Dollar Remains Steady

LONDON (AP) — Gold hit $850 an ounce in London today, surpassing the record set in European trading Friday.

London silver prices, riding the coattails of the bullion boom, rose to a record $50 an ounce from $49 at Friday's close.

The dollar firmed against all major European currencies, except for the strong British pound.

London's five major bullion dealers fixed the price for the afternoon trading session at $850. But it fell at the close to $838.

Gold bullion was quoted at $845 in Zurich, matching the record set Friday at Europe's main gold market.

The metal closed Friday at $840 in Zurich and $835 in London.

It hit a record of $838.78 in Hong Kong trading today, but fell to close at $827.78 in the Far Eastern market.

The gold price has soared by more than $640 an ounce since this time last year in a rush for the traditional haven in times of monetary uncertainty and political crises.

A New York investment adviser, James Sinclair, was quoted in The Times of London today as saying the price may reach four figures this year.

Sinclair said events in Iran and Afghanistan, as well as growing talk that the Soviet Union could invade Pakistan and Turkey, was sending "flight capital" from oil-rich Kuwait, Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates into gold.

The only slip by the dollar today was by one cent against the British pound, which cost $2.29 compared with $2.28 at Friday's closing.

Poems for Fee 3 Pen Verse to Fatten Purse

McFARLAND, Wis. (AP) — Read this story. Please take the time, And you'll soon see why it's written in rhyme.

It's about three ladies and Create-A-Verse, A business they formed to fatten their purse.

Pat Urso, Judy Salverson and Kathy Jerdee, will compose you a poem for a reasonable fee.

They'll pen Christmas cards, or announcements of birth, Heartfelt messages and rhymes full of mirth.

For anniversary, wedding or just to say thanks, You say what you want — they fill in the blanks.

For years they wrote poems just for the fun, Or for special friends whose hearts they'd won.

But then they took newspaper ads last fall, Off-r'ing their verse to one and to all.

They won't "go down as Elizabeth Browning," But they say their poems leave no one frowning.

Waldheim's Plan To Free Hostages?

By The Associated Press
U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim says he hopes a plan devised during his visit to Iran will lead to the release of the American hostages in Tehran. But the Iranian militants holding the Americans captive still insist the deposed shah must be returned before the hostages are freed.

"We have worked out a mechanism . . . and I hope this mechanism will make it possible to satisfy the government of Iran and lead to release of the hostages," Waldheim told reporters Sunday in New Delhi, India.

The U.N. chief would give no details of his plan. But after his visit to Tehran, Iranian officials said he proposed setting up a U.N. commission to investigate the Iranian revolutionary regime's charges against the deposed shah.

At the time, Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh welcomed the proposal. But he said the commission's findings would not be binding on Iran, and the hostages would not be released until the shah was returned.

Ghotbzadeh repeated this stand Saturday, telling a French interviewer that the return of the shah, now living in Panama, was the only way out of the impasse.

"It's easy," he said. "They give us the shah. We give them the hostages."

Missing Girl in TV Show Ohio Mom Begins Search in California

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Anita Smith of Dayton, Ohio says she is sure it was her missing daughter, Lori, pictured briefly in "Angel Death," a television special about the perils of the drug "angel dust," or PCP.

Lori's sister Joni said she thought her mother "was going off the deep end."

But I called her as soon as I saw the show and said, 'If that is Lori, we ought to hop on the first plane to California and find her,'" Joni said.

Mrs. Smith and Joni arrived in Los Angeles last week and together with Lori's father, Downey resident Bill Loyd, "Angel Death" producer John Cosgrove, director Dan Gingold and a film crew, began a search for the 18-year-old down the gritty streets of Hollywood.

The Emmy award-winning documentary "Angel Death" was produced by newly named MGM Studios head David Begelman and Dave Bell Associates.

The film crew accompanying the Smiths is from Bell Associates and is doing a documentary on young runaways, which was in the works before Mrs.

Smith came to Los Angeles.

Lori Jean Lloyd (her mother divorced the girl's father in 1964 and remarried) disappeared from the Dayton home she shared with two sisters and two brothers Feb. 11, 1976, after going for a nighttime walk to a nearby market.

Wife-rape Case Nixed

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — New Jersey's first wife-rape conviction has been thrown out by an appeals court on the grounds that the offense came before the state law against forcible sexual relations with a spouse.

The Appellate Division of Superior Court made the ruling on an appeal by Daniel Morrison, 35, of Medford Lake.

Morrison was found guilty in May 1978 of raping his estranged wife, Rosita, and was sentenced to 4-12 years for rape. Kidnaping and simple assault sentences were suspended.

back' thing," Joni said.

But until Mrs. Smith saw the documentary in December, there were no clues as to the whereabouts of her daughter. The family thought perhaps Lori had gone to California to locate her father but there was little to support the theory except a Levi skirt and knapsack discovered missing from Lori's home.

But a visit to the Clare Foundation found that the girl on the television screen had come to the center only a couple of times.

There were about 40 people in the room the night of the filming, but Cosgrove said attempts will be made to track as many of them as possible.

"This is not the usual runaway type of case for the simple reason that there's been no contact with anyone back home—not even girlfriends," said Sgt. Lloyd (See PCP, Page A2)

Caucus by Iowans

Parties Meet to Declare Choices

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — In living rooms, church basements and schoolhouses, Iowa Republicans and Democrats meet today to declare their presidential preferences in primary campaigns marked by sharp swings in public opinion polls.

The parties' precinct caucuses, most of which start at 6 p.m. PST, are the first official tests of the presidential campaign and a majority of the 10 Republicans and three Democrats seeking nomination campaigned hard in the state.

But not President Carter, who said the Iranian crisis required him to remain in Washington. Instead, he sent Vice President

Walter F. Mondale, members of the Cabinet, his wife Rosalynn, their children and his mother.

And on Sunday, Carter demonstrated again the ability of a president to capture attention when he appeared on NBC's "Meet the Press." He urged a boycott of the summer Olympics in Moscow and defended the policies pursued during his three years in the White House.

Carter's chief rival for the Democratic nomination, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, was also on nationwide television Sunday.

On ABC's "Issues and Answers," he said he would support an Olympics boycott, but called that proposal and the administration's partial embargo of grain sales to the Soviets "symbols" and added, "I don't think symbols are a substitute for an effective foreign policy."

Kennedy said Carter must receive at least 50 percent of the caucus votes to claim victory — a difficult goal in a state that traditionally elects many uncommitted delegates.

Kennedy found himself in the role of an underdog, a dramatic reversal from the days before he became a candidate and before the takeover of the U.S. Embassy in Iran, when the senator led Carter two-to-one in most polls.

A poll conducted Jan. 6-9 by the Des Moines Register gave Carter 57 percent popular support to Kennedy's 25 percent. Just a month before, each man had drawn a 40 percent rating.

Regardless of the outcome in Iowa, said Kennedy, he's "in the race" for the duration.

On the Republican side, former California Gov. Ronald Reagan still led in the latest Register poll but had slipped badly from his showing in an earlier one, taken before the televised debate earlier this month in which he declined to participate.

Several other Republican hopefuls predicted former U.N. Ambassador and CIA director George Bush, who campaigned hard and organized well in Iowa, will finish ahead of Reagan.

Appearing Sunday on the CBS program "Face the Nation," Bush said no one should expect him to win but "we might do better than expected."

Sen. Howard H. Baker Jr. told a rally in Des Moines that "I hope you'll turn out in massive numbers. . . . That's the only way Howard Baker is going to do well."

Former Gov. John B. Connally of Texas wound up his Iowa campaign Saturday after a 40-hour marathon stint that demonstrated his stamina and, Connally hoped, provided an obvious reminder that Reagan will be 69 next month.

The other active Republican candidate in Iowa was Rep. Philip Crane of Illinois, who was scheduled to attend the opening of a GOP caucus in Story City.

The third man in the Democratic race, Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. of California, campaigned briefly in the state, mostly to get himself an invitation to join Carter and Kennedy in a debate. But the debate was canceled and Brown has since urged supporters to back uncommitted slates.

An ABC News survey of 92 of Iowa's 99 GOP county chairmen taken Jan. 14-17 and released Friday showed Reagan leading Bush 24 to 21 percent. Baker had 13 percent, Connally, 10; Crane, 5; Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas, 3; and Rep. John Anderson of Illinois, 1. The others were undecided.

In a poll of 90 of 99 Democratic county chairmen, Carter was favored by 45 percent, Kennedy 28 and Brown 3. Ten percent were uncommitted and 14 percent were undecided.

The weather tonight in Iowa is forecast to be mostly cloudy and colder, with a chance of snow in northern areas and low temperatures ranging from 10 to near 20.

Saudis Tell Of Buildup

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Saudi Arabia has told the United States and Britain that the Soviet Union and Cuba reinforced their military presence in neighboring South Yemen in recent weeks, Arab diplomatic sources said today.

They said the Saudis told Washington and London that the alleged communist build-up might prompt them to put their armed forces on alert soon.

The sources said the Saudis informed the American and British governments that hundreds of Cuban troops and dozens of Soviet generals and experts have been airlifted to the South Yemen capital of Aden since the Kremlin's military intervention in Afghanistan.

Arrests Spoil Game

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Three men suspected of smuggling marijuana were arrested as they prepared to watch the Super Bowl, police said.

Narcotics officer Gregory Corrales said the three had "made themselves comfortable, waiting for the football game to start" when police kicked in the door Sunday and served them with a search warrant.

A search of the apartment produced marijuana which police said had a street value of $96,000.

Intruder Scared Away By Scream

A man garbed only in sweat pants and a blue towel wrapped around his head threatened a Laguna Beach woman in her bedroom early Sunday morning, but was frightened off when the woman screamed.

Police said the 24-year-old woman, who lives in the north part of town, had left the door to her house unlocked while visiting neighbors late Saturday night.

When she returned home hours later, the suspect was hiding in the house, police said.

He appeared at the woman's side after she had gone to bed and began to fondle himself.

Police said the strangely garbed suspect told the woman to "Strip or I'll kill you," at which time the terrified woman screamed for help.

The suspect fled before officers arrived at the house.

Police are seeking a man between 25 and 30 years of age, standing six feet tall and weighing 180 pounds.

Meanwhile, Tehran Radio said Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, the leader of the Iranian revolution, approved a proposed amendment to Iran's new Islamic constitution to give the Sunni Moslem sect equal constitutional standing with the majority Shiite sect, the state religion.

It was an attempt to appease three of the nation's rebellious ethnic minorities, the Kurds, Baluchis and Turkomans, who are demanding autonomous home rule for their areas.

In another development, the Soviet Embassy in Tehran denied Soviet troops in neighboring Afghanistan were a threat to Iran and emphasized the Kremlin's "friendly approach" to Iran.

But Tehran Radio said Ghotbzadeh told the ruling Revolutionary Council the troops in Afghanistan pose a serious danger to the East Iranian border provinces of Sistan and Baluchistan.

Tito 'Good' After Leg Amputated

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — President Josip Broz Tito spent a quiet night and was in good condition today following the life-saving amputation of his left leg, doctors reported.

Yugoslavia's 87-year-old leader was operated on Sunday for the second time in eight days to prevent fatal gangrene poisoning due to blockage in the arteries of the leg.

"The general condition of President Tito is good," his doctors said in a medical bulletin issued today.

They said his pulse, blood pressure and temperature were within normal limits.

Belgrade remained calm despite speculation that the Russians might try to coerce Yugoslavia back into the Kremlin's orbit if Tito, the pioneer of independent communism, died.

Antiaircraft guns were set up at the Belgrade and Zagreb airports, but this appeared to be part of a nationwide, low-priority "vigilance" program ordered after the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan.

In Bonn, the West German Defense Ministry denied German newspaper reports that the Soviets were reinforcing troops in Central Europe because of Tito's condition.

"A strengthening of Warsaw Pact troops in Central Europe or unusual troop movements cannot currently be observed — also not against Yugoslavia," a spokesman said.

"We are with Tito as always," the newspaper Borba said today. "Tito is with us and in us."

It published a telegram from one of his World War II Partisans, a machine-gunner at a famous 1941 battle, who said: "Your deeds will live forever but you must recover."

"We are Tito's, Tito is ours," a chorus of Bosnian children sang before the announcement of the operation on the government television-service.

5-car Crash Victim in Mesa Hospital

A 19-year-old Carlsbad man remained in fair condition today at UC Irvine Medical Center in the wake of a five-car collision in Costa Mesa Saturday, officials said.

Police said Jorge Sandoval suffered leg injuries in the 8:30 p.m. crash on the southbound Costa Mesa Freeway at Mesa Drive, which blocked traffic for several hours.

Police reports indicate Sandoval's pickup truck collided with the rear of another car, setting off a chain reaction of rear-end smashups involving three additional vehicles.

The only other person injured was Sandoval's brother Jenaro, 23, also of Carlsbad, who was treated for facial cuts, but wasn't hospitalized, police said.

Arab Envoys Discuss Afghan Moves

By The Associated Press

In closed-door meetings and hurried jet flights, Arab envoys were engaged in intensive diplomatic activity in the Middle East today that informed sources in Beirut said was aimed at forging a common front on the issue of the Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan.

Afghanistan's seven rebellious Moslem factions, meanwhile, were reported trying to unite for a "holy war" against the Soviet occupation army.

The Mideast Arab states and other nations of the Islamic conference are scheduled to meet in Islamabad, Pakistan, on Saturday to discuss the situation in Afghanistan, where Soviet and Afghan government forces are trying to put down a rebellion by fundamentalist Moslem tribesmen.

Several Islamic states, including Saudi Arabia, have already announced they will be boycotting the summer Olympics in Moscow in protest.

U.S. ambassadors delivered personal messages from President Carter to the leaders of Bahrain, Oman and Sudan today dealing with the Afghan crisis, according to official reports from those governments. The contents of the messages were not revealed.

Meanwhile, British envoy Douglas Hurd, minister of state for foreign affairs, met with officials of the United Arab Emirates in that Persian Gulf oil state. Hurd has already visited Bahrain and Qatar.

Radio Tehran reported that an official of the Afghan Islamic Organization in the Iranian capital told it discussions were under way among the rebel groups to form a single guerrilla front.

"The Afghan revolutionaries' duty is to expel the Soviet forces from Afghanistan through jihad (holy war), not through negotiations," the official reportedly said.

The Moslem rebels in Afghanistan are divided along tribal lines. They have been fighting their separate wars since the first communist coup in April 1978 and were reported to control half the country or more.

Hit by Auto, Girl, 9, Dies

A 9-year-old girl was killed Sunday night after she was struck by a car at the intersection of Beach Boulevard and Cerritos Avenue in Stanton, police reported today.

Capt. Lyle Stoddard said Heather Snyder of Stanton died at Anaheim General Hospital at 5 p.m., about two hours after the accident. The driver of the car, identified as Ricky Hyman, 20, of Camp Pendleton, wasn't charged, police said.

But the necessity for unification and coordination became apparent last month when the Soviet Union sent as many as 100,000 troops into Afghanistan to crush the rebellion and support the coup that eliminated President Hafizullah Amin and replaced him with Babrak Karmal, a more pliable Russian proxy.

Pentagon sources in Washington said the fighting since the Soviet intervention has been fiercest in the northeast part of Afghanistan, bordering the Soviet Union, Pakistan and China. The sources in Washington said the Soviets may need 5,000 reinforcements there to make up for Afghan army defections to the rebels. More Soviet troops were landed at Kabul airport over the weekend, according to American reporters expelled by the new government.

The Kabul correspondent of Prensa Latina, the Cuban news agency, reported that an Afghan official told him "strong contingents of Afghan troops were moving to the 50-mile-long Chinese border because 'for several weeks suspicious troop movements have been detected on the Chinese side.'"

The Cuban correspondent said the Afghan government also fears an attack across the Pakistani border.

"According to official spokesman, American, British and Chinese advisers are training a contingent of more than 70,000 soldiers in Pakistan for an operation against Afghanistan," the Cuban report said.

Newport Mooring
Rate Hike Mulled

Orange County Supervisors are to decide Tuesday how much to raise the annual rates on the 18 county moorings in Newport Beach.

In two previous discussions, supervisors agreed that the mooring rates should be hiked, but deadlocked over how much.

Newport Beach officials have said they will take a second look at the rates of 572 city moorings should supervisors vote to raise fees for the county moorings.

A spokesman for the only supervisor who hasn't voted on the issue, Edison Miller, said today that Miller's main concern was with what he calls the "black market" in moorings.

"There's a significant black market going on in moorings right now," said Chris Loumakis, Miller's aide.

Besides subleasing the moorings, boat owners can substantially hike the sale price of their vessels if they have moorings, Loumakis said.

Presently, a mooring can be transferred only if someone buys the vessel moored there.

Loumakis said Miller may propose adding a no-transfer clause to the mooring agreements.

But Loumakis added that Miller is favoring a raise toward the lower end of the $11 to $18 per foot figures that supervisors deadlocked over last week.

Previously, Supervisor Thomas Riley, whose district includes Newport Beach, cast his vote for a raise from the present charge of $6 per vessel foot per year to $11.

He was supported in that effort by Supervisor Philip Anthony.

But Supervisor Ralph Clark stood by the $18 per foot rate hike suggested by county General Services Agency officials.

Supervisor Harriett Wieder, whose district includes Huntington Harbour, also voted for the $18 figure.

Voters Enjoy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Channel-switching voters enjoyed a quasi-debate on the eve of the Iowa caucuses as President Carter and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy vied for the attention of national television audiences.

Appearing simultaneously on competing television networks Sunday, Carter and his main rival for the 1980 Democratic presidential nomination spent half an hour answering questions.

Occasionally, the coinciding programs offered a sort of arm-length debate between the president and the Massachusetts senator, who face each other and California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. in Iowa's Democratic caucuses Monday.

Tough Defense Vowed

Carter Lists National Priorities

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter pledged today to work for a "strong, unsurpassed defense capability" in his fourth year in office and said he expects progress this year in reducing inflation, which he called the nation's most serious economic problem.

"We must pay whatever price is required to remain the strongest nation in the world," the president said in a 75-page State of the Union message he sent to Congress.

Carter said the price of remaining the strongest nation has increased because of the growing military might of the Soviet Union and its readiness to use their military strength, which has "been made all too evident in Afghanistan."

He said U.S. steps to penalize the Russians for their intervention in Afghanistan demonstrate that the Soviet Union "will pay a heavy price for its aggression in terms of our relationship."

Carter said he will offer only a few new initiatives to Congress in 1980 because of the importance of enacting proposals he has previously sent to the lawmakers, especially those aimed at creating energy security.

"In the coming legislative session, the last in this presidential term, I am deeply committed to finishing the agenda that I have placed before the Congress," he said.

Carter said action on his uncompleted agenda is "absolutely essential for the nation's well-being."

However, he said he will make several proposals, including programs to expand youth employment, reauthorize general revenue sharing for state and local governments and require utilities to switch from oil to coal.

The president repeated an earlier pledge to increase defense spending by more than 20 percent above the rate of inflation over the next five years.

He defended his economic policies, saying that the past three years have been ones of "progress and achievement for the American people," although he acknowledged much more has to be done.

He predicted flatly that "inflation will slow this year" and should be even lower in 1981. The nation's inflation rate is about 13 percent and most

LONDON (AP) — Gold hit $850 an ounce in London today, surpassing the record set in European trading Friday.

London silver prices, riding the coattails of the bullion boom, rose to a record $50 an ounce from $49 at Friday's close.

The dollar firmed against all major European currencies, except for the strong British pound.

London's five major bullion dealers fixed the price for the afternoon trading session at $850. But it fell at the close to $838.

Gold bullion was quoted at $845 in Zurich, matching the record set Friday at Europe's main gold market.

The metal closed Friday at $840 in Zurich and $835 in London.

It hit a record of $838.78 in Hong Kong trading today, but fell to close at $827.78 in the Far Eastern market.

The gold price has soared by more than $640 an ounce since this time last year in a rush for the traditional haven in times of monetary uncertainty and political crises.

A New York investment adviser, James Sinclair, was quoted in The Times of London today as saying the price may reach four figures this year.

'80 Newport Challenge

Battling City Groups Outline Issues

By JOANNE REYNOLDS
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

The year 1980 was labeled as one of challenge in weekend meetings hosted by two Newport Beach groups that figure to be battling each other in the April City Council election.

Friday night, members of the Newport Harbor Area Chamber of Commerce held their dinner meeting at which newly elected President Richard Spooner was installed.

He told the 400 people in attendance that the chamber "has been trying to raise the voice of reason" in city government and would continue to do so.

Saturday, members of Stop Polluting Our Newport (SPON), held a day-long conference, "Which Way Newport?" that concluded with a dinner speech by Mayor Paul Ryckoff.

Ryckoff, who will seek a third council term in April, told the more than 200 people at the SPON dinner they should look for council candidates who are consistent in the views they represent and not candidates who "just take a stand because it's election time."

Ryckoff was one of five council members to participate in the SPON conference which opened with two afternoon panel discussions. Councilman Ray Williams, who is also running for re-election, along with his colleagues Paul Hummel, Don Strauss and Evelyn Hart served as panelists.

The point of the SPON conference, according to the group's president, Jean Watt, was to provide information so that voters could decide what issues are significant and how those issues could be solved.

Ryckoff in his speech that concluded the SPON event, praised the current council majority, which he leads, for its independence of the interests backed by the chamber and developers such as the Irvine Co.

He also charged that the pending ballot measure sponsored by the chamber, which would move city elections from April of even numbered years to November when they would coincide with general elections, is merely an attempt by the chamber to regain the control of the council majority.

At the chamber dinner, Spooner derided the current council's attitude toward continued development of Newport Beach.

"This is a free society. People don't need a permit to relocate," he said.

Spooner said he doesn't ad-

By The Associated Press
U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim says he hopes a plan devised during his visit to Iran will lead to the release of the American hostages in Tehran. But the Iranian militants holding the Americans captive still insist the deposed shah must be returned before the hostages are freed.

"We have worked out a mechanism... and I hope this mechanism will make it possible to satisfy the government of Iran and lead to release of the hostages," Waldheim told reporters Sunday in New Delhi, India.

The U.N. chief would give no details of his plan. But after his visit to Tehran, Iranian officials said he proposed setting up a U.N. commission to investigate the Iranian revolutionary regime's charges against the deposed shah.

At the time, Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh welcomed the proposal. But he said the commission's findings would not be binding on Iran, and the hostages would not be released until the shah was returned.

Ghotbzadeh repeated this stand Saturday, telling a French interviewer that the return of the shah, now living in Panama, was the only way out of the impasse.

"It's easy," he said. "They give us the shah. We give them the hostages."

A spokesman for the militants holding the hostages, reached by telephone Sunday at the occupied U.S. Embassy, said: "Nothing would possibly lead to the release of the hostages but

DAILY IN BRIEF

Highlights from today's world and national news developments.

Dallas Busing Plan Survives

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Supreme Court cleared the way today for increased busing of public school pupils in Dallas as a method to provide racial balance in the nation's eighth-largest school district.

By a 6-3 vote, the court decided not to review an appeals court ruling that gave the go-ahead for busing an estimated 20,000 students at an annual cost of $3.8 million.

Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr., writing for the dissenters, said the increased busing could backfire and lead to further exodus by whites from the city's public schools. Powell noted that since 1971, the percentage of white students in Dallas schools dropped from 69 percent to 33.5 percent last year.

Brown Sees A-Plant

SEABROOK, N.H. (AP) — Gov. Edmund Brown, the 1980 presidential campaign's most vocal foe of the Seabrook atomic power plant, came face to face with the target of his opposition today.

After a 20-minute tour of the construction site, Brown renewed his promise to close Seabrook if he is elected president.

When asked if the tour changed his mind, the California governor said, "not at all."

"The country has to change pace. The risks from nuclear power are too great," he said.

Exports Blocked

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration today revoked the licenses for the export of spare computer parts for a controversial Soviet truck plant.

The action was the latest in a series of steps taken by administration officials to try to penalize the Soviet Union for its military intervention in Afghanistan.

The revocation of the export licenses will block the shipment of high-technology goods intended for a truck factory begun in the early 1970s with U.S. help on the Kama River in the Ural Mountains of northeastern Russia.

Iran Plane Believed Down

By The Associated Press

An Iran Air Boeing 727 aircraft on a flight to Tehran from Mashhad in western Iran with 124 persons on board is missing and believed to have crashed, it was reported today.

An air traffic controller at Tehran's Mehrabad airport confirmed that Flight 291, which left Mashhad at 4:40 p.m. local time, had lost contact with the control tower.

The official Pars news agency said the flight was nearly four hours overdue and there were 116 passengers and eight crew members aboard.

Slain SJC Girl Identified

A 17-year-old San Juan Capistrano girl was identified today as the victim of a fatal stabbing by her boyfriend who then killed himself with a shotgun blast early Saturday in Dana Point.

Orange County coroner's investigators said Connie Paulson was found dead at 4 a.m. Saturday of multiple stab wounds. She was also shot in the head with a shotgun blast after she was stabbed to death, investigators said.

Sheriff's investigators said it is believed Miss Paulson was stabbed by her boyfriend Dennis Michael Spires, 20, of Dana Point who was found dead from a self-inflicted shotgun blast to his neck.

Sheriff's Lt. Wyatt Hart said Spires had driven Miss Paulson to his home at 33651 Big Sur St. where he stabbed her and then committed suicide after a lovers' quarrel earlier.

The lovers' quarrel also left Rick Goddard, 19, of San Clemente, with multiple stab wounds. Goddard was reported in stable condition today at South Coast Community Medical Center.

Sheriff's investigators said Goddard drove Miss Paulson away from a Capistrano Beach party at about midnight after she quarreled with Spires.

Goddard drove the girl in his van to an isolated spot on Pacific Coast Highway where Spires found them and reportedly began stabbing them.

Investigators said Goddard fled on foot to seek help. Sheriff's deputies were notified and began a search for Spires and Miss Paulson who had apparently left the scene in Spires' compact pickup truck.

At 4 a.m., deputies found the dead pair in the front seat of Spires' truck parked near his home.

Funeral services for both victims are still pending.

Tunnel Dug To Reach Drug Store

Newport Beach police today sought the burglars who tunneled into a drug store to steal narcotics.

The break-in was discovered Saturday at Westcliff Pharmacy, 2043 Westcliff Drive.

According to police reports, the thieves got into an unlocked furnace room from which they tunneled into the pharmacy's storage room.

The burglars then tunneled into the main store in an apparently successful attempt to bypass the store's burglar alarms.

According to the crime report, the drugs taken were worth about $500.

Thieves Take Wheels From 2 Porsches

Porsche drivers Dennis Bramnick and Phillip Crowley of Newport Beach got some bad news this weekend.

Both men told police they found their cars sans wheels resting on stacks of newspapers Friday morning.

The two sets of wheels and tires carried an estimated value of $4,100, according to police reports.

Bramnick said the car was parked near 2244 Alta Vista when the theft occurred and Crowley said his vehicle was in its parking space at 851 Domingo Way. Both locations are in the Eastbluff area.

