Luskin to quit as OCC president

Orange Coast College President Bernard J. Luskin, head of the nation's largest single-campus community college, is leaving that post to become a Washington, D.C., lobbyist for more than 1,200 community colleges across the nation.

Luskin, 46, informed Coast Community College District trustees this week of his decision to resign in August. The trustees oversee Orange Coast, Golden West and Coastline colleges.

At Wednesday night's meeting, the trustees granted Luskin a leave of absence without pay for the duration of his contract, which runs through June 30, 1986. This action leaves the door open for Luskin to return to the district in a faculty or in an administration post. Luskin has been associated with the Coast District for 23 years.

"I think he deserves our congratulations and support," said Board President Conrad Nordquist.

Man kills self after car chase

Shotgun blast ends high-speed chase through Mesa residential neighborhood

By KAREN E. KLEIN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

A 39-year-old Costa Mesa man fatally shot himself in the head with a double-barreled shotgun Wednesday night after leading a patrol officer on a high-speed automobile chase through the north end of the city, police said today.

Ronald Gene Price was pronounced dead about 9:30 p.m. at the scene of the shooting at Presidio Drive near Junipero Drive, a police spokesman said.

Costa Mesa Police Officer Frank Rudisill began pursuing two cars allegedly speeding through the Mesa Del Mar residential area and running stop signs about 9:15 p.m., police reported.

Rudisill pulled the lead car over and approached the driver's side of the vehicle. But the driver refused to roll down his window and told the officer to "get away," a police report said.

When Rudisill trained his flashlight into the car he saw the driver holding a shotgun, pointed either at the motorist's head or at the officer. Rudisill took cover and called for reinforcements, a police spokesman said.

The officers responding to the scene attempted to talk Price out of the car but got no response, police said.

After a short waiting period, they smashed the driver's window with an ax and discovered that Price had shot himself.

After a short waiting period, they smashed the driver's side window with an ax and discovered that Price had shot himself.

Initial reports did not indicate exactly when the shooting occurred and officers didn't report hearing a shot.

Price was pronounced dead by emergency medical personnel on the scene.

Costa Mesans frightened by random death threats

Police report six residents phoned by midnight dialer

By KAREN E. KLEIN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

A midnight caller apparently picking his victims randomly out of the telephone book has threatened the lives of at least six Costa Mesa residents in the past two days, Costa Mesa police said.

Costa Mesa police Capt. Robert Moody said the anonymous dialer struck shortly after midnight Tuesday and Wednesday mornings, using his victims' last names during terse conversations in which he said he was going to kill them.

So far, the man has not tried to carry out any of his threats, Moody said, and police do not believe he will.

"He obviously gets some sort of sick thrill out of these calls," Moody said. "Women that are alone at night have been particularly scared" by the phone threats, he added.

Of the six calls reported to police, only four victims filed official police reports. Of the four, two victims were male and two female, Moody said.

"He may be making a lot more calls than we know about," Moody noted, since many people do not notify police when they receive crank phone calls.

The caller appears to be going down the columns of the phone book to decide who to call. Tuesday, the victims had last names beginning with "E" or "F," Moody said, and

Wednesday the victims names started with "P."

"His method seems to be pretty random," Moody said.

The best way to handle any crank call is to hang up immediately and call the police, he said, because any reaction on the victim's part only encourages the caller.

Police investigations into the calls will continue, Moody said.

Although Moody said he had not been notified of any similar calls occurring in nearby cities, two phoned death threats were reported to the Irvine Police Department on Wednesday.

Irvine police Sgt. Dick Bowman said crank calls are fairly common in the city and the two reported Wednesday do not appear to be related.

Laguna officers arrest Gabriels

Drugs, sex with juveniles probed

By DAVID BISHOP
Daily Pilot Correspondent

Laguna Beach police arrested civic activist and failed City Council candidate John J. Gabriels Wednesday night, charging him with two misdemeanor counts of contributing to the delinquency of minors.

Gabriels, 60, was taken into custody at his Hillside Street home after two juveniles told police they had allegedly engaged in sexual conduct with Gabriels and were given illicit drugs.

Gabriels was an unsuccessful candidate for a seat on the Laguna Beach City Council in Tuesday's municipal election.

Laguna Beach police Sgt. Alex Jimenez said Thursday that additional information was being sought and police might file felony charges against Gabriels.

According to Jimenez, a 16-year-old male runaway from Los Angeles was stopped for a traffic violation while driving in Laguna Beach on Monday. Upon questioning, he told investigators that he was staying at Gabriels's residence with his girlfriend, a 14-year-old Laguna Beach resident. The youth said he had been there several days.

Both youths admitted to having sex with Gabriels and being supplied with Quaaludes, a depressant drug. Jimenez said Gabriels, at one time, had a prescription for the drugs but does not have one now, police said.

"Both (juveniles) were well-sedated for two days," Jimenez said.

After his arrest, Gabriels was released on $10,000 bail. The male youth was taken to a juvenile facility in Downey and the female was released to the custody of her parents.

Gabriels, reached at his home Thursday morning, said he would have no comment on the charges on the advice of his attorney.

Grand opening not so grand in Valley

By ROBERT BARKER
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

The Drug Emporium officially opened its doors in Fountain Valley for the first time at 9 a.m. today but a couple of eager beavers apparently just couldn't wait.

They allegedly smashed an emergency door and were caught at about 3:30 a.m. today in the act of trying to steal three bags of merchandise, according to police.

"You might say, they're literally breaking down our doors," store manager Tim Ziemke quipped this morning.

Tipped off by a silent alarm, Fountain Valley police officers Paul Sorrell and Sarah Long found Gregory A. Scarborough, 21, of Huntington Beach leaving the store through the smashed door with several bags of merchandise, investigators said.

A further inspection allegedly revealed that John A. Dresslar, 21, of Long Beach was hiding inside the store at 16121 Brookhurst St., according to officers.

Both were taken into custody without incident and booked into Orange County Jail on suspicion of commercial burglary.

The Westminster Police Department's K-9 unit was called to sniff out possible additional suspects but none was located, investigators said.

Store manager Ziemke, who didn't know whether to be happy or sad about the publicity surrounding the early not-so-grand opening, said the suspects loaded three of the store's shopping bags with cigarettes, sunglasses, cosmetics and wristwatches. Everything was believed recovered.

The store is headquartered in Columbus, Ohio, and deals in a high volume at low prices, he said. It's located in the building formerly occupied by Market Basket across the street from Mile Square Regional Park.

Fairview Park — a piece of history

County plan calls for $10 million to create recreational facility

For centuries, the 70-foot-high Fairview Bluffs north and east of the mouth of the Santa Ana River lay untouched.

The bluffs, with their proximity to the river's rich, freshwater bay, was home to one of the largest settlements of prehistoric man in Southern California.

From nearly 2000 B.C. to about the time modern civilization reached the area in 1796 A.D., two distinct tribes of Indians hunted, fished, mated, gave birth, worshipped their gods and were buried in the windswept bluff villages.

283-acres of bluffs and dry river bottom below them — better known as the Fairview Regional Park site in Costa Mesa — remain relatively unchanged today.

But not for long. The valuable parcel, most of which was purchased by the County of Orange for a regional park in February 1973, is to be developed within the next several years into a $10 million recreation facility including a golf course, softball stadium complex, lake and RV camp site. The city of Costa Mesa owns 26 acres of the park.

The draft general development plan, approved last month by the county's Harbors, Beaches and Parks Department, will be considered during a public hearing of the Costa Mesa City Council on May 7.

Developed by the Reynolds Environmental Group of Costa Mesa, the plans reflect a post-Proposition 13 orientation, according to Rick Hume, vice president of the company and manager of the Fairview Park project.

Proposition 13, which cut money allocated for public projects, has dictated a new policy that parks must pay for themselves.

"The parks must generate enough revenue to offset their operation and maintenance," Hume said.

While past regional parks were designed to preserve open space and wilderness areas, he said, parks

Leisure World victim wins big settlement

Residents weren't warned of burglaries

SANTA ANA (AP) — The operators of Leisure World retirement community in Laguna Hills must pay a 77-year-old widow $1.06 million in damages because she wasn't warned of a spate of break-ins before her home was burglarized, a jury ruled.

The jurors decided Wednesday that the operators of the gated community were negligent in failing to notify the 21,000 residents about a series of burglaries beginning in September 1980. That was five months before Rose Huhn's home was burglarized, and jewelry, rugs and other valuables taken.

"They chose not to let residents know, and excused it by saying it would upset residents. But a knowing community is much more alert than an unknowing community," said one juror who asked not to be identified.

During the trial, Leisure World's former security director, Mary Christiansen, said security officials chose not to tell the residents about the burglaries because they did not want to frighten residents. She also admitted allowing the unsuspecting residents to be "bait" for the burglar.

"We're trying to send a message that something must be done about the security situation at Leisure World," the juror who requested anonymity said.

The jury criticized the community's policy of allowing businessmen with commercial passes to enter the walled community virtually unchecked.

Leisure World attorney Kerry

Sorenson said an appeal was likely. Jurors deliberated two days before voting 11-1 to award Mrs. Huhn $410,000 in compensatory damages. The vote was 10-2 for punitive damages of $650,000.

Of the total sum, $705,000 was assessed against Professional Management Inc., in charge of Leisure World's security. Golden Rain Foundation, which sets policy for the community, was held responsible for $355,000.

Mrs. Kuhn said she has now installed extensive locks and security measures, but has no intention to leave Leisure World.

"I don't know what I'll do with the money," she said. "I haven't got it yet. I imagine I will invest some and give some donations to my church and to other charitable causes. And maybe to my family."

OV School closing plan assailed

By ROBERT BARKER
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Ocean View School District officials are defending the safety of their schools following criticism aimed at a controversial plan to close four schools and discontinue seventh and eighth grade classes at three other schools.

Administrative Assistant Gail Wayne said Tuesday that tests conducted in accordance with federal guidelines show no evidence of harmful asbestos fibers in the air. She also said all district schools meet California earthquake and fire safety standards.

The question of the schools' safety was raised by parent Lynne Hattabaugh who has a child in the Gifted and Talented Education program at Circle View. (The master plan committee is recommending that seventh and eighth grade class students and GATE pupils be transferred from Circle View to Spring View to save money.)

Hattabaugh said she believes Spring View poses an asbestos threat. She also said the school, at 16662 Trudy Lane, is more dangerous to exit during emergencies because youngsters have to file down a long hallway on their way out of the school.

The 11-member master plan committee is recommending closure of Pleasant View, Meadow View, Lark View and Glen View schools and the consolidation of the seventh and eighth grade classes at Village View and Westmont as well as at Circle View. The committee reaffirmed its recommendations this week. The trustees will hold a public hearing on the closures May 7 and are to make a decision May 21.

Parents of mentally retarded youngsters at Nueva View School

also have expressed opposition, claiming that the pupils who are "mainstreamed" into "normal" school may be traumatized by the move. The handicapped children now attend several classes a week at Lark View. Under the closure plan, they would be bused to Golden View.

District Superintendent Dale Coogan said training sessions would be held with Lark View teachers to make a smooth transition.

"The kids are very accepting and basically they want to help. I'm certain things will go well," he said.

District officials say the closures will save about $1 million in operating costs a year. Enrollment has dropped from a peak of 14,000 pupils in the early 1970s to a total of 9,600. The number is expected to dip further until leveling off at about 8,000.

If trustees approve, closures would take place in September of 1985.

become executive vice president and chief operating officer of the American Association of Community and Junior Colleges, based in Washington. He will work with federal lawmakers and agencies on matters concerning two-year colleges across the nation.

The AACJC, founded in 1920, is the chief lobbying and policy development organization for community colleges throughout the United States. It also publishes various educational materials and has a division offering executive development programs for college administrators.

Luskin said the federal government provides $16 billion annually in higher education funding, including the critical area of financial aid for students who could not otherwise afford to attend college. Luskin said Orange Coast College alone receives about $4 million annually in federal funds.

In his new job, Luskin said he will work toward correcting an imbalance in the percentage of federal funds earmarked for two-year campuses.

"One of the things that has always annoyed me is that community colleges have always had to live on crumbs off the table," he said. "About 40 percent of the nation's college students are enrolled in community colleges, but community colleges get only 10 percent of the federal appropriations for higher education."

The outgoing college president said there are now community colleges in every congressional district in the United States. He said he hopes to inform federal lawmakers of the importance of the institutions as places to prepare students for four-year colleges and to train people for a variety of vocations.

Luskin has held numerous important posts with the Coast District since joining it as a data processing and business instructor in 1961. In 1975, he became the founding president of Fountain Valley-based Coastline College, the innovative satellite college that operates without a formal campus. Coastline offers classes at a variety of rented locations.

In 1982, he was named president of Orange Coast College. The Costa Mesa school is considered the nation's largest single-campus community college, based on enrollment.

It was an appointment that stirred controversy among some faculty members, however.

More recently, Luskin was among nine top Coast District administrators who received contract extensions or new contracts approved by a board that included three lame-duck trustees. Three newly elected trustees have expressed a desire to void the contracts, but thus far they have been unable to do so.

"It's a matter of time and circumstance," he said.

FAIRVIEW PARK PLANNED IN MESA...

From A1

developed today must include revenue-generating concession stands and money-making activity areas.

After a general development plan for the park was drawn up and bids were taken for construction in 1978, the costs were determined to be prohibitive and the park plan was postponed.

Hume said that with the passage of Proposition 13, the 1978 estimates for cost of construction of the park — $5.9 million — and a $300,000 annual deficit in the operation and maintenance of the park were foreseen as too heavy a burden on the county's taxpayers.

An agreement for a new general development plan was signed by the city and the county a year ago. Hume said.

As proposed by the Reynolds Group, Fairview Regional Park would include:

• Archaeological Preserve and Interpretive Center — The archaeologically sensitive bluffs would be protected by several feet of fill dirt covering and 31.8 acres of natural area, interpretive trails and display buildings would be set aside.

• Upper and Lower Picnic and Open Play Area — A landscaped park entry and administration building would be constructed at the entrance to the park, on Placentia Avenue. Group picnic facilities, a radio-controlled-glider reserve and 55.6 acres of landscaped open space, on the bluffs and the lower terrace, would be provided.

• Softball Fields — Six lighted softball fields would cover 25.2 acres, and food concessions, restrooms and parking areas would be provided.

• Golf Course — As proposed, the 18-hole course would include facilities east and west of Placentia Avenue. Whether the course would make use of the existing city clubhouse and parking lot at the Costa Mesa Golf and Country Club has not been decided though city officials say the country club is already overcrowded.

• Recreational Vehicle Camping — Between 100 and 120 camper hookups would be set on 27.9 acres, with tent camping areas also included. Restrooms with showers would be located nearby.

• Recreational Lake — A 22.5-acre lake would be used for boating and fishing, but no swimming would be allowed. A boat-rental concession would be built next to the lake.

The plan, presented at a Mesa Verde homeowner's meeting last week and at a City Council study session Monday, has caused concern among city officials and some of the residents who live near the park site.

At this week's meeting, residents who live south of the park site suggested the RV campground be shifted to the north end of the lake from the south end where it has been proposed.

"We have gathered a petition with 108 signatures of people who want the RV park put to the north of the lake," said Margaret Weaver, a resident of Pacific Avenue.

"We're worried about noise, with the acoustics of that canyon. And with tent camping, that means kids and music all night long," Weaver said. "Also, there'd be the smoke from the fires coming up all the time and we know it would depreciate the value of our property."

Other concerns raised at the meetings included whether the park would have sufficient parking spaces, increased traffic on Placentia Avenue where the only park entrance would be, noise and lights from the softball fields and increased crime in the area.

Gilbert Collins, a science teacher at Estancia High School, is concerned with preserving the subtle things, like the unique sound of cane rustling in the wind. Cane is almost extinct in this area, he said.

"A golf course is pretty but it's sterile — with none of the sights and sounds (of the bluffs)," Collins said.

He would like to see a portion of the park preserved in its natural state, with native coastal vegetation and a place for the hundreds of birds who nest there. Among the plants he has identified are wild fennel, hoarhound, sand poppies, verbenas, tree tobacco and wild mustard among the native plants on the bluffs. The birds, which live and hunt the rodents and snakes that inhabit the bluffs, include meadowlarks, killdeer, egrets, marsh hawks and many migratory species.

The expansive views from the park site — from the San Gabriel mountains to Catalina Island and all of Orange County in between — are worth preserving, Collins thinks.

"Last year, when we had so much rain, I stopped by a puddle here and I could see Saddleback all covered with snow, reflected in the water," he said. "It was really charming."

Agreement near on Games

By ANDREA ADELSON
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Irvine and Olympic organizers are expected to reach agreement next week over preparations for an Olympic event scheduled at Heritage Park Aquatics Complex this summer, a city official said today.

"If they had the checkbook, they said they would sign it today," according to Irvine police Lt. Vic Thies, who is coordinating plans with the Los Angeles Olympic Committee.

He said Olympic officials are preoccupied this week with an invitational shooting contest being held in Prado Regional Park in Chino, a preliminary test of the multi-million-dollar range.

With three months to opening ceremonies, only about a third of the 30 venue sites are formally covered by security agreements, according to a published report.

Aside from the modern pentathlon, to be held in Irvine and Coto de Caza, three other Olympic events are scheduled in Orange County during the 23rd Olympiad, July 28 through August 12.

"We have a lot of agreements to get and most are in their final stages, like Irvine's," Olympic spokeswoman Dolores Wood said today from Los Angeles.

The City of Long Beach, however, has apparently suspended making arrangements for the four Olympic events scheduled in the city during the two-week event in an effort to end a stalemate with Olympic sponsors over security costs for the Games.

City officials are reportedly dissatisfied with the amount the Olympic Committee has offered to reimburse Long Beach for police costs.

"We've had difficulty with negotiations with Long Beach," Wood said. "We're trying our best at the negotiating table."

Olympic officials say there is ample time left to conclude the security agreements, negotiated mostly in secret with city officials over millions of dollars worth of security and thousands of peace officers.

"Our first concern was to get the first major contracts out of the way," she added. Wood referred to all-but-signed contracts with City of Los Angeles police and the county sheriff's office.

Assistant City Manager Paul Brady said Irvine's contract, being reviewed by city attorneys, is an open-ended agreement whereby the Olympic Committee has agreed to reimburse the city treasury for costs incurred.

"They will pay whatever it takes," Brady said. "We have a guarantee that all city costs are covered."

Included are security, utilities and pool rental, he said.

About 100 athletes and 7,000 spectators are expected to converge on Heritage Park for four hours on July 31 for the swimming portion of the modern pentathlon event.

Bay pollution worries to be discussed

By JERRY HIRSCH
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Pollution worries about Newport Bay have sparked a special meeting of the California Regional Water Quality Control Board at Costa Mesa City Hall on Friday.

"We decided that we would look into the problem down here so that people who are interested can come. Usually our meetings are in Riverside," said Philip Maurer, vice chair of the control board's Santa Ana region. Maurer also is a Newport Beach City Councilman.

"The main problem is that as we get more sediment in the Back Bay we get less volume of water. With less water you just don't get the flushing effect. The pollutants build up and it is starting to affect the rest of the bay," Maurer said.

The meeting begins at 9:30 a.m. and discussion of Newport Bay is expected to start at 10 a.m., Maurer said.

Two types of pollutants, chemicals and bacteria, are contaminating the bay, according to James Anderson, a spokesman for the control board.

High levels of DDT by-products, PCB, lead, zinc and copper have been found in the bay during a 1982-83 study by the state. PCB is a cancer-causing, industrial chemical and DDT is a toxic, banned pesticide.

Concentrations of the dangerous chemicals were particularly high at the Pacific Coast Highway bridge, the Newport Bay Police Dock and the Rhine Channel.

The state report attributed the pollution to the "high concentration of industrial, backyard and other maritime activities and the limited flushing of this restricted backwater area."

Runoff from city streets and the presence of the chemicals in the atmosphere also may be causing the problem, the report said.

The report notes that production of PCB and DDT has been curtailed and that "the continued presence of elevated levels of toxic substances" reflects the "extreme persistence of those substances in the environment."

