.

The newspaper also detailed a $1.2 billion state income tax cut Brown mentioned in his inaugural address Monday, quoting figures it said came from an advance copy of the budget.

The Democratic governor's staff refused comment until the budget is submitted to the state Legislature on Wednesday.

The account quotes Brown as saying in an introduction to the budget that the spending plan is a blueprint for "leaner government" and is "substantially below all proposed constitutional spending limits. But it keeps faith with the vision and conscience of California" by building for the future in the areas of arts, affirmative action, urban parks, apprenticeship training, enforcement of labor laws and housing, it said.

Among budget highlights in the preview of the budget:

—State personal income tax credits would be increased to $125 for individuals and $250 for couples, for a total savings to taxpayers of $915 million on 1979 taxes. Those tax credits would be received on returns filed in early 1980.

The permanent level of the credits, which taxpayers deduct from their total tax bills before sending in checks or filing for refunds, is $27 for individuals and $54 for couples. But the credits on 1978 returns were increased to $100 and $200 in a one-

Huntington Man Guilty In Shooting

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A blind Huntington Beach man was convicted Monday of charges stemming from the shooting of a U.S. Immigration Service official last summer.

Robert Corbett, 42, was ordered to return Jan. 29 for sentencing after he was found guilty of assault with intent to commit murder and assault with a deadly weapon. The verdict, which was reached and sealed by the nine-man, three-woman jury on Friday, was opened Monday in the presence of Superior Court Judge Frances Rothschild.

Corbett, of 19832 Providence Lane, remained in custody in lieu of $100,000 bail.

Corbett was accused of emptying a .22-caliber revolver at acting Immigration and Naturalization Service Director Omer Sewell last July 14.

727 Jetliner In Near Miss With Cessna

SAN DIEGO (AP) — "My heart was in my stomach," says an airline pilot after his 727 jetliner narrowly missed colliding with a single-engine Cessna over San Diego.

Last September, a Cessna and a commercial jetliner collided as they were approaching Lindbergh Field, killing 144 people in the worst air disaster in U.S. history.

A spokesman for Continental Airlines said the Boeing 727 was on final landing approach Monday when its pilot saw the small plane coming straight at it.

In the final seconds, the jetliner turned, missing the Cessna by less than 500 feet, the company spokesman said.

Controllers at Lindbergh Field said the Cessna was flying through the busy airspace without radio contact with the Lindbergh tower or with the nearby radar air traffic control facility at Miramar Naval Air Station.

The Continental jet was land-

Mediator Message Awaited

By RAYMOND ESTRADA JR.
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

The Huntington Beach Union High School District teacher strike entered its fifth day today with no end in sight to the current contract dispute.

District officials reported 507 teachers either on strike or ill Monday as substitute teachers manned classes where 28 percent of the school district's 20,900 students were absent.

Teacher and district negotiators are awaiting word from a state-appointed mediator on possible renewal of contract talks that broke off three weeks ago.

Teacher leaders say they are still demanding a five percent pay boost for the 1978-79 school year, a similar salary raise for 1979-80 if the state rules it is legal and binding arbitration in grievances.

But school board members are refusing to budge on their position that the state-imposed salary freeze must be lifted before a five percent raise is granted.

Trustees say they are

'Animal House' Prank

Five USC Students Jailed in Newport

Five members of a University of Southern California fraternity found themselves in Newport Beach jail this week following a prank police assert may have been inspired by the film "Animal House."

Released on their own recognizance following their arrest on suspicion of burglary were Terrence Patrick Moloney, '19, of Palos Verdes, Jeffrey George Ris, 19, of Los Angeles, David Jeffrey Crowell, 18, of Los Angeles, Randall Keith Pittman, 20, of Los Angeles and Charles William Hayden, 20, of Los Angeles.

Sgt. Bob Gatewood said the five were arrested about 7 p.m. Sunday at Oakwood Apartments, 16th Street at Irvine Avenue in Newport Beach, after a tenant reported a burglary in progress at an apartment clubhouse.

He said the suspects allegedly were driving a rented truck in which police found chairs and a U.S. Flag belonging to the apartment complex. Also found in the truck were a garden hose and a state freeway sign, Gatewood said.

He said a spokesman for Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity at USC said they have had problems with pranks ever since "Animal House" was released.

Brown 'Welcomed'

GOP Happy at Conservative Speech

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Republican leaders are gleefully welcoming Gov. Edmund Brown Jr to their party after his inaugural speech, and some disgruntled Democratic liberals apparently think he belongs there.

"It was awful. I do not think poor people should be left out in the cold by a governor or president " Assembly Health Committee Chairman Art Torres, D-Los Angeles, said after attending the televised address Monday night.

Some Democrats did praise the tone of the 20-minute speech and several Republicans questioned Brown's sincerity as a budget-cutter.

"Until a bill is signed into law, I believe nothing," said Senate Republican Caucus Chairman H.L. Richardson of Arcadia. He said Brown was "on a presidential treadmill."

But most of the reaction centered on Brown's stress on fiscal issues — a proposed $1 billion tax cut, more verbal embrace of the Proposition 13 tax revolt, and a constitutional ban on federal deficit spending — and the scant attention he paid to social problems.

"I was disappointed that there was no more attention given to human needs," said Sen. Alan Sieroty, D-Los Angeles.

Campbell, noting that Brown called Proposition 13 "a can of worms" before last June's election, observed, "A can of worms is now a gourmet meal."

State AFL-CIO leader John Henning, usually a Brown supporter, called the speech "warmed-over Herbert Hoover."

GOVERNOR URGES TAX CUT — Page A5

California State Employees Association President William Craib said Brown's proposal to eliminate 5,000 state jobs "scapegoats the people who work for government."

The Democratic leaders of the Legislature's two houses, Senate President Pro Tem James Mills of San Diego and Assembly Speaker Leo McCarthy, praised the speech, though McCarthy had some reservations.

McCarthy said he thought there would be "broad agreement" on a $1 billion tax cut, which he proposed earlier in the day with support from Brown.

But McCarthy said he would have given more stress to such problems as employment and mental health. And though he endorsed a ban on federal deficit spending, he cautioned that California could expect to lose $6 billion in federal aid under the proposal, and added that he didn't see the need for the national constitutional convention endorsed by Brown.

Assembly Speaker Pro Tem John Knox, D-Richmond, said Brown's endorsement of a ban on job discrimination against homosexuals was "courageous."

But Knox and Torres warned that a national constitutional convention could turn into an attack on the Bill of Rights.

However, a legislative sponsor of a resolution calling for the convention, Sen. Jerry Smith, D-Saratoga, insisted that it could be confined to a balanced-budget proposal.

Smith said 25 states have already passed such a resolution. If nine more states pass one, Congress will have to call a constitutional convention, the first since the United States was founded.

BUDGET. . .

—An additional $210 million would be earmarked for extra tax benefits for renters, who were left out of the Proposition 13 tax cut bonanza last year.

—The homeowner's tax exemption would be replaced by a new tax credit, a shift that would raise property tax bills slightly and reduce homeowner income tax bills by a comparable amount. It would save $10 million in administrative costs.

—Medi-Cal rate increases for doctors and others would be limited to 6 percent, and the total budget would grow 12.1 percent to $4.07 billion.

—The 19-campus state university and college system would lose about 800 employees for a combined savings of $14.6 million.

—Fifteen licensing boards in the Department of Consumer Affairs would be eliminated, including the cemetery, landscape architects, structural pest control and other boards which regulate 78,000 professionals.

—Licensing of real estate salespersons would be abolished, eliminating 350 jobs costing $14.5 million.

—Some 280 positions in the Health and Welfare Agency and 198 in the Department of Motor Vehicles would be eliminated.

—The California Highway Patrol would gain 59 dispatchers but lose 400 persons in the school crossing guard program.

—Another 106 positions would be added to the State Water Project, including staff for planning of a 1,000-megawatt coal-powered fuel plant and three 55-megawatt geothermal plants.

—Fifty-five toll bridge collectors would be eliminated, ending toll collections on some bridges between 10 p.m. and 6 a.m

Carter Sails French Racer

GOSIER, Guadeloupe (AP) — A barefoot President Carter spent the final day of a Caribbean vacation today sailing aboard a 60-foot French trimaran racer.

Carter and his 11-year-old daughter Amy boarded the three-hulled Seiko of yachting publisher Alain Glickman at a marina near the clifftop villa where the Carters have been staying since last week's summit with the leaders of France, Britain and West Germany.

The sailboat has no engine and had to be towed into the harbor. Her sails filled with a gentle breeze within a few minutes and she sailed off on a westerly course.

Trash Truck Driver Still Hospitalized

The driver of an Orange County trash truck that overturned Monday in Newport Beach was in serious condition today at Costa Mesa Hospital after suffering broken bones and other injuries.

Police said Gary Thiesen, 38, of Garden Grove, was injured after a car driven by Thelma Torres, 66, of 212 Princeton Drive, Costa Mesa, allegedly pulled out in front of him near the Harbor Municipal Courthouse on Jamboree Road.

Police said the Torres car was on Birch Street and the trash truck was southbound on Jamboree Road. Mrs. Torres was taken to Costa Mesa Memorial Hospital but was not admitted.

The accident spilled garbage onto Jamboree Road and blocked traffic for several hours, police said.

Iran Edict

Transfer of Royal Property Ordered

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi decreed today that all personal property of the Iranian royal family be turned over to a crown-sponsored foundation and ordered the release of 266 prisoners convicted by military tribunals.

Iran's state radio said the property, estimated to be valued at hundreds of millions of dollars, was being transferred to the Pahlavi foundation "for the use of religious, educational, social and welfare organizations organized by the people and run by them."

Palace sources said the divested property included the shah's vast domestic holdings in company stocks, banks, factories and land.

The moves were announced as the nation awaited word on when the shah intends to go abroad on an extended vacation to take opposition pressure off the new civilian government of Shahpour Bakhtiar.

The national Pars news agency said the 266 prisoners had been held at Tehran's central police department prison "for various offenses" and had been pardoned by the shah. Pars attributed the announcement to the imperial Iranian armed forces tribunal.

The announcement also said the pardon of other prisoners was being studied. The government previously said there were about 200 persons in prison convicted of non-capital political offenses, but today's announcement did not specify whether the pardoned group included these political prisoners.

The divestiture was seen as another step aimed at removing the taint of corruption from the royal family, 64 of whose members have gone abroad since political turmoil mounted here last fall.

This follows a previous royal decree issued last September in which the shah prohibited members of his family from having business dealings with the government or from controlling charitable organizations.

The $1 billion Pahlavi Foundation was created 18 years ago with a personal grant of $133 million of the shah's wealth for use by charitable organizations, orphanages and higher education.

While snow-covered Tehran was experiencing one of its quietest days in two months, there were reports of at least six deaths in anti-shah violence in the provinces.

CHAD GREEN PLAYS OUTSIDE MASSACHUSETTS COURT
Best Way to Treat Boy's Leukemia Debated

Life 'Risked'

Doctor Urges Chemotherapy

PLYMOUTH, Mass. (AP) — A Mexican doctor who used Laetrile to treat cancer patients says the life of 3-year-old Leukemia victim Chad Green could be endangered if his chemotherapy treatments are stopped.

"We cannot risk the life of the boy by withdrawing the chemotherapy," said Dr. Ernesto Contreras, who runs a clinic in Tijuana, Mexico.

He testified for Chad's parents, Diana and Gerald Green of Scituate, in their effort to win the right to decide how Chad's illness should be treated.

"I stated very clearly that chemotherapy should continue as the basic treatment with metabolic therapy, including the use of Laetrile, to improve the quality of the boy's life and, possibly, prolonging his remission," Contreras said in describing his testimony Monday before a closed court hearing. Judge Guy Volterra of Plymouth Superior Court is reviewing his April 18 order requiring the chemotherapy and making Chad a temporary ward of the state for purposes of treatment. During the treatment, he is still living with his parents.

The Greens are trying to regain legal custody of Chad in an effort to decide his treatment themselves.

The couple opposed chemotherapy for their son in earlier court fights and argued he should be treated only with Laetrile and a special diet. But now they indicate they might permit the chemotherapy to continue.

Laetrile is a trademark for a substance extracted from peach or apricot pits. Although advocates claim it can cure cancer, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration has banned it from interstate commerce, claiming there is no proof of its effectiveness or safety.

Penny Ante Millionaire

UTICA, N.Y. (AP) — Edwin Rommel, a 50-year-old foreman, deposited one million pennies at the bank, the result of 20 years of collecting. Afterward, Rommel said, "I don't want to see another penny."

The 20,000 rolls of pennies, which had been in eight metal footlockers at Rommel's home, filled up 200 $50 bags and weighed an estimated 3½ tons.

"I don't know why I started saving them," Rommel said Monday. "I didn't start out saving. I got up to about 13 or 14 dollars and I said I'll shoot for a new car, and when I had enough for a car, I said, 'Oh, hell, I'll shoot for a million'."

Top Judge Slain

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Two gunmen believed to be Basque terrorists assassinated Supreme Court Judge Miguel Cruz Cuenca today by stepping from a bus stop crowd and firing four bullets into him as he approached his official car to go to court, police said. eryone who has a date," says Marvin Mitchelson. Miss' Marvin's attorney, who has been involved in the case during seven years of litigation.

Mitchelson, who begins arguing pretrial motions today, seeks to prove to a jury that an oral, non-marital agreement is as binding as a marriage license when it comes to splitting assets acquired together.

"People are living together all over this country," says Mitchelson. "You have to deal with that."

In 1976, the California Supreme Court dealt with just that issue in a decision that upheld Mitchelson's contentions and set a precedent for division of property between unmarried cohabitants.

The court overruled two lower court decisions in the case and sent it back to Superior Court for retrial.

"During the past 15 years, there has been a substantial increase in the number of couples living together without marrying," said the court's opinion. "Such nonmarital relationships lead to legal controversy when one partner dies or the couple separates.

". . . We take this opportunity to resolve that controversy and to declare the principles which should govern distribution of property acquired in a nonmarital relationship."

The court then outlined a complex set of laws under which non-married couples could seek financial relief upon separation.

Since the decision, many suits have been filed under "Marvin vs. Marvin," including cases involving other celebrities — Nick Nolte, Alice Cooper, Rod Stewart and Britt Ecklund. None has come to trial.

Appropriately, the case that set the precedent will be the first to be decided by a jury.

Marvin, 54, and Miss Marvin, 46, met in 1964 during the filming of "Ship of Fools" in which they both had parts. Soon, they were living together — although Marvin was not divorced from his estranged wife until 1967.

Miss Marvin says she gradually gave up her career to concentrate on his and to "render full time services as a homemaker in return for his promise to support her."

staunchly opposed to binding arbitration since it might erode local control of schools.

No major strike violence has been reported but district officials have decided to bus some of the substitute teachers into the seven West Orange County high schools as a precaution.

Police patrols have watched substitute teachers board buses since last week when a rock was thrown at one of the vehicles. No one was hurt and no damage was reported.

Meanwhile, attorneys for the striking teachers are waiting for Citizens Legal Defense Alliance members to file legal papers for an anticipated court order aimed at halting the strike.

Bill Bianchi, spokesman for the district's 867 teachers, said teacher association officials have not officially received any legal notices concerning the strike.

Members of the Los Angeles-based citizens alliance say they plan to seek a temporary restraining order from Orange County Superior Court this afternoon to stop the walkout.

School officials said today teacher pickets marched in front of the district's seven campuses despite drizzling rain.

Planes Come Close in San Diego

500 Feet Separates Aircraft

SAN DIEGO (AP) – A Continental 727 pilot is reported to have considered evasive action to avoid a single-engine Cessna which was said to have come within 500 feet of the jet as the jetliner approached Lindbergh for a landing.

But a Federal Aviation Administration official said today the incident involving the commercial jetliner and the small plane near Lindbergh Field is not being officially classified as a near-miss.

Jack Gregory, a Continental spokesman in Los Angeles, said no evasive action was taken by the unidentified pilot of flight 81 and no official complaint was filed about the incident.

Norm Bell Sterling, an FAA official here, said he talked with the Continental pilot during the incident, which occurred about noon.

According to Sterling, the pilot said "in his opinion, the Cessna was too close; he told us 500 feet."

"We asked him if he wanted to file a mid-air report but he didn't," said Sterling. "Instead, he filed with the National Aeronautics and Space Administration a generalized complaint."

Sept. 25, a Pacific Southwest Airlines 727 jet approaching Lindbergh for a landing collided with a Cessna, killing 144 persons in the worst air disaster in U.S. history.

No final cause for that disaster has been announced by federal investigators, but the FAA has ordered stricter flight procedures at busy Lindbergh Field.

According to Gregory, "The tower advised everyone in the area about a single engine Cessna in the general area Monday. All our captain did was stay at his altitude a moment and check it on his radar. Our ground station said no evasive action was taken."

727 'Quiet'

City Attorney Rebuts Claim

Newport Beach City Attorney Dennis O'Neil said Monday reports that 727s are as quiet as other jets using Orange County Airport may be invalid because the noise-abatement takeoff procedures appear to be unsafe.

O'Neil said at a City Council study session that the Federal Aviation Administration had declared a power cutback prior to 1,000 feet of altitude is unsafe, yet the controversial Hughes Airwest 727s are now cutting back at 500 under 500 feet

Council members said they are concerned that if the airplanes, now flown on an experimental basis, win approval, the airlines will declare the current procedure unsafe and greatly increase the noise problem

"It would appear they're trying to fool people," said Mayor Paul Ryckoff.

Council members said they are also concerned about the possibility of an accident.

O'Neil, who gave an informational report on the city's research into the 727 project, said the FAA has been asked to rule in the matter and a reply is expected by next week.

He said a consultant hired by the city has also told him continued operation of 727s would require very expensive repaving of runways at Orange County Airport.

"His opinion is that the existing runway cannot handle the greater load of the heavier airplanes," O'Neil said

Condo Plan Approved In Newport

A proposed 132-unit condominium project won approval by the Newport Beach City Council Monday after the operator of an adjacent country club said he would prefer the project to the skunks who live on the site at present.

A subdivision map for Sea Island, on Jamboree Road across from the Newporter Inn, was approved 4-1. Mayor Paul Ryckoff abstained, saying he had mixed feelings; Councilman Donald Strauss was absent, and Councilman Paul Hummel dissented, saying he opposes grading that will raise the height of one segment of the complex by 18 feet.

Hummel said he believes the grading proposed by project applicant McLain Enterprises will block the views of golfers at the Irvine Coast Country Club, and will unnecessarily alter the skyline.

However Forest Smith, operator of the country club, told the council that the site "is now known as Skunk Hollow.

"That's where the skunks come out at night. It is a dumping place for mattresses and other things people don't want. I would much rather see this (project)."

Sea Island was originally planned as a 226-unit apartment project but was redesigned after the City Council in May ordered the density reduced.

Smith also told the council the golf course's 14th hole will be realigned so that golfers will still have their excellent view of Promontory Point.

Anthony Chairs Board

TO CHAIR SUPERVISORS
First District's Anthony

Anthony replaces Fifth District Supervisor Thomas Riley who has been the board's presiding officer for the past two years.

Supervisor Ralph Clark was elected vice chairman. Laurence Schmit, who lost his seat to Harriett Wieder, was vice chairman in 1978.

Anthony, who has been a member of the board for two years, assumes his new post under a legal cloud.

On July 1, 1977, Anthony and a fellow Supervisor Ralph Diedrich were indicted by the Orange County Grand Jury on allegations of campaign law violations.

An indictment is a formal charge made against a person by a grand jury. It does not establish guilt or innocence.

Last March Orange County Superior Court Judge Philip Schwab dismissed all but one count in the indictments on the grounds that only eight members of the grand jury heard all the testimony in the case.

Airlines' Landing Charges Doubled

By JOANNE REYNOLDS
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Commercial airlines using Orange County Airport will pay fees totaling an estimated $720,000 this year because county supervisors more than doubled the airlines' landing fees today.

Under the plan unanimously adopted by the board, landing fees will jump from 23 cents per 1,000 pounds of each aircraft landing at the airport, to 50 cents per 1,000 pounds.

The fee was last set in 1969. The change was sought by airport officials when supervisors insisted the airport should be self-supporting after passage of Proposition 13.

The current fee was expected to bring in $340,000 in 1979. The new fee will add about $380,000.

Of the total, about 60 percent will be paid by Air California, 33 percent by Hughes Airwest and seven percent by Golden West Airlines.

Eatery Fire Damages Set At $100,000

A two-alarm fire reported at 8:43 a.m. today did an estimated $100,000 damage to Delaney's Kettle of Fish in El Toro, a spokesman for the restaurant said.

Orange County firemen spent 21 minutes controlling the blaze in the two-story wood structure also known as Delaney's Salty Sam, 23702 El Toro Road.

County fire officials said a faulty oven caused the blaze which began in the structure's first-floor kitchen area.

Employee Heidi Kamczynski, 18, of San Juan Capistrano turned on an oven at 8 a.m. when she arrived for work, fireman said. She went to an upstairs office to do paperwork, they said, and herad a popping noise.

She rushed downstairs, discovered the fire, fled the building and called firefighters from a business next door in the Saddleback Plaza, officials said.

Firemen of Orange County Station 22, first to respond, were only temporarily confused by reports of a blaze at Delaney's Restaurant — another company facility at 24035 El Toro Road, adjacent to the fire station.

"They drove to the restaurant, circled the block and headed for the Kettle of Fish across the freeway" an official said.

Project Delayed Again

Despite protests from a developer that his project has already been delayed 18 months, Newport Beach City Council members said Monday they need more time to decide what "reasonableness" is.

The issue, which stirred heated council comment, arose as the result of council action in October stating that five major developments planned in the city must provide traffic improvement plans for 70 percent of their projects.

That action stated the projects — Emkay Newport Place, Koll Center Newport, Aeronutronic Ford, North Ford and Corporate Plaza — would not be brought under the city's Traffic Phasing Ordinance but would be subjected to "a test of reasonableness."

A council majority said Monday that Planning Commission suggested guidelines on "reasonableness" left them confused. They asked city staff members to elaborate on the guidelines, provide examples and bring the issue back Feb. 12.

That action was approved 4-2 after comments from several council members. Councilman Donald Strauss was absent, and Council members Don McInnis and Jackie Heather dissented.

The council heard a plea from an Emkay developer who had planned to submit a traffic phasing plan to the Planning Commission this month but will now be delayed again. He cited an 18-month delay already and rising costs.

Responded Councilman Paul Hummel, "Nobody's going to stampede me. Whether or not they're ready to build it now or 18 years from now is of no interest to me."

'Animal House?'

Pranksters Jailed In Newport Antic

Five members of a University of Southern California fraternity found themselves in Newport Beach jail this week following a prank police assert may have been inspired by the film "Animal House."

Released on their own recognizance following their arrest on suspicion of burglary were Terrence Patrick Moloney, 19, of Palos Verdes, Jeffrey George Ris, 19, of Los Angeles, David Jeffrey Crowell, 18, of Los Angeles, Randall Keith Pittman, 20, of Los Angeles and Charles William Hayden, 20, of Los Angeles.

Sgt. Bob Gatewood said the five were arrested about 7 p.m. Sunday at Oakwood Apartments 16th Street at Irvine Avenue in Newport Beach, after a tenant reported a burglary in progress at an apartment clubhouse.

He said the suspects allegedly were driving a rented truck in which police found chairs and a U.S. Flag belonging to the apartment complex. Also found in the truck were a garden hose and a state freeway sign, Gatewood said.

He said a spokesman for Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity at USC said they have had problems with pranks ever since "Animal House" was released.

Stanford Taps Dowhower as Grid Coach

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) Bill Walsh, who took Stanford University to two bowl games in two years, has resigned as the Cardinals' coach and is expected to be named head coach of the San Francisco 49ers later today.

Walsh, 48, resigned from his Stanford job Monday, school Athletic Director Andy Geiger said today. Geiger said Walsh quit to accept a head coaching job in the National Football League. (Earlier story Page B2)

The 49ers fired Coach Fred O'Connor and General Manager Joe Thomas on Monday. It was almost certain that Walsh would be named to succeed O'Connor later today.

Stanford named assistant coach Rod Dowhower, 35, to succeed Walsh. Dowhower had been Walsh's chief assistant both years Walsh was at Stanford.

Restaurant Owner Bitten; Trio Arrested

Three penniless visitors to Newport Beach went too far Monday when they stopped for a bite to eat and one of them allegedly bit the restaurant owner, police reported today.

In custody today in lieu of $250 bail was Daniel Arthur Ramsperger, 22, of Ontario, Canada, who faces an assault charge. Facing charges of defrauding an innkeeper are his two companions, Robert Russell Nesbitt, 23, also of Ontario, and Kerry Michael Pratt, 25, of New Hampshire.

They were also still in custody today on $250 bail each.

Police said the incident occurred at 5:30 a.m. Monday at Pacific Coast Diner, 4501 W. Coast Highway, Newport Beach, after a waitress became suspicious that the three men planned to leave without paying.

Police said that, according to restaurant owner David L. Fish, 30, the men left the premises. When Fish confronted them and demanded payment, a scuffle ensued in which Fish was bitten on the upper right arm.

Police, summoned by the waitress, arrested the three suspects and said they found they had no money.

The restaurant tab came to $16.80, police said.

Governor Cheered By GOP

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Republican leaders are gleefully welcoming Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. to their party after his inaugural speech, and some disgruntled Democratic liberals apparently think he belongs there. parently think he belongs there. (Related story Page A3)

"It was awful. I do not think poor people should be left out in the cold by a governor or president," Assembly Health Committee Chairman Art Torres, D-Los Angeles, said after attending the televised address Monday night.

GOVERNOR URGES TAX CUT — Page A5

Some Democrats did praise the tone of the 20-minute speech and several Republicans questioned Brown's sincerity as a budget-cutter.

"Until a bill is signed into law, I believe nothing," said Senate Republican Caucus Chairman H.L. Richardson of Arcadia. He said Brown was "on a presidential treadmill."

But most of the reaction centered on Brown's stress on fiscal issues — a proposed $1 billion tax cut, more verbal embrace of the Proposition 13 tax revolt, and a constitutional ban on federal deficit spending — and the scant attention he paid to social problems.

"I was disappointed that there was no more attention given to human needs," said Sen. Alan Sieroty, D-Los Angeles.

Campbell, noting that Brown called Proposition 13 "a can of worms" before last June's election, observed, "A can of worms is now a gourmet meal."

State AFL-CIO leader John Henning, usually a Brown supporter, called the speech "warmed-over Herbert Hoover."

California State Employees Association President William Craig said Brown's proposal to eliminate 5,000 state jobs "scapegoats the people who work for government."

Iran Frees Prisoners

Shah's Property Turned Over to Foundation

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi decreed today that all personal property of the Iranian royal family be turned over to a crown-sponsored foundation and ordered the release of 266 prisoners convicted by military tribunals.

Iran's state radio said the property, estimated to be valued at hundreds of millions of dollars, was being transferred to the Pahlavi foundation "for the use of religious, educational, social and welfare organizations organized by the people and run by them."

Palace sources said the divested property included the shah's vast domestic holdings in company stocks, banks factories and land.

The moves were announced as the nation awaited word on when the shah intends to go abroad on an extended vacation to take opposition pressure off the new civilian government of Shahpour Bakhtiar.

The national Pars news agency said the 266 prisoners had been held at Tehran's central police department prison "for various offenses" and had been pardoned by the shah. Pars attributed the announcement to the imperial Iranian armed forces tribunal.

The announcement also said the pardon of other prisoners was being studied. The government previously said there were about 200 persons in prison convicted of non-capital political offenses, but today's announcement did not specify whether the pardoned group included these political prisoners.

The divestiture was seen as another step aimed at removing the taint of corruption from the royal family, 64 of whose members have gone abroad since political turmoil mounted here last fall.

This follows a previous royal decree issued last September in which the shah prohibited members of his family from having business dealings with the government or from controlling charitable organizations.

The $1 billion Pahlavi Foundation was created 18 years ago with a personal grant of $133 million of the shah's wealth for use by charitable organizations, orphanages and higher education.

While snow-covered Tehran was experiencing one of its quietest days in two months, there were reports of at least six deaths in anti-shah violence in the provinces.

Carter Sails French Racer

GOSIER, Guadeloupe (AP) — A barefoot President Carter spent the final day of a Caribbean vacation today sailing aboard a 60-foot, French trimaran racer.

Carter and his 11-year-old daughter Amy boarded the three-hulled Seiko of yachting publisher Alain Glickman at a marina near the clifftop villa where the Carters have been staying since last week's summit with the leaders of France, Britain and West Germany.

The sailboat has no engine and had to be towed into the harbor. Her sails filled with a gentle breeze within a few minutes and she sailed off on a westerly course.

Man Faces Trial on Sex Counts

The San Bernardino child, who has since turned 6, accused John Howard Algie, 41, of 206 Colton St., in Harbor Municipal Court during a preliminary hearing that ended Monday.

Judge Calvin Schmidt directed authorities to arraign Algie, who has pleaded innocent, in superior court Jan. 18.

Algie was arrested at his home by Irvine police last Nov. 6. He is free on bail.

The six-foot-three, 210-pound salesman of recreational vehicles, was charged with forcing various sexual acts upon the granddaughter of a customer.

Police said a San Bernardino woman, accompanied by the child, was shopping for a motor home Sept. 9, when the crimes allegedly took place.

Police said the child didn't tell her grandmother of the incident until several days later. The woman became physically ill at the news and was hospitalized for weeks before she was able to tell police, according to investigators.

Copter Tracks Three

Two Men, Women Seized in Break-in Attempt

Held on $10,000 bail were Susan Jean Young, 24, of 1600 Coriander Drive, Costa Mesa; Rick Lee Rose, 22, of Orange, and John William Stinson, 24, of 262 Cecil Place, Costa Mesa. All three face charges of residential burglary.

Police said the incident occurred at about 10 p.m. Sunday when neighbors reported seeing two men climbing a fence to the home of Howard and Anne Johnson at 1227 Somerset Lane, Newport Beach.

The police helicopter tracked two men to a car and directed a police car to intercept them. The two men were reportedly found in the car with the woman driving.

Police said the door knob had been forced open on the Johnson door but that no items were reported missing.

Rose was described as having flowers, a skull, a goose, a peacock and mountains tattooed on his upper right arm; flowers and the name "Jason" on his wrist; a head, a person and a snake tattooed on his upper left arm and a butterfly, a head and a snake tattooed on his lower left arm.

Stinson was described in the police report as having multiple tattoos over his arms and entire body.

Trio Arrested In Newport Burglary Raps

A burglar alarm set off at the Warehouse Restaurant, 3450 Via Oporto in Newport Beach, led police to arrest two men and a boy on suspicion of commercial burglary, police said today.

In jail today in lieu of $5,000 bail was Boyd Gerald Condley, 36, of 1801 Whittier Ave., Costa Mesa. Released on his own recognizance was Richard Dale Throm, 19, of 1922 Meyer St. in Costa Mesa.,

A third suspect, a 17-year-old Newport Beach boy whose name was not released because of his age, was in Juvenile Hall, police said.

Police said a burglar alarm set off about 7 a.m. Sunday at the restaurant led them to investigate a car found driving slowly around the area.

In the car, police said they found the three suspects along with burglary tools, CB radios and walkie talkies. The door of the restaurant had been unlocked but nothing appeared to be missing, police said.

Council Action

In action Monday night, the Newport Beach City Council:

—CONDOMINIUM PROJECT: Approved plans for Sea Island, a 132-unit condominium project on Jamboree Road across from the Newporter Inn.

—CAMPAIGN CONTRIBUTIONS: Asked city aides to rework and resubmit on Feb. 12 an ordinance extending campaign fund reporting requirements to include city ballot propositions. Council members said they would like to see a clause requiring written permission before endorsements could be used.

—REASONABLENESS: Expressed confusion on planning commission guidelines as to what "reasonableness" means in requiring traffic phasing plans for certain developments and asked city officials to provide examples for consideration Feb. 12.

—CITY POLICY: Adopted unanimously a policy defining the "official" city position as that taken by the City Council.

—REZONING: Directed the Planning Commission to initiate rezoning on a California Department of Transportation parcel west of Superior Avenue, despite a letter from CalTrans contending that rezoning it to open space might amount to inverse condemnation of property.

Residents To Appeal Bar Ruling

A fight is brewing in Santa Ana Heights over the hours of operation of a restaurant and bar that hasn't been built yet.

Monday, angry homeowners who lost their case in a 3-2 vote of the Orange County Planning Commission, vowed to appeal the matter to the County Board of Supervisors.

Commissioners Earl Wooden, Charles Bennett and Rex Gaede sided with the Spiller Development Company of Newport Beach which brought the proposal to the commission.

The firm was granted a variance for the restaurant, currently under construction on Irvine Avenue at Mesa Drive. The variance extended the operating hours from a 10:30 p.m. closing to a 2 a.m. closing.

Residents of the area, who presented commissioners with petitions in opposition to the late closing time, said they felt such a late hours are inappropriate to the surrounding residential properties.

One resident also noted that another existing restaurant on Irvine Avenue has the same operating hours, but has had three owners in the past six months. The resident claimed the change of ownerships was an indication of the lack of restaurant business in the neighborhood.

Health Board Eyes Newport Center Plan

A proposal to build an outpatient surgical center in Newport Center will come before the Orange County Health Planning Council Wednesday in Newport Beach.