Thief Takes Shingles Off Roof

Newport Beach police said they figure it'll cost Frank Becker about $1,000 to put back the shingles that a thief apparently tried to take off the roof of his Corona del Mar home last week.

Becker said he found the shingles pulled off a room he's having added to his home at 3412 Quiet Cove and stacked on the edge of the roof.

Becker reported the attempted theft Thursday.

Governor Firm

CHICAGO (AP) — Illinois Gov. James R. Thompson says he is disturbed by Chicago's slowness to help out its own schools and that the state will not advance or lend the schools any more money until there is progress on the home front.

Condition Good

Leg Removed To Save Tito

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — President Josip Broz Tito spent a quiet night and was in good condition today following the life-saving amputation of his left leg, doctors reported.

Yugoslavia's 87-year-old leader was operated on Sunday for the second time in eight days to prevent fatal gangrene poisoning due to blockage in the arteries of the leg.

"The general condition of President Tito is good," his doctors said in a medical bulletin issued today.

They said his pulse, blood pressure and temperature were within normal limits.

Belgrade remained calm despite speculation that the Russians might try to coerce Yugoslavia back into the Kremlin's orbit if Tito, the pioneer of independent communism, died.

Antiaircraft guns were set up at the Belgrade and Zagreb airports, but this appeared to be part of a nationwide, low-priority "vigilance" program ordered after the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan.

In Bonn, the West German Defense Ministry denied German newspaper reports that the Soviets were reinforcing troops in Central Europe because of Tito's condition.

"A strengthening of Warsaw Pact troops in Central Europe or unusual troop movements cannot currently be observed — also not against Yugoslavia," a spokesman said.

"We are with Tito as always," the newspaper Borba said today.

"Tito is with us and in us." It published a telegram from one of his World War II Partisans, a machine-gunner at a famous 1941 battle, who said: "Your deeds will live forever but you must recover."

"We are Tito's, Tito is ours," a chorus of Bosnian children sang before the announcement of the operation on the government television service.

Saudis Tell Of Buildup

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Saudi Arabia has told the United States and Britain that the Soviet Union and Cuba reinforced their military presence in neighboring South Yemen in recent weeks, Arab diplomatic sources said today.

They said the Saudis told Washington and London that the alleged communist buildup might prompt them to put their armed forces on alert soon.

The sources said the Saudis informed the American and British governments that hundreds of Cuban troops and dozens of Soviet generals and experts have been airlifted to the South Yemen capital of Aden since the Kremlin's military intervention in Afghanistan.

The newly elected chamber president wasn't the only speaker at the Friday meeting to criticize the current council.

Builder T. Duncan Stewart, named the chamber's citizen of the year, poked fun at the current council majority in a poem, one line of which noted, "Be it ever so Hummel, there's no place like home."

Stewart, a home builder who has long been active in civic affairs and an advocate of solar energy, was given the award by Ray Watson, a former chamber citizen of the year and a former president of the Irvine Co.

Council Eyes $1.8 Million Yard Project

Newport Beach City Council members tonight will consider a $1.8 million project to improve the city corporation yard at Superior Avenue and 15th Street.

Proposed is the first phase of a project that could cost an estimated $4.1 million to complete.

The first phase construction will be paid for out of funds set aside over the past several years, according to City Manager Robert Wynn.

The project calls for a 24,000-square-foot expansion of existing facilities which house the city's general services department.

If councilmen approve the project, an architect will be sought to prepare preliminary designs.

According to city schedule, construction should begin this fall with completion by summer of 1981.

Jimmy Durante Remains Stable

SANTA MONICA (AP) — Two weeks after being hospitalized for pneumonia, entertainer Jimmy Durante remained in stable condition today, but his vital signs continue to deteriorate.

The 86-year-old comedian and actor is still semi-conscious and suffering from lung congestion, according to hospital spokeswoman Vicki Fairley.

economists think it will drop to just under 10 percent by the end of 1980.

Carter said his budget for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1 will continue his policy of spending restraint and result in the smallest budget deficit in seven years.

On foreign affairs, Carter said one immediate and pressing objective is to secure the release of the American hostages in Iran, indicating once this is done the United States would move to renew ties to the Iranian government.

He said the Iranians should realize that "the threat to them comes not from American policy but from Soviet actions in the region."

Carter's written message is the first of four documents he will submit to Congress detailing his goals for 1980. He makes his State of the Union address to Congress on Wednesday night, presents his fiscal 1981 budget next Monday and will make his annual economic report sometime next week.

Meanwhile, Tehran Radio said Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, the leader of the Iranian revolution, approved a proposed amendment to Iran's new Islamic constitution to give the Sunni Muslim sect equal constitutional standing with the majority Shiite sect, the state religion.

It was an attempt to appease three of the nation's rebellious ethnic minorities, the Kurds, Baluchis and Turkomans, who are demanding autonomous home rule for their areas.

In another development, the Soviet Embassy in Tehran denied Soviet troops in neighboring Afghanistan were a threat to Iran and emphasized the Kremlin's "friendly approach" to Iran.

But the necessity for unification and coordination became apparent last month when the Soviet Union sent as many as 100,000 troops into Afghanistan to crush the rebellion and support the coup that eliminated President Hafizullah Amin and replaced him with Babrak Karmal, a more pliable Russian proxy.

Pentagon sources in Washington said the fighting since the Soviet intervention has been fiercest in the northeast part of Afghanistan, bordering the Soviet Union, Pakistan and China. The sources in Washington said the Soviets may need 5,000 reinforcements there to make up for Afghan army defections to the rebels. More Soviet troops were landed at Kabul airport over the weekend, according to American reporters expelled by the new government.

Trial Testimony

Suspect in Shock Following Arrest

Former reporter Thomas Barley was seemingly in a state of shock and unable to recollect events after his arrest in the stabbing death of his wife, a Santa Ana police investigator testified today.

Clark W. Moorhouse told the seven-man, five-woman Orange County Superior Court jury that Barley, 51, was "extremely nervous" when he was interviewed several hours after Catherine Barley, 46, was stabbed outside a Santa Ana coffee shop last May 26.

"The impression was he couldn't believe he was there," Moorhouse testified in apparent reference to the police station.

Further, Moorhouse testified Barley said in the interview that he could not believe his wife was dead. He reportedly told investigators "I just saw her out side," Moorhouse told the court.

Barley, who formerly covered the county court beat for the Daily Pilot, was arrested at the murder scene. The crime was witnessed by at least 14 persons.

Barley has pleaded innocent by reason of insanity. It is the contention of defense attorney George Chula that the former news reporter was suffering diminished mental capacity when the knife attack took place.

Moorhouse also testified that Barley complained of chest and lung pains after his arrest and was examined at UC Irvine Medical Center before booking into Orange County Jail.

The investigator also told the court that a search of an Orange apartment where Barley was living produced a sheath to the letter opener used in the attack on Mrs. Barley.

Chula attempted to win suppression of the sheath based on the assertion that the search of the apartment was illegal. Judge Mason Fenton however, decided that the investigators did have permission to search the apartment.

Newport Council Race Starts Slow

The campaign for the Newport Beach City Council is off to a slow start.

So far, the only candidate to file nomination papers is Mayor Paul Ryckoff who will seek a third term representing the 5th District.

Filing for the campaign closes on Jan. 31.

City Clerk Doris George said six others have taken out papers, but haven't filed them yet.

District Two — Richard Clucas, photographer, 4403 Seashore Drive; David Shores, advertising executive, 12 Tribute Court, and Ann Sueve Iverson, housewife, 243 Walnut St.

District Five — Philip Maurer, retired teacher, 225 1/2 Diamond Ave. Ryckoff also lives on Balboa Island at 1200 S. Bay Front.

District Seven — Ray Williams, incumbent, 1723 Fort Sheffield Place and John Cox Jr., 1305 Outrigger Drive.

The only incumbent who apparently won't run for another term is Don McInnis of the second. If McInnis doesn't file nomination papers by Jan. 31, filing in that district will be extended five days.

In Newport Beach, candidates run from districts, but are elected at large for four-year terms. There are seven city council districts.

Area Newsman Dies

'Hub' Keavy, 77, Cancer Victim

By The Associated Press
Veteran newsman Hubbard "Hub" Keavy, a former chief of the Los Angeles bureau of The Associated Press for 25 years, has died of lung cancer. He was 77.

Keavy, a Laguna Beach resident, was admitted to the South Coast Medical Center, South Laguna, Friday and died Sunday afternoon. He is survived by his second wife, Jane, and his two sons, Mike and Tim.

Rosary will be recited at St. Catherine's Catholic Church in Laguna Beach at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday.

Services will be held at the same location, 890 Temple Terrace, at 11 a.m. Thursday.

The family requests donations be made to the American Cancer Society or a favorite charity.

After retiring from the news cooperative in 1967, Keavy became executive director of the Laguna Beach News-Post. He left this position after launching a syndicated column of "Good News" items.

Even after being hospitalized with lung cancer in April 1979, Keavy's news instincts were always with him. The bed-ridden man called the AP office at San Diego to report a news event at the hospital.

He was tall, pink-cheeked, silver-haired and impeccably dressed — from bow tie to gleaming oxfords. Before coming to Los Angeles from the AP's Chicago bureau in 1929, he had worked on seven Midwestern newspapers.

For 13 years in the Los Angeles office he was feature editor and writer of a Hollywood column.

He was known for his knack of getting the facts behind the publicity, and telling them in his light-hearted manner. And as bureau chief, Keavy encouraged simplicity, informality and brevity in writing.

NEWSMAN DIES
Hubbard Keavy

In 1958 he headed a systemwide AP campaign credited with markedly improving the news service's writing. For several months before retiring he was AP executive representative in California and Nevada.

He presided over the founding of the AP's first state organization of newspaper editors, California AP News Executive Council, which set the pattern for others around the country.

Keavy was born in Minneapolis, Minn. on Dec. 24, 1902, of Irish ancestry. His newspaper career began in Sioux Falls, S.D. — where at the age of 12 he became a delivery boy for the Argus-Leader.

After a year at Columbus College there, he worked first as a reporter for the Sioux Falls Press, then as reporter-columnist for the Argus-Leader and assistant telegraph editor of the Des Moines Tribune. After jobs with the Milwaukee Sentinel, Cleveland Times, and Toledo News-Bee, he was hired as a city editor of the Bloomington, Ill., Pantagraph.

After joining the AP in Chicago in 1928, Keavy married Harriett MacGraw of Bloomington, whose brother Robert later became mayor of that city. Mrs. Keavy died after her husband's AP retirement.

He was founding president of Los Angeles' Catholic Press Council, for a time regent of Immaculate Heart College and board member of the Los Angeles Press Club and its 8-Ball Welfare Foundation.

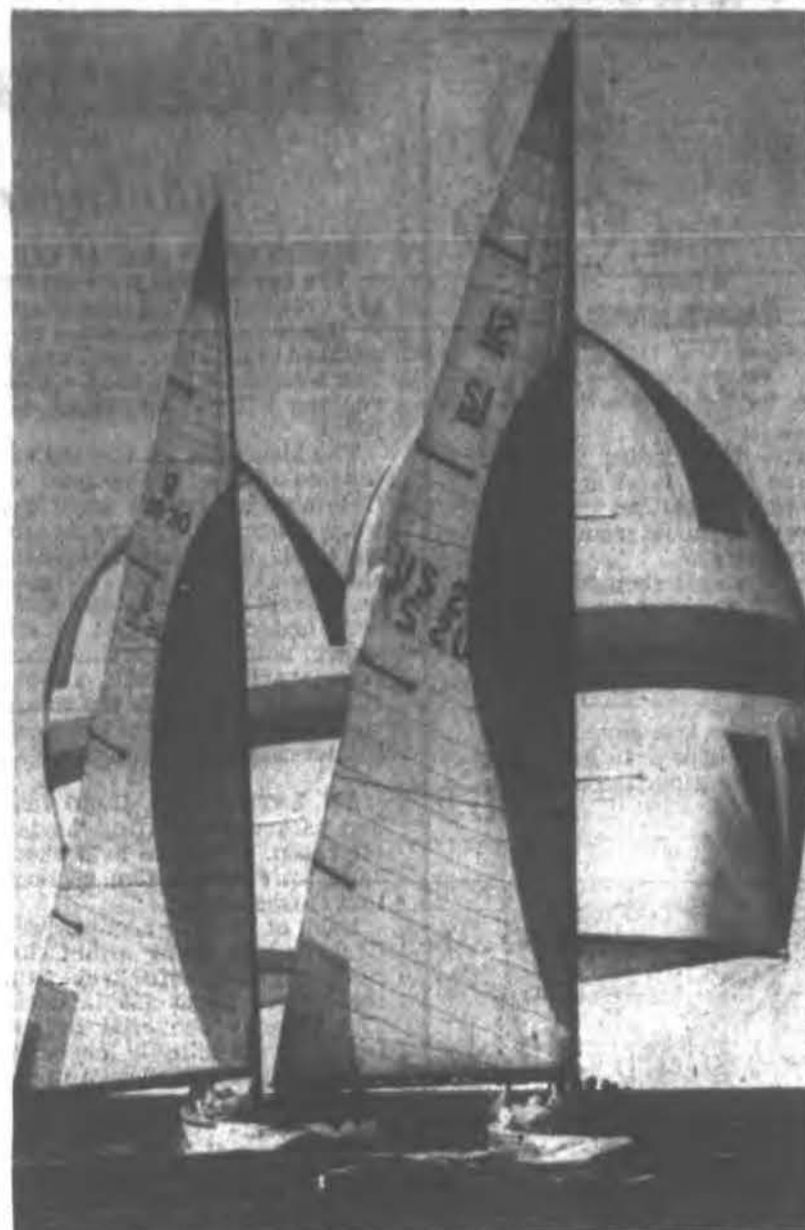

At a 1967 testimonial dinner at the Ambassador Hotel which was attended by hundreds of newspaper and civic officials and show-business personalities, the Press Club's printed program said: "His personal qualities — unfailing warmth, endless enthusiasm, a rare gift for humor and a way of doing things with a flair — have made him a friend to cherish."

Keavy was also responsible for creation of a standard writing test used to appraise job applicants. First tried in Los Angeles, the test or variations of it are now used in many AP bureaus.

His writing advice to staffers was simple: Write as you talk, plainly and informally. Relax at the typewriter, but don't take the easy way and crank out the first approach that enters your head. Exercise your imagination. Seek the fresh, the novel.

"Think about every word you write," Keavy said, "and avoid nice, satisfying little ruts. Use short words, short sentences, short leads — and keep the stories short."

He told youngsters, "Develop a style, and keep your eyes off the clock."

Jury Deliberates In Hashish Case

A federal court jury has begun deliberations in the trial of four men with ties to the Laguna Beach Hare Krishna Temple who are charged in a multi-million dollar hashish oil smuggling scheme.

Joseph Davis, 30, of Laguna Beach, is accused of being the ringleader of a group that allegedly sent couriers posing as U.S. businessmen between Pakistan and the U.S., carrying hashish oil in typewriter cases.

Also on trial in connection with the ring are Douglas H. Snyder, 26, Jack Carreras, 32, and Lawrence D. Montgomery, 30.

In all, 11 men were named in a federal grand jury indictment handed down last November.

They are Roy C. Richard, 30, Joseph Fedorowski, 28, Robert Carreras, 36, and Patrick Kenealy, 30.

Three others named in the indictment, Robert Shea, 40, Dean Greenberg, 28, and Gary Roberts, 29, remain at large, according to Assistant U.S. Attorney Eric Doberteen, who is prosecuting the case.

At the time the indictments were handed down, Laguna Beach police Chief Jon Sparks noted that 10 of the 11 indictments were one-time members of the International Society of Krishna Consciousness and nine of those ten were associated with the Laguna Beach temple of the sect. Richard was at one time president of the Laguna Beach temple.

However, officials of the sect claim none of the men named in the indictment were members in good standing at the time the charges were lodged in federal court.

Investigators allege that the oil was obtained from a supplier in Pakistan who would only deliver it if the courier presented a photograph of Davis.

In the two-week trial which was given to the jury for deliberation Friday, Doberteen alleged that various "front" companies were established to launder the proceeds from sale of the hashish oil and to give members of the group seemingly legitimate sources of income.

Investigations of Davis, Richard and Fedorowski was launched more than two years ago because of their ties to a business firm linked to the slaying of Fountain Valley drug dealer Stephen John Bovan, who was gunned down outside a Newport Beach restaurant.

Onofre Workers Return

SAN ONOFRE (AP) — Construction workers who defied a federal court order to return to work Friday finally did so today at the San Onofre nuclear plant's $2.5 billion expansion project.

A spokesman for the Plumbing, Pipefitting and Refrigeration union said "it looks everybody's back to work" but that their grievance remained to be resolved.

The wildcat walkout began last Thursday after 13 pipefitters were fired, allegedly for leaving work without their supervisors' permission. Those men claimed working conditions were unsafe.

By late Thursday, about 2,000 men refused to work and almost 1,800 of the 2,910-member force remained off Friday. Dexter Levy, a business representative of the union's Local 230 in San Diego, said grievance talks were scheduled with Bechtel Power Corp., major contractor on the work expanding the plant from one to three nuclear generating units.

The talks will include several other complaints, Levy said, and "we will be appearing in court Wednesday to answer the restraining order." U.S. District Judge Edward J. Schwartz scheduled the San Diego hearing to decide if a temporary injunction should be issued to prevent further work interruptions.

Bechtel obtained the temporary restraining order late Thursday, claiming the walkout cost the San Francisco firm $750,000 daily.

If such a claim were upheld by the judge, Levy said, "that would virtually break our local." He and other union officers pleaded with the members over the weekend to return to work.

Brakes Hit In Vegas Plane Mishap

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Air California officials say a loss of brakes apparently caused a Boeing 737 to slide off a runway at McCarran International Airport, injuring six of the 26 persons aboard.

The plane, flight 805 to Orange County Airport and Sacramento, was carrying 21 passengers and five flight attendants Saturday when it plunged 50 feet off the wet runway while taxiing for takeoff about 7:10 a.m.

One passenger, Edward Spatola, 31, of Stockton, Calif., was admitted to Desert Springs Hospital in stable condition with possible internal injuries. The other five injured persons, including four flight attendants, were treated and released from local hospitals.

The plane was taxiing toward a turnaround area to get on runway 25 at the airport, but it failed to negotiate the turn and plowed about 50 feet off the taxiway into a field muddied by two days of rain.

"It looked like it was a pretty good jolt when the plane hit the field," said airport spokesman J. J. Balk.

The plane came to rest with its nose gear collapsed and the nose of the plane on the ground.

Young, Old Both Enjoying New Life

By GARY GRANVILLE
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

If not troubled times, they weren't by any means the best of times at Orange County's Youth Guidance Center a year ago.

For one thing, counselors at the center were joining their counterparts at other county juvenile detention facilities in a series of sick-ins and other maneuvers aimed at bettering their lot.

Among other things, the counselors said that, when their wayward charges weren't hammering away at each other, they were teeing off on them.

WORSE, THEY CHARGED, those doing the assaulting were not being penalized or punished for their fistic transgressions.

The demoralized counselors also complained about short-circuited career opportunities and threatened Proposition 13 rollbacks that could cost some of them their jobs.

Too, it was a time of transition in the legal system that governs youthful wrongdoers' relationships with law and justice.

For heavy offenders, the new rules were tougher. For lesser offenders, the law was more forgiving, especially for those charged with such wrongs as truancy and running away.

And the center was caught in the middle. It was a detention facility without a defined role in a system undergoing change.

BUT TIMES HAVE CHANGED. Trouble is "out" at the Youth Guidance Center. The work ethic is "in."

No longer is life on the inside spending late afternoons in front of a day room TV or out shooting baskets.

No longer is life on the inside freedom to break rules and to go unpunished.

And no longer is life on the inside sometimes spent watching county work crews haul rubbish from the six-acre site in Orange.

THE YOUTHFUL inmates are doing the work—plus.

Not only are they tending the grounds, waxing the floors and doing kitchen chores, they're also helping to maintain the banks of the nearby Santa Ana River.

Superintendent Richard Duckworth says installing the work ethic in the center in Orange has helped lift the counselors' morale as well as that of the juvenile inmates.

"It's a community kind of thing, this beautifying of an area and keeping house. It's meaningful work for the kids," says Duckworth.

HE POINTS out that, since the work emphasis got under way early last September, the number of escapes has dropped from 11 or 12 a month to just two or three.

Duckworth also mentions that some of the youngsters already talk about some day coming back to see how large the 84 trees they recently planted on the grounds have grown.

"It's the kids seeing for themselves what they can do that is so important. It makes them feel good about themselves," Duckworth says as he discussed the work ethic at the center.

OTHERS HAVE words of praise for the program.

County Environmental Management Agency official Harold Marsh says, "The kids have done a good job pulling weeds and cleaning rubbish from the river."

"And it's helped us free our crews for other work. We're down to bare bones. So all the help we can get is appreciated."

Duckworth gives credit to former Juvenile Court Judge William Murray, Chief Probation Officer Michael Schumacher and "our entire staff" for devising the plan that pulled the center out of its doldrums.

THE CENTER is where up to 80 boys from 13 to 18 years old who have broken the law are sent to serve sentences that range up to 90 days.

It was Judge Murray, too, who reached out from his courtroom to make it clear to youths in custody that rule violators will be punished and that those who skip can expect to serve added time when returned.

That firmness of hand along with the work program has helped make the center the place to be among the young in trouble with the law.

SURE, THEY SAY, it's work, and a guy has to do what the man says.

But it's outdoors, the chow is good and there's plenty of it. There's pretty good action in the game rooms at night. And now they're going to start growing their own vegetables.

Beatle 'Aid' McCartney Fan Slain

MIAMI (AP) — Kenneth Alan Lambert had 30 cents in his pocket and visions of rescuing rock star Paul McCartney from jail when friends dropped him off at Miami International Airport, detectives said.

Hours before police shot him dead Saturday evening, Lambert told friends he was flying to Tokyo to help McCartney beat some marijuana charges. Dade County detective Jim McHugh said Sunday. (Related story, Page B8)

"You can't hardly do that with 30 cents in your pocket," McHugh said.

"Make sure you watch the news tonight," McHugh said the 29-year-old driver told his pals as they parted a last time.

But Lambert had no plane ticket. He did have a Bible and a toy pistol, and only enough money for a local phone call, McHugh said.

"Apparently he was a big Beatles fan," the detective said. "He'd told his friends that one of three things would happen: He'd get rich and famous, he'd go to jail or he'd die."

Lambert was right. Dade County officers killed him as he waved a toy pistol and cursed the clerk of an airport gift shop. Witnesses and police thought the pistol was real.

He may have been planning to sneak aboard a plane or hijack it to Tokyo, McHugh said. Lambert was arrested for trespassing at the airport in 1974 when he tried to get on a plane without a ticket, the detective said.

An argument apparently was touched off when he dropped a Bible behind the cashier's counter, then shouted at her to give it back and pounded the toy gun on the counter, police said.

Frightened customers fled as rookie police officer Marsha Rogers arrived and told him to put the gun down.

He refused and ran to the back of the shop, police said. Ms. Rogers fired, but missed. Two more Dade County officers arrived and opened fire, one bullet fatally wounding Lambert in the chest.

Police refused to say which officer fired the fatal shot.

ERA in Spotlight

ATLANTA (AP) — The Equal Rights Amendment, kept in the wings by legislative committees since 1973, was at stage center today for a Senate debate as the 1980 General Assembly began its second week. Both pro-ERA and anti-ERA spectators were expected to pack the Senate galleries during what was predicted to be a long debate.

Super Slop Solution

SUPER SLOPOVER DEPT. — Now, ladies, you have the big chance of the year. The Super Bowl is history. Another football season has blown its final fuse. Now maybe you can get the old man out from in front of the television for a few hours every day.

Consider his condition. The slumped shoulders from trying to watch instant re-plays. The paunchy midsection created by too many suds and too little lawn mowing. Eyeballs that look like roadmaps from being glued to double-headers every Sunday.

CLEARLY, NOW IS the time to get him moving. Body shops all across our coastal region appear to be ready, willing and able to do the job. Just consider the ads from outfits willing to whip the old boy back into shape.

Here's one now from a Huntington Beach-Fountain Valley weight place.

It offers a four-week course that will transform your TV tube addict into a body that is "slender, firm, slim, sensuous."

Another body shop operating in the El Toro-Mission Viejo area promises to slice 10 percent off the price while they slice "unwanted pounds and inches" from your former football viewer.

In Costa Mesa, there's this physical palace that wants to get your old geezer in permanent shape by offering the rigors of exercise "two years for the price of one."

Another Tustin body place advertises in screaming headlines, "Three Months for $38."

AND IF DURING the past months, your football fanatic has seen no light except the pale flickering of the boob tube, there's a cure for that pasty skin, too. Another Huntington Beach outfit offers tanning booths. They claim he won't even perspire in there — just turn brown.

Trouble is with all these physical fitness offerings, they seem to be pointed toward the wrong people. Instead of showing a blubber-encased grid fan who was transformed into Charles Atlas, the advertisements picture beautifully slim women. One shows a shapely girl in a white leotard. Another features a reclining blonde. Still another has a photo of a slim young woman wearing boxing gloves. Yes, boxing gloves.

THE WOMEN, YOU FIGURE, don't need this weight reducing pitch. They've already fretted themselves thin during the football season just wondering if the old boy is permanently frozen in one position in front of the TV tube.

So the physical fitness places ought to switch their pitches so the male football fans are induced to get in there and start circulating their tired blood.

After all, ladies, it's only seven months until the next football season starts.

Bleachers Fall; 162 Die 2 Killed In Town Rioting

SINCELEJO, Colombia (AP) — The death toll in the collapse of a crowded wooden grandstand at a bullfight today, police said. The weekend accident at a bullfighting left 500 spectators injured.

The bleachers, an upward extension of the grandstand at Colombia's largest bullring, were supported by long beams sunk into the ground. Officials said recent heavy rains softened the ground and the beams gave way under the weight of the crowd. Witnesses said that when rain started to fall, people rushing to the back of the stands where there was an overhead shelter caused the collapse.

AN ESTIMATED 40,000 fans had packed the bullring Sunday afternoon. Witnesses said about 3,000 were in the five sections that crashed down.

Each of the five sections was designed to hold about 500 persons, but witnesses said there were about 700 in each. The tragedy occurred as the fans were excitedly cheering scores of youths and men in the ring running from several bulls before the start of the bullfights.

"We were at the eastern end grandstand when suddenly I noticed that one of the sections began to fall backwards, and then the other four fell, trapping thousands of persons," said one of the spectators.

Some of the victims were impaled on the splintered beams; others were trampled by panic-stricken survivors.

MANY OF THE VICTIMS were children who were seated around the ring and hit by falling debris.

All afternoon and through the night the sirens of ambulances and other vehicles helping with the victims waited through Sincelejo and neighboring towns.

The Sincelejo hospital and a local health center were unable to handle all the casualties. Many were taken to the neighboring towns of Corozal, Cerete and Sampues.

About 300 of the injured were treated and released but 200 others were hospitalized in very serious condition, the Red Cross said.