Suicide at Newport's Wedge; shotgun victim unidentified

Two beach visitors found an unidentified man who had shot himself to death in the face with a shotgun in Newport Beach about 9 a.m. Wednesday morning.

The two men heard what they thought was a gunshot and saw the man slumped in the waterline near the Wedge at the end of the Balboa Peninsula.

The men called police and paramedics but the man was dead before help arrived.

Newport Beach police officers recovered the shotgun a short distance away under about two feet of water.

The dead man, about 5 feet 8 inches tall, 150 pounds and with gray hair, carried no identification.

Police were still trying today to determine his identity.

Laguna Beach

Children's Home Society earns top prize in Disneyland awards

County volunteer organizations divide $200,000 in cash awards

By MICHAELNE BUSICO
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

The Orange County Children's Home Society received the $25,000 Disneyland Community Service top prize in the annual awards luncheon Wednesday.

CHS was one of 63 county volunteer organizations sharing a total of $200,000, the rest given in grants of $12,500, $5,000 and $2,000.

A record 492 groups applied for the funding in December, awards committee chairman James Nagamatsu said. It was the 27th year Disneyland has provided the grants to county non-profit agencies.

Nanette Sutherland, president of the CHS Orange County Council of Auxiliaries and the Newport Harbor Auxiliary as well, accepted the $25,000 "Outstanding Award" for the group at the Disneyland Hotel luncheon.

She said CHS operates statewide and offers services such as counseling, adoption, day care and foster care depending upon the needs of the area.

"In Orange County, day care has been a very, very big need," Sutherland said. "We've been very successful in that area and have had a lot of statewide support... They feel our program is a model."

In addition to providing day care, the center offers the only formal resource and referral service for private day-care centers, member Irene Linduski said. More than 2,000 calls requesting information on day care are handled each month, Sutherland said. The referral lines are open three days a week.

The grant will be used to expand the referral service to five days a week. The service will expectedly handle 30,000 calls a year.

Grant winners were chosen by six leading county volunteers representing different aspects of volunteer work, Nagamatsu said. The selection took several weeks of sifting through files.

"It was a difficult decision because we didn't have a set criteria," Nagamatsu said after the luncheon. "We had individualized review and evaluation and then a final joint decision. It was a more realistic selection that way."

In general, he said the organization's number of volunteers, total hours of volunteered time, establishment date and budget served as the basis for selection.

Fifteen area organizations were honored:

Wilder now sought in OC

By the Associated Press

Christopher Bernard Wilder "better not cross my path," said the mother of a missing teen-age Torrance girl who police said was last seen with a man resembling the race car driver wanted in a cross-country string of slayings and disappearances.

Tina Marie Risico, 16, "was definitely seen with somebody who definitely looks like Wilder" the day she disappeared, Torrance police Officer Ronald Traber said Wednesday as the dragnet for the fugitive spread to Orange County. Local law enforcement officials have been alerted by the FBI that Wilder may be in the area.

Wilder, 39, is described as 5-foot-11, 180 pounds, with a neatly trimmed mustache and beard, balding brown hair and blue eyes. Officials believe he is driving a rust-colored 1981 Mercury Cougar.

Risico has been missing since April 4, when she was seen with the man at a local shopping mall where she sought and got a job, Traber said.

"If this guy does have her, so help me God, he better not cross my path," said the girl's mother, Carol Sokolowski.

Wilder is listed on the FBI's Ten Most Wanted List, sought in connection with the murders of three women, the disappearance of four others and the kidnapping of a Florida woman, Los Angeles FBI Special Agent John Hoos said Wednesday. Risico and a 19-year-old who disappeared from Colorado at a time Wilder was believed to be there are not included in the FBI's investigation.

Risico's parents described their daughter as "innocent."

"If he did take her, I'm not excluding the possibility she could have been captivated by his charm," Sokolowski said. "I hope she didn't become that stupid..."

Joe Risico said his daughter is "the average 16-year-old. She has fantasies just like any other girl."

missing from the coin-operated machine, which had been pried open.

Irvine

Retail sale decline steepest in decade

By The Associated Press

Retail sales fell 2.2 percent in March, the steepest drop in more than 10 years and the second straight monthly decline, the Commerce Department said today. The agency said severe weather last month across much of the nation may have been a factor in the sharpest retreat since the 2.4 percent drop in December 1973. But despite the decline in March and February, retail sales were still 10.2 percent higher than in March 1983. Economists have been awaiting government reports for March in an attempt to gauge whether the economy's expansion is cooling off. It had been feared that the brisk pace of growth was too fast to be sustained without reviving inflation. But today's report of a sharp retail sales decline was much larger than even the most pessimistic forecast. Meanwhile, a record 600,400 new businesses incorporated in the United States last year, according to Dun & Bradstreet Corp., and an economist said the number "clearly illustrates the dramatic impact" of the economic recovery. However, the International Monetary Fund said in a separate report Wednesday that the massive U.S. budget deficit poses a "major potential danger" for the healthy recovery of the worldwide economy.

Salt formula killed tot

BOSTON — A mother whose child died of salt poisoning while in a hospital says she did not tamper with the infant's formula and that the perpetrator should receive the severest penalty possible. "I mean death row," Janice Robinson, 19, said before testifying at a closed-door inquest into the March 5 death of her 11-month-old son, Damon. An autopsy showed he died as a result of drinking formula mixed with three tablespoons of salt, which doctors say caused his brain to swell, his lungs to fill with water, his heart to beat erratically and his kidneys to fail.

Lava flow 'meandering'

VOLCANO, Hawaii — Lava continued to crown the upper elevations of Mauna Loa volcano Wednesday, meandering with no clear direction after nearly two tense weeks during which lava flows appeared poised to slice Hilo in two. After sending three molten fingers of lava more than 16 miles toward inhabited areas of Hilo, volcanic activity suddenly shifted Wednesday to a vent upslope from the original eruption area. The new vent, while continuing to pour out lava, did not appear to be creating any long-lasting flows.

CALIFORNIA

Scenic Hwy 1 reopened

BIG SUR — Nearly a year after tons of mud and rock cascaded down a rainsoaked mountain and choked off a stretch of Highway 1, the twisting route along the Pacific has reopened. More than 1,000 people attended the reopening ceremonies Wednesday at the slide site nine miles south of Big Sur, parading in vintage cars, eating carrot cake and cheering the state workers who spent months clearing away an estimated 3 million cubic yards of earth. The region's restaurants, motels and resorts were estimated to have lost $18 million because of the slide. The reopening comes in time for what is expected to be a record California tourist season — the state will be the site of the Democratic National Convention and the 1984 Summer Olympics.

Diaz gets death term

RIVERSIDE — A nurse sentenced to die for murdering 12 elderly hospital patients with injections of a heart drug insisted that he has never taken a life, but a prosecutor said he killed "for his own amusement or enjoyment." "The county wants to bury me real fast, get me out of it, so that this will quiet down, but I'm not going to let them, you know," Robert R. Diaz, 46, said Wednesday, minutes after a judge sentenced him to death in the San Quentin gas chamber. "This is just step one," Diaz said, vowing to appeal. "I'm not giving up." Formal sentencing is scheduled May 4. An appeal is automatic in capital punishment sentences.

Spray protest a failure

LOS ANGELES — Protesters floated about 30 red balloons in the skies north of downtown Los Angeles in an unsuccessful attempt to block the latest round of aerial pesticide spraying against the Mexican fruit fly. Chanting "stop the spraying," residents and others who claim the helicopter-dousings of malathion pose a health hazard gathered Wednesday night in an Echo Park supermarket parking lot. "We don't know if it's going to work, but we have to stop the spraying," said Randy Toler, chairman of the USA Green Party.

Cop killer found guilty

POMONA — A 30-year-old man was found guilty of first-degree murder in last August's shotgun slaying of a West Covina police officer, and the jury panel will now decide if he should be sentenced to death. The eight women and four men deliberated about three hours Wednesday before convicting Michael A. Jackson of Valinda. Jurors rejected defense claims that Jackson, who shot Officer Kenneth Wrede, 26, in the head with Wrede's own shotgun, did not premeditate the murder. Deputy Public Defender William Klump, who acknowledged that Jackson killed the officer, had sought a verdict of involuntary manslaughter. He said Jackson was unaware of his actions after having taken amphetamines, cocaine and PCP on the morning of the slaying.

TEHACHAPI — A motorized military glider returning to Edwards Air Force Base crashed on a runway at a Mojave Desert glider airport, killing the two men aboard, authorities said. ### China cites Viet deaths PEKING — China claimed today that its frontier forces killed or wounded "large numbers" of Vietnamese troops and wrecked hundreds of their military installations in heavy shelling. A dispatch by the official news agency Xinhua said Chinese artillery barrages during the past few days were retaliation for what it called persistent Vietnamese provocations and harassment by Hanoi's troops and "Vietnamese armed secret service agents." A diplomat at the Vietnamese Embassy in Peking, who spoke on condition that he not be identified, denied the latest Chinese report of intensified hostilities between the Communist neighbors.

Aussie anthem replaced

CANBERRA, Australia — Australia has abolished "God Save The Queen" as the national anthem and replaced it with an unsexist version of "Advance Australia Fair." The news of the change was announced Wednesday by an exuberant Prime Minister Bob Hawke, who heard the song sung at a ceremony in Sydney. Hawke said he got so carried away with the "beautiful rendition" that he revealed to the audience that the Cabinet decided this week to make "Advance Australia Fair" the anthem. In the future, "God Save The Queen" will be played only as a royal anthem when the queen is present, he said.

Red leader warns of 'arms buildup'

Premier blaming U.S. for upsetting balance

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union sharply criticized the United States today for "upsetting the military-strategic balance" by deploying new missiles in Western Europe, and said any resulting Soviet arms buildup is "a natural reply."

Soviet Premier Nikolai A. Tikhonov, speaking to the 1,500-member Soviet Parliament shortly before it ended its two-day session, said Washington "has created obstacles to talks not only on medium-range nuclear systems but on strategic nuclear weapons as well."

"If the U.S. side removes the obstacles put by it in this matter and restores the previous state of affairs, an opportunity will then open up for the resumption of the talks," he said.

The Parliament was meeting for the first time under the chairmanship of Konstantin U. Chernenko, who on Wednesday became the Soviet Union's 10th president.

Tikhonov said any arms buildup by the Soviet Union is "a natural reply to the reckless attempts by the militarist circles of the U.S.A. and other NATO countries at upsetting the military-strategic balance." "We are stating that it will be kept under all conditions," he said. "Security — both our own and that of our friends and allies — will remain reliably ensured."

The NATO build-up he referred to calls for 572 U.S.-built medium-range missiles to be deployed in West Germany, Belgium, Netherlands, Britain and Italy. The missiles are intended to counter Soviet SS-20s already in place and targeted at Western Europe.

On domestic matters, Tikhonov, who is one of the Soviet Union's leading economic officials, lauded the limited reforms introduced under Andropov.

The reforms, published last summer and put into effect Jan. 1, aim to give a carefully circumscribed degree of independence to planners and factory managers in selected industries.

Western diplomats in Moscow who follow economic affairs expect the measures to be introduced, perhaps with slight moderation, throughout the Soviet economy with the next five-year plan.

"We must continue the economic experiments that provide flexibility and independence to some of our enterprises in order to ensure the full development of labor productivity," Tikhonov said.

Satellite Repair Co. real 'Aces' in space

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Challenger's astronauts returned a healthy Solar Max satellite to space as an orbiting sun watcher today, and the shuttle's skipper declared: "Satellite servicing is something that's here to stay."

"We pick up, repair and deliver," said commander Robert Crippen, obviously pleased with the historic first retrieval and repair of a satellite in space.

The satellite was dropped off at 1:26 a.m. PST by the shuttle's 50-foot mechanical arm, which had plucked it from space on Tuesday for in-orbit repairs. Two of Challenger's crew replaced defective parts during a record space walk on Wednesday.

"Solar Max is dead on the sun," said Mission Control in reporting the satellite had a firm lock on its target after a television picture showed it drifting slowly away from the shuttle.

"Good news," said Crippen. "It looks pretty out there."

After more than three years of circling the globe as dead weight, Solar Max was back to provide valuable information on giant solar flares that pour torrents of radiation into interplanetary space. What scientists learn from the satellite may help them better understand the sun and how it affects weather, radio communications and other conditions on Earth. With the retrieval, repair and return task behind them, the five astronauts were in good spirits when they answered questions from reporters on Earth during a 30-minute news conference.

They appeared on television wearing T-shirts with the slogan "Ace Satellite Repair Co." and Crippen opened with: "Welcome to the Ace Satellite Repair Co. We pick up, repair and deliver."

Asked how he felt about failing to collar Solar Max on Sunday and then salvaging the mission with a successful capture on Tuesday, Crippen replied: "We were somewhat disappointed on the initial attempt. But we were all feeling good after we picked it. It was a team effort both here and on the ground."

"We proved that repairing satellites is a do-able thing; satellite servicing is something that's here to stay."

After the news conference, the astronauts began stowing equipment and checking flight control systems in preparation for coming home Friday after a week in space. Landing is set for 4:07 a.m. PST at Cape Canaveral, and weather conditions, which had been forecast as marginal, were upgraded to favorable today as a storm system moved away.

Reagan hears builders' plea

DALLAS (AP) — President Reagan, in a journey designed to highlight economic recovery, was touring a homebuilding construction site today and listening to pleas from builders to keep interest rates at a moderate level.

The president had lunch with assembly line workers on Wednesday at a Ford plant in Missouri. His visit with construction workers was to be at an undisclosed building site near the Dallas-Fort Worth Airport.

Afterward, he was attending a roundtable discussion among builders, real estate agents, and savings and loan executives sponsored by Builder magazine. It was entitled, "Building the American Dream."

"The No. 1 thing the industry worries about is interest rates," the publisher of the magazine, Michael W. Wood, said in a telephone interview Wednesday.

"The primary message is that this industry which is so important to the economy is terribly interest rate-sensitive so let's do everything we can to keep interest rates under control."

Wood, a good friend of deputy White House chief of staff Michael K. Deaver, has been offering to hold such a roundtable for the president for some time. The White House called him last Friday seeking the meeting today. About 14 industry representatives were expected.

Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said in advance of the presidential visit that Dallas was selected because it was building more new homes than any other city.

Lottery winner 'loser' in court

WORCESTER, Mass. (AP) — A former factory worker who won a million-dollar lottery after spending what his ex-wife claimed was $75 a week on tickets was ordered to pay her $5,000 and put aside $90,000 for his children's education.

In addition, John R. Radzik was ordered to pay $1,000 in legal fees that his ex-wife, Nancy Anderson, incurred in getting their divorce decree adjusted.

Last August, just weeks after their divorce became final, Radzik won $1,003,700 in the state's Megabucks lottery. Mrs. Anderson, who remarried in February, sought a lump sum from his winnings and an adjustment in his $120-a-week child support payments.

Probate Judge William J. McManus on Wednesday ordered the husband to set up a $90,000 trust fund within the next five years for the children's education. He also ordered Radzik, who has custody of his 14-year-old son, to pay $100 a week in child support through June. At that time the payment would be reduced to $80 a week if Radzik wins permanent custody of the boy. Radzik's 15-year-old daughter lives with her mother.

Mrs. Anderson had sought an unspecified increase in the current weekly support payment and Radzik had wanted it reduced to $50 to $60 weekly.

Charging that the marriage crumbled while Radzik spent $75 a week on state lotteries in Massachusetts, Connecticut and New York, Mrs. Anderson had asked for an unspecified single payment from him. She had also asked that Radzik be ordered to pay her legal fees associated with the modification request. But Radzik, in a counterclaim, urged that Mrs. Anderson's request be rejected because of "all the abuse" he endured from her when he was buying the lottery tickets.

'Cabbie' jailed for bilking NY foreigners

NEW YORK (AP) — A man who authorities said posed as a taxi driver and regularly bilked and terrorized foreigners arriving in New York, once charging a Japanese visitor $500 for a $25 trip, has been sentenced to up to nine years in jail.

Konstinos Tzertzelas, 40, of Lawrence, was sentenced Wednesday to two to six years for bribery, one to three years for grand larceny and six months for unlawful imprisonment. He must serve at least two years before becoming eligible for parole.

The charges resulted from a May 15, 1983, complaint by Hiroshi Imamura, an electrical engineer from Japan who said Tzertzelas agreed to take him from Kennedy International Airport into Manhattan for $30 plus tolls and tip. When they arrived, Imamura charged, Tzertzelas threatened him, threw his luggage in the street and demanded $500 before settling for a $300 payment.

Imamura flagged down a police car which chased the bogus cab.

The district attorney's office cited several other incidents involving Tzertzelas:

—On May 20, 1983, five days after bilking Imamura, Tzertzelas was accused of charging a Malaysian tourist $145 for a cab ride. The tourist said he refused and Tzertzelas drove off with him in the car. The Malaysian said he was frightened and paid the fare before calling police.

—On April 29, 1982, three Mexicans were charged $285 for the ride from Kennedy into Manhattan.

How would House-approved tax hike bill affect you?

WASHINGTON (AP) — In an effort to trim gargantuan federal deficits, the House of Representatives Wednesday gave overwhelming approval to a package of tax increases totaling $49.2 billion for this year and the next three years. Here are major provisions of the tax legislation that cleared the Democratic-controlled House by a vote of 318 to 97:

TELEPHONES: The 3 percent excise tax on local and long distance service, due to expire after 1985, would be extended through 1987.

CIGARETTES: The federal tax of 16 cents per pack, scheduled to drop to 8 cents after Sept. 30, 1985, would drop only to 12 cents.

LIQUOR: The tax on liquor, now $10.50 per proof gallon, would rise to $14.25. That would mean a boost of 75 cents per fifth of 100-proof liquor and 60 cents a fifth for 86-proof. Beer and wine would not be affected.

INTEREST: The bill would repeal a new provision that, starting in 1985, would allow a taxpayer to avoid taxation on up to $450 of interest earned each year ($900 for a couple filing a joint return) after subtracting interest paid for any purpose except business or a home mortgage.

INCOME AVERAGING: Couples and individuals whose income rises markedly from one year to the next may cut their taxes by averaging current earnings against those of the four preceding years. Averaging is permitted if current income is more than 120 percent of the four-year figure. The bill limits use of averaging by raising the threshold to 140 percent and restricting the averagable period to three years.

FRINGE BENEFITS: The bill would recognize as tax-exempt most fringe benefits now provided workers by employers, including merchandise discounts, parking and the like. Generally, any new benefits created in the future would be subject to tax. This provision would end a 6-year-old moratorium that has banned the IRS from issuing regulations on what benefits are taxable. That moratorium has not applied — and the bill would not apply — to a dozen specific benefits already provided by law, including employer-financed health insurance.

RETIREMENT ACCOUNTS: A one-earner couple would be allowed to set aside up to $4,000 a year — compared to $2,250 under current law — in Individual Retirement Accounts, but the additional $1,750 would be taxed at the time it is deposited. Interest would not be taxed until it is withdrawn at age 59½ or later. Present law exempts the $2,250 and the interest until withdrawal. The change would not affect a two-earner couple, who could continue setting aside a total of $4,000 a year, with principal and interest tax-exempt until it is withdrawn.

TAX SHELTERS: The bill has provisions recommended by the Reagan administration that are designed to halt what the IRS views as abusive tax shelters, especially involving partnership arrangements and the selective allocation of expenses and losses among partners in a shelter transaction. Promoters of shelters would have to register their deals with the IRS and each deal would be assigned a number which investors would have to list on their tax returns.

LEASING: A scheduled liberalization of tax benefits available to unprofitable businesses that lease, rather than purchase equipment, would be delayed. Tax benefits associated with arrangements under which colleges and other nonprofit organizations sell their property to taxable investors and then lease it back would be curtailed.

FOREIGN EARNINGS: The bill would freeze at $80,000 the annual amount an individual may earn abroad without paying U.S. taxes.

BUSINESS PROPERTY: It would freeze at $5,000 the amount of business property, such as machinery, that may be fully deducted in the year it is purchased. It disallows any depreciation or investment credit on the value above $21,000 of a car bought for business.