Surgicare Associates, Inc. wants to build a $1 million facility. Spokesman Raymond Berg says he believes the facility could lower costs of minor surgery by up to 60 percent.

However, the council staff has recommended denying the request on the basis that it would duplicate existing out-patient facilities at a number of area hospitals, including Hoag Memorial.

The hearing will begin at 7:30 p.m. in City Council Chambers, 3300 Newport Blvd., Newport Beach.

Fog Expected

No More Rain Due For Coast Region

Today's rain, the tail end of a tardy storm, was expected to dissipate this afternoon, making way for pockets of dense fog Wednesday morning along the coast, a National Weather Service spokesman said.

More than a 10th of an inch of rain was recorded in most parts of Orange County today by 8 a.m., with the only mador problem a San Diego Freeway traffic snarl. No additional slippages were reported in the landslide areas of southern coastal Orange County.

California Highway Patrol officers said a semi-truck skidded near Westminster Avenue when the driver braked too quickly on wet pavement, jacknifing the rig and blocking slow-lane traffic.

Commuters to the Los Angeles area were slowed to a near halt for nearly two hours, officials said

Laguna Beach police were keeping a close watch on Bluebird Canyon this morning where a field of plastic covered a gaping hole in Oriole Drive after Friday's mud slide

Geologists expect no further slippage from today's storm but would not predict the result of another Pacific storm expected Thursday.

Just to the south, officials in San Clemente said no additional slippage was noticed at Shorecliffs Mobile Country Club where a 900-foot-long fissure opened last month, threatening a half-dozen mobile homes.

"There's a chance of more light rain from a Pacific storm by Thursday," a spokesman said, "but then again, it may take longer to get here"

Today's storm, predicted to arrive Monday, dropped .12 of an inch in the Costa Mesa and Newport Beach area by 8 a.m. The season's total reached 9.06 since July 1, compared to 7.48 inches by the same date last year.

No Solution Seen to HB School Strike

The Huntington Beach Union High School District teacher strike entered its fifth day today with no end in sight to the current contract dispute.

District officials reported 507 teachers either on strike or ill Monday as substitute teachers manned classes where 28 percent of the school district's 20,900 students were absent.

Teacher and district negotiators are awaiting word from a state-appointed mediator on possible renewal of contract talks that broke off three weeks ago.

Teacher leaders say they are still demanding a five percent pay boost for the 1978-79 school year, a similar salary raise for 1979-80 if the state rules it is legal and binding arbitration in grievances.

But school board members are refusing to budge on their position that the state-imposed salary freeze must be lifted before a five percent raise is granted.

FEES. . .

Robert Flores, representing Airwest, said the airline objected to the increase since the money is being raised in part to help pay for implementation of a master plan that is currently under debate.

He said he thought use of the landing fees for operating expenses was inappropriate since the fees couldn't be considered a stable revenue source.

But his views were disputed by Assistant Airport Manager Barbara Fox who described the use of the fees as a sound financial plan.

Ms. Fox earlier warned supervisors that some of the carriers — she didn't specify which ones — had objected to the increase claiming the money was being raised to "pre-fund litigation."

She denied that allegation while acknowledging that the lawsuits filed over airport noise have cost the airport and the county "hundreds of thousands of dollars."

Trash Truck Driver Hurt

The driver of an Orange County trash truck that overturned Monday in Newport Beach was in serious condition today at Costa Mesa Hospital after suffering broken bones and other injuries.

Police said Gary Thiesen, 38, of Garden Grove, was injured after a car driven by Thelma Torres, 66, of 212 Princeton Drive, Costa Mesa, allegedly pulled out in front of him near the Harbor Municipal Courthouse on Jamboree Road.

Police said the Torres car was on Birch Street and the trash truck was southbound on Jamboree Road. Mrs. Torres was taken to Costa Mesa Memorial Hospital but was not admitted.

The accident spilled garbage onto Jamboree Road and blocked traffic for several hours, police said.

Penny Ante Millionaire

UTICA, N.Y. (AP) — Edwin Rommel, a 50-year-old foreman, deposited one million pennies at the bank, the result of 20 years of collecting. Afterward, Rommel said, "I don't want to see another penny."

The 20,000 rolls of pennies, which had been in eight metal footlockers at Rommel's home, filled up 200 $50 bags and weighed an estimated 3½ tons.

"I don't know why I started saving them," Rommel said Monday. "I didn't start out saving. I got up to about 13 or 14 dollars and I said I'll shoot for a new car, and when I had enough for a car, I said, 'Oh, hell, I'll shoot for a million'."

Riley Praises Coping With Prop. 13

Coping with the first year's financial impact of Proposition 13 without losing essential services was rated Orange County government's top accomplishment for 1978 today.

Outgoing Supervisors Chairman Thomas Riley, in his state of the county report, noted that after passage of the property tax reduction initiative, supervisors adopted a 1978-79 budget chopped by $32.7 million from county government's 1977-78 budget.

At the same time, he said, county government was able to extend services to 41,000 new residents added to the county population last year and absorb a seven percent inflation factor.

"Still, it was not easy," Riley said. "In fact it was very difficult.

"Overall, I feel that the past year's budget was the board's major accomplishment," the Newport Beach supervisor said. "Next year's budget together with those decisions required by fiscal constraints will doubtless be the board's major challenge."

Riley said median family income in Orange County for 1978 stood at $22,000, and new jobs were created at double the statewide growth rate.

Riley noted the county unemployment rate stood at 3.7 percent for November and 5.5 percent for the year as a whole, the lowest rate not only in California but for the nation as well.

Personal income in Orange County was $17.3 billion, he said, up almost 12 percent from a year earlier.

In addition, retail sales of nearly $10 billion stood second statewide only to Los Angeles County.

As for the dollar value of all goods and services produced, the outgoing chairman said, the 1978 gross county product reached $20 billion.

"Looking to the future, it will be the private sector continuing as the primary means, in our free economic system, to satisfy the needs and wants of people for goods and services and to create opportunities for working and living," Riley said.

"There is also a critical role here for government," Riley continued, "to create a climate for economic growth and to provide the necessary foundation of public services."

On the subject of affordable housing, Riley said supervisors on Wednesday will be offered a new set of policies aimed at lowering housing prices.

The new housing element of the county general plan, he said, includes strategies for county government to assist private developers "to take more responsibility for providing affordable housing."

In today's message Riley also touched on county government efforts to provide more parks and open space in county areas, including the recent $2.5 million acquisition agreement for a beach park neighboring Doheny State Beach.

He also mentioned efforts to assist in preservation of both the Laguna Greenbelt and the Bolsa Chica marsh.

The second-term supervisor also referred to the county's efforts to supervise county government political campaigns and creation of a new Fair Campaign Practices Commission which he said resulted in "more responsible campaigns in general."

Looking toward the future, Riley also said he is hopeful county government can develop a Washington lobbyist program.

"The main concerns are that all sorts of administrative laws are made that affect the county," he said.

And while federal grants exist to help finance many of the programs resulting from those laws, Riley said, county citizens have been paying more in federal taxes than is returned to them in services.

"Illustrating the situation is information that Orange County was 54th of the 58 California counties in receipt of grant funds," Riley said. "Effective Washington representation can do much to redress the inequity."

BACK ON THE BENCH
Newport Judge Goldstein

Ousted Judge Gets New Post

By KATHY CLANCY
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Leonard Goldstein of Newport Beach, ousted Orange County Superior Court judge, was unemployed less than 24 hours Monday when the governor put him back on the bench.

Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. appointed Goldstein to the North Orange County Municipal Court on the same day that former Deputy District Attorney Oretta Sears took over the superior court seat she won from Goldstein in the June election.

'I am thrilled to be able to continue serving the community in a judicial capacity," Goldstein said late Monday, "and I must say I admire the governor for his sincerity and boldness."

When asked about published reports that the governor plans to elevate him to a spot on the district court of appeal later, Goldstein said he'd heard nothing of such a plan.

"The governor doesn't consult me about his appointments," Goldstein said. "If he has something in mind he hasn't shared that with me."

Goldstein, 47 will be paid $47,497 for his new municipal court post, about $4,000 less than he earned as a superior court judge

Superior Court Judge Robert Green also expressed pleasure at Goldstein's appointment, saying it drew "tremendous support" from both attorneys and judges

Green said he and Goldstein had been in private practice together in Santa Ana in the 1960's. He called Goldstein "extremely well respected" while he served on the superior court bench

Goldstein's last day on the bench was Friday and he begins duties in the Fullerton municipal court today.

Goldstein, a former deputy attorney general and state administrative law judge, said he had been planning to go into private practice after leaving Superior Court.

He explained his ties with the Brown administration stretch back to the governor's first term when Goldstein was with state government and was able "to be of some assistance to the new administration."

He was first appointed to North Orange County Municipal Court by Brown in 1976 then elevated by Brown to superior court in 1977.

Of his defeat, 241,014 for Sears to 190,224 for the incumbent, Goldstein said, "I think it was a combination of Proposition 13 and a law and order campaign which was never justified for me since I hadn't had a criminal case.

"And I think the title deputy district attorney was very appealing in the last election," Goldstein continued.

He said what he learned from the defeat was that judges need to get out among the people and let them know what they are doing.

Goldstein's June upset and that of three other incumbent superior and municipal court judges was called one of the most spectacular upsets in local political history. No incumbent judges had been opposed in Orange County for years and it was the first time one had been defeated since 1940.

Diedrich Case

Lawyer Claims Council Denied

The new attorney for Orange County Supervisor Ralph Diedrich Monday asked a judge to dismiss the bribery indictment against his client on the grounds that he had been denied effective use of counsel.

James P. Cantillon, of Newport Beach, Diedrich's new lawyer in the case after the resignation of Marshall Morgan, charged the District Attorney's Office knew for more than a year that Morgan would be a chief prosecution witness against his own client but failed to notify Diedrich or Morgan.

San Diego County Superior Court Judge F.V. Lopardo set a hearing on the motion, along with a move to grant Diedrich and co-defendant LeRoy Rose, a preliminary hearing, for next Monday.

Assistant District Attorney Michael Capizzi argued that everyone knew Morgan was a potential witness because he was subpoened to testify before the Orange County Grand Jury that indicted Diedrich.

Diedrich and architect Rose face a Feb. 5 trial in Lopardo's Vista court on charges they conspired to receive money from Anaheim Hills Inc. in 1973 in return for a Board of Supervisors vote to remove 2,200 acres from an agricultural preserve.

Morgan withdrew from the Diedrich case last month after citing a possible conflict of interest centering on his possible role as a witness in what is expected to be a six to- eight-week trial.

The trial was transferred to San Diego County in October by Orange County Superior Court Judge John Flynn.

Hotlines Set For Welfare Fraud Report

Establishment of four telephone "hotlines" for anyone wishing to report suspicion of welfare fraud was announced Monday by officials of the Orange County District Attorney's Office.

Those calling the numbers — 834-7872, 834-7873, 834-7874 and 834-7875 — may speak directly to an investigator.

The names of those calling will be kept confidential if requested, officials said.

At the same time, officials announced that 29 people were arrested in December on charges of welfare fraud representing a suspected loss of $66,429 in overpayments.

Two other persons were charged during the month with probation violations on earlier welfare fraud charges.

Holiday Blood Shortage Ended

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The blood shortage emergeney in Los Angeles and Orange counties that developed during the Christmas and New Year's holiday period has ended, a Red Cross official said Monday.

"I think we can say the threat of serious shortage is past, thanks to public response," said Norman Kear, regional administrator of Red Cross Blood Services.

Starts Monday

Raul L. Regalado, 34, currently manager of the Fresno Airport, takes over Jan. 15 as Orange County's new airport manager. He replaces Robert Bresnahan, who resigned last year.

New Brown Budget Revealed

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Gov. Edmund Brown Jr., will propose a $19.8 billion budget that eliminates 5,140 state jobs and abolishes 15 licensing boards, the Sacramento Union reported today.

The newspaper also detailed a $1.2 billion state income tax cut Brown mentioned in his inaugural address Monday, quoting figures it said came from an advance copy of the budget.

The Democratic governor's staff refused comment until the budget is submitted to the state Legislature on Wednesday.

The account quotes Brown as saying in an introduction to the budget that the spending plan is a blueprint for "leaner government" and is "substantially below all proposed constitutional spending limits. But it keeps faith with the vision and conscience of California" by building for the future in the areas of arts, affirmative action, urban parks, apprenticeship training, enforcement of labor laws and housing, it said.

Among budget highlights in the preview of the budget:

—State personal income tax credits would be increased to $125 for individuals and $250 for couples, for a total savings to taxpayers of $915 million on 1979 taxes. Those tax credits would be received on returns filed in early 1980.

The permanent level of the credits, which taxpayers deduct from their total tax bills before sending in checks or filing for refunds, is $27 for individuals and $54 for couples. But the credits on 1978 returns were increased to $100 and $200 in a one-time relief provision of a tax cut signed into law by Brown last year.

Sick Teachers Face Dock In Salaries

Officials in the Westminster School (elementary) District say from now on teachers who claim to be ill will have to prove it or they may have their pay docked.

This emergency procedure was instituted Monday because of a strike threat by teachers over wages, fringe benefits, the length of the teaching day and other issues.

District spokeswoman Barbara Winars said the district took the action after what she termed a wildcat strike took place at Johnson Intermediate School Monday.

She claimed that 21 of the school's 30 teachers were absent and that 20 substitute teachers were hired at $80 per day.

The district doesn't normally require proof of illness until after five days of absenteeism.

Miss Winars said the district also took the tougher position after a letter from the Westminster Teachers Association was distributed to some campuses.

The letter said substitutes are prolonging the "strike" and accused them of being "scabs."

Bar Kaelter, assistant director of the West Orange County United teachers, said the letter was a mistake.

Lucinda Jacobs, 4, had to borrow a stool Monday to hold the Bible for her father, Bradley, when he was sworn in as Orange County Assessor by Superior Court Judge Harmon Scoville. Other county officeholders were sworn in Monday, too. To find out how "the coronation" went, turn to Page A9.

Striking Teachers Call Mass Rally

Aided by 20 professional strike workers and teachers from throughout Orange County, Huntington Beach-area high school teachers have called for a mass rally tonight prior to what they claim will be a showdown before the school board.

School board members have scheduled a 7 o'clock public meeting in the Huntington Beach High School auditorium, 1905 Main St.

Issues surrounding the current strike by nearly half of the district's 867 teachers are not scheduled to be discussed tonight.

But teachers say they have other plans.

"I don't know if teachers are going to allow the board not to discuss the strike," said spokesman Bill Bianchi, executive director of West Orange County United Teachers.

"It could get a little hostile," Bianchi said.

An estimated 1,000 teachers and their supporters plan to meet at 6 p.m. at Lake Park in downtown Huntington Beach.

"I've never stepped back from a fight yet," said School Board President Zita Wessa.

Mrs. Wessa said she expects trustees to stand firm on their refusal to grant pay and binding arbitration demands issued by teacher leaders.

Teachers have been working without a contract since July 1. Nine months of collective bargaining have not brought a contract for the district's teachers.

"This is not just a fight for Huntington Beach Union High School District teachers—it's a fight for all the teachers in the state," said Ira Toibin, president of the 750-member District Educators Association, the group spearheading the strike.

CTA officials have hired professional strike coordinator Mike Ford to lead the west Orange County teachers on the picket line. Ford refused to be interviewed Monday.

Striking west county teachers say they have received backing in their efforts from teacher's associations in Newport Beach, Costa Mesa, Irvine, Westminster, San Juan Capistrano, Saddleback Valley, Fountain Valley, Brea and Anaheim.

Surgery Slated For Carpenter

Mel Carpenter, executive director of the South Coast Regional Commission, said Monday he will undergo surgery for a cataract on his eye Wednesday.

Carpenter said he hoped to be back in his chair when the commission holds its next meeting in Huntington Beach Council Chambers.

GEM WISE

Selecting a birthstone gift this month? Chances are, you can give the birthday person his or her favorite color. Garnet, the January birthstone, comes in all colors except blue.

How is this possible? Gemstones are classified according to crystal structure and chemical composition. Although all garnets have the same crystal structure and are similar and interrelated chemically, a different element is responsible for each variation of color. For example, the presence of chromium produces a green color.

There are actually six varieties of garnet. The most familiar of these are almandite, pyrope and rhodolite which occur in reds and red-violets. Pyrope sometimes is found in a red that approaches that of fine ruby, but this is quite rare.

Grossularite garnet occurs in green, yellow-brown, white, colorless, light red-violet and orange-red. Hessonite is a subvariety of grossularite and is a lovely orangey-brown shade. It is found in Ceylon, Italy and California while Tanzania is the prime source of the remarkable, transparent green grossularite garnet called tsavorite. The translucent specimens of green grossularite are often used as jade substitutes.

Spessartite garnet occurs in yellow to yellow-brown and dark orange-brown. Uvarovite occurs in chrome green, resembles emerald, is very scarce and found only in tiny sizes.

One type of garnet has no color whatsoever. Nature's supply of this totally clear colorless garnet is being mined in gem-rich Tanzania.

Andradite garnet occurs in green, yellow and black. Green Andradite is called Demantoid. Its name comes from a Dutch word meaning diamond because of its high luster and dispersion. Spessartite garnet occurs in yellow to yellow-brown and dark orange-brown.

I have made a collection of the many colors of garnet in small, loose, unset stones. It is on exhibit in our window this week. Also on display are some exciting pieces of jewelry set with this many hued gem.

January's child actually has more choice than many people realize. The variety that garnet offers, opens up a whole new world of color excitement.

Affordable? Well. . .

ON THE HOME & HEARTH BEAT: Orange County supervisors are scheduled tomorrow to start grappling with new proposals they hope will bring "affordable housing" to our region. This may shape up as a considerable battle.

We used to call those places "low-cost" houses; Now the word is affordable. Whatever that means.

Savants of our county government estimate that the average price of a new home in Orange County is now $113,000.

ANTHONY

There was somewhat of a preview on how the affordable housing question may be debated last night at a Building Industry Association of Orange County meeting out at the Airport Inn in Irvine.

COUNTY SUPERVISOR Phil Anthony showed up and traced briefly for the home builders the steps county government may be taking toward encouraging construction of affordable housing.

He suggested now is the time for action. "The time for brainstorming is over," the new board chairman said.

You might be able to gauge the builders' reaction to Anthony's remarks in that he was interrupted by applause only once. That was when the supervisor said, "The best thing we can do to help you build affordable housing is to get out of your way."

PRESLEY

After Anthony, the home builders got to hear their own advocate speak from the podium. He is Randall E. Presley of the Presley Companies, Newport Beach.

PRESLEY IS FAIRLY well qualified to speak for the people who actuarlly put up the walls and hang on the roof. His companies' homebuilding revenues were projected at more than $150 million for fiscal 1978. He began building homes in 1951 and has now completed 150 residential communities.

Clearly, Presley sees the piling on of new government requirements, coupled with the dictums of Proposition 13, as inflationary factors in the rising costs of a new house.

On a government requirement that he build a public road at one of his projects in our region, Presley recalled, "before we were done, that road cost us $4 million."

He didn't have to tell us how that $4 million cost was passed on.

PRESLEY EXPRESSED FEARS on how the government may attempt to slow down the inflationary economy. "I'm afraid they'll do it in housing," he said.

The Newport Beach builder did envision "a softening" in the housing market but then he added, "By January of 1980, buyers will be out in force, particularly in California."

He said a downturn might help stabilize prices. "Hopefully, this year will be a sufficient downturn."

But then he added, "I still see the price of housing going up because of Proposition 13 and the cost of land."

ALAS, PREDICTING what the housing market will do sounds like the problem of a weatherman even when he's convinced that it's going to rain.

That's when the weather guy says, "We're going to have some rain. Maybe not too much rain. Some rain, though.

Keep Weapons

China Offers Taiwan Choice

PEKING (AP) — Taiwan will be allowed to maintain its security forces and weapons after reunification with the mainland, Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping, chief of staff of China's armed forces, said today.

The offer was made during a two-hour meeting with a Senate task force on Pacific military matters headed by Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., who called it "very important" and said officials of the U.S. Liaison Office told him it was a considerable advance beyond anything said before.

Teng told the senators he already had sent what he described as several reasonable messages to Taiwanese leaders but did not say if he had received a reply. The Peking government offered earlier to negotiate a reunification agreement with Taiwan that would preserve the island's social and economic way of life.

BUT PRESIDENT Chiang Ching-kuo and other officials of the Nationalist Chinese government on Taiwan rejected the overture, as they have all other overtures from the Communists since Washington established diplomatic relations with Peking Jan. 1 and broke ties with Taisan.

Teng reaffirmed today China's policy "to seek a peaceful reunification of Taiwan and China," Nunn said. But the possibility of the use of force was not renounced on grounds that it "would reduce the prospects for Taiwan entering into serious negotiations."

TENG SAID THE circumstances where force might be used included an indefinite refusal to enter into negotiations and an attempt by the Soviet Union to interfere in Taiwanese affairs.

Nunn said "this latter possibility was regarded as highly unlikely."

Nunn added that the senators got the impression that China's overriding desire is to settle the Taiwan problem peacefully and that force was something remote to their thinking for some time to come.

HE SAID TENG emphasized that people-to-people and economic relations between Taiwan, Japan, the United States and other countries be continued.

Teng also reiterated that Taiwan could retain full autonomy within China for as long as the people of Taiwan wished and, in the future, the Taiwan authorities would possess the same powers they now wield.

The comparisons Teng made were to Macao and Hong Kong, the Portuguese and British possessions that continue to be independent but maintain close economic ties with the mainland.

TENG WAS QUOTED as saying the Chinese perhaps should curtail military maneuvers off Taiwan as a sign of good will.

Teng said the Chinese government also favors an expanded U.S. naval presence in the Western Pacific, strengthening of Japan's defense forces and defense cooperation by members of the Association of Southeast Asian nations to help counter growing Soviet military strength in the Far East.

Navy Makes Last Push For Carrier

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Navy is making an 11th-hour effort to change President Carter's mind on the kind of aircraft carrier he will recommend to Congress, administration sources report.

With Carter's fiscal 1980 defense budget just about ready for Congress, the Navy effort has reached all the way to the Caribbean island of Guadeloupe, where the president flew last week for meetings with French, British and German leaders

CARTER IS SAID to have decided to propose construction of a new type of oil-burning carrier called the CVV, which would cost about $143 million less than the bigger ship the Navy favors.

Backed by Pentagon leaders, the Navy earlier recommended construction of an additional Kennedy-class carrier, which it claims would be more "combat capable" than the CVV because it carries more warplanes and a greater variety of them.

A KENNEDY-CLASS carrier would cost about $1.7 billion and its backers contend it is worth what one official called its "slightly additional cost" over the CVV.

Although virtually all final decisions have been made by the president on his new defense budget, administration sources said a last-ditch memo from Adm. Thomas Hayward, chief of naval operations, was forwarded to Carter on Guadeloupe over the weekend urging a change to the Kennedy-class vessel.

NEITHER OF THE choices now under consideration would be as expensive as the nuclear-powered carrier that was the Navy's original preference. Congress voted for the nuclear carrier last year but Carter objected to its potential $2.4 billion cost and vetoed the legislation.

Oil Workers Delay Nationwide Strike

DENVER (AP) — The nation's 60,000 oil refinery workers continued to delay their threatened nationwide strike, as union officials awaited Carter Administration reaction to a possible 73-cent-per-hour raise.

The contract dispute is the first major union showdown over President Carter's voluntary wage-price guidelines, which allow for a 7 percent increase in wages and benefits over the life of a contract.

A.F. GROSPIRON, president of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers International Union, confirmed Monday that he had been in touch with officials of Carter's anti-inflation program. He said he sought "an interpretation of how the wage guidelines would be applied to contract settlements within the oil industry."

Some of the officials, who Grospiron did not identify, were to meet with Grospiron today in Denver, the union president said.

WHITE HOUSE SPOKESMAN Mark Henderson said he did not know of any such meeting.

The union leader said Monday the possibility of a nationwide walkout remained "very real." But he said there would be no immediate strike despite the expiration of contracts Sunday night. Most workers were on the job Monday, although oil workers stayed out at Gulf and ARCO refineries in Port Arthur, Texas.

The strike was delayed by an offer from Amoco calling for a 73-cent-per-hour raise in the first year and a wage reopener clause the second year.

Execution Sought In Mass Murders

CHICAGO (AP) — The electric chair will be sought for John Wayne Gacy, indicted on charges of murdering seven young men and boys whose bodies were buried at his suburban Chicago home or thrown into a nearby river, authorities say.

Bernard Carey, Cook County states attorney, said Monday he would ask for Gacy's execution. He said there was "more than one reason" why prosecutors could ask for the death penalty, but he refused to elaborate.

Gacy, 36, was indicted Monday by a Cook County grand jury for the seven murders.

Pockets of heavy fog should replace the rain that began falling shortly after midnight today as the tail end of a tardy storm finally reached Southern California, forecasters said. They held out the chance of more rain Thursday.

"There will be pockets of zero-visibility fog starting to affect some portions of Southern California tomorrow morning," National Weather Service spokesman Joe Austin said. "There's also a chance of more light rain from a Pacific storm by Thursday, but then again, it may take longer to get here."

Today's rainstorm, which forecasters had predicted would hit Monday, dropped as much as three inches in the San Francisco Bay area and heavy snow in the mountains in northern and central parts of the state.

U.S. Summary

Fair skies were reported in most of the nation today, a respite from days of rain, snow and freezing drizzle.

Stormy winter weather claimed another life Monday, that of a truck driver killed when his tractor-trailer rig slid from an icy Oklahoma highway. The death brought to at least 20 the number of weather-related deaths since Saturday.

Snow, sleet and rain knocked out power and glazed roads in parts of the East Monday, forcing some schools to close and causing scattered power failures. The snowfall measured as much as a foot in parts of Vermont, and up to 8 inches in western Pennsylvania.

A cold front brought rain to the West Coast, and snow to the Sierras and the Lake Tahoe Basin. Light rain was reported in the Pacific Northwest, where freezing temperatures slicked roads in parts of Oregon and Washington.

Warmer temperatures in Idaho opened channels in the ice pack along the Snake River, where ice jams caused flooding earlier.

Tax, Job Cuts Proposed

Brown's Inaugural Speech Lashes Spending

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Gov. Edmund Brown Jr., expanding his Proposition 13 crusade into a fierce war on government spending, is proposing a $1 billion tax cut and elimination of 5,000 state jobs.

The somber 40-year-old Democrat attacked what he described as "the false prophets . . . of spending" and endorsed a constitutional amendment to outlaw federal deficit spending in his televised inaugural address Monday night.

The speech was an unrelenting, all-out attack on the social programs that have been the heart of the Democratic platform for 40 years, and many liberals clearly didn't like it.

"EACH YEAR we spend more money on fewer students. Each year we dramatically increase the amount spent on medical care. Are we better governed? Are we better educated? Are we healthier? Perhaps, but not commensurate with the additional dollars and taxes spent on each," Brown said.

State AFL-CIO chief Jack Henning described the address as "warmed over Herbert Hoover," and Assemblyman Art Torres, D-Los Angeles, called it "awful."

Except to criticize inefficiencies, Brown made no mention of education, child care, mental health and other liberal-supported programs in a speech devoted almost entirely to a condemnation of inflation, federal deficits and government spending

"YOU STOLE my rhetoric," the Republican floor leader of the state Senate, William Campbell of Hacienda Heights, joked with Brown after the speech

APPEALS TO COURT
Governor Brown

The emphasis on national issues such as inflation and federal deficits was unusual for an inaugural address. Republican critics described it as the beginning of a 1980 campaign for president.

Brown, who has not flatly ruled out such a 1980 bid, also promised to cut state taxes back to 1975 levels.

"THIS REQUIRES a $1 billion tax cut. Such a reduction should, on a percentage basis, give the greatest benefit to renters and those at the lower and middle income level of the income scale."

In a budget message for release Wednesday, Brown details a $1.2 billion state income tax cut

About 400 legislators, supporters and aides interrupted the 20-minute speech with applause only three times as Brown embraced Proposition 13 tax revolt rehtoric as his own and blamed public disillusionment with government on excessive spending.

"THE ORDINARY citizen knows that government contributes to inflation and that runaway inflation is as destructive to our social wellbeing as an invading army," Brown said.

"Plain working people, the poor, the elderly, those on fixed incomes, those who cannot keep up with each new round of inflation or protect themselves from each subsequent round of recession: these are the people who are crying out for relief," he continued.

"But in their name and in the name of misfortune of every kind, false prophets have risen to advocate more and more government spending as the cure.

"THESE FALSE prophets, I tell you, can no longer distinguish the white horse of victory from the pale horse of death."

On eliminating state jobs, Brown said most of the 5,000 could be cut from the state's force of 120,000 civil service workers through attrition, rather than massive layoffs.

Brown embraced a concept dear to conservatives in his endorsement of a national constitutional convention.

"A constitutional convention to propose an amendment to balance the budget is unprecedented, but so is the paralysis that prevents necessary action," Brown said.

TWENTY-TWO of the 50 states have requested such a convention, 12 short of the number required. A ratification measure is pending in the California Legislature, where Democrats blocked a similar resolution last year.

Paul Priolo of Malibu, Republican leader of the state Assembly, said Brown's endorsement of the constitutional convention was the only new thing in his speech.

"I have to think that including that in an inaugural speech would indicate he has his eye more on the presidency than on his term as governor," Priolo said.

BROWN repeatedly blamed inflation as a root cause of the nation's most serious ills in terms that sounded like comments of Proposition 13 author Howard Jarvis or former Gov. Ronald Reagan.

"People know that something is wrong when the federal government stimulates inflation and inflation raises the face value of prices, income and property, so that the taxes on each grow higher and higher."

"This perverse government money machine has created a fiscal dividend for local, state and federal government and allowed all three to expand faster than inflation and faster than real economic growth. These unauthorized dividends are now being cancelled. The tax revolt is being herad," Brown said.

Brown blamed those forces for the $6 billion budget surplus which accumulated in his first term, contributing to passage of Proposition 13, which Brown opposed until its enactment last June.

Slavery Comment Brings Resignation

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Gov. Edmund Brown Jr.'s appointee who enraged San Diego black leaders by saying slavery "made America great" has resigned from a state advisory commission, Brown's office says.

Ray Huffman, a San Diego developer, quit the California Housing Task Force at the governor's request, Brown's press secretary, Bobbie Metzger, said Monday.

Huffman, whose statement in a private newsletter caused a furor in San Diego's black community two weeks ago, insisted later that he had been misunderstood and he does not favor slavery.

STATE

Brown appointed Huffman last spring to the housing task force, a group of business, labor and consumer representatives formed to advise the Democratic governor on housing construction.

Woman Convicted in Death of Aliens

SAN DIEGO (AP) — "If you kill or maim an alien, the message has to go out that you're going to suffer the consequences," a judge has told a woman convicted in a smuggling incident in which two El Salvador men died.

U.S. District Judge Leland C. Nielsen imposed a five-year prison term followed by five years' probation Monday on Maria Aurora Sandoval-Oros, 25, noting that when an alien dies in a smuggling venture, the smuggler "is going to pay the price." The woman had been convicted of smuggling aliens, conspiracy and transporting aliens. Two of the aliens died of asphyxiation.

Engine Catches Fire, Takeoff Aborted

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A Western Airlines jet carrying 123 people safely aborted a takeoff at International Airport after an engine caught fire halfway down the runway, authorities said.

The incident Monday caused no injuries and only slight fire damage to the Boeing 727's tail engine, airline spokesmen said. Flight 20 was bound for Utah, Montana and Canada.

Children of Dead Cultists File Suit

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A $10 million damage suit was filed in Superior Court Monday by five children of a couple who died during the Peoples Temple mass murders and suicides last Nov. 18.

Carl G. Hall and his wife Heloise were among more than 900 who died at the temple's jungle settlement in Guyana. Listed as defendants in the suit are the California-based temple and the estate of the temple's founder, the Rev. Jim Jones, who also died at Jonestown.

8-foot Plank Rips Through Worker

NORWALK (AP) — A factory worker, Jose Olmos, 42, was in fair condition today after surgery to remove an eight-foot-long wooden board that ripped through his chest and out his back, authorities said.

Olmos had fed a piece of wood into a ripsaw when the machine spit the plank backwards, driving it into his left chest and out his right back, sheriff's deputies said. Olmos is employed by Silvercrest Industries.

Action on Gun Law Delayed

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Despite pressure from law-and-order groups, the Assembly's legal committee won't act for at least two weeks on bills to restore the "Use a gun, go to prison" law weakened by the state Supreme Court.

Members of the Assembly Criminal Justice Committee questioned Monday whether judges should be allowed some discretion in granting probation in extreme cases. They worried whether a bill should address more than a dozen other laws with mandatory aspects.

The state Supreme Court ruled Dec. 22 on the 1975 law that required a prison term for anyone convicted of using a gun during certain felonies.

The court majority opinion said the Legislature did not specifically remove the court's power, under an 1872 law, to grant probation. That left the law mostly intact, but would allow judges to use discretion in sentencing

The bills being considered Monday — AB 163 by Speaker Leo McCarthy, D-San Francisco, and AB 201 by freshman Assemblyman Robert Naylor, R-Menlo Park — would amend that 1872 law and restrict a judge's power to grant probation.

McCarthy's bill would list five laws with mandatory sentencing: The gun law, and those requiring prison sentences for sale of heroin, prior felony convictions, felony on parole, and violent crimes against the aged and handicapped.