POLICE CORDONED off the Sincelejo hospital to keep back thousands of persons seeking information about relatives and friends. Many in the crowd were hysterical.

Public Health Minister Alfonso Jaramillo mobilized government health personnel in the region and ordered the collection of emergency stocks of medicine and blankets.

Sincelejo, 320 miles north of Bogota, is near the Caribbean coast and the capital of Sucre Department, an agricultural state. The city has a population of about 200,000.

Masked Smoocher

"Who was that masked man, Momma?" four-months-old Brad Kelley might have asked following this incident at an Indianapolis Save-the-Mask rally for Clayton Moore, 64. As Momma probably told Brad, "That was the Lone Ranger, son." Moore must now wear mask-like glasses under a court order protecting copyrights involving Lone Ranger accessories.

IDABEL, Okla. (AP) — Some businessmen armed themselves with rifles today following a night of shooting, rioting and burning by several hundred angry blacks that left two people dead and four others wounded.

An auxiliary policeman and an unidentified black man were killed in the rioting that broke out after a black youth was beaten to death early Sunday near a predominantly white night club, authorities said.

THE BODY OF another black man, believed to be in his 20s, was found this morning in tall weeds behind a service station that had been vandalized by the mob Sunday night. The cause of death was not made public immediately.

While reinforced police patrolled the mostly-quiet streets today, authorities said the discovery of the body increased tensions in black neighborhoods. Some businessmen armed themselves with rifles before opening their stores this morning.

Eight persons were reported arrested in connection with the violence.

ONLY 25 STUDENTS out of a normal enrollment of about 500 showed up for classes this morning at the high school. Attendance also was down at the junior high and the three elementary schools.

The blacks began protesting after the 15-year-old black was found beaten to death early Sunday near a bar — patronized mainly by whites — which has been the scene of several recent racial confrontations.

Straw Poll

Carter Edged
By Kennedy

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy has narrowly defeated President Carter in a California Democratic Party straw vote, and California Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. was a distant third choice in his home state.

Spokesmen for all three candidates claimed victories of one sort or another from the balloting Sunday among 1,471 delegates to the California Democratic Party annual convention.

Kennedy won 623 votes, or 43 percent. Carter had 538 votes for 36 percent and Brown 207 votes for 14 percent. Another 59 votes were cast "uncommitted" or for minor candidates.

IN REALITY, THE BALLOTING had no meaning whatsoever, except for the news stories it generated on the eve of today's Iowa caucuses, which are the first step toward selection of the first 30 delegates to the Democratic National Convention next August.

Kennedy, who was in Washington, said he was "delighted" with the results.

"It clearly demonstrates that members of the Democratic Party in the nation's largest state are unwilling to accept four more years of current policies and are looking for new leadership in the 1980s," the Massachusetts senator said.

BUT KENNEDY'S VICTORY was not the landslide many observers had predicted earlier. California Democratic Party Chairman Richard O'Neill, who said he is neutral in the race, said if the balloting had been late last year, Kennedy would have won handily.

"I don't know if any of the candidates won," O'Neill said, adding that Kennedy's victory "is not as important as if he'd gotten over 50 percent."

But in sharply contradictory statements, spokesmen for all three candidates each claimed the results were better than they expected.

"I think the fact that at the height of the international crisis, with this convention heavily weighted with people in political office, where the incumbency of the presidency is an additional advantage, the fact that we came out ahead here is something close to a miracle," said former New York congressman Allard Lowenstein, who led the Kennedy effort.

"WE THINK IT'S VERY significant that the Carter-Mondale campaign made such a great comeback," said Lees Francis, national staff director of the Carter campaign.

"The people who come to conventions are activists. They're the kind of people who ought to be in Kennedy's back pocket. And yet we fell short by only 39 votes," said state Assemblyman Michael Roos, Carter's California campaign chairman.

Brown's chief spokesman, chief of staff Gray Davis, who earlier had said the straw vote was meaningless, also saw encouragement in Brown's 14 percent showing.

"THE GOVERNOR DID better than either of his rivals anticipated. We made only a very modest effort. Dick O'Neill said at the start of the convention we'd be lucky to get 10 percent. We improved on that quite a bit and we're pleased," Davis said.

The straw vote results conflicted with results reported Saturday of a mail poll of about 1,000 contributors to the California Democratic Party. Carter won the mail ballot with 57 percent to 36 percent for Kennedy and 7 percent for Brown.

California's 306 national convention delegates will be selected in a June 3 primary, and O'Neill said he organized the straw vote only to "liven up" an otherwise routine party platform convention.

Although none of the three presidential candidates appeared in person, O'Neill did live on the convention. It attracted more than a dozen top political celebrities representing the three candidates and a delegate turnout about double normal for the convention.

APPEARING FOR CARTER, who was opposed by feminist leaders for not doing enough to enact the Equal Rights Amendment, Health and Welfare Secretary Patricia Harris declared that the Carter Administration "has been the best in history in its record of appointments of women, blacks, Hispanics and other minorities."

Among a half-dozen standins representing Kennedy, economist John Kenneth Galbraith condemned Carter for allowing inflation to get out of control and then attempting to create a recession to cure the inflation.

"It is the final irony that, for a year, having tried to produce a recession, they haven't even achieved that," Galbraith said.

Brown — expecting a last place finish — made substantially less effort to win straw vote support. And his chief spokesman, his father, former Gov. Edmund G. "Pat" Brown, took a more light-hearted approach.

3,500 Cheer Wedding
Of Mayor Feinstein

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The champagne flowed freely, the orchestra played "People" a crowd of at least 3,500 cheered when Mayor Dianne Feinstein and her new husband Richard Blum cut their seven-tiered, rose-covered wedding cake.

The couple was married Sunday in the mayor's flower-bedecked City Hall office. Following the private Jewish ceremony performed by Rabbi Martin Weiner and cantor Martin Feldman, the dome-shaped City Hall rotunda was opened to about 1,000 invited guests and later to the public.

THE BUOYANT mayor, wearing a jade-colored, knee-length silk designer dress, had invited the whole city to nibble hors d'oeuvres and sip free champagne to celebrate her marriage to Blum, a wealthy San Francisco businessman.

Some people clicked cameras, asked for autographs and handed the mayor cards and gifts while others threw specially-packaged Ricearoni — "The San Francisco Treat" — on the couple.

ONE WOMAN walked through the rotunda with a loose tree branch used in a floral display. "I'm going to press the leaves for souvenirs," she said matter-of-factly.

"Just think what it would have been like without the Super Bowl," said Charlotte Mayliard, a friend of the couple, noting the wedding was scheduled at the same time as the popular football game.

THE NEWLYWEDS then cut the three-flavored cake while pink, heart-shaped confetti descended from the ceiling on the delighted crowd.

Violinists and harpists on the balcony played "Love Is a Many Splendored Thing" for the bride and "You Light Up My Life" for the groom.

The couple climbed stairs to the balcony where the mayor threw the traditional bouquet and the garter as the people cheered approvingly.

THE GROOM PAID for the elaborate reception, which also included elegant floral displays and 160 cases of California champagnes and wines.

"I'm much more nervous than I thought I'd be," the 46-year-old mayor said moments after the brief, 15-minute ceremony attended by about 20 family members and friends.

"I don't feel like a mayor. I feel like a woman who's just been married... I'm very happy." The tall, dark-haired Blum, dressed conservatively in a dark, pinstriped suit, appeared to take his status more calmly, saying, "You expect a few in-laws and extended families at weddings. In this case, the extended family is all of San Francisco. I'm delighted."

GUESTS INCLUDED singer Joan Baez, state Supreme Court Chief Justice Rose Bird and Gina Moscone, wife of the late mayor, George Moscone.

Mrs. Feinstein was appointed mayor in 1978 after Moscone's assassination. She won a full term last month in a runoff election.

Detente Urged

Energy War Seen

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The publisher of a respected oil industry survey, who sees the world energy situation turning into an escalating economic war for many nations, says a hemispheric energy conference should be called for the Americas.

Dan Lundberg, who publishes the weekly Lundberg Letter, said in a telephone interview Sunday that the aim of the conference should be discussion of a "regional energy detente."

While calling for a system of long-delayed assistance to less fortunate nations in the Western Hemisphere, Lundberg stressed that his intent in calling for such a conference is not to split up the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries cartel.

"People are wrong if they say the intention of OPEC to aid the Third World is just window-dressing," Lundberg said. "It is real and also an effort to develop political and social leverage that could be used against the industrialized nations."

Therefore, Lundberg said, the disparity between the oil haves and have-nots in the hemisphere mandates some form of wartime-style cooperation on energy and development.

Road Financing Must Be Shared

Approval of two adjacent major residential developments in the foothills between El Toro and the Cleveland National Forest is going to bring more traffic problems to clogged El Toro Road.

One of the proposals calls for the development of 960 residential units on property at the Glenn Ranch.

The second calls for 706 units across the street in the Saddleback Meadows project, Orange County's first own-your-own lot mobile home park.

Together, the two projects will bring more than 1,600 new homes to a rural area in which El Toro Road provides the only access.

El Toro Road has only two lanes in the development area and cannot handle the expected increases in traffic.

As a result, Orange County supervisors have served notice to the developers that they will have to help finance road improvements.

Even though it is a departure from past methods, the road fund program appears necessary because of reduced government revenues after the passage of Proposition 13.

But it is no panacea.

Both the developments mentioned here are to offer units which supposedly are affordable to wage earners in the county's medium income range.

Costs for the improvements will surely be passed on to homebuyers, with the risk of increasing the price spiral.

Solutions are not simple but there seems to be little choice in the tightening economic times for local government.

Truth Too Dangerous

The "kill the messenger" syndrome still flourishes in Iran and Afghanistan but, these being more civilized days, the offended victims of bad news are settling for exile rather than beheading of the messengers — in this case American journalists.

Our journalists were welcome enough in Iran when they turned their television cameras on shouting mobs outside the American embassy where our hostages were held.

Apparently the misguided leaders of that land had persuaded themselves that a first-hand view of their "revolution" would inspire the American people to rise up in their defense.

It didn't work of course.

But the real problem arises when the journalists, apprised of anti-Khomeini uprisings in the north, turned their cameras and microphones in that direction.

When crude censorship of television broadcasts of the counter-revolution was ineffective, the journalists were summarily ordered out of the country.

Similarly, in Afghanistan, there was no move to impede reports and filming of the arrival of Soviet troops to "help" that small nation. But when reporters revealed it was the Soviets who had ordered the execution of the leader they supposedly had come to help, and went on to report Soviet losses in fighting with the tough rebels in the mountains, the Americans once more were ordered out.

Of course, with a totally controlled press in both these countries and in the Soviet Union, the people of these lands can simply be fed the lie that the journalists were really spies and agitators in disguise. They'll never know the difference.

There are those in this country who seem to feel the press sometimes goes too far in unveiling the flaws in our own government and the warts on our leaders.

True, the press sometimes is shrill. But is enforced silence the better alternative? Apparently the Soviets and the Iranians believe so. Sudden doses of truth can be very upsetting to a subjugated people, and very dangerous to totalitarian government.

Susie in Color?

It soon became apparent that the new Susan B. Anthony dollar was one of the government's more unfortunate blunders.

The coin is so much like a quarter no one wants to have anything to do with it.

But the fact is the U.S. Mint figured it could save about $50 million a year by not having to print so many $1 bills, which have a lifespan of only about 18 months.

The Anthony dollar, by comparison, should be good for some 15 years.

One alternative would be to add plastic fiber to the dollar bill to make it last longer, but that's expensive too.

Now the Mint has come up with what may be the answer — change the color of the Anthony dollar from silver to bronze or brass by adding a new alloy, to make it more distinctive.

Theory is that very few people mistake pennies for dimes, despite the similar size. It's the color that does the trick.

Well, maybe it's worth a test. But the size confusion will persist.

A. It's the salt content. The Pacific side is less salty, so lighter.

Q. Who was the so-called "father of capitalism"?

A. Adam Smith. He never used the word capitalism, incidentally. Karl Marx coined it.

Q. Do ants have eyes?

U.S. Technology — Soviet Deceit

WASHINGTON — In his righteous indignation at the Russian rape of Afghanistan, Jimmy Carter has understandably chosen to ignore the valuable help given to the Soviet invasion by the United States: Many of the Russian soldiers now occupying Afghanistan rode across the border in trucks that were built with American technology, supplied in the holy name of detente.

Though initial responsibility for the American technical aid — and the outrageously lax safeguards under which it was provided — can be laid at the door of Richard Nixon and Henry Kissinger, the Carter administration cannot escape a good share of the blame. When a middle-echelon Commerce Department official blew the whistle last year on the Soviet's misuse of U.S. technology, his warnings were disregarded by his superiors and he was denounced as a troublemaker.

THE PRESIDENT tacitly admitted that U.S. technical aid is important to the Soviets when he announced that shipments of sophisticated industrial equipment would be suspended as a result of the aggression in Afghanistan. He declined, however, to go into specifics, which would have made clear how he and his predecessors were duped by the Russians in a single-minded U.S. pursuit of detente.

From confidential documents and knowledgeable sources who talked to my reporters Dale Van Atta and Mark Zusman, I can now provide details of the way Carter's policymakers were led down the primrose path by the Kremlin's palace elite.

Back in the early 1970s when Secretary of State Kissinger was seeking glory as the architect of detente, the export of advanced industrial machinery, including IBM computers, for the Soviets gigantic Kama River truck factory was approved at the highest levels. At the time, some officials, including then-Secretary of Defense Melvin Laird, voiced concern that the Russians might use the central Asian truck plant — the biggest in the world — to produce military equipment.

HEAVENS TO BETSY, I HAD NO IDEA A TEDDY BEAR COULD BE SO NASTY! MIND IF I HIDE OUT WITH Y'ALL FOR A WHILE?

KISSINGER brushed the misgivings aside. A confidential Commerce Department memorandum states that in 1971 Kissinger "ordered the Secretary of Commerce to grant three pending applications" for construction of the Soviet plant. Another secret memo set the final value of U.S.-licensed equipment and technology at $1.5 billion. A major U.S. news magazine described the Kama River plant as "a living symbol of how detente can work."

Others — notably our Western European allies — were not so sure. On March 20, 1975, Kissinger cabled U.S. officials in Paris on the best way to allay such doubts. "Kama trucks are not tactical military vehicles with cross-country capability," the secret cable said. "Some may ultimately be outfitted with front-wheel drive for muddy or icy environments. However, trucks will not be equipped for deepforwarding or have other features typical of military models."

Kissinger's cable concluded that "we see little likelihood of diversion" to military uses. The American officials were instructed to belittle any odious comparison between the Kama plant and a Czechoslovakian truck plant that produced military vehicles — and for which a U.S. license was rejected in 1970.

DESPITE Kissinger's uncharacteristic confidence in the Soviets' good faith, Commerce Department officials were alerted by intelligence officials last year to the fact that the Russians were producing 100,000 more engines than trucks at Kama River, and were warned that the engines "undoubtedly were to be used in military trucks."

When this serious breach of the intent of the U.S. licensing program was pointed out by a Commerce Department analyst, Larry Brady, his boss, Stanley Marcuss, and then-Secretary Juanita Kreps gave Congress an astonishing explanation: Technically, the Russians hadn't violated the licensing agreement, because they had never signed the standard promise that the U.S.-supplied technology would not be used for military purposes. That part of the license application had mysteriously been left blank.

FOR CALLING attention to the serious weaknesses in the technological export program, Brady was demoted, ostracized and threatened with firing. Brady's superiors have also circulated secret internal memos intended to discredit his whistleblowing.

Because Nixon and Carter officials naively discounted the possibility of Soviet skulduggery, the Russians were able to invade Afghanistan in American-engineered trucks. Detente is dead, but the Afghan people will be haunted by its ghost for years to come.

Boat Owners Slip Away From Tax Burden

Those who enjoy visiting the marinas around the state on a Sunday afternoon to view the array of wealth represented by the thousands of boats moored within them, may also wonder at times how so many people can afford them. Certainly such thoughts must pass through the minds of some as they gaze at the magnificent luxury yachts which cost well into the hundreds of thousands.

Now it comes out that maybe some who own these expensive boats really can't afford them. For the State Board of Equalization, which enforces the tax laws, reports that many of the boat owners are evading personal property and sales taxes.

The boats are supposed to be assessed by the county assessors each year. But the assessment date falls on March 1 and, reportedly, many boat owners avoid the hooks of the assessors by suddenly finding an urgent need to put to sea, thus escaping the property tax.

ANYWAY, it would seem with more than 550,000 registered in California the assessor has an impossible job to identify and appraise each boat.

Actually, as it works out, it apparently isn't as big a job as the numbers would indicate, since most of those registered are small craft, not even moored in marinas, but transported to the water when the mood for a "cruise" strikes the owners.

Of the total number, however, a substantial percentage are larger craft, where assessments become more than minimal.

Some of the foxier large boat owners attempt to escape

California taxes entirely by registering their boats in Oregon, a state that has no personal property tax on boats or sales tax.

THUS A BOAT, even though purchased in California, can evade both taxes by registering the boat at time of acquisition with an out of state address such as Oregon.

But California tax authorities have caught on to the game and joined with Oregon officials to hunt down the tax jumpers. Allen Swenson, Coos County tax assessor, reports that many boats giving their home port as Coos Bay have never been there but are actually based in Washington and California and even Texas and Florida.

Searches by California officials find many of these boats snugly harbored at Newport Beach, San Diego, Santa Barbara and in San Francisco Bay marinas. While they estimate the total of such boats to be as high as 600, it might be double that for all they know.

CALIFORNIA LAW provides that boats purchased here for use here are subject to the 6 percent sales tax. It also provides that any boat in California waters for more than 30 days is subject to the property tax.

In the case of a yacht costing $400,000 the sales tax would amount to $24,000 and the annual property tax would probably be around $13,000. Last year the state discovered 100 boats improperly registered. The boats averaged $78,000 in value. This represents tax evasions totalling $500,000 in sales tax alone, plus property taxes which would total even more.

For those who get caught it means a 10 percent penalty, plus interest on the sales tax, plus the property taxes. If fraud is proved, the penalty is 25 percent.

Windsor Story Takes Glamor Out of Romance

If you want a jolly good read, I recommend unreservedly The Windsor Story by J. Bryan III and Charles J.V. Murphy (Morrow, 639 pages, $17.50).

This is a mean-spirited and slightly caustic book; but so are all those gossip columns we hate and read. Joe Bryan was a friend of the Windsors, and the book is apparently mostly his work. There are liberal quotes from two earlier friendly books about the Windsors, written by Murphy for the Luce publications.

There is no doubt of the book's authenticity. These lads know as much about the Windsors as George IV knew about Mrs. Fitzmaurice. It abounds with little snippets of info. (Winston Churchill loved the King's "The Woman I love" speech, and he couldn't have picked a better spook.)

BEFORE THIS book was published, last September in fact, I wrote a column about this tedious couple called "The 'Abject' King." More than a couple of people took offense, including one very eloquent and literate lady. People still wish to believe in the romance of the century, as they wish to believe that Jack Kennedy had something to do with Camelot.

The couple was anything but the romance of the century, as the book makes amply clear. Windsor was madly in love with his wife, and never stopped worshipping her. She was not so constant. The marriage, according to the authors, nearly went bust when the Duchess fell for a rampant queen named Jimmy Donahue.

Jimmy was a Woolworth heir, and an amusing fellow. He was known around New York as Mrs. Spellman because he and his mother had the cardinal of that name to dinner every Thursday night, more or less. Jimmy once turned up at one of these soirees in drag, according to the book.

MRS. WINDSOR nipped about El Morocco and suchlike with Jimmy till all hours, meantime putting a KEEP OUT sign on her bedroom door. The Duke is reported to have asked her piteously, "Darling, are you going to send me to bed in tears again tonight?"

Not a pretty story, nor was the life of the Windsors. It was not a love story, but a textbook sado-masochistic relationship. Madame, who is still with us, was tough as a wrangler's behind. The Prince-King-Duke couldn't find his way to the john without firm guidance. They fit each other like Box and Cox.

Bryan and Murphy are clearly on the Duke's side. They reveal an ugly, awful, strident American bitch who actually believed she could become Queen, not only for a day, but forever. She never did understand that the Church of England was bound to find two divorces a bit much in a monarch's wife.

SHE NEVER understood the pain she gave the Queen Mum,

Quotes

"If all printers were determined not to print anything till they were sure it would offend nobody, there would be very little printed."

Benjamin Franklin

who is still with us. The Windsor affair, quite literally, broke her heart. She did not wish to become queen, and this is no malarkey. But much more, she did not wish the Duke's brother to become King. She was right. Their life as rulers was a continuous hell.

The Duchess never forgave the King for not putting in the fix that would make her Queen. He remained a failure to the end in her eyes. Windsor took it all, because in his heart that's the way he wanted to be.

THE DUCHESS is near death these days, according to reports. She is almost wholly in the hands of a French lady lawyer, who is even tougher than she was. One of the puzzles of the Windsor story is the generosity with which the French treated them — no taxes and a peppercorn rent on a Paris mansion. Devotees of royal matters are speculating that the Wicked Witch will leave Windsor's jewels to the French government, which would cause a mighty terrible fuss in England. Among them are Queen Alexandra's jewels, which the Duke virtually pinched for his Duchess.

Dry Beans Government Graded

DEAR PAT: Does the government grade dry beans that are sold in supermarkets? A friend gave me several good recipes that call for their use, and I'd like to know how to tell which ones are good quality. Also, exactly how do you prepare dry beans before using them in a recipe?

J.W., Corona del Mar
Many of the dry beans you see in the supermarket have been graded for quality by the U.S. Department of Agriculture, but these grades seldom appear on consumer-size packages. In most cases, you will have to be your own "grader." When beans don't have bright, uniform color, it may indicate long storage, lack of freshness, and a product that will take a long time to cook. Color of the beans, however, won't affect their eating quality. Avoid mixed sizes that will result in uneven cooking, since smaller beans cook faster than larger ones. Don't buy beans that have cracked seed coats, foreign material, and pinholes caused by insect damage. After buying, store in tightly covered containers in a cool, dry place. Don't mix newly purchased beans with older ones. This can result in uneven cooking, since older beans take longer to cook.

When preparing dry beans for any dish, wash them first. Then soak to reduce cooking time. To speed the soaking process, boil the beans for two minutes, remove from heat and soak for one hour. Add spices and other seasonings after soaking to avoid toughening the surface of the beans and increasing cooking time. Boil gently and stir very little in order to prevent breaking skins. And remember that one cup of dry beans can yield up to two and three-quarters cups of cooked beans, depending on the variety.

Inflation-income Rises Fast

DEAR PAT: At the current rate of inflation, can you tell me how much a person earning $20,000 a year today would have to earn five years from now just to stay even?

K.P., Fountain Valley
The current rate of inflation is about 13 percent. Even without compounding, the rate of interest for five years would be 65 percent. This increase in a $20,000 income would make it $33,000 and taking into account that the 13 percent applies to each year's higher income, the total five-year income would make it larger — in this case, $36,000.

Co-op Rules In State Book

DEAR READERS: The last few years have seen an increasing interest in consumer cooperatives in California. As a result of many inquiries the Department of Consumer Affairs says it is publishing "Cooperative Law for California Retail Consumer Cooperatives," a legal aid manual for consumer groups wanting to start cooperatives. Designed specifically for developing cooperatives in California, the manual is the first of its kind in the country.

The manual explains in lay terms the legal steps a group must take to form and effectively run a cooperative. Included is complete information on the specific legal structures available to cooperatives and other legal concerns of retail consumer cooperative development.

"Cooperative Law" also discusses the pros and cons of incorporating, different types of taxes, securities regulations, director's duties and liabilities, and articles of incorporation and bylaws.

The manual, available in February, can be ordered by sending a $2.85 check payable to the State of California, to: Co-op Legal Manual, P.O. Box 310, Sacramento 95802.

'Brown Winter' Blamed On Altered Jet Stream

HANOVER, N.H. (AP) — The jet stream of cross-continent air currents is causing the unseasonably warm weather in New England, a Dartmouth College weather expert says.

Vincent Malmstrom, a climatologist, said the stream is moving almost due west to east this winter, instead of in a great loop from Canada across the Midwest to the Gulf of Mexico then back to the Northeast.

MALMSTROM SAID THAT normally the stream would suck up moisture over the Gulf before moving back north, dumping it as snow on the Northeast.

Once the stream establishes such a west-east pattern it holds for four to six weeks, he said.

The problem, he added, lies in trying to figure out just when the pattern began.

New England, he said, had a cold snap in early December followed by the mild weather. If that was the beginning of the pattern, cold weather should be just about ready to return, Malmstrom said.

HE CAUTIONED "It could be that it will snow like the devil for the next six weeks and just about even us out. But, if we have started another cycle, it could carry us practically through February without snow."

The effects of a snowless winter, he said, can mean premature budding of plants with the result of scantier flowers and a poor fruit crop.

Malmstrom said mild winters are not that unusual.

"I CAN RECALL, for instance, having a picnic on the grass ... on Christmas Day, 1962."

"But I can't recall any winter remaining this mild this late in January. Perhaps 1979-80 will be known as the Year of the Brown Winter," he said.

Steelers the Best Team Ever—Swann

By DAVE CUNNINGHAM

PASADENA — As far as Lynn Swann is concerned, the case is closed.

"The Pittsburgh Steelers are the best team to ever play in the NFL," Swann says. "We're the best team to ever take the football field. Running, passing, defense — we have it all."

Swann's judgment has some persuasive pieces of evidence; the Steelers have won Super Bowls in four of the past six years, the latest a 31-19 victory over the Rams before 103,985 at the Rose Bowl Sunday.

"AND WE HAVE THE FINEST FANS in the country," a jubilant Swann continued. "Today we did them a favor. We gave them another Super Bowl. And for people who are interested in other things, we also beat the point spread."

You may want to take Swann's comments with a grain of salt; after all, he was knocked silly in the third quarter and left the game with blurry vision.

So how does clear-headed quarterback Terry Bradshaw feel about Swann's "best-team-ever" claim?

"Swann said that? The best team ever? Well, I don't know. In the 70s, definitely we were the best," Bradshaw said. "But the Packers had five championships. We've only got four. We need a couple more."

Swann's claim got a vote of support from an even higher authority than Bradshaw — Steelers Coach Chuck Noll.

"THE FACTS SPEAK for themselves," Noll said. "I don't have to say it. The Steelers have proven themselves."

Mean Joe Greene and most of the other Steeler players sidestepped the question.

"Greatest team ever? I don't know. For the past six years, I know we've been damned good," Green said.

"Well, I don't know about the greatest team ever, but I guess you could say we've got a dynasty going now," said wide receiver John Stallworth, who caught a 73-yard touchdown pass in the fourth quarter to turn a 19-17 deficit into a 24-19 Steeler lead.

Stallworth finished with three catches for 121 yards, and Bradshaw felt Stallworth deserved serious consideration for the Super Bowl MVP award. Bradshaw himself got the honor, his second in a row.

"IF I WERE VOTING, I would have picked either Larry Anderson or John Stallworth," Bradshaw said. "Stallworth's catches were very important. I throw them, but somebody's got to catch them."