BONDS: The measure renews the tax exemption, which expired last year, for bonds issued by state and local governments to subsidize mortgages for first-time homebuyers. It imposes new restrictions on the use of tax-free industrial development bonds for such private purposes as building retail stores.

LIFE INSURANCE: Laws affecting taxation of the life insurance industry would be totally overhauled; the changes would cost the treasury as much as $2 billion over the 1984-87 period.

HIGHWAY TAXES: The tax on diesel fuel would be raised from 9 cents a gallon to 14.5 cents. Owners of diesel-powered cars could apply for a rebate on the additional 4.5 cents. Trucks weighing less than 55,000 pounds would be exempt from highway-use taxes. The heaviest trucks would be taxed $500 a year, compared with a maximum tax under current law that is due to rise to $1,900 in 1988.

Olympian rent increases may render many families homeless

By the Associated Press

Increased hotel rates during the Summer Olympics may leave more than 1,600 low-income Orange County families homeless, a housing coalition says.

The Orange County Housing Coalition Olympic Task Force is warning of an "impending shelter crisis" and asked churches to help house poor families.

The Santa Ana-based Center for the Homeless will serve as the coordinating center, the group announced at a news conference this week.

Wayne Kempe, director of Lutheran Social Services, said many families live in hotels because "they simply have not managed to make the $1,500 investment to get into permanent housing."

He said 122 hotels recently reported 2,051 units of their 13,130 units have long-term tenants.

"The average weekly rate paid by these people is $123 per week (about $18 per day)," Kempe said. "But with the Olympic crowds, the average daily rates will go as high as $100, with an average of $78 per day."

A coalition survey concluded that "1,646 families and individuals currently residing in Orange County's hotels and motels on a long-term basis will be displaced due to expected rate increases and policy changes."

Jean Forbath, director of Share Our Selves, a social aid group, estimated 4,000 local residents sleep in the open every night, and that would double during the Olympics.

She said, for example, motel tenant Sherry Jean Cline, 31, of Anaheim may face eviction. Cline, divorced and the mother of a 12-year-old boy, came to SOS seeking help in paying her $91.08-a-week rent at the Stage Stop Motel, Forbath reported.

The Stage Stop Motel has reported it plans to raise its rates an undisclosed amount this summer.

The coalition task force wants 200 churches countywide to volunteer space for those displaced by the Olympics.

CM High wins $3,000 grant

School improvement plan applauded by Carnegie Foundation

By KAREN E. KLEIN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Costa Mesa High School's innovative plan for involving staff, students and community leaders in a "school improvement corporation" has won the school a $3,000 Carnegie Foundation grant, one of only 200 awarded in the nation.

Don Champlin, principal, said Costa Mesa is one of 18 schools in the state to win a Carnegie grant.

"We're really excited about it," Champlin said.

The national grant program, funded by the Atlantic Richfield Foundation, rewarded schools across the country that came up with ways to put into action the 12 priorities for school improvement identified in Ernest Boyer's book, "High School."

Boyer is president of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching and a former U.S. Commissioner of Education.

According to the Foundation, 1,675 schools applied for Carnegie grants, more than 10 percent of the nation's high schools. In California, there were 174 applicants.

"Clearly, the time has come for action at the school level," Boyer said. "Our grants will help advance school reform where it must take place to be successful — at the school and in the classroom."

Champlin said Costa Mesa's proposal is to develop a school improvement corporation which would sell shares to parents, students, staff, businesses, community leaders and civic clubs.

"The purchase price would either be a service — like tutoring, guest lectures or sponsoring extra-curricular activities — or money," he said.

Champlin hopes the dividends will be paid off in increased public and student confidence and enthusiasm in Costa Mesa High. The program is to start next fall.

The corporation will be made up of people representing various groups both inside and outside the school, Champlin said.

How the grant money will be spent, has not been decided, he added.

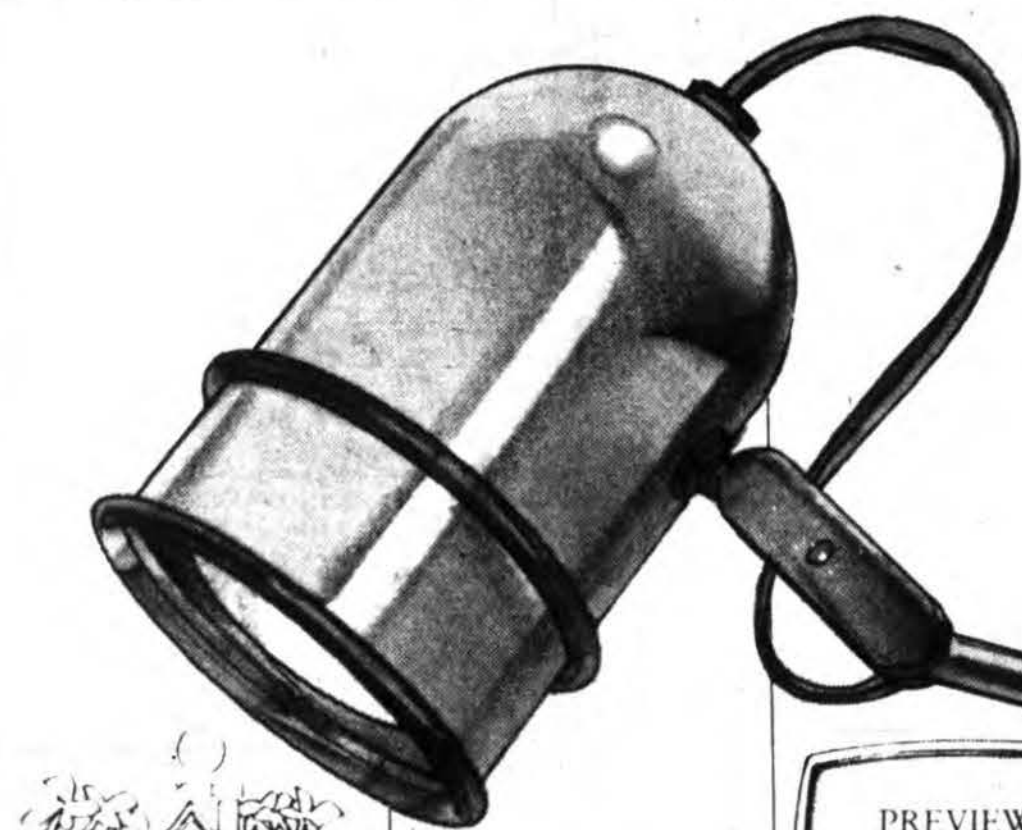

"The board will meet regularly and see how best to use the money to put the corporation together," he said. "We'll begin to contact major business and community groups soon."

More women at the top these days

Women now hold nearly a third of nation's managerial posts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Whether butcher, baker or candlestick maker, the chances of finding a woman on the job are sharply higher today than a decade ago, a government study shows.

And doctors, lawyers and government chiefs are also among the occupations in which women have made gains as they flocked to the workplace in recent decades.

"Perhaps no other change has more far reaching implications for society and the economy than the dramatic increase in labor force participation of women," Suzanne M. Bianchi, one of the authors of the study, says.

The study was prepared by Bianchi of the Census Bureau and Nancy Rytina of the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

The report found that women now hold nearly one-third of the nation's administrative and management jobs and have significantly raised their representation in many other occupations. The analysis of employment figures comparing 1970 and 1980 found women increasing from 38 percent of the labor force to 42.6 percent.

The labor force in 1980 was about 104 million people, including 44.3 million women. The number of women in administrative and management jobs was about 3.1 million from a total 10.3 million such jobs.

Women comprised 17.1 percent of the nation's judges in 1980, up from 6.1 percent a decade earlier. And their representation among lawyers rose from 4.9 percent to 13.8 percent.

Among doctors, women increased their share from 9.7 percent in 1970 to 13.4 percent in 1980.

And one of their sharpest areas of growth was as "government chiefs."

In the area of public administration, women made up 21.7 percent of the public officials in the country in 1970, but no women were counted as chief executives of public agencies.

By 1980, 11,876 women headed public agencies to make up 25.6 percent of those chief administrators, and their overall share of public officials had climbed to 33.6 percent.

Over the decade studied, women increased from 11.4 percent to 14.6 percent of butchers and from 25.4 percent to 40.7 percent of bakers.

As for candlestick makers, most are likely included in the category of metal and plastic processing machine operators, where women increased their share from 22.4 percent to 26.6 percent.

The new study found women holding 30.5 percent of the nation's executive, administrative and managerial positions in 1980. That's up from 18.5 percent 10 years earlier.

One of the largest increases was among managers of medical and health related operations, where women were more than half at 50.8 percent. But that was actually a decline, from 60.6 percent of such managers in 1970.

Next highest was personnel and labor relations specialists, which climbed from 33.4 percent women in 1970 to 47 percent in 1980.

And women also made up a significant share of postmasters and mail superintendents, 43.5 percent, up from 31.8 percent.

Those gains notwithstanding, women also increased their presence in the traditionally female dominated administrative support jobs such as clerks and secretaries.

For example, women made up 98.3 percent of the secretaries, stenographers and typists in 1980, up from 96.9 percent in 1970, and they also increased their share of clerks and information processors.

On the other hand the male voice became a little less rare when calling the telephone operator. Women made up 91 percent of operators in 1980, down from 94 percent in 1970.

Women in household service jobs such as cooks and cleaners dropped a bit, from 95 percent to 94 percent.

But they made small gains in other service jobs, such as firefighters, up from 1.3 percent to 2 percent, and police, increasing from 5.1 percent to 8 percent.

Women secondary school teachers increased from 49.6 percent to 56.5 percent, meanwhile.

Among other job classifications showing significant changes in number of women participating between 1970 and 1980 were:

—Accountants, 38.1 percent, up from 24.6 percent.

—Architects, 8.3 percent, up from 4.0 percent.

—Electrical engineers, 10.0 percent, up from 2.6 percent.

—Computer analysts, 22.5 percent, up from 13.6 percent.

—Chemists, 20.1 percent, up from 11.7 percent.

—Veterinarians, 13.3 percent, up from 5.3 percent.

—Writers, artists, entertainers and athletes, 42.1 percent, up from 32.5 percent.

—Farm operators and managers, 9.9 percent, up from 5.0 percent.

—Telephone installers, 11.5 percent, up from 2.8 percent.

—Furniture and wood finishers, 29.8 percent, up from 15.4 percent.

Discrimination still work woman's woe

WASHINGTON (AP) — Women still face discrimination in the workplace and the jobs they traditionally hold tend to be low paying, an official for a National Academy of Sciences committee told a congressional panel this week.

Heidi Hartman, study director for the academy's committee on women's employment and related social issues, said wage rates for jobs traditionally held by women are depressed. She said this is among the reasons working women earn less than two-thirds of the wages of working men.

Hartman told the Joint Economic Committee that several studies indicate when women and men with similar educational and work backgrounds were hired by companies, they were placed in different starting positions, with far-reaching effects for their subsequent promotional opportunities and wages.

"Young men and women with commercial coursework in high school may be offered different starting jobs, the women as secretaries, the men as management or sales trainees."

"Perhaps this is because this is what has always been done and it has been satisfactory. No one is aware discrimination has taken place. Neither is it noticed that the wages of the women's jobs are likely to be lower than the wages for the men's jobs, although the qualifications required are similar," Hartman said.

She said both workers and employers generally seek stability through personnel practices that encourage it. These include rewards for seniority, eligibility requirements for promotion and investment in training.

Employers fill many jobs from within rather than considering outside applicants and workers seldom engage in extensive job searches, Hartman told the committee.

Hitler's 'reprisal' rocket takes up new quarters at museum in Munich

MUNICH, West Germany (AP) — The Nazi V-2 rocket, which terrorized London in World War II, has a new room at the German Museum in Munich.

The 46-foot rocket stands on a lighted platform surrounded by a spiral staircase in the air and space hall, which formally opens May 6. The hall, built at a cost of $15 million, houses a major collection of historic aircraft and space technology.

The V-2 rocket has been on display in a main stairwell at the museum for 20 years. Moving it to a separate room in the new hall makes it "more hidden," museum director Otto Mayr said.

"The policy of this house is to display as few weapons as possible. This happens only when an exhibit played a great role in technological developments. That is undoubtedly the case with the V-2," Mayr said.

The V-2, developed by Wernher von Braun and other German engineers, was the forerunner of the Saturn rockets that took American astronauts into space.

The V-2 was Adolf Hitler's answer to Allied bombings of German cities and military installations. The "V" stands for "Vergeltung," German for reprisal.

The first V-2s were launched in September 1944, and 1,115 of the rockets reached Britain or landed off shore in the ensuing months. Many did not hit their intended targets, but those that did caused many casualties. Von Braun tested the first V-2 rocket in 1942 at the Peenemuende factory and launch site on the Baltic Sea in northern Germany. At the end of the war, he and most of his team surrendered to the Americans and were taken to the United States.

"Wernher von Braun and his people at Peenemuende were enthusiastic about space travel, and Hitler was a welcome employer for them. Certainly they were a little blind, but their objective was space travel, not shooting at London," Mayr said.

Long-distance 'V-2' rocket that plagued war-torn London in WWII is part of new museum hallway in Germany.

Baby boomers buying smaller, older, affordable homes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The baby boom generation is "going home," buying older, more affordable homes like its members grew up in during the 1950s, the savings industry says.

First-time homebuyers accounted for a record 40 percent of all sales in 1983 with almost half of this group buying a home that was at least 25 years old, according to the study by the United States League of Savings Institutions.

A key to resurgence of home sales last year was a decline in interest rates which spurred current home-owners to move up to bigger or better houses, thus making their homes available for first-time buyers, the league said.

The popularity of condominiums took a nosedive in 1983 while homes built in 1958 or earlier snared 46.1 percent of the market among first-time buyers.

"The baby boom generation is going home to the kinds of places where they were born. They are going to smaller houses which are more affordable," said James W. Christian, chief economist for the league. "The traditional patterns are still alive. They want a single-family detached home in a neighborhood."

The league's nationwide study of housing trends painted a generally bright picture of 1983, confirming government statistics that showed the housing industry rebounded from its worst slump since the end of World War II.

Because older, less-expensive homes accounted for such a large share of transactions, the nationwide median price of a home actually declined in 1983 to $65,000 from $72,000 in 1981. The median is the price that divides homes into two groups, half costing more and half less.

With interest rates falling and the median selling price declining, average housing expenses on homes also fell. The report estimated that it cost the typical homebuyer $709 a month to pay for a house bought in 1983, compared with $816 in 1981. This figure includes the mortgage payment, property taxes, utility bills and insurance.

The Los Angeles-Long Beach metropolitan area had the highest-priced housing of 75 markets surveyed by the league. There the median price of a home sold in 1983 was $139,950 with monthly housing expenses of $1,334.

Other details of the report:

- First-time homebuyers accounted for a record 40 percent of sales, up from 13.5 percent in 1981. The median age of first-time homebuyers rose to 29.3 years in 1983, up from 27.8 years in 1979, reflecting the fact that high interest rates and a poor economy had forced many people to postpone buying a home.

- Among first-time buyers, homes 25 or more years old accounted for 46.1 percent of sales, up from 36.2 percent in 1981. Purchases of new homes among this group fell from 20.7 percent in 1981 to 16 percent in 1983.

- For homeowners buying again, 26.4 percent bought homes 25 or more years old and 21.3 percent bought new homes.

- Condominiums lost in popularity among both groups. Only 10.9 percent of buyers bought condominiums in 1983, down from 21.5 percent in 1981. Christian said he believed this reflected the fact that many people bought condominiums in 1981 because high interest rates kept them from being able to afford anything else.

- The median income of homebuyers was $35,987 in 1983, down from $39,196 in 1981, another indication that lower-income Americans were able to afford homes. The percentage of buyers spending more than 25 percent of their household income on housing — the traditional benchmark — declined slightly to 40.9 percent from 44.9 percent in 1981.

The study, drawn from information on more than 13,000 home loans made at 371 savings institutions in an every-other-year survey, said that the average home-loan rate in 1983 was 12.2 percent. It was 14 percent in 1981.

Paul Prior, the league chairman, said that high federal budget deficits were threatening "to drive interest rates back up to the level that will freeze millions of homebuyers out of the market."

Rates have been rising in recent months with the latest government report putting rates for conventional mortgages at 13.74 percent in early March.

Christian said it was virtually certain that conventional mortgages would hit 14 percent again by summer. He said it was crucial for Congress and the administration to reach agreement on a three-year deficit reduction package that would bring significant savings in 1985.

Rubber checks can be costly

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The cost of bouncing a check averages about $13, according to a nationwide survey published in a weekly financial newsletter.

The cost for overdrafts ranged from nothing on the first two checks at Bank of Hallandale and Trust Co. in Hallandale, Fla., to a high of $30 at Girard Bank in Philadelphia, Bank Rate Monitor reports.

The average charge for returned checks in Florida was $12, according to the publication's survey of 110 financial institutions.

Girard recently merged with Mellon National Corp. in Pittsburgh and officers were not sure if Mellon's $15 fee would prevail, the Monitor said.

The stiff penalty apparently contributed to a 35 percent decline in bounced checks at Girard between 1980 and 1981, he said.

Many banks surveyed in the Philadelphia area reported fees in the $25- to $30-dollar range, the Monitor said.

The survey, conducted April 4, showed the following non-sufficient funds charges by market or state, rounded to the nearest dollar: Philadelphia, $24; Texas, $14; Detroit, $13; Boston, $12; Florida, $12.

Phoenix, $10; Chicago, $10; Los Angeles, $10; New Jersey, $10; Connecticut, $10; Washington state, $9; San Francisco, $8; and New York, $7.

New York state imposed a $7 ceiling on returned checks in August 1982, but the cap applies only to state-chartered institutions, the publication said.

Insulated homes present problem of radioactivity

WASHINGTON (AP) — Radioactivity in many homes may be reaching unacceptable levels because houses with better insulation for energy efficiency also are retaining the air pollutant radon, says a scientific advisory committee.

A report issued by the National Council on Radiation Protection and Measurements said many householders could be breathing more than the recommended limit of radon gas. The council called for a survey of 1,000 homes nationwide to try to find out how many.

Indoor air pollution is emerging as a problem because of the trend to well-insulated, energy-efficient houses far less drafty than homes were in the days of cheap energy.

The pollutant radon is a gas present in minute quantities in all air from the decay of tiny amounts of uranium in soil and rock.

Radon itself is short-lived — half of any starting amount decays in less than four days. But since it can be breathed, radon can decay in the lungs, and its decay products stay there, increasing the risk of lung cancer through their own radioactivity — as has happened to uranium miners.

A tight house lets radon build up in the air inside. A special unit of radioactivity was invented to measure uranium miners' exposure. That unit is called the "working level," and miners are permitted four "working level-months" per year.

The council said it believed that "an excess risk of death from lung cancer of 2 percent or more over a lifetime for the individual exposed to elevated or enhanced levels of radon (products) should be avoided."

That would mean an exposure tolerance for the general public of two "working level-months" per year, the council said.

Someone breathing that much radon from birth would see his chance of living to age 70 decline from 65.5 percent to 64.1 percent, the council said.

The Environmental Protection Agency said it believes the council's recommended levels are too high.

"I don't think we're in a position to make a nationwide recommendation yet," Al Richardson, chief of the radiation guides and criterion branch of EPA said. "But we certainly support the idea of an assessment of national exposure. ... Radon gas is clearly the most significant radiation hazard the public faces."

EPA's level was reached through a cost-benefit analysis which showed fairly inexpensive abatement measures bringing substantial radon reductions, Richardson said.

Several techniques are available for reducing radon in homes, such as sealing the foundation, blowing air out of the basement or diverting air entering the basement from the soil, using electrostatic filters to trap radon particles or simply increasing ventilation.

Coalition won't let us forget KAL 007's dead

You may not agree with Costa Mesa ad man David Balsiger and his Ban the Soviets Coalition, but you've got to like their spunk.

The coalition has set itself up as a sort of selective national memory and conscience; it won't let us forget that the Soviet Union shot down the unarmed, civilian Korean Air Lines Flight 007 — killing 269 innocent people, nor will it let us forgive them for it.