Naylor's bill would use broader terms to attempt to exempt any laws passed by the Legislature with mandatory sections.

2 Iranians Charged in LA Riots

Taghi Mobarez, 29, and Ali Mouhmad, 18, were the third and fourth men to have been formally charged in the violence that led to the shah's 90-year-old mother and his sister Princess Chams leaving the Los Angeles area.

SINCE LAST Wednesday the women have been living in Rancho Mirage, 135 miles east of Los Angeles near Palm Springs, under tight security at the sprawling desert estate of Walter Annenberg, former U.S. ambassador to Great Britain.

Mobarez identified himself as a student at Cal State University, Los Angeles, although the school said it had no listing of his name.

After charges were filed by the district attorney's office Monday, Mobarez was freed on $5,000 bail. Mouhmad, who gave no address and said he was unemployed, was free on $2,000 bail.

Officials Hit State Action On Church

PASADENA (AP) — Armed off-duty policemen stood guard Monday at the executive offices of the Worldwide Church of God, while officers of the congregation alleged the church was threatened by state intervention into spiritual matters.

Stanly R. Rader, personal adviser to church founder Herbert W. Armstrong told reporters the officers' presence in the headquarters and other actions by the state attorney general's office are "an almost successful coup d'etat" against the church.

"It is unfortunate that the state has gotten involved in the church's spiritual matters," Rader said.

Rader and the 86-year-old Armstrong have been accused in a civil suit of looting the church's $80 million coffers and selling church-owned property at prices well below market value. The suit was filed by the attorney general and church dissidents.

TV Producer Wins $475,000 Lawsuit

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A television film producer who claimed he was libeled by Pacific Gas & Electric Co. will receive $475,000 in an out-of-court settlement that a law professor says may be a record.

"I think it's the largest libel settlement ever for an individual," said Laurence Eldredge, a Hastings Law School professor specializing in defamation cases. "There have been some very large verdicts, but they've been knocked down."

The amount, given to Southern California film producer Don Widener, ended litigation over a film called "Powers That Be," which PG&E had criticized publicly as unfair and malicious.

BROADCAST BY LOS ANGELES station KNBC-TV in May 1971, the film purported to show the dangers of nuclear power plants. It dealt, in part, with PG&E's Humboldt Bay nuclear power plant.

In one part of the 60-minute film, Widener interviewed J.C Carroll, a PG&E nuclear engineer.

Carroll later claimed Widener simply filmed the interview and later dubbed in a sound track of an earlier off-the-record discussion.

AFTER THE FILM was broadcast, Carroll wrote KNBC officials and said Widener's documentary was "maliciously and irresponsibly written and produced" to be unfair to the utility.

Later, some U.S. senators and the utility sent copies of Carroll's letter to the Federal Communications Commission.

"After those letters went out, I couldn't sell anything to television, not even a non-controversial Marlon Brando film about the South Seas," Widener testified at the trial.

THE JURY AWARDED Widener $7.75 million in damages, but a judge reversed the award and the case slowly wound its way through the appellate courts, one of which ordered a new trial.

Widener's attorney, David Pesonen, said that after a week of pre-trial motions, PG&E and Widener agreed to the settlement.

"I couldn't see going on for another five years," Widener said Monday. "I think it's a victory for journalism."

Attorney Edwin Heafey Jr., who represented PG&E, said the utility "is pleased that seven years of litigation have ended."

Permit Process Needs Revision

The county's Environmental Management Agency is understandably put out by delays in obtaining the state permits that are required before the job of cleaning out clogged flood control channels can be undertaken.

Sand and debris deposited in the channels after last winter's heavy rains is still around and doubtless will be augmented by more runoff this winter.

But efforts to obtain dredging permits from the state Fish and Game Department and the Coastal Commission have been snarled in red tape, EMA spokesmen complain.

Now the Board of Supervisors has authorized the preparation of a bill to be introduced in the state Legislature that would remove the need for permits to restore damaged public works projects to their original capacity.

Three specific projects cited are the Santa Ana River channel, where a permit was delayed in order to avoid disturbing the nesting area of the least tern; the San Diego Creek, where it was claimed dredging of heavy siltation would endanger a wildlife habitat; and the San Juan Creek, which has been reduced to half its capacity by the pile-up of sand last winter.

Obviously there should be no blanket exemption of all public works projects from the state permit procedure. This could undermine the whole intent of the Coastal Conservation Act

But at the same time the state agencies have taken an unrealistic stance in blocking the clearance of essential flood control channels.

The Legislature would be well advised to examine the issue and correct an over-correction that threatens the well-being of the public.

Send Them a Line

This month the 1979-80 state Legislature and the 96th Congress begin their two-year sessions. In both bodies there are many carry-over members and a few new ones.

Those who represent the readers of this newspaper, along with the addresses of their district, state and federal offices, are listed elsewhere on this page, under the heading, "Write Your Lawmakers."

We hope you will clip out the list and do just that. Surprisingly few Americans ever have direct contact with their elected representatives either in person or by mail. Yet this contact is the best prescription for obtaining the kind of representation and lawmaking the electorate wants.

And it should be more than the barrage of form letters sponsored by pressure groups. These doubtless carry weight, but personal mail from individual constituents is the most helpful type of communication.

Most state legislators manage to spend at least one business day in the local offices each week. Members of Congress are here less frequently, but their offices are staffed year-round to handle complaints, suggestions or requests for help.

Invest in a few stamps and put your thoughts on paper, as briefly and constructively as possible. Send the letters to the local offices or directly to Sacramento or Washington D.C. while the Legislature and Congress are in session.

Government is a two-way street and you live on one end of it.

Airline Solution?

The Civil Aeronautics Board now has decided that airlines should segregate cigar and pipe smokers from all other passengers, instead of just lumping them in smoking sections along with cigarette puffers.

It will be up to the airlines, says the CAB, to figure out how to keep the pipe and cigar fumes away from the noses of those in nonsmoking sections.

Perhaps the eventual solution will be to divide airline interiors into little compartments like European trains.

This could solve many of the hazards, apart from other people's smoke, that threaten air travelers.

For example, there are the babies that wail and the little kids that run up and down the aisle.

And there are the seatmates who use too much exotic perfume or too little deodorant soap.

And those who steady their nerves with too much liquid refreshment and insist on recounting their life stories to the businessman who's trying to work his calculator or prepare the speech he has to deliver at the convention.

Clearly the advantages of compartmentalized airline interiors are multitude. Above all, they would cope in advance with the next batch of CAB passenger comfort regulations

Boyd/Irish Fashion

By L.M. BOYD

No nationals are less interested in clothing than are the Irish, it's said. So you can't judge an Irishman by his clothes. This is not to imply the Irish have little taste or talent. On the contrary, Ireland abounds with gifted thinkers. What's fashionable in clothing simply is too inconsequential to take up the time of the typical Irishman.

So respected are the arts there, in fact, that since 1969, no Irish writer, painter, sculptor or composer has been required to pay any income tax.

Was none other than Mae West who said, "When I'm good, I'm very good, but when I'm bad, I'm better."

Am told the students of reptiles can't x-ray a snake without killing it.

Q. "How do you account for the fact that most Chinese-Americans prefer the Cantonese style of Chinese cooking?"

A. Clearly because most of their ancestors came from that southern coastal province. Fact that Chop Suey is strictly an A.[illegible] dish unheard of in Canton has been reported. It's also true that many of the so-called Cantonese dishes are better known in the United States than in China.

The Dead Sea, please note, is not a sea but a lake.

World 'Nuclear Club' Expands

WASHINGTON — With each passing year, a haunting fear is turning into an ominous reality. the "nuclear club"—that exclusive society of nations with atomic arsenals — is expanding dangerously.

Official estimates warn that some 40 countries theoretically could produce nuclear bombs by 1990. The main concern is over countries like Brazil, Egypt, Iran, Israel, Libya, Pakistan, South Africa and South Korea — nations that for one reason or another might feel compelled to unleash a nuclear war to protect themselves.

For other nations, it is a matter of national pride to possess nuclear weaponry. Still others feel the need to maintain balances of power in local disputes.

THE UNITED STATES, as the charter member of the nuclear club, is thus faced with this dilemma: How to promote the peaceful uses of nuclear energy without giving our military technology to irresponsible governments that might ignite an atomic holocaust.

There is evidence that Jimmy Carter has had no better luck with this difficult problem than his predecessors had. Indeed, an unreleased study by the Congressional Research Service indicates that the president's determination to slow down the spread of nuclear technology has put him at serious odds with our European allies.

The Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty of 1968 barred countries without nuclear capability from acquiring the world-threatening weapons. At the same time, these nations were guaranteed access to the technology for peaceful nuclear uses on a non-discriminatory basis.

TO DATE, only six countries — the United States, the Soviet Union, Great Britain, France, India and Communist China — are known to have nuclear weapons. It is assumed that Israel has some, too, or at least has the technological capability to produce them.

The congressional study, compiled for Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., points out the basic problem Carter faces: America's European allies believe strongly that proliferation of nuclear weaponry is bad. But they feel the United States, with its greater non-nuclear fuel resources, is being unreasonably strict in controlling the flow of nuclear knowledge to oil-starved nations, which see atomic power plants as their only hope of becoming independent of the Arab oil sheiks.

After the Arab oil embargo of 1973, "many European states found themselves without any fossil fuel resources of their own to speak of," the congressional report notes. "At this time many European states began to view nuclear energy as an important part of their future electric power generation needs." France, for example, hopes to be producing 55,000 megawatts of electricity from its nuclear power plants by 1985.

THE REPORT adds: "European publics, when faced with the apparent choice of a strong likelihood of economic stagnation or the almost infinitesimal chance of reactor catastrophe, seemed inclined by early 1978 to continue their nuclear power programs."

After the March, 1978 nonproliferation act and President Carter's recent policy statements on the subject, "many Europeans simply shook their heads in bewilderment," the report says. "They asked themselves if the new U.S. policies were not simply ostrichlike and whether by pursuing them the United States might not in fact isolate itself from the mainstream of peaceful nuclear development, and in doing so lose its ability to contribute to international proliferation policy."

The new, complex controls and Carter's interpretation of them may be self-defeating, the anlysts warn. "It is so demanding on potential U.S. nuclear fuel and technology that they (the have-not nations) may take their business elsewhere, thus escaping most or all of U.S. regulation."

For example, France is currently negotiating with mainland China for the sale of an American-built Westinghouse nuclear reactor. The Chinese don't want to buy it directly from the United States because they would be restricted by U.S. fuel-purchase regulations.

THE PROBLEM is that giving a country the technology to harness nuclear energy for electric power may also give it the ability to produce nuclear weapons. The technique of uranium reprocessing at least theoretically implies the capability of producing plutonium, a key ingredient in nuclear bombs.

Because of this plutonium risk, the U.S. position is that reprocessing plants be banned in non-nuclear states. And the United States spelled out its position even more strongly in the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Act of 1978. This requires any country wanting U.S. nuclear technology or fuel to accept not only the safeguards and inspections set up by the United Nations International Atomic Energy Agency, but to comply with the stricter U.S. controls as well.

If President Carter persists in his hard-line stance for tight controls, nations desperate for nuclear energy may sidestep the United States entirely and we would have no control over the spread of atomic power. Yet the relaxation of controls can be just as dangerous.

Footnote: The congressional research report was submitted to Biden last June. The senator, who is chairman of a European affairs subcommittee, hasn't had time to analyze it, his aides told our associate Tony Capaccio.

Legislators Welcome Budget Advice

They didn't run an ad for help wanted but there is small doubt the state's lawmakers and the governor will welcome all the help they can get. Even discounting the rhetoric it is clear that the public demand for reductions in government spending has finally registered with every elected official in state government.

Certainly during the brief organization session of the 1979 Legislature held last month the spirit of slashing spending permeated the atmosphere from the governor's office right down to the newest elected legislator. Republicans and Democrats alike were busily scrambling to see who could come up with the best proposals for cuts.

THAT, of course, is the rub! What is best? Honest men may differ as to the wisest course. Elected officials will keep a wary eye on the reaction by the voters. And the pressures will be tremendous against those cuts which gore specific interests.

Already the school people have started staging their demonstrations for more money, generating a parade of proponents for expanding the least defensible program of all, adult education, during the two days the lawmakers were in town.

That is nothing to the heat which will be generated by the cities and counties and other local entities as they fight for state funds whether needed or not.

Governor Jerry Brown has pledged himself to a 10 percent overall budget reduction. Even this has caused confusion for the current debate is whether he meant a cut or merely holding the budget to a 10 percent increase as related to inflation. Brown now says he intends to keep the increase below 10 percent which is not the same as a 10 percent cut.

THE GOVERNOR can be credited with refraining from an edict to the state agencies for an across the board slash, a grievous mistake attempted by Ronald Reagan when he first took office in 1967.

But the fact remains that judicious trimming can achieve an overall 10 percent reduction in a budget which has climbed more than $8 billion to reach a monumental $18 billion in the four short years Brown has been in office. And it can be done even while improving benefits for those on welfare and other state aid programs. It can even be done while adjusting state employee pay where justified.

THERE ARE many programs in operation which can be curtailed or eliminated. Within the operations of state government there are countless activities and practices which also can be cut back or cut out. The problem is that no matter how sincere the governor and the legislators are about wanting to cut, few have any actual knowledge to enable them to be realistic in such matters.

It is here they need the help of all citizens and especially that of the dedicated state workers who know better than anyone else where savings can be made without damaging good programs. But the state workers are often fearful, and with good cause, of being mistreated by their superiors for advancing such suggestions.

Still, those with ideas for budget cuts should send them to either Senator Al Rodda, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, or Assemblyman Dan Boatwright, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee. Both can be addressed simply, State Capitol, Sacramento. Both have assured they will treat any communication in complete confidence if the writer requests it.

"There's 5,000 acres of arable land with Elizabethan farmhouse and cottages, but it's well below your price range."

Licenses Free

DEAR PAT: I've heard that senior citizens can get free fishing licenses in California. If so, what is required for one to qualify?

G.H., Costa Mesa

If you receive aid from the California Supplemental Program for the Aged, are more than 62 years old, and have been a California resident for five years, your fishing license will be provided to you free. This license is good throughout the state for all types of game fish.

Ladybug Lovelife

DEAR PAT: I ordered ladybugs, praying mantis and green lacewings to keep my garden bug-free. They're doing a good job and sticking around my garden. A neighbor told me he'd read in your column that there's a product on the market that encourages these good bugs to increase and multiply. Can you repeat this information for me?

B.L., Corona del Mar

Wheast, a cheese manufacturing by-product, has been used successfully for feeding green lacewings and encouraging them to multiply, according to nurseries contacted by AYS. The ladybugs and praying mantis may get the idea and partake of this product too. If you can't get it from your nursery, contact Rincon Insectaries, Oakland, Calif. 93022.

Heavy Potassium

DEAR READERS: The Food and Drug Administration warns that potassium chloride, a substance often sold in health food store as a diet supplement, is potentially dangerous and overuse can be fatal.

Accidental overuse of potassium chloride — sometimes called potassium salt — is known to have caused deaths of otherwise healthy individuals, and potassium chloride supplements and other products labeled as "salt substitutes" which contain potassium should not be used by people with certain medical conditions.

Overuse of potassium chloride supplements by healthy individuals can cause hyperkalemia (excessively high levels of potassium in the blood), a potentially fatal condition. In a recent case that received national publicity, a mother administered large amounts of potassium chloride (3,000 milligrams one day and 1,500 milligrams the next day) to her 2-month-old baby as a remedy for "colic." The mother was following the advice of a book by the late Adelle Davis entitled "Let's Have Healthy Children." The child died despite medical efforts to reduce body potassium levels.

FDA says that no one should use potassium supplement without medical supervision. The practice is particularly dangerous to children.

At present, potassium chloride supplements and salt substitutes are not required to carry warning labels about potential health hazards. However, FDA plans to propose that all such products be required to carry a warning that they should be used only under medical supervision.

Responsibility Yours

DEAR PAT: After many years as a punctual payer of my Department of Motor Vehicle registration fees upon receipt of the mail-in application, I didn't get the usual notice this year. The Costa Mesa DMV advised me to bring in my past year's registrations, which I did. Since my due dates were Dec. 16 and Dec. 18, I had to pay $20 in penalty fees for my two cars on Dec. 29.

DMV told me that mailing of notices was a courtesy, but that the registrant had the responsibility of keeping track of the specific dates involved in case the notice was not received. This is OK, but I do feel that any change in basic policy by DMV on mailing or not mailing notices should be well publicized. I wonder how many other people will be penalized like I was.

E.C.M., Newport Beach

A Costa Mesa DMV spokeswoman says there has been no change in the usual mailing of registration notices, but yours apparently was lost in the mail. It has always been the policy of DMV that it's up to the car owner to keep tabs on his registration due date, and it was stressed that the mailing is not required.

Spouse's Bills Deductible

DEAR PAT: My husband had open-heart surgery in September 1977 and died in December. I have just now paid off the last hospital and doctor bills. Are these deductible on my single tax return for 1978?

B.E., Costa Mesa

IRS says yes. Expenses paid for a deceased spouse by the surviving spouse are deductible in the year paid.

Rape Case Warrant Sought

TRAVERSE CITY, Mich. (AP) — A prosecutor in a gang rape case is seeking a search warrant to determine whether a defendant is circumcized.

Michael Haley, assistant prosecutor for Grand Traverse County, said Monday he also filed a motion to have the defendant produce blood, hair and saliva samples. The defense does not oppose the latter motion.

Two Kent County women charged that members of a Detroit-area motorcycle club raped them in August 1978 at a campsite outside Fife Lake. One victim said one of the rapists was not circumcised.

631 Bodies Unmoved

Remains of Cultists Pose Problems

DOVER, Del. (AP) — The bodies of 631 persons who died in the Peoples Temple mass murder-suicide are stacked in government-purchased coffins in an aging, freezing airplane hangar, their final resting places uncertain.

The federal government apparently has no plans to move from Dover Air Force Base the victims of the Nov. 18 incident at the jungle colony in Jonestown, Guyana.

"IT LOOKS LIKE no one wants to do anything," said Charles Wyman, a State Department attorney assigned here. "I was told in no uncertain terms that the government has neither the authority nor the funds to release the bodies."

Wyman said many relatives have told the State Department they cannot afford to transport and bury or cremate the bodies. Many relatives apparently are waiting for the government or some charitable group to pay the costs, he said.

Next of kin have been notified of the deaths of 635 positively identified cultists, but 353 of those bodies remained unclaimed at the base. There also were 278 unidentified bodies.

"I DON'T KNOW what the solution is going to be," Wyman said. "Obviously there's going to be a solution. We can't leave them there in the hangar."

Wyman said Air Force pathologists in Washington are still trying to name the unidentified corpses, but the pace has slowed considerably. Only two bodies have been identified since Dec. 19.

All 913 of the decomposed bodies were fingerprinted before being placed in hermetically sealed coffins, but Wyman said the Air Force has had trouble locating fingerprint records for many victims, particularly children.

THE U.S. MILITARY flew the bodies here from Jonestown. According to Wyman, the government had to get the bodies out of Guyana to pacify local officials there.

But bringing the bodies here upset some Delaware officials.

Gov. Pierre S. du Pont IV asked President Carter last month to have the military fly the bodies to San Francisco, where the Rev. Jim Jones' cult began and where many of the relatives live. Carter has not responded, said du Pont news secretary Frederick Stern.

BOTH DU PONT AND Dover Mayor Charles A. Legates Jr. have insisted that no mass burial be made near Dover. They fear the site would become a shrine to cultists.

Rep. Thomas Evans, R-D., met with State Department officials two weeks ago to press for quick disposal of the bodies, but Wyman denied Evans' contention that the department promised a decision by Feb. 1.

"That date was sort of seized on and magnified out of proportion by Evans," he said.

Delaware has allowed local morticians to transport the bodies out of state but has prevented local burial or cremation by requiring death certificates, which had to be issued in Guyana.

WYMAN SAID THE first 599 death certificates arrived in Washington Thursday, but Battle R. Robinson, assistant counsel to du Pont, said other Delaware laws still could prohibit a mass cremation of the bodies here.

For instance, Mrs. Robinson said, Delaware requires a cremation certificate signed by a physician or coroner stating there is no reason not to destroy a particular body. She said the Jonestown bodies may still be needed because of lingering questions about the cause of death.

The body of Jones was cremated in New Jersey last month to avoid Delaware's legal problems, but Thomas Cannon of the New Jersey attorney general's office said Jones' cremation apparently was illegal because Delaware morticians cannot work in New Jersey.

Cannon said no other cremations of Jonestown bodies will be allowed in New Jersey until the state Board of Mortuary Science meets to discuss the situation.

Younger Adds Name to Firm

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Former state Attorney General Evelle J. Younger joined a Los Angeles legal firm on the day his successor was sworn into office.

Younger sought and won the Republican nomination for governor instead of seeking reelection as attorney general, but was defeated Nov. 7 by incumbent Democrat Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr.

Younger became a partner in the firm of Buchalter, Nemer, Fields and Christie, and his name will be added to that of the firm, which deals in general business law.

Roaches Ride Buses

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Cockroaches have been hitching rides on Milwaukee County's urban buses, apparently finding them a nice spot for a banquet.

County Supervisors Daniel Cupertino and Thomas Kujawa are seeking regulations against littering on buses. They say a crackdown on litter would cut off the food supply for the cockroaches.

"We've had a lot of complaints from riders about people smoking, eating and drinking on the buses," Kujawa said.

Something for Everyone

Trio Sworn in at County 'Coronation'

By JOANNE REYNOLDS
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

In spite of dozing granddaughters, a missing pitch pipe and the forced austerity of Proposition 13, Orange County hosted its "coronation" Monday, with the swearing in of newly elected supervisor Harriett Wieder and re-elected incumbents Thomas Riley and Ralph Clark.

There was a little something for everyone who attended the standing room only ceremony:

— The county's first woman superior court judge, Betty Lou Lamoreaux, swore in its first woman supervisor, Mrs. Wieder, who had tears in her eyes.

— THE PLEDGE of allegiance was led by former Congressman James Roosevelt, eldest son of President Franklin Roosevelt.

— Riley was introduced by a 13-year-old handicapped boy, Cep Kral, who said he'd want a grandfather just like Riley and added, "He's an honest, loving, God-fearing man and Orange County and the nation could use a lot more men like Tom Riley."

— Anaheim Mayor John Seymour, who introduced Clark, noted the supervisor's achievement last year was in getting the Rams football team to move to Anaheim in 1980. "But after yesterday (Sunday,) I'm not so sure you're such a great leader," Seymour joked.

Music for the event was provided by the Madrigal Singers from Mater Dei High School whose director, Deborah Wheeler Doiron, apologetically informed the audience that she'd forgotten her pitch pipe after the choir had trouble starting one song.

The ceremony lasted about 40 minutes, as each of the three supervisors was introduced, sworn in and then each in turn gave a short speech.

Both Clark and Riley centered their addresses on thanking their supporters, friends and family members and promising four years of more hard work.

MRS. WIEDER, in her maiden speech as a supervisor, said she would work to bring a new era of "home rule" to county government.

In the coming four years, she said she would like to bring in "new attitudes and approaches in political thought and leadership in this country."

It all got to be too much for her pre-school age granddaughters who dozed on their mothers' laps.

The event was closed with a benediction by Rabbi Henri Front who thanked God "for being with us at this coronation."

Gaede New Planners' Chairman

Former Brea Mayor Rex Gaede was selected chairman of the Orange County Planning Commission at the panel's organizational meeting Monday.

Gaede, 47, who was appointed to the commission last June by Supervisor Ralph Diedrich, replaces William MacDougall as commission chairman.

MacDOUGALL was chosen by fellow commissioners as the panel's vice chairman.

Gaede, executive director of the Child Guidance Center of Orange County, resigned his city council post last summar to join the planning commission

A LIEUTENANT colonel in the Air Force Reserve, Gaede was narrowly defeated last June for the Republican nomination in the north county's 69th assembly district.

He also has served as trustee and past president of the Brea-Olinda Unified School District.

Usual Workday For Most

Unlike the three Orange County supervisors sworn into office Monday amid pomp, ceremony and finery, the workday was business as usual for most other County government office-holders.

District Attorney Cecil Hicks, however, missed not only the supervisors' swearing-in ceremony he'd planned to attend but the whole workday as well.

He spent the first day of his fourth four-year term at home ill and nursing a fever, his secretary said.

IT WAS a recent back injury and doctor's appointment that kept Sheriff Brad Gates away from supervisors' ceremony.

Gates already had opted to forego a swearing-in for his own second four-year term to "spend the day in the office."

But he did take time out for the doctor's appointment brought on when he injured his back over the holidays mixing cement at his San Juan Capistrano home.

GATES said he's recovering and quipped, "They can't keep a cowboy down."

About his new four-year term, Gates said, "We're just happy to be back and have the people decide to keep us in four more years."

Other than the supervisors, Assessor Bradley Jacobs was the only elected official to be formally sworn-in Monday.

Superior Court Judge Harmon Scoville administered Jacobs' oath before a crowd of about 100 county officials, assessor employees and friends as 4-year-old Lucinda Jacobs held the Bible for her father.

VIC HEIM, county auditor-controller, was sworn-in Friday when he walked over to retiring county Clerk William St John's office and took the oath on St John's last day in office.

Joining Heim and St John at that swearing-in was Supervisor Thomas Riley and an aide.

The Agony of Defeat

For every jubilant winner there is a dejected loser and the players in these pictures demonstrate that graphically. For three of them, the loss included injury as well as insult. Anteaters Out Of Doldrums--Until Thursday

By ERNIE CASTILLO
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

From the first day of practice, UC Irvine basketball coach Tim Tift said it would take patience and a lot of hard work to mold the Anteaters into a team that would be competitive in the tough Pacific Coast Athletic Assn.

Two months and 10 pre-season games later, the two returning starters, four letterman reserves, three junior college transfers and two freshman recruits are finally at the point Tift wants them. Well, almost.

TIFT

"WE'RE AS CLOSE AS WE'VE been," says Tift whose team opens PCAA play Thursday night at Long Beach State. "We'd like to have a few more wins and be further along but it's here."

As recently as one week ago, even Tift had doubts that the Anteaters would arrive in time. UCI had just dropped a pair of games in the Santa Barbara tournament to wind up a 1-5 road trip and Tift felt the entire season could hinge on how the team performed against a pair of small opponents at Crawford Hall.

True to form, UCI responded with a 107-57 rout of Mac Murray College, a Division III school, and a solid 63-51 victory over a rebuilding Portland State quintet. Granted, neither is what you would call a powerhouse but the pair of wins seemed to snap the Anteaters out of the doldrums.

"For confidence, those were extremely important games," says Tift, currently in his 12th season as UCI head coach. "Just knowing how to win and playing well worked wonders. It was much more valuable than just practicing "

TIFT IS THE FIRST TO ADMIT that UCI isn't in the class of Long Beach State, which had won eight straight games before falling a point short against Duke last week. It would certainly take a near perfect game just to stay close to the 49ers but Tift feels the Anteaters can play respectable basketball if they continue to improve as they have recently.

"We have to try to minimize the number of easy baskets they get, those scored from close range, off fast breaks and from offensive rebounds," Tift says. "Beyond that, we have to play solid defense to try and restrict their very good players. Lastly, we have to operate a very stable offense and shoot the high percentage shots."

UCI hasn't had too many problems defensively. The Anteaters

UCLA Gets Scare From Oregon

From AP Dispatches

LOS ANGELES — Oregon tried to win one for Dan Hartshorne Monday night. The Ducks failed, but not by much.

And Hartshorne, playing with a heavy heart, did all he possibly could to engineer what was nearly a major upset.

Hartshorne scored a career-high 23 points and pulled down a game-leading 10 rebounds, but the Ducks dropped a 74-71 Pacific-10 Conference basketball decision to sixth-ranked UCLA at Pauley Pavilion. The game was even closer than the final score indicates.

HARTSHORNE played all 40 minutes despite the death of his father Saturday morning.

"We wanted this ball game so much tonight, but especially for Danny Hartshorne," said Oregon Coach Jim Haney. "We wanted to be able to give the game ball to Danny's family, but it just wasn't meant to be, although Danny came up with what has to rank as an inspired effort.

THE BRUINS, who trailed by as many as eight points early in the second half, came on strong in the end to overtake the Ducks.

Oregon led 52-46 with 14:05 remaining, but the Bruins outscored the Ducks 14-3 during the next five minutes to go ahead for good. Oregon closed the gap to one point on five different occasions after that but could never regain the lead.

The Ducks drew to within one point for the final time on a tip in by Felton Sealey with 11 seconds remaining.

Oregon had a chance to win the game when Roy Hamilton dropped the ball out of bounds with nine seconds to go, but the Ducks had a pair of shots blocked in the late going.

UCLA'S BRAD HOLLAND was fouled as the game ended and made a pair of free throws to give the Bruins their three-point margin of victory.

"I was very pleased with the win tonight," said UCLA Coach Gary Cunningham. "Our conference is very well-balanced as is evidenced by the close games. We had a breakdown tonight which involved turnovers, loss of poise and missed free throws, but I'm proud that the team didn't panic and came back after losing the lead."

David Greenwood led the Bruins with 21 points and nine rebounds. UCLA now has a 3-1 Pac-10 record and a 10-2 overall mark. Oregon is 0-3 and 5-7.

"Our team doesn't look like we did last year," said Greenwood. "We aren't doing the things that we did. I'm just kind of disappointed right now because I think we're a much better ball club and a much smarter ball club than we've shown.

"We're just going to have to come out and play "

The victory set up a first place confrontation in the Pac-10 Saturday night, when the Bruins face Southern California, 4-0, at the Sports Arena.

By JOHN SEVANO
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

When Orange Coast College takes the court Wednesday night in its South Coast Conference basketball opener at Mt. San Antonio, it will be looking for its first conference title since the 1967-68 season.

MUCH OF THE PIRATES' hopes for a successful campaign will be resting on a 6-0, blond-haired, sophomore guard out of Estancia High who up until his high school days was so pudgy he thought his only extracurricular activity might be in football.

"I had an older brother (Gary, 25, who played at Golden West from 1971-73) and I always wanted to be good enough to play with him," said the 190-pound backcourt ace who leads his teammates with a 14.6 scoring average.

"BUT EVER SINCE the third grade I was kind of short and chunky, and my favorite sport was football, so I thought that's what I'd be playing."

Orgill soon outgrew his chunkiness, and his feelings toward being around his brother were rekindled.

"I felt like I wanted to prove something," Orgill said. "I wanted to prove I could be as good as my brother."

GARY GRADUATED from Estancia as one of the school's premier players. Ray followed but his high school career wasn't as prosperous.

"Everybody expected me to be as good as Gary," said Ray, sounding as if some people expected too much. "I was surprised when I was brought up to varsity as a sophomore. I hurt my back and didn't play my junior year. My senior year proved to be my only good season."

Gary went on to play at Golden West and later Cal Poly (San Luis Obispo). Ray, meanwhile, decided not to follow his brother's footsteps and enrolled at Orange Coast.

"My defense was terrible and I thought if I was going to play college ball, nobody could teach me how to play defense better than Tandy Gillis (OCC's coach)."

Both Orgill and Gillis appear to have benefited from the decision.

LAST YEAR was the Pirates' first winning season in four years (17-14). And this season, the Pirates are off to their greatest start ever with a 13-3 mark.

"Ray is definitely one of the quickest players I've ever coached," compliments his coach. "He's very versatile, handles the ball well and has the ability to get the shot off inside despite his size.

"He's much better than last year, and he's a lot better defensively. I think he's a major college guard."

Orgill would like to play at the major college level, but presently he's only thinking about the season at hand.

"THIS IS THE BEST team I've ever played on," says Orgill. "We're working hard together and I think we can win our conference and also have a good shot at the state crown.

"As for the future, I'd like to play ma-

A Capsule Report From the World of Sports

From AP Dispatches

SAN FRANCISCO — Stanford head football Coach Bill Walsh says he's "trying to make some decisions," but his school has called a news conference for today that reportedly will pave the way for his hiring by the beleaguered San Francisco 49ers.

Walsh, 46, is expected to be named to replace fired 49ers Coach Fred O'Connor. O'Connor lost his job Monday, along with General Manager Joe Thomas, after 49ers owner Eddie J. DeBartolo Jr. announced he was unhappy with "our total operation."

Contacted at his home after DeBartolo's long-expected announcement, Walsh wouldn't comment on reports he'd been tapped to return to pro football as new head coach of the 49ers.

"I'm in a position where I'm trying to make some decisions. It's a rather sensitive time," Walsh said.

But minutes later, Stanford Athletic Director Andy Geiger called a news conference, reportedly to announce that Walsh has been released from his contract with the university.

The 49ers posted a pitiful 2-14 record, the team's worst, in the past National Football League season.

On the other hand, Stanford rang up a 17-7 record in two years under Walsh, including a Sun Bowl victory over LSU in 1977 and a Bluebonnet Bowl victory over Georgia New Year's Eve.

Stanford receivers coach Rod Dowhower, 35, was reportedly in line to replace Walsh as the Cardinals' coach. Dowhower has been with Stanford for two years.

Fullerton Favored; OCC 2nd?

By JOHN SEVANO
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

It's the feature race of the junior college basketball season.

Never has the South Coast Conference been up for grabs like this season. Any of three teams could walk away with the title with success on the road being the determining factor.