After further consideration, Bradshaw shifted to Anderson's case.

"Anderson played a heckuva game. He should have been the MVP," the quarterback said.

Anderson returned five kickoffs for 162 yards, the longest a 45-yarder.

"We knew Anderson was going to do something special before the game," Bradshaw said. "The way he was walking around, the look in his eyes. You could just feel it."

Bradshaw isn't about to make any claims as a psychic, however.

"Before the game I had a thought — 28-7, with us winning. That would be the score," Bradshaw said. "And I thought (wide receiver) Bennie Cunningham would be the difference. Shows how much I know."

THE CLUBHOUSE WAS CURIOUSLY subdued afterwards. With so many reporters around and so many questions to answer, the Steelers didn't have time to whoop and holler and pour champagne.

But just because this was their fourth Super Bowl didn't mean it was getting to be old stuff.

"This was the sweetest of them all, even though I didn't play nearly as well as I did last year," said Bradshaw. "It was sweeter because we were playing in the other team's back yard, they were hungry and they were juiced up. Unfortunately for them, we were juiced up, too."

Stallworth thought Super Bowl XIV was a little better than the others because, like the Rams, the Steelers had to overcome a rash of injuries.

"We had a lot of adversity, and we still won it all," Stallworth said. "I was hurt, Swann was hurt, Jack Ham was hurt, so many people had to miss games or play hurt. It really means a lot to win this one."

ALMOST UNANIMOUSLY, the Steelers had great praise for the Rams, and the fact that Los Angeles held a 13-10 lead at halftime had a sobering effect on the players.

"It was a little scary," said offensive tackle Larry Brown. "This was a good football team we (See STEELERS, Page B3)

We'll Be Back

Yes, the Rams DID Belong

By JOHN SEVANO

PASADENA — It was a long procession of quiet Los Angeles Rams that filed into their locker room at the Rose Bowl Sunday.

The players moved slowly, saying nothing. It was evident by their jerseys and their facial expressions that they had been in a battle.

But as emotionally drained and as physically beaten as they were, the Rams were holding their heads high. One must remember that this was a Los Angeles team that supposedly didn't belong on the same field with the World Champion Pittsburgh Steelers; a team that many in the NFL said was lucky to even be there; a team that was a 10½-point underdog.

Well, if there's one thing the Rams did prove in their 31-19 Super Bowl XIV loss, it was that they DID belong. That they weren't lucky. And that they were indeed a worthy NFC representative respect. I feel inside that we did that, but you never know how they (people) feel out there.

"Nothing takes the place of winning but we can keep our heads up. Maybe another day, another time, things might have turned out different. But the game was played today and we lost."

"I think we made a little bit of a mark," said Fred Dryer. "There's nobody who is bitter or sour in here. I think everybody feels that next year will be our year."

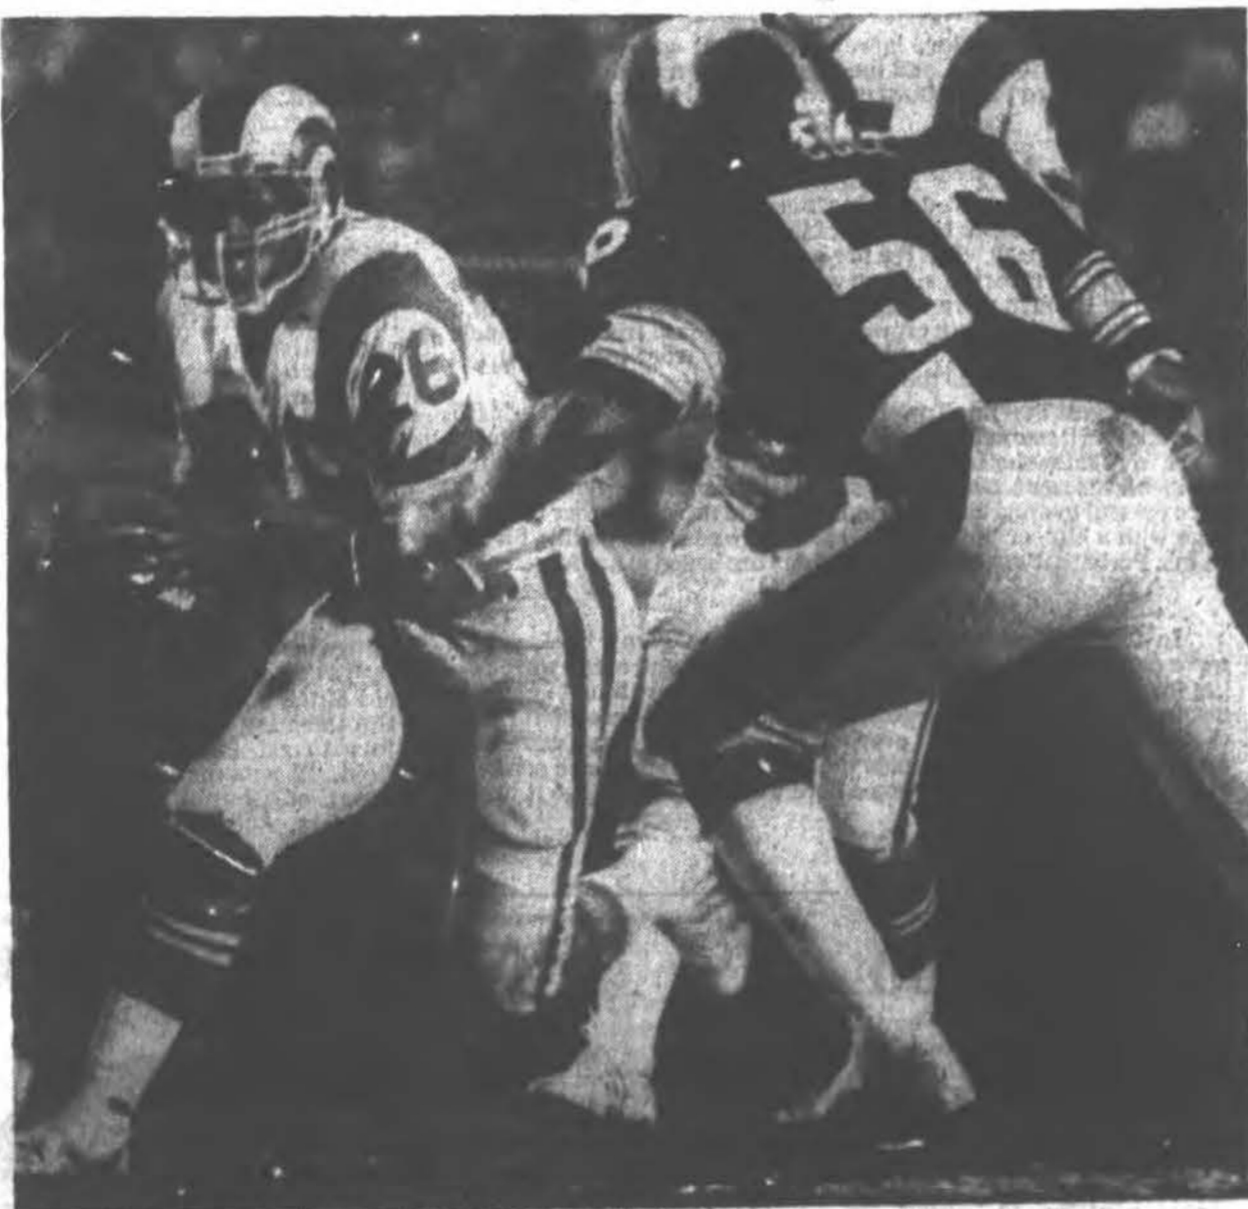

"There was nothing different about this game with them as compared to others. We're not out here to prove who's macho and who isn't, or who has the bigger arms, or who has the bigger necks. We have a lot of respect for them and I guarantee you those suckers are sore."

"I'M PROUD of the fact we (See RAMS, Page B3)

I Tipped My Hand Too Soon—Thomas

PASADENA — Pat Thomas was a somber, dejected young man in the Los Angeles Rams dressing room after Super Bowl XIV Sunday.

Thomas tried to explain how John Stallworth had caught a pass that went for 73 yards and a go-ahead touchdown for his team, and how he was wronged on a pass interference call that resulted in an insurance TD for the Steelers late in the game.

"We were supposed to have some help in the middle on that touchdown by Stallworth, but the safeties didn't show up," Thomas said.

Earlier, Lynn Swann caught a TD pass. "I was in single coverage on Swann when the ball was thrown. I saw Nolan (Cromwell) coming across and I was behind and tried to strip the ball. I thought I had a play on the ball but I think I tipped my hand too soon."

The 73-yard pass play to Stallworth from the game's most valuable player Terry Bradshaw gave the Steelers a 24-19 lead, then a Pittsburgh interception set up the controversial call in the end zone.

"The receiver (Jim Smith) came by and tried to pull me out of the way," Thomas explained. "I stripped the ball out of his hands and I saw the flag go down. I thought they were calling offensive interference. I just hope he (the official who called the play) can live with it."

The official was field judge Charlie Musser who said: "The defense (Thomas) had good position all the way on the play until the last second when he played the man instead of the ball."

Ram Coach Ray Malavasi admitted a break in the team's secondary coverage on the Stallworth touchdown.

"There was a bust in our coverage; I don't know why. But we still had a chance until that interference call against us. I thought it was a bad call."

Don Klosterman, Ram vice president and general manager and on whose shoulders rests the responsibility of personnel on the playing field, has been maligned somewhat this season. But he has maintained his rapport.

"I never felt I needed vindication for anything I have done," Klosterman said before the game while sitting in the press box. "I never spoke out against anybody and in all my years in pro football, I never lost any confidence in what I could do."

"When Carroll (Rosenbloom) was alive, we both conferred with each other and made the decisions together. It is no different now that C.R. isn't here."

"Georgia and I counsel on all matters. I feel we have a lot of young players who are gaining valuable experience this year and that helps with our development. Usually a team in the Super Bowl has a lot of well-seasoned veterans."

"We are in a very enviable position with some veterans coming back and the young players getting this experience. I don't believe we have any glaring weaknesses to fill at the draft. We will take the best players available rather than trying to get what is left at a certain position."

TV Announcers Get Bad Marks

By FRED ROTHENBERG

NEW YORK (AP) — Visually, CBS was able to document possibly the best Super Bowl ever in fine fashion. But its announcers, play-by-play man Pat Summerall and commentator Tom Brookshier, virtually ignored the major story line behind Pittsburgh's 31-19 victory over Los Angeles Sunday.

It made us almost long for Howard Cosell. At least Cosell would have played up the wonderful drama of Vince Ferragamo, with less than half a season of games at quarterback, outplaying Terry Bradshaw until the Super Bowl veteran showed why he is the best in the game by connecting on clutch passes to Lynn Swann and John Stallworth.

AFTER ALL, IF HUNDREDS of millions are watching the Super Bowl, they all can't be fulltime football fans. Pictures don't tell all of the story.

Brookshier made a passing reference to "the old pro coming back" after Bradshaw put the Steelers up 24-19 in the fourth quarter with a touchdown bomb to Stallworth.

Producer Bob Stenner and director Sandy Grossman deserve credit for the variety of excellent isolated camera shots and replays of the key plays — particularly in the second half. But Stenner must take the blame for not prodding his announcers to tell the verbal story.

And only once, in the third quarter, did we get a graphic comparing Bradshaw and Ferragamo's individual passing statistics. Even after a long halftime show, all we got in the way of statistics was total offense yardage for both teams.

WHERE WERE THE QUARTERBACK statistics? Where were the numbers for the Pittsburgh receivers, who had been held in check in the first half? Where were the running stats for Wendell Tyler, the Rams' offensive key who had had a good first half?

Instead of the story lines and analysis, Brookshier gave us a line of platitudes.

"Bradshaw is some guy, isn't he?"

Steeler Owner Won't Gloat: I Know How Rams Feel

From AP Dispatches
PASADENA — Venerable Art Rooney could not gloat over Pittsburgh's fourth Super Bowl victory Sunday — he had too much sympathy in his 78-year-old heart for the losers.
"I know how they felt, because I went so many years myself in frustration," the white-haired chairman of the board said after his Steelers had beaten the Los Angeles Rams 21-19 in the Rose Bowl.
"They played a wonderful game, those boys from Los Angeles," said Rooney, who will be 79 in six days. "They should be proud. Just as I am proud of my boys. These are the most gentlemanly fellows I have ever had. None of them ever gets fat-headed."
The colorful Rooney, who purchased the Pittsburgh franchise in 1933 for $12,000 which friends say he won at a racetrack, went 41 years before he saw his team win a National Football League championship.
The Steelers won their first title in 1974, repeated in 1975 and came back to win again last year.
Rooney, son of a Pittsburgh saloon-keeper, lives in a house he has occupied for 40 years. He was designated to toss the opening coin before Sunday's game.
"I don't know why they selected me," he said, almost apologetically. "It was all right when George Halas did it last year. But it was a surprise when they picked me."
He was driven into the stadium in an open antique automobile and taken off in a golf cart after swapping pleasantries with Georgia Rosenbloom, owner and president of the Rams since the death last year of her husband, Carroll.
The unpretentious Steeler owner, who wears thick glasses, puffed constantly on a cigar but moved crisply from the field to his position on the roof of the Rose Bowl stadium.
"That referee kept my coin," he said, appearing to be a little ill at ease. "I have asked Jack Hand (an assistant to NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle) to get it back for me."
Halas used a $20 gold piece last year, but Rooney was equipped with a large commemorative medal inscribed Super Bowl VI. The minting has not caught up with the times.

Titans Now 0-4 in PCAA Play

Cal State Fullerton is still searching for its first win in Pacific Coast Athletic Association basketball action after falling to the University of Pacific, 74-56 Sunday. The Titans, losers of four straight in conference play, couldn't stop 6-9 junior Ron Cornelius, the PCAA's most valuable player last season. He canned eight of 11 shots and finished with 21 points... No. 1 rated DePaul received 31 points from sophomore Mark Aguirre, but struggled to a 78-73 win over No. 14 Louisiana State. Clyde Bradshaw sank three free throws in the final seconds to hold off the Tigers and preserve DePaul's unbeaten record (15-0)... Maryland retained possession of first place in the Atlantic Coast Conference with a 92-86 win over ninth-ranked North Carolina. Albert King poured in 28 points for Maryland, now 5-1 in the ACC. North Carolina drops to 4-3 in conference play.

Brown's First Goal Leads Chicago

Blackie defenseman Keith Brown's first National Hockey League goal lifted Chicago to a 2-1 verdict over the New York Rangers Sunday. Brown scored on a 55-foot blast from the right point and snapped the Black Hawks' three-game losing streak... Brett Callaghan's goal capped an Edmonton third period comeback against Buffalo as the two teams skated to a 4-4 tie... Seal Coudler scored twice and assisted on Alain Cote's first NHL goal to spark Quebec to a 3-2 triumph over Washington.

Sonics Win Seventh in a Row

Seattle posted its seventh consecutive victory, but it wasn't easy. The SuperSonics had to go two overtimes to edge Boston, 108-106, in National Basketball Association action Sunday. Gus Williams scored 12 of his game-high 28 points after regulation for Seattle nullifying a spectacular performance by Boston's Chris Ford, who hit five three-point field goals and tallied 26 points... Brian Winters sank a 20-foot jumper with four seconds left to play giving Milwaukee an 89-88 win over Portland.

Plenty of Concentration for Tracy

PALOS VERDES — Jeanne Austin says she tries not to move around too much while she watches her daughter, Tracy, play tennis. She's afraid of breaking her concentration.
The two Austins have been traveling together since Tracy joined the women's tennis tour three years ago. Over those years, Jeanne has watched Tracy turn from a tiny terror into one of the most feared names on the pro tour, despite the fact that she's only 15 and is still in high school.
Mrs. Austin says she began traveling with her daughter because "on the pro tour, the players are expected to be adults, no matter how old they are. It's a big change from juniors, where someone else takes care of all the details."

NBC Delay Request Denied

Organizers of the 1984 Winter Olympics in Sarajevo, Yugoslavia said today they had turned down an NBC television request for a 60-day postponement in bidding for television rights. The reason cited was that NBC had submitted the request too late... A mail campaign citing racial unrest at the University of Mississippi has apparently deterred five or six high school football players from attending the school... Super featherweight champion Alexis Arguello of Nicaragua rallied to retain his World Boxing Council title Sunday by knocking out Ruben Castillo in 2:03 of the 11th round... Odds-on favorite John Henry led all the way in winning the San Marcos Handicap by 2 1/2 lengths at Santa Anita... Wide receiver Charlie Joiner of San Diego and defensive end Al Baker of Detroit were named to the NFL Pro Bowl squads Sunday.

To Boycott or Not

U.S. Committee To Poll Athletes

From AP Dispatches
The U.S. Olympic Committee, facing an appeal by President Carter and sharply divided opinions from American athletes, will meet next weekend to consider the possibility of not sending a team to Moscow for the Summer Olympic Games.

"That will be one matter discussed, among others," says Col. Donald F. Miller, executive director of the USOC. "All options and alternatives will be properly discussed."

AT THIS TIME as well, the USOC will poll thousands of prospective American Olympic athletes in hopes of getting a feel of the national pulse on the subject.

In addition to the USOC affair in Colorado Springs, Colo., on Jan. 26 and 27, Miller said Sunday that he has arranged a subsequent meeting between representatives of his organization and Ireland's Lord Killanin, president of the International Olympic Committee, to discuss "all aspects of this difficult and sensitive situation."

The meeting with Killanin was scheduled to take place Feb. 8, 9 or 10 at the IOC meeting at Lake Placid, N. Y., according to a statement from Miller.

"THE USOC HAS a trust in representing our American athletes in the international Olympic movement — both the athletes of this generation and those of future generations," said Miller. "We believe that the President of the United States recognizes that trust."

Killanin, meanwhile, has reaffirmed his insistence that the 1980 Summer Olympic Games cannot be shifted from Moscow.

"There is no question of their being moved to another venue," Killanin was quoted today in The Times of London. "This is a time for cool heads and quiet voices."

He again said, as he did last week, that the 1980 Games were awarded to the Soviet Union in 1974, and unless the Soviets break the terms of that binding agreement, the Games cannot legally be moved.

"THIS DOES NOT mean that I or the IOC are condoning the political action taken by the host country," Killanin, in a weekend interview in Dublin, said of Russia's recent military intervention in Afghanistan. "But if we started to make political judgments it would be the end of the Games."

The reaction from the Olympic chief and his American counterpart came as a result of Carter's nationally-televised appeal Sunday for the Summer Olympics to be moved out of Moscow, postponed or canceled if the Soviet Union does not pull its troops out of Afghanistan in a month. Carter also urged that both the Summer and Winter Games be moved to a permanent site in Greece, where the modern Olympics began in 1896.

ALTHOUGH CARTER has no legal authority to block sending American athletes to Moscow, the President said he sent a message to the USOC on Sunday in which he outlined his position and urged that the organization present his views to the IOC, the only group that can move the Games.

In his appeal, Carter was especially careful to stay away from the term "boycott," a fact which was entirely significant to Robert F. Kane, president of the U.S. Olympic Committee.

"I was very pleased that he did not advocate a boycott, because I think a boycott is a most inappropriate tactic," said Kane.

Life to Change Mitchell Wins Tourney

PHOENIX (AP) — In two weeks there have been two first-time winners on the pro golf tour.

But, said Jeff Mitchell, the latest man to break through, it isn't necessarily a trend.

"You'll start to see those familiar names up there pretty soon," Mitchell said after scoring a four-stroke victory Sunday in the Phoenix Open.

He glanced over at the scoreboard, nodded toward it and continued:

"LOOK, THERE AREN'T but a couple of strange names up there now. The old names will be coming back."

It was one of the more familiar names, 16-time tour winner Hubert Green, who had the best chance to overtake the front-running Mitchell in the final round. But Green fell back with a last-round 73, dropping out of title contention and making it relatively easy for the 25-year-old Mitchell to claim the $54,000 first prize.

That compares with the $38,032 he collected all of last season and represents a huge change in his personal and professional life.

In response to a question, he started totting up some of the things the victory will mean.

"Let's see," said the 25-year-old Mitchell, who had to survive the Monday qualifying round just to get in the tournament field. "It puts me in the Tournament of Champions and the Masters. And I'm in the PGA. And there's no more Mondays." HIS SOLID FINAL ROUND OF 67, which finished off a 272 total — 12 under par on the 6,726 yard Phoenix Country Club course — will enable his wife to travel with him later this year.

"My wife is working now. We figured somebody had to make a living. But now, after the baby comes (due in three months), she will be able to come out here with me."

Mitchell's nerves really weren't put to the test over the final 18 holes.

GOLF

Green and three in front of everyone else. No one really threatened.

"I really wasn't nervous," said the slow-talking young man from the High Plains country around Lubbock, Texas. "I can always tell when I'm nervous. My hands start shaking. It's a dead giveaway."

HE BUILT HIS LEAD to two shots at the turn and led by a minimum of three over the last nine holes, finishing with a birdie on the final hole. That finally cracked the blank, poker-faced expression he wore all the warm, sunny day.

"What a great feeling," he said.

Rik Massengale was equally thrilled with his second-place finish. Massengale, once one of the game's more promising young players, broke a lengthy slump with a solid, six-under-par 65 that brought him from far back in the pack to second place at 276.

him... what a great person."
— And this classic after the game: "I keep thinking of football players and how proud I am of them."

For analysis, Brookshier often offered cutesy stuff when CBS' crack color man, Hank Stram, would give us explanations.

SUMMERALL IS A LOT like Dragnet's Jack Webb — "Just the facts, man" — no emotion. His terse play-by-play is very competent, but it works best in tennis, where there are fewer stops and he has Tony Trabert for good explanations and analysis.

Summerall-Brookshier also missed a key strategy story line, whether Tyler could successfully run wide on the Pittsburgh defense. It wasn't until several minutes into the third quarter that Brookshier said George Allen had talked about the pitch play to Tyler in the pre-game show.

The pre-game show, produced by Mike Pearl and directed by Bob Fishman, was the best journalism on the five hours of coverage by CBS. If pre-Super Bowl shows have to go 90 minutes, we'll take the NFL Today folks any time.

PEARL HAD GEORGE Allen of the National Football Conference, playing mental chess with John Madden, formerly of the American Conference. Coach Allen suggested Tyler would be able to run wide and Coach Madden decided Pittsburgh would stop him.

The former NFL coaches, both honest and humorous in this setting of armchair coaching, also keyed on the importance of the Bradshaw-Ferragamo differences.

Also on the show, Brent Musberger had a terrific interview with Jack Youngblood, the defensive end of the Rams who was playing with a hairline fracture in his leg.

And Andy Rooney's humor piece on being at a Super Bowl was very special.

ROONEY POINTED OUT that they raised the drinks in the Rose Bowl to a dollar, so the fans wouldn't have to wait in line while vendors fumbled for change.
"They're always thinking of us," he said wryly.

NOTES ON A CUFF — Pittsburgh Terrible Towels were in evidence and being waved at opportune times by Steeler fans. But the noise was no louder than that of the Ram fans... Traffic on incoming roads at 1:30 when the pre-game show went on the air, was backed up in all directions. Then with less than 45 minutes to game time, large throngs were outside the gates trying to get in. With a half hour to go, the same crowds were backed up from the tunnels leading to the inside of the stadium and many were fortunate to get to their seats in time for the kickoff.

The largest Terrible Towel was displayed on the field just prior to the game and it seemed to hype the Pittsburgh fans into a near frenzy. There were 34 Steeler fans moving the towel about the field... United Airlines hostesses served as press box hostesses for the game but they were careful to dress in brown uniforms and not give either team an edge with a blue or black outfit. Most were secretly pulling for the Rams. Perhaps it's because most of them are based in Los Angeles.

In the parking lots several hours before game time, people were carrying signs stating, "I need a ticket" and some were asking for more than one. What price they would be willing to pay was not in evidence... The large contingent of media personnel (more than 2,100) was the largest ever for a Super Bowl. Many were seated in an auxiliary area outside the press box leading one scribe to state: "Why are all these people here when they could see it just as well on television?"

Super Bowl Arrests: 100

PASADENA (AP) — The jail was full but Super Bowl XIV ended "without any major incidents, thank goodness," said Lt. Chris Hagerty, who had dispatched about 200 officers to patrol the 103,000-plus crowd at the Rose Bowl.

There were "well over 100 arrests" by late Sunday, but Hagerty said most involved illegal vending or disturbing the peace.

"Mostly, we've arrested ticket scalpers and drunks," he said. "There were some robberies, some motor homes were broken into, a golf cart was stolen — but most of the arrests fall into a category we call 'things related to the Super Bowl.'"

THE IMPOUND ROOM was full of Super Bowl souvenirs confiscated because the sellers had no vending licenses and some had violated the National Football League copyright, Sgt. Don Silverman said.

One 59-year-old Escondido man lost $170 in cash and about $900 in jewelry when two men robbed his mobile home, which was parked near the Rose Bowl, police said. But no one was arrested.

Lakers, Knicks Vie At Forum Tonight

INGLEWOOD (AP) — Two National Basketball Association teams going in opposite directions — the New York Knicks and the Los Angeles Lakers — battle tonight at the Forum.

The Knicks have shown considerable improvement over last season when they finished 20 games under .500, but they have lost six straight games to drop to 22-27 this season.

The Lakers, meanwhile, have won five in a row and nine straight at the Forum, where they are 21-3 this season. Overall, Los Angeles has a 34-15 mark.

kept playing like men," said Dennis Harrah, "and I'm proud to be associated with 45 men. We fought our butts off."

"We maybe didn't complete our goal, but we got next year. I'm very proud to be a Los Angeles Ram."

"It's really hard to tell what we proved today," said Jack Reynolds, wanting to be more cautious. "The oddsmakers said we would lose by 10 points and we lost by 12, so I don't know. I suppose there will be a lot of people saying 'I told you so.'"

"The thing we didn't do though is quit. Everybody said all year that we were a bad football team and I think we proved that you can't count anybody out. I think we did a tremendous job considering the circumstances."

"We proved we could come back from adversity," said Dave Elmendorf, praising his teammates. "We felt bad we lost, but we'll be back."

"Everyone said the game would be lopsided, but it was close for 3 1/2 quarters. I think Pittsburgh respects us. They know they've been hit. If it wasn't for a couple of plays, we easily could have won the game."

"WE WERE STOPPED by two big plays," added Larry Brooks. "The players feel they played a respectable football game without winning. This team played with a lot of pride and a lot of character. You never want to get into a situation where you say 'wait until next year,' but I'm proud of these guys and we'll be back."

Of course, some of the players didn't take losing as philosophically as others.

"This is not a good time to talk to me because I don't take losing very well," said Jim Youngblood. "We lost the game so."

"If anybody has the nerve to call us dogs anymore after today, then I want them to say it right to my face," added Jack Youngblood. "We can play with anybody, anywhere."

"We should have won the game," says Pat Thomas. "We know we should have won and they (Steelers) know it, too. They just got a couple of big plays, that's all."