Balsiger's coalition was catapulted to the sensitive arena of Olympic politics Monday when the Russians singled it out as the definer of United States policy toward the U.S.S.R. and its still undeclared participation in the the Summer Olympic Games in Los Angeles.

Pretty heady stuff, except that the phrase "Olympic politics" should be self-contradictory.

The United States proved almost conclusively four years ago that the Olympics are a particularly inappropriate stage for political posturing. President Jimmy Carter kept our athletes out of those games, held in Moscow, to protest Soviet aggression in Afghanistan. As a political statement, it had as much punch as a boxing match between Liberace and Boy George.

Besides, if we admit that the world will respond, in any way, to politicization of the Olympics, then we must live forever with the fear that addled terrorists like Yasir Arafat will find justification for horrors like the massacre his Palestine Liberation Organization inflicted on the Israeli Olympic team at the Munich Games in 1972.

Still, we need someone to remind us that the Russian government is responsible for the murder of 269, that it tried to cover up the heinous act, that it refused to show remorse for the killing (not even diplomatically, even though one of the victims was Congressman Larry McDonald from Georgia), and decorated the fighter pilot who fired the fatal rocket.

Balsiger and the Ban the Soviets Coalition have taken up that burden for us. And although they will not and should not be allowed to block Russian athletes from participating in the Games, they will remind us with protests of the criminal nature of the government that sent them.

The coalition also vows to help any Russian who has an urge to defect, much like the Underground Railroad helped escaped slaves reach freedom during the Civil War.

It's purely idealistic. That's American.

PR firm works graveyard shift

A public relations company in Washington, D.C., composes "last words" for anybody willing to pay $25 for a noteworthy deathbed line. Sounds a bit macabre. But buyers crop up. For a teacher in search of a fitting final utterance, the firm offered: "Call a substitute." Not good enough. Johnny Carson wrote his own: "I'll be right back." That's a little better, though not much. Contributions invited. For a fireman? For a policeman? For a politician?

Q. How much money do the Broadway actors make, typically?

A. Stars, at least $12,500 a week. Supporting players, at least $610 a week.

Those researchers who look into our love lives checked out the action among people who work in skyscrapers. Two out of every 10 people on the lower floors said they were involved romantically with co-workers. Nine out of every 10 people on the upper floors said the same. Our Love and War man cannot satisfactorily explain this difference. Is it possible that upper-floor people get involved simply because they make more elevator stops? Hardly. Still...

Q. How do you explain the claim that rain keeps the earth dry?

A. The process does that, all right. Air moisture gathers into clouds, condenses, falls, and runs into the seas. If it didn't, the humidity would rise to its maximum and saturate every surface to mire man in mega-mud. You like alliteration? Me too.

We're rapidly running out of bluebirds. It has come to this: Most people in the United States have never even seen a bluebird.

Might note that 15 percent of the liquor drinkers drink 50 percent of the liquor?

Jungle fighter retires to farm

CIA operative cut heads, ears from his victims

WASHINGTON — His CIA code name was "Upin." He used the pseudonym "Pat Gibbs." A huge, congenial Hungarian refugee who joined the U.S. Marines during World War II, he was first bloodied in the battle of Iwo Jima.

But it was his exploits when he ran a secret "spook troop" for the CIA in the jungle hills of Indochina that made him a legend.

To American diplomats he was an uncontrollable maverick. To his enemies — and some of his colleagues — he was as fearsome a figure as the Marlon Brando character in "Apocalypse Now," with a similar penchant for collecting the ears and heads of the communist guerrillas he was fighting in the 1960s and 1970s. The Laotian tribesman he led revered him.

Perhaps because a newsman more than a decade ago blew Upin's CIA cover as a Confidential Air Services official, he has a passionate distrust of the press. But Upin agreed to an interview when my associate Dale Van Atta tracked him down in Udorn, Thailand, where he is leading the unlikely life of a gentleman farmer.

But missing fingers from a booby trap that also killed a friend are mute evidence that Upin was no armchair agent.

A 1953 classmate at the CIA's secret training camp near Williamsburg, Va., recalls:

"He had all the attributes that were desirable in a paramilitary case officer. He knew how to survive, and he was fierce. He could move undetected across hostile territory. He demanded an outdoor life and could never endure the more prosaic existence of an embassy-based intelligence case officer."

Southeast Asia was a natural habitat for Upin's unorthodox style. He had recruited Tibetan Khamba tribesmen and ventured into the Himalayas with them. He fought in South Vietnam and Cambodia, and slipped into Red China on several occasions.

But Upin's heyday was as the leader of thousands of Hmong and Yau hill tribesmen in the CIA's secret war against the Pathet Lao and Vietnamese in Laos. The operation, based at a huge CIA station and airfield at Long Tieng, was intended as a diversionary action to siphon Viet Cong away from the main battle area in South Vietnam.

He learned the tribesmen's language, walked them into the ground on far-ranging forays, and married one of their princesses. Following one firefight, he carried one injured Laotian on his back more than 30 miles — even though he was seriously wounded himself.

About those ears. It seems headquarters in Vientiane questioned some of Upin's "body counts." So he told his men to cut off ears of dead enemy soldiers and put them in a plastic bag he kept on his porch.

When the bags had enough ears in them, Upin would send them back to Vientiane. "I used to staple them to the reports," he recalled. Soon there were "bushels of ears" at headquarters.

As for the severed heads, Upin would acknowledge possessing and distributing at least two, but he declined to say exactly how many. Nor would he address the rumor that he kept pickled heads in jars of formaldehyde in his bedroom.

One Viet Cong head was sent to a CIA station, where a secretary opened the package, vomited, and took the next plane home. Another was dropped from a plane by Upin as a warning to a Laotian tribal leader whose people had shot up Upin's aircraft. The Laotian got the plane's tail number, and an American ambassador reportedly wound up apologizing for the head-dropping incident.

"If you do everything according to the orders, you'd be in a straitjacket," Upin said without regret. "You have to break the monotony sometimes."

These days, Upin appears to be pretty well domesticated, moderating his boozing and once-uninhibited wenching. According to a friend, it was his no-nonsense Laotian wife who is responsible for this. She caught him fooling around once, pulled a gun on him and threatened to kill him if he did it again. It was a message and a style of delivery that Upin understood.

Dems are weak, Reagan should attack

WASHINGTON — Responsibility for the "defeat in Lebanon" and the deaths of 260 Marines lies squarely upon Ronald Reagan "and him alone." That savage and partisan statement was made by the highest-ranking Democrat in government, the Speaker of the House.

Understandably, President Reagan yearns for a return to "bipartisan consensus in support of U.S. foreign policy." All Ike required 25 years previous, to win Democratic support for his decisive intervention in Lebanon, was two phones: to Sam Rayburn and Lyndon Johnson.

Understandable as that desire may be, however, it is not realistic.

This is 1984. The great bipartisan consensus that served Truman, Eisenhower and Kennedy — and the free world — so well is gone. Like so much else that was good about the '50s, it was missing in action, somewhere in Vietnam, circa 1966. The Era of Good Feeling when partisan politics — or at least savage politics — stopped at the water's edge is over. You can't go home again.

Surely, the President knows this. His own nomination challenge in 1976, against an incumbent president of his own party, was driven by Reagan's principled opposition to the Ford-Kissinger practice of detente. His 1980 campaign against President Carter was propelled by Reagan's nationalistic and patriotic assaults upon the Taiwan sellout, the Panama Canal Treaties, SALT II, and Carter's perceived mishandling of the Iranian hostage crisis. Indeed, in the last week's call to congressional Democrats to rejoin the consensus, Reagan disparaged the term of the only Democrat elected in the last 19 years as "the days of hand-wringing, defeatism, decline and despair."

The reality with which the President and his Secretary of State must come to terms is that for the next five years their forward defense of U.S.

security interests, in what JFK called this "twilight struggle" with the Soviet Empire, will be conducted against the intransigent hostility, if not deliberate sabotage, of "the loyal opposition."

Again, Reagan must know this. His program to rebuild the national defense, his interventions to save Lebanon from Syrian domination and Central America from Soviet-Cuban domination has been bedeviled at every turn by congressional Democrats. Even the use of U.S. Marines and airborne troops to rescue hundreds of American medical students and thousands of Grenadians from a bloodthirsty pack of Marxist thugs was treated by leading Democrats as though the President had spilled a river of American blood recapturing some banana plantation for the United Fruit Company.

For reasons personal, political and ideological, the leadership of the Democratic Party does not wish to see Ronald Reagan succeed — anywhere.

The personal reason is an incredible animosity toward Reagan that oftentimes exceeds the legendary hatred of liberal Democrats toward Richard Nixon. The political reason is that the Democratic Party is sick unto death. Like the Republicans in the '30s, watching the country slip away, seeing themselves superseded by a charismatic and despised interloper, they are resorting to the same obstructionist intransigence some isolationist Republicans showed toward Franklin Roosevelt.

To listen to Jackson and Mondale and Hart is to believe that the principal cause of international tension and conflict is not the adventurism and militarism of Moscow, but the personal belligerence of Ronald Wilson Reagan. "I regard Ronald Reagan as the most dangerous president of the nuclear age," said Teddy Kennedy last week. President Reagan "frightens me to death," said Gary Hart.

Other than settle for half as many MX missiles as Carter sought, a third as many B-1 bombers as Ford requested, what exactly has Reagan done to deserve this fear and loathing? At bottom, one suspects, the Democratic Party — like a dead fish, rotting from the head first — is far more terrified of Reagan's poll ratings among Democrats than it is over his foreign policy.

What Reagan should seek for 1984 is not some unachievable consensus with such people, but a realistic coalition, such as he stitched together with the Boll Weevils behind his economic program. Do as FDR did, under similar circumstance. "Welcome" the hatred of the left isolationists — Kennedy, Mondale, Jackson and Hart — and hold them up as the adversaries of American revival. Make them and their pacifist, neutralist, leftist and isolationist ideology the issue in 1984, as he did in 1980.

There was and may come a time to seek "consensus" themes with the national Democrats, but not until their present leadership is again defeated, again discredited. Now, while the President's strength is growing again, is the time for confrontation and conflict, not compromise and consensus.

'Gay' is a state of being, not a sexual preference

Men ruined by attempts to change their orientation

It seems clear to me, as an outsider, that one of the glaring mistakes made by the homosexual community in its push for civil rights has been the insistence that their tendency is a "sexual preference." This is a misleading and unfortunate choice of terms to describe their condition.

"Preference" implies choice, and choice implies some degree of freedom in the matter. We choose vanilla ice cream over chocolate because we prefer it. We choose one candidate over another because we have the freedom of electoral preference.

But no one, I think, freely "chooses" his or her sexual orientation. It is chosen for us, by our genes or our environment, or a combination of both; no one really knows why or how. What we do know, or should know, is that it is a compulsion rather than a mere "preference." And terming it a "preference" gives the rigid moralists a stick to beat the dog with, so to speak. They say, "Very well — if it is only a preference, then change your preference to conform to the general standard of sexual behavior. If you have a choice, make it our way or suffer."

I happen to believe that homosexuals do not really have a choice; their orientation often is fixed as early as puberty; and there is no genuine free will involved in this preference; and if the will is not free, the act cannot be "immoral," although it may be distasteful to the majority.

Psychiatrists, who display more sense in these matters than moralists, have generally abandoned efforts to "change" homosexuals, except for the very few who acutely desire it. The most they try to do is to adjust them psychologically and socially to the condition, to make them feel more comfortable with it and about it.

Too many men of talent and character have already been ruined by misguided efforts to redirect their sexual proclivities. Perhaps the most tragic case in our time was that of Alan Turing, one of the great scientific minds, who cracked the German "Enigma" code that immeasurably aided the Allied victory over Hitler.

Turing was a homosexual who was coerced into entering "treatment" to rectify his deviance; he broke under the strain, and committed suicide in his 40s, robbing the world of his incomparable gifts for no good reason. A.L. Rowse, the British historian, in his book, "Homosexuals in History," cites dozens of similarly deplorable ends to otherwise brilliant careers.

The Gay movement would get farther faster in the realm of equal treatment by abandoning the specious pose of "preference" and candidly acknowledging that it is as bound to its own orbit as the Earth is to its ellipse. After all, nothing that exists in nature can rightly be called "unnatural."

Pediatrician disagrees with proposed treatment

To the Editor:

Dr. Cary Rothenberg's article on scoliosis (Daily Pilot, April 3) was very enlightening to the public. However, as a private health care provider for children and teens, i.e., a pediatrician, I must raise a few pertinent dissents.

Detectable scoliosis — that which is found on simple screening with follow-up x-rays — turns out to be rather common. Approximately 10 percent of school-age children may have detectable curves (of the back) by age 13-14 years. Treatable scoliosis, on the other hand, is uncommon. For every 1,000 children who were screened, only 1-3 are likely to turn out to need bracing and only one in 2,000 - 3,000 require surgery.

As to treatment, it is the position of qualified orthopedic surgeons and pediatricians that the only two appropriate treatment modalities for juvenile scoliosis are braces and surgery. "Corrective exercises and spinal manipulation do nothing to change the curve." This statement is a direct quote from a review on scoliosis screening that is printed in our pediatric literature. However, as can be seen by the comparison of detectable and treatable scoliosis, the numbers don't warrant panic. Instead, careful follow up and evaluation by a pediatrician and/or an orthopedic surgeon are in order rather than jumping to costly and fruitless exercise regimens and spinal manipulation.

A study in contrasts

To the Editor:

Occasionally, your front page has articles that stand in sharp contrast. The Sunday, April 8 edition was one.

Consider the two kids visiting from Israel, true ambassadors of a nation surrounded by hostile forces, living in an essentially hostile environment. They, their forebears and their contemporaries have made the desert bloom. These kids' acceptance of the necessity to serve two years of army service is only part of their selflessness in serving their fellow Jews.

Directly beneath this article was the one on homosexuals, almost an apology for this perverted lifestyle, filled with drives of self-love and self-gratification.

The Bible had its Sodom and Gomorrah. Ours, apparently, is still ahead of us.

Free clinic is still open

Flower children's kids now patients

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Dr. David Smith's Free Clinic, born in the 1960s out of the needs of the city's flower children, is still ministering to its diverse patients, among them children with names like Moonbeam and Stargaze.

"Still free after all these years — that's what the sign says," says Smith, who exudes the calmness of a trusted family physician. "It worked then, and it still works."

In an examining room in the main clinic, Smith has preserved a mural that he calls his "60s wall" — a stream-of-consciousness, mish-mash of colors, free-form designs and bare-chested women that flowed from the mind of an artist on LSD.

That was the trip of choice on Haight Street when Smith opened his door in June 1967.

Smith and his staff clinic have continued to specialize in the field of drug addiction. But the non-profit clinic also has branched out into areas such as women's health and acupuncture.

In 1967, Smith, now 45, was a young doctor bound for a career in academic medicine. But he lived in the heart of a community where the spirit of the 1960s was born, and like many of his generation, he was touched and changed.

"Initially, this clinic was an extension of a civil rights perspective," Smith recalled. "There were several thousand flower children who came to the Haight using drugs, and the system was very opposed to them and denied them medical care."

"Our original philosophy remains: Health care is a right, not a privilege, and people who have a different lifestyle than you should not be denied health care because you disapprove of their lifestyle."

Dr. David Smith stands at door of his Haight-Ashbury clinic, offering free care in San Francisco for 17 years.

The clinic's success can be measured by one statistic: It has had more than 500,000 patient visits in its 17 years.

Smith can remember when the landlords who owned the now-refurbished Victorian homes would rather sell than rent, when police cracked heads and when rock singer Janis Joplin used to show up at the clinic.

From 1965 to 1967, the Haight was in the throes of a counter-culture revolution, and Smith spent much of his time talking hippies through bad trips. In 1968, the scene turned ugly.

"But just because it stopped being nice flower children and started being hard-core heroin addicts and speed freaks with addictive disease, health care (was still) a right and not a privilege, and the system didn't have the right to put them in jail because of their disease," Smith said.

The clinic modified its program to deal with the addicts and the "speed freaks," or amphetamine abusers. But the clientele continued to change. As the flower children moved aside for the addicts, so the addicts gave way to a far more middle-class and diverse patient load.

"Addicted nurses, physicians, cocaine-abusing stockbrokers, street people, alcoholics, gays," Smith said, rattling them off. "Medically, we're even treating second-generation flower children. We're like a community clinic to that generation, in the sense that the Free Clinic has been their health-care delivery system ever since they were born."

The clinic, located in several different buildings within a three-block area, employs 40 staff members and attracts hundreds of volunteers. It's eight divisions include a women's health center, a drug detoxification center, an acupuncture center, an administrative center and a rock medicine section that provides care at crowd events.

It survives on a $2 million annual budget, gleaned from donations and federal, state and local sources. All services are free, including prescription drugs donated or purchased by the various clinics. A patient pays only when he wants something which a doctor has not ordered; pre-marital blood tests are the most common paid service.

'Electrum' appeals with winning hand

Poetry magazine creates alloy of life's idiosyncrasies

By C.P. WELCH
Daily Pilot Correspondent

To fanatical Dodger fan Murray McNeil 3, Dodger's manager Tommy Lasorda is baseball at its poetic best. In fact, McNeil 3, a poet himself, has published verses dedicated to the "only baseball manager with a college degree."

In part, McNeil 3 writes: "what I envy about tommy lasorda: is that tommy lasorda is so completely happy being tommy lasorda; that he'd rather be tommy lasorda than peter o'malley; than ted turner; than ronald reagan; my god; he'd rather be tommy lasorda than frank sinatra; that's what I like about tommy lasorda."

While Lasorda can be found on the baseball diamond, McNeil 3 is featured in a local publication gem called 'Electrum'.

If you asked John Pilcher, publisher of 'Electrum', what the magazine's name means, he would candidly say, "Electrum is an alloy of varying proportions of silver and gold, especially one used in ancient metallurgy." He would also calmly add, "It's also a quarterly poetry book."

Beside McNeil 3, 29 poets are included in the spring edition, and interspersed between 38 pages of poetry are lively illustrations, many pre-Columbian in style, plus other artwork such as a woodblock print of the late blues guitarist Huddie Ledbetter, which accompanies the poem "Jazz" by Electrum's editor Bart Yoder. Also included are book reviews — mostly of other poetry books — and four biographical pages of the current edition's contributing poets and illustrators.

Pilcher, who is both publisher and art director, said each edition is given a title based upon the issue's cover illustration. Designed by Dana Point artist Street-Brown, the current cover gave Pilcher and Yoder and associate editors Roger Stuvu, Jack Brander, Julia Stein and contributing editor Margot Bernardo, something more than what they had originally asked.

Pilcher said the editorial staff decided to call the issue "the winning hand," but he also said the title and the image are contradictory. (A man is holding four aces.)

"If you had four aces in a poker game," Pilcher said, "you would have a winning hand." But, there's a bit of weirdness in his face and there are ambiguous symbols like the (blood) red cape behind his back and why is the ace of hearts bleeding? "The cover reminded Pilcher's brother of a Tarot card."

Electrum in its infancy was much more simpler than the current issue. The first issue in March 1977 was only a two-page photocopy with one poem on each page. That issue featured a homage to the late Dylan Thomas and a poem by the founder David La Vaughn Brown who was co-editor with Bart Yoder.

During the next few years the issues were randomly published and poorly distributed. Today, all that has changed.

Pilcher, who is by profession an art designer for Wright Publishing Co. in Costa Mesa, said the quarterly magazine is available at 22 bookstores in Southern California, and locally can be found at the Three Guineas in Newport Beach, Fahrenheit 451 in Laguna Beach and Upstart Crow and Co., a restaurant-bookstore at South Coast Village in Santa Ana.

More important to Pilcher is the critical recognition Electrum has received within the poetry community and the publishing of nationally-recognized poets like Gary Snyder from San Francisco, Lyn Lifshin from New York and Los Angeles poets Charles Bukowski, Leslie Monsour and Eloise Klein Healy, among others.

Additionally, Pilcher said the magazine seeks out and publishes works both in Spanish and English by Latino poets such as Rolando Escardo and David Valjalo.