Fullerton, Orange Coast and Santa Ana would be like choosing between Secretariat, Man O' War and Whirlaway with dark horses Vigors (Mt. San Antonio) and Mr. Kelso (Cerritos) waiting in the wings.

Fullerton, although it has a tough assignment in its opener at Santa Ana, would appear to have a slight edge—but in this race nothing is certain.

Orange Coast is off to the best start in the school's history (13-3), but many are wondering if the Pirates can continue their success throughout the season.

Pos.	Team	Comment	Odds
1.	Fullerton (12-4)	Lots of early kick	4-5
2.	Orange Coast (13-3)	Sharp in drills	7-5
3.	Santa Ana (12-8)	Charges in stretch	9-5
4.	Mt. San Antonio (12-7)	Freshened, beware	4-1
5.	Cerritos (8-6)	Failed as favorite	8-1
6.	San Diego Mesa (11-6)	Seldom wins a race	50-1
7.	Grossmont (9-7)	Stumbled at break	100-1

CdM Faces Dana Hills

Corona del Mar High's Sea Kings, Orange County's No. 1 ranked prep basketball team, return to the fires tonight with a trek to upstart Dana Hills, which has compiled the best start (8-2) and loftiest ranking (10th in Orange County) in the school's history. It starts at 7.

The Sea Kings (9-1) escaped Newport Harbor's potential ambush Friday night (46-41) and will be sending the usual lineup of heavies, which includes All-CIF guard Dave Koehler, fluid 6-4 Chris Johnston and steady Shawn Ahearn.

Awaiting the Sea Kings is a team led by 6-4 Mike Samuels, who has been the leading scorer and rebounder.

Samuels leads the Dolphins in scoring (13.4) and is aided by 6-5 Chris Mathieu and 6-6 Doug Andrews (12.0).

Elsewhere, Laguna Beach invades Ocean View at 8 and Katella is at Newport Harbor at 7.

Ocean View boasts the No. 5 rating in Orange County with continuing improvement and Newport Harbor faces a Katella quintet which is coming off a 56-53 victory over Fountain Valley.

Francis Rests After Accident

HONOLULU (AP) — Russ Francis, the New England Patriots' All-pro tight end, was listed in satisfactory condition here Monday after a motorcycle accident.

Francis was injured when the motorcycle he was driving collided with an automobile Sunday in Waimanalo, a rural area of the island of Oahu. He suffered a broken left arm and ankle and a possible concussion, according to a report in the Honolulu Advertiser.

Francis, who lives here in the offseason, did the radio color commentary for last Saturday's Hula Bowl.

His passenger on the motorcycle, Jennifer Schafe, 18, was listed in satisfactory condition with possible head injuries after the noontime accident.

The Patriots, in Foxboro, Mass., said Francis' left hand and ankle were placed in a cast by Dr. Robert Nemechek at Castle Hospital in Hawaii.

The hand, with a broken middle finger, will be in a cast for three to four weeks. The ankle, with a break in the deltoid ligament, will be in a cast for four to six weeks, the team reported.

Avoiding The Rush

For as long as anybody would like to remember, the Rams' motto has been: "Choke Early. Avoid the last-minute rush."

Thus, in keeping with Carroll Rosenbloom's promise for innovation, they changed their ways and saved the worst for last Sunday.

With an offense that indeed was offensive, the Rams chalked up a string of goose eggs as long as a Howard Cosell eulogy. To conserve energy, Coliseum officials should have turned off the Rams' half of the scoreboard. They had no points, no poise, no playoff party. Heck, they had more no's than a Jimmy Durante look-alike contest.

THE RAMS HAD MORE of a retreat than an attack. The way they looked against the Cowboys, they should have tried a swift kick occasionally. Like on first down, for instance. Ray Malavasi should have left the defense on the field the entire game. At least that way, we'd still be tuned to Channel 2 watching the 118th sudden-death overtime session.

The running game was more of a crawling one; the once-famous "three yards and a cloud of dust" more like three feet and a clod of sod. On fourth-and-a foot they came up two feet short. They ran every which way but through and around the Dallas line. The reason was obvious: they had plenty of Mr. Insides but no Mr. Outsides to go with them.

PAT HADEN USUALLY FIRES bullets but this time they were blanks. His favorite receiver was Charlie Waters who happens to be a Cowboy. Monte Hall never had bigger giveaways.

Haden's replacement, Vince Ferragamo, not only couldn't tell blue from white, he couldn't tell Cliff Harris from Waters. He can be forgiven for failing to deliver a miracle comeback but not for cancelling every longshot bet from here to Vegas.

What were the Rams trying to do, anyway? Make Tom Henderson a prophet? Make LA the target of all the choke jokes that used to belong to Philadelphia? Make Ram fans the most abused minority since the Polish?

ONCE AGAIN, THE BEST MOVES were by the cheerleaders, the most excitement came from the peanut vendors and the safest bet is anybody against the Rams in an NFC title game.

You'd think by now the networks would make the Rams change their script. Oh, there have been minor adjustments in characters: Malavasi for Allen for Knox; Haden for Harris for Hadl for Gabriel. But the final chapter, in which the Rams become goats, has had more reruns than I Love Lucy.

And it's one show, I'm sure, Los Angeles fans are glad has only one more season to run.

Maybe all Ray needs is to have his brother come out of retirement and provide an impetus. Do the two still play now?

Angry Bettor Suicide Victim

HOLLYWOOD (AP) A 27-year-old Hollywood man apparently shot and killed himself after critically wounding a neighbor following an argument over a bet on the Los Angeles Rams-Dallas Cowboys football game, police Sgt. David Gossman said today.

Police said Jay Valentine died of a self-inflicted gunshot wound.

Fresh Snow At Resorts

All the Southern California ski areas got fresh snow over the weekend and, surprisingly, the locals experienced more of an improvement in their ski conditions than did the Sierra areas, which didn't get as much punch from the storm.

Today Snow Valley in the San Bernardino range, with its snowmaking machinery, has a base of up to 60 inches, while Mammoth is getting by with a 42-inch base.

Here are the conditions:

Mountain High — 24-48 inches of powder and packed powder, two chairs operating.
Holiday Hill — 30-inch base with four chairs operating.
Ski Sunrise — 18-28 inches of powder and packed powder, two pomas and one rope tow operating.
Mt. Baldy 18-24 inches of powder and pack with three chairs operating.
Kratka Ridge — 36-48 inches of powder and packed powder with one chair operating.
Mt. Waterman — 36-60 inches of powder and packed powder with two chairs operating.
Snow Valley — 48-60 inches of powder and packed powder, five chairs operating.
Snow Summit — 24-42 inches of base pack and surface powder, five double chairs and one quad chair operating.
Goldmine — 30 inches of back pack and surface powder, two chairs operating.

Dantley to Rejoin Lakers Tonight?

NEW YORK (AP) — Forward Adrian Dantley, who has missed the last 15 games, may play for Los Angeles tonight when the Lakers face the New York Knicks at Madison Square Garden (Channel 9, 6 o'clock).

Dantley, who is averaging 21.6 points per game, suffered a hyper-extended knee last month.

Dantley worked out with the Lakers Monday but Coach Jerry West said he would wait until after this morning's shooting practice to decide whether to remove the former Notre Dame standout from the injured reserve list.

"We want to see if he gets fluid on his knee after he runs," said West.

Bad Knight for 49ers

Loyola Clips Long Beach; ND Rolls

From AP Dispatches

EVANSTON, Ill. — Forward Larry Knight scored 31 points as Loyola of Chicago handed 19th-ranked Long Beach State its third straight loss, a 95-86 setback, in non-conference college basketball action Monday night.

Knight scored 19 points and grabbed 10 rebounds in the first half as the Ramblers raced to a 49-35 lead at intermission. Loyola increased its margin to 17 points early in the second half, then held on as the 49ers surged back.

Long Beach State, 8-3, cut the lead to eight points several times but never came closer.

Kevin Sprewer hit for 19 points, Leroy Stampley added 15 and Dan Bush had 13 for the Ramblers, who improved their record to 5-7 and avenged an 84-73 defeat at the hands of Long Beach State earlier this season.

Notre Dame, 95-63

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Guard Bruce Flowers scored 15 points and Stan Wilcox added 14 as No. 2 Notre Dame rolled over Davidson 95-63.

Forwards Tracy Jackson and Orlando Woolridge added 13 apiece as the Fighting Irish boosted their season record to 7-1.

Davidson's John Gerdy hit for 26 points and Todd Haynes added 18 in the Wildcats' losing effort. Davidson is now 4-9.

Kentucky, 90-64

LEXINGTON, Ky. — Freshman Dwight Anderson scored seven points during a game-ending 18-4 scoring run as 17th-ranked Kentucky broke open a close game and defeated Mississippi 90-64.

The Rebels, who trailed by as many as 19 points in the first half, had drawn to within 61-54 with 6:56 to go on four straight baskets by John Stroud. Tom Warda, Elston Turner and Tim Thomas.

The Rebels trailed just 69-60 with 4:19 remaining after Warda sank a 22-foot jump shot, but Kentucky then mounted its decisive rally.

Texas A&M, 77-64

COLLEGE STATION, Texas — Tyrone Ladson and Vernon Smith combined for 35 points to lead 11th-ranked Texas A&M to a 77-64 Southwest Conference victory over Baylor.

The Aggies had a balanced scoring attack with five players scoring in double figures. Smith had 18 points and Ladson 17 to lead the Aggie scoring effort.

Vanderbilt, 88-87

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Mike Rhodes scored 24 points to lead Vanderbilt to an 88-87 Southeastern Conference upset basketball victory over fifth ranked Louisiana State.

Vanderbilt's regionally televised victory, coupled with Tennessee's loss to Mississippi State, gives Vanderbilt the lead in the conference race with a 3-0 SEC record.

We don't sell you a seat, we sell you a service.

Someday, all the hullabaloo about fares and seating will settle down. And then you'll wonder what happened to the service you used to get. Continental hasn't forgotten. We built our reputation on personal service; after all we have to compete with far larger airlines, so we have to do better.

Our reputation for service was built on delivery, not promises. We have one of the most modern fleets in the business, DC-10's and 727's. So there's always plenty of room to relax, store things overhead, or just move around. And we plan our schedules around the times you like to fly, not just when we want to fly.

But we don't stop there, we cover the little touches like free stereo on all flights. We pour only premium liquor. The kind we know you'll like. And as a pleasant sight for your eyes, we've added handsome new uniforms.

You might say that service is an attitude. But at Continental we say it's also the key to our survival.

So in these days of confusion over fares and flights, Continental is sticking to the kind of service that built our reputation. For information and reservations call your travel agent, company travel department or Continental.

Golf Roundup

Pro Tours Stay Rooted in West

By HOWARD L. HANDY
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

When the men's PGA tour moves out of the West in late February, the LPGA will take over for the month of March and early April with five straight weeks of tournament play in and around Southern California.

One of the major highlights of the LPGA tour will be the $150,000 Women's Kemper Open at Mesa Verde Country Club, March 29 through April 1.

THE FIRST EVENT WILL BE the Sunstar Golf Classic at Rancho Park Golf Course in Los Angeles, former site of the men's Los Angeles Open. This one will be from March 8 through 11. Five places for women amateurs in the Sunstar Classic were picked up in an 18-hole qualifying trial recently at Rancho Park. Candidates had to have handicaps of five or less to be eligible for qualifying.

LOPEZ

The key to success of any or all of these tournaments has to be the presence of the sensational Nancy Lopez. Lopez has stated that she will defend her title in the Sunstar. But she is not committed to the others at the moment even though she is expected to participate in most of them leading up to the Colgate-Dinah Shore tourney in Palm Springs the week after the Women's Kemper Open.

One of the early events on the 1979 PGA calendar is the 90-hole Bob Hope Desert Classic, which opens Wednesday on four courses in and around Palm Springs.

Jack Nicklaus, heralded as the world's premier golfer, makes a rare appearance in the Hope Classic, and it could be his only West Coast competition this year.

Nicklaus, who pushed his total of major titles to 15 with a victory at the British Open last year, plans to play in only about a dozen events this season.

"I haven't played in the Hope in a couple of years or more and I felt it was time I put it on my schedule," Nicklaus says.

Most of the game's top attractions will kick off their seasons in the Hope marathon, including Tom Watson, sometimes regarded as the heir-apparent to Nicklaus' title as the world's best.

CHEVROLET WILL SPONSOR a closest-to-the-pin contest during 17 tournaments which will be televised by CBS during 1979 with the winner of each contest receiving the use of a Chevrolet for one year plus a $1,000 scholarship to be awarded to the college of the player's choice in his name.

SEVERIANO BALLESTEROS has declined an invitation to join the PGA tour but intends to defend his title in the Greensbory Open and expects to play in the Doral-Eastern Open, the Tournament Players Championship and the Atlanta Golf Classic in 1979.

Otherwise, he will remain on the European tournament players circuit.

MINNESOTA VIKING TIGHT END Bob Tucker will be trying for his third American Airlines Golf Classic victory in four years, but don't look for him to try the pro golf tour when he finishes his football playing days.

When he won with Graig Nettles of the New York Yankees as his partner in 1976, the duo had a substantial lead but last season, playing with Bobby Murcer of the Chicago Cubs, he felt the pressure on the final day.

"When I made the winning two-foot putt on the last hole, the hole looked like a dime to me and it was getting smaller all the time."

have allowed just 639 points in 10 games, only two in which opponents have scored over 70 points. The major question mark has been the offense, which had been generating only 56.5 points an outing before last week's outbursts raised the season average to 73.0.

"IT'S EVIDENT WE'RE NOT a big team," says Tift who will start 6-6 senior Phil Bolden at center. "We're not a great rebounding team and that's going to hurt us and we've also had trouble getting the ball inside and taking it to the basket."

On the plus side, the improvements are many.

"We're better offensively and we're playing with more confidence," says Tift. "I think we're playing a smarter game too. We're cutting down on the turnovers, hitting the open man, helping ourselves defensively. We're doing those little things that are helping us more than earlier."

A big key in the two victories last week was the play of guard Lester Jones, who scored 18 points in both outings and seems to be fully recovered from the groin injury that sidelined him just before the season opener. Tift has also gotten excellent play out of Louis Bremond, a freshman who, like Jones, is in his first year with UCI.

BOLDEN HAS BEEN THE SCORING and rebounding leader for UCI, which will also go with Steve McGuire at forward. Both are lettermen. The other starting berth is up for grabs between Steve Rodgers, questionable with knee problems, Vic Conyers and Quentin Brown.

Rodgers and Brown were with the club last year when the Anteaters went 2-12 in their initial PCAA campaign and finished last. This year, the team has set a goal of moving up at least one notch.

"'We're looking to improve our finish," says Tift. "We'd like to be in the best possible position when the PCAA tournament comes around and that's our objective. If we finish anywhere from first to seventh, it will be an improvement over last year."

One Ram Selected All-pro

NEW YORK (AP)—The Pittsburgh Steelers and Dallas Cowboys, who meet to decide the National Football League championship on Jan. 21, placed a total of six players on The Associated Press All-pro team for 1978.

The American Football Conference champion Steelers led all teams by placing four players — wide receiver Lynn Swann, center Mike Webster, quarterback Terry Bradshaw and outside linebacker Jack Ham —on the 25-player team.

FREE SAFETY Cliff Harris and tackle Randy White represent the National Conference champion Cowboys on the team selected through voting by a national panel of sports writers and broadcasters.

Pittsburgh's placing represented the trend in the first-team selections, as 18 AFC players and seven from the NFC were chosen.

Bradshaw quarterbacked the Steelers to 16 victories in the 18 regular season and postseason games played on the way to their Super Bowl XIII meeting with the Cowboys at Miami. He finished the regular season as the leading passer in the AFC and had 28 touchdown passes — many of them to Swann, whose 61 receptions placed him third among AFC pass catchers.

Running back Earl Campbell of the Houston Oilers and defensive end Al Baker of the Detroit Lions — two players who enjoyed sensational rookie campaigns in 1978 — also were named to the first team.

UCI Forecast 7th in PCAA

By ERNIE CASTILLO
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

There are three distinct classes of basketball teams in the Pacific Coast Athletic Assn. this year: the haves who will be fighting to stay on top, the have-nots who will be fighting to stay out of the bottom and the in-betweens who need no explanation.

The first group includes Long Beach State, which used to win the PCAA every year; Cal State Fullerton, the Cinderella team which helped put the conference on the national basketball map; and Utah State, the new kid on the block which has all the tools to make it an interesting race. History and four returning starters give Long Beach the edge.

The have-nots include UC Irvine, which lacks height and experience, and San Jose State, which has yet to exhibit a defense.

The in-betweens—UC Santa Barbara, Fresno State and Pacific—have too much talent to fall into the cellar but not enough to win consistenly enough on the road to challenge for the crown.

Pos.	Team	Comment	Odds
1.	Long Beach State (8-2)	Class of Field	2-1
2.	Cal State Fullerton (9-2)	Has the Horses	7-2
3.	Utah State (8-1)	Solid Contender	7-2
4.	Fresno State (4-6)	Likes Slow Pace	10-1
5.	UC Santa Barbara (5-6)	Coming on Strong	20-1
6.	Pacific (4-8)	Deceiving Record	25-1
7.	UC Irvine (4-6)	Up a Notch	50-1
8.	San Jose State (3-9)	Not a Prayer	50-1

Demand Outstrips Cost

Desire for Bigger Homes, Tax Breaks Noted

NEW YORK (AP) — The average price of a new home is almost $10,000 more than at the start of last year and the combined increase in both price and mortgage rates could mean a difference of almost $100 in the monthly mortgage payments.

Despite that, nearly 2 million new housing units were built last year, a new record. That has led many economists to revise their ideas about trends in home buying.

WHILE HOUSING construction is expected to slow in the face of double-digit mortgage rates, the combination of the wider awareness of a house as an inflation hedge and the continued availability of money to finance mortgages for most of the year led to surprising housing strength in 1978.

The Federal Home Loan Bank Board reported last week that by December, the average cost of a new home had risen to $67,600 and the average effective mortgage rate was a record 10.02 percent.

The average cost was $58,000 in January 1978 and the mortgage rate was nearly one percentage point lower at 9.15 percent. Calculations on the monthly payment assume a 20 percent down payment on a 30-year mortgage.

CONSUMER

THE DIFFERENCE in monthly payments —$97 a month, or about $35,000 over the life of the loan — are only rough guides to a typical experience since rates vary widely from region to region and so do down payment terms.

But they point up the rapid increase in housing costs due in part to a demand, not only for more homes, but for bigger and better homes by those in a position to trade up from one house to another.

In the process, new homes have increasingly included more baths, larger garages, larger lots and such other extras as central air conditioning or built-in appliances.

IN A STUDY last year, E. Scott Maynes, chairman of the Department of Consumer Economics and Housing at Cornell University, pointed to one key reason that some people have been able to trade up:

"Inflation favors debtors, as does the income tax system. The larger the mortgage payment the more interest can be deducted on federal and state tax forms. Property taxes also can be deducted."

Assuming a continuous rate of inflation at 6 percent and assuming the buyer's income keeps pace with that, Maynes projects the mortgage dollar will take only half as much of family income in 12 years as it did at the start and only one-quarter as much 25 years in the future.

BUT, HE NOTES, in practice, the system also provides bigger breaks in the higher tax brackets.

"A family with an income of $15,000 saves 27 percent of each dollar deducted, a $30,000 family saves 45 percent and a $50,000 family saves 60 percent," because of the effect of scaled tax brackets, he wrote in a study published a year ago.

But the current levels of prices and interest rates are already making it difficult for some people to come up with payments or convincing others to delay home purchases in hopes of lower interest rates later.

Beef Prices to Rise

WASHINGTON (AP) — The average retail price of beef, 23 percent higher than a year earlier, may rise 14 percent more this year, the Agriculture Department says.

Preliminary figures, based on a blended all-cut basis, put December's average retail price at $1.92 a pound, up 23 percent from $1.56 in December 1977, the department said.

SHARPLY HIGHER MARKET prices for live cattle, which rose about 30 percent in 1978, were responsible, the department said.

Consumers can expect retail beef prices overall to rise 10 percent to 14 percent this year, department experts say, adding that pork prices may average 2 percent to 5 percent higher than in 1978.

Increases in hamburger prices are expected to be among the steepest this year because few relatively lean cattle, from which ground beef comes, are being slaughtered. Many cattle producers have slashed their herds and it will take at least two or three years to rebuild them.

DECEMBER'S RETAIL PRICE average was up 2.2 percent from the average $1.88 a month earlier. The figures were for U.S. Choice beef, which comes from grain-fed animals and not from the cattle that wind up as hamburger.

December's average retail pork price dipped a fraction of a cent to just under $1.50 a pound. But prices were up 15 percent from $1.31 a pound in December 1977.

Retail pork prices this year may top 1975's record of $1.58, depending on hog production and consumer demand.

U.S. Panel Seeks LNG Comment

By Capitol News Service

Comments on proposed California liquefied natural gas terminal facilities will be received in a public hearing on Jan. 16 in Santa Barbara.

Samuel Z. Gordon, Federal Energy Regulatory Commission administrative law judge, has scheduled the meeting in the Santa Barbara County administration building, beginning at 9:30 a.m.

THE SAFETY, RELIABILITY and environmental effects of construction and operation of an LNG terminal are among the issues to be considered at the hearing.

The facilities would be used to receive, store and regasify LNG received from Indonesia and southern Alaska. The gas would be used in California.

Pacific Indonesia LNG Co. has been conditionally authorized by the Department of Energy to import LNG from Indonesia. Its affiliate, Pacific Alaska LNG Co., has pending an application to receive LNG from southern Alaska.

PERSONS WISHING TO speak at the hearing must submit written statements to be received no later than Wednesday to David Huard, Commission Staff Counsel, 825 N. Capitol St. N.E., Washington, D.C. 20426.

Statements should include name, address, qualifications or nature of interest in the matter, a brief statement of the views to be presented, and an indication whether the testimony will be under oath.

Stability, Money Mark Leaders

NEW YORK (AP) — He's married, probably in his 60s, and probably makes more than $200,000 a year.

Chances are he has at least an undergraduate degree and he has spent his entire working life with one firm.

THAT'S THE profile, drawn from two recent surveys, of a typical chief executive of one of America's biggest industrial companies.

The, surveys were conducted by Korn-Ferry International, a Los Angeles-based executive recruiting firm, and the Conference Board, a New York-based business research organization.

THE CHIEFS ARE paid handsomely for their efforts. According to a Conference Board poll of salaries at about 1,500 major U.S. companies, the average chief executive at a large manufacturing firm received $241,000 in salary and other compensation in 1977, the most recent year for which figures were available.

Korn-Ferry found that none of the chiefs was under 50 years of age, while 13 — or 52 percent — were between 60 and 64. Eleven of the chiefs were between 50 and 59 and one was in the 65-or-over class. Names were not disclosed in either survey.

ALL 25 CHIEFS are male and are married, although the Korn-Ferry survey did not poll the executives to find if any had been married more than once.

"There are obvious trends of stability" in the group, said the firm's vice president of research, John Sussman.

Eighteen of the executives never worked for another company, the survey said. The chiefs have been with their current employers from 15 to 40 years, with an average stay of 30.92 years.

J. ROBERT FLUOR, chairman of Irvine's Fluor Corp., an engineering and construction company, received $1,121,000 in 1977 to lead the chief executives' salary list.

According to Forbes magazine's annual salary survey, the drug firm's chief received $1,113,000 in salary, bonuses and other compensation in 1977. He is not an example of an executive who stayed at one company, having served as secretary of defense and as former President Ford's chief of staff, among other government jobs.

THOMAS A. Murphy, chairman of General Motors Corp., the nation's largest industrial firm, received $996,000

The chief executives in general are as well educated as they are well paid. Only four of the 25 checked in the Korn-Ferry survey have no college degrees, while 21 have undergraduate degrees and 13 completed graduate school.

Of those going to graduate school, five had master of business administration degrees, with three of the five M.B.A.'s coming from Harvard University. Five had degrees as masters of science.

Telefile Computer Reorganizes Staff

Telefile Computer Corp., Irvine, has announced a company reorganization appointment of a new president and an influx of orders that the company says should help offset fiscal year 1978 losses.

The last fiscal year, which ended on Sept. 30, was expected to show a loss in excess of $4 million, compared with a net profit of $1,126,867 the previous year, according to S.V. Edens, chairman.

Though in default of bank covenants, Telefile has been negotiating with its prime lender to modify its lending arrangements. It has no assurance that the negotiations can be concluded on an acceptable basis, Edens said.

The organizational changes include the setting up of a separate operation to accelerate the development and production of new computers.

Assuming the position of president and chief executive officer of Telefile Computer Products Inc. was David T. Scott, former president of Interstate Electronics Corp., Anaheim.

Scott has responsibility for day-to-day operations, including, marketing, engineering, manufacturing and support activities

of 15 percent to 25 percent in new housing starts this year from nearly 2 million in 1978. They also anticipate mortgage interest rates that may peak at 11.5 percent.

But the trend over the longer run is likely to be continued demand for homes. That is likely to squeeze young home buyers.

In recent remarks before the Senate Committee on Banking, Housing and Urban Affairs, Milton Hudson, a senior vice president at Morgan Guaranty Trust Co., noted that more than 40 million Americans will reach the prime home-buying age of 30 in the 1980s as the post-war babies grow older.

"TRANSLATING need into effective demand will involve overcoming some formidable hurdles if serious inflation persists, especially for the first-time home buyers."

Consumer Suits Mulled

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Supreme Court has agreed to decide whether consumers may sue when forced to pay higher prices because of alleged antitrust law violations.

Facing an issue carrying enormous impact for consumers and business alike, the court will review a ruling that only commercial entities, and not private consumers, have a right to sue in such cases.

The justices were urged by Justice Department lawyers and officials from 41 states to strike down the lower court's ruling in making the decision announced Monday.

The test case came from Minnesota, where Kathleen Reiter sued five hearing aid manufacturers in 1975. Essentially, her lawsuit charged that the manufacturers illegally placed anti-competitive restraints on distribution and sale of hearing aids.

THOSE ILLEGAL restraints hiked the prices consumers were forced to pay, said the suit, which was filed on behalf of hearing-aid buyers.

The section says that persons injured in their "business or property" may sue for triple damages under the law. The manufacturers interpreted that wording as meaning that only persons alleging that their business or commercial interests were injured may sue.

NOTING THAT the U.S. Supreme Court gave foreign countries the right to sue for triple damage last year under the Clayton Act, her appeal said:

". . .Such governments are now guaranteed continued standing while American consumers are to be denied access to the courts of this nation. Such a result is incredible. . . ."

Tuesday's Closing Prices — NYSE COMPOSITE TRANSACTIONS

Quotations include trades on the New York, Midwest, Pacific, PBW, Boston, Detroit and Cincinnati stock exchanges and reported by the National Association of Securities Dealers and Instinet.

AT&T Answer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The American Telephone & Telegraph Co. says it is confident the courts "will ultimately vindicate" the Bell System from government antitrust charges.

"From an economic standpoint, the government's case is barren for it makes no claim that telecommunications services would be provided at as high a level of quality or at as low a level of cost if the Bell System were fragmented," the company said in a 452-page statement Monday.

Grim Forecast

Tough '79 Due; Benefits Eyed

By SYLVIA PORTER

What will 1979 mean in terms of your pocketbook, job security, cost of living and other vital money aspects?

It will be the toughest year since the slump of the mid-1970s — and that was the most severe business downturn of the entire post-World War II era.

YET, IF YOU HANDLE IT right on your own, and if the White House remains determined to work with an equally determined Congress to tackle the fundamental challenge of inflation, it could turn out to be a rewarding year, too.

The question is not whether 1979 will be a tough year. It will.

It will be blotched by a rate of inflation averaging 8 percent or more. It will be threatened by an upsurge in joblessness and bankruptcies as the pace of business turns downward. It will be made even more difficult by unanticipated shortages of essential goods and services. It will be an economy laboring under the triple burden of an aged expansion, record interest rates and steep inflation.

The only questions:

— How grim will we permit these adverse forces to become?

— To what extent will we make progress in cooperating with other industrial nations in curbing inflation and stabilizing the monetary system so the system can support an ever-growing volume of world trade?

— Will President Carter have the guts to refuse to be lobbied by big-time labor and business into caving in on an anti-inflation program?

In the immediate future, here are pocketbook certainties and probabilities:

(1) THE COST OF LIVING WILL continue oppressively high and it's more than possible that with price pressures building in food, energy and other basic raw materials, we'll move back to double-digit inflation rates before any easing of inflation begins.

You can beat it by obeying the fundamental rules for buying food, clothing, shelter, other essentials. Shop the food specials, substitute and switch to less expensive but equally nutritious foods, take advantage of seasonal sales, look for bargains in discount stores, stock up on basic styles in clothing during clearances.

(2) Unless you're in a recession-proof field or are uniquely protected, your job will be less secure than in years. Honestly appraise your job security, your value to your company. If you're vulnerable, start to reduce your vulnerability.

(3) IF YOU'RE TRYING TO SELL a house in a suburb, you'll find this more difficult, because of the softening of the economy, the stiff cost and rising scarcity of mortgage credit, and the climbing costs of transportation. The same applies if you're trying to sell land or to build new houses.

But if you're on the buying side and have the funds to offset the adverse factors, you may find 1979 the best period in a long time.

(4) Borrowing money will be hard and costly, with high interest rates and the Federal Reserve System intent on clamping down on credit to brake inflation.

But saving money will bring you the highest returns in years, with record or near-record rates. What hurts the borrower, in short, helps the saver — a perfect illustration of the two sides of the meaning of 1979's economy.

A Touch of Class

'Chase' Rated Low But Survives

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The erudite, distinguished John Houseman, 75, seems the most unlikely of people to be starring in a television series. But then, "The Paper Chase" is not your ordinary series.

It has no gelatinous chests, no chases (except after law college grades), no gunfights, no leering sex. Predictably, it also has no ratings. Yet it proved the TV season's miracle by being extended to a full season. This despite ratings usually accorded documentaries about the energy crisis.

Somebody up there at CBS headquarters must like it. So does a small legion of Paper Chasers who find the show's wit, intelligence and humanity an oasis in the television wasteland.

HOUSEMAN CREATED the role of Prof. Charles W. Kingsfield Jr. in the 1973 movie, winning the Oscar for supporting actor in his acting debut at 70. He continues to play the stern but fair-minded law professor weekly when the series isn't pre-empted by specials aimed at pumping up CBS ratings.

"The numbers are appalling," Houseman admitted. "But I think it is deplorable that the newspapers play up the ratings as if the fact that Show A beat Show B was the only important thing.

HOUSEMAN

"Everything has become a contest. People are more interested in learning how many millions a paperback sold than in reading the book. Success in numbers is becoming dangerous

"THE PAPER Chase" seemed headed up suicide alley from the beginning, scheduled against the ABC monoliths "Happy Days" and "Laverne and Shirley." As Milton Berle is inclined to say, "I wouldn't give that spot to a leopard."

"Historically, that time slot is a graveyard," said Houseman. "But I thought we could succeed if we could secure and keep an audience of those who probably wouldn't turn on their sets if we weren't on.

"I was not surprised when the show was extended for a full season. All indications were that it would be. The reviews were the best of any series this season, and CBS took ads with the message: 'Who says there is no quality in television?' The network could scarcely have canceled the show after that."

HOUSEMAN WAS able to conduct his own rating service during a recent trip to New York. He reported that dozens of people stopped him in the Manhattan streets to thank him for the show and express their hope that it would continue. A recurring comment: "I learn something from it every week."

"The great problem of the show is in keeping the quality up," Houseman added. "My feeling is that if you do go down, go down with good shows."

"The Paper Chase" was originally based on the novel by John Ray Osborn Jr. The movie was written and directed by James Bridges, who had the brilliant idea of casting his friend Houseman. Bridges also wrote the pilot script for the series.

HOUSEMAN HAS had a long and distinguished career as a producer, ranging from the Mercury Theater with Orson Welles to such films as "The Bad and the Beautiful," "Lust for Life," "Executive Suite" and "Julius Caesar." He was asked if he didn't succumb to his producer instincts during the course of the TV series.

"Only at the beginning," he admitted. "I felt that the scripts for the first nine shows had gone wrong. The writers were injecting melodrama and television plots where they didn't belong. Jim Bridges agreed, and we were able to turn back to what the movie and the pilot had been, a strange blend of comedy and seriousness."

Lawman

Star Signed

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Anne Archer will star as Billy Elkhorn in the CBS mini series based on Judith Krantz' best seller, "Scruples." Miss Archer recently starred in "Paradise Alley" and "The Pirate."

'Raised in Anger'

Child Beaters Examined

PITTSBURGH (AP) — "I had had it and didn't want to hurt her because she was a child . . .So it was either kill myself that day when I brought the gun up to my head or reach out to someone. I reached out."

She, along with six other parents, describes her history of child abuse in an hour-long special to be aired Thursday evening at 8 on KCET, Channel 28, and at 9 on KOCE, Channel 50.

"RAISED IN ANGER," produced by WQED in Pittsburgh, with Emmy award-winner Edward Asner as host, introduces 1979 as the International Year of the Child, a designation made by the United Nations.

Unlike most previous examinations of child abuse, this one focuses on the anguish and helplessness of the abusive parent, rather than the child's suffering, and attempts to help those parents identify their child-raising problems.

"It is not a question of how parents feel toward their children alone that brings on abuse. It's how they handle such feelings," says James Seguin, the show's producer.