"YOU KNOW," analyzed Cullen Bryant, "if we had anything to prove it was to ourselves. We had to find out how good we were potentially, and I think we proved that."

"There's no doubt in my mind that given another Sunday we could beat the Steelers. We didn't lose. Actually, we took a positive step toward next season. I think a lot of people who hadn't seen us play had to be influenced by the character we showed today."

Character. Pride. Dignity. Respect. Everything the Rams wanted to achieve in Super Bowl XIV, they did. Everything, that is, except winning.

Bring On Anaheim!

The biggest losers of Sunday's Super Bowl tilt was the city of Los Angeles, which now must view their team from afar in the city of Anaheim.

Sunday was actually a classic example of LA's "Well, what have you done for me lately" fan. First, the LA crowd was almost outnumbered by the Pittsburgh contingent. And, if that wasn't bad enough, they were out-cheered, out-yelled, and altogether out-classed.

The players were right. The city of LA doesn't deserve them. Bring on the wild and crazy fans of Anaheim!

Scalpers at the Rose Bowl in Pasadena were having a hard time trying to get rid of their extra tickets. Buyers were playing it smart by waiting until almost game time to purchase seats. The wait of a couple of hours probably meant the difference between paying $300 and $50. Well, you know the motto, "Scalping doesn't pay."

There were so many Super Bowl statistics and records being cast about Sunday that someone could do a story on those numbers alone. Some, however, got pretty ridiculous, like: "Did you know that there hasn't been a tied score at halftime in Super Bowl history?" Comment: Yawn. Or that "the winner of the coin toss is now 7-7 in Super Bowl outcomes?" Comment: Big deal.

Anyway, on it goes. I personally was waiting to find out what side of the bed Terry Bradshaw gets out of in the morning.

The most disappointed faces on the field were those Rams — Pat Haden, Cody Jones, Ron Jessie — that were in street clothes on the sidelines.

For those Super Bowl fans who enjoy such trivia, you can sap up the following:

— For the 12th time in 14 Super Bowls the team that won scored first.

— Super Bowl XV will be played Jan. 25, 1981, at the Superdome in New Orleans.

— Pittsburgh extended its winning streak to four consecutive Super Bowl wins in four appearances. The Steelers are the only team to win four Super Bowls with Dallas, Miami and Green Bay winning two apiece.

— The 31 points scored by the Steelers in Super Bowl XIV marked the ninth time in their 19 games this season they had scored 30 points or more.

— The winning quarterback in the last nine Super Bowls has worn jersey No. 12. Others participating in that streak have been Roger Staubach (Dallas), Ken Stabler (Oakland) and Bob Griese (Miami).

were up against, and we were lucky to come out of it like we did."

Running back Rocky Bleier took a backhanded jab at the National Football Conference by saying the Rams played better than he would expect from the NFC.

"They played like an AFC team. You can't play conservative in this game and expect to win," Bleier said. "Ferragamo played a helluva game. They all did."

Bradshaw, who had never seen Vince Ferragamo play, was also startled by the performance of the young Ram quarterback.

"He has a good arm and a quick release. I was really impressed with that young man," Bradshaw said.

THERE HAS BEEN RAMPANT speculation that several of the Steelers were planning to retire after this season, especially if they could go out on top. Bradshaw was one of them.

"Yeah, I've thought about it," the 31-year-old QB admitted. "If I was 38, this would be it. The only problem is, I'm still too young."

Bleier, at 33, also said he considered retirement, but now believes he'll be back next season. Greene, the same age as Bleier, is leaning in the same direction.

And if they all come back, NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle may find himself saying the same thing at Super Bowl XV as he did this year.

"Mr. Rooney," he said to the Pittsburgh team owner, "we've got to stop meeting like this."

Copying Works In Business

By MILTON MOSKOWITZ

Innovation has often been touted as the key to success in business. Come up with new products and you supposedly confound competitors and win the day. But now there's a new rule: be a copycat.

A Chicago company, Helene Curtis Industries, has been employing that strategy to good effect. Its Suave hair care products have tripled their sales since 1974 simply by telling consumers that they do what the big-name brands do — at a lower price.

Helene Curtis looks at what other companies are selling and then moves in with a similar product that costs less.

NOW ANOTHER COMPANY seems to have hopped on this bandwagon. Steven W. Lapham, who is director of new products for the Lehn & Fink division of Sterling Drug, has put forth the theory: "replicate — don't innovate."

Lapham, in a presentation he made recently at a marketing conference, argued that it's silly to spend a lot of time developing new products when you can just copy ones that are already out there.

He pointed out that it's not always true that the victory goes to the one first in the market. Jell-O pudding, for example, came six years after My-T-Fine. Country Time lemonade followed Wyler's. Revlon's Flex shampoo was introduced after Wella Balsam.

YOU DO HAVE to be careful, though. Lapham advised his colleagues to conduct research on a product already in the market just to be sure that it enjoys consumer acceptance before launching your own version. Also, you should confirm that the market is big enough to support two brands. And once you have done that, "be first to be second."

In short, don't let anyone else copy before you do. Lapham described how his own company has put this copycatting to work. They heard how a competitor, Airwick, had come up with a new product called Carpet Fresh. "Quite frankly," said Lapham, "we found it pretty hard to believe that Carpet Fresh had any potential at all. After all, what housewife in her right mind would sprinkle a white powder onto her carpeting before vacuuming? Who dirties their carpet first?"

Well, Carpet Fresh turned out to be a winner in the marketplace — and so in late 1978 Lehn & Fink decided to enter the market. In six months it had a competing product in national distribution. Its name: Love My Carpet. You can move quickly when you're copying someone else's product.

LAPHAM CONCLUDED by stating that one of the "greatest myths" of new product development is that the only way to do it is by innovation. Don't forget duplication.

So if you want to break into the consumer marketplace, don't worry about setting up a laboratory to discover new products. Just look around and see which ones you might be able to copy successfully. You might want to start by looking at the product lineup of Lapham's company, Sterling Drug.

Seniors Reach Out

Depression, loneliness and grief are a few of the psychological problems facing many of Orange County's senior citizens.

Project PACE, a mobile counseling service, is training peer counselors to help deal with these problems.

By DENNIS McLELLAN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Adolph Stofferan figures he's gone through just about every emotion a human being can encounter in a lifetime.

"I've been to the top of the ladder and to the bottom of the barrel," he says. "I've experienced every sensation in life, except death."

And a part of Adolph Stofferan died when Elsie, his wife of 49 years and nine months passed away.

"My wife left me five years ago and I never got over it," he says, adding that Mrs. Stofferan had undergone open heart surgery a decade earlier.

"In that 10 years I got to appreciate her more because I did everything."

Then he was alone, and the loneliness he experienced, he says, "bordered on insanity. I would spend my days wondering what to do."

THE RETIRED ACCOUNTANT'S life was turned around when he got involved in Project TLC, the nutrition, socialization and activity program for senior citizens.

TLC, says Stofferan with a big smile, "has become something of a hobby of mine."

The Santa Ana man's hobby is taking on a new twist this month as he and 19 other older Orange countians undergo training to become peer counselors for a new senior citizen program.

"It sounded like something I would like to do," says Stofferan. "I have an uncanny ability to put myself in someone else's shoes. I think I can apply most of my experiences."

The program is called Project PACE (Psychological Alternative Counseling for Elders). It is sponsored by Feed-back Foundation, Inc., the Santa Ana-based organization that sponsors TLC.

PROJECT PACE, which receives revenue sharing funds, started last October when it began sending a mobile counseling team to TLC sites and senior centers throughout the county.

In addition to providing individual and family counseling and a referral service, the program offered a six-week group workshop that allowed seniors to discuss depression, loneliness, grief, alcoholism, suicide and other psychological problems of aging.

The volunteer peer counselors, who have just begun an intensive five-week training program, were chosen from among the workshop participants.

"I'm asking them to commit themselves to one year," says Christopher Hayes, Project PACE director. "It involves a lot of commitment, no pay and a lot of training."

"They will receive enough training to develop empathy, respect, genuineness — all the qualities needed to develop a good counselor."

WHEN ASKED WHY they wanted to become peer counselors, Hayes says, most responded by saying, "I really care and just want to reach out."

And, adds Hayes, "What better way to get out of your own loneliness than to reach out?"

The reason Project PACE began was because Hayes felt the psychological problems of the county's elderly were not being adequately addressed.

He emphasizes that the county mental health department was doing its best to meet those needs. But largely because of Proposition 13 cutbacks, he says, not enough could be done.

"There is a lack of individuals trained to deal with the elderly," says Hayes, adding, "there needed to be an agency to pick up the slack."

ALTHOUGH PROJECT PACE is picking up part of the slack, counselors still face resistance from many seniors who are not used to discussing personal problems with outsiders.

"One of the hardest things we're overcoming is seniors stereotyping mental health with a dungeon — a feeling that they're going to be institutionalized," says Hayes.

Falling In Love Takes Courage

'Many people have deep doubts about whether it's okay for them to be happy,' says Dr. Nathaniel Branden. 'These doubts often are transformed into self-fulfilling prophecies.'

By JUDITH OLSON
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Mention the word love and you've got an audience. Advertise a talk on romantic relationships and you've got a crowd.

Nathaniel Branden, author and director of the Biocentric Institute, Los Angeles, spoke on self-esteem and romantic relationships and drew an overflow crowd at the Marriott Hotel, Newport Beach.

Most people supposedly come to such talks to get a little help with their lives, but one audience member perhaps told the truth: "They want to meet that special someone," he said.

But Dr. Branden threw the audience a curve. "Have I found 'Mr. or Miss Right' is not a legitimate question," he said. "What good is it if I'm afraid of excitement and vulnerability?"

THE BOTTOM LINE, he said, is that people must have their self-esteem in order and be willing to risk if they are to make a relationship work, even with the most perfect partner.

Dr. Branden, who has had two happy marriages (his first wife was killed in an accident), said the foremost obstacle to people being happy is that they doubt that they deserve to be loved.

He added, "Many people have a lot of deep doubts about whether it's okay for them to be happy."

These doubts often are transformed into "self-fulfilling prophecies," Dr. Branden said, and when the relationship ends, the doubter is convinced even more he's undeserving of love.

"Most of us grow up with lots of messages telling us it's not okay to be happy," he said. "We get a happiness anxiety. Learning how to handle this is a problem."

"We're scared of disaster so we defend before the disaster then we make the disaster happen. We're scared of being hurt and rejected."

So falling in love is frightening, Dr.

Branden noted. "It requires courage to let someone into your private world."

BUT KNOWING that being in love is scary is a protection, he said. "The safety lies in owning and expressing that fear."

By admitting the fear, a bond is created between partners, Dr. Branden said. "You keep the bridge between you and your partner with words."

Another problem with relationships, he added, is that many people are uncomfortable with being touched.

"But, we all have a deep organic need to be touched," he said. "There's a lot of body contact in good relationships."

"We all want to feel valued by another human being. The first part is in being held."

A good relationship also has a lot of nurturing in it, Dr. Branden stressed, and part of that is paying attention to feelings.

"Love requires an extraordinary consciousness, you can't do it comatose."

Nourishing comes from self-esteem and maturity.

Dr. Branden said some people attack love by treating it as "something transitory," then questioned why some relationships thrive after 25 and 30 years.

PART OF IT is the excitement both partners in such a marriage feel about life.

"Most people are burned out at 35 and believe that time is something to be killed," he said. "Why do people allow themselves to be extinguished?"

It starts in childhood, Dr. Branden said. "Most children experience most adults as the enemy of their excitement."

"Children get the message that it's wrong to be excited. The better they get at it the more boring they are."

"Never marry a person you do not experience to be a friend of your excitement," Dr. Branden cautioned. "Two people should keep energizing their excitement."

"Life is about excitement, about feeling alive."

Rape: Reality At UCI

A rape awareness program at UCI is trying to combat the image of the university as a protected shelter from sexual assault and other crimes.

By JOEL C. DON
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

The intruder strolled from door to door, quietly jiggling doorknobs at UC Irvine's Mesa Court dormitory complex.

At 4:30 in the morning, he opened an outer suite door and easily found a second unlocked door, leading to a room housing a pair of sleeping coeds.

As one awoke from the sound of his movements he placed his hand over her mouth, removed her nightwear and raped her.

The noise of the assault awakened the rape victim's roommate. However, she remained in bed, thinking the intruder was a boyfriend.

UCI POLICE RECORDS show that rapes at the university are rare occurrences. The Mesa Court rape was one of two reported last year. In 1978 there was one reported rape and none were reported in 1977.

But campus police and rape prevention groups are quick to point out that the number of reported rapes is a poor measuring stick of the actual number of sexual assaults at the Irvine campus.

They estimate for every reported rape, there are at least 10 sexual assaults never reaching police crime blot- ters.

Rape victims fear police scrutiny, legal embarrassment or shame. The rape assault is tucked away in the back of their minds; as nightmares or haunting memories of a humiliating experience.

"Even though in 1978 we had only one reported rape, the I.C.A.R.E. (Irvine Citizens Against Rape Everywhere) hot line had reported 15 rapes at UCI that 'You're not in an ivory tower; it has happened here and it can happen to you.'

were reported to them and not to the (campus) police," said Maggie Hummer, coordinator of UCI's Rape Awareness, Prevention and Education program. "That's higher than the national average, and to the police that figure was shocking."

The rape awareness program was launched in September as a University of California systemwide effort to alert students, faculty and staff to the threat of sexual assaults on university campuses.

FUNDED BY A one-year grant from the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration (LEAA), the rape program is trying to combat the image of the university as a protected shelter from sexual assault and other crimes.

It's a misconception that UCI, surrounded by homes priced in the six-digit range, rolling hills and wildlife preserves, is a haven from crime, said UCI Police Chief Mike Michell, a member of a campuswide advisory committee to the pilot rape program.

"We have problems in the Irvine community that are not different from the rest of the state," said Michell, who participated in rape prevention programs during previous duty with UC Berkeley campus police.

"We have to deal with what has been reported to police," he added. "Statistically, we don't know how many actual rapes have occurred."

The LEAA grant specifies that rape education programs should be conducted in small group discussions with the campus community.

Ms. Hummer visits a number of social science classes, holds meetings with faculty and staff and circulates information through campus dormitories.

"WE FEEL THAT the discussion group, instead of lectures, will bring out the concerns of different groups of people," she said.

At the conclusion of each discussion, participants are given evaluation forms to assess their level of rape awareness, express what measures they will take as a result of the program and critique the presentation of rape prevention information.

The goal of the program is to change the behavior and attitudes of the campus community, Ms. Hummer said, especially in the area of reporting rape assaults to law enforcement officials.

"The program is aimed at preventing people from taking unnecessary risks," she added. "You're not in an ivory tower, it has happened here and it can happen to you."

But people should not consider the whole rape awareness program as being paranoid. They should be aware and careful. And if they are fearful, they should listen to their fears and do something about them."

Ms. Hummer, who is working on a

Feminist Heroine Religious Outcast

STERLING, Va. (AP) — Ex-communication from the Mormon Church has brought Sonia Johnson triumph and strain. Her latest trauma is the breakup of her marriage.

She is a heroine to feminists, the object of scorn at her church.

"It's grim," Mrs. Johnson says. "I feel spiritually amputated."

Suddenly, all the world is knocking on her door: She's had to install a second telephone; letters arrive 100 at a time; she is in constant demand to speak out for the proposed Equal Rights Amendment.

But at home, life as a Mormon-in-exile is not comfortable. She still goes to her old church, she says, "but it's painful."

When the bishop's wife stood up at services and thanked everyone for sustaining her and her husband during the excommunication ordeal, Mrs. Johnson says she wondered, "What about my ordeal?"

"Excommunication is just the ultimate rejection," she says with a shake of her head. "It just says, 'We don't want you, no matter how much they love me.'"

Adding to her torment, she and her husband, Richard, a statistics professor, have separated. It is a coincidence, she says.

"I guess we just both had crises at the same time," she says.

"This whole family has been under tremendous pressure. I don't want to attribute it to the excommunication business, but it didn't help."

Mrs. Johnson, 43, president of Mormons for ERA, college English teacher and mother of four, feels she is in "a terrific battle" with church authorities in Salt Lake City, who portray the ERA as a threat to the family.

She fears her enemies will use her marital strains as an object lesson of what feminism does to a family.

That wasn't the case in her home, she says.

"He really is a feminist," she says of her husband. "He stuck it out when it was almost unbearable. He still stays with the children when I'm traveling around for ERA. He couldn't be better."

Mrs. Johnson's bishop, Jeff Willis, says the ERA itself has nothing to do with her ouster. Her offense, he says, was teaching false doctrine.

master's degree in social sciences from Cal State Fullerton, has been an active rape awareness educator for the past four years. In addition to her part time position with the UCI rape program, she works for the Rape Crisis Network Unit and the South Orange County Workers Against Rape, a rape crisis hot line.

The rape programs at the other eight University of California campuses each are run by a part-time coordinator with the assistance of volunteer group discussion leader, she noted.

Ms. Hummer is pleased that her office is located in the campus police department building.

"BETTER ACCESS to campus police will make the police more sensitive to the issue of rape," she said. "We think it's going to encourage people to report because they'll have more confidence in the (legal) processes."

The UCI rape program already has coordinated the rape response procedures of UCI Medical Center and the campus student health service. A specific protocol has been set up to both ease the emotional trauma of the rape victim and speed up notification of police officials.

Last month, the 14-member advisory committee held a night walk through the Irvine campus to correct poor pathway lighting.

"But you're only as safe as you make yourself," Ms. Hummer said. "You can have a million police but you're not going to be safe unless you have them at your side."

Police Chief Mitchell said that skyrocketing housing cost may double the number of persons living on campus to 5,000 in five years. As the campus population increases, higher crime rates may follow, he said.

"Unfortunately, university campuses are not islands within the broader community because we are open campuses," he added. "We can't exert unrealistic security measures, but we can try to improve the level of awareness of rape on campus."

... Seniors

"I think the reason this peer counseling program is so essential is because seniors need to develop resources among seniors. Who can better understand seniors than seniors?"

Gerontologists from the mental health department, which began a peer counseling program a year ago, agree.

"To see one's contemporary tends to be really beneficial, and beyond that, the peer counselors have the time to be present in senior centers when we can't be," says Judy Miller of the mental health department.

MS. MILLER, ALONG WITH Maria Estrada and Peggy Weatherspoon, also from the mental health department are assisting Hayes in the counselor training.

When the training is completed, the new peer counselors will be available at the centers on an informal basis to help solve problems or make referrals to county agencies.

Round table discussions will be held once a week between counselors and the PACE staff to discuss particular clients and problems.

One of the most important skills they will develop during training is how to listen.

"A lot of seniors," says Hayes, "are simply lonely and need someone to talk to."

Just ask Adolph Stofferan. He knows what it is to be lonely.

"Loneliness is terrible," he says. "It gets so you stay away from people. You don't relate to them. It can be painful. I can relate to that to the nth degree."

But Stofferan isn't lonely any more. And he's raring to get started counseling.

"I'm really looking forward to it," he says with a smile. "Not that I want to butt into someone else's business, but there were times when I wished I had someone who was impartial to talk to."

Actor Hoffman Life vs. Love

NEW YORK (AP) — Asked how to make a marriage last, actor Dustin Hoffman responded that the problem lies in longevity.

Don't lengthen the union, he said, shorten the life span.

Hoffman, in an interview in the current Ladies Home Journal, cited an observation that "when marriages were first invented our life span was only 30 years, so that marriages didn't last more than 10 or 15 years then."

Current life spans of 70 years mean marriages could run 50 years.

"That's a long time," Hoffman said. "So perhaps one of the things you need for marriage to last is a short life span."

Hoffman, 42, is separated from his wife of 10 years.

All She Wants Is 'Thanks'

DEAR ANN: I am sitting down immediately after dinner and letting the dishes wait in the sink because I want to write to you while the spirit moves me.

My husband just got up from the table and walked away without a word of thanks for the delicious meal I slaved over. I fixed all his favorite dishes.

After I clean up the kitchen I will iron his work pants and shirts, sew a few things and do the countless small chores every wife has to do.

I don't dwell on it, but sometimes I wonder why my husband can't find it in his heart to give me a simple compliment — some word of appreciation. Once I asked him. He replied, "Why should I say anything? You don't thank me for banking my paycheck, do you?"

I guess I don't, but it never occurred to me. Maybe I should. The point of this letter is to remind married people to express their gratitude to one another instead of taking everything for granted. A few words about the clean socks in the drawer or the corned-beef hash could bring back the love light in a pair of eyes. With it or without it, most of us will — KEEP ON PLUGGIN' (MEDFORD, ORE.)

DEAR PLUGGIN': I'm sure your letter hit lots of people where they live. And now if those husbands and wives who have committed sins of omission will vow to say something TONIGHT, your letter will have made millions of people happier.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a high school student who has been reading you for years. Even though I think you are pretty square, I trust what you say.

Please tell me whether or not marijuana is addictive. Some people say yes, others say no. What do YOU say? — SHAKER HEIGHTS STUDENT

DEAR STUDENT: Marijuana does not create physical dependency, like heroin or alcohol. In other words, a person can get off pot without suffering withdrawal symptoms. BUT — and it's a big one — marijuana can be psychologically addictive, which is just as bad. The desire to revisit a dream world can be crippling if the person enjoys it so much he decides he wants to live there.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Our daughter attended Radcliffe for two years and is now in her second year at the University of Colorado. We own a lovely ski house in the mountains, and several young men have visited us for weekends these past two winters.

I have noticed that the gentlemen from Harvard, Princeton, Yale and Rutgers always bring gifts — a ham, turkey, cheese, etc. They also send thank-you notes, flowers or a token of appreciation for the hospitality. The young men from Denver, Chicago and Kansas City do nothing. (They also arrive empty-handed.)

Would you say Eastern-educated males have better manners than those from the Midwest? — MILLIE'S MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: Manners are not a matter of geography. Moreover, Eastern schools do not have a corner on "culture," although some people would like to think so.

Why some kids write thank-you notes and others don't is a mystery. I used to think it was a matter of home training, but my readers have convinced me otherwise.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My parents fought like cats and dogs, and finally they got a divorce last year. My father has a girlfriend who is only three years older than I am. It's really embarrassing. He spends all his spare time with her, so I don't get to see him much. He has visiting privileges but never uses them.

Mom works a double shift and comes home dead tired. She gets extra pay for working weekends, and we really need the money. So I never get to see her to talk about things that matter to me.

I have gone to my guidance counselor at school so much this year I hate to take any more of her time. Please tell me what to do. I really need someone older who will listen to me and give me some guidance. — ALL ALONE

DEAR ALONE: Show your mother this letter and tell her you wrote it. I'll bet she will make some time for you. Go back to the school counselor, if you need to. That's what she's there for. And don't forget about me, Toots. I'm here for you, too.

Seacliff Proposals Disturb Builder

Conditions described by a Huntington Beach Company official as "killers" have been recommended by the state Coastal Commission staff for the $31-home Seacliff IV housing development overlooking the Bolsa Chica.

The state commission is scheduled to consider the development project late Wednesday afternoon at the Airport Marina Hotel in Los Angeles.

The project was approved last December by the South Coast Regional Commission meeting in Huntington Beach.

That approval was appealed to the parent state commission in January by Steve Schumacher of Huntington Beach, Dorothy McAlahey and others of the Long Beach area and by Amigos de Bolsa Chica, a conservation-oriented group.

Jan Tulk, commission permit appeals director, said today in San Francisco that the commission staff is recommending approval of the Seacliff IV project, subject to conditions.

Included is a proposal that Huntington Beach Company construct some 80 low and moderate cost housing on 22 acres of mesa land immediately south of the development.

The company had proposed filling low cost housing requirements by building them on land farther inland on property closer to city hall.

The staff also recommends, she said, that the project be moved 100 feet further back from the bluffs overlooking the Bolsa Chica marshland, an ecologically sensitive area.

Also she said, the staff proposes that the company restrict the deeds to land near Pacific Coast Highway in the area to limit future developments to commercial recreation.

Dave Eabie, project coordinator for the Huntington Beach Company, called the conditions "killers."

He noted that moving the project back 100 feet more to make way for a wider public park overlooking the Bolsa Chica would result in total replanning of portions of the project.

He said the company will go through the current appeals process and then make a decision whether or not to go ahead depending on how stringent the final modification orders are.

Man Stabbed In Attack At HB Pier

A 21-year-old Fountain Valley man was slashed three times early Sunday by a pair of knife-wielding men near the Huntington Beach Pier, police said.

Gary Wurster, officers reported, was taken to Fountain Valley Community Hospital at about 1:30 a.m. by his girlfriend, who witnessed the attack.

Police said Wurster was cut on his neck, his left wrist and suffered a six-inch gash to his abdomen. He was treated and released from the hospital.

He told investigators he was strolling through the parking lot near the pier with his girlfriend when the suspects drove up in a van and started yelling at him.

He said both men jumped from the car and started slashing him.

Main St. Facelift Decision Tonight

A $335,000 plan to give Huntington Beach's oldest shopping area a facelift faces its final test tonight before the city council.

The much-discussed proposal calls for cosmetic improvements to a six-block downtown section centering on Main Street and the municipal pier.

City planners propose Main Street be converted to a one-way, one-lane thoroughfare with trees and decorative benches, bike racks and street lights lining the shopping lane.

A single, textured crosswalk would extend from the end of Main Street to the base of the pier, according to the plan.

Main Street parking would become diagonal in order to increase the number of metered parking slots in front of downtown businesses, planners said.

Funding for the cosmetic touches would come mostly from federal Housing and Community Development funds. About $60,000 would be lifted from gas tax revenues and revenue sharing funds.

Several downtown merchants and landowners have criticized the plan as a waste of money.

One Main Street landlord, Thomas Whaling, claims the improvements will be ripped up when full-scale development in the downtown core begins.

Militants Still Want Shah Back

By The Associated Press

U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim says he hopes a plan devised during his visit to Iran will lead to the release of the American hostages in Tehran. But the Iranian militants holding the Americans captive still insist the deposed shah must be returned before the hostages are freed.

"We have worked out a mechanism . . . and I hope this mechanism will make it possible to satisfy the government of Iran and lead to release of the hostages," Waldheim told reporters Sunday in New Delhi, India.

The U.N. chief would give no details of his plan. But after his visit to Tehran, Iranian officials said he proposed setting up a U.N. commission to investigate the Iranian revolutionary regime's charges against the deposed shah.

At the time, Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh welcomed the proposal. But he said the commission's findings would not be binding on Iran, and the hostages would not be released until the shah was returned.

Ghotbzadeh repeated this stand Saturday, telling a French interviewer that the return of the shah, now living in Panama, was the only way out of the impasse.

"It's easy," he said. "They give us the shah. We give them the hostages."

A spokesman for the militants holding the hostages, reached by telephone Sunday at the occupied U.S. Embassy, said: "Nothing would possibly lead to the release of the hostages but the extradition of the deposed shah and the return of his wealth."

Gold Fever Hits Burglars In Huntington

Gold fever hit Huntington Beach today when some unknown prospectors smashed their way into a jewelry store and snatched everything resembling the precious metal, police said.