Poetry is not just a literary artform, but also an aural experience, and is intended to be heard. Currently, Electrum is sponsoring the monthly "Rookery Readings" held at Upstart Crow and Co. The next reading will be tonight at 7:30. Donation is $2.

"Upstart Crow is the ideal place for a reading," Pilcher said, "because there's an art and social ambience here; when we present the readings, we always present an art exhibit and some music. It's a cabaret setting and it's fun."

PAPARAZZI

Judy and Boyd Joyer put make-believe money on the ponies at USC benefit.

Leslie Cies held on to this "racehorse" that looked a lot like the real thing while Laura Salvesson, left, and Meredith Moody hedged their bets.

Track 'bets' make USC scholarships a sure bet

Fashion show predictables: Blackwell, enviable outfits

This party was no long shot — the women of USC's Town and Gown Junior Auxiliary were betting they had a winner with their spring benefit called a "Run for the Roses, An Evening at the Races."

Some 280 guests admired how the Registry Hotel banquet room had been turned into something very much like a racetrack Saturday.

There was "parimutuel betting," with the races then shown on a big television screen. The winners received play money which could be used in the opportunity drawing that featured a trip to San Francisco, a weekend in Santa Barbara and membership in the John Wayne Tennis Club.

Mimi Hogan, auxiliary president, greeted guests along with benefit co-chairmen Nancy Wilson, Penny Sandberg and Becky Adams. Others on the committee were Roseann DeLuca, Laura Salvesson, Linda Kidder, Laura Newhall, Bette Wood, Peggy Lanni, Joann Acuff, Meredith Moody, Diane Easton, Jerry Wall, Debbie Edgcomb, Dori Fitch, Julie McComber and Piper Post.

Milling around in the fast-track crowd were Leslie and Andy Cies, Russ Kidder, Barb and Tom Searles, Don Fitch, John Edgcomb, Gwyn and Mike Havenkin, Don and Joan Griffin, Danielle and Dave Kilpatrick and Margie and Jim Young.

Proceeds from the benefit are used to help provide scholarships at the University of Southern California for students from Orange County.

Some things never seem to change. . . . Take, for instance, two fashion shows last weekend. Mr. Blackwell, appearing Friday at the Crystal Cathedral for an American Cancer Society benefit, said and did the same old things. He showed pretty, feminine fashions (reminiscent of the '40s), joked with the audience as he handed out friendly insults, talked about his facelift and gave away several dresses. The results — the same old thing — the women laughed and loved him. Georgia Frontiere and Marion Knott were co-chairmen along with Arvela Schuller.

The Saturday event sponsored by the Fashion Academy of Costa Mesa was the usual — students and teachers modeling their custom-designed couture garments, each in the correct color and style for the wearer. Gorgeous clothes fitting so well . . . it was enough to drive their non-sewing friends mad with envy.

Five hundred applauded the outfits in the Disneyland Hotel, with academy owners Marge Swenson and Gerrie Pinckney commenting the show with their usual good humor.

Today's Paparazzi was written by Daily Pilot Style Editor Melinda Huddleston with additional contributions by Vida Dean.

'Duck Factory' could fly with more quacks

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK — Will Dippy Duck save Thursday nights for NBC?

Dippy Duck, not to be confused with Donald or Daffy, is the cartoon hero of the only TV series created by a struggling animation house. That production company, with its resident eccentrics, is the setting for NBC's new comedy, "The Duck Factory," which premieres tonight at 9:30 on Channel 4.

As they say on Wall Street, this series has great growth potential. Given time and slightly funnier scripts, "The Duck Factory" could become a first-rate ensemble production. Its out-of-studio filming and casual humor create both the look and feel of a theatrical movie.

NBC hopes the new series, which replaces "Buffalo Bill," will bolster the follow-up program, "Hill Street Blues," in its competition with CBS' "Knots Landing." The poor ratings of "Buffalo Bill" is one explanation why "Knots Landing" has beaten "Hill Street" every week this season.

"The Duck Factory" certainly has classy credentials, combining some of the creative forces behind "The Mary Tyler Moore Show" and "M-A-S-H."

Executive producer Allan Burns worked on "Mary Tyler Moore." Producers Thad Mumford and Dan Wilcox worked on "M-A-S-H." And the project comes from the high-minded MTM Enterprises ("Lou Grant," "Mary Tyler Moore," "The Bob Newhart Show.")

"The Duck Factory" stars TV newcomer Jim Carrey as Skip Tarkenton, good-natured, idealistic and somewhat of a rube. He's just gotten off the bus from the Midwest, his cardboard suitcase and portfolio in hand, to carve out fame and fortune as a cartoon illustrator in Hollywood.

Carrey, known in comedy circles for his vast array of impressions, has a wide-eyed countenance and a big-smiled enthusiasm that gives him credibility as the innocent and bewildered duck out of water amid the Hollywood sharks.

His Skip not only watches Saturday morning cartoons, he also believes in their "message" of perseverance, fortitude and immortality. No matter how many times Dippy Duck's adversaries bop him on the head or throw him off the cliff, his old-fashioned gumption will win in the end.

Skip actually is quite skilled as an illustrator — real animation is integrated in the opening and in several other scenes — and he becomes the possible savior of Buddy Winkler Productions, whose founder has just died.

Buddy, it turns out, was a scoundrel. The nicest thing anybody could say about him was when longtime animator Brooks Carmichael (Jack Gilford) eulogizes that Buddy wouldn't lend him money for heart surgery, which was just as well since the hospital misread his X-rays and he didn't need an operation after all.

Gilford, as usual, is a delight with the gentle humility that is his comedy trademark. Skip worships the sketch pad Brooks draws on, and he scoffs at Brooks' insistence that he's washed up. Brooks does sleep on the job a lot and seems more comfortable painting by the numbers.

The funniest character is likely to be Wally Wooster (Don Messick, the real voice of Papa Smurf and numerous other cartoon characters). Wally is Dippy Duck's alter-ego, which confuses his own sense of identity. At Buddy's funeral, Wally forgoes himself and relates his public sentiments as the duck.

Jim Carrey (left), Jack Gilford star in "The Duck Factory," premiering tonight at 9:30 on NBC, Channel 4.

From the first laugh, you'll be hooked!

No matter how easy the contract appears to be, plan for the worst. If the cards lie well, let that come as a pleasant surprise.

This hand is from a recent team match. The contract at both tables was three no trump, reached on auctions similar to the one shown. At both tables West dutifully led low from his honor in partner's suit. In one room the contract went down; in the other it was made.

The unsuccessful declarer played low from dummy. East made a spectacular guess when he inserted the eight, and declarer won. To protect against the possibility of a singleton ace of clubs with East, he crossed to dummy with a spade and led a club from the table.

East played low and the jack won, but the contract could no longer be made. The defenders had to come to two club tricks, and three diamonds for down one.

At the other table South realized that a 41 club division could wreck his contract. If East was the defender with four clubs to the ace, declarer could still bring in the suit if he could find three entries to the board to lead clubs toward his hand.

Therefore, at trick one he inserted the nine of diamonds from dummy. East rose with the ace and declarer jettisoned the queen! Now there were three entries to the table — the jack of diamonds and the two high spades. Declarer put each of them to good use by leading clubs from dummy toward the ace of hearts. No matter what the defenders did, they could not prevent declarer from collecting four club tricks and his contract.

"Yet they, believe me, wait for gifts from Chaney, conquer'd Fate."

Beeuwsaert heads South All-Stars

Johnston, Curtis, Moser, Jacobs, Jackson also selected for annual Orange County game

By ROGER CARLSON
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Ten players with All-CIF credentials dot the 12-man roster of the Orange County South All-Star basketball team, announced today by Coach Mark Thornton, led by 1983 CIF 4-A Player of the Year Matt Beeuwsaert of Mater Dei High School.

Beeuwsaert, 6-6, led Mater Dei to the CIF 4-A championship as a junior and to the 4-A finals as a senior.

Thornton, who has led Capistrano Valley to three straight banner seasons, including berths in the CIF semifinals twice and to the finals once, hand-picked his squad which faces a similar band from the North on June 16 at Orange Coast College.

It's the 19th Orange County All-Star game, sponsored by the Costa Mesa Kiwanis and set for an 8 o'clock tipoff.

The eighth annual Orange County All-Star game for girls is also scheduled for the same site and evening, beginning at 5:30.

Thornton's teams have rolled to a 69-13 record over the past three years and it's been done primarily with a running attack.

Much the same is anticipated with the 1984 South All-Stars, who appear to have the same background in many aspects.

"This is the first time I've ever coached anyone over 6-3," says Thornton, a disciple of Tony Stillson during the Monrovia High era in the late '60s.

Thornton was an assistant coach at Monrovia, then was under Stillson at Dana Hills. Thornton coached at Dana Hills for nine years before taking the reins at Capo Valley.

"The kids I have are definitely good athletes," says Thornton. "We'll basically run, and just see what we can do. We've run at Capistrano Valley because of the athletes we've had and our size. With this group I know we can do it in just about any style."

Game rules dictate a man-to-man defense, which should allow such standouts in the front court to do their thing without the burden of double and triple-teaming, which was the case on most occasions for such players as San Clemente's Dean Garrett (6-9), El Toro's Jeff Arnold (6-10) and Westminster's Jeff Eastin (6-6).

Thornton picked two players from his own team (Burt Call and Mark Otta), in addition to Mater Dei's Beeuwsaert and Chris Jackson and Estancia's guards, Jon Johnston and Jim Curtis.

The rest of the squad includes

Ocean View's Steve Moser and Fountain Valley's Rolf Jacobs from the Sunset League and Mark Moses, a 6-3 talent from La Quinta in the Garden Grove League.

The South All-Stars will practice at Saddleback College, beginning June 1, and tentative plans are to scrimmage with Saddleback College's team twice and Orange Coast once in preparation for the game.

The South leads in the series, 11-7, but is on a two-game losing streak.

Rookie, Wilfong to rescue

By CURT SEEDEN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

On a night a rookie pitcher gained most of the glory, Angel utility infielder Rob Wilfong sat at his dressing cubicle oblivious to the fact he is the team's leading hitter.

The easy-going replacement for second baseman Bobby Grich, who is still plagued by back problems, raised his average to .429 Wednesday night when he homered and singled in three at-bats to help young Ron Romanick and the Angels salvage a 9-5 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers before 24,266 at Anaheim Stadium.

As is the case each time Wilfong manages to break into the starting lineup, it is just a matter of borrowed time. When Grich's back is back, Wilfong is back on the bench.

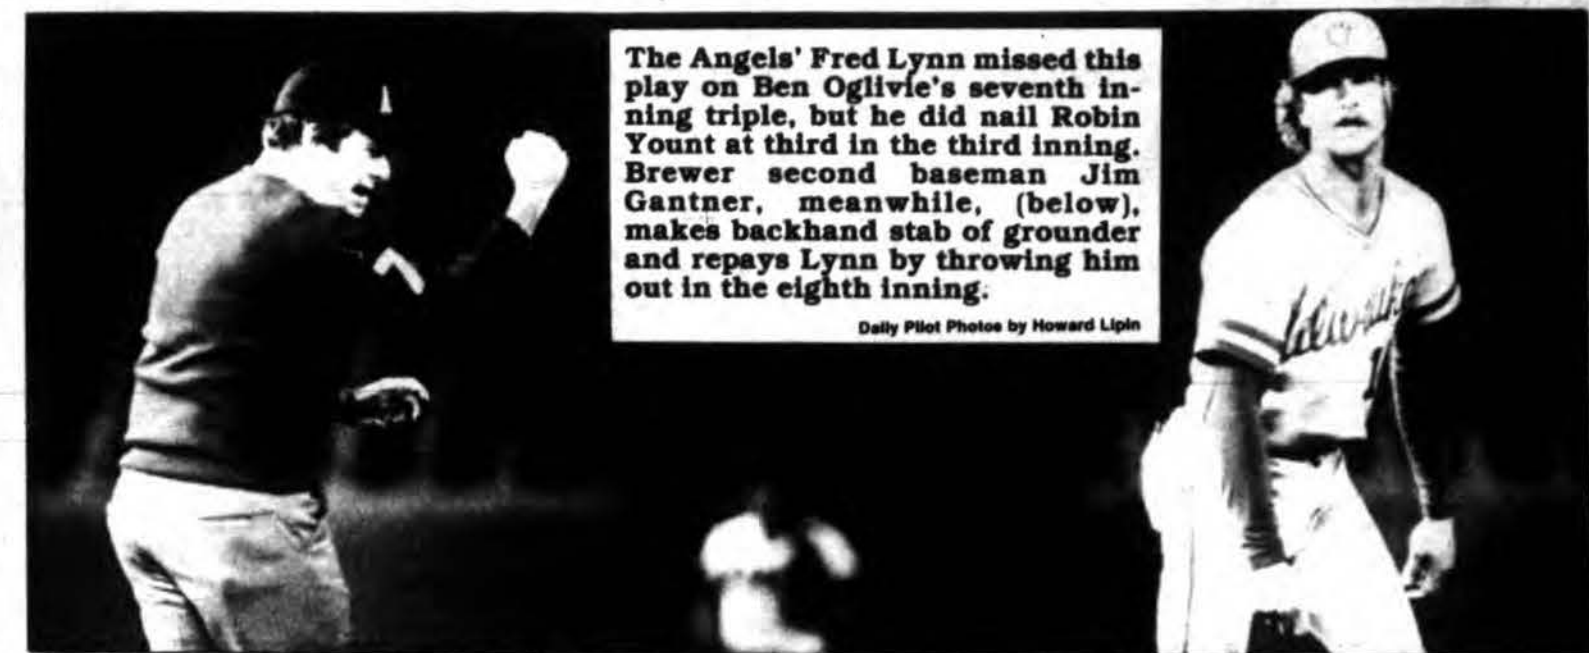

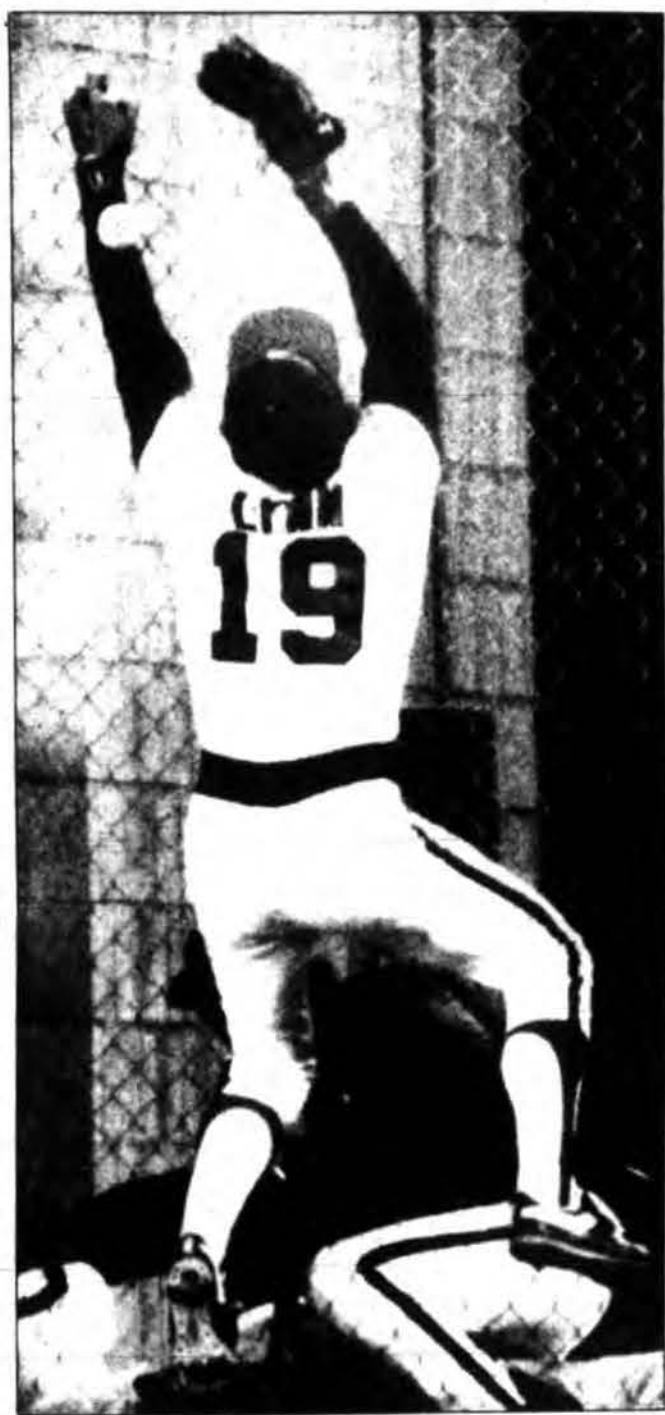

"I'm not going to take anybody's job. I'm just giving Bobby time to rest his back," Wilfong said afterward.

Wilfong has only been to the plate seven times this season. Wednesday night, he led off the second inning with a home run into the right-field corner seats and added an RBI single in the fifth. He also walked twice and scored in the seventh on Gary Pettis' sacrifice fly.

"The home run? That's the last thing I'm trying to do," Wilfong said. "I've got to stay within my limitations and not try for the long ball."

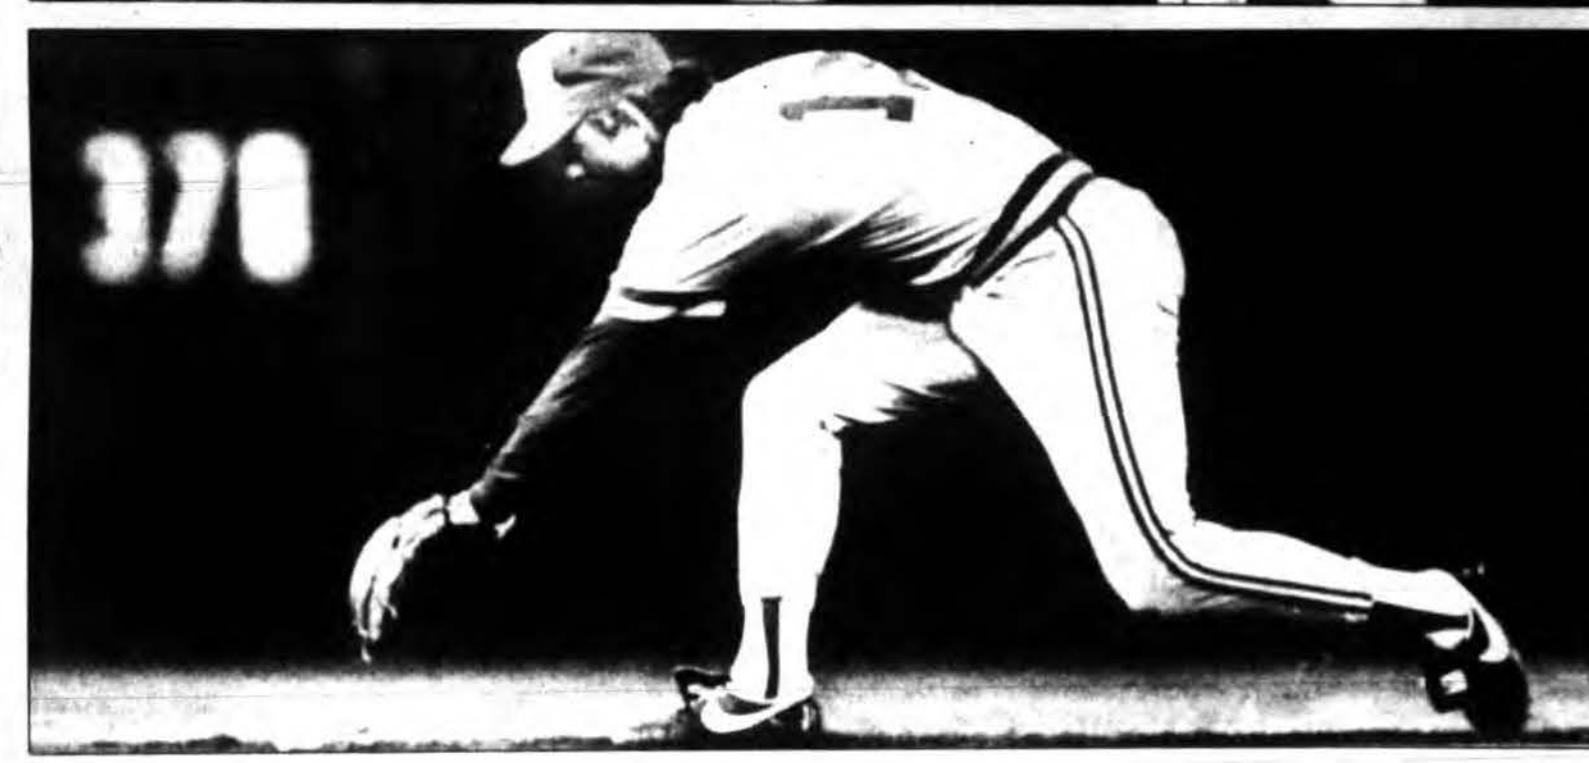

Romanick, meanwhile, was the recipient of Wilfong's hot bat as well as some key hitting — something that escaped the Angels on their first homestand of the season — in which

The Angels' Fred Lynn missed this play on Ben Oglivie's seventh-inning triple, but he did nail Robin Yount at third in the third inning. Brewer second baseman Jim Gantner, meanwhile, (below), makes backhand stab of grounder and repays Lynn by throwing him out in the eighth inning.