BERNIE, CONVICTED OF manslaughter and sentenced to 10 years in jail after the death of his child, says, "I felt totally helpless when I was abusing David. I was very much angry at my helplessness so, in retaliation, I abused him more . . . I felt justified because I felt a sense of power doing int. I didn't feel helpless anymore."

One million parents used knives or guns to threaten or injure their child in 1979, the program states. An estimated 2,000-5,000 children die each year as a direct result of child abuse.

The program, which relates the personal experiences, ranging from mild to severe, of the six parents, as well as describing their recovery, is interspersed with commentary from pediatricians, child psychologists and representatives of helping organizations, such as Parents Anonymous.

"RAISED IN ANGER" includes footage from a session at a meeting of Parents Anonymous, a national child abuse organization, as well as a segment filmed at Pittsburgh's Parental Stress Center, a treatment facility for abused or threatened infants.

The final portion of the program offers abusive or potentially abusive parents information on how to obtain help.

The broadcast is coordinated with the opening by the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare of 10 regional centers for child abuse and neglect throughout the country, says Lynn Rubenson, promotion manager of national projects for WQED.

The station also intends to launch a national "outreach" campaign to get in touch with abusive parents through the efforts of local PBS stations and national organizations that deal with child abuse.

Grace Cuts Kids' Record

MONACO (AP) — Princess Grace of Monaco has cut a children's record entitled "The Bird of the North and the Bird of the Sun" which will be released in the next few days in the United States and Europe. One side of the record is in French and the other in English.

Proceeds from sales of the record will go to a children's organization not yet chosen by the princess, a palace spokesman said.

SCR's 'Contractor'

Play Well Constructed

Intermission
Tom Titus

Putting up and dismantling a huge canvas tent on stage each night is a piece of cake compared to assembling an entire production, which includes this procedure, in less than two weeks' time.

This was the task confronting South Coast Repertory's Martin Benson when he stepped in to assume the staging of "The Contractor" after the originally assigned director had departed. And in what must rank as some sort of minor miracle, the finished product is a glowing example of stage craftsmanship.

Exhausting physical action is incorporated with the rich dialogue of David Storey's realistic drama with surprising finesse, given the brief period of time in which the project was mounted. Character interpretation is outstanding, particularly in the case of the motley crew of laborers which accomplishes the tent construction.

STOREY, LIKE many of his British contemporaries, utilizes the English "caste system" of upper and lower classes to create a situation as realistic as the construction going on outside the repertory company's new Fourth Step Theater. The gruff, bickering workmen put up the big tent and assemble the outdoor pavilion bit by bit while their wealthy employer (who's giving a wedding reception there) and his family drop by now and again to watch the progress and offer inane comments.

Through Storey's light but deft brush strokes, we come to know the contractor (Derek Murcott), his wife (Alison Evans), his son and daughter (Howard Shangra and Lee Shallat), his elderly parents (Scotty King and Pauline Hague) and the daughter's fiance (John-David Keller). All are, to varying degrees, innocuous but likeable people.

The meaty roles are those of the laborers — a rowdy collection of misfits and transients who would find it difficult to gain employment elsewhere. Wayne Grace as the foreman, a paroled embezzler with a taciturn manner, rides herd on them in a beautifully understated performance.

TWO OF THEM are particularly memorable — John Napierala as a Lee Marvinish troublemaker and Ronald Boussom as a stammering idiot. Also very effective are John Ellington as Napierala's fun-loving buddy and Don Tuche as a moody loner, an outcast among outcasts.

Napierala, making his debut with SCR, is one of those superb actors who may convince you he is indeed a construction worker brought in off the swing shift to lend atmosphere to the production. Boussom, a master of characterization, delivers yet another in a long line of bravura performances as the pitiable helper and grinning butt of his fellow workers' pranks.

Murcott, another new face, is splendid as the tough employer with a tender heart, balancing these aspects of his character delicately. Another well-constructed performance is King's senile grandfather, for whom progress and modernization are arch-villians to the true artisan.

THE ACTUAL building and unbuilding process, completed from first step to last on stage, is a staggering accomplishment, and its smooth transition is a credit to Benson's directorial acumen. Yet it never upstages the play itself or the individual performances.

"THE CONTRACTOR"
A play by David Storey, directed by Martin Benson, setting by Cliff Faulkner, costumes by Dwight Richard Odle, lighting by Sue Tuohy, technical director Lee Catlin, presented Tuesdays through Sundays at 8 p.m. with Saturday and Sunday matinees at 2:30 through Feb. 4 by South Coast Repertory, 655 Town Center Drive, Costa Mesa. Reservations 957-4033.

Bee Gees Eye Grammies

Picked in Six Categories After Oscar Snub

BEVERLY HILLS (AP) — The Bee Gees, whose musical contribution to the blockbuster film "Saturday Night Fever" was never acknowledged by the motion picture industry, were named in six categories Monday as the 21st annual Grammy Awards nominees were announced by the National Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences.

The Bee Gees weren't nominated in any of the music categories at last year's Oscars.

HOWEVER, THEIR "SATURDAY Night Fever" soundtrack was nominated today for top album of the year and their single "Stayin' Alive" from that album was included in the record of the year and song of the year categories. The Bee Gees were also listed in nominations for best pop vocal performance by a group, best arrangement for voices and best producer of the year.

Pop trumpet artist Chuck Mangione and Canadian songstress Anne Murray were each nominated in four categories. Mangione's "Feels So Good" was nominated for record of the year, his album "Children of Sanchez" was included in the best pop instrumental category and for best album package and his "Consuelo's Love Theme," was nominated for best instrumental composition.

Miss Murray's "You Needed Me" was nominated for record of the year, song of the year and best female pop vocal performance. Another single, "Walk Right Back" was nominated for best country vocal performance by a female.

OTHER RECORD OF the year nominees included "Baker Street" by Gerry Rafferty and "Just the Way You Are" by Billy Joel. Other album of the year nominees are "Even Now" by Barry Manilow.

"Grease" by John Travolta and Olivia Newton-John and others, "Running on Empty" by Jackson Browne, and "Some Girls" by the Rolling Stones.

Joel's "Just the Way You Are," "Three Times A Lady," by Lionel Richie of the Commodores and "You Don't Bring Me Flowers" by Neil Diamond, Alan Bergman and Marilyn Bergman rounded out the song of the year nominees.

THOSE NOMINATED FOR best new artist of the year ending Sept. 30, 1978, were the Cars, Elvis Costello, Chris Rea, A Taste of Honey, and Toto.

Altogether there were 301 nominations in 52 categories. The winners will be announced Feb. 15 with about a dozen Grammies presented in person during a live telecast on CBS.

Sexual Abuse

'We think of the dirty old derelict on the corner and that's it. We never think it can happen in our home,' said family therapist Fredrick Capaldi at a recent seminar on sexual abuse of children.

By CHERYL ROMO
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

The typical sexual abuser of children is not the "dirty old derelict" on the street corner who offers candy and tries to entice youngsters into his car.

He is, surprisingly, most apt to be a professional man between the ages of 35 and 50 with a college degree. He has probably held his job for at least 10 years and is earning upwards of $35,000 per year.

The man owns his own home, is active in church and civic affairs, has a wife and three children, is self-centered and usually is considered a "strict disciplinarian."

This person, according to statistics available through the Orange County Child Abuse Registry, begins sexually abusing his own daughters when they are between the ages of 8 and 14 (the youngest recorded is an 18-month-old child).

That was the consensus presented by licensed professionals specializing in the field of child abuse and neglect, education and family therapy, during a day-long seminar held Saturday at Golden West College.

MORE THAN 450 persons heard guest speakers Fredrick Capaldi, M.S., family therapist at Newport Psychology Center in Tustin; Paul Wood, M.D., a psychiatrist with the Orange County Mental Health Department; Ellen Davis, R.N., Ph.D., associate clinical professor in the Department of Psychiatry at UCI and the Orange County Mental Health Department; and Muriel Silvertooth, R.N., P.N.P., a health specialist with the Garden Grove Unified School District.

During the first session, Capaldi said at least 75 percent of all reported sexual abuse occurs in the home. In addition to natural fathers, the abusers include grandfathers, stepfathers, mothers' boyfriends and other close friends of the family.

One percent are mothers abusing their own sons.

"Only in the past 17 years or so have we recognized this was a problem," said Capaldi. "We think of the dirty old derelict on the corner and that's it. We never think it can happen in our home."

The effect on the children is devastating, he said. The youngsters feel confusion instead of anger toward the offending parent — and even toward the other parent for not doing something to keep the abuse from happening in the first place.

"You can see the battered child because he comes in with black eyes or bruises or whatever," he said. "But you can't see the sexually abused child."

This child, said Capaldi, feels a damaged sense of self-worth leading to depression and often the abuse of drugs and alcohol. The child may also turn to prostitution or run away from home.

In addition, the child often does poorly in school and is withdrawn. "Kids don't find out what incest is until they grow up and (in the meantime) they don't relate to other kids because they are on a different level," he said.

IN ANOTHER SESSION, Dr. Paul Wood said recent studies indicate every fourth woman has experienced some form of sexual abuse as a child; one survey concluded 26 percent of all women have had a sexual experience with an adult prior to the age of 13.

The reason, he explained, is because people who live in close proximity have a much greater chance of sexual contact, and if the parent is immature and unsure of his role, the instances of abuse are increased.

"Most sexual abuse of children is at home with people you love; 100 percent of the responsibility for defining limits is the adult's responsibility.

"If you don't set the limits," he warned, "the children will pass it on to the next generation. We do to our kids what was done to us."

This was the theme carried throughout the seminar — that children who are abused or come from homes where sexual abuse was practiced will become abusers. Women, in this case, will look the other way when the abuse occurs to their own children.

The two most common characteristics of the child sexual abuser are a "lack of impulse control" (although the men may be considered "high achievers" and appear to have good con-

Help For the Parent Who Batters Her Child

Most professionals agree that the majority of child abusers were abused as children and repeat the only pattern they know.

Though most child sexual abusers are male, many physical abusers are female. A county-funded program called Volunteers in Child Assistance (VICA) is aimed at assisting potential child abusers by sending volunteers into the home to counsel and relieve the burden of the parent.

Currently there are 33 volunteers in the program, which is under the direction of the Department of Social Services. Volunteers, after being referred by a county social worker, are sent into a home to help ease the burden of a parent by forming a personal bond — perhaps driving her to the doctor or the market, or finding her a sitter or acting in that capacity.

By taking a little of the load off the potential abuser, "the child will have a much better chance of survival," said Volunteer Program Supervisor Sharon Esterley.

The parent who physically abuses and batters the child usually loves the child but has unrealistic expectations of what the child is capable of, Ms. Esterley explained.

When the child fails to live up to such expectations, the parent can't cope and lashes out.

Often a VICA volunteer viewing a crisis situation will take the child out of the home, with the parent's permission, for a "cooling off" period.

If the youngster has been abused, or is suspected of having been abused, law enforcement and social service personnel will be contacted.

Because of budget cutbacks, there is a need for additional volunteers — particularly for persons who are bi-lingual and persons residing in West Orange County — for the VICA Program.

For information about the VICA Program, contact the Department of Social Services at 834-4703.

George Plimpton will try anything once, and now he's into backgammon.

George Plimpton

Backgammon is 'a good balance between luck and skill,' says George Plimpton, who has added the game to his repertoire.

By JUDITH OLSON
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

George Plimpton, the best-selling author who's willing to try almost anything once, is now into backgammon.

Since it was a backgammon promotion, Plimpton freely shared his knowledge of the game and some surprising things emerged from the novice. First, you can still eventually win the game even though some of your men are left in your opponent's inner board. Though things look bleak, it can be done with the right rolls of dice.

Second, the game is never over until the end. Plimpton, behind several times by what looked like impossible circumstances, managed to pull out a win.

HE PLAYED alternate men and women with a large magnetic board and offered help to his opponents as the games progressed.

Between matches Plimpton talked about the game. "It's an ancient game, 3,000 years old. It's a good balance between luck and skill. It's a war game.

A crowd watched all afternoon, often coaching Plimpton's opponents. "Someone told trol in other areas) and a "lack of definition of role," said Dr. Wood.

"The most destructive part about sexual abuse of children doesn't have to do with sex," he said. "It has to do with the betrayal of roles in the family."

He warned that later on the child will view the incest relationship as a model "for all loving relationships from then on."

Dr. Wood feels private counseling of family members, without the leverage of legal sanction, won't stop the abuse.

"Incest once established becomes a compulsion and the child feels her only worth is sexual attraction. . . It's a lot more prevalent than we begin to realize and a lot more common."

Men in such cases, said the professionals, elevate their daughters into an adult girlfriend/wife role and, ironically, once the abuse is brought into the open the mother of the child will often refuse to believe what has happened or will accuse the girl of lying.

"IT DOESN'T WORK to be humane with these men," said Dr. Wood, indicating there is a 90 percent chance of successful rehabilitation of the child and the rest of the family if the law intervenes.

In another session, Frances Latimore said the sexual abuse of children is a cultural disorder and in eight years of practice she has never come across an abused child who didn't say, "I told my mama but she didn't hear me."

Common signs to look for in abused children are delinquent behavior, running away from home, firesetting, abusive behavior to others, withdrawal, low self-esteem, chronic lying and either obesity or undernourishment.

Dr. Ellen Davis reported the Orange County Child Abuse Registry indicates there are at least 38 sexual child abuse cases reported each month - and the rate is rising. Most youngsters are abused orally and the man may be under the influence of alcohol.

She said the "myth of the dirty old man is a nice one but 87 percent of the children know their abuser." The child usually tells a counselor, school nurse or teacher at school who in turn is mandated to report it to officials.

"When the child blows the whistle," she said, "the wrath of society comes down. In our society the biggest taboo is incest."

NO ONE THERAPIST can handle the problem of sexual abuse in a family, she said. She recommends the child be taken out of the home for a period of time and that each of the parents see their own therapists "until Mom can tell Daughter, 'I know you told the truth.' And a low percentage of mothers can do that. . .

"It is so prevalent and we pretend it doesn't exist."

Personnel in the school system have to know what to look for and be alert to possible cases of abuse, said Muriel Silvertooth in a talk entitled "Abused Children, the Schools and Nurses."

Most often, she said, the abuser has told the child, "This is our secret," and the youngster has been physically threatened or has a false sense of keeping the family together - or doesn't want to hurt her mother.

Therefore, school personnel must be alert to "the clues these kids give them" which may include a sudden drop in grades, frequent absences, shyness, nervousness, abusive behavior and difficulty going to the bathroom, she said.

She said there are approximately 200,000 to 300,000 nationally reported cases of child sexual abuse each year and, "It can get to be a big circle where no one does anything about it."

Dr. Paul Wood, left, and Fredrick Capaldi were among speakers at sexual abuse seminar.

Weight Lifted Off Shoulders

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: It happens to almost everyone. A person we love- a relative or dear friend, a casual acquaintance or someone at work - commits suicide. We are shocked. Often we feel guilty, wondering if perhaps we might have done something to prevent the tragedy. Maybe if we had reached out - given just a little more time or affection, we might have saved a life.

I am going through a traumatic period because of such an incident. A man I worked with, and considered a close friend, took his life two weeks ago. His sudden and unexplained death made a terrific impact on me. I somehow felt personally responsible for not "saving" him.

Then someone sent me a poem in the mail that brought great comfort. It was written by Edwin Arlington Robinson and points out how utterly impossible it is to know what goes on in someone else's life.

When I read that poem it was as if a 10-ton weight had been lifted from my shoulders. May I share it with you as a token of my appreciation for the countless times you have helped me feel better about myself? - J.H.E. OF CHICAGO

Whenever Richard Cory went downtown,
We people on the pavement looked at him.
He was a gentleman from soul to crown,
Clean favored and imperially slim.
And he always was quietly arrayed.
And he was human when he talked;
But still he fluttered pulses when he said,
"Good morning," and he glistened when he walked.
And he was rich yes, richer than a king.
And admirably schooled in every grace;
In fact we thought he had everything,
To make us wish that we were in his place.
We worked and waited for the light,
And went without meat, and cursed the lack of bread
And Richard Cory, one calm summer night,
Went home and put a bullet through his head.

DEAR J.H.E.: I remember that poem from my high-school days. It made a tremendous impact on me then, and I thank you for bringing it back into my life — and into the lives of others.

Guitar Study Popular

CHICAGO (AP) — The guitar has joined the band and the chorus as a cornerstone of school music programming, and is proving to be an effective means of reaching students who do not normally participate in music.

According to a recent survey co-sponsored by the Guitar and Accessory Manufacturers Association and the American String Teachers Association, an estimated 25 percent of American junior and senior high schools now offer in-class guitar as part of the regular music curriculum. And 90 percent of these programs have been established since 1971.

"IN LARGE PART, the rapid growth of guitar in school music programming during this decade is a direct result of student interest in the instrument," said GAMA president Richard Della Bernarda.

"During the 1960s, the dominance of the guitar in popular music created a dramatic surge of interest in the instrument among young people.

"In-class guitar was first offered as a means to tap that interest, and has become a popular alternative to band and chorus in many schools."

According to the survey, 69 percent of the schools with guitar reported that the programs in their schools attract primarily students who would otherwise graduate with no formal music training.

"WHEN WE decided to add in-class guitar in 1969," said Duane Burr, band director at an Arizona junior high school, "I was warned, 'Do it, and your band program will be dead.' Today, if we had to make a cutback in any curriculum area, it wouldn't be in guitar. Guitar helps the whole music program, and has resulted in a 10 percent increase in band enrollment in area high schools."

One Appliance Does It All

Erma Bombeck

One thing about Americans. They turn every adversity into an asset.

Take the energy crisis. Please.

When we were told to cut back on the use of big appliances for small baking and heating jobs, there were no less than 500 small appliances that flooded the market.

There's a deep fat fryer for two shrimp. A grill for one hamburger. A Teflon top for one egg. There's a mini-oven for baking two biscuits at a time. An excuse-the-expression two-holer to bake two doughnuts.

There are crocks to accommodate an entire meal, a skillet for cooking one-dish main meals, and Woks if you're feeling Oriental.

There are popcorn poppers, waffle grills and miniature percolators for one cup of coffee. There are hot beverage makers, bean pots, chili pots and electric units to keep your pots hot after you've unplugged them.

There are electric socks, blankets, handwarmers and here's a must . . . a unit that will heat your golf balls to insure you a more satisfying "hit" in cold weather. Where you plug in the unit is your challenge.

There are electric clocks that will not only awaken you by radio, but will project the time on the ceiling of any darkened room in large digital numerals.

There's an electric gun that looks like a six-shooter that fires out hors d'oeuvres, cookies and canapes. There are electric salad spinners to rid your greens of moisture, an electric knife, and an electric sharpener to sharpen your electric knife.

When you cut down on your energy by bringing in a pizza, there's an electric heating element to heat up your pizza if it has turned cold.

Do you have to spend time away from your appliances? No. There's a new unit for you that plugs into the cigarette lighter of your car, camper, van, or boat. You can make stews in it, bake cookies, toast sandwiches, or heat soups.

And don't forget the electric plant turner to assure your favorite blossoms that they will always be turned toward the light.

Americans have rallied so well to the challenge of having to cut back that I am reluctant to tell them about my new discovery of an appliance that cooks several meals at a time, heats up the kitchen, keeps food warm, cooks it, bakes it, has a see-through glass, cleans itself, heats golf balls and tells time.

I call it . . . an oven.

...George Plimpton

me it was a boring game," one spectator marveled.

WHY DOES PLIMPTON the writer go to such lengths - often humiliating himself - to learn about new topics, such as pro football, backgammon, hockey and orchestras?

"It's a device that's been used by other writers," he said after the matches.

Plimpton's experiences are the basis for his best-selling books such as "Out of My League," "Paper Lion" and "Shadow Box."

He has, to date, played a tennis match with Pancho Gonzalez, (he won the first two points), opposed Oswald Jacoby in bridge, boxed three rounds with Archie Moore, played percussion with the New York Philharmonic and pitched post-season in an all-star game in Yankee Stadium.

He also attended the Detroit Lions summer camp as a third-string quarterback, was a hockey goalie and performed as a trapeze artist with the Clyde Beatty-Cole Brothers Circus for six months.

Plimpton, who was editor of the "Harvard Lampoon" when he was an undergraduate, also founded "The Paris Review" during an Easter vacation visit to Paris when he was attending Cambridge.

HE LIMITS HIS present involvements in new fields to the sports and art worlds because there is a confrontation in these two areas that he considers essential.

"In both there are vast audiences. It's very theatrical."

Plimpton says it's the people he enjoys most when he is a football player or hockey goalie for a time.

"The most fun is listening to the stories they tell you. They tell you things they might not otherwise, if you were just interviewing on a one-to-one basis," he said.

Plimpton doesn't go into his ventures with the idea of winning, though he concedes it would be nice occasionally.

His foray into backgammon has been no exception. He recently played a game with Paul Magriel, the former math professor and highly competent player who is known as "X-22 the computer."

Magriel played blindfolded but Plimpton still lost. He said after the defeat, "This was the most frigtening of all. There seemed to be an excuse for not being a better athlete, but none for not being able to think better."

The Board of Directors of the Moulton-Niguel Water District of Orange County, California, hereinafter in some instances referred to as "District," do hereby invite sealed bids for the following described public work: The Construction of Rancho Reservoir Pumping Station and Transmission Main, Contract No. 1-20 together with all appurtenant work thereto, as shown in detail and described in the plans, profiles, drawings, sections, and specifications on file in the office of Boyle Engineering Corporation, 1501 Quail Street, Newport Beach, California, which documents are by this reference incorporated herein. Said plans and specifications may be purchased at the office of Boyle Engineering Corporation for $10.00 per set. Check must be made payable to the Moulton-Niguel Water District.

Pursuant to the Labor Code of the State of California, the Moulton-Niguel Water District has ascertained the prevailing rate of per diem wages of the locality in which this work is to be performed to be as detailed in the Southern California Master Labor Agreement filed in the office of the Associated General Contractors of America, Southern California Chapter.

Copies of the general prevailing rate of per diem wages as determined by the District are on file at its principal place of business, to wit 27500 La Paz Road, Laguna Niguel, California. As required by Section 1773 of the Labor Code, the Contractor to whom the contract herefor is awarded shall post a copy thereof at each jobsite.

It shall be mandatory upon any Contractor to whom a contract is awarded and upon any subcontractor under him to pay not less than the said specified rates to all laborers, workmen, and mechanics employed by them in the execution of the contract. The penalty for failure to comply herewith is as specified in Section 1775 of the Labor Code.

The Contractor shall pay travel and subsistence payments to each workman needed to execute the work, as such travel and subsistence payments are defined in the applicable collective bargaining agreements filed with the Department of Industrial Relations in accordance with Section 1773.8 of the Labor Code.

Attention is directed to the provisions in Sections 1777.5 and 1777.6 of the Labor Code concerning the employment of apprentices by the Contractor or any subcontractor under him.

Section 1777.5, as amended, requires the Contractor or subcontractor employing tradesmen in any apprenticeable occupation to apply to the joint apprenticeship committee nearest the site of the public works project and which administers the apprenticeship program in that trade for a certificate of approval. The certificate will also fix the ratio of apprentices to journeymen that will be used in the performance of the contract. The ratio of apprentices to journeymen in such cases shall not be less than one to five except:

A. When unemployment in the area of coverage by the joint apprenticeship committee has exceeded an average of 15% in the 90 days prior to the request for certificate, or

B. When the number of apprentices in training in the area exceeds a ratio of one to five, or

C. When the trade can show that it is replacing at least 1/30 of its membership through apprenticeship training on an annual basis statewide or locally, or

D. When the Contractor provides evidence that he employs registered apprentices on all of his contracts on an annual average of not less than one apprentice to eight journeymen.

The Contractor is required to make contributions to funds established for the administration of apprenticeship programs if he employs registered apprentices or journeymen in any apprenticeable trade on such contracts and if other Contractors on the public works site are making such contributions.

The Contractor and any subcontractor under him shall comply with the requirements of Section 1777.5 and 1777.6 in the employment of apprentices.

Information relative to apprenticeship standards, wage schedules, and other requirements may be obtained from the Director of Industrial Relations, ex officio the Administrator of Apprenticeship, San Francisco, California, or from the Division of Apprenticeship Standards and its branch offices.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the Moulton-Niguel Water District will receive sealed bids at the office of Boyle Engineering Corporation, 1501 Quail Street, Newport Beach, California up to the hour of 2 p.m. on January 12, 1979, at which time and place they will be publicly opened and read. Said sealed bids shall be for the doing of the public work hereinbefore described and ordered in the said resolution.

Each bid or proposal shall be made out and submitted on a form to be obtained at the office of Boyle Engineering Corporation, 1501 Quail Street, Newport Beach, California. Each bid or proposal must be accompanied by a cashier's check or check certified by a responsible bank or a bidder's bond for an amount not less than 10% of the amount of the bid or of the total amount for which they will accept a contract and made payable to the order or in the favor of the Moulton-Niguel Water District. Each such bid or proposal shall be sealed and filed at the office of the District at or before the time in this notice provided.

The above mentioned check or bond shall be given as guarantee that the bidder will enter into a contract if awarded the work and will be claimed as liquidated damages if the successful bidder refuses to enter into the contract.

The successful bidder will be required to furnish a payment bond in an amount equal to 100% of the contract price and a faithful performance bond in an amount equal to 100% of the contract price, said bonds to be secured from a surety company satisfactory to the Moulton-Niguel Water District.

All terms and conditions contained in the information for bidders, attached to and a part of the bid form shall govern as though fully described herein and shall also become a part of the contract.

The moulton-Niguel Water District reserves the right to reject any and all bids or portions of any and all bids, to award a contract for less than all of the items for which such bids are invited or to waive any informality in a bid not affected by law.

Huntington Stalled on Council Seat

By ROBERT BARKER
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Efforts by the Huntington Beach City Council to appoint a seventh member to its group ended in a 3 to 3 deadlock Monday night.

After seven ballots and a great deal of electioneering, the council couldn't decide between Ruth Finley and Ralph Bauer.

Mrs. Finley, chairman of the Planning Commission, was backed by Richard Siebert, Ruth Bailey and Bob Mandic.

Mayor Ron Pattinson, Don MacAllister and John Thomas were just as solidly behind Bauer, a former president of the Huntington Beach Union High School board who is a chemical engineer with the Union Chemical Company.

Both Mrs. Finley and Bauer said today they would be pleased to serve out the remaining term of Ron Shenkman who resigned from the council Dec. 18. Shenkman's term expires in April of 1980.

Pattinson said the council will try to break the deadlock again Saturday when city leaders hold an all-day retreat at city hall.

Council members indicated they would start the election process over from scratch and put more names into the hopper.

Mrs. Finley and Bauer emerged Monday night as the finalists over seven other candidates that included Al Coen, Ted Bartlett, Mark Porter, Frank Hoffman, Prim Shea, Ron Brindle and John O'Connor.

Both sides campaigned persistently but politely for their favorites.

Mrs. Bailey said voters in the last election indicated they wanted a change and that Mrs. Finley would fit the bill because of her knowledge and willingness to devote time to the task.

MacAllister countered that Bauer also is a "new face" but has a great deal of experience on various organizations and with the school board.

Mrs. Bailey offered still another argument for her candidate. She facetiously said she wanted Mrs. Finley appointed "so that there would be someone to go to the restroom with."

She explained later she believes her male colleagues might be caucusing during restroom breaks "and I have no way of knowing what is happening."

The council has until Feb. 16 to make an appointment. If there is no decision by then, a special election will be scheduled.

Showdown Scheduled?

Striking Teachers Plan Rally Tonight

Aided by 20 professional strike workers and teachers from throughout Orange County, Huntington Beach-area high school teachers have called for a mass rally tonight prior to what they claim will be a showdown before the school board.

School board members have scheduled a 7 o'clock public meeting in the Huntington Beach High School auditorium, 1905 Main St.

Issues surrounding the current strike by nearly half of the district's 867 teachers are not scheduled to be discussed tonight.

But teachers say they have other plans.

"I don't know if teachers are going to allow the board not to discuss the strike," said spokesman Bill Bianchi, executive director of West Orange County United Teachers.

"It could get a little hostile," Bianchi said.

An estimated 1,000 teachers and their supporters plan to meet at 6 p.m. at Lake Park in downtown Huntington Beach.

"I've never stepped back from a fight yet," said School Board President Zita Wessa.

Mrs. Wessa said she expects trustees to stand firm on their refusal to grant pay and binding arbitration demands issued by teacher leaders.

Teachers have been working without a contract since July 1. Nine months of collective bargaining have not brought a contract for the district's teachers.

"This is not just a fight for Huntington Beach Union High School District teachers—it's a fight for all the teachers in the state," said Ira Toibin, president of the 750-member District Educators Association, the group spearheading the strike.

CTA officials have hired professional strike coordinator Mike Ford to lead the west Orange County teachers on the picket line. Ford refused to be interviewed Monday.

Striking west county teachers say they have received backing in their efforts from teacher's associations in Newport Beach, Costa Mesa, Irvine, Westminster, San Juan Capistrano, Saddleback Valley, Fountain Valley, Brea and Anaheim.

No End In Teachers Strike Seen

By RAYMOND ESTRADA JR.
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

The Huntington Beach Union High School District teacher strike entered its fifth day today with no end in sight to the current contract dispute.

District officials reported 507 teachers either on strike or ill Monday as substitute teachers manned classes where 28 percent of the school district's 20,900 students were absent.

Teacher and district negotiators are awaiting word from a state-appointed mediator on possible renewal of contract talks that broke off three weeks ago.

Teacher leaders say they are still demanding a five percent pay boost for the 1978-79 school year, a similar salary raise for 1979-80 if the state rules it is legal and binding arbitration in grievances.

But school board members are refusing to budge on their position that the state-imposed salary freeze must be lifted before a five percent raise is granted.

Trustees say they are staunchly opposed to binding arbitration since it might erode local control of schools.

No major strike violence has been reported but district officials have decided to bus some

Snow Fun in Huntington

Mrs. Jan Stephenson is the target for snowballs hurled by four and five-year-olds at the South Huntington Beach Community Nursery School. Officials at the cooperative preschool brought in a half-ton of snow Monday so the youngsters, many of whom had never played in the white stuff, could discover for themselves what it is. According to Mrs. Stephenson, the youngsters quickly learned what snow is good for.

Family Newspaper Sold in Huntington

The Huntington Beach News, a weekly newspaper that has been published by the Farquhar family for more than half a century, has been sold, Publisher George Farquhar has announced.

Farquhar, the 65-year-old son of James Farquhar who bought the paper in 1927, said the local publication has been purchased by the American Publishing Company of Tujunga.

Farquhar, who has been the paper's managing editor since 1937, says he will continue in that role for at least two more years to help the new owners get acquainted with the local scene.

He says he has been considering selling out for more than five years.

"But I've been stalling," he said. "I have enjoyed it too much. It's the only thing I have ever done and it is a family tradition."

Farquhar says he was pushed over the edge by the Huntington Beach City Council when it decided to shift its legal advertising from the Huntington Beach News to the Huntington Beach Independent which is published in Long Beach.

"I've had it when our own leaders can't support their local newspaper. That's when I called my broker to make the deal."

Farquhar says he holds no bitterness.

But he declares that he will refuse to accept a commendation that the city is preparing for the publishing of legal advertising over the years.

"I won't accept it. I'm not a hypocrite and I'm not a politician either."

Farquhar says he broke into the newspaper game at 13 when his father asked him if he wanted to be the obituary editor.

'I said, 'thanks a lot, but what is it'?"

Farquhar says he accepted the job and has always been glad that he did.

"Writing up people's deaths taught me a lot—how to get names, ages, survivors and services. I had to get the information and I had to get it right."

He recalls that his busiest times as obituary editor came after the March 10, 1933, earthquake.

"Nobody was killed in the earthquake but they didn't want to go back to their beds.

"They stayed in their cars or at vacant lots and many of the older residents died of exposure. I stayed busy until April."

Farquhar said the sale included the entire business, including equipment and the building at 206-208 Main St.

He has been publisher and co-owner of the business along with his stepbrother Tom Wyllie and stepsister Florence Wyllie.

Jeffrey L. Horwith, the new general manager of the newspaper, said Monday there will be some changes but wouldn't elaborate "because things are still in the planning stage."

He declined to comment on terms of the purchase.

Horwith said the American Publishing Company owns 16 other weekly newspapers, all in Los Angeles County.

Farquhar said the circulation of the paper is listed at 5,500 "but we lie a lot."

Blind Man Guilty in Shooting

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A blind Huntington Beach man was convicted Monday of charges stemming from the shooting of a U.S Immigration Service official last summer.

Robert Corbett, 42, was ordered to return Jan. 29 for sentencing after he was found guilty of assault with intent to commit murder and assault with a deadly weapon. The verdict, which was reached and sealed by the nine-man, three-woman jury on Friday, was opened Monday in the presence of Superior Court Judge Frances Rothschild.

Corbett, of 19832 Providence Lane, remained in custody in lieu of $100,000 bail.

Corbett was accused of emptying a .22-caliber revolver at acting Immigration and Naturalization Service Director Omer Sewell last July 14.

Fog Coming

End to Rain Due Today?

Today's rain, the tail end of a tardy storm, was expected to dissipate this afternoon, making way for pockets of dense fog Wednesday morning along the coast, a National Weather Service spokesman said.