Investigators said the burglars grabbed an unknown amount of 14-carat jewelry from Lawson's Jewelers in Huntington Center Mall at about 2:30 a.m.

The gold hunters, they said, were so zealous in their looting that they snatched gold-colored costume jewelry from displays in addition to the high-priced metal.

Police said the intruders smashed a glass door to the mall, ran down a central mall hallway and broke the shop's plate glass window.

ounce from $49 at Friday's close.

The dollar firmed against all major European currencies, except for the strong British pound.

London's five major bullion dealers fixed the price for the afternoon trading session at $850. But it fell at the close to $838.

Gold bullion was quoted at $845 in Zurich, matching the record set Friday at Europe's main gold market.

The metal closed Friday at $840 in Zurich and $835 in London.

It hit a record of $838.78 in Hong Kong trading today, but fell to close at $827.78 in the Far Eastern market.

The gold price has soared by more than $640 an ounce since this time last year in a rush for the traditional haven in times of monetary uncertainty and political crises.

A New York investment adviser, James Sinclair, was quoted in The Times of London today as saying the price may reach four figures this year.

Sinclair said events in Iran and Afghanistan, as well as growing talk that the Soviet Union could invade Pakistan and Turkey, was sending "flight capital" from oil-rich Kuwait, Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates into gold.

The only slip by the dollar today was by one cent against the British pound, which cost $2.29 compared with $2.28 at Friday's closing.

In Tokyo, the dollar held its ground today despite Bank of Japan intervention in support of the yen. The U.S. currency closed in moderate trading at 240.175 yen, up from Friday's 239.45.

The dollar was apparently helped today from what one dealer called President Carter's firm stance against the Soviet Union. But European trading was very quiet in the absence of any significant developments in Afghanistan or Iran.

Huntington C of C Has New Look

By STEVE MARBLE

Of the Daily Pilot Staff

The business world is old stuff to Joyce Rollings, the first woman president of the Huntington Beach Chamber of Commerce.

Forced to drop out of high school and step into the working world to help her family at 16, she became a vice president for a nationwide escrow company when she was 29.

Now, seven years later, she manages four Orange County Western Mutual Escrow Corp. offices. She is a stockholder and a director for the firm.

Recently, she broke a 66-year string of all-male chamber presidents when she was installed to the top post of the 900-member business group.

"I really want to be an active president," she says. "Not just a figurehead."

The chamber is a positive and active group but could be doing much more to promote business in the beach area, she says.

She describes herself as an 18-hour-a-day workaholic with just enough hours left in the day to help steer the chamber and keep an eye on its $74,000 budget.

"I actually keep an extra person on in my office to help with chamber work," she says. She also serves as treasurer for the Huntington Beach Boys Club. (See C of C Page A2)

DAY IN BRIEF

Highlights from today's world and national news developments.

Dallas Busing Plan Survives

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Supreme Court cleared the way today for increased busing of public school pupils in Dallas as a method to provide racial balance in the nation's eighth-largest school district.

By a 6-3 vote, the court decided not to review an appeals court ruling that gave the go-ahead for busing an estimated 20,000 students at an annual cost of $5.8 million.

Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr., writing for the dissenters, said the increased busing could backfire and lead to further exodus by whites from the city's public schools. Powell noted that since 1971, the percentage of white students in Dallas schools dropped from 69 percent to 33.5 percent last year.

Brown Sees A-Plant

SEABROOK, N.H. (AP) — Gov. Edmund Brown, the 1980 presidential campaign's most vocal foe of the Seabrook atomic power plant, came face to face with the target of his opposition today.

After a 20-minute tour of the construction site, Brown renewed his promise to close Seabrook if he is elected president.

When asked if the tour changed his mind, the California governor said, "not at all."

"The country has to change pace. The risks from nuclear power are too great," he said.

Exports Blocked

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration today revoked the licenses for the export of spare computer parts for a controversial Soviet truck plant.

The action was the latest in a series of steps taken by administration officials to try to penalize the Soviet Union for its military intervention in Afghanistan.

The revocation of the export licenses will block the shipment of high-technology goods intended for a truck factory begun in the early 1970s with U.S. help on the Kama River in the Ural Mountains of northeastern Russia.

State Action Holds

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Supreme Court today refused to revive an invalidated California law that barred lobbyists, acting for themselves or others, from making political contributions.

By a 7-2 vote, the justices left intact a California Supreme Court decision striking down one section of the state's Political Reform Act of 1974.

Justices Byron R. White and Harry A. Blackmun voted to hear arguments in the case, but the votes of four justices are required.

Arabs Firming Up Anti-Soviet Front

By The Associated Press

In closed-door meetings and hurried jet flights, Arab envoys were engaged in intensive diplomatic activity in the Middle East today that informed sources in Beirut said was aimed at forging a common front on the issue of the Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan.

Afghanistan's seven rebellious Moslem factions, meanwhile, were reported trying to unite for a "holy war" against the Soviet occupation army.

day to discuss the situation in Afghanistan, where Soviet and Afghan government forces are trying to put down a rebellion by fundamentalist Moslem tribesmen.

Several Islamic states, including Saudi Arabia, have already announced they will be boycotting the summer Olympics in Moscow in protest.

U.S. ambassadors delivered personal messages from President Carter to the leaders of Bahrain, Oman and Sudan today dealing with the Afghan crisis, according to official reports from those governments. The contents of the messages were not revealed.

Meanwhile, British envoy Douglas Hurd, minister of state for foreign affairs, met with officials of the United Arab Emirates in that Persian Gulf oil state. Hurd has already visited Bahrain and Qatar.

Radio Tehran reported that an official of the Afghan Islamic Organization in the Iranian capital told it discussions were under way among the rebel groups to form a single guerrilla front.

Iowans Meet To Declare Preferences

Pay Hike Talk Site Shifted

Officials of the Ocean View Teachers Association predict that 250 elementary school teachers and a number of parents will attend tonight's school board meeting in the continuing battle over a new contract.

Teacher spokesman Bar Kaelter said the mass turnout for the 7:30 p.m. Ocean View school board meeting will be either a celebration over a contract settlement or a continued airing of grievances.

Because of the anticipated size of tonight's turnout, trustees have moved the meeting from district headquarters in Huntington Beach to Westminster's Westminster School auditorium at 8251 Heil Ave.

Union officials and board negotiators went back to the bargaining table this morning for the first time since November when teachers broke off negotiations, claiming the school board refused to compromise on major issues.

Kaelter said the teachers union has offered to continue negotiations until a new contract is signed by meeting "round the clock."

Union officials began drumming up support for tonight's turnout last Monday, sending fliers to most of the district's 470 teachers.

The fliers asked teachers to attend the session and select "at least one parent you know is supportive of teachers" to accompany them.

The union also sent fliers to parents noting that teachers are working without a new contract despite eight months of negotiation. The old contract expired in June.

Major contract differences revolve around the duration of proposed contracts, salary and fringe benefits, grievance procedures, work hours, class sizes and teacher transfer policies.

Ocean View which serves northern Huntington Beach and parts of Fountain Valley and Westminster, is the largest elementary school district in Orange County.

Real Estate Major Topic Of Lectures

A lecture, "Sales of Real Property" tonight will launch a series of five business oriented talks sponsored by the Huntington Beach Union High School District Adult School.

Tonight's lecture is to be followed by "Landlord and Tenant Laws," Feb. 4 and "Willis, Trusts and Estates," Feb. 25, March 3 and March 10, a spokesman announced.

All lectures are to be held at Marina High School in Room 111 between 6:30 and 9:30 p.m.

Cost is $5 per lecture. Registration is being accepted at the adult school headquarters, 5201 Bolsa Ave., Huntington Beach.

Tito 'Good' After Leg Amputated

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — President Josip Broz Tito spent a quiet night and was in good condition today following the life-saving amputation of his left leg, doctors reported.

Yugoslavia's 87-year-old leader was operated on Sunday for the second time in eight days to prevent fatal gangrene poisoning due to blockage in the arteries of the leg.

"The general condition of President Tito is good," his doctors said in a medical bulletin issued today.

They said his pulse, blood pressure and temperature were within normal limits.

Belgrade remained calm despite speculation that the Russians might try to coerce Yugoslavia back into the Kremlin's orbit if Tito, the pioneer of independent communism, died.

Antiaircraft guns were set up at the Belgrade and Zagreb airports, but this appeared to be part of a nationwide, low-priority "vigilance" program ordered after the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan.

Slain Girlfriend Was SJC Resident

A 17-year-old San Juan Capistrano girl was identified today as the victim of a fatal stabbing by her boyfriend who then killed himself with a shotgun blast early Saturday in Dana Point.

Orange County coroner's investigators said Connie Paulson was found dead at 4 a.m. Saturday of multiple stab wounds. She was also shot in the head with a shotgun blast after she was stabbed to death, investigators said.

Sheriff's investigators said it is believed Miss Paulson was stabbed by her boyfriend Dennis Michael Spires, 20, of Dana Point who was found dead from a self-inflicted shotgun blast to his neck.

Sheriff's Lt. Wyatt Hart said Spires had driven Miss Paulson to his home at 33651 Big Sur St. where he stabbed her and then committed suicide after a lovers' quarrel earlier.

She agrees she's successful, but says she's worked long and hard to get there.

"I had to quit school when my father died. I had an older brother who was a senior, but he stayed in school," she recounts. "Back then it was more important for the men to get an education."

The native Californian says she never had time to finish her high school education. Yet she has taught college real estate classes.

The success story apparently runs in the family. All four of her sisters are in the escrow field — her youngest sister owns her own company and another manages one of Mrs. Rollings' offices.

Her husband, Jim, is also in the escrow business.

"I think the key to success is simple — lots of hard work," she explains. "I get an enormous charge out of helping people and problem solving."

Saudis Tell Of Buildup

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Saudi Arabia has told the United States and Britain that the Soviet Union and Cuba reinforced their military presence in neighboring South Yemen in recent weeks, Arab diplomatic sources said today.

They said the Saudis told Washington and London that the alleged communist buildup might prompt them to put their armed forces on alert soon.

The sources said the Saudis informed the American and British governments that hundreds of Cuban troops and dozens of Soviet generals and experts have been airlifted to the South Yemen capital of Aden since the Kremlin's military intervention in Afghanistan.

Anthony Trial Set In March

Pre-trial motions are now scheduled for Feb. 11 in court action against Orange County Supervisor Philip Anthony on charges of laundering campaign funds.

Co-defendants in the case include former supervisor Ralph Diedrich, former Anaheim councilman William Kott and one-time political financier Gene Conrad.

The Orange County Grand Jury accused the defendants in December of concealing the true source of more than $77,000 that was funneled into 1976 political campaigns.

The trial is scheduled to start March 3.

State Deputy Attorney General Jeffrey Joseph said he was satisfied and pleased with the decision to order the March 3 trial before Superior Court Judge Claude M. Owens.

The trial-setting action came Friday after the state attorney met behind closed doors in the chambers of Orange County Superior Court Judge Richard Beacom.

In December, the Grand Jury indictment was sought by prosecutors amid concerns that the statute of limitations might run out on identical charges brought against the four defendants in a March, 1979, criminal complaint.

Joseph predicted that the complaint likely will be dismissed now that pretrial and trial dates have been scheduled on the indictment.

None of the defendants has yet entered a plea on the new charges of violations of the 1974 Political Reform Act.

In setting the trial date, Judge Beacom apparently took some license in attempting to move the off-delayed case along.

Referring to the long meeting in chambers, Beacom said, "Gentlemen, we didn't reach agreement on anything."

Celebrities, Faculty Game Slated

A group of motion picture and television personalities and well-known athletes is scheduled to take on Ocean View High School's faculty in a basketball game Tuesday night in Huntington Beach.

The game is scheduled for the Ocean View gym at 8 p.m.

Included on the Stars team are Jimmy McNichol of "California Fever," Dirk Benedict of "Battlestar Galactica," Don Sutton and Steve Yeager of the Los Angeles Dodgers and high jumper Dwight Stones.

Also Mark Harmon and Lew Saunders of "240 Robert," Stephen Shortridge and Robert Hegyes of "Welcome Back Kotter," Jimmy Walker of "Good Times," Bo Hopkins of "Rockford Files" and Vincent Bufano of "Eisched."

Proceeds of the game, with the attendance fee set at $3.50 at the door, go to the Ocean View Seahawk baseball program.

An autograph session is slated at half-time, a spokesman said.

Huge, Hairy Creature at Nuke Site

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Security forces at the Nevada Test Site searched unsuccessfully last week for a large, hairy, manlike creature reported wandering along a road in the desolate nuclear testing ground, a Department of Energy spokesman said today.

The creature was reported shortly after noon Wednesday by an employee of Reynolds Electrical & Engineering Co., a prime contractor at the sprawling, Rhode Island-sized test site.

DOE spokesman Dave Jackson said the weather was clear at the time and the unidentified workman is "considered to be a reliable person."

Jackson said the man was driving along Timpah Highway, which runs from the Area 12 camp at the northern end of the test site to the command post near U.S. 95. He said he saw "what he described as a being, somewhere between 6 and 7 feet tall, standing erect and walking like a man, with dark hair completely covering its body."

He said the workman passed the creature, then stopped his truck "and observed the being cross the highway going in a northeasterly direction toward Yucca Flat. He watched it until it disappeared out into the sage brush." Jackson said the man reported he was between "30 and 50 yards" from the creature.

Normally no one would be in the area where the sighting was made — about 95 miles northwest of here — except for vehicle traffic from one part of the test site to another, Jackson said.

The man drove directly to the test site command post at

Mercury and reported the incident to security guards who "came out, looked at the area and were not able to find any tracks or other evidence that the beast had been there."

It was believed the report was the first made in Nevada. But over the years numerous reports of sightings of a large manlike being have been made in the Pacific Northwest, where the creature has been named "Sas-quatch." Similar reports of a "Bigfoot" have been made in Northern California.

Jackson said no further investigation would be made of the incident, but noted that the security forces that patrol the test site daily, as well as the 3,500 employees, probably would keep a sharp watch.

"If I were out there, I certainly would be," he said.

Tough Defense Vowed

Carter Lists National Priorities

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter pledged today to work for a "strong, unsurpassed defense capability" in his fourth year in office and said he expects progress this year in reducing inflation, which he called the nation's most serious economic problem.

"We must pay whatever price is required to remain the strongest nation in the world," the president said in a 75-page State of the Union message he sent to Congress.

Carter said the price of remaining the strongest nation has increased because of the growing military might of the Soviet Union and its readiness to use their military strength, which has "been made all too evident in Afghanistan."

He said U.S. steps to penalize the Russians for their intervention in Afghanistan demonstrate that the Soviet Union "will pay a heavy price for its aggression in terms of our relationship."

Carter said he will offer only a few new initiatives to Congress in 1980 because of the importance of enacting proposals he has previously sent to the lawmakers, especially those aimed at creating energy security.

"In the coming legislative session, the last in this presidential term, I am deeply committed to finishing the agenda that I have placed before the Congress," he said.

Carter said action on his uncompleted agenda is "absolutely essential for the nation's well-being."

However, he said he will make several proposals, including programs to expand youth employment, reauthorize general revenue sharing for state and local governments and require utilities to switch from oil to coal.

The president repeated an earlier pledge to increase defense spending by more than 20 percent above the rate of inflation over the next five years.

He defended his economic policies, saying that the past three years have been ones of "progress and achievement for the American people," although he acknowledged much more has to be done.

He predicted flatly that "inflation will slow this year" and should be even lower in 1981. The nation's inflation rate is about 13 percent and most (See CARTER, Page A2)

A Real Gusher

Eerily illuminated water spews out of a hydrant near a light pole in Irvine Sunday night after it was struck by a car. No injuries were reported in the accident. Police said the driver, Victor Jara, 25, of Huntington Beach, was westbound on Main St. and told officers he had to swerve his car to avoid another vehicle coming toward him in his lane. He lost control and hit the hydrant, which sent water 60 feet into the air.

Arabs Firming Up Anti-Soviet Front

In closed-door meetings and hurried jet flights, Arab envoys were engaged in intensive diplomatic activity in the Middle East today that informed sources in Beirut said was aimed at forging a common front on the issue of the Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan.

Afghanistan's seven rebellious day to discuss the situation in Afghanistan, where Soviet and Afghan government forces are trying to put down a rebellion by fundamentalist Moslem tribesmen.

Several Islamic states, including Saudi Arabia, have already announced they will be boycotting the summer Olympics in Moscow in protest.

U.S. ambassadors delivered personal messages from President Carter to the leaders of Bahrain, Oman and Sudan today dealing with the Afghan crisis, according to official reports from those governments. The contents of the messages were not revealed.

Meanwhile, British envoy Douglas Hurd, minister of state for foreign affairs, met with officials of the United Arab Emirates in that Persian Gulf oil state. Hurd has already visited Bahrain and Qatar.

Radio Tehran reported that an official of the Afghan Islamic Organization in the Iranian capital told it discussions were under way among the rebel groups to form a single guerrilla front.

Gold Leads Assault On Records

LONDON (AP) — Gold hit $850 an ounce in London today, surpassing the record set in European trading Friday.

London silver prices, riding the coattails of the bullion boom, rose to a record $50 an ounce from $49 at Friday's close.

The dollar firmed against all major European currencies, except for the strong British pound.

London's five major bullion dealers fixed the price for the afternoon trading session at $850. But it fell at the close to $838.

Gold bullion was quoted at $845 in Zurich, matching the record set Friday at Europe's main gold market.

The metal closed Friday at $840 in Zurich and $835 in London.

It hit a record of $838.78 in Hong Kong trading today, but fell to close at $827.78 in the Far Eastern market.

The gold price has soared by more than $640 an ounce since this time last year in a rush for the traditional haven in times of monetary uncertainty and political crises.

A New York investment adviser, James Sinclair, was quoted in The Times of London today as saying the price may reach four figures this year.

South Irvine in Dark

Power Loss Affects Large Area

A large portion of southern Irvine — including an industrial area where Fluor Corp. and Beckman Instruments are located — lost electrical power for about an hour early today, Southern California Edison Co. officials said.

Power was lost at about 4:04 a.m. when a substation at the corner of Jamboree Boulevard and Michelson Drive was knocked out of service.

The outage affected about 5,300 customers, half of whom had power restored at 4:36 a.m. and the remainder at 5:05 a.m.

Cause of the blackout is not known, officials said this morning. The area of the outage was bounded by University Drive to the east, MacArthur Boulevard to the west, Barranca Road to the north and the intersection of Jamboree Boulevard and MacArthur Boulevard to the south.

Within this area are hotels and restaurants next to John Wayne Airport, the residential villages of University Park, Woodbridge and Rancho San Joaquin and the industrial areas where Fluor, Beckman, Parker Hannifin and other industrial firms have their offices.

An Edison spokesman said witnesses reported hearing loud explosions and seeing flashes in the sky just before the blackout occurred. "We don't know what happened," the spokesman said.

A breaker at the substation opened, terminating service out of the facility.

There was no apparent damage to the substation, which is unmanned, and crews were investigating the outage this morning.

Police said the outage triggered many burglar alarms in the industrial area, but reported no other serious problems during the blackout.

Court Backs Church Raid

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Supreme Court today rejected the Church of Scientology's attempt to recover documents seized by the FBI in a 1977 raid on church offices in Los Angeles.

Without comment, the justices left intact a ruling that the church has no legal right to recover the documents while criminal proceedings are pending against some church members.

About 150 FBI agents, armed with search warrants and crowbars, seized thousands of documents from the church's Los Angeles offices early in the morning of July 8, 1977. A simultaneous FBI raid and search was conducted at the Founding Church of Scientology office in Washington, D.C.

IUSD Mulls Proficiency Test Plan

Irvine's Board of Education will be asked tonight to approve proposed minimum proficiency tests for grades six, eight and high school.

The board meets at 7:30 p.m. at Lakeside Middle School, 3 Lemongrass.

Interim proficiency goals, objectives and indicators were approved by Irvine Unified School District trustees last June to meet the provisions of state laws which require districts with high schools to adopt minimum proficiency standards in reading, writing and mathematics.

Students graduating after June 1980 must pass a high school minimum proficiency test to receive a diploma.

Officials said the original law establishing proficiency standards was passed in 1976 and applied to high schools only. But another law in 1977 extended the concept of assessment in basic skills to the elementary and middle school levels.

That law, AB 65, said there would need to be proficiency standards, or progress indicators, for grades six and eight and that those indicators must correlate to the proficiencies of the high school.

The law also required early assessment, once in grades four through six, and then again in grades seven through nine.

"It was the intent of the legislation that the progress indicators serve as an 'early warning system' to identify students in need of additional instruction," Assistant Superintendent Bruce Givner said.

DAY IN BRIEF

Highlights from today's world and national news developments.

Dallas Busing Plan Survives

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Supreme Court cleared the way today for increased busing of public school pupils in Dallas as a method to provide racial balance in the nation's eighth-largest school district.

By a 6-3 vote, the court decided not to review an appeals court ruling that gave the go-ahead for busing an estimated 20,000 students at an annual cost of $5.8 million.

Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr., writing for the dissenters, said the increased busing could backfire and lead to further exodus by whites from the city's public schools. Powell noted that since 1971, the percentage of white students in Dallas schools dropped from 68 percent to 33.5 percent last year.

Brown Sees A-Plant

SEABROOK, N.H. (AP) — Gov. Edmund Brown, the 1980 presidential campaign's most vocal foe of the Seabrook atomic power plant, came face to face with the target of his opposition today.

After a 20-minute tour of the construction site, Brown renewed his promise to close Seabrook if he is elected president. When asked if the tour changed his mind, the California governor said, "not at all."

"The country has to change pace. The risks from nuclear power are too great," he said.

Exports Blocked

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration today revoked the licenses for the export of spare computer parts for a controversial Soviet truck plant.

The action was the latest in a series of steps taken by administration officials to try to penalize the Soviet Union for its military intervention in Afghanistan.

The revocation of the export licenses will block the shipment of high-technology goods intended for a truck factory begun in the early 1970s with U.S. help on the Kama River in the Ural Mountains of northeastern Russia.

State Action Holds

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Supreme Court today refused to revive an invalidated California law that barred lobbyists, acting for themselves or others, from making political contributions.

By a 7-2 vote, the justices left intact a California Supreme Court decision striking down one section of the state's Political Reform Act of 1974.

Justices Byron R. White and Harry A. Blackmun voted to hear arguments in the case, but the votes of four justices are required.

Slain SJC Girl Identified

A 17-year-old San Juan Capistrano girl was identified today as the victim of a fatal stabbing by her boyfriend who then killed himself with a shotgun blast early Saturday in Dana Point.

Orange County coroner's investigators said Connie Paulson was found dead at 4 a.m. Saturday of multiple stab wounds. She was also shot in the head with a shotgun blast after she was stabbed to death, investigators said.

Sheriff's investigators said it is believed Miss Paulson was stabbed by her boyfriend Dennis Michael Spires, 20, of Dana Point who was found dead from a self-inflicted shotgun blast to his neck.

Sheriff's Lt. Wyatt Hart said Spires had driven Miss Paulson to his home at 33651 Big Sur St. where he stabbed her and then committed suicide after a lovers' quarrel earlier.

The lovers' quarrel also left Rick Goddard, 19, of San Clemente, with multiple stab wounds. Goddard was reported in stable condition today at South Coast Community Medical Center.

Sheriff's investigators said Goddard drove Miss Paulson away from a Capistrano Beach party at about midnight after she quarreled with Spires.

Goddard drove the girl in his van to an isolated spot on Pacific Coast Highway where Spires found them and reportedly began stabbing them.

Investigators said Goddard fled on foot to seek help. Sheriff's deputies were notified and began a search for Spires and Miss Paulson who had apparently left the scene in Spires' compact pickup truck.

At 4 a.m., deputies found the dead pair in the front seat of Spires' truck parked near his home.

Funeral services for both victims are still pending.

Klan Calls For Mexican Deportations

SAN PASQUAL (AP) — Three Mexican-Americans heckled 41 hooded Klansmen and their supporters at a rally urging deportation of "millions of Mexicans" from the United States.

"It's time to round them up and ship them back to Mexico," said Tom Metzger, California director of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan.

The rally is staged annually at the San Pasqual Battle Monument in the northeast corner of San Diego, near Escondido, marking an 1846 battle in which 21 U.S. soldiers died fighting Mexican troops. At the time, it was Mexican land.

At the head of a march Sunday to the monument was a white horse ridden by a youth who identified himself as Winston Burbage, a 19-year-old Klan member.

Metzger said the hooded men, women and children came from Riverside and San Diego counties to honor forgotten Americans but "now it's 1980 and the problem is here again," he said.

Metzger said, "You have millions of Mexicans invading your country. The Communists love them. The capitalists love them because they are cheap labor."

When the Klansmen shouted "White Power," the three male hecklers cried "Heil Hitler!"

El Toro Boy, 9, Succumbs To Injuries

A 14-year-old El Toro boy who was assisting a newspaper delivery driver on his route Jan. 5, died Friday of injuries suffered when he fell off the vehicle.

Alfonso Cortina, of El Toro, died Friday at Saddleback Community Hospital after striking his head on the pavement Jan. 5 while delivering bundles of Los Angeles Times newspapers in the El Toro area.

California Highway Patrol officers said Cortina and driver Dallas May, 35, of Garden Grove, were unloading papers on Moulton Parkway south of Lake Forest at about 5:30 p.m.

According to investigators, May allegedly started up the truck and began driving away, apparently unaware that young Cortina was hanging onto a heavy chain curtain at the rear of the truck.

The boy either slipped or let go as the truck picked up speed and Cortina struck the pavement on his head.

Politicians Watch Iowa Caucus Vote

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — In living rooms, church basements and schoolhouses, Iowa Republicans and Democrats meet today to declare their presidential preferences in primary campaigns marked by sharp swings in public opinion polls.

The parties' precinct caucuses, most of which start at 6 p.m. PST, are the first official tests of the presidential campaign and a majority of the 10 Republicans and three Democrats seeking nomination campaigned hard in the state.

But not President Carter, who said the Iranian crisis required him to remain in Washington. Instead, he sent Vice President Walter F. Mondale, members of the Cabinet, his wife Rosalynn, their children and his mother.

And on Sunday, Carter demonstrated again the ability of a president to capture attention when he appeared on NBC's "Meet the Press." He urged a boycott of the summer Olympics in Moscow and defended the policies pursued during his three years in the White House.

Carter's chief rival for the Democratic nomination, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, was also on nationwide television Sunday.

On ABC's "Issues and Answers," he said he would support an Olympics boycott, but called that proposal and the administration's partial embargo of grain sales to the Soviets "symbols" and added, "I don't think symbols are a substitute for an effective foreign policy."

Kennedy said Carter must receive at least 50 percent of the caucus votes to claim victory — a difficult goal in a state that traditionally elects many uncommitted delegates.

Kennedy found himself in the role of an underdog, a dramatic reversal from the days before he became a candidate and before the takeover of the U.S. Embassy in Iran, when the senator led Carter two-to-one in most polls.