Fast start is OK with Honeycutt

He pitches Dodgers to 2-1 victory; Scioscia stars

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It wasn't exactly a must for Rick Honeycutt to have a fast start in the 1984 season.

"But I guess it is more satisfying to have a couple of good games right away, to ease people's minds that I can still pitch," said the Dodgers lefthander after hurling the Dodgers to a 2-1 victory over the Chicago Cubs on Wednesday night.

Honeycutt, 1-0, scattered seven singles, struck out five batters and didn't walk anybody in pitching the Dodgers' first complete game of the year.

In his first start, he pitched eight innings, gave up eight hits and two runs and wound up with no decision in an extra-inning game.

In his two starts, he has walked only two batters, one intentionally.

"That's the key for me, walks," Honeycutt said. "It seems that walks haunt me. I'm going to give up my hits, but it seems when I've walked somebody, they come around to score."

Honeycutt had a similar fast start after joining the Dodgers in a trade in August. He threw 16 consecutive scoreless innings against Philadelphia and won his first two games.

But he failed to win again and finished the season in the bullpen, partly because of arthritis in his left shoulder.

"I don't think about it when I'm throwing, but it did stiffen a little between innings," Honeycutt said.

"Now I'm more cautious about things. When you have an injury, it seems you become more alert."

Honeycutt's win improved the Dodgers' record to 3-4.

Catcher Mike Scioscia, who knocked in the winning run against the Cubs on Monday night, drove in both Dodgers runs.

"It's nice to contribute a little," Scioscia said.

Scioscia, who was sidelined the last four and one-half months last season with a shoulder injury, said "any kind of a start is a good start."

Rose denied 4,000th hit

He takes walk down aisle, then gets 4 more at the plate

CINCINNATI (AP) — Montreal outfielder Pete Rose can celebrate a wedding, a birthday, a hitting milestone and a home opener in Montreal all in the same weekend.

After failing to get a hit in his hometown Wednesday, Rose was ready to board the team plane with his new bride and a determination to get his 4,000th career hit in the Expos' home opener Friday — one day before he turns 43.

The former Cincinnati Reds star drew four walks and grounded out in Montreal's 9-3 victory Wednesday at Riverfront Stadium before a boisterous crowd that littered the field in disgust when Reds pitchers gave Rose little to swing at.

His next swing at becoming only the second player ever to reach 4,000 hits should come Friday against the Philadelphia Phillies — the team that signed him as a free agent after the 1978 season and released him last year.

Told the Phillies plan to start Jerry Koosman, Rose snapped his fingers in disappointment and said, "I thought it would be Carlton."

The 18,923 fans in Riverfront Stadium Wednesday hoped it would be either Bruce Berenyi or Frank Pastore giving up No. 4,000.

Rose, who played in Cincinnati his first 16 major league seasons, drew three consecutive walks from Berenyi, who started and lasted 3½ innings. Rose took a cut at only one of Berenyi's offerings, fouling it off.

The fans booed Berenyi loudly when he was replaced by Pastore, who retired Rose on a first-pitch grounder back to the mound in the sixth.

"Berenyi was a little wild. He's a tough guy to get a hit off of," Rose said. "The one ball I hit hard, if it gets by Pastore it's a base hit."

Instead, the drama was played out into the eighth inning, when Rose led off as the stadium rocked with encouragement. Pastore threw two balls and then a strike, then put his hand to his mouth for an automatic ball three. The next pitch brought Rose his fourth walk.

UCI signs four players

UC Irvine basketball coach Bill Mulligan signed four players to national letters of intent Wednesday joining an earlier signing and two major college transfers.

The four who signed Wednesday will be freshmen in the fall. They are guards Rodney Scott (St. John Bosco), Jesse Ellis (Duarte), Boris King (Palm Springs) and center Eric Leckner (Mira Costa).

That group joins forward Wayne Engelstad (Bosco Tech) who signed in November, forward John Rogers (La Quinta), who sat out last season after transferring from Stanford and guard Mike Hess (Corona del Mar) who must sit out the 1984-85 season after transferring from Texas.

Lakers get Jordan in a hurry... he suits up in van

INGLEWOOD (AP) — Los Angeles Lakers Coach Pat Riley says he considers guard Byron Scott's knee strain a "day-to-day" sort of problem.

But Riley, preparing to take the Pacific Division champions into the National Basketball Association playoffs, says he isn't taking any chances.

The Lakers signed one of their former guards, Eddie Jordan, to a temporary contract Wednesday and Jordan suited up in a van on the way from the airport to the Lakers' 121-108 victory over Portland.

"Right now I am not counting on Byron for the first few playoff games," Riley said. "However, you never know on an injury of this sort. He did not tear any ligaments. It is simply a strain and that is a day-to-day injury."

Scott is on the inactive list and will not play Friday or Sunday.

Jordan, who played the last few minutes and scored a basket at the buzzer, said he was baby-sitting at his home in New Jersey when Riley called him about 2 p.m. Wednesday and asked him to play.

"I almost croaked when I heard Pat's voice," Jordan said.

Scott strained his knee in a game in Portland on Sunday when he slipped on a wet spot and joined Earvin "Magic" Johnson, who has a bruised ring finger, and Bob McAdoo, with a respiratory ailment, on the ailing list.

"It's very painful, but it's better than it was yesterday," Scott said of his injury. "If I had to play defense in the next week, I don't think I'd be able to."

"It was a great game for us to give some other people some playing time," Riley said. "I'm not sure I like it with some of my regulars hurt, but they did need rest."

Meanwhile, despite the loss, the Trail Blazers' fifth in six games to the Lakers this season, Portland Coach Jack Ramsay said his team is also gearing up.

"We are trying to win every game, but we are also preparing for the playoffs. Part of this is resting the players that have been going strong all season," Ramsay said.

Ramsay praised the Lakers, however.

"I have said it before — I think they are the best in the league," he said. "They can play a game or two without Magic or McAdoo and you hardly notice the difference. They all play extremely well together."

Mike McGee and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar each scored 24 points to lead the Lakers.

Forward Jamaal Wilkes returned to the Lakers' lineup after missing four games because of the flu, but he scored only eight points.

Jim Paxson led Portland with 22 points and rookie Clyde Drexler had 17 for Portland, which lost its fifth in a row.

Georgetown coach says college refs betting on games

From AP dispatches

WASHINGTON — Georgetown basketball Coach John Thompson's statement that he has "heard a lot of grumbling lately about referees betting on basketball games" has astonished game officials and other coaches.

"You leave me in a state of shock," said Lou Bonder, supervisor of officials for the Atlantic 10.

"I'm a great admirer of Thompson's, and if he makes a statement like that, he knows something; we should be alerted. I'm going to call my officials, do a little legwork and check things out."

Fred Barakat, supervisor of officials in the Atlantic Coast Conference, said: "I'm quite alarmed. I have to be in this administrative position. But that's a hell of an accusation without being specific."

University of Maryland Coach Lefty Driesell said he was not aware of any referees gambling on college games.

"That's a pretty strong statement. I'd be shocked," Driesell said.

Thompson made his comments Tuesday and could not be reached for comment Wednesday.

Thompson had also said he would talk to friends around the NBA to determine how much money center Patrick Ewing could command if he were to pass up his senior year and enter this year's NBA draft.

Bob Woolf, who represents several NBA players, said Ewing would be worth "over $1 million per year."

Quote of the day

George Andrews, an attorney who is the agent for several NBA players, after learning that advice columnist Ann Landers was in the crowd at a Chicago Bulls game: "If Ann Landers comes to see the Bulls play, she's got a problem."

Clark's hit sinks Pittsburgh

Jack Clark's bases-loaded one-out single in the bottom of the 10th inning broke a tie and gave San Francisco a 2-1 victory over Pittsburgh Wednesday. Dusty Baker, making his debut for the Giants, opened the 10th with a walk as a pinch-hitter. Al Oliver followed with a single, snapping an 0-18 slump and sending Baker to second, and after another walk, Clark grounded the first pitch up the third-base line to end the game. In other National League activity Wednesday, Andre Dawson drove in four runs to pace Montreal to a 9-3 victory over Cincinnati as the Expos' Pete Rose drew four walks, grounded out once and failed to get his 4,000th career hit. Mookie Wilson and Hubie Brooks drove in two runs apiece and Walt Terrell and Doug Sisk combined on a five-hitter to give the streaking New York Mets a 6-1 triumph over Atlanta. The victory was the sixth straight for the Mets, whose 6-1 record is the best start in the team's 23-year history. Glenn Wilson's RBI single capped a four-run ninth-inning rally, leading Philadelphia to a 7-6 victory over Houston. Ozzie Virgil had tied the game earlier in the inning with a two-run homer. Reliever Bill Campbell (1-0) earned the victory, allowing just one hit in three scoreless innings. Left-hander Tim Lollar pitched six innings of six-hit ball and hit a three-run homer as San Diego defeated St. Louis, 7-5. Lollar, 1-0, shut out the Cardinals through the first five innings, but left after giving up three runs in the sixth, two on Darrell Porter's second homer of the year.

Orioles continue to flounder

Jorge Orta singled for the only hit in Kansas City's four-run fourth inning and the Royals went on to defeat the Baltimore Orioles, 5-2, Wednesday night, handing the defending world champions their fifth loss in six games this season. Winning pitcher Larry Gura, 2-0, worked out of a bases-loaded jam in the second inning and was helped by double plays in the fifth, sixth and seventh. He allowed four hits before Dan Quisenberry pitched two hitless innings for his third save. Elsewhere in the American League, Scott Fletcher drove in one run and scored another and Greg Walker hit a three-run homer to back the four-hit pitching of Richard Dotson in Chicago's 6-1 victory over Cleveland. Dotson evened his record at 1-1 in pitching the first complete game of the season for the White Sox. He walked three and struck out two and the Cleveland run was unearned. Rookie Alvin Davis and veteran Al Cowens belted home runs and Cowens doubled home the decisive run in the eighth inning as Seattle won its fifth straight game and sixth in seven starts by defeating the Boston Red Sox, 5-4. Matt Young, 2-0, allowed one run and six hits in 7½ innings and had a career-high nine strikeouts. He held Boston hitless until Mike Easler lined the first pitch of the fifth inning up the middle for a single.

Thon eye surgery successful

HOUSTON — Houston Astros short-stop Dickie Thon, who was hit in the head by a pitch, underwent successful minor surgery on the bone structure above his left eye Wednesday but continues to experience blurred vision, Astros team physician Dr. William Bryan said.

Bryan said the surgery was performed only on the left orbital tripod above Thon's eye. The surgery, Bryan said, was not related to Thon's vision and would have no adverse effect on his vision.

Thon was struck in the head Sunday by a pitch from the New York Mets' Mike Torrez in the third inning of a game in the Astrodome. He was carried from the field on a stretcher and X-rays revealed the broken bones. Doctors at first said surgery would not be necessary but later said the operation was to facilitate Thon's recovery.

Lazers pound Phoenix, 10-4

PHOENIX — Juan Cardenas scored three goals while Stuart Lee and Poly Garcia added two apiece in powering the Los Angeles Lazers to a 10-4 Major Indoor Soccer League victory over the Phoenix Pride here Wednesday night.

The Lazers, now 20-23, overcame a 3-1 deficit after the first period with seven straight goals. They closed out the scoring on two empty-net tallies after Phoenix pulled its goaltender in favor of a sixth attacker with 7:13 remaining.

Willie Molano, Clyde Best and Batata each had one goal for Los Angeles, which split the six-game season series with the Pride.

Sackers wrap up NASL title

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Kevin Crowe, Kaz Deyna and Julie Veece scored third-period goals as the San Diego Sockers defeated the Cosmos, 7-3, Wednesday night to capture the North American Soccer League indoor championship by sweeping the first three games of the best-of-five series.

It was the third straight indoor championship for San Diego.

Crowe snapped a 3-3 deadlock with his second goal of the game and fourth of the playoffs when he knocked in a rebound of a shot by Hugo Perez at 3:23 of the third period.

Ten minutes later, Deyna tallied his fifth goal of the playoffs when he slipped a rebound by Veece past Cosmos defender Dan Canter. And 1:28 later, Veece and Brian Quinn worked a give-and-go, allowing San Diego to take a 6-3 lead.

Marina gets first league win

Marina High celebrated its first Sunset League baseball victory of the season Wednesday night over Huntington Beach at Mile Square Park, while Woodbridge moved into playoff contention with a South Coast League shutout win over Laguna Beach.

Here's how it went:

Marina 4, Huntington Beach 3

Chad Reed's single to left field scored Mike Pacini from second base in the bottom of the eighth inning as the Vikings edged the Oilers.

Pacini led off with a walk and one out later moved to second on a single by Keith Laszlo setting the stage for Reed's heroics.

Marina had led once before in the contest, 1-0, after scoring in the first. But the Oilers had battled back with a run in the third to tie and two more in the fifth to take a 3-1 lead. Ed Lidyoff singled in the go-ahead runs for Huntington Beach.

However, Marina forged a tie in their half of the fifth on a single by Laszlo, a double by Reed and Steve Blokdyk's two-run hit to left field.

In relief, the third Marina hurler, David Emmons, pitched two scoreless innings, allowing a pair of walks, but no hits to earn the victory.

The outcome leaves each team with 1-7 Sunset marks.

Woodbridge 4, Laguna Beach 0

Warrior left-hander Randy Cook celebrated his 18th birthday in style, allowing a lone fourth-inning two-out single to Laguna Yudi Vinograd in the top of the fourth as Woodbridge moved into a third-place tie with San Clemente and Mission Viejo at 3-3 in the South Coast League with the win.

Cook struck out eight and walked two in pitching the gem.

Woodbridge scored a pair of runs in the fourth as Darren Daniels tripled and scored on Jordan Frank's base hit. Frank then stole second, took third on a sacrifice and scored as Mark Daniels squeezed him in.

SWIMMING

Vikes in top form against Barons

Lynch, Smith, Brotherton star in Marina's showdown with FV

The Marina High swimming team was in top form Wednesday afternoon in its showdown with Fountain Valley.

The Vikings outscored the Barons in the battle of Sunset League unbeaten, 106½-73½, sparked by the efforts of team captain Randy Lynch.

"He was the swimmer of the day," noted Marina Coach Dave Pickford. "He upset Fountain Valley's best in both the 200 and 500 (freestyle) and just inspired us today. I figured him for third in each of those events."

Lynch finished runner-up in each of those events to a Marina teammate, but those second-place points proved decisive.

Not surprisingly, a strong performance was turned in by Marina's Steve Smith, who had just returned from the nationals.

Smith doubled in the backstroke (58.80) and individual medley (2:03.88), winning by a clear margin in each.

Brian Brotherton also swam well, posting his best time so far in the 200 free (1:53.51) and was just out-touched in finishing third in the breaststroke.

Fountain Valley had its standouts as well. Jeff Moore enhanced his reputation as the best swimmer in the Sunset League, becoming the first in the league this season to go under 50 seconds in the 100 free, winning in 49.82.

Moore also took the 50 free in 23.05.

Elsewhere Wednesday, Irvine romped past Saddleback, 106-32, and Corona del Mar outscored Estancia, 109-53, in Sea View League duals.

Highlighting Irvine's showing was a school-record performance in the 400 freestyle relay (3:26), beating the old standard by a full second. Greg Rich led off with a 49.6 split to get Irvine going.

Eric Ford captured the 100 free and was a participant in both winning relay teams to pace Corona del Mar.

On the women's side, Fountain Valley topped Marina, 106-72; Edison beat Ocean View, 140-26; and Huntington Beach posted a 123-52 decision over Westminster in Sunset meets.

Rustlers no-hit, but win

Golden West College's softball team was a victim of a no-hitter at the hands of Orange Coast's Angie Antrobus, but still managed to push over a run in the bottom of the seventh to claim a 1-0 South Coast Conference victory over the Pirates.

The Rustlers scored the only run when Liz Mason reached on an error, took second on a passed ball, was sacrificed to third and scored on an error in the outfield. Antrobus struck out two and walked two in the no-hitter, while Golden West's Karen Carlson also was sharp, striking out five, walking one and allowing two hits in tossing her shutout.

Meanwhile, in Pacific Coast Conference game, Saddleback romped past San Diego, 12-2.

Bob Boone lays down seventh-inning bunt which resulted in a force play at third base. Angels, however, managed three runs in the inning en route to 9-5 win.

ROOKIE, WILFONG RESCUE ANGELS. . .

From C1

they went 3-5.

The 6-4 right-hander came within one out of pitching a complete game and had to be removed by Manager John McNamara in what had to be McNamara's most unpopular moment as the Angel skipper.

"The plate just disappeared," Romanick said, referring to the ninth inning when he was chased by singles by Ted Simmons, Jim Sundberg and Rick Manning. "I'd rather pitch a complete game than strike out 10 in a row."

Still Romanick was pleased with his first major league victory. He retired the side in the first two innings, walked Jim Sundberg to lead off the third but erased him with a double play ball off the bat of Manning.

He gave up his first hit to Ben Oglivie in the fourth, but Oglivie was erased on a perfect throw from right field by Fred Lynn on a base hit by Cecil Cooper.

Until their four-run ninth inning (two of the hits driving in three runs came off Luis Sanchez), Romanick had allowed just a fifth-inning run when Oglivie tripled and scored on Jim Gantner's base hit.

The offense belonged to the Angels, starting with a two-run first on an RBI single by Reggie Jackson and a sacrifice fly by Doug DeCinces.

They added two more on in the second on Wilfong's homer, a double by Bob Boone for his first hit of the season, and Carew's RBI single.

Romanick and Wilfong weren't the only good things to come out of the homestead finale. Jackson added a bloop two-run single in the seventh inning to give the Angels a 9-1 lead and in the process raised his average to .333 with eight RBI, nearly one third of the team's total RBI.

The victory, besides being a confidence builder for Romanick, was a boost for the entire team which departed right after the game on a 15-day road trip.

"This picks everybody up after a game like last night (a 10-1 Brewer victory)," noted McNamara. "We got a well-pitched ball game, timely hits and sacrifice flies."

He also got a lot of boos when he brought the hook to the mound.

"Nobody in the stadium wanted more for him to get a complete game than I did. But (catcher Bob) Boone came out and said to watch him. He was starting to lose his velocity."

"But he showed good poise. He had command of his pitches today," McNamara added.

Noted Wilfong: "That was perfect. It's just what we needed."

Wilfong's blast was the beginning of the end for Milwaukee starter Moose Haas, who gave way to Jerry Augustine after following the home run with a double to Boone and a walk to No. 9 hitter Dick Schofield.

But Augustine also had his problems, as did Tom Tellman and Bob McClure who followed.

The Brewers are now 1-6 and still have three games on the road in Kansas City.

The Angels haven't done much to write home about either and now must hit the road with stops in Oakland, Minnesota, Toronto, Boston and Milwaukee. The long trip represents nearly a fifth of the Angels' entire road schedule.