More than a 10th of an inch of rain was recorded in most parts of Orange County today by 8 a.m., z th the only mador problem a San Diego Freeway traffic snarl. No additional slippages were reported in the landslide areas of southern coastal Orange County.

California Highway Patrol officers said a semi-truck skidded near Westminster Avenue when the driver braked too quickly on wet pavement, jacknifing the rig and blocking slow-lane traffic.

Commuters to the Los Angeles area were slowed to a near halt for nearly two hours, officials said.

Laguna Beach police were keeping a close watch on Bluebird Canyon this morning where a field of plastic covered a gaping hole in Oriole Drive after Friday's mud slide.

Geologists expect no further slippage from today's storm but would not predict the result of another Pacific storm expected Thursday.

Just to the south, officials in San Clemente said no additional slippage was noticed at Shorecliffs Mobile Country Club where a 900-foot-long fissure opened last month, threatening a half-dozen mobile homes.

"There's a chance of more light rain from a Pacific storm by Thursday," a spokesman said, "but then again, it may take longer to get here."

Today's storm, predicted to arrive Monday, dropped .12 of an inch in the Costa Mesa and Newport Beach area by 8 a.m. The season's total reached 9.06 since July 1, compared to 7.48 inches by the same date last year.

Huntington Beach measured .12 of an inch, Laguna Niguel reached only .03 of an inch and Santa Ana measured .11 of an inch.

Santa Ana's rainfall for the season reached 7.46 inches, compared to seven inches on this date last season. The average for the rainy season by this date is recorded as 4.72 for a normal year, an Orange County Flood Control District spokesman said.

Inconveniences caused by today's rain could be overshadowed by the good it is doing county agriculture, a county spokesman said this morning.

Lettuce, cabbage, broccoli, strawberries, citrus and avocados are benefitting, said a spokesman for the Orange County Agriculture Commissioner's office.

Harvesting of cauliflower and celery will be delayed somewhat, though, he said, because of muddy fields.

Jetliner, Cessna in Near Miss

SAN DIEGO (AP) — "My heart was in my stomach," says an airline pilot after his 727 jetliner narrowly missed colliding with a single-engine Cessna over San Diego.

Last September, a Cessna and a commercial jetliner collided as they were approaching Lindbergh Field, killing 144 people in the worst air disaster in U.S. history.

A spokesman for Continental Airlines said the Boeing 727 was on final landing approach Monday when its pilot saw the small plane coming straight at it.

In the final seconds, the jetliner turned, missing the Cessna by less than 500 feet, the company spokesman said.

Controllers at Lindbergh Field said the Cessna was flying through the busy airspace without radio contact with the Lindbergh tower or with the nearby radar air traffic control facility at Miramar Naval Air Station.

The Continental jet was landing from Denver. After the flight, the crew filed a near-miss report before leaving.

Although the pilot wasn't identified, he was quoted as saying his evasive action was all that prevented a collision over San Diego.

Lindbergh controllers have complained for years about small planes flying through the airspace used by airliners

Penny Ante Millionaire

UTICA, N.Y. (AP) — Edwin Rommel, a 50-year-old foreman, deposited one million pennies at the bank, the result of 20 years of collecting. Afterward, Rommel said, "I don't want to see another penny."

The 20,000 rolls of pennies, which had been in eight metal footlockers at Rommel's home, filled up 200 $50 bags and weighed an estimated 3½ tons.

"I don't know why I started saving them," Rommel said Monday. "I didn't start out saving. I got up to about 13 or 14 dollars and I said I'll shoot for a new car, and when I had enough for a car, I said, 'Oh, hell, I'll shoot for a million'."

New Brown Budget Revealed

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Gov. Edmund Brown Jr., will propose a $19.8 billion budget that eliminates 5,140 state jobs and abolishes 15 licensing boards, the Sacramento Union reported today.

The newspaper also detailed a $1.2 billion state income tax cut Brown mentioned in his inaugural address Monday, quoting figures it said came from an advance copy of the budget.

The Democratic governor's staff refused comment until the budget is submitted to the state Legislature on Wednesday.

The account quotes Brown as saying in an introduction to the budget that the spending plan is a blueprint for "leaner government" and is "substantially below all proposed constitutional spending limits. But it keeps faith with the vision and conscience of California" by building for the future in the areas of arts, affirmative action, urban parks, apprenticeship training, enforcement of labor laws and housing, it said.

Among budget highlights in the preview of the budget:

—State personal income tax credits would be increased to $125 for individuals and $250 for couples, for a total savings to taxpayers of $915 million on 1979 taxes. Those tax credits would be received on returns filed in early 1980.

The permanent level of the credits, which taxpayers deduct from their total tax bills before sending in checks or filing for refunds, is $27 for individuals and $54 for couples. But the credits on 1978 returns were increased to $100 and $200 in a one-time relief provision of a tax cut signed into law by Brown last year.

ANTHONY. .

Supervisor Ralph Clark was elected vice chairman. Laurence Schmit, who lost his seat to Harriett Wieder, was vice chairman in 1978.

Anthony, who has been a member of the board for two years, assumes his new post under a legal cloud.

On July 1, 1977, Anthony and a fellow Supervisor Ralph Diedrich were indicted by the Orange County Grand Jury on allegations of campaign law violations.

An indictment is a formal charge made against a person by a grand jury. It does not establish guilt or innocence.

Last March Orange County Superior Court Judge Philip Schwab dismissed all but one count in the indictments on the grounds that only eight members of the grand jury heard all the testimony in the case.

In a brief speech he said the county's most important problems will be in providing affordable housing, paying for indigent health care, solving problems at the airport and continuing county business under "the new fiscal rules we were given after Proposition 13."

Anthony also said 1979 will be year in which he works for "a fair return of the money Orange Countians send to the state this year."

Fee Hikes OK'd for Beach Use

The cost of going to the beach in Huntington Beach is going up after fees at city parking and camping facilities were increased recently.

New fees include:

—Day use at the parking facility from $1.50 to $2. The increase will be in effect two weeks before Easter vacation and until Sept. 30. The fees return to $1.50 Oct. 1 for the winter.

—Annual parking passes for Huntington Beach residents go from $10 to $15 per year. The levy goes from $20 to $25 for non-residents.

—Bus fees climb from $5 to $7 per day.

—Camper fees go from $3 to $4 per day for residents. For out-of-town residents, the fees go from $4 to $5 per day. Those using an automobile and trailer for camping will pay $1 extra.

The annual parking pass for senior citizens aged 62 or over remains at $10.

Parking meter fees along Pacific Coast Highway will remain at 25 cents per hour.

Vince Moorhouse, director of Harbors and Beaches, said the increases are necessary to offset costs.

He said about $160,000 in additional money will be raised by the new increases.

Teachers Face Cut In Wages

Officials in the Westminster School (elementary) District say from now on teachers who claim to be ill will have to prove it or they may have their pay docked.

This emergency procedure was instituted Monday because of a strike threat by teachers over wages, fringe benefits, the length of the teaching day and other issues.

District spokeswoman Barbara Winars said the district took the action after what she termed a wildcat strike took place at Johnson Intermediate School Monday.

She claimed that 21 of the school's 30 teachers were absent and that 20 substitute teachers were hired at $80 per day.

The district doesn't normally require proof of illness until after five days of absenteeism.

Miss Winars said the district also took the tougher position after a letter from the Westminster Teachers Association was distributed to some campuses.

The letter said substitutes are prolonging the "strike" and accused them of being "scabs."

Bar Kaelter, assistant director of the West Orange County United teachers, said the letter was a mistake.

"We had them prepared in case of a strike and distributed them to faculty representatives," he said today.

"Somebody made a mistake and released some of them."

Both teacher attendance at all schools including Johnson intermediate and student enrollment were reported to be normal at the district's 20 campuses today.

Kaelter said pickets were active at most school sites in this morning's drizzle but that the strike, which has been authorized, is on a day-to-day basis.

Police patrols have watched substitute teachers board buses since last week when a rock was thrown at one of the vehicles. No one was hurt and no damage was reported.

Meanwhile, attorneys for the striking teachers are waiting for Citizens Legal Defense Alliance members to file legal papers for an anticipated court order aimed at halting the strike.

Bill Bianchi, spokesman for the district's 867 teachers, said teacher association officials have not officially received any legal notices concerning the strike.

Members of the Los Angeles-based citizens alliance say they plan to seek a temporary restraining order from Orange County Superior Court this afternoon to stop the walkout.

School officials said today teacher pickets marched in front of the district's seven campuses despite drizzling rain.

FORMER LOVERS WILL BE REUNITED IN COURT TODAY

Lee Marvin's 'Love Trial' Opens Today

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Eight years after they called it quits, Oscar-winning actor Lee Marvin and his former lover, Michelle Triola Marvin, met in court today for a landmark trial involving love, money and the changing morality of American couples.

Jury selection was to begin today in the suit filed by Miss Marvin, who legally changed her name while she lived with Marvin. She is suing for the same compensation a wife would get in a divorce — half the property accumulated during their six years together — or $1 million.

They were never married and Marvin is contesting the right to use his name.

Marvin and his attorneys were expected to argue that the mere fact that Marvin never married Miss Marvin shows he wanted to avoid the responsibilities and obligations of marriage.

Marvin has filed a countersuit asking $1 million from Miss Marvin for compensation for the companionship and other services he provided during their relationship.

"I was like a wife to Lee," she has said. ". . . I took a care of Lee like he was a baby chicken."

The case, which has already created legal precedents on appeal, is expected to have a national impact. Many others involved in non-marital relationships have filed similar suits alleging they are entitled to everything from pension rights to alimony.

"You could say it affects everyone who has a date," says Marvin Mitchelson, Miss Marvin's attorney, who has been involved in the case during seven years of litigation.

Mitchelson, who begins arguing pretrial motions today, seeks to prove to a jury that an oral, non-marital agreement is as binding as a marriage license when it comes to splitting assets acquired together.

"People are living together all over this country," says Mitchelson. "You have to deal with that."

In 1976, the California Supreme Court dealt with just that issue in a decision that upheld Mitchelson's contentions and set a precedent for division of property between unmarried cohabitants.

The court overruled two lower court decisions in the case and sent it back to Superior Court for retrial.

"During the past 15 years, there has been a substantial increase in the number of couples living together without marrying," said the court's opinion. "Such nonmarital relationships lead to legal controversy when one partner dies or the couple separates.

". . . We take this opportunity to resolve that controversy and to declare the principles which should govern distribution of property acquired in a nonmarital relationship."

The court then outlined a complex set of laws under which non-married couples could seek financial relief upon separation.

Since the decision, many suits have been filed under "Marvin vs. Marvin," including cases involving other celebrities — Nick Nolte, Alice Cooper, Rod Stewart and Britt Ecklund. None has come to trial.

Appropriately, the case that set the precedent will be the first to be decided by a jury.

Marvin, 54, and Miss Marvin, 46, met in 1964 during the filming of "Ship of Fools" in which they both had parts. Soon, they were living together — although Marvin was not divorced from his estranged wife until 1967.

Miss Marvin says she gradually gave up her career to concentrate on his and to "render full time services as a homemaker in return for his promise to support her."

Thugs Wound Four in Rome

ROME (AP) — Neo-Fascist terrorists raided a leftist radio station during a birth control program today and wounded four housewives in a shooting spree heard by dozens of listeners. The assailants also hurled a firebomb and a fifth woman suffered burns.

"Help! Help! They are killing all of us!" a terrorized woman's voice shrieked into the microphone of Radio Citta Futura — Future City Radio — a private radio station run by a left-wing extremist group.

Police said they received telephone calls from dozens of listeners reporting they heard the woman's voice drowned out by shots and an explosion.

Jury Waived in Suit on Lee Marvin

LOS ANGELES (AP) — In a surprise move, the attorney for Michele Triola Marvin announced today she would waive a jury in the trial of her landmark suit against actor Lee Marvin — a case involving love, money and the changing morality of American couples.

Attorney Marvin Mitchelson made the move after conferring in chambers with Superior Court Judge Arthur Marshall.

Attorneys for the Oscar-winning actor agreed the matter could best be judged by Marshall, a veteran family court judge considered a scholar in the field of domestic relations.

The change cleared the way for testimony to begin as early as Thursday in Miss Marvin's suit for $1 million. The former singer, who changed her name while she lived with the actor, seeks the same compensation a wife would get in a divorce — half the property accumulated during their six years together.

The judge ruled on one technical motion involving the separation of financial and fact questions in the trial, but the ruling made no significant difference.

Marshall said a last pretrial motion would be taken up Thursday morning. Then testimony is expected to start.

The white-haired Marvin and his former lover appeared in court, but did not speak to each other. He was accompanied by the wife he married when he left Miss Marvin eight years ago.

Miss Marvin has said she will tell all during the trial about her living arrangement with the actor.

Miss Marvin has said, "I was like a wife to Lee . . . I took care of Lee like he was a baby chicken."

Planes Come Close in San Diego

500 Feet Separates Aircraft

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A Continental 727 pilot is reported to have considered evasive action to avoid a single-engine Cessna which was said to have come within 500 feet of the jet as the jetliner approached Lindbergh for a landing.

But a Federal Aviation Administration official said today the incident involving the commercial jetliner and the small plane near Lindbergh Field is not being officially classified as a near-miss.

Jack Gregory, a Continental spokesman in Los Angeles, said no evasive action was taken by the unidentified pilot of flight 81 and no official complaint was filed about the incident.

Norm Bell Sterling, an FAA official here, said he talked with the Continental pilot during the ineident, which occurred about noon.

According to Sterling, the pilot said "in his opinion, the Cessna was too close; he told us 500 feet."

"We asked him if he wanted to file a mid-air report but he didn't," said Sterling. "Instead, he filed with the National Aeronautics and Space Administration a generalized complaint."

Sept. 25, a Pacific Southwest Airlines 727 jet approaching Lindbergh for a landing collided with a Cessna, killing 144 persons in the worst air disaster in U.S. history.

No final cause for that disaster has been announced by federal investigators, but the FAA has ordered stricter flight procedures at busy Lindbergh Field.

According to Gregory, "The tower advised everyone in the area about a single engine Cessna in the general area Monday. All our captain did was stay at his altitude a moment and check it on his radar. Our ground station said no evasive action was taken."

CHAD GREEN PLAYS OUTSIDE MASSACHUSETTS COURT
Best Way to Treat Boy's Leukemia Debated

Boy's Life Periled If Laetrile Out?

PLYMOUTH, Mass. (AP) — A Mexican doctor who used Laetrile to treat cancer patients says the life of 3-year-old Leukemia victim Chad Green could be endangered if his chemotherapy treatments are stopped.

"We cannot risk the life of the boy by withdrawing the chemotherapy," said Dr. Ernesto Contreras, who runs a clinic in Tijuana, Mexico.

He testified for Chad's parents, Diana and Gerald Green of Scituate, in their effort to win the right to decide how Chad's illness should be treated.

"I stated very clearly that chemotherapy should continue as the basic treatment with metabolic therapy, including the use of Laetrile, to improve the quality of the boy's life and, possibly, prolonging his remission," Contreras said in describing his testimony Monday before a closed court hearing. Judge Guy Volterra of Plymouth Superior Court is reviewing his April 18 order requiring the chemotherapy and making Chad a temporary ward of the state for purposes of treatment. During the treatment, he is still living with his parents.

The Greens are trying to regain legal custody of Chad in an effort to decide his treatment themselves.

The couple opposed chemotherapy for their son in earlier court fights and argued he should be treated only with Laetrile and a special diet. But now they indicate they might permit the chemotherapy to continue.

Laetrile is a trademark for a substance extracted from peach or apricot pits. Although advocates claim it can cure cancer, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration has banned it from interstate commerce; claiming there is no proof of its effectiveness or safety.

Trial Slated In Irvine Murder Case

An Irvine attorney accused of murdering his wife as she was moving out on him was ordered Monday to answer the charge in Superior Court on Jan. 18.

At a preliminary hearing at Harbor Municipal Court, Judge Calvin Schmidt decided there was evidence enough to warrant a trial in the case against Gary Wayne Patton, 34, of 14 Esplanade.

Patton has said he is innocent of murder.

His wife, Katherine Leigh Patton, 23, was shot three times in the head Nov. 18 as she was moving personal belongings from the couple's Rancho San Joaquin apartment.

Irvine police said her husband was still at the scene when they arrived. They had been alerted by a telephone call from a man they said identified himself as Patton and exclaimed, "I just murdered my wife."

Patton is free on $100,000 bail.

Tanker Blast, Fire Probed

BANTRY, Ireland (AP) — Gulf Oil investigators began investigating today into the explosions and fire that killed 50 people on the French tanker Betelgeuse.

Early theories centered on fumes in empty and partly empty oil compartments, a cause of several previous tanker disasters. But evidence on the blackened, half-sunken Betelgeuse was scanty.

Supervisors Elect Anthony Chairman

Anthony replaces Fifth District Supervisor Thomas Riley who has been the board's presiding officer for the past two years.

Supervisor Ralph Clark was elected vice chairman. Laurence Schmit, who lost his seat to Harriett Wieder, was vice chairman in 1978.

Anthony, who has been a member of the board for two years, assumes his new post under a legal cloud.

On July 1, 1977, Anthony and a fellow Supervisor Ralph Diedrich were indicted by the Orange County Grand Jury on allegations of campaign law violations.

An indictment is a formal charge made against a person by a grand jury. It does not establish guilt or innocence.

Last March Orange County Superior Court Judge Philip Schwab dismissed all but one count in the indictments on the grounds that only eight members of the grand jury heard all the testimony in the case.

Commercial Airlines Fees Will Double

By JOANNE REYNOLDS
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Commercial airlines using Orange County Airport will pay fees totaling an estimated $720,000 this year because county supervisors more than doubled the airlines' landing fees today.

Under the plan unanimously adopted by the board, landing fees will jump from 23 cents per 1,000 pounds of each aircraft landing at the airport, to 50 cents per 1,000 pounds.

The fee was last set in 1969. The change was sought by airport officials when supervisors insisted the airport should be self-supporting after passage of Proposition 13.

The current fee was expected to bring in $340,000 in 1979. The new fee will add about $380,000.

Of the total, about 60 percent will be paid by Air California, 33 percent by Hughes Airwest and seven percent by Golden West Airlines.

Robert Flores, representing Airwest, said the airline object-

$100,000 Damage

El Toro Eatery Burns

A two-alarm fire reported at 8:43 a.m. today did an estimated $100,000 damage to Delaney's Kettle of Fish in El Toro, a spokesman for the restaurant said.

Orange County firemen spent 21 minutes controlling the blaze in the two-story wood structure also known as Delaney's Salty Sam, 23702 El Toro Road.

County fire officials said a faulty oven caused the blaze which began in the structure's first-floor kitchen area.

Employee Heidi Kamczynski, 18, of San Juan Capistrano turned on an oven at 8 a.m. when she arrived for work, fireman said. She went to an upstairs office to do paperwork, they said, and herad a popping noise.

She rushed downstairs, discovered the fire, fled the building and called firefighters from a business next door in the Saddleback Plaza, officials said.

Firemen of Orange County Station 22, first to respond, were only temporarily confused by reports of a blaze at Delaney's Restaurant — another company facility at 24035 El Toro Road, adjacent to the fire station.

"They drove to the restaurant, circled the block and headed for the Kettle of Fish across the freeway," an official said.

Pilot Logbook

Smile, Officer; You're 'Pooned'

By STEVE MITCHELL
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Full of barbs, heavy humor and formerly unpublished episodes involving Laguna's finest, the third underground edition of "Laguna Lampoon" is making the rounds at the police department, drawing guffaws and grimaces with every reading.

MITCHELL

It seems no one really knows who the publishers of the "insider" satire sheet are. At least no one's talking. But it's for sure that some high-ranking, and some not-so-high-ranking officers would like to find out.

Inside the latest four-page edition are anecdotes, rumors, quotable quotes and morale-boosting messages intended to keep the troops — at least part of them — in high spirits.

THE LAMPOON STAFF is straightforward in outlining its purpose. Right off the bat the mimeographed periodical states, "It is not our intention to cause any unnecessary embarrassment or humiliation to anyone.

"For this reason, only necessary embarrassment and humiliation will be included. . ."

For example, under a section entitled "Traffic Corner," this anecdote unfolds:

"Officer —— leaves his (patrol) unit running for three hours. He took all of his gear out like a good trooper, but forgot to shut the motor off. Good work — . Officer —— finally shuts it off at 0300 hours."

BUT IT APPEARS even members of the detective bureau have occasional lapses of memory:

"It has come to the Poon's attention that a member of our elite detective bureau, while responding with the normal contingency of management personnel to (a recent crime scene), parked an unmarked detective unit on the street, performed his business at the crime scene, rode back to the PD with someone else, and left the unit at the scene for a period of not less than five working days.

"The routine operation of the PD and our exceptional system of issuing and controlling official Police Equipment did not reveal the missing unit," the Poon continues, adding that a "sharp-eyed" detective finally noticed the car at the scene.

LAGUNA BEACH OFFICERS have been mingling with the geologists out in Bluebird Canyon for the past few months, so it's only natural that they would pick up some of the turf terminology. Poon #3 outlines this in a section called "Specialized Law Enforcement," and offers a reward to the officer who can define such words as "Dip slope, slide glide, head scarp, graben, slide plane and reactivated SOB."

But bitterness creeps into the camaraderie as the Poon lists changes in the department since Proposition 13.

"Only legally required equipment on police units will be kept in good repair," the list begins. "No overtime for anything less than a disaster," it continues. "All dents, as long as they don't rub against the tire, will not be fixed."

"Cost of living raises have been 10-22ed. (Police radio code for canceled.)"

REACTION TO the clandestine publication has been mixed, police spokesmen say. "Sure, there's some sour grapes — especially by some of the officers named in the Poon," one officer said. "But morale's really been lousy lately, and this really can't do anything but help."

So the next time you see a Laguna Beach patrolman in his car, and he's smiling, he probably just read the latest edition of the Laguna Lampoon.

Seal Beach Man May Be Deported

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A 79-year-old Seal Beach man, accused of being an official of a Nazi government in Yugoslavia, has been ordered by a federal judge to submit to up to four hours of daily questioning by government attorneys in preparation for deportation hearings.

Andrija Artukovic's attorney, Ronald Bonaparte, had sought to limit questioning of his client to one hour per day, citing a doctor's opinion that his client is in poor health. But U.S. District Judge Irving Hill cited another doctor's opinion Monday that Artukovic is well enough to answer questions for short periods of time.

Artukovic, who fled to the United States in 1948 after the Communists came to power, has been accused by the Yugoslavian government of ordering 750,000 Serbs and 20,000 Jews put to death when he served as security minister of the Nazi-controlled Republic of Croatia during World War II.

Judge Hill said Artukovic, a resident of Seal Beach's Surfside Colony, must give depositions to attorneys for the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service. The INS also sought to have Artukovic deported in the 1950s, but a court ordered a stay of deportation in 1959.

The government has claimed it has obtained new evidence about the case. Bonaparte said such evidence has not been made available to him and told reporters, "All they want to do is harass the man until he dies."

Fog Coming

End to Rain Due Today?

Today's rain, the tail end of a tardy storm, was expected to dissipate this afternoon, making way for pockets of dense fog Wednesday morning along the coast, a National Weather Service spokesman said.

More than a 10th of an inch of rain was recorded in most parts of Orange County today by 8 a.m., a th the only mador problem a San Diego Freeway traffic snarl. No additional slippages were reported in the landslide areas of southern coastal Orange County.

California Highway Patrol officers said a semi-truck skidded near Westminster Avenue when the driver braked too quickly on wet pavement, jacknifing the rig and blocking slow-lane traffic.

Commuters to the Los Angeles area were slowed to a near halt for nearly two hours, officials said.

Laguna Beach police were keeping a close watch on Bluebird Canyon this morning where a field of plastic covered a gaping hole in Oriole Drive after Friday's mud slide.

Geologists expect no further slippage from today's storm but would not predict the result of another Pacific storm expected Thursday.

Just to the south, officials in San Clemente said no additional slippage was noticed at Shorecliffs Mobile Country Club where a 900-foot-long fissure opened last month, threatening a half-dozen mobile homes.

"There's a chance of more light rain from a Pacific storm by Thursday," a spokesman said, "but then again, it may take longer to get here."

Today's storm, predicted to arrive Monday, dropped .12 of an inch in the Costa Mesa and Newport Beach area by 8 a.m. The season's total reached 9.06 since July 1, compared to 7.48 inches by the same date last year.

Huntington Beach measured .12 of an inch, Laguna Niguel reached only .03 of an inch and Santa Ana measured .11 of an inch.

Santa Ana's rainfall for the season reached 7 46 inches, compared to seven inches on this date last season. The average for the rainy season by this date is recorded as 4.72 for a normal year, an Orange County Flood Control District spokesman said.

Inconveniences caused by today's rain could be overshadowed by the good it is doing county agriculture, a county spokesman said this morning.

Lettuce, cabbage, broccoli, strawberries, citrus and avocados are benefitting, said a spokesman for the Orange County Agriculture Commissioner's office.

Harvesting of cauliflower and celery will be delayed somewhat, though, he said, because of muddy fields.

Man Faces Trial on Sex Counts

The San Bernardino child, who has since turned 6, accused John Howard Algie, 41, of 206 Colton St., in Harbor Municipal Court during a preliminary hearing that ended Monday.

Judge Calvin Schmidt directed authorities to arraign Algie, who has pleaded innocent, in superior court Jan. 18.

Algie was arrested at his home by Irvine police last Nov. 6. He is free on bail.

The six-foot-three, 210-pound salesman of recreational vehicles, was charged with forcing various sexual acts upon the granddaughter of a customer.

Police said a San Bernardino woman, accompanied by the child, was shopping for a motor home Sept. 9, when the crimes allegedly took place.

Police said the child didn't tell her grandmother of the incident until several days later. The woman became physically ill at the news and was hospitalized for weeks before she was able to tell police, according to investigators.

Iran Edict

Transfer of Royal Property Ordered

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi decreed today that all personal property of the Iranian royal family be turned over to a crown-sponsored foundation and ordered the release of 266 prisoners convicted by military tribunals.

Iran's state radio said the property, estimated to be valued at hundreds of millions of dollars, was being transferred to the Pahlavi foundation "for the use of religious, educational, social and welfare organizations organized by the people and run by them."

Palace sources said the divested property included the shah's vast domestic holdings in company stocks, banks, factories and land.

The moves were announced as the nation awaited word on when the shah intends to go abroad on an extended vacation to take opposition pressure off the new civilian government of Shahpour Bakhtiar.

The national Pars news agency said the 266 prisoners had been held at Tehran's central police department prison "for various offenses" and had been pardoned by the shah. Pars attributed the announcement to the imperial Iranian armed forces tribunal.

The announcement also said the pardon of other prisoners was being studied. The government previously said there were about 200 persons in prison convicted of non-capital political offenses, but today's announcement did not specify whether the pardoned group included these political prisoners.

The divestiture was seen as another step aimed at removing the taint of corruption from the royal family, 64 of whose members have gone abroad since political turmoil mounted here last fall.

This follows a previous royal decree issued last September in which the shah prohibited members of his family from having business dealings with the government or from controlling charitable organizations.

ANTHONY. .

Anthony did not discuss the pending appeal when he took over his duties today.

In a brief speech he said the county's most important problems will be in providing affordable housing, paying for indigent health care, solving problems at the airport and continuing county business under "the new fiscal rules we were given after Proposition 13."

Anthony also said 1979 will be year in which he works for "a fair return of the money Orange Countians send to the state this year."

Health Board Eyes Newport Center Plan

A proposal to build an outpatient surgical center in Newport Center will come before the Orange County Health Planning Council Wednesday in Newport Beach.

Surgicare Associates, Inc. wants to build a $1 million facility. Spokesman Raymond Berg says he believes the facility could lower costs of minor surgery by up to 60 percent.

However, the council staff has recommended denying the request on the basis that it would duplicate existing out-patient facilities at a number of area hospitals, including Hoag Memorial.

The hearing will begin at 7:30 p.m. in City Council Chambers, 3300 Newport Blvd., Newport Beach.

"During the past 15 years, there has been a substantial increase in the number of couples living together without marrying," said the court's opinion. "Such nonmarital relationships lead to legal controversy when one partner dies or the couple separates.

". . . We take this opportunity to resolve that controversy and to declare the principles which should govern distribution of property acquired in a nonmarital relationship."

The court then outlined a complex set of laws under which non-married couples could seek financial relief upon separation.

Since the decision, many suits have been filed under "Marvin vs. Marvin," including cases involving other celebrities — Nick Nolte, Alice Cooper, Rod Stewart and Britt Ecklund. None has come to trial.

Appropriately, the case that set the precedent will be the first to be decided by a jury.

Marvin, 54, and Miss Marvin, 46, met in 1964 during the filming of "Ship of Fools" in which they both had parts. Soon, they were living together — although Marvin was not divorced from his estranged wife until 1967.

He said he thought use of the landing fees for operating expenses was inappropriate since the fees couldn't be considered a stable revenue source.

But his views were disputed by Assistant Airport Manager Barbara Fox who described the use of the fees as a sound financial plan.

Ms. Fox earlier warned supervisors that some of the carriers — she didn't specify which ones — had objected to the increase claiming the money was being raised to "pre-fund litigation."

She denied that allegation while acknowledging that the lawsuits filed over airport noise have cost the airport and the county "hundreds of thousands of dollars."

Three Facing Court Action In Air Blasts

Three persons who Irvine police allege launched exploding air balloons in the path of small aircraft landing at Orange County Airport are scheduled to stand trial on the charges on Feb. 13.

The trial, on misdemeanor charges, will be held in Harbor Municipal Court.

All were employees of Control Components, 2567 Main St., Irvine, from where police say the balloons were launched Though the balloons created several spectacular fireball explosions, no airplanes were affected, police said.

U.S. Limits Aid to Slide Victims

Of the Daily Pilot Staff

The federal government has disappointed victims of the Oct. 2 landslide in Bluebird Canyon who hope one day to be able to rebuild their homes on the slide-torn land in Laguna Beach.

Officials from the Federal Disaster Assistance Administration contacted state emergency services director Alex Cunningham Monday to tell him federal reconstruction aid would not be forthcoming.

The news came as a surprise to state and city officials who were counting on approximately $2 million from the federal government to eventually repair streets and install utilities in Bluebird Knolls so homes may once again be built on the land.

The city attempted to link the October slide to the heavy rainfall the previous winter. To support that contention, the city submitted an in-depth geological report that shows the rains of January and February caused the Bluebird Canyon slides.

Therefore, the city reasoned, the Bluebird disaster is linked to the disaster declared by President Carter early last year.

The Laguna landslide was also declared a disaster by the president, but aid was limited to emergency work, with the state and city charged with permanent repairs to the 3.5 acre site.

But City Manager Fred Solomon said today the city cannot pick up the 40 percent cost to the city for restoration.

"It's impossible," he said, adding that budget constraints under Proposition 13 make reconstruction of Bluebird Knolls at state and city expense "ridiculous to even contemplate."

Federal aid, according to the latest news from the FDAA, is limited to emergency buttressing of the slide area, expected to cost around $500,000.

Approval for the first stage of that work was received verbally from the federal agency only last week.

But state and city officials say they are not about to drop the issue. Cunningham, director of the state's Office of Emergency Services, fired off a letter to the FDAA assailing that agency's denial of reconstruction funds.

"The State of California takes exception to FDAA's denial and we feel the city, as well as its citizens, is being dealt a great injustice," Cunningham wrote in appealing the decision.

"Your letter in no way speaks to the facts presented by the city or the geologist report. In fact, it

Construction crews putting a 3.5 mile sewer line through Laguna Beach hope this black cat doesn't bring them bad luck. They've got enough of it with this month's rains, which have slowed work on the Aliso Water Management Agency project that will link Laguna's sewer lines to the Aliso Beach outfall in about three years. Pipelines along Glenneyre Street create interesting perspective for motorists forced into two lanes on the busy Laguna Beach thoroughfare.

500 Feet Separates Aircraft

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A Continental 727 pilot is reported to have considered evasive action to avoid a single-engine Cessna which was said to have come within 500 feet of the jet as the jetliner approached Lindbergh for a landing.

But a Federal Aviation Administration official said today the incident involving the commercial jetliner and the small plane near Lindbergh Field is not being officially classified as a near-miss.

Jack Gregory, a Continental spokesman in Los Angeles, said no evasive action was taken by the unidentified pilot of flight 81 and no official complaint was filed about the incident.

Norm Bell Sterling, an FAA official here, said he talked with the Continental pilot during the incident, which occurred about noon.

According to Sterling, the pilot said "in his opinion, the Cessna was too close; he told us 500 feet."

"We asked him if he wanted to file a mid-air report but he didn't," said Sterling. "Instead, he filed with the National Aeronautics and Space Administration a generalized complaint."

Sept. 25, a Pacific Southwest Airlines 727 jet approaching Lindbergh for a landing collided with a Cessna, killing 144 persons in the worst air disaster in U.S. history.

No final cause for that disaster has been announced by federal investigators, but the FAA has ordered stricter flight procedures at busy Lindbergh Field.

According to Gregory, "The tower advised everyone in the area about a single engine Cessna in the general area Monday. All our captain did was stay at his altitude a moment and check it on his radar. Our ground station said no evasive action was taken."