Orange County Supervisors are to decide Tuesday how much to raise the annual rates on the 18 county moorings in Newport Beach.

In two previous discussions, supervisors agreed that the mooring rates should be hiked, but deadlocked over how much.

Newport Beach officials have said they will take a second look at the rates of 572 city moorings should supervisors vote to raise fees for the county moorings.

A spokesman for the only supervisor who hasn't voted on the issue, Edison Miller, said today that Miller's main concern was with what he calls the "black market" in moorings.

"There's a significant black market going on in moorings right now," said Chris Loumakis, Miller's aide.

Besides subleasing the moorings, boat owners can substantially hike the sale price of their vessels if they have moorings, Loumakis said.

Presently, a mooring can be transferred only if someone buys the vessel moored there.

economists think it will drop to just under 10 percent by the end of 1980.

Carter said his budget for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1 will continue his policy of spending restraint and result in the smallest budget deficit in seven years.

On foreign affairs, Carter said one immediate and pressing objective is to secure the release of the American hostages in Iran, indicating once this is done the United States would move to renew ties to the Iranian government.

He said the Iranians should realize that "the threat to them comes not from American policy but from Soviet actions in the region."

Carter's written message is the first of four documents he will submit to Congress detailing his goals for 1980. He makes his State of the Union address to Congress on Wednesday night, presents his fiscal 1981 budget next Monday and will make his annual economic report sometime next week.

Suspect in Shock Following Arrest

Former reporter Thomas Barley was seemingly in a state of shock and unable to recollect events after his arrest in the stabbing death of his wife, a Santa Ana police investigator testified today.

Clark W. Moorhouse told the seven-man, five-woman Orange County Superior Court jury that Barley, 51, was "extremely nervous when he was interviewed several hours after Catherine Barley, 46, was stabbed outside a Santa Ana coffee shop last May 26."

"The impression was he couldn't believe he was there," Moorhouse testified in apparent reference to the police station.

Further, Moorhouse testified Barley said in the interview that he could not believe his wife was dead. He reportedly told investigators "I just saw her outside," Moorhouse told the court.

Barley, who formerly covered the county court beat for the Daily Pilot, was arrested at the murder scene. The crime was witnessed by at least 14 persons.

Barley has pleaded innocent by reason of insanity. It is the contention of defense attorney George Chula that the former news reporter was suffering diminished mental capacity when the knife attack took place.

Moorhouse also testified that Barley complained of chest and lung pains after his arrest and was examined at UC Irvine Medical Center before booking into Orange County Jail.

The investigator also told the court that a search of an Orange apartment where Barley was living produced a sheath to the letter opener used in the attack on Mrs. Barley.

Chula attempted to win suppression of the sheath based on the assertion that the search of the apartment was illegal. Judge Mason Fenton however, decided that the investigators did have permission to search the apartment.

Tito Recovering After Amputation

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — President Josip Broz Tito spent a quiet night and was in good condition today following the life-saving amputation of his left leg, doctors reported.

Yugoslavia's 87-year-old leader was operated on Sunday for the second time in eight days to prevent fatal gangrene poisoning due to blockage in the arteries of the leg.

"The general condition of President Tito is good," his doctors said in a medical bulletin issued today.

They said his pulse, blood pressure and temperature were within normal limits.

Belgrade remained calm despite speculation that the Russians might try to coerce Yugoslavia back into the Kremlin's orbit if Tito, the pioneer of independent communism, died.

Antiaircraft guns were set up at the Belgrade and Zagreb airports, but this appeared to be part of a nationwide, low-priority "vigilance" program ordered after the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan.

Jimmy Durante Remains Stable

SANTA MONICA (AP) — Two weeks after being hospitalized for pneumonia, entertainer Jimmy Durante remained in stable condition today, but his vital signs continue to deteriorate.

The 88-year-old comedian and actor is still semi-conscious and suffering from lung congestion, according to hospital spokeswoman Vicki Farley.

Former Newport Beach city planner Michael Ocorr has declared his candidacy for one of the two Laguna Beach City Council seats up for election April 8.

And fired San Clemente Planning Commission member William Mecham said Friday he plans to run again for a council seat in his hometown.

Ocorr, who did not list his age or address with the city clerk, resigned from his post as senior planner with Newport Beach in November after about one year there.

Mecham, a school teacher in the Saddleback Valley Unified School District, was fired on a 3-2 council vote Dec. 19 after he was criticized for questioning city aides.

Mecham, who ran for the council last April, asserted that he was "doing my job" in grilling city aides about a questionable grading and digging project on the Forster Ranch.

A total of four hopefuls have declared their intent to seek San Clemente council posts in April. They are Mecham, William Wagner, Bernard Allen and Richard Rusin.

San Clemente incumbent councilmen Richard Ahlman and Edward Kalsched have not yet announced whether they will seek re-election.

But Laguna Beach council incumbents Sally Bellerue and Jack McDowell say they will seek re-election. Their challengers are Ocorr, Steven Rigga, Neil Fitzpatrick and John Gabriels.

Meanwhile, in San Juan Capistrano, the list of challengers for two seats on the City Council has grown to four. Incumbents Kenneth Friess and Lawrence Buchheim are seeking re-election.

Their challengers include James P. Atkins, Harold Dunn, Ed Dieden and Dan Vangalis.

Laguna Intruder Routed by Scream

Jimmy Durante Remains Stable

SANTA MONICA (AP) — Two weeks after being hospitalized for pneumonia, entertainer Jimmy Durante remained in stable condition today, but his vital signs continue to deteriorate.

The 86-year-old comedian and actor is still semi-conscious and suffering from lung congestion.

Police said the 24-year-old woman, who lives in the north part of town, had left the door to her house unlocked while visiting neighbors late Saturday night.

When she returned home hours later, the suspect was hiding in the house, police said.

He appeared at the woman's side after she had gone to bed and began to fondle himself.

Police said the strangely-garbed suspect told the woman to "Strip or I'll kill you," at which time the terrified woman screamed for help.

The suspect fled before officers arrived at the house.

Slain Girlfriend Was SJC Resident

A 17-year-old San Juan Capistrano girl was identified today as the victim of a fatal stabbing by her boyfriend who then killed himself with a shotgun blast early Saturday in Dana Point.

Orange County coroner's investigators said Connie Paulson was found dead at 4 a.m. Saturday of multiple stab wounds. She was also shot in the head with a shotgun blast after she was stabbed to death, investigators said.

Sheriff's investigators said it is believed Miss Paulson was stabbed by her boyfriend Dennis Michael Spires, 20, of Dana Point who was found dead from a self-inflicted shotgun blast to his neck.

Sheriff's Lt. Wyatt Hart said Spires had driven Miss Paulson to his home at 33651 Big Sur St. where he stabbed her and then committed suicide after a lovers' quarrel earlier.

The lovers' quarrel also left

Rick Goddard, 19, of San Clemente, with multiple stab wounds. Goddard was reported in stable condition today at South Coast Community Medical Center.

Sheriff's investigators said Goddard drove Miss Paulson away from a Capistrano Beach party at about midnight after she quarreled with Spires.

Goddard drove the girl in his van to an isolated spot on Pacific Coast Highway where Spires found them and reportedly began stabbing them.

Investigators said Goddard fled on foot to seek help. Sheriff's deputies were notified and began a search for Spires and Miss Paulson who had apparently left the scene in Spires' compact pickup truck.

At 4 a.m., deputies found the dead pair in the front seat of Spires' truck parked near his home.

Funeral services for both victims are still pending.

Lagunan Facing Morals Charges

A Laguna Beach man faces charges of photographing and distributing slides and motion pictures of nude children and for furnishing marijuana to minors following his arrest Friday.

Norman Isaac Lewis, 36, of 963 Santa Ana St., was arrested at his home late Friday afternoon after members of the south county Major Crime Suppression Team obtained search warrants for the man's home, office and vehicle.

Lewis is to be arraigned on the charges in South Orange County Municipal Court Feb. 1. Police said the suspect posted $10,000 bond shortly after his arrest Friday.

Police and Sheriff's investigators converged on Lewis' home at about 5:30 p.m. Friday, seizing what officers term was a "substantial quantity of evidence at all three locations."

"The evidence indicates Lewis was involved in the continuing use of minors to produce illicit movies and still photographs," said Laguna Beach Sgt. Bruce Briggs.

Briggs said slides and motion pictures seized at the apartment, in Lewis' car, and at an office at 230 Oak St. filled several shopping bags.

The officer said some of the slides were photographed in Laguna Beach, probably at the Santa Ana Street address and the office building.

He said investigators will be poring through thousands of slides and Super 8 mm movie films in an attempt to identify local youngsters who participated in the filming.

"We've identified kids from 15 years of age and possibly younger," Briggs said, adding investigators are comparing the slides with yearbook pictures from the local high school.

In addition to slides and movie film, investigators said they also seized a small quantity of marijuana and narcotics paraphernalia in their search.

Briggs said "at least three" more arrests are anticipated.

41 Injured In Gas Blast

BORGER, Texas (AP) — A cracking unit at a gasoline refinery exploded four miles from Borger in the second accident at the site in four months, causing widespread destruction and injuring at least 41 persons.

Flames sprouted 200 feet high Sunday following a series of four blasts that sparked the spectacular fire and demolished part of the refinery. Shock waves collapsed ceilings in nearby homes, shattered plate glass windows in Borger and were felt 30 miles away in Pampa.

"It was more like an earthquake," said Ada Westbrook who lives in a mobile home about a mile and a half from the scene. "All the stuff on the walls just shot right off and landed on the floor," she said. "We opened the door and saw a big ball of fire."

DAY IN BRIEF

Highlights from today's world and national news developments

Dallas Busing Plan Survives

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Supreme Court cleared the way today for increased busing of public school pupils in Dallas as a method to provide racial balance in the nation's eighth-largest school district.

By a 6-3 vote, the court decided not to review an appeals court ruling that gave the go-ahead for busing an estimated 20,000 students at an annual cost of $5.8 million.

Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr., writing for the dissenters, said the increased busing could backfire and lead to further exodus by whites from the city's public schools. Powell noted that since 1971, the percentage of white students in Dallas schools dropped from 69 percent to 33.5 percent last year.

Brown Sees A-Plant

SEABROOK, N.H. (AP) — Gov. Edmund Brown, the 1980 presidential campaign's most vocal foe of the Seabrook atomic power plant, came face to face with the target of his opposition today.

After a 20-minute tour of the construction site, Brown renewed his promise to close Seabrook if he is elected president.

When asked if the tour changed his mind, the California governor said, "not at all."

"The country has to change pace. The risks from nuclear power are too great," he said.

Exports Blocked

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration today revoked the licenses for the export of spare computer parts for a controversial Soviet truck plant.

The action was the latest in a series of steps taken by administration officials to try to penalize the Soviet Union for its military intervention in Afghanistan.

The revocation of the export licenses will block the shipment of high-technology goods intended for a truck factory begun in the early 1970s with U.S. help on the Kama River in the Ural Mountains of northeastern Russia.

State Action Holds

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Supreme Court today refused to revive an invalidated California law that barred lobbyists, acting for themselves or others, from making political contributions.

By a 7-2 vote, the justices left intact a California Supreme Court decision striking down one section of the state's Political Reform Act of 1974.

Justices Byron R. White and Harry A. Blackmun voted to hear arguments in the case, but the votes of four justices are required.

9 Face Hashish Charges

Arraignment of seven of nine persons arrested in connection with an alleged hashish smuggling operation of the Brotherhood of Eternal Love has been postponed to Feb. 8.

Two others named in a Grand Jury indictment have pleaded innocent to the charges they conspired to import more than 3,000 pounds of the concentrated marijuana derivative into the United States from Afghanistan.

Four suspects remain at large. According to the text of the indictment, which was released Friday, the 13 defendants conspired in 1977 and 1978 to import the hashish, valued at about $3.3 million, to the United States.

Among those named in the indictment are Donald K. Drury, 42, of San Clemente and John Hart, 38, of Laguna Beach.

The hashish, according to the indictment, originally was to be distributed in Idaho, but plans were changed and San Francisco was targeted as the destination point.

Finalization of the plans for the hashish importation, it is alleged, were celebrated at a Dec. 31, 1977 party at Hart's Laguna Beach residence.

Subsequently, two of the defendants traveled to Afghanistan to prepare the hashish for shipment, it is alleged.

About 500 pounds of the drug were intercepted in the Northern California city of Concord in August 1978, according to investigators.

The indictment was sought in Orange County because many of the planning meetings of the group were held in San Clemente, Laguna Beach and Seal Beach, said Deputy District Attorney Carl Armbrust.

Several members of the Brotherhood of Eternal Love, an outfit founded by Dr. Timothy Leary, were named in a 1972 Orange County indictment.

Among those named in the 1972 bill of charges and the current case is Robert Leroy "Fat Bobby" Andrist, a Curry County, Ore., resident arrested last Wednesday by law enforcement agents.

Andrist's attorney, Larry Scissors of Los Angeles, claimed that his client was living "a straight clean life" ever since he left Orange County after spending a year in Orange County Jail in connection with the 1972 case.

"He is a well respected member of the community where he lives," Scissors said.

Rider Has Ups, Downs

HAINES CITY, Fla. (AP) — Richie Rodriguez has finished his ride aboard Circus World's Hurricane roller coaster. It took him more than a week, but he hopes it will carry him to a world record. Rodriguez, twice listed in the Guinness Book of World Records for his roller coaster marathons, stayed on the ride 173 hours, breaking his year-old record by two hours.

The 22-year-old Brooklyn, N.Y., resident completed 3,958 circuits around the three-quarter-mile track.

El Toro Boy, 9, Succumbs To Injuries

A 14-year-old El Toro boy who was assisting a newspaper delivery driver on his route Jan. 5, died Friday of injuries suffered when he fell off the vehicle.

Alfonso Cortina, of El Toro, died Friday at Saddleback Community Hospital after striking his head on the pavement Jan. 5 while delivering bundles of Los Angeles Times newspapers in the El Toro area.

California Highway Patrol officers said Cortina and driver Dallas May, 35, of Garden Grove, were unloading papers on Moulton Parkway south of Lake Forest at about 5:30 p.m.

According to investigators, May allegedly started up the truck and began driving away, apparently unaware that young Cortina was hanging onto a heavy chain curtain at the rear of the truck.

The boy either slipped or let go as the truck picked up speed and Cortina struck the pavement on his head.

for foreign affairs, met with officials of the United Arab Emirates in that Persian Gulf oil state. Hurd has already visited Bahrain and Qatar.

Radio Tehran reported that an official of the Afghan Islamic Organization in the Iranian capital told it discussions were under way among the rebel groups to form a single guerrilla front.

"The Afghan revolutionaries' duty is to expel the Soviet forces from Afghanistan through jihad (holy war), not through negotiations," the official reportedly said.

The Moslem rebels in Afghanistan are divided along tribal lines. They have been fighting their separate wars since the first communist coup in April 1978 and were reported to control half the country or more.

But the necessity for unification and coordination became apparent last month when the Soviet Union sent as many as 100,000 troops into Afghanistan to crush the rebellion and support the coup that eliminated President Hafizullah Amin and replaced him with Babrak Karmal, a more pliable Russian proxy.

Pentagon sources in Washington said the fighting since the Soviet intervention has been fiercest in the northeast part of Afghanistan, bordering the Soviet Union, Pakistan and China. The sources in Washington said the Soviets may need 5,000 reinforcements there to make up for Afghan army defections to the rebels. More Soviet troops were landed at Kabul airport over the weekend, according to American reporters expelled by the new government.

Burglars Get $6,632 In Break-ins

Burglars netted $6,632 in loot in four separate break-ins reported in San Clemente over the weekend.

A $6,000 brown mink coat was reported taken from the home of Gary C. Humphreys on the 200 block of Avenida Montalvo. Police found the owner's sliding glass door opened by the burglar.

Mary Donahue, of the 600 block of Avenida Vaquero, told police three surfboards with a total value of $600 were taken Saturday from her garage. The burglar entered a side door, police said.

Pat McGregor told police someone broke into his laundry room at 206 Ave. Victoria and took $20 in coins from the coin-operated washers.

Helen Mohr, a 300 block of Plaza Estival resident, told police her home was burglarized some time Saturday and a $2 bill and liquor valued at $10 were taken.

Six Hurt In Crash Of Autos

Six persons were injured Sunday night in a head-on automobile collision on Del Obispo Street near the Via de Agua curve in San Juan Capistrano.

The driver of one of the cars, 17-year-old Steven Jon Brady, was trapped in the wreckage and had to be cut free by some of the 18 Orange County firefighters and paramedics who responded to the 7:45 p.m. accident.

Brady, of 33101 Big Sur, San Clemente, suffered a possible whiplash and disfigured lower lip, according to sheriff's spokesman Lt. Wyatt Hart.

Hart said three passengers in Brady's Subaru were treated at hospitals for injuries:

—Judith Brady, 45, mother of the driver, possible head injuries and cuts and bruises.

—Michelle Fernandez, 18, of 1307 Del Estrella, San Clemente, severe facial cuts and a possible head injury.

—Lisa Densmore, 19, 107 Esplanade, San Clemente, knee cuts and abrasions.

The driver of the second car who was listed as Robert Fredericks, 28, of 27081 Tajo, Mission Viejo, suffered possible head injuries and cuts, Hart said.

Fredericks' passenger, Donald Pritchard, 23, of 411 Adams St., Huntington Beach, also suffered possible head injuries and a possible fractured arm, Hart said.

The victims were treated at Mission Community Hospital and San Clemente General Hospital.

Hart said it appeared that Fredericks' Toyota land cruiser was traveling at an unsafe speed and crossed over the center divider.

He said charges may be filed pending further investigation.

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Saudi Arabia has told the United States and Britain that the Soviet Union and Cuba reinforced their military presence in neighboring South Yemen in recent weeks, Arab diplomatic sources said today.

Political Funding Trial Set March 3

Pre-trial motions are now scheduled for Feb. 11 in court action against Orange County Supervisor Philip Anthony on charges of laundering campaign funds.

Co-defendants in the case include former supervisor Ralph Diedrich, former Anaheim councilman William Kott and one-time political financier Gene Conrad.

The Orange County Grand Jury accused the defendants in December of concealing the true source of more than $77,000 that was funneled into 1976 political campaigns.

The trial is scheduled to start March 3.

State Deputy Attorney General Jeffrey Joseph said he was satisfied and pleased with the decision to order the March 3 trial before Superior Court Judge Claude M. Owens.

The trial-setting action came Friday after the state attorney met behind closed doors in the chambers of Orange County Superior Court Judge Richard Beacom.

In December, the Grand Jury indictment was sought by prosecutors amid concerns that the statute of limitations might run out on identical charges brought against the four defendants in a March, 1979, criminal complaint.

Consumer Aid Office Near Opening Date

A full-time consumer affairs office for South Orange County is scheduled to open in about two weeks following action recently by the Orange County Board of Supervisors.

The board approved plans to provide staff members and office space for the consumer office in the South Orange County Municipal Courthouse on Crown Valley Parkway in Laguna Niguel.

The office will be located in space which has been assigned to Fifth District Supervisor Thomas Riley.

It will be open a half day on Mondays and all day Tuesdays through Fridays.

Action by Supervisors Tuesday earmarked $200 for telephone installation and the moving of office furniture.

A consumer affairs staff member will be transferred to Laguna Niguel to serve the office. The county also plans to recruit local volunteers to provide consumer counseling and mediation.

The Laguna Niguel office is the third satellite consumer facility in the county but the first in South County. Others are located in Huntington Beach and Westminster.

The Office of Consumer Affairs opened in Orange County in March of 1972. At the end of 1978, it had received 30,735 complaints accounting for $2.7 million in cash, goods or services returned to consumers, according to county officials.

Tito Recovering After Amputation

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — President Josip Broz Tito spent a quiet night and was in good condition today following the life-saving amputation of his left leg, doctors reported.

Yugoslavia's 87-year-old leader was operated on Sunday for the second time in eight days to prevent fatal gangrene poisoning due to blockage in the arteries of the leg.

"The general condition of President Tito is good," his doctors said in a medical bulletin issued today.

They said his pulse, blood pressure and temperature were within normal limits.

Belgrade remained calm despite speculation that the Russians might try to coerce Yugoslavia back into the Kremlin's orbit if Tito, the pioneer of independent communism, died.

Antiaircraft guns were set up at the Belgrade and Zagreb airports, but this appeared to be part of a nationwide, low-priority "vigilance" program ordered after the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan.

In Bonn, the West German Defense Ministry denied German newspaper reports that the Soviets were reinforcing troops in Central Europe because of Tito's condition.

"A strengthening of Warsaw Pact troops in Central Europe or unusual troop movements cannot currently be observed — also not against Yugoslavia," a spokesman said.

"We are with Tito as always," the newspaper Borba said today. "Tito is with us and in us."

It published a telegram from one of his World War II Partisans, a machine-gunner at a famous 1941 battle, who said: "Your deeds will live forever but you must recover."

Two incumbents are the only persons so far to file papers to run in the April 8 Costa Mesa City Council election, the city clerk's office reported today.

Mayor Ed McFarland filed his papers Friday, following in the footsteps of Councilman Donn Hall, who filed earlier. A third person, businessman Chris Steel, has taken out nomination papers but has not returned them.

Three of the council's five seats will be up for election, with all candidates running at large.

Councilman Dom Raciti said today he hasn't yet decided whether to seek a third term.

If Raciti doesn't file by the deadline of Jan. 31, filing for other candidates will be extended until Feb. 5, city officials said.

Tough Defense Vowed

Carter Lists National Priorities

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter pledged today to work for a "strong, unsurpassed defense capability" in his fourth year in office and said he expects progress this year in reducing inflation, which he called the nation's most serious economic problem.

"We must pay whatever price is required to remain the strongest nation in the world," the president said in a 75-page State of the Union message he sent to Congress.

Carter said the price of remaining the strongest nation has increased because of the growing military might of the Soviet Union and its readiness to use their military strength, which has "been made all too evident in Afghanistan."

He said U.S. steps to penalize the Russians for their intervention in Afghanistan demonstrate that the Soviet Union "will pay a heavy price for its aggression in terms of our relationship."

Carter said he will offer only a few new initiatives to Congress in 1980 because of the importance of enacting proposals he has previously sent to the lawmakers, especially those aimed at creating energy security.

"In the coming legislative session, the last in this presidential term, I am deeply committed to finishing the agenda that I have placed before the Congress," he said.

Carter said action on his uncompleted agenda is "absolutely essential for the nation's well-being."

However, he said he will make several proposals, including programs to expand youth employment, reauthorize general revenue sharing for state and local governments and require utilities to switch from oil to coal.

The president repeated an earlier pledge to increase defense spending by more than 20 percent above the rate of inflation over the next five years.

He defended his economic policies, saying that the past three years have been ones of "progress and achievement for the American people," although he acknowledged much more has to be done.

He predicted flatly that "inflation will slow this year" and should be even lower in 1981. The nation's inflation rate is about 13 percent and most

Gold Leads Assault On Records

LONDON (AP) — Gold hit $850 an ounce in London today, surpassing the record set in European trading Friday.

London silver prices, riding the coattails of the bullion boom, rose to a record $50 an ounce from $49 at Friday's close.

The dollar firmed against all major European currencies, except for the strong British pound.

London's five major bullion dealers fixed the price for the afternoon trading session at $850. But it fell at the close to $838.

Gold bullion was quoted at $845 in Zurich, matching the record set Friday at Europe's main gold market.

The metal closed Friday at $840 in Zurich and $835 in London.

It hit a record of $838.78 in Hong Kong trading today, but fell to close at $827.78 in the Far Eastern market.

The gold price has soared by more than $640 an ounce since this time last year in a rush for the traditional haven in times of monetary uncertainty and political crises.

A New York investment adviser, James Sinclair, was quoted in The Times of London today as saying the price may reach four figures this year.

'Hairy Creature' Seen

Reported Wandering in Nevada Nuke Area

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Security forces at the Nevada Test Site searched unsuccessfully last week for a large, hairy, manlike creature reported wandering along a road in the desolate nuclear testing ground, a Department of Energy spokesman said today.

The creature was reported shortly after noon Wednesday by an employee of Reynolds Electrical & Engineering Co., a prime contractor at the sprawling, Rhode Island-sized test site.

DOE spokesman Dave Jackson said the weather was clear at the time and the unidentified workman "considered to be a reliable person."

Jackson said the man was driving along Timpah Highway, which runs from the Area 12 camp at the northern end of the test site to the command post near U.S. 95. He said he saw "what he described as a being, somewhere between 6 and 7 feet tall, standing erect and walking like a man, with dark hair completely covering its body."

He said the workman passed the creature, then stopped his truck "and observed the being cross the highway going in a northerly direction toward Yucca Flat. He watched it until it disappeared out into the sage brush." Jackson said the man reported he was between "30 and 50 yards" from the creature.

Normally no one would be in the area where the sighting was made — about 95 miles northwest of here — except for vehicle traffic from one part of the test site to another, Jackson said.

The man drove directly to the test site command post at Mercury and reported the incident to security guards who "came out, looked at the area and were not able to find any tracks or other evidence that the beast had been there."

It was believed the report was the first made in Nevada. But over the years numerous reports of sightings of a large man-like being have been made in the Pacific Northwest, where the creature has been named "Sasquatch." Similar reports of a "Bigfoot" have been made in Northern California.

Militants Still Want Shah Back

By The Associated Press
U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim says he hopes a plan devised during his visit to Iran will lead to the release of the American hostages in Tehran. But the Iranian militants holding the Americans captive still insist the deposed shah must be returned before the hostages are freed.

"We have worked out a mechanism... and I hope this mechanism will make it possible to satisfy the government of Iran and lead to release of the hostages," Waldheim told reporters Sunday in New Delhi, India.

The U.N. chief would give no details of his plan. But after his visit to Tehran, Iranian officials said he proposed setting up a U.N. commission to investigate the Iranian revolutionary regime's charges against the deposed shah.

At the time, Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh welcomed the proposal. But he said the commission's findings would not be binding on Iran, and the hostages would not be released until the shah was returned.

Ghotbzadeh repeated this stand Saturday, telling a French interviewer that the return of the shah, now living in Panama, was the only way out of the impasse.

"It's easy," he said. "They give us the shah. We give them the hostages."

A spokesman for the militants holding the hostages, reached by telephone Sunday at the occupied U.S. Embassy, said: "Nothing would possibly lead to the release of the hostages but

DAY IN BRIEF

Highlights from today's world and national news developments

Dallas Busing Plan Survives

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Supreme Court cleared the way today for increased busing of public school pupils in Dallas as a method to provide racial balance in the nation's eighth-largest school district.

By a 6-3 vote, the court decided not to review an appeals court ruling that gave the go-ahead for busing an estimated 20,000 students at an annual cost of $5.8 million.

Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr., writing for the dissenters, said the increased busing could backfire and lead to further exodus by whites from the city's public schools. Powell noted that since 1971, the percentage of white students in Dallas schools dropped from 69 percent to 53.5 percent last year.