After a less than exciting homestead, would it do the Angels some good to get away?

"For 15 days? I don't think I really want to leave," Wilfong added.

ANGEL NOTES — The Angels announced they will leave Darryl Scotters behind to start the road trip which began this afternoon in Oakland. Scotters has been plagued by lower back pain and received medication Wednesday from team physician Dr. Lewis Yeaman. Doug DeCinces extended his hitting streak to seven games with a third-inning single. Rookie center-fielder Gary Pettis returned to the starting lineup but failed to get a hit. He did walk, stole a base and scored in the first and had a sacrifice fly in the seventh. Pettis is now hitting .067. Romanick on the Brewers: "They're the kind of team that will slow-ball you if you let them. Give them a blobber and all of a sudden it's contagious."

Following today's game, the Angels and A's will square off Friday night (7:30, Channel 5) with Tommy John (0-0) going against Oakland's Steve McCatty (1-0).

Agreement near on Games

By ANDREA ADELSON
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Irvine and Olympic organizers are expected to reach agreement next week over preparations for an Olympic event scheduled at Heritage Park Aquatics Complex this summer, a city official said today.

"If they had the checkbook, they said they would sign it today," according to Irvine police Lt. Vic Thies, who is coordinating plans with the Los Angeles Olympic Committee.

He said Olympic officials are preoccupied this week with an invitational shooting contest being held in Prado Regional Park in Chino, a preliminary test of the multi-million-dollar range.

With three months to opening ceremonies, only about a third of the 30 venue sites are formally covered by security agreements, according to a published report.

Aside from the modern pentathlon, to be held in Irvine and Coto de Caza, three other Olympic events are scheduled in Orange County during the 23rd Olympiad, July 28 through August 12.

"We have a lot of agreements to get and most are in their final stages, like Irvine's," Olympic spokeswoman Dolores Wood said today from Los Angeles.

The City of Long Beach, however, has apparently suspended making arrangements for the four Olympic events scheduled in the city during the two-week event in an effort to end a stalemate with Olympic sponsors over security costs for the Games.

City officials are reportedly dissatisfied with the amount the Olympic Committee has offered to reimburse Long Beach for police costs.

"We've had difficulty with negotiations with Long Beach," Wood said. "We're trying our best at the negotiating table."

Olympic officials say there is ample time left to conclude the security agreements, negotiated mostly in secret with city officials over millions of dollars worth of security and thousands of peace officers.

"Our first concern was to get the first major contracts out of the way," she added. Wood referred to all-but-signed contracts with City of Los Angeles police and the county sheriff's office.

Assistant City Manager Paul Brady said Irvine's contract, being reviewed by city attorneys, is an open-ended agreement whereby the Olympic Committee has agreed to reimburse the city treasury for costs incurred.

"They will pay whatever it takes," Brady said. "We have a guarantee that all city costs are covered."

Included are security, utilities and pool rental, he said.

About 100 athletes and 7,000 spectators are expected to converge on Heritage Park for four hours on July 31 for the swimming portion of the modern pentathlon event. The 50-acre park complex, shared in part with Irvine High School, has hosted other international events and the home-grown annual Harvest Festival attended by about 8,000.

Attendance "in itself doesn't present any problem," Thies said. "A typical high school football game will push over that. The only twist is the international flavor."

Olympic officials themselves intend to provide their own security within the complex, he said. Irvine's prime responsibility will be traffic control, Thies added.

While the mid-week event may not draw huge crowds, as a precaution Irvine's police department has canceled vacations during the Games, he said.

Orange Coast College President Bernard J. Luskin, head of the nation's largest single-campus community college, is leaving that post to become a Washington, D.C., lobbyist for more than 1,200 community colleges across the nation.

Luskin, 46, informed Coast Community College District trustees this week of his decision to resign in August. The trustees oversee Orange Coast, Golden West and Coastline colleges.

At Wednesday night's meeting, the trustees granted Luskin a leave of absence without pay for the duration of his contract, which runs through June 30, 1986. This action leaves the door open for Luskin to return to the district in a faculty or in an administration post. Luskin has been associated with the Coast District for 23 years.

"I think he deserves our congratulations and support," said Board President Conrad Nordquist.

Mesans get death threats

Police report six residents phoned by midnight dialer

By KAREN E. KLEIN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

A midnight caller apparently picking the victims randomly out of the telephone book has threatened the lives of at least six Costa Mesa residents in the past two days, Costa Mesa police said.

Costa Mesa police Capt. Robert Moody said the anonymous dialer struck shortly after midnight Tuesday and Wednesday mornings, using his victims' last names during terse conversations in which he said he was going to kill them.

So far, the man has not tried to carry out any of his threats, Moody said, and police do not believe he will.

"He obviously gets some sort of sick thrill out of these calls," Moody said. "Women that are alone at night have been particularly scared" by the phone threats, he added.

Of the six calls reported to police, only four victims filed official police reports. Of the four, two victims were male and two female, Moody said. "He may be making a lot more calls than we know about," Moody noted, since many people do not notify police when they receive crank phone calls.

The caller appears to be going down the columns of the phone book to decide who to call. Tuesday, the victims had last names beginning with "E" or "F," Moody said, and Wednesday the victims names started with "P."

"His method seems to be pretty random," Moody said.

The best way to handle any crank call is to hang up immediately and call the police, he said, because any reaction on the victim's part only encourages the caller.

Police investigations into the calls will continue, Moody said.

Although Moody said he had not been notified of any similar calls occurring in nearby cities, two phoned death threats were reported to the Irvine Police Department on Wednesday.

Irvine police Sgt. Dick Bowman said crank calls are fairly common in the city and the two reported Wednesday do not appear to be related.

Grand opening not so grand in Valley

By ROBERT BARKER
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

The Drug Emporium officially opened its doors in Fountain Valley for the first time at 9 a.m. today but a couple of eager beavers apparently just couldn't wait.

They allegedly smashed an emergency door and were caught at about 3:30 a.m. today in the act of trying to steal three bags of merchandise, according to police.

"You might say, they're literally breaking down our doors," store manager Tim Ziemke quipped this morning.

Tipped off by a silent alarm, Fountain Valley police officers Paul Sorrell and Sarah Long found Gregory A. Scarborough, 21, of Huntington Beach leaving the store through the smashed door with several bags of merchandise, investigators said.

A further inspection allegedly revealed that John A. Dresslar, 21, of Long Beach was hiding inside the store at 16121 Brookhurst St., according to officers.

Both were taken into custody without incident and booked into Orange County Jail on suspicion of commercial burglary.

The Westminster Police Department's K-9 unit was called to sniff out possible additional suspects but none was located, investigators said.

Store manager Ziemke, who didn't know whether to be happy or sad about the publicity surrounding the early not-so-grand opening, said the suspects loaded three of the store's shopping bags with cigarettes, sunglasses, cosmetics and wristwatches. Everything was believed recovered.

The store is headquartered in Columbus, Ohio, and deals in a high volume at low prices, he said. It's located in the building formerly occupied by Market Basket across the street from Mile Square Regional Park.

FV council term limit asked

By PHIL SNEIDERMAN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

A Fountain Valley committee is launching a petition drive aimed at letting voters decide whether to limit city council members to two terms in office.

Proponents are trying to get such a measure on the Nov. 6 ballot. As proposed, the measure would not affect currently seated council members, only those elected in the future.

By a 3-to-2 vote in February, the Fountain Valley City Council declined to place a similar measure on the ballot without a petition drive. The initial proposal called for a three-term limit on local council terms. The measure was harshly criticized by Mayor Marvin Adler, who will be seeking a fourth council term in November.

Currently, there is no limit on Fountain Valley council terms.

Attorney Samuel Cubete, who supported the original proposal, now is heading a group known as Fountain Valley Citizens for Good Government. Cubete has placed a required legal notice that will enable his group to begin circulating petitions in about three weeks.

The new proposal would place on the ballot a proposed ordinance saying Fountain Valley City Council members could not serve more than two consecutive four-year terms. A person appointed to serve more than two years on the council because of a vacancy would be eligible for no more than one elected term.

The proposed law would not affect any council member elected before April 1, 1984.

Cubete said his group needs to collect at least 2,600 signatures from registered Fountain Valley voters by June 15. He said the group will seek about 5,000 signatures.

In his legal notice, Cubete said the term limit was designed to give more people the opportunity to run and to give council members only one chance to run as an incumbent. Incumbents are sometimes viewed as having an advantage over newcomers when running for re-election.

In rejecting the original proposal, Mayor Adler and Councilwoman Barbara Brown argued that voters already have the opportunity to limit a term in office each time a council member seeks re-election. Adler also argued that a council member who serves additional years gains experience and makes valuable contacts with other government officials.

Fairview Park — a piece of history

County plan calls for $10 million to create recreational facility

For centuries, the 70-foot-high Fairview Bluffs north and east of the mouth of the Santa Ana River lay untouched.

The bluffs, with their proximity to the river's rich, freshwater bay, was home to one of the largest settlements of prehistoric man in Southern California.

From nearly 2000 B.C. to about the time modern civilization reached the area in 1796 A.D., two distinct tribes of Indians hunted, fished, mated, gave birth, worshipped their gods and were buried in the windswept bluff villages.

Except for the firebreaks and foot trails carved out of the wild oats and barley that cover the ground, the 283-acres of bluffs and dry river bottom below them — better known as the Fairview Regional Park site in Costa Mesa — remain relatively unchanged today.

But not for long. The valuable parcel, most of which was purchased by the County of Orange for a regional park in February 1973, is to be developed within the next several years into a $10 million recreation facility including a golf course, softball stadium complex, lake and RV camp site. The city of Costa Mesa owns 26 acres of the park.

The draft general development plan, approved late last month by the county's Harbors, Beaches and Parks Department, will be considered during a public hearing of the Costa Mesa City Council on May 7.

Developed by the Reynolds Environmental Group of Costa Mesa, the plans reflect a post-Proposition 13 orientation, according to Rick Hume, vice president of the company and manager of the Fairview Park project.

Proposition 13, which cut money allocated for public projects, has dictated a new policy that parks must pay for themselves.

"The parks must generate enough revenue to offset their operation and maintenance," Hume said.

While past regional parks were designed to preserve open space and wilderness areas, he said, parks (Please see FAIRVIEW/A2)

Leisure World victim wins big settlement

Residents weren't warned of burglaries

SANTA ANA (AP) — The operators of Leisure World retirement community in Laguna Hills must pay a 77-year-old widow $1.06 million in damages because she wasn't warned of a spate of break-ins before her home was burglarized, a jury ruled.

The jurors decided Wednesday that the operators of the gated community were negligent in failing to notify the 21,000 residents about a series of burglaries beginning in September 1980. That was five months before Rose Huhn's home was burglarized, and jewelry, rugs and other valuables taken.

"They chose not to let residents know, and excused it by saying it would upset residents. But a knowing community is much more alert than an unknowing community," said one juror who asked not to be identified.

During the trial, Leisure World's former security director, Mary Christiansen, said security officials chose not to tell the residents about the burglaries because they did not want to frighten residents. She also admitted allowing the unsuspecting residents to be "bait" for the burglar.

"We're trying to send a message that something must be done about the security situation at Leisure World," the juror who requested anonymity said.

The jury criticized the community's policy of allowing businessmen with commercial passes to enter the walled community virtually unchecked.

Leisure World attorney Kerry

Sorenson said an appeal was likely. Jurors deliberated two days before voting 11-1 to award Mrs. Huhn $410,000 in compensatory damages. The vote was 10-2 for punitive damages of $650,000.

Of the total sum, $705,000 was assessed against Professional Management Inc., in charge of Leisure World's security. Golden Rain Foundation, which sets policy for the community, was held responsible for $355,000.

Mrs. Huhn said she has now installed extensive locks and security measures, but has no intention to leave Leisure World.

"I don't know what I'll do with the money," she said. "I haven't got it yet. I imagine I will invest some and give some donations to my church and to other charitable causes. And maybe to my family."

OV School closing plan assailed

By ROBERT BARKER
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Ocean View School District officials are defending the safety of their schools following criticism aimed at a controversial plan to close four schools and discontinue seventh and eighth grade classes at three other schools.

Administrative Assistant Gail Wayne said Tuesday that tests conducted in accordance with federal guidelines show no evidence of harmful asbestos fibers in the air. She also said all district schools meet California earthquake and fire safety standards.

The question of the schools' safety was raised by parent Lynne Hattabaugh who has a child in the Gifted and Talented Education program at Circle View. (The master plan committee is recommending that seventh and eighth grade class students and GATE pupils be transferred from Circle View to Spring View to save money.)

Hattabaugh said she believes Spring View poses an asbestos threat. She also said the school, at 16662 Trudy Lane, is more dangerous to exit during emergencies because youngsters have to file down a long hallway on their way out of the school.

The 11-member master plan committee is recommending closure of Pleasant View, Meadow View, Lark View and Glen View schools and the consolidation of the seventh and eighth grade classes at Village View and Westmont as well as at Circle View. The committee reaffirmed its recommendations this week. The trustees will hold a public hearing on the closures May 7 and are to make a decision May 21.

Parents of mentally retarded youngsters at Nueva View School

also have expressed opposition, claiming that the pupils who are "mainstreamed" into "normal" school may be traumatized by the move. The handicapped children now attend several classes a week at Lark View. Under the closure plan, they would be bused to Golden View.

District Superintendent Dale Coogan said training sessions would be held with Lark View teachers to make a smooth transition.

"The kids are very accepting and basically they want to help. I'm certain things will go well," he said.

District officials say the closures will save about $1 million in operating costs a year. Enrollment has dropped from a peak of 14,000 pupils in the early 1970s to a total of 9,600. The number is expected to dip further until leveling off at about 8,000.

If trustees approve, closures would take place in September of 1985.

LUSKIN QUILTS OCC POST...

become executive vice president and chief operating officer of the American Association of Community and Junior Colleges, based in Washington. He will work with federal lawmakers and agencies on matters concerning two-year colleges across the nation.

The AACJC, founded in 1920, is the chief lobbying and policy development organization for community colleges throughout the United States. It also publishes various educational materials and has a division offering executive development programs for college administrators.

Luskin said the federal government provides $16 billion annually in higher education funding, including the critical area of financial aid for students who could not otherwise afford to attend college. Luskin said Orange Coast College alone receives about $4 million annually in federal funds.

In his new job, Luskin said he will work toward correcting an imbalance in the percentage of federal funds earmarked for two-year campuses.

"One of the things that has always annoyed me is that community colleges have always had to live on crumbs off the table," he said. "About 40 percent of the nation's college students are enrolled in community colleges, but community colleges get only 10 percent of the federal appropriations for higher education."

The outgoing college president said there are now community colleges in every congressional district in the United States. He said he hopes to inform federal lawmakers of the importance of the institutions as places to prepare students for four-year colleges and to train people for a variety of vocations.

Luskin has held numerous important posts with the Coast District since joining it as a data processing and business instructor in 1961. In 1975, he became the founding president of Fountain Valley-based Coastline College, the innovative satellite college that operates without a formal campus. Coastline offers classes at a variety of rented locations.

In 1982, he was named president of Orange Coast College. The Costa Mesa school is considered the nation's largest single-campus community college, based on enrollment.

It was an appointment that stirred controversy among some faculty members, however.

More recently, Luskin was among nine top Coast District administrators who received contract extensions or new contracts approved by a board that included three lame-duck trustees. Three newly elected trustees have expressed a desire to void the contracts, but thus far they have been unable to do so.

"It's a matter of time and circumstance," he said.

FAIRVIEW PARK PLANNED IN MESA...

From A1

developed today must include revenue-generating concession stands and money-making activity areas.

After a general development plan for the park was drawn up and bids were taken for construction in 1978, the costs were determined to be prohibitive and the park plan was postponed.

Hume said that with the passage of Proposition 13, the 1978 estimates for cost of construction of the park — $5.9 million — and a $300,000 annual deficit in the operation and maintenance of the park were foreseen as too heavy a burden on the county's taxpayers.

An agreement for a new general development plan was signed by the city and the county a year ago, Hume said.

As proposed by the Reynolds Group, Fairview Regional Park would include:

• Archaeological Preserve and Interpretive Center — The archaeologically sensitive bluffs would be protected by several feet of fill dirt covering and 31.8 acres of natural area, interpretive trails and display buildings would be set aside.

• Upper and Lower Picnic and Open Play Area — A landscaped park entry and administration building would be constructed at the entrance to the park, on Placencia Avenue. Group picnic facilities, a radio-controlled-glider reserve and 55.6 acres of landscaped open space, on the bluffs and the lower terrace, would be provided.

• Softball Fields — Six lighted softball fields would cover 25.2 acres, and food concessions, restrooms and parking areas would be provided.

• Golf Course — As proposed, the 18-hole course would include facilities east and west of Placencia Avenue. Whether the course would make use of the existing city clubhouse and parking lot at the Costa Mesa Golf and Country Club has not been decided though city officials say the country club is already overcrowded.

• Recreational Vehicle Camping — Between 100 and 120 camper hookups would be set on 27.9 acres, with tent camping areas also included. Restrooms with showers would be located nearby.

• Recreational Lake — A 22.5-acre lake would be used for boating and fishing, but no swimming would be allowed. A boat-rental concession would be built next to the lake.

The plan, presented at a Mesa Verde homeowner's meeting last week and at a City Council study session Monday, has caused concern among city officials and some of the residents who live near the park site.

At this week's meeting, residents who live south of the park site suggested the RV campground be shifted to the north end of the lake from the south end where it has been proposed.

"We have gathered a petition with 108 signatures of people who want the RV park put to the north of the lake," said Margaret Weaver, a resident of Pacific Avenue.

"We're worried about noise, with the acoustics of that canyon. And with tent camping, that means kids and music all night long," Weaver said. "Also, there'd be the smoke from the fires coming up all the time and we know it would depreciate the value of our property."

Other concerns raised at the meetings included whether the park would have sufficient parking spaces, increased traffic on Placencia Avenue where the only park entrance would be, noise and lights from the softball fields and increased crime in the area.

Gilbert Collins, a science teacher at Estancia High School, is concerned with preserving the subtle things, like the unique sound of cane rustling in the wind. Cane is almost extinct in this area, he said.

"A golf course is pretty but it's sterile — with none of the sights and sounds (of the bluffs)," Collins said.

He would like to see a portion of the park preserved in its natural state, with native coastal vegetation and a place for the hundreds of birds who nest there. Among the plants he has identified are wild fennel, hoarhound, sand poppies, verbenas, tree tobacco and wild mustard among the native plants on the bluffs. The birds, which live and hunt the rodents and snakes that inhabit the bluffs, include meadowlarks, killdeer, egrets, marsh hawks and many migratory species.

The expansive views from the park site — from the San Gabriel mountains to Catalina Island and all of Orange County in between — are worth preserving, Collins thinks.

"Last year, when we had so much rain, I stopped by a puddle here and I could see Saddleback (Mountain) all covered with snow, reflected in the water," he said. "It was really charming."

Shotgun blast ends high-speed chase through Mesa residential neighborhood

By KAREN E. KLEIN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

A 39-year-old Costa Mesa man fatally shot himself in the head with a double-barreled shotgun Wednesday night after leading a patrol officer on a high-speed automobile chase through the north end of the city, police said today.

Ronald Gene Price was pronounced dead about 9:30 p.m. at the scene of the shooting at Presidio Drive near Junipero Drive, a police spokesman said.

Costa Mesa Police Officer Frank Rudisill began pursuing two cars allegedly speeding through the Mesa Del Mar residential area and running stop signs about 9:15 p.m., police reported.

Rudisill pulled the lead car over and approached the driver's side of the vehicle. But the driver refused to roll down his window and told the officer to "get away," a police report said.

When Rudisill trained his flashlight into the car he saw the driver holding a shotgun, pointed either at the motorist's head or at the officer. Rudisill took cover and called for reinforcements, a police spokesman said.

The officers responding to the scene attempted to talk Price out of the car but got no response, police said.

After a short waiting period, they smashed the driver's window with an ax and discovered that Price had shot himself.

Initial reports did not indicate exactly when the shooting occurred. He was pronounced dead by emergency medical personnel on the scene.