State Budget Proposal Seen Cutting Jobs

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Gov. Edmund Brown Jr., will propose a $19.8 billion budget that eliminates 5,140 state jobs and abolishes 15 licensing boards, the Sacramento Union reported today.

The newspaper also detailed a $1.2 billion state income tax cut Brown mentioned in his inaugural address Monday, quoting figures it said came from an advance copy of the budget.

The Democratic governor's staff refused comment until the budget is submitted to the state Legislature on Wednesday.

The account quotes Brown as saying in an introduction to the budget that the spending plan is a blueprint for "leaner government" and is "substantially below all proposed constitutional spending limits. But it keeps faith with the vision and conscience of California" by building for the future in the areas of arts, affirmative action, urban parks, apprenticeship training, enforcement of labor laws and housing, it said.

Love Trial

Actor, Ex-lover Meet in Court

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Eight years after they called it quits, Oscar-winning actor Lee Marvin and his former lover, Michelle Triola Marvin, met in court today for a landmark trial involving love, money and the changing morality of American couples.

Jury selection was to begin today in the suit filed by Miss Marvin, who legally changed her name while she lived with Marvin. She is suing for the same compensation a wife would get in a divorce — half the property accumulated during their six years together — or $1 million.

They were never married and Marvin is contesting the right to use his name.

Marvin and his attorneys were expected to argue that the mere fact that Marvin never married Miss Marvin shows he wanted to avoid the responsibilities and obligations of marriage.

Marvin has filed a countersuit asking $1 million from Miss Marvin for compensation for the companionship and other services he provided during their relationship.

"I was like a wife to Lee," she has said. " . . . I took a care of Lee like he was a baby chicken."

Improvement OK'd For Coast Highway

South Coast Regional Commission members have approved a $32,300 facelift for Pacific Coast Highway through Dana Point to improve traffic safety.

The project will include elimination of on-street parking on both sides of the street from Street of the Green Lantern to Del Obispo Street. Left turn lanes will be added.

Commissioners spent little time Monday debating a need for the street improvements, based on a count of 76 accidents on the stretch involved in the first 10 months of last year.

No economic impact is likely to result which would hurt downtown merchants if the 125 Coast Highway on-street parking spaces are eliminated, commissioners were told.

Many are currently unused, the commission staff said, and most commercial development in the area is new and was required to provide off-street parking.

Horizontal and vertical curves in Coast Highway at those locations severely restrict visual sight of oncoming traffic for motorists trying to make left turns.

Fog Coming

End to Rain Due Today?

Today's rain, the tail end of a tardy storm, was expected to dissipate this afternoon, making way for pockets of dense fog Wednesday morning along the coast, a National Weather Service spokesman said.

More than a 10th of an inch of rain was recorded in most parts of Orange County today by 8 a.m., z th the only mador problem a San Diego Freeway traffic snarl. No additional slippages were reported in the landslide areas of southern coastal Orange County.

California Highway Patrol officers said a semi-truck skidded near Westminster Avenue when the driver braked too quickly on wet pavement, jacknifing the rig and blocking slow-lane traffic.

Commuters to the Los Angeles area were slowed to a near halt for nearly two hours, officials said.

Laguna Beach police were keeping a close watch on Bluebird Canyon this morning where a field of plastic covered a gaping hole in Oriole Drive after Friday's mud slide.

Geologists expect no further slippage from today's storm but would not predict the result of another Pacific storm expected Thursday.

Just to the south, officials in San Clemente said no additional slippage was noticed at Shorecliffs Mobile Country Club where a 900-foot-long fissure opened last month, threatening a half-dozen mobile homes.

"There's a chance of more light rain from a Pacific storm by Thursday," a spokesman said, "but then again, it may take longer to get here."

Today's storm, predicted to arrive Monday, dropped .12 of an inch in the Costa Mesa and Newport Beach area by 8 a.m. The season's total reached 9.06 since July 1, compared to 7.48 inches by the same date last year.

Huntington Beach measured .12 of an inch, Laguna Niguel reached only .03 of an inch and Santa Ana measured .11 of an inch.

Santa Ana's rainfall for the season reached 7.46 inches, compared to seven inches on this date last season. The average for the rainy season by this date is recorded as 4.72 for a normal year, an Orange County Flood Control District spokesman said

Brown Talk Delights GOP Camp

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Republican leaders are gleefully welcoming Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. to their party after his inaugural speech, and some disgruntled Democratic liberals apparently think he belongs there.

"It was awful. I do not think poor people should be left out in the cold by a governor or president," Assembly Health Committee Chairman Art Torres, D-Los Angeles, said after attending the televised address Monday night

"He joined the Republican Party and we're delighted. It's the most conservative speech given in Sacramento since Ronald Reagan left," chortled Senate GOP leader William Campbell of Whittier.

Some Democrats did praise the tone of the 20-minute speech and several Republicans questioned Brown's sincerity as a budget-cutter.

"Until a bill is signed into law, I believe nothing," said Senate Republican Caucus Chairman H.L. Richardson of Arcadia. He said Brown was "on a presidential treadmill."

But most of the reaction centered on Brown's stress on fiscal issues — a proposed $1 billion tax cut, more verbal embrace of the Proposition 13 tax revolt, and a constitutional ban on federal deficit spending — and the scant attention he paid to social problems.

"I was disappointed that there was no more attention given to human needs," said Sen. Alan Sieroty, D-Los Angeles.

Campbell, noting that Brown called Proposition 13 "a can of worms" before last June's election, observed, "A can of worms is now a gourmet meal."

credits would be increased to $125 for individuals and $250 for couples, for a total savings to taxpayers of $915 million on 1979 taxes. Those tax credits would be received on returns filed in early 1980.

The permanent level of the credits, which taxpayers deduct from their total tax bills before sending in checks or filing for refunds, is $27 for individuals and $54 for couples. But the credits on 1978 returns were increased to $100 and $200 in a one-time relief provision of a tax cut signed into law by Brown last year.

Smile, Officer; You're 'Pooned'

Of the Daily Pilot Staff

WHO WOULD BELIEVE IT, a cop counterculture publication jabbing the police establishment. Poon #3 is out

Full of barbs, heavy humor and formerly unpublished episodes involving Laguna's finest, the third underground edition of "Laguna Lampoon" is making the rounds at the police department, drawing guffaws and grimaces with every reading.

MITCHELL

It seems no one really knows who the publishers of the "insider" satire sheet are. At least no one's talking. But it's for sure that some high-ranking, and some not-so-high-ranking officers would like to find out.

Inside the latest four-page edition are anecdotes, rumors, quotable quotes and morale-boosting messages intended to keep the troops — at least part of them — in high spirits.

THE LAMPOON STAFF is straightforward in outlining its purpose. Right off the bat the mimeographed periodical states, "It is not our intention to cause any unnecessary embarrassment or humiliation to anyone.

"For this reason, only necessary embarrassment and humiliation will be included. . ."

For example, under a section entitled "Traffic Corner," this anecdote unfolds:

"Officer — leaves his (patrol) unit running for three hours. He took all of his gear out like a good trooper, but forgot to shut the motor off. Good work —. Officer — finally shuts it off at 0300 hours."

BUT IT APPEARS even members of the detective bureau have occasional lapses of memory:

"It has come to the Poon's attention that a member of our elite detective bureau, while responding with the normal contingency of management personnel to (a recent crime scene), parked an unmarked detective unit on the street, performed his business at the crime scene, rode back to the PD with someone else, and left the unit at the scene for a period of not less than five working days.

"The routine operation of the PD and our exceptional system of issuing and controlling official Police Equipment did not reveal the missing unit," the Poon continues, adding that a "sharp-eyed" detective finally noticed the car at the scene.

LAGUNA BEACH OFFICERS have been mingling with the geologists out in Bluebird Canyon for the past few months, so it's only natural that they would pick up some of the turf terminology. Poon #3 outlines this in a section called "Specialized Law Enforcement," and offers a reward to the officer who can define such words as "Dip slope, slide glide, head scarp, graben, slide plane and reactivated SOB."

But bitterness creeps into the camaraderie as the Poon lists changes in the department since Proposition 13.

"Only legally required equipment on police units will be kept in good repair," the list begins. "No overtime for anything less than a disaster," it continues. "All dents, as long as they don't rub against the tire, will not be fixed."

"Cost of living raises have been 10-22ed. (Police radio code for canceled.)"

REACTION TO the clandestine publication has been mixed, police spokesmen say. "Sure, there's some sour grapes — especially by some of the officers named in the Poon," one officer said. "But morale's really been lousy lately, and this really can't do anything but help."

So the next time you see a Laguna Beach patrolman in his car, and he's smiling, he probably just read the latest edition of the Laguna Lampoon.

ignores the question entirely. If you did not propose to take the geologist's report under consideration, why, then, did you insist upon it in the beginning?" Cunningham asked.

And City Council members have been in contact with representatives from Congressman Robert Badham's office in an effort to get him involved in the controversy.

Councilwoman Sally Bellerue said today that she and Mayor Jack McDowell have talked with Badham's office.

"We need to hold further talks to elicit help from him," Mrs. Bellerue said, adding the council will also contact U.S. Senators S.I. Hayakawa and Alan Cranston.

She said city officials will be speaking with a federal geologist expected to visit the landslide area today

"If we can get some movement out of him, then fine," she said. "But we're still going to get in touch with our representatives."

Meanwhile, Laguna City Manager Fred Solomon said he is following up Cunningham's letter to the federal agency.

"They made only a passing reference to our geology report," Solomon said. "That's what's so frustrating.

"They led us to believe they would reconsider it on the findings of our geologist. They even held off on a decision until we submitted the results of those findings. Why request those findings if you're not going to use them," he said.

But former homeowners in Bluebird Knolls face an extra burden as a result of Monday's news from the federal government.

If the slide was tied officially to last winter's rains, as the city had hoped, those homeowners would be eligible for lower (3 percent) loans from the Small Business Administration.

But President Carter placed an Oct. 1 deadline on those low interest loans—just one day before the landslide. SBA loans are now tabbed at more than 7 percent, which will doubtless cause a hardship to many of the 22 families who lost their homes and land to the slide.

Rep. Badham promised last year to initiate a bill in Congress seeking lower SBA loans. Congress reconvenes next Monday, but Badham was not available to comment on his plans to aid Bluebird victims.

A spokesman in Badham's Washington office said the Congressman is en route to California today.

MARVIN. . .

The case, which has already created legal precedents on appeal, is expected to have a national impact. Many others involved in non-marital relationships have filed similar suits alleging they are entitled to everything from pension rights to alimony.

"You could say it affects everyone who has a date," says Marvin Mitchelson, Miss Marvin's attorney, who has been involved in the case during seven years of litigation.

Seniors Seek Building Use In Clemente

San Clemente parks commissioners will be asked tonight to support a San Clemente Seniors' proposal to use two unoccupied city-owned Avenida del Mar buildings for expanded activities for elderly city residents.

The commission meeting is scheduled to begin at 7:30 p.m. in the Ole Hanson Room at the San Clemente Community Center, 100 N. Calle Seville.

The two buildings which the seniors organization has proposed to use are located just north of the community center, where activities are currently scheduled daily for people over 55. btxhe city purchased the property where the buildings are locatled for a proposed county branch library. But passage of Proposition 13 has postponed construction of the library.

Also on tonight's parks commission agenda is a report on a school and park site proposed for the Rancho San Clemente development on the 2,000 acre Visbeek Ranch.

ANTHONY. .

Superior Court Judge Philip Schwab dismissed all but one count in the indictments on the grounds that only eight members of the grand jury heard all the testimony in the case.

In a brief speech he said the county's most important problems will be in providing affordable housing, paying for indigent health care, solving problems at the airport and continuing county business under "the new fiscal rules we were given after Proposition 13."

Anthony also said 1979 will be year in which he works for "a fair return of the money Orange Countians send to the state this year."

Cut Urged Of Jobs Program

The Capistrano-Laguna Beach Regional Occupational Program governing board will be asked tonight to discontinue a portion of its job training program which does not qualify for state financial reimbursement.

Tonight's ROP board meeting is scheduled to begin at 7 o'clock in the Laguna Beach Unified School District board room, located at district offices, 550 Blumont St.

ROP administrative consultant Dr. Donald Wheeler said he will recommend tonight that the board cut its Cooperative Vocational Educational Program, in which 565 students are currently enrolled.

If Wheeler's recommendation is followed, ROP students will no longer be able to work for pay while they receive school credits for improving their job skills.

Still to continue would be the major portion of the ROP courses, which provide an on the job unpaid internship, in addition to classroom instruction, for high school students and adults.

Wheeler said he did not know today how much of the program's expense will be borne by local taxpayers. But he said that 565 students enrolled in the cooperative work program will receive credit for their work, even if the board discontinues the program.

LAETRILE. .

Chad's illness should be treated.

"I stated very clearly that chemotherapy should continue as the basic treatment with metabolic therapy, including the use of Laetrile, to improve the quality of the boy's life and, possibly, prolonging his remission," Contreras said in describing his testimony Monday before a closed court hearing. Judge Guy Volterra of Plymouth Superior Court is reviewing his April 18 order requiring the chemotherapy and making Chad a temporary ward of the state for purposes of treatment. During the treatment, he is still living with his parents.

The couple opposed chemotherapy for their son in earlier court fights and argued he should be treated only with Laetrile and a special diet. But now they indicate they might permit the chemotherapy to continue.

Driver OK After Crash

A 33-year-old San Juan Capistrano man escaped serious injury when his car careened out of control and smashed into a bridge piling Monday on the Camino Capistrano onramp of the San Diego Freeway in San Juan.

A California Highway Patrol spokesman said Jay Clauber apparently drove too fast on the freeway onramp and lost control, striking the cement piling.

He was treated and released at San Clemente General Hospital following the 7:30 p.m. accident.

Riley Praises Coping With Prop. 13

Coping with the first year's financial impact of Proposition 13 without losing essential services was rated Orange County government's top accomplishment for 1978 today.

Outgoing Supervisors Chairman Thomas Riley, in his state of the county report, noted that after passage of the property tax reduction initiative, supervisors adopted a 1978-79 budget chopped by $32.7 million from county government's 1977-78 budget.

At the same time, he said, county government was able to extend services to 41,000 new residents added to the county population last year and absorb a seven percent inflation factor.

"Still, it was not easy," Riley said. "In fact it was very difficult.

"Overall, I feel that the past year's budget was the board's major accomplishment," the Newport Beach supervisor said. "Next year's budget together with those decisions required by fiscal constraints will doubtless be the board's major challenge."

Riley said median family income in Orange County for 1978 stood at $22,000, and new jobs were created at double the statewide growth rate.

Riley noted the county unemployment rate stood at 3.7 percent for November and 5.5 percent for the year as a whole, the lowest rate not only in California but for the nation as well.

Personal income in Orange County was $17.3 billion, he said, up almost 12 percent from a year earlier.

In addition, retail sales of nearly $10 billion stood second statewide only to Los Angeles County.

As for the dollar value of all goods and services produced, the outgoing chairman said, the 1978 gross county product reached $20 billion.

"Looking to the future, it will be the private sector continuing as the primary means, in our free economic system, to satisfy the needs and wants of people for goods and services and to create opportunities for working and living," Riley said.

"There is also a critical role here for government," Riley continued, "to create a climate for economic growth and to provide the necessary foundation of public services."

On the subject of affordable housing, Riley said supervisors on Wednesday will be offered a new set of policies aimed at lowering housing prices.

The new housing element of the county general plan, he said, includes strategies for county government to assist private developers "to take more responsibility for providing affordable housing."

In today's message Riley also touched on county government efforts to provide more parks and open space in county areas, including the recent $2.5 million acquisition agreement for a beach park neighboring Doheny State Beach.

He also mentioned efforts to assist in preservation of both the Laguna Greenbelt and the Bolsa Chica marsh.

The second-term supervisor also referred to the county's efforts to supervise county government political campaigns and creation of a new Fair Campaign Practices Commission which he said resulted in "more responsible campaigns in general."

Looking toward the future, Riley also said he is hopeful county government can develop a Washington lobbyist program.

"The main concerns are that all sorts of administrative laws are made that affect the county," he said.

And while federal grants exist to help finance many of the programs resulting from those laws, Riley said, county citizens have been paying more in federal taxes than is returned to them in services.

"Illustrating the situation is information that Orange County was 54th of the 58 California counties in receipt of grant funds," Riley said. "Effective Washington representation can do much to redress the inequity."

BACK ON THE BENCH

Ousted Judge Gets New Post

By KATHY CLANCY
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Leonard Goldstein of Newport Beach, ousted Orange County Superior Court judge, was unemployed less than 24 hours Monday when the governor put him back on the bench.

Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. appointed Goldstein to the North Orange County Municipal Court on the same day that former Deputy District Attorney Oretta Sears took over the superior court seat she won from Goldstein in the June election.

"I am thrilled to be able to continue serving the community in a judicial capacity," Goldstein said late Monday, "and I must say I admire the governor for his sincerity and boldness."

When asked about published reports that the governor plans to elevate him to a spot on the district court of appeal later, Goldstein said he'd heard nothing of such a plan.

"The governor doesn't consult me about his appointments," Goldstein said. "If he has something in mind he hasn't shared that with me."

Goldstein, 47, will be paid $47,497 for his new municipal court post, about $4,000 less than he earned as a superior court judge.

Superior Court Judge Robert Green also expressed pleasure at Goldstein's appointment, saying it drew "tremendous support" from both attorneys and judges.

Green said he and Goldstein had been in private practice together in Santa Ana in the 1960's. He called Goldstein "extremely well respected" while he served on the superior court bench

Goldstein's last day on the bench was Friday and he begins duties in the Fullerton municipal court today.

Goldstein, a former deputy attorney general and state administrative law judge, said he had been planning to go into private practice after leaving Superior Court.

He explained his ties with the Brown administration stretch back to the governor's first term when Goldstein was with state government and was able "to be of some assistance to the new administration."

He was first appointed to North Orange County Municipal Court by Brown in 1976 then elevated by Brown to superior court in 1977.

Of his defeat, 241,014 for Sears to 190,224 for the incumbent, Goldstein said, "I think it was a combination of Proposition 13 and a law and order campaign which was never justified for me since I hadn't had a criminal case.

"And I think the title deputy district attorney was very appealing in the last election," Goldstein continued.

He said what he learned from the defeat was that judges need to get out among the people and let them know what they are doing.

Goldstein's June upset and that of three other incumbent superior and municipal court judges was called one of the most spectacular upsets in local political history. No incumbent judges had been opposed in Orange County for years and it was the first time one had been defeated since 1940.

Diedrich Case

Lawyer Claims Council Denied

The new attorney for Orange County Supervisor Ralph Diedrich Monday asked a judge to dismiss the bribery indictment against his client on the grounds that he had been denied effective use of counsel.

James P. Cantillon, of Newport Beach, Diedrich's new lawyer in the case after the resignation of Marshall Morgan, charged the District Attorney's Office knew for more than a year that Morgan would be a chief prosecution witness against his own client but failed to notify Diedrich or Morgan.

San Diego County Superior Court Judge F.V. Lopardo set a hearing on the motion, along with a move to grant Diedrich and co-defendant LeRoy Rose, a preliminary hearing, for next Monday.

Assistant District Attorney Michael Capizzi argued that everyone knew Morgan was a potential witness because he was subpoened to testify before the Orange County Grand Jury that indicted Diedrich.

Diedrich and architect Rose face a Feb. 5 trial in Lopardo's Vista court on charges they conspired to receive money from Anaheim Hills Inc. in 1973 in return for a Board of Supervisors vote to remove 2,200 acres from an agricultural preserve.

Morgan withdrew from the Diedrich case last month after citing a possible conflict of interest centering on his possible role as a witness in what is expected to be a six to- eight-week trial.

The trial was transferred to San Diego County in October by Orange County Superior Court Judge John Flynn.

Hotlines Set For Welfare Fraud Report

Establishment of four telephone "hotlines" for anyone wishing to report suspicion of welfare fraud was announced Monday by officials of the Orange County District Attorney's Office.

Those calling the numbers — 834-7872, 834-7873, 834-7874 and 834-7875 — may speak directly to an investigator.

The names of those calling will be kept confidential if requested, officials said.

At the same time, officials announced that 29 people were arrested in December on charges of welfare fraud representing a suspected loss of $66,429 in overpayments.

Two other persons were charged during the month with probation violations on earlier welfare fraud charges.

Holiday Blood Shortage Ended

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The blood shortage emergency in Los Angeles and Orange counties that developed during the Christmas and New Year's holiday period has ended, a Red Cross official said Monday.

"I think we can say the threat of serious shortage is past, thanks to public response," said Norman Kear, regional administrator of Red Cross Blood Services.

Starts Monday

Insanity Plea Made By Suspect

Robert Leslie "Bobby" Jones was arraigned in West Orange County Judicial District court on murder charges from the Sept. 8 stabbing death of Huntington Beach motorcyclist Gary Allen "Mad Dog" Fero, 41, at the Main Street Saloon, 117 Main St.

Jones also is charged with attempted murder in the alleged slashing of Delbert Ray Calvin, 41, of Fountain Valley, on March 5 in the Capri Cocktail Lounge, 406 Pacific Coast Highway.

Jones was in Orange County Jail today in lieu of $250,000 bail. A Jan. 19 preliminary hearing has been scheduled in West County Court to determine if Jones will stand trial.

It is alleged that Jones and Fero were involved in a 1:30 a.m. fight over a woman. Fero died a few hours later at Huntington Intercommunity Hospital from a stab wound in the back.

Police Sgt. Luis Ochoa said several other suspects are being sought for questioning in connection with Fero's death.

Police arrested former barmaid Mary Magaline Davis, 25, on Sept. 8 and Dec. 21 and charged her with suspicion of murder in Fero's death. But Miss Davis was released both times due to lack of evidence, police said.

Calvin, the victim of the alleged assault in March, told police he fought with Jones after an argument over a woman.

Cops Baffled By Hammer Assault Case

Santa Ana police said today they remain baffled by the attack on one of their officers Monday morning that ended with the fatal shooting of the policeman's hammer-wielding assailant.

Rudy Ray Martin, 30, was shot in the head and chest by Officer Robert Fernandez, 35, who had been summoned to Martin's apartment to take a burglary report.

Fernandez reported that Martin met him at the door of the apartment at 827 N. French St. and invited the officer in.

As the patrolman walked into the apartment, Martin hit him on the head from behind with a claw hammer. Fernandez was struck five times before he shot Martin, police said.

Lt. Ted Weatherly said today that Fernandez was not seriously injured in the attack and was to be released from the hospital today.

The officer suffered several scalp lacerations but didn't have a concussion, Weatherly said.

He said investigators are trying to find out what motivated the attack. "We just don't know why he did it," Weatherly said, adding that Martin had no record of "problems that would indicate something like this."

Up to the Job

Lucinda Jacobs, 4, had to borrow a stool Monday to hold the Bible for her father, Bradley, when he was sworn in as Orange County Assessor by Superior Court Judge Harmon Scoville. Other county officeholders were sworn in Monday, too. To find out how "the coronation" went, turn to Page A9.

Seal Beach Man May Be Deported

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A 79-year-old Seal Beach man, accused of being an official of a Nazi government in Yugoslavia, has been ordered by a federal judge to submit to up to four hours of daily questioning by government attorneys in preparation for deportation hearings.

Andrija Artukovic's attorney, Ronald Bonaparte, had sought to limit questioning of his client to one hour per day, citing a doctor's opinion that his client is in poor health. But U.S. District Judge Irving Hill cited another doctor's opinion Monday that Artukovic is well enough to answer questions for short periods of time.

Artukovic, who fled to the United States in 1948 after the Communists came to power, has been accused by the Yugoslavian government of ordering 750,000 Serbs and 20,000 Jews put to death when he served as security minister of the Nazi-controlled Republic of Croatia during World War II.

Judge Hill said Artukovic, a resident of Seal Beach's Surfside Colony, must give depositions to attorneys for the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service. The INS also sought to have Artukovic deported in the 1950s, but a court ordered a stay of deportation in 1959.

The government has claimed it has obtained new evidence about the case. Bonaparte said such evidence has not been made available to him and told reporters, "All they want to do is harass the man until he dies."

Young Skier Found Safe

SONORA, Calif. (AP) — A 13-year-old skier who spent the night in a mountain snowstorm has been found unharmed after a ski resort employee saw a giant "SOS" the youngster had stamped in the snow.

Douglas Grismore of Palo Alto said he became lost skiing down the back side of a mountain at a resort 30 miles east of here. He said he panicked briefly when darkness fell Sunday, but regained his composure and spent the night walking and stamping out the "SOS."

Surgery Slated For Carpenter

Mel Carpenter, executive director of the South Coast Regional Commission, said Monday he will undergo surgery for a cataract on his eye Wednesday.

Carpenter said he hoped to be back in his chair when the commission holds its next meeting in Huntington Beach Council Chambers.

GEM WISE

Selecting a birthstone gift this month? Chances are, you can give the birthday person his or her favorite color. Garnet, the January birthstone, comes in all colors except blue.

How is this possible? Gemstones are classified according to crystal structure and chemical composition. Although all garnets have the same crystal structure and are similar and interrelated chemically, a different element is responsible for each variation of color. For example, the presence of chromium produces a green color.

There are actually six varieties of garnet. The most familiar of these are almandite, pyrope and rhodolite which occur in reds and red-violets. Pyrope sometimes is found in a red that approaches that of fine ruby, but this is quite rare.

Grossularite garnet occurs in green, yellow-brown, white, colorless, light red-violet and orange-red. Hessonite is a subvariety of grossularite and is a lovely orangey-brown shade. It is found in Ceylon, Italy and California while Tanzania is the prime source of the remarkable, transparent green grossularite garnet called tsavorite. The translucent specimens of green grossularite are often used as jade substitutes.

Spessartite garnet occurs in yellow to yellow-brown and dark orange-brown. Uvarovite occurs in chrome green, resembles emerald, is very scarce and found only in tiny sizes.

One type of garnet has no color whatsoever. Nature's supply of this totally clear colorless garnet is being mined in gem-rich Tanzania.

Andradite garnet occurs in green, yellow and black. Green Andradite is called Demantoid. Its name comes from a Dutch word meaning diamond because of its high luster and dispersion. Spessartite garnet occurs in yellow to yellow-brown and dark orange-brown.

I have made a collection of the many colors of garnet in small, loose, unset stones. It is on exhibit in our window this week. Also on display are some exciting pieces of jewelry set with this many hued gem.

January's child actually has more choice than many people realize. The variety that garnet offers, opens up a whole new world of color excitement.

Affordable? Well. . .

ON THE HOME & HEARTH BEAT: Orange County supervisors are scheduled tomorrow to start grappling with new proposals they hope will bring "affordable housing" to our region. This may shape up as a considerable battle.

We used to call those places "low-cost" houses. Now the word is affordable. Whatever that means.

Savants of our county government estimate that the average price of a new home in Orange County is now $113,000.

ANTHONY

There was somewhat of a preview on how the affordable housing question may be debated last night at a Building Industry Association of Orange County meeting out at the Airport Inn in Irvine.

COUNTY SUPERVISOR Phil Anthony showed up and traced briefly for the home builders the steps county government may be taking toward encouraging construction of affordable housing.

He suggested now is the time for action. "The time for brainstorming is over," the new board chairman said.

You might be able to gauge the builders' reaction to Anthony's remarks in that he was interrupted by applause only once. That was when the supervisor said, "The best thing we can do to help you build affordable housing is to get out of your way."

PRESLEY

After Anthony, the home builders got to hear their own advocate speak from the podium. He is Randall E. Presley of the Presley Companies, Newport Beach.

PRESLEY IS FAIRLY well qualified to speak for the people who actuarlly put up the walls and hang on the roof. His companies' homebuilding revenues were projected at more than $150 million for fiscal 1978. He began building homes in 1951 and has now completed 150 residential communities.

Clearly, Presley sees the piling on of new government requirements, coupled with the dictums of Proposition 13, as inflationary factors in the rising costs of a new house.

On a government requirement that he build a public road at one of his projects in our region, Presley recalled, "before we were done, that road cost us $4 million."

He didn't have to tell us how that $4 million cost was passed on.

PRESLEY EXPRESSED FEARS on how the government may attempt to slow down the inflationary economy. "I'm afraid they'll do it in housing," he said.

The Newport Beach builder did envision "a softening" in the housing market but then he added, "By January of 1980, buyers will be out in force, particularly in California."

He said a downturn might help stabilize prices. "Hopefully, this year will be a sufficient downturn."

But then he added, "I still see the price of housing going up because of Proposition 13 and the cost of land."

ALAS, PREDICTING what the housing market will do sounds like the problem of a weatherman even when he's convinced that it's going to rain.

That's when the weather guy says, "We're going to have some rain. Maybe not too much rain. Some rain, though.

Keep Weapons

China Offers Taiwan Choice

PEKING (AP) — Taiwan will be allowed to maintain its security forces and weapons after reunification with the mainland, Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping, chief of staff of China's armed forces, said today.

The offer was made during a two-hour meeting with a Senate task force on Pacific military matters headed by Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., who called it "very important" and said officials of the U.S. Liaison Office told him it was a considerable advance beyond anything said before.

Teng told the senators he already had sent what he described as several reasonable messages to Taiwanese leaders but did not say if he had received a reply. The Peking government offered earlier to negotiate a reunification agreement with Taiwan that would preserve the island's social and economic way of life.

BUT PRESIDENT Chiang Ching-kuo and other officials of the Nationalist Chinese government on Taiwan rejected the overture, as they have all other overtures from the Communists since Washington established diplomatic relations with Peking Jan. 1 and broke ties with Taisan.

Teng reaffirmed today China's policy "to seek a peaceful reunification of Taiwan and China," Nunn said. But the possibility of the use of force was not renounced on grounds that it "would reduce the prospects for Taiwan entering into serious negotiations."

TENG SAID THE circumstances where force might be used included an indefinite refusal to enter into negotiations and an attempt by the Soviet Union to interfere in Taiwanese affairs.

Nunn said "this latter possibility was regarded as highly unlikely."

Nunn added that the senators got the impression that China's overriding desire is to settle the Taiwan problem peacefully and that force was something remote to their thinking for some time to come.

HE SAID TENG emphasized that people-to-people and economic relations between Taiwan, Japan, the United States and other countries be continued.

Teng also reiterated that Taiwan could retain full autonomy within China for as long as the people of Taiwan wished and, in the future, the Taiwan authorities would possess the same powers they now wield.

The comparisons Teng made were to Macao and Hong Kong, the Portuguese and British possessions that continue to be independent but maintain close economic ties with the mainland.

TENG WAS QUOTED as saying the Chinese perhaps should curtail military maneuvers off Taiwan as a sign of good will.

Teng said the Chinese government also favors an expanded U.S. naval presence in the Western Pacific, strengthening of Japan's defense forces and defense cooperation by members of the Association of Southeast Asian nations to help counter growing Soviet military strength in the Far East.

Navy Makes Last Push For Carrier

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Navy is making an 11th-hour effort to change President Carter's mind on the kind of aircraft carrier he will recommend to Congress, administration sources report.

With Carter's fiscal 1980 defense budget just about ready for Congress, the Navy effort has reached all the way to the Caribbean island of Guadeloupe, where the president flew last week for meetings with French, British and German leaders

CARTER IS SAID to have decided to propose construction of a new type of oil-burning carrier called the CVV, which would cost about $143 million less than the bigger ship the Navy favors.

Backed by Pentagon leaders, the Navy earlier recommended construction of an additional Kennedy-class carrier, which it claims would be more "combat capable" than the CVV because it carries more warplanes and a greater variety of them.

A KENNEDY-CLASS carrier would cost about $1.7 billion and its backers contend it is worth what one official called its "slightly additional cost" over the CVV.

Although virtually all final decisions have been made by the president on his new defense budget, administration sources said a last-ditch memo from Adm. Thomas Hayward, chief of naval operations, was forwarded to Carter on Guadeloupe over the weekend urging a change to the Kennedy-class vessel.

NEITHER OF THE choices now under consideration would be as expensive as the nuclear-powered carrier that was the Navy's original preference. Congress voted for the nuclear carrier last year but Carter objected to its potential $2.4 billion cost and vetoed the legislation.

Oil Workers Delay Nationwide Strike

DENVER (AP) — The nation's 60,000 oil refinery workers continued to delay their threatened nationwide strike, as union officials awaited Carter Administration reaction to a possible 73-cent-per-hour raise.

The contract dispute is the first major union showdown over President Carter's voluntary wage-price guidelines, which allow for a 7 percent increase in wages and benefits over the life of a contract.

A.F. GROSPIRON, president of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers International Union, confirmed Monday that he had been in touch with officials of Carter's anti-inflation program. He said he sought "an interpretation of how the wage guidelines would be applied to contract settlements within the oil industry."

Some of the officials, who Grospiron did not identify, were to meet with Grospiron today in Denver, the union president said.

WHITE HOUSE SPOKESMAN Mark Henderson said he did not know of any such meeting.

The union leader said Monday the possibility of a nationwide walkout remained "very real." But he said there would be no immediate strike despite the expiration of contracts Sunday night. Most workers were on the job Monday, although oil workers stayed out at Gulf and ARCO refineries in Port Arthur, Texas.

The strike was delayed by an offer from Amoco calling for a 73-cent-per-hour raise in the first year and a wage reopener clause the second year.

Execution Sought In Mass Murders

CHICAGO (AP) — The electric chair will be sought for John Wayne Gacy, indicted on charges of murdering seven young men and boys whose bodies were buried at his suburban Chicago home or thrown into a nearby river, authorities say.