Brown Sees A-Plant

SEABROOK, N.H. (AP) — Gov. Edmund Brown, the 1980 presidential campaign's most vocal foe of the Seabrook atomic power plant, came face to face with the target of his opposition today.

After a 20-minute tour of the construction site, Brown renewed his promise to close Seabrook if he is elected president.

When asked if the tour changed his mind, the California governor said, "not at all."

"The country has to change pace. The risks from nuclear power are too great," he said.

Exports Blocked

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration today revoked the licenses for the export of spare computer parts for a controversial Soviet truck plant.

The action was the latest in a series of steps taken by administration officials to try to penalize the Soviet Union for its military intervention in Afghanistan.

The revocation of the export licenses will block the shipment of high-technology goods intended for a truck factory begun in the early 1970s with U.S. help on the Kama River in the Ural Mountains of northeastern Russia.

Iran Plane Believed Down

By The Associated Press

An Iran Air Boeing 737 aircraft on a flight to Tehran from Mashhad in western Iran with 124 persons on board is missing and believed to have crashed, it was reported today.

An air traffic controller at Tehran's Mehrabad airport confirmed that Flight 921, which left Mashhad at 4:40 p.m. local time, had lost contact with the control tower.

The official Pars news agency said the flight was nearly four hours overdue and there were 116 passengers and eight crew members aboard.

Trial Testimony

Suspect in Shock Following Arrest

Former reporter Thomas Barley was seemingly in a state of shock and unable to recollect events after his arrest in the stabbing death of his wife, a Santa Ana police investigator testified today.

Clark W. Moorhouse told the seven-man, five-woman Orange County Superior Court jury that Barley, 51, was "extremely nervous" when he was interviewed several hours after Catherine Barley, 46, was stabbed outside a Santa Ana coffee shop last May 26.

"The impression was he couldn't believe he was there," Moorhouse testified in apparent reference to the police station.

Further, Moorhouse testified Barley said in the interview that he could not believe his wife was dead. He reportedly told investigators "I just saw her outside," Moorhouse told the court.

Barley, who formerly covered the county court beat for the Daily Pilot, was arrested at the murder scene. The crime was witnessed by at least 14 persons.

Barley has pleaded innocent by reason of insanity. It is the contention of defense attorney George Chula that the former news reporter was suffering diminished mental capacity when the knife attack took place.

Moorhouse also testified that Barley complained of chest and lung pains after his arrest and was examined at UC Irvine Medical Center before booking into Orange County Jail.

The investigator also told the court that a search of an Orange apartment where Barley was living produced a sheath to the letter opener used in the attack on Mrs. Barley.

Chula attempted to win suppression of the sheath based on the assertion that the search of the apartment was illegal. Judge Mason Fenton however, decided that the investigators did have permission to search the apartment.

Newport Mooring Rate Hike Mulled

Orange County Supervisors are to decide Tuesday how much to raise the annual rates on the 18 county moorings in Newport Beach.

In two previous discussions, supervisors agreed that the mooring rates should be hiked, but deadlocked over how much.

Newport Beach officials have said they will take a second look at the rates of 572 city moorings should supervisors vote to raise fees for the county moorings.

A spokesman for the only supervisor who hasn't voted on the issue, Edison Miller, said today that Miller's main concern was with what he calls the "black market" in moorings.

"There's a significant black market going on in moorings right now," said Chris Loumakis, Miller's aide.

Besides subsidizing the moorings, boat owners can substantially hike the sale price of their vessels if they have moorings, Loumakis said.

Presently, a mooring can be transferred only if someone buys the vessel moored there.

Food Truck Curbs Sought

An ordinance to regulate food trucks with cooking facilities on board will come before the Costa Mesa City Council tonight.

The ordinance contains standards proposed by the Orange County health officer. They are aimed at preventing injuries on board the vehicles.

The law would regulate equipment and safety features and ban any food preparation or cooking while the trucks are in motion.

Slain SJC Girl Identified

A 17-year-old San Juan Capistrano girl was identified today as the victim of a fatal stabbing by her boyfriend who then killed himself with a shotgun blast early Saturday in Dana Point.

Orange County coroner's investigators said Connie Paulson was found dead at 4 a.m. Saturday of multiple stab wounds. She was also shot in the head with a shotgun blast after she was stabbed to death, investigators said.

Sheriff's investigators said it is believed Miss Paulson was stabbed by her boyfriend Dennis Michael Spires, 20, of Dana Point who was found dead from a self-inflicted shotgun blast to his neck.

Sheriff's Lt. Wyatt Hart said Spires had driven Miss Paulson to his home at 33651 Big Sur St. where he stabbed her and then committed suicide after a lovers' quarrel earlier.

The lovers' quarrel also left Rick Goddard, 19, of San Clemente, with multiple stab wounds. Goddard was reported in stable condition today at South Coast Community Medical Center.

Sheriff's investigators said Goddard drove Miss Paulson away from a Capistrano Beach party at about midnight after she quarreled with Spires.

Goddard drove the girl in his van to an isolated spot on Pacific Coast Highway where Spires found them and reportedly began stabbing them.

Investigators said Goddard fled on foot to seek help. Sheriff's deputies were notified and began a search for Spires and Miss Paulson who had apparently left the scene in Spires' compact pickup truck.

At 4 a.m., deputies found the dead pair in the front seat of Spires' truck parked near his home.

Funeral services for both victims are still pending.

Klan Calls For Mexican Deportations

SAN PASQUAL (AP) — Three Mexican-Americans heckled 41 hooded Klansmen and their supporters at a rally urging deportation of "millions of Mexicans" from the United States.

"It's time to round them up and ship them back to Mexico," said Tom Metzger, California director of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan.

The rally is staged annually at the San Pasqual Battle Monument in the northeast corner of San Diego, near Escondido, marking an 1846 battle in which 21 U.S. soldiers died fighting Mexican troops. At the time, it was Mexican land. At the head of a march Sunday to the monument was a white horse ridden by a youth who identified himself as Winston Burbage, a 19-year-old Klan member.

Metzger said the hooded men, women and children came from Riverside and San Diego counties to honor forgotten Americans but "now it's 1980 and the problem is here again," he said.

Metzger said, "You have millions of Mexicans invading your country. The Communists love them. The capitalists love them because they are cheap labor."

When the Klansmen shouted "White Power," the three male hecklers cried "Heil Hitler!"

5-car Crash Victim in Hospital

A 19-year-old Carlsbad man remained in fair condition today at UC Irvine Medical Center in the wake of a five-car collision in Costa Mesa Saturday, officials said.

Police said Jorge Sandoval suffered leg injuries in the 8:30 p.m. crash on the southbound Costa Mesa Freeway at Mesa Drive, which blocked traffic for several hours.

Police reports indicate Sandoval's pickup truck collided with the rear of another car, setting off a chain reaction of rear-end smashups involving three additional vehicles.

The only other person injured was Sandoval's brother Jenaro, 23, also of Carlsbad, who was treated for facial cuts, but wasn't hospitalized, police said.

Saudis Tell Of Buildup

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Saudi Arabia has told the United States and Britain that the Soviet Union and Cuba reinforced their military presence in neighboring South Yemen in recent weeks, Arab diplomatic sources said today.

They said the Saudis told Washington and London that the alleged communist buildup might prompt them to put their armed forces on alert soon.

The sources said the Saudis informed the American and British governments that hundreds of Cuban troops and dozens of Soviet generals and experts have been airlifted to the South Yemen capital of Aden since the Kremlin's military intervention in Afghanistan.

economists think it will drop to just under 10 percent by the end of 1980.

Carter said his budget for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1 will continue his policy of spending restraint and result in the smallest budget deficit in seven years.

On foreign affairs, Carter said one immediate and pressing objective is to secure the release of the American hostages in Iran, indicating once this is done the United States would move to renew ties to the Iranian government.

He said the Iranians should realize that "the threat to them comes not from American policy but from Soviet actions in the region."

Carter's written message is the first of four documents he will submit to Congress detailing his goals for 1980. He makes his State of the Union address to Congress on Wednesday night, presents his fiscal 1981 budget next Monday and will make his annual economic report sometime next week.

But the necessity for unification and coordination became apparent last month when the Soviet Union sent as many as 100,000 troops into Afghanistan to crush the rebellion and support the coup that eliminated President Hafizullah Amin and replaced him with Babrak Karmal, a more pliable Russian proxy.

Pentagon sources in Washington said the fighting since the Soviet intervention has been fiercest in the northeast part of Afghanistan, bordering the Soviet Union, Pakistan and China. The sources in Washington said the Soviets may need 5,000 reinforcements there to make up for Afghan army defections to the rebels. More Soviet troops were landed at Kabul airport over the weekend, according to American reporters expelled by the new government.

Straw Poll

Carter Edged
By Kennedy

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy has narrowly defeated President Carter in a California Democratic Party straw vote, and California Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. was a distant third choice in his home state.

Spokesmen for all three candidates claimed victories of one sort or another from the balloting Sunday among 1,471 delegates to the California Democratic Party annual convention.

Kennedy won 622 votes, or 42 percent. Carter had 583 votes for 39 percent and Brown 207 votes for 14 percent. Another 59 votes were cast "uncommitted" or for minor candidates.

IN REALITY, THE BALLOTING had no meaning whatsoever, except for the news stories it generated on the eve of today's Iowa caucuses, which are the first step toward selection of the first 50 delegates to the Democratic National Convention next August.

Kennedy, who was in Washington, said he was "delighted" with the results.

"It clearly demonstrates that members of the Democratic Party in the nation's largest state are unwilling to accept four more years of current policies and are looking for new leadership in the 1980s," the Massachusetts senator said.

BUT KENNEDY'S VICTORY was not the landslide many observers had predicted earlier. California Democratic Party Chairman Richard O'Neill, who said he is neutral in the race, said if the balloting had been late last year, Kennedy would have won handily.

"I don't know if any of the candidates won," O'Neill said, adding that Kennedy's victory "is not as important as if he'd gotten over 50 percent."

But in sharply contradictory statements, spokesmen for all three candidates each claimed the results were better than they expected.

"I think the fact that at the height of the international crisis, with this convention heavily weighted with people in political office, where the incumbency of the presidency is an additional advantage, the fact that we came out ahead here is something close to a miracle," said former New York congressman Allard Lowenstein, who led the Kennedy effort.

"WE THINK IT'S VERY significant that the Carter-Mondale campaign made such a great comeback," said Lees Francis, national staff director of the Carter campaign.

"The people who come to conventions are activists. They're the kind of people who ought to be in Kennedy's back pocket. And yet we fell short by only 39 votes," said state Assemblyman Michael Roos, Carter's California campaign chairman.

Brown's chief spokesman, chief of staff Gray Davis, who earlier had said the straw vote was meaningless, also saw encouragement in Brown's 14 percent showing.

"THE GOVERNOR DID better than either of his rivals anticipated. We made only a very modest effort. Dick O'Neill said at the start of the convention we'd be lucky to get 10 percent. We improved on that quite a bit and we're pleased," Davis said.

The straw vote results conflicted with results reported Saturday of a mail poll of about 1,000 contributors to the California Democratic Party. Carter won the mail ballot with 57 percent to 36 percent for Kennedy and 7 percent for Brown.

California's 306 national convention delegates will be selected in a June 3 primary, and O'Neill said he organized the straw vote only to "liven up" an otherwise routine party platform convention.

Although none of the three presidential candidates appeared in person, O'Neill did liven up the convention. It attracted more than a dozen top political celebrities representing the three candidates and a delegate turnout about double normal for the convention.

APPEARING FOR CARTER, who was opposed by feminist leaders for not doing enough to enact the Equal Rights Amendment, Health and Welfare Secretary Patricia Harris declared that the Carter Administration "has been the best in history in its record of appointments of women, blacks, Hispanics and other minorities."

Among a half-dozen standins representing Kennedy, economist John Kenneth Galbraith condemned Carter for allowing inflation to get out of control and then attempting to create a recession to cure the inflation.

"It is the final irony that, for a year, having tried to produce a recession, they haven't even achieved that," Galbraith said.

Brown — expecting a last place finish — made substantially less effort to win straw vote support. And his chief spokesman, his father, former Gov. Edmund G. "Pat" Brown, took a more light-hearted approach.

3,500 Cheer Wedding
Of Mayor Feinstein

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The champagne flowed freely, the orchestra played "People" a crowd of at least 3,500 cheered when Mayor Dianne Feinstein and her new husband Richard Blum cut their seven-tiered, rose-covered wedding cake.

The couple was married Sunday in the mayor's flower-bedecked City Hall office. Following the private Jewish ceremony performed by Rabbi Martin Weiner and cantor Martin Feldman, the domed City Hall rotunda was opened to about 1,000 invited guests and later to the public.

THE BUOYANT mayor, wearing a jade-colored, knee-length silk designer dress, had invited the whole city to nibble hors d'oeuvres and sip free champagne to celebrate her marriage to Blum, a wealthy San Francisco businessman.

Some people clicked cameras, asked for autographs and handed the mayor cards and gifts while others threw specially-packaged Ricearoni — "The San Francisco Treat" — on the couple.

ONE WOMAN walked through the rotunda with a loose tree branch used in a floral display. "I'm going to press the leaves for souvenirs," she said matter-of-factly.

"Just think what it would have been like without the Super Bowl," said Charlotte Mayliard, a friend of the couple, noting the wedding was scheduled at the same time as the popular football game.

THE NEWLYWEDS then cut the three-flavored cake while pink, heart-shaped confetti descended from the ceiling on the delighted crowd.

Violinists and harpists on the balcony played "Love Is a Many Splendored Thing" for the bride and "You Light Up My Life" for the groom.

The couple climbed stairs to the balcony where the mayor threw the traditional bouquet and the garter as the people cheered approvingly.

THE GROOM PAID for the elaborate reception, which also included elegant floral displays and 160 cases of California champagnes and wines.

"I'm much more nervous than I thought I'd be," the 46-year-old mayor said moments after the brief, 15-minute ceremony attended by about 20 family members and friends. "I don't feel like a mayor. I feel like a woman who's just been married... I'm very happy."

The tall, dark-haired Blum, dressed conservatively in a dark, pinstriped suit, appeared to take his status more calmly, saying, "You expect a few in-laws and extended families at weddings. In this case, the extended family is all of San Francisco. I'm delighted."

GUESTS INCLUDED singer Joan Baez, state Supreme Court Chief Justice Rose Bird and Gina Moscone, wife of the late mayor, George Moscone.

Mrs. Feinstein was appointed mayor in 1978 after Moscone's assassination. She won a full term last month in a runoff election.

Road Financing Must Be Shared

Approval of two adjacent major residential developments in the foothills between El Toro and the Cleveland National Forest is going to bring more traffic problems to clogged El Toro Road.

One of the proposals calls for the development of 900 residential units on property at the Glenn Ranch.

The second calls for 700 units across the street in the Saddleback Meadows project, Orange County's first own-your-own lot mobile home park.

Together, the two projects will bring more than 1,600 new homes to a rural area in which El Toro Road provides the only access.

El Toro Road has only two lanes in the development area and cannot handle the expected increases in traffic.

As a result, Orange County supervisors have served notice to the developers that they will have to help finance road improvements.

Even though it is a departure from past methods, the road fund program appears necessary because of reduced government revenues after the passage of Proposition 13.

But it is no panacea.

Both the developments mentioned here are to offer units which supposedly are affordable to wage earners in the county's medium income range.

Costs for the improvements will surely be passed on to homebuyers, with the risk of increasing the price spiral.

Solutions are not simple but there seems to be little choice in the tightening economic times for local government.

Truth Too Dangerous

The "kill the messenger" syndrome still flourishes in Iran and Afghanistan but, these being more civilized days, the offended victims of bad news are settling for exile rather than beheading of the messengers — in this case American journalists.

Our journalists were welcome enough in Iran when they turned their television cameras on shouting mobs outside the American embassy where our hostages were held.

Apparently the misguided leaders of that land had persuaded themselves that a first-hand view of their "revolution" would inspire the American people to rise up in their defense.

It didn't work of course.

But the real problem arose when the journalists, apprised of anti-Khomeini uprisings in the north, turned their cameras and microphones in that direction.

When crude censorship of television broadcasts of the counter-revolution was ineffective, the journalists were summarily ordered out of the country.

Similarly, in Afghanistan, there was no move to impede reports and filming of the arrival of Soviet troops to "help" that small nation. But when reporters revealed it was the Soviets who had ordered the execution of the leader they supposedly had come to help, and went on to report Soviet losses in fighting with the tough rebels in the mountains, the Americans once more were ordered out.

Of course, with a totally controlled press in both these countries and in the Soviet Union, the people of these lands can simply be fed the lie that the journalists were really spies and agitators in disguise. They'll never know the difference.

There are those in this country who seem to feel the press sometimes goes too far in unveiling the flaws in our own government and the warts on our leaders.

True, the press sometimes is shrill. But is enforced silence the better alternative? Apparently the Soviets and the Iranians believe so. Sudden doses of truth can be very upsetting to a subjugated people, and very dangerous to totalitarian government.

Susie in Color?

It soon became apparent that the new Susan B. Anthony dollar was one of the government's more unfortunate blunders.

The coin is so much like a quarter no one wants to have anything to do with it.

But the fact is the U.S. Mint figured it could save about $50 million a year by not having to print so many $1 bills, which have a lifespan of only about 18 months.

The Anthony dollar, by comparison, should be good for some 15 years.

One alternative would be to add plastic fiber to the dollar bill to make it last longer, but that's expensive too.

Now the Mint has come up with what may be the answer — change the color of the Anthony dollar from silver to bronze or brass by adding a new alloy, to make it more distinctive.

Theory is that very few people mistake pennies for dimes, despite the similar size. It's the color that does the trick.

Well, maybe it's worth a test. But the size confusion will persist.

Q. How do you account for the fact that the sea level on the Pacific side of the Panama Canal is about two

A. It's the salt content. The Pacific side is less salty, so lighter.

Q. Who was the so-called "father of capitalism"?
A. Adam Smith. He never used the word capitalism, incidentally. Karl Marx coined it.

Q. Do ants have eyes?
A. Some do, some don't.

U.S. Technology — Soviet Deceit

WASHINGTON — In his righteous indignation at the Russian rape of Afghanistan, Jimmy Carter has understandably chosen to ignore the valuable help given to the Soviet invasion by the United States: Many of the Russian soldiers now occupying Afghanistan rode across the border in trucks that were built with American technology, supplied in the holy name of détente.

Though initial responsibility for the American technical aid — and the outrageously lax safeguards under which it was provided — can be laid at the door of Richard Nixon and Henry Kissinger, the Carter administration cannot escape a good share of the blame. When a middle-echelon Commerce Department official blew the whistle last year on the Soviet's misuse of U.S. technology, his warnings were disregarded by his superiors and he was denounced as a troublemaker.

THE PRESIDENT tacitly admitted that U.S. technical aid is important to the Soviets when he announced that shipments of sophisticated industrial equipment would be suspended as a result of the aggression in Afghanistan. He declined, however, to go into specifics, which would have made clear how he and his predecessors were duped by the Russians in a single-minded U.S. pursuit of détente.

From confidential documents and knowledgeable sources who talked to my reporters Dale Van Atta and Mark Zusman, I can now provide details of the way Carter's policymakers were led down the primrose path by the Kremlin's palace elite.

Back in the early 1970s when Secretary of State Kissinger was seeking glory as the architect of détente, the export of advanced industrial machinery, including IBM computers, for the Soviets gigantic Kama River truck factory was approved at the highest levels. At the time, some officials, including then-Secretary of Defense Melvin Laird, voiced concern that the Russians might use the central Asian truck plant — the biggest in the world — to produce military equipment.

KISSINGER brushed the misgivings aside. A confidential Commerce Department memorandum states that in 1971 Kissinger "ordered the Secretary of Commerce to grant three pending applications for construction of the Soviet plant. Another secret memo set the final value of U.S.-licensed equipment and technology at $1.5 billion. A major U.S. news magazine described the Kama River plant as "a living symbol of how détente can work."

Others — notably our Western European allies — were not so sure. On March 20, 1975, Kissinger cabled U.S. officials in Paris on the best way to allay such doubts. "Kama trucks are not tactical military vehicles with cross-country capability," the secret cable said. "Some may ultimately be outfitted with front-wheel drive for muddy or icy environments. However, trucks will not be equipped for deepforwarding or have other features typical of military models."

Kissinger's cable concluded that "we see little likelihood of diversion" to military uses. The American officials were instructed to belittle any odious comparison between the Kama plant and a Czechoslovakian truck plant that produced military vehicles — and for which a U.S. license was rejected in 1970.

DESPITE Kissinger's uncharacteristic confidence in the Soviets' good faith, Commerce Department officials were alerted by intelligence officials last year to the fact that the Russians were producing 100,000 more engines than trucks at Kama River, and were warned that the engines "undoubtedly were to be used in military trucks."

When this serious breach of the intent of the U.S. licensing program was pointed out by a Commerce Department analyst, Larry Brady, his boss, Stanley Marcuss, and then-Secretary Juanita Kreps gave Congress an astonishing explanation: Technically, the Russians hadn't violated the licensing agreement, because they had never signed the standard promise that the U.S.-supplied technology would not be used for military purposes. That part of the license application had mysteriously been left blank.

FOR CALLING attention to the serious weaknesses in the technological export program, Brady was demoted, ostracized and threatened with firing. Brady's superiors have also circulated secret internal memos intended to discredit his whistleblowing.

Because Nixon and Carter officials naively discounted the possibility of Soviet skulduggery, the Russians were able to invade Afghanistan in American-engineered trucks. Detente is dead, but the Afghan people will be haunted by its ghost for years to come.

Boat Owners Slip Away From Tax Burden

Those who enjoy visiting the marinas around the state on a Sunday outing to view the array of wealth represented by the thousands of boats moored within them, may also wonder at times how so many people can afford them. Certainly such thoughts must pass through the minds of some as they gaze at the magnificent luxury yachts which cost well into the hundreds of thousands.

Now it comes out that maybe some who own these expensive boats really can't afford them. For the State Board of Equalization, which enforces the tax laws, reports that many of the boat owners are evading personal property and sales taxes.

The boats are supposed to be assessed by the county assessors each year. But the assessment date falls on March 1 and, reportedly, many boat owners avoid the hooks of the assessors by suddenly finding an urgent need to put to sea, thus escaping the property tax.

ANYWAY, it would seem with more than 550,000 registered in California the assessor has an impossible job to identify and appraise each boat.

Actually, as it works out, it apparently isn't as big a job as the numbers would indicate, since most of those registered are small craft, not even moored in marinas, but transported to the water when the mood for a "cruise" strikes the owners.

Of the total number, however, a substantial percentage are larger craft, where assessments become more than minimal.

Some of the foxier large boat owners attempt to escape

California taxes entirely by registering their boats in Oregon, a state that has no personal property tax on boats or sales tax.

THUS A BOAT, even though purchased in California, can evade both taxes by registering the boat at time of acquisition with an out of state address such as Oregon.

But California tax authorities have caught on to the game and joined with Oregon officials to hunt down the tax jumpers. Allen Swenson, Coos County tax assessor, reports that many boats giving their home port as Coos Bay have never been there but are actually based in Washington and California and even Texas and Florida.

Searches by California officials find many of these boats snugly harbored at Newport Beach, San Diego, Santa Barbara and in San Francisco Bay marinas. While they estimate the total of such boats to be as high as 600, it might be double that for all they know.

CALIFORNIA LAW provides that boats purchased here for use here are subject to the 6 percent sales tax. It also provides that any boat in California waters for more than 30 days is subject to the property tax.

In the case of a yacht costing $400,000 the sales tax would amount to $24,000 and the annual property tax would probably be around $13,000. Last year the state discovered 100 boats improperly registered. The boats averaged $78,000 in value. This represents tax evasions totalling $500,000 in sales tax alone, plus property taxes which would total even more.

For those who get caught it means a 10 percent penalty, plus interest on the sales tax, plus the property taxes. If fraud is proved, the penalty is 25 percent.

Windsor Story Takes Glamor Out of Romance

If you want a jolly good read, I recommend unreservedly The Windsor Story by J. Bryan III and Charles J.V. Murphy (Morrow, 639 pages, $17.50).

This is a mean-spirited and slightly caustic book; but so are all those gossip columns we hate and read. Joe Bryan was a friend of the Windsors, and the book is apparently mostly his work. There are liberal quotes from two earlier friendly books about the Windsors, written by Murphy for the Luce publications.

There is no doubt of the book's authority. These lads know as much about the Windsors as George IV knew about Mrs. Fitzmaurice. It abounds with little snippets of info. (Winston Churchill wrote the King's "The woman I love" speech, and he couldn't have picked a better spouse.)

BEFORE THIS book was published, last September in fact, I wrote a column about this

tedious couple called "The 'Ab-ject' King." More than a couple of people took offense, including one very eloquent and literate lady. People still wish to believe in the romance of the century, as they wish to believe that Jack Kennedy had something to do with Camelot.

The couple was anything but the romance of the century, as the book makes amply clear. Windsor was madly in love with his wife, and never stopped worshipping her. She was not so constant. The marriage, according to the authors, nearly went bust when the Duchess fell for a rampant queen named Jimmy Donahue.

Jimmy was a Woolworth heir, and an amusing fellow. He was known around New York as Mrs. Spellman because he and his mother had the cardinal of that name to dinner every Thursday night, more or less. Jimmy once turned up at one of these soirees in drag, according to the book.

MME. WINDSOR nipped about El Morocco and suchlike with Jimmy till all hours, meantime putting a KEEP OUT sign on her bedroom door. The Duke is reported to have asked her piteously, "Darling, are you going to send me to bed in tears again tonight?"

Not a pretty story, nor was the life of the Windsors. It was not a love story, but a textbook sado-masochistic relationship. Madame, who is still with us, was as tough as a wrangler's behind. The Prince-King-Duke couldn't find his way to the john without firm guidance. They fit each other like Box and Cox.

Bryan and Murphy are clearly on the Duke's side. They reveal an ugly, awful, strident American bitch who actually believed she could become Queen, not only for a day, but forever. She never did understand that the Church of England was bound to find two divorcees a bit much in a monarch's wife.

SHE NEVER understood the pain she gave the Queen Mum, who is still with us. The Windsor affair, quite literally, broke her heart. She did not wish to become queen, and this is no malarkey. But much more, she did not wish the Duke's brother to become King. She was right. Their life as rulers was a continuous hell.

The Duchess never forgave the King for not putting in the fix that would make her Queen. He remained a failure to the end in her eyes. Windsor took it all, because in his heart that's the way he wanted to be.

THE DUCHESS is near death these days, according to reports. She is almost wholly in the hands of a French lady lawyer, who is even tougher than she was. One of the puzzles of the Windsor story is the generosity with which the French treated them — no taxes and a peppercorn rent on a Paris mansion. Devotees of royal matters are speculating that the Wicked Witch will leave Windsor's jewels to the French government, which would cause a mighty terrible fuss in England. Among them are Queen Alexandra's jewels, which the Duke virtually pinched for his Duchess.

Dear Gloomy Gus

We should call off the Olympics in Moscow. If the Russians decided to hold all the athletes and spectators hostage they could take over the world.