The driver of the second car, a relative of Price's, said he was chasing Price because he wanted to help him with some personal problems Price had been having lately.

The relative told police he was unaware that Price had a gun in the car.

Luskin leaving OCC for D.C. job

Orange Coast College President Bernard J. Luskin, head of the nation's largest single-campus community college, is leaving that post to become a Washington, D.C., lobbyist for more than 1,200 community colleges across the nation.

Luskin, 46, informed Coast Community College District trustees this week of his decision to resign, effective in August. The trustees oversee Orange Coast, Golden West and Coastline colleges.

At Wednesday night's meeting, the trustees granted Luskin a leave of absence without pay for the duration of his contract, which runs through (Please see LUSKIN/A2)

Grand opening not so grand in Valley

By ROBERT BARKER
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

The Drug Emporium officially opened its doors in Fountain Valley for the first time at 9 a.m. today but a couple of eager beavers apparently just couldn't wait.

They allegedly smashed an emergency door and were caught at about 3:30 a.m. today in the act of trying to steal three bags of merchandise, according to police.

"You might say, they're literally breaking down our doors," store manager Tim Ziemke quipped this morning.

Tipped off by a silent alarm, Fountain Valley police officers Paul Sorrell and Sarah Long found Gregory A. Scarborough, 21, of Huntington Beach leaving the store through the smashed door with several bags of merchandise, investigators said.

A further inspection allegedly revealed that John A. Dresslar, 21, of Long Beach was hiding inside the store at 16121 Brookhurst St., according to officers.

Both were taken into custody without incident and booked into Orange County Jail on suspicion of commercial burglary.

The Westminster Police Department's K-9 unit was called to sniff out possible additional suspects but none was located, investigators said.

Store manager Ziemke, who didn't know whether to be happy or sad about the publicity surrounding the early not-so-grand opening, said the suspects loaded three of the store's shopping bags with cigarettes, sunglasses, cosmetics and wrist-watches. Everything was believed recovered.

The store is headquartered in Columbus, Ohio, and deals in a high volume at low prices, he said. It's located in the building formerly occupied by Market Basket across the street from Mile Square Regional Park.

Mesans get death threats

Police report six residents phoned by midnight dialer

By KAREN E. KLEIN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

A midnight caller apparently picking his victims randomly out of the telephone book has threatened the lives of at least six Costa Mesa residents in the past two days, Costa Mesa police said.

Costa Mesa police Capt. Robert Moody said the anonymous dialer struck shortly after midnight Tuesday and Wednesday mornings, using his victims' last names during terse conversations in which he said he was going to kill them.

So far, the man has not tried to carry out any of his threats, Moody said, and police do not believe he will.

"He obviously gets some sort of sick thrill out of these calls," Moody said. "Women that are alone at night have been particularly scared" by the phone threats, he added.

Of the six calls reported to police, only four victims filed official police reports. Of the four, two victims were male and two female, Moody said.

"He may be making a lot more calls than we know about," Moody noted, since many people do not notify police when they receive crank phone calls.

The caller appears to be going down the columns of the phone book to decide who to call. Tuesday, the victims had last names beginning with "E" or "F," Moody said, and Wednesday the victims names started with "P."

"His method seems to be pretty random," Moody said.

The best way to handle any crank call is to hang up immediately and call the police, he said, because any reaction on the victim's part only encourages the caller.

Police investigations into the calls will continue, Moody said, who added he has not been notified of any similar calls occurring in nearby cities.

Laguna's Gabriels arrested

By DAVID BISHOP
Daily Pilot Correspondent

Laguna Beach police arrested civic activist and failed City Council candidate John J. Gabriels Wednesday night, charging him with two misdemeanor counts of contributing to the delinquency of minors.

Gabriels, 60, was taken into custody at his Hillside Street home after two juveniles told police they had allegedly engaged in sexual conduct with Gabriels and were given illicit drugs.

Gabriels was an unsuccessful candidate for a seat on the Laguna Beach City Council in Tuesday's municipal election.

Laguna Beach police Sgt. Alex Jimenez said Thursday that additional information was being sought and police might file felony charges against Gabriels.

According to Jimenez, a 16-year-old male runaway from Los Angeles was stopped for a traffic violation while driving in Laguna Beach on Monday. Upon questioning, he told investigators that he was staying at Gabriels' residence with his girlfriend, a 14-year-old Laguna Beach resident. The youth said he had been there several days.

Both youths admitted to having sex with Gabriels and being supplied with Quaaludes, a depressant drug. Jimenez said Gabriels, at one time, had a prescription for the drugs but does not have one now, police said.

"Both (juveniles) were well-sedated for two days," Jimenez said.

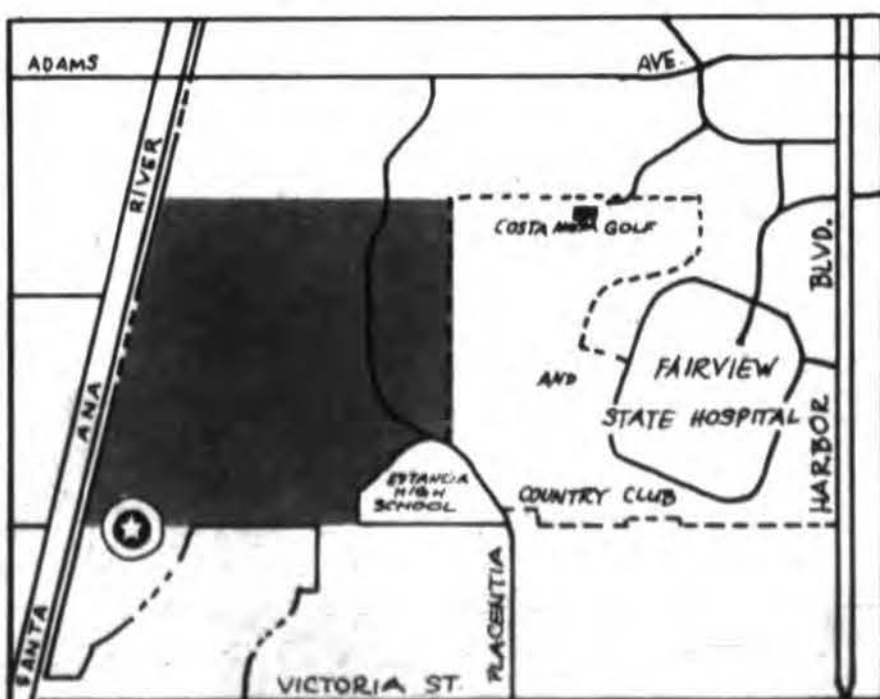

After his arrest, Gabriels was released on $10,000 bail.

Gabriels, reached at his home Thursday morning, said he would have no comment on the charges.

Fairview Park — a piece of history

County plan calls for $10 million to create recreational facility

For centuries, the 70-foot-high Fairview Bluffs north and east of the mouth of the Santa Ana River lay untouched.

The bluffs, with their proximity to the river's rich, freshwater bay, was home to one of the largest settlements of prehistoric man in Southern California.

From nearly 2000 B.C. to about the time modern civilization reached the area in 1796 A.D., two distinct tribes of Indians hunted, fished, mated, gave birth, worshipped their gods and were buried in the windswept bluff villages.

Except for the firebreaks and foot trails carved out of the wild oats and barley that cover the ground, the 283-acres of bluffs and dry river bottom below them — better known as the Fairview Regional Park site in Costa Mesa — remain relatively unchanged today.

But not for long.

The valuable parcel, most of which was purchased by the County of Orange for a regional park in February 1973, is to be developed within the next several years into a $10 million recreation facility including a golf course, softball stadium complex, lake and RV camp site. The city of Costa Mesa owns 26 acres of the park.

The draft general development plan, approved late last month by the county's Harbors, Beaches and Parks Department, will be considered during a public hearing of the Costa Mesa City Council on May 7.

Developed by the Reynolds Environmental Group of Costa Mesa, the plans reflect a post-Proposition 13 orientation, according to Rick Hume, vice president of the company and manager of the Fairview Park project.

Proposition 13, which cut money allocated for public projects, has dictated a new policy that parks must pay for themselves.

"The parks must generate enough revenue to offset their operation and maintenance," Hume said.

While past regional parks were designed to preserve open space and wilderness areas, he said, parks (Please see FAIRVIEW/A2)

Leisure World victim wins big settlement

Residents weren't warned of burglaries

SANTA ANA (AP) — The operators of Leisure World retirement community in Laguna Hills must pay a 77-year-old widow $1.06 million in damages because she wasn't warned of a spate of break-ins before her home was burglarized, a jury ruled.

The jurors decided Wednesday that the operators of the gated community were negligent in failing to notify the 21,000 residents about a series of burglaries beginning in September 1980. That was five months before Rose Huhn's home was burglarized, and jewelry, rugs and other valuables taken.

"They chose not to let residents know, and excused it by saying it would upset residents. But a knowing community is much more alert than an unknowing community," said one juror who asked not to be identified.

During the trial, Leisure World's former security director, Mary Christiansen, said security officials chose not to tell the residents about the burglaries because they did not want to frighten residents. She also admitted allowing the unsuspecting residents to be "bait" for the burglar.

"We're trying to send a message that something must be done about the security situation at Leisure World," the juror who requested anonymity said.

The jury criticized the community's policy of allowing businessmen with commercial passes to enter the walled community virtually unchecked.

Leisure World attorney Kerry

Sorenson said an appeal was likely. Jurors deliberated two days before voting 11-1 to award Mrs. Huhn $410,000 in compensatory damages. The vote was 10-2 for punitive damages of $650,000.

Of the total sum, $705,000 was assessed against Professional Management Inc., in charge of Leisure World's security. Golden Rain Foundation, which sets policy for the community, was held responsible for $355,000.

Mrs. Kuhn said she has now installed extensive locks and security measures, but has no intention to leave Leisure World.

"I don't know what I'll do with the money," she said. "I haven't got it yet. I imagine I will invest some and give some donations to my church and to other charitable causes. And maybe to my family."

OV School closing plan assailed

By ROBERT BARKER
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Ocean View School District officials are defending the safety of their schools following criticism aimed at a controversial plan to close four schools and discontinue seventh and eighth grade classes at three other schools.

Administrative Assistant Gail Wayne said Tuesday that tests conducted in accordance with federal guidelines show no evidence of harmful asbestos fibers in the air. She also said all district schools meet California earthquake and fire safety standards.

The question of the schools' safety was raised by parent Lynne Hattabaugh who has a child in the Gifted and Talented Education program at Circle View. (The master plan committee is recommending that seventh and eighth grade class students and GATE pupils be transferred from Circle View to Spring View to save money.)

Hattabaugh said she believes Spring View poses an asbestos threat. She also said the school, at 16662 Trudy Lane, is more dangerous to exit during emergencies because youngsters have to file down a long hallway on their way out of the school.

The 11-member master plan committee is recommending closure of Pleasant View, Meadow View, Lark View and Glen View schools and the consolidation of the seventh and eighth grade classes at Village View and Westmont as well as at Circle View. The committee reaffirmed its recommendations this week. The trustees will hold a public hearing on the closures May 7 and are to make a decision May 21.

Parents of mentally retarded youngsters at Nueva View School

also have expressed opposition, claiming that the pupils who are "mainstreamed" into "normal" school may be traumatized by the move. The handicapped children now attend several classes a week at Lark View. Under the closure plan, they would be bused to Golden View.

District Superintendent Dale Coogan said training sessions would be held with Lark View teachers to make a smooth transition.

"The kids are very accepting and basically they want to help. I'm certain things will go well," he said.

District officials say the closures will save about $1 million in operating costs a year. Enrollment has dropped from a peak of 14,000 pupils in the early 1970s to a total of 9,600. The number is expected to dip further until leveling off at about 8,000.

If trustees approve, closures would take place in September of 1985.

LUSKIN QUILTS OCC POST...

From A1

June 30, 1986. This action leaves the door open for Luskin to return to the district in a faculty or in an administration post. Luskin has been associated with the Coast District for 23 years.

"I think he deserves our congratulations and support," said Board President Conrad Nordquist.

Luskin is leaving the district to become executive vice president and chief operating officer of the American Association of Community and Junior Colleges, based in Washington. He will work with federal lawmakers and agencies on matters concerning two-year colleges across the nation.

The AACJC, founded in 1920, is the chief lobbying and policy development organization for community colleges throughout the United States. It also publishes various educational materials and has a division offering executive development programs for college administrators.

Luskin said the federal government provides $16 billion annually in higher education funding, including the critical area of financial aid for students who could not otherwise afford to attend college. Luskin said Orange Coast College alone receives about $4 million annually in federal funds.

In his new job, Luskin said he will work toward correcting an imbalance in the percentage of federal funds earmarked for two-year campuses.

"One of the things that has always annoyed me is that community colleges have always had to live on crumbs off the table," he said. "About 40 percent of the nation's college students are enrolled in community colleges, but community colleges get only 10 percent of the federal appropriations for higher education."

The outgoing college president said there are now community colleges in every congressional district in the United States. He said he hopes to inform federal lawmakers of the importance of these institutions as places to prepare students for four-year colleges and to train people for a variety of vocations.

Luskin has held numerous important posts with the Coast District since joining it as a data processing and business instructor in 1961. In 1975, he became the founding president of Fountain Valley-based Coastline College, the innovative satellite college that operates without a formal campus. Coastline offers classes at a variety of rented locations.

In 1982, he was named president of Orange Coast College. The Costa Mesa school is considered the nation's largest single-campus community college, based on enrollment.

FAIRVIEW PARK PLANNED IN MESA...

From A1

developed today must include revenue-generating concession stands and money-making activity areas.

After a general development plan for the park was drawn up and bids were taken for construction in 1978, the costs were determined to be prohibitive and the park plan was postponed.

Hume said that with the passage of Proposition 13, the 1978 estimates for cost of construction of the park — $5.9 million — and a $300,000 annual deficit in the operation and maintenance of the park were foreseen as too heavy a burden on the county's taxpayers.

An agreement for a new general development plan was signed by the city and the county a year ago, Hume said.

As proposed by the Reynolds Group, Fairview Regional Park would include:

•Archaeological Preserve and Interpretive Center — The archaeologically sensitive bluffs would be protected by several feet of fill dirt covering and 31.8 acres of natural area, interpretive trails and display buildings would be set aside.

•Upper and Lower Picnic and Open Play Area — A landscaped park entry and administration building would be constructed at the entrance to the park, on Placentia Avenue. Group picnic facilities, a radio-controlled-glider reserve and 55.6 acres of landscaped open space, on the bluffs and the lower terrace, would be provided.

•Softball Fields — Six lighted softball fields would cover 25.2 acres, and food concessions, restrooms and parking areas would be provided.

•Golf Course — As proposed, the 18-hole course would include facilities east and west of Placentia Avenue. Whether the course would make use of the existing city clubhouse and parking lot at the Costa Mesa Golf and Country Club has not been decided though city officials say the country club is already overcrowded.

•Recreational Vehicle Camping — Between 100 and 120 camper hookups would be set on 27.9 acres, with tent camping areas also included. Restrooms with showers would be located nearby.

•Recreational Lake — A 22.5-acre lake would be used for boating and fishing, but no swimming would be allowed. A boat-rental concession would be built next to the lake.

The plan, presented at a Mesa Verde homeowner's meeting last week and at a City Council study session Monday, has caused concern among city officials and some of the residents who live near the park site.

At this week's meeting, residents who live south of the park site suggested the RV campground be shifted to the north end of the lake from the south end where it has been proposed.

"We have gathered a petition with 108 signatures of people who want the RV park put to the north of the lake," said Margaret Weaver, a resident of Pacific Avenue.

"We're worried about noise, with the acoustics of that canyon. And with tent camping, that means kids and music all night long," Weaver said. "Also, there'd be the smoke from the fires coming up all the time and we know it would depreciate the value of our property."

Other concerns raised at the meetings included whether the park would have sufficient parking spaces, increased traffic on Placentia Avenue where the only park entrance would be, noise and lights from the softball fields and increased crime in the area.

Gilbert Collins, a science teacher at Estancia High School, is concerned with preserving the subtle things, like the unique sound of cane rustling in the wind. Cane is almost extinct in this area, he said.

"A golf course is pretty but it's sterile — with none of the sights and sounds (of the bluffs)," Collins said.

He would like to see a portion of the park preserved in its natural state, with native coastal vegetation and a place for the hundreds of birds who nest there. Among the plants he has identified are wild fennel, hoarhound, sand poppies, verbenas, tree tobacco and wild mustard among the native plants on the bluffs. The birds, which live and hunt the rodents and snakes that inhabit the bluffs, include meadowlarks, killdeer, egrets, marsh hawks and many migratory species.

The expansive views from the park site — from the San Gabriel mountains to Catalina Island and all of Orange County in between — are worth preserving, Collins thinks.

"Last year, when we had so much rain, I stopped by a puddle here and I could see Saddleback (Mountain) all covered with snow, reflected in the water," he said. "It was really charming."

Child-care funds promised

Irvine city panel will examine issue, decide how much to spend

By ANDREA ADELSON
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

A plan to fill a huge demand for child-care facilities in Irvine has received a boost from city officials with the promise of public funds in next year's budget.

Mayor Larry Agran directed a committee of two council members to return in May to the full panel with a specific idea on how much money should be spent to begin a city-supported child-care program.

In addition, council members Mary Ann Gaido and David Sills were asked to review findings of a two-year study that showed an acute shortage of licensed child-care facilities in the city. Their task is to outline a five-year strategy to start tackling the child-care space shortage.

"We're a city with ample resources that can subsidize this with appropriate resources," Agran said during Tuesday's City Council meeting.

Pointing out that pet owners and schools also benefit from indirect city subsidies, Agran said, "doing that, we ought to have an on-going level of support for child care."

The Child Care Committee says that 31 more centers and 187 more day-care homes are needed to satisfy care for only 60 percent of the city's presently employed parents.

Nearly double that many will be needed if five-year city housing projections hold true, the study says.

After explaining the report's highlights to council members, Betsy Mathis, chairman of the city's advisory Child Care Committee, said having the committee recommendation come up under review during June budget hearings is "perfect timing. That's a way to sift out quickly what people can live with," she said.

Mathis called on city officials to set down a policy that would trigger development of child-care facilities. The report also calls for $85,000 to help start a private, non-profit corporation to serve as a catalyst for child-care development.

"In the Planning Commission, we're approving many projects, but there is no tool to say, 'OK,' to employers, 'how are you going to meet child care needs?' The Planning Commission knows their hands are tied," Mathis said.

"For the immediate future," Mathis said, "we hope the recommendations can be shaped into a policy framework. But what we really need is action."

Especially cheering to Mathis was Agran's call for public support. "No one else has ever said that before," Mathis said.

Bay pollution worries to be discussed

By JERRY HIRSCH
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Pollution worries about Newport Bay have sparked a special meeting of the California Regional Water Quality Control Board at Costa Mesa City Hall on Friday.

"We decided that we would look into the problem down here so that people who are interested can come. Usually our meetings are in Riverside," said Philip Maurer, vice chair of the control board's Santa Ana region. Maurer also is a Newport Beach City Councilman.

"The main problem is that as we get more sediment in the Back Bay we get less volume of water. With less water you just don't get the flushing effect. The pollutants build up and it is starting to affect the rest of the bay," Maurer said.

The meeting begins at 9:30 a.m. and discussion of Newport Bay is expected to start at 10 a.m., Maurer said.

Two types of pollutants, chemicals and bacteria, are contaminating the bay, according to James Anderson, a spokesman for the control board.

High levels of DDT by-products, PCB, lead, zinc and copper have been found in the bay during a 1982-83 study by the state. PCB is a cancer-causing, industrial chemical and DDT is a toxic, banned pesticide.

Concentrations of the dangerous chemicals were particularly high at the Pacific Coast Highway bridge, the Newport Bay Police Dock and the Rhine Channel.

The state report attributed the pollution to the "high concentration of industrial, boatyard and other maritime activities and the limited flushing of this restricted backwater area."

Runoff from city streets and the presence of the chemicals in the atmosphere also may be causing the problem, the report said.