Bernard Carey, Cook County states attorney, said Monday he would ask for Gacy's execution. He said there was "more than one reason" why prosecutors could ask for the death penalty, but he refused to elaborate.

U.S. Summary

Fair skies were reported in most of the nation today, a respite from days of rain, snow and freezing drizzle.

Stormy winter weather claimed another life Monday, that of a truck driver killed when his tractor-trailer rig slid from an icy Oklahoma highway. The death brought to at least 20 the number of weather-related deaths since Saturday.

Snow, sleet and rain knocked out power and glazed roads in parts of the East Monday, forcing some schools to close and causing scattered power failures. The snowfall measured as much as a foot in parts of Vermont, and up to 8 inches in western Pennsylvania.

A cold front brought rain to the West Coast, and snow to the Sierras and the Lake Tahoe Basin. Light rain was reported in the Pacific Northwest, where freezing temperatures slicked roads in parts of Oregon and Washington.

Warmer temperatures in Idaho opened channels in the ice pack along the Snake River, where ice jams caused flooding earlier.

In Washington state, the Department of Natural Resources cautioned residents of a high fire danger in forest lands west of the Cascades. Department spokesman Steve Robinson said low humidity, wind and a lack of rain may force a fire ban in the 12.5-million acre forest.

California

Pockets of heavy fog should replace the rain that began falling shortly after midnight today as the tail end of a tardy storm finally reached Southern California, forecasters said. They held out the chance of more rain Thursday.

"There will be pockets of zero-visibility fog starting to affect some portions of Southern California tomorrow morning," National Weather Service spokesman Joe Austin said. "There's also a chance of more light rain from a Pacific storm by Thursday, but then again, it may take longer to get here."

Today's rainstorm, which forecasters had predicted would hit Monday, dropped as much as three inches in the San Francisco Bay area and heavy snow in the mountains in northern and central parts of the state.

Coastal Weather

Variable cloudiness through Wednesday. Foggy night and early morning hours with 10 percent chance of rain Wednesday.

Light variable winds night and morning hours. Highs Wednesday 58 to 64.

Coastal temperatures will range between 49 and 61. Inland temperatures will range between 48 and 65. The water temperature will be 55.

Wilson Bridge Still Up in the Air

By MICHAEL PASKEVICH
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

A plan to extend Wilson Street across the Santa Ana River to Huntington Beach drew little support from Costa Mesa City Council members Monday.

However, a planning department request for a building freeze along the proposed right-of-way for the west side street extension may delay a final decision for an undetermined time.

Just hours after the council held a public study session on the bridge, planning commissioners voted to delay until Feb. 13 a decision on a condominium project that could block the path of the bridge.

City planner Paul Dudley said today the planning department will ask the council next Mday to adopt an "emergency ordinance" that would freeze development until the question of the need for the right-of-way is answered.

Roy Kendall, a partner in Mesa Bluffs Devefopment Company, said today he hopes the council will reject the request for "a moratorium."

Kendall and his partner, Jack Thompson, want the city to either buy their parcel or let them go ahead with an additional 15 condominiums on their land at 2243 Pacific Ave.

They would prefer to complete the project, and have generated support from west side homeowners who don't want a wider (four-lane) street and bridge link to Huntington Beach running through their neighborhood.

A number of petitions signed by opponents of the bridge were presented to City Clerk Eileen Phinney as council members sat down Monday afternoon for their discussion of the bridge, and possible alternatives.

The others are extensions of Gisler Avenue and 19th Street.

Council members Norma Hertzog and Dom Raciti spoke out against extending either Gisler or Wilson because of what they said would be the negative impacts added traffic would have on residential areas.

The extension of 19th Street, which has drawn no protests from residents or council members, is a priority project.

Public Services Director Bruce Mattern said construction on 19th Street is budgeted for 1981-82.

500 Feet Separates Aircraft

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A Continental 727 pilot is reported to have considered evasive action to avoid a single-engine Cessna which was said to have come within 500 feet of the jet as the jetliner approached Lindbergh for a landing.

But a Federal Aviation Administration official said today the incident involving the commercial jetliner and the small plane near Lindbergh Field is not being officially classified as a near-miss.

Jack Gregory, a Continental spokesman in Los Angeles, said no evasive action was taken by the unidentified pilot of flight 81 and no official complaint was filed about the incident.

Norm Bell Sterling, an FAA official here, said he talked with the Continental pilot during the incident, which occurred about noon.

According to Sterling, the pilot said "in his opinion, the Cessna was too close; he told us 500 feet."

"We asked him if he wanted to file a mid-air report but he didn't," said Sterling. "Instead, he filed with the National Aeronautics and Space Administration a generalized complaint."

Sept. 25, a Pacific Southwest Airlines 727 jet approaching Lindbergh for a landing collided with a Cessna, killing 144 persons in the worst air disaster in U.S. history.

No final cause for that disaster has been announced by federal investigators, but the FAA has ordered stricter flight procedures at busy Lindbergh Field.

Boy's Life Periled If Laetrile Out?

PLYMOUTH, Mass. (AP) — A Mexican doctor who used Laetrile to treat cancer patients says the life of 3-year-old Leukemia victim Chad Green could be endangered if his chemotherapy treatments are stopped.

"We cannot risk the life of the boy by withdrawing the chemotherapy," said Dr Ernesto Contreras, who runs a clinic in Tijuana, Mexico.

He testified for Chad's parents, Diana and Gerald Green of Scituate, in their effort to win the right to decide how Chad's illness should be treated.

"I stated very clearly that chemotherapy should continue as the basic treatment with metabolic therapy, including the use of Laetrile, to improve the quality of the boy's life and, possibly, prolonging his remission," Contreras said in describing his testimony Monday before a closed court hearing. Judge Guy Volterra of Plymouth Superior Court is reviewing his April 18 order requiring the chemotherapy and making Chad a temporary ward of the state for purposes of treatment. During the treatment, he is still living with his parents.

The Greens are trying to regain legal custody of Chad in an effort to decide his treatment themselves.

The couple opposed chemotherapy for their son in earlier court fights and argued he should be treated only with Laetrile and a special diet. But now they indicate they might permit the chemotherapy to continue.

Laetrile is a trademark for a substance extracted from peach or apricot pits. Although advocates claim it can cure cancer, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration has banned it from interstate commerce, claiming there is no proof of its effectiveness or safety.

City Attorney Raps Finding On 727 Noise

Newport Beach City Attorney Dennis O'Neil said Monday reports that 727s are as quiet as other jets using Orange County Airport may be invalid because the noise-abatement takeoff procedures appear to be unsafe.

O'Neil said at a City Council study session that the Federal Aviation Administration had declared a power cutback prior to 1,000 feet of altitude is unsafe, yet the controversial Hughes Airwest 727s are now cutting back at 500 under 500 feet.

Council members said they are concerned that if the airplanes, now flown on an experimental basis, win approval, the airlines will declare the current procedure unsafe and greatly increase the noise problem.

"It would appear they're trying to fool people," said Mayor Paul Ryckoff.

Council members said they are also concerned about the possibility of an accident.

O'Neil, who gave an informational report on the city's research into the 727 project, said the FAA has been asked to rule in the matter and a reply is expected by next week.

He said a consultant hired by the city has also told him continued operation of 727s would require very expensive repaving of runways at Orange County Airport.

"His opinion is that the existing runway cannot handle the greater load of the heavier airplanes," O'Neil said.

Land for Sale

CLEVELAND (AP) — Cleveland's city council agreed Monday night to sell city property worth $5.2 million in an attempt to save 400 city jobs, and Mayor Dennis Kucinich said the move would avert and large-scale layoffs.

Supervisors Elect Anthony Chairman

Anthony replaces Fifth District Supervisor Thomas Riley who has been the board's presiding officer for the past two years.

Supervisor Ralph Clark was elected vice chairman. Laurence Schmit, who lost his seat to Harriett Wieder, was vice chairman in 1978.

Anthony, who has been a member of the board for two years, assumes his new post under a legal cloud.

On July 1, 1977 Anthony and a fellow Supervisor Ralph Diedrich were indicted by the Orange County Grand Jury on allegations of campaign law violations.

An indictment is a formal charge made against a person by a grand jury. It does not establish guilt or innocence.

Stanford Taps Dowhower as Grid Coach

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Bill Walsh, who took Stanford University to two bowl games in two years, has resigned as the Cardinals' coach and is expected to be named head coach of the San Francisco 49ers later today.

Walsh, 48, resigned from his Stanford job Monday, school Athletic Director Andy Geiger said today. Geiger said Walsh quit to accept a head coaching job in the National Football League. (Earlier story Page B2)

The 49ers fired Coach Fred O'Connor and General Manager Joe Thomas on Monday. It was almost certain that Walsh would be named to succeed O'Connor later today.

Stanford named assistant coach Rod Dowhower, 35, to succeed Walsh. Dowhower had been Walsh's chief assistant both years Walsh was at Stanford. The team won 17 games and lost eight.

Jury Trial Waived

Actor Lee Marvin's Lover Changes Plans

LOS ANGELES (AP) — In a surprise move, the attorney for Michele Triola Marvin announced today she would waive a jury in the trial of her landmark suit against actor Lee Marvin — a case involving love, money and the changing morality of American couples.

Attorney Marvin Mitchelson made the move after conferring in chambers with Superior Court Judge Arthur Marshall.

Attorneys for the Oscar-winning actor agreed the matter could best be judged by Marshall, a veteran family court judge considered a[illegible] the field of domestic relations.

The change cleared the way for testimony to begin as early as Thursday in Miss Marvin's suit for $1 million. The former singer, who changed her name while she lived with the actor, seeks the same compensation a wife would get in a divorce — half the property accumulated during their six years together.

The judge ruled on one technical motion involving the separation of financial and fact questions in the trial, but the ruling made no significant difference.

Marshall said a last pretrial motion would be taken up Thursday morning. Then testimony is expected to start.

The white-haired Marvin and his former lover appeared in court, but did not speak to each other. He was accompanied by the wife he married when he left Miss Marvin eight years ago.

Miss Marvin has said she will tell all during the trial about her living arrangement with the actor.

Miss Marvin has said, "I was like a wife to Lee ... I took care o[illegible] like he was a baby chicken."

Thousands of Cambodians Back

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Cambodia's new Communist government reported today that thousands of people were flocking back to their native villages north of Phnom Penh following the overthrow of the Communist regime which forced them into communal farms.

Western analysts in neighboring Thailand said there was still fighting in northwest Cambodia and Vietnamese air strikes had doubled to almost 100 a day in mopping up operation in the east and west.

SPK, the official news agency of the provisional government which the Vietnamese army installed in Phnom Penh, said from Mimot and Koret to Molu and Stung, in Kampong Cham Province, thousands of buffalo carts loaded with children and belongings were taking the villagers home.

The report, broadcast from Phnom Penh, said a unit of the rebel movement's military forces was detailed to help the returnees.

Following the Communist victory over the U.S.-backed Lon Nol government in 1975, the government emptied the cities and villages and forced most of the population into communal farms. Observers estimate that in the process a million or more Cambodians were executed or died of hunger, exhaustion and disease.

"For the first time in many years, young men and women sang happily as they harvested," said the official report. "Fires again warmed the kitchens in the houses along Highway 7, now restored to family life."

Analysts in Bangkok said Pol Pot and his associates who fled Phnom Penh were trying to make a stand in the northwest part of the country near Siem Reap and Angkor, the ancient Cambodian capital.

Cambodia's geographic isolation from China indicated Chinese support for the ousted government would be mostly verbal.

The Peking People's Daily, the Chinese Communist Party newspaper, said the fall of Phnom Penh on Sunday to the Vietnamese invaders and the rebel Communist movement was a "landmark of doom" for Hanoi and its Soviet backers because it was the start, not the end, of fighting.

A Thai military spokesman said China had evacuated more than 600 diplomats and advisers from Cambodia to Thailand by sea and air, and that others were believed to have been evacuated directly to China. But many of the estimated 20,000 Chinese advisers still are believed in Cambodia.

Diplomats from North Korea, Romania, Egypt, Yugoslavia and Burma also arrived in the Thai border town of Aranya Prathet, the spokesman said.

Carter Sails French Racer

GOSIER, Guadeloupe (AP) — A barefoot President Carter spent the final day of a Caribbean vacation today sailing aboard a 60-foot French trimaran racer.

Carter and his 11-year-old daughter Amy boarded the three-hulled Seiko of yachting publisher Alain Glickman at a marina near the clifftop villa where the Carters have been staying since last week's summit with the leaders of France, Britain and West Germany.

The sailboat has no engine and had to be towed into the harbor. Her sails filled with a gentle breeze within a few minutes and she sailed off on a westerly course.

Fog Expected

No More Rain Due For Coast Region

Today's rain, the tail end of a tardy storm, was expected to dissipate this afternoon, making way for pockets of dense fog Wednesday morning along the coast, a National Weather Service spokesman said.

More than a 10th of an inch of rain was recorded in most parts of Orange County today by 8 a.m., with the only mador problem a San Diego Freeway traffic snarl. No additional slippages were reported in the landslide areas of southern coastal Orange County.

California Highway Patrol officers said a semi-truck skidded near Westminster Avenue when the driver braked too quickly on wet pavement, jacknifing the rig and blocking slow-lane traffic.

Commuters to the Los Angeles area were slowed to a near halt for nearly two hours, officials said.

Laguna Beach police were keeping a close watch on Bluebird Canyon this morning where a field of plastic covered a gaping hole in Oriole Drive after Friday's mud slide.

Geologists expect no further slippage from today's storm but would not predict the result of another Pacific storm expected Thursday.

Just to the south, officials in San Clemente said no additional slippage was noticed at Shorecliffs Mobile Country Club where a 900-foot-long fissure opened last month, threatening a half-dozen mobile homes.

"There's a chance of more light rain from a Pacific storm by Thursday," a spokesman said, "but then again, it may take longer to get here."

Today's storm, predicted to arrive Monday, dropped .12 of an inch in the Costa Mesa and Newport Beach area by 8 a.m. The season's total reached 9.06 since July 1, compared to 7.48 inches by the same date last year.

Huntington Beach measured .12 of an inch, Laguna Niguel reached only .03 of an inch and Santa Ana measured .11 of an inch.

Santa Ana's rainfall for the season reached 7.46 inches, compared to seven inches on this date last season. The average for the rainy season by this date is recorded as 4.72 for a normal year, an Orange County Flood Control District spokesman said.

Inconveniences caused by today's rain could be overshadowed by the good it is doing county agriculture, a county spokesman said this morning.

Lettuce, cabbage, broccoli, strawberries, citrus and avocados are benefitting, said a spokesman for the Orange County Agriculture Commissioner's office.

Harvesting of cauliflower and celery will be delayed somewhat, though, he said, because of muddy fields.

Health Board Eyes Newport Center Plan

A proposal to build an outpatient surgical center in Newport Center will come before the Orange County Health Planning Council Wednesday in Newport Beach.

Surgicare Associates, Inc. wants to build a $1 million facility. Spokesman Raymond Berg says he believes the facility could lower costs of minor surgery by up to 60 percent.

However, the council staff has recommended denying the request on the basis that it would duplicate existing out-patient facilities at a number of area hospitals, including Hoag Memorial.

The hearing will begin at 7:30 p.m. in City Council Chambers, 3300 Newport Blvd., Newport Beach.

Synanon Chief 'Depressed'

KINGMAN, Ariz. (AP) — Synanon founder Charles Dederich weeps uncontrollably and seeks comfort from a whiskey bottle, according to a psychiatric profile introduced at a hearing here.

"I'm depressed," the document quotes the 65-year-old Dederich as saying. "It's ridiculous. I'm a man who bowled other people over all my life, a man who yelled a lot. And here I am sitting with my head down, not moving, not thinking about anything, just snotting and sniveling."

The report was filed by Dr. M. B Ruland, director of Kingman's Mohave Mental Health Clinic, who first examined Dederich Nov. 30, just after his arrest on a California warrant charging conspiracy and solicitation to murder a Los Angeles attorney, using a rattlesnake. An extradition hearing in that case is a scheduled next Monday.

Trio Jailed In Newport Theft Try

Held on $10,000 bail were Susan Jean Young, 24, of 1600 Coriander Drive, Costa Mesa; Rick Lee Rose, 22, of Orange, and John William Stinson, 24, of 262 Cecil Place, Costa Mesa. All three face charges of residential burglary.

Police said the incident occurred at about 10 p.m. Sunday when neighbors reported seeing two men climbing a fence to the home of Howard and Anne Johnson at 1227 Somerset Lane, Newport Beach.

The police helicopter tracked two men to a car and directed a police car to intercept them. The two men were reportedly found in the car with the woman driving.

Police said the door knob had been forced open on the Johnson door but that no items were reported missing.

Rose was described as having flowers, a skull, a goose, a peacock and mountains tattooed on his upper right arm; flowers and the name "Jason" on his wrist; a head, a person and a snake tattooed on his upper left arm and a butterfly, a head and a snake tattooed on his lower left arm.

Stinson was described in the police report as having multiple tattoos over his arms and entire body.

WILSON. . .

would follow in perhaps five or 10 years, Mattern added.

He said that a county transportation committee supports "protection" of the three bridge crossings because of projected three percent increases in traffic volume each year.

One proposed bridge extension that is no longer on the county's master plan would have punched Sunflower Avenue across the river for a connection with Ellis Avenue in Fountain Valley, Mattern said.

That proposal was opposed by Fountain Valley and removed from the county master plan of highways.

Costa Mesa, as the "lead agency," must act on the need for new bridge crossings. However, if Huntington Beach or the county opposes the removal of a bridge crossing from city plans, Mattern said the city's supply of matching funds for any new road work could be endangered.

Although one homeowner said this was "just a threat," City Manager Fred Sorsabal claimed that Laguna Beach is one Orange Coast city that has lost road funding because of its refusal to maintain a county supported road on its city master plan.

Three Jailed In Burglary

A burglar alarm set off at the Warehouse Restaurant, 3450 Via Oporto in Newport Beach, led police to arrest two men and a boy on suspicion of commercial burglary, police said today.

In jail today in lieu of $5,000 bail was Boyd Gerald Condley, 36, of 1801 Whittier Ave., Costa Mesa. Released on his own recognizance was Richard Dale Throm, 19, of 1922 Meyer St. in Costa Mesa.

A third suspect, a 17-year-old Newport Beach boy whose name was not released because of his age, was in Juvenile Hall, police said.

Police said a burglar alarm set off about 7 a.m. Sunday at the restaurant led them to investigate a car found driving slowly around the area.

In the car, police said they found the three suspects along with burglary tools, CB radios and walkie talkies. The door of the restaurant had been unlocked but nothing appeared to be missing, police said.

Market Heist Suspect Held

A man police allege may be responsible for a $541 armed robbery of a Costa Mesa market in October is in custody today at city jail.

Investigator Gerry Thompson said 25-year-old Emery Royal Parker of Tustin also may be linked to other armed robberies in Huntington Beach and Fullerton.

Thompson said a robber used a pistol to hold up the Pantry Market at Baker Street and Fairview Road in Costa Mesa on Oct. 6, said Thompson.

Parker is in custody in lieu of $25,000 bail, police said.

Penny Ante Millionaire

UTICA, N.Y. (AP) — Edwin Rommel, a 50-year-old foreman, deposited one million pennies at the bank, the result of 20 years of collecting. Afterward, Rommel said, "I don't want to see another penny."

The 20,000 rolls of pennies, which had been in eight metal footlockers at Rommel's home, filled up 200 $50 bags and weighed an estimated 3½ tons.

"I don't know why I started saving them," Rommel said Monday. "I didn't start out saving. I got up to about 13 or 14 dollars and I said I'll shoot for a new car, and when I had enough for a car, I said, 'Oh, hell, I'll shoot for a million'."

Airlines' Landing Charges Doubled

By JOANNE REYNOLDS
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Commercial airlines using Orange County Airport will pay fees totaling an estimated $720,000 this year because county supervisors more than doubled the airlines' landing fees today.

Under the plan unanimously adopted by the board, landing fees will jump from 23 cents per 1,000 pounds of each aircraft landing at the airport, to 50 cents per 1,000 pounds.

The fee was last set in 1969. The change was sought by airport officials when supervisors insisted the airport should be self-supporting after passage of Proposition 13.

The current fee was expected to bring in $340,000 in 1979. The new fee will add about $380,000.

Of the total, about 60 percent will be paid by Air California, 33 percent by Hughes Airwest and seven percent by Golden West Airlines.

Robert Flores, representing Airwest, said the airline objected to the increase since the money is being raised in part to help pay for implementation of a master plan that is currently under debate.

He said he thought use of the landing fees for operating expenses was inappropriate since the fees couldn't be considered a stable revenue source.

But his views were disputed by Assistant Airport Manager Barbara Fox who described the use of the fees as a sound financial plan.

Ms. Fox earlier warned supervisors that some of the carriers — she didn't specify which ones — had objected to the increase claiming the money was being raised to "pre-fund litigation."

She denied that allegation while acknowledging that the lawsuits filed over airport noise have cost the airport and the county "hundreds of thousands of dollars."

Teachers' Walkout Now in Fifth Day

By RAYMOND ESTRADA JR.
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

The Huntington Beach Union High School District teacher strike entered its fifth day today with no end in sight to the current contract dispute.

District officials reported 507 teachers either on strike or ill Monday as substitute teachers manned classes where 28 percent of the school district's 20,900 students were absent.

Teacher and district negotiators are awaiting word from a state-appointed mediator on possible renewal of contract talks that broke off three weeks ago.

Teacher leaders say they are still demanding a five percent pay boost for the 1978-79 school year, a similar salary raise for 1979-80 if the state rules it is legal and binding arbitration in grievances.

But school board members are refusing to budge on their position that the state-imposed salary freeze must be lifted before a five percent raise is granted.

Trustees say they are staunchly opposed to binding arbitration since it might erode local control of schools.

No major strike violence has been reported but district officials have decided to bus some of the substitute teachers into the seven West Orange County high schools as a precaution.

Police patrols have watched substitute teachers board buses since last week when a rock was thrown at one of the vehicles. No one was hurt and no damage was reported.

Meanwhile, attorneys for the striking teachers are waiting for Citizens Legal Defense Alliance members to file legal papers for an anticipated court order aimed at halting the strike.

Bill Bianchi, spokesman for the district's 867 teachers, said teacher association officials have not officially received any legal notices concerning the strike.

Members of the Los Angeles-based citizens alliance say they plan to seek a temporary restraining order from Orange County Superior Court this afternoon to stop the walkout.

Residents To Appeal Bar Ruling

A fight is brewing in Santa Ana Heights over the hours of operation of a restaurant and bar that hasn't been built yet.

Monday, angry homeowners who lost their case in a 3-2 vote of the Orange County Planning Commission, vowed to appeal the matter to the County Board of Supervisors.

Commissioners Earl Wooden, Charles Bennett and Rex Gaede sided with the Spiller Development Company of Newport Beach which brought the proposal to the commission.

The firm was granted a variance for the restaurant, currently under construction on Irvine Avenue at Mesa Drive. The variance extended the operating hours from a 10:30 p.m. closing to a 2 a.m. closing.

Residents of the area, who presented commissioners with petitions in opposition to the late closing time, said they felt such a late hours are inappropriate to the surrounding residential properties.

One resident also noted that another existing restaurant on Irvine Avenue has the same operating hours, but has had three owners in the past six months. The resident claimed the change of ownerships was an indication of the lack of restaurant business in the neighborhood.

ANTHONY. .

Last March Orange County Superior Court Judge Philip Schwab dismissed all but one count in the indictments on the grounds that only eight members of the grand jury heard all the testimony in the case.

In a brief speech he said the county's most important problems will be in providing affordable housing, paying for indigent health care, solving problems at the airport and continuing county business under "the new fiscal rules we were given after Proposition 13."

Stability, Money Mark Leaders

NEW YORK (AP) — He's married, probably in his 60s, and probably makes more than $200,000 a year.

Chances are he has at least an undergraduate degree and he has spent his entire working life with one firm.

The surveys were conducted by Korn-Ferry International, a Los Angeles-based executive recruiting firm, and the Conference Board, a New York-based business research organization.

THE CHIEFS ARE paid handsomely for their efforts. According to a Conference Board poll of salaries at about 1,500 major U.S. companies, the average chief executive at a large manufacturing firm received $241,000 in salary and other compensation in 1977, the most recent year for which figures were available.

Korn-Ferry found that none of the chiefs was under 50 years of age, while 13 — or 52 percent — were between 60 and 64. Eleven of the chiefs were between 50 and 59 and one was in the 65-or-over class. Names were not disclosed in either survey.

ALL 25 CHIEFS are male and are married, although the Korn-Ferry survey did not poll the executives to find if any had been married more than once.

"There are obvious trends of stability" in the group, said the firm's vice president of research, John Sussman.

Eighteen of the executives never worked for another company, the survey said. The chiefs have been with their current employers from 15 to 40 years, with an average stay of 30.92 years.

J. ROBERT FLUOR, chairman of Irvine's Fluor Corp., an engineering and construction company, received $1,121,000 in 1977 to lead the chief executives' salary list.

The salary leader among industrial firms is 274th-ranked G.D. Searle & Co.'s president. Donald H. Rumsfeld.

According to Forbes magazine's annual salary survey, the drug firm's chief received $1,113,000 in salary, bonuses and other compensation in 1977. He is not an example of an executive who stayed at one company, having served as secretary of defense and as former President Ford's chief of staff, among other government jobs.

THOMAS A. Murphy, chairman of General Motors Corp., the nation's largest industrial firm, received $996,000

The chief executives in general are as well educated as they are well paid. Only four of the 25 checked in the Korn-Ferry survey have no college degrees, while 21 have undergraduate degrees and 13 completed graduate school.

Of those going to graduate school, five had master of business administration degrees, with three of the five M.B.A.'s coming from Harvard University. Five had degrees as masters of science.

Telefile Computer Reorganizes Staff

Telefile Computer Corp., Irvine, has announced a company reorganization appointment of a new president and an influx of orders that the company says should help offset fiscal year 1978 losses.

The last fiscal year, which ended on Sept. 30, was expected to show a loss in excess of $4 million, compared with a net profit of $1,126,867 the previous year, according to S.V. Edens, chairman.

Though in default of bank covenants, Telefile has been negotiating with its prime lender to modify its lending arrangements. It has no assurance that the negotiations can be concluded on an acceptable basis, Edens said.

The organizational changes include the setting up of a separate operation to accelerate the development and production of new computers.

Assuming the position of president and chief executive officer of Telefile Computer Products Inc. was David T. Scott, former president of Interstate Electronics Corp., Anaheim.

Scott has responsibility for day-to-day operations, including marketing, engineering, manufacturing and support activities of 15 percent to 25 percent in new housing starts this year from nearly 2 million in 1978. They also anticipate mortgage interest rates that may peak at 11.5 percent.

But the trend over the longer run is likely to be continued demand for homes. That is likely to squeeze young home buyers.

In recent remarks before the Senate Committee on Banking, Housing and Urban Affairs, Milton Hudson, a senior vice president at Morgan Guaranty Trust Co., noted that more than 40 million Americans will reach the prime home-buying age of 30 in the 1980s as the post-war babies grow older.

"TRANSLATING need into effective demand will involve overcoming some formidable hurdles if serious inflation persists, especially for the first-time home buyers."

Consumer Suits Mulled

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Supreme Court has agreed to decide whether consumers may sue when forced to pay higher prices because of alleged antitrust law violations.

Facing an issue carrying enormous impact for consumers and business alike, the court will review a ruling that only commercial entities, and not private consumers, have a right to sue in such cases.

The justices were urged by Justice Department lawyers and officials from 41 states to strike down the lower court's ruling in making the decision announced Monday.

The test case came from Minnesota, where Kathleen Reiter sued five hearing aid manufacturers in 1975. Essentially, her lawsuit charged that the manufacturers illegally placed anti-competitive restraints on distribution and sale of hearing aids.

THOSE ILLEGAL restraints hiked the prices consumers were forced to pay, said the suit, which was filed on behalf of hearing-aid buyers.

The section says that persons injured in their "business or property" may sue for triple damages under the law. The manufacturers interpreted that wording as meaning that only persons alleging that their business or commercial interests were injured may sue.

NOTING THAT the U.S. Supreme Court gave foreign countries the right to sue for triple damage last year under the Clayton Act, her appeal said:

Dividends Back

NEW YORK (AP) — Stockholders of American Home Products Corp., responding to urgent pleas from Manufacturers Hanover bank, have voluntarily returned 98 percent of the $7.8 million the bank computer erroneously paid in dividends.

The bank began sending out letters and Mailgrams last year after it discovered its computer sent inaccurate checks to 78,000 stockholders. A bank spokesman, who did not want to be identified, said all but $117,000 has been returned.

Grim Forecast

Tough '79 Due; Benefits Eyed

By SYLVIA PORTER

What will 1979 mean in terms of your pocketbook, job security, cost of living and other vital money aspects?

It will be the toughest year since the slump of the mid-1970s — and that was the most severe business downturn of the entire post-World War II era.

YET, IF YOU HANDLE IT right on your own, and if the White House remains determined to work with an equally determined Congress to tackle the fundamental challenge of inflation, it could turn out to be a rewarding year, too.

The question is not whether 1979 will be a tough year. It will.

It will be blotched by a rate of inflation averaging 8 percent or more. It will be threatened by an upsurge in joblessness and bankruptcies as the pace of business turns downward. It will be made even more difficult by unanticipated shortages of essential goods and services. It will be an economy laboring under the triple burden of an aged expansion, record interest rates and steep inflation.

The only questions:

— How grim will we permit these adverse forces to become?

— To what extent will we make progress in cooperating with other industrial nations in curbing inflation and stabilizing the monetary system so the system can support an ever-growing volume of world trade?

— Will President Carter have the guts to refuse to be lobbied by big-time labor and business into caving in on an anti-inflation program?

In the immediate future, here are pocketbook certainties and probabilities:

(1) THE COST OF LIVING WILL continue oppressively high and it's more than possible that with price pressures building in food, energy and other basic raw materials, we'll move back to double-digit inflation rates before any easing of inflation begins.

You can beat it by obeying the fundamental rules for buying food, clothing, shelter, other essentials. Shop the food specials, substitute and switch to less expensive but equally nutritious foods, take advantage of seasonal sales, look for bargains in discount stores, stock up on basic styles in clothing during clearances.

(2) Unless you're in a recession-proof field or are uniquely protected, your job will be less secure than in years. Honestly appraise your job security, your value to your company. If you're vulnerable, start to reduce your vulnerability.

(3) IF YOU'RE TRYING TO SELL a house in a suburb, you'll find this more difficult, because of the softening of the economy, the stiff cost and rising scarcity of mortgage credit, and the climbing costs of transportation. The same applies if you're trying to sell land or to build new houses.

But if you're on the buying side and have the funds to offset the adverse factors, you may find 1979 the best period in a long time.

(4) Borrowing money will be hard and costly, with high interest rates and the Federal Reserve System intent on clamping down on credit to brake inflation.

But saving money will bring you the highest returns in years, with record or near-record rates. What hurts the borrower, in short, helps the saver — a perfect illustration of the two sides of the meaning of 1979's economy.

Bank: Demand Remains Strong

High mortgage rates are having a braking effect on real estate activity in California, but these rates qhould begin to decline by the end of this summer.

However, strong underlying demand for all types of California real estate continues, according to Paul J. O'Brien, senior vice president and administrator of Security Pacific National Bank's real estate finance department.

"DEMAND FOR NEW BASIC family housing is still good and while the resale market is slow at present, it should improve in the latter half of 1979," he said.

California home prices are continuing to rise gradually because of continued increases in basic building costs, he said, although the rate of increase has slowed from the overheated pace of the last two years.

Higher loan costs, coupled with more expensive basic home prices, have priced some potential buyers out of the present market, O'Brien said.

But the trend toward two-income families has made the purchase of a first home more affordable for many families, he said.

TAKING STOCK

"Rates are at or near their peak and should begin to decline by the end of this summer, he said.

THE BEST AVAILABLE interest rate for single-family home financing should go down to the 9 percent to 9½ percent range, high by historical standards but below the psychological barrier at which consumers begin to postpone home purchases.

New commercial construction will lead the state's nonresidential sector in 1979 and 1980, he said. In particular, he cited projected gains in office building and industrial construction.

Assessing overall prospects for California's building industry, O'Brien sees the first half of 1979 as more difficult for builders than 1977 or 1978. "Fortunately, California's builders are much more liquid than they were during the 1974 crunch and are better able to withstand the carrying costs," he said.

IN THE SECOND HALF of the year, he foresees conditions improving somewhat for builders. He believes 1980 will be a better year for the construction industry than 1979.

He predicted strong construction growth, both residential and non-residential, in San Bernardino and Riverside counties and in San Joaquin Valley.

2 San Diego Hotels Planned

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Mayor Pete Wilson planned to announce an agreement today to build two major hotels near a $100 million convention center proposed in downtown San Diego.

The hotels, with a total of 1,500 rooms, have been drawn up by Hyatt Corp. and Holiday Inns Inc., with possibly another 500 rooms each to be added.

No specific sites have been picked for hotels or other businesses in a 16-block redevelopment project north of Broadway.

There is expected to be an increase in the city's hotel room tax to finance the convention center.

Tourism brought an estimated $1 billion to San Diego last year, compared with $400 million in 1972.
