Nixon flees Irvine Marriott blaze

400 guests evacuate 17-story hotel after laundry dryer catches on fire

By The Daily Pilot Staff

Nearly 400 hotel guests including former President Richard Nixon were evacuated for about an hour this morning from the 17-story Irvine Marriott when fire broke out in the structure's basement.

"He went downstairs until the fire department said it was clear to come back up," said John Taylor, Nixon's administrative assistant. Taylor was reached at the hotel after the emergency was over and guests were permitted to return to their rooms.

Nixon, staying in the Presidential Suite on the 17th floor, and Taylor walked down all 17 flights at a normal pace, Taylor said. The exercise presented no strain for the 71-year-old former president, Taylor said.

When they reached the ground floor Nixon went to one of the cars in a Secret Service entourage.

"He got into his car and took a brief tour of the industrial park in the area. He drove around for about 15-20 minutes and came back to the hotel," Taylor said.

By about 11:15 a.m. fire officials were letting guests back into the hotel. Nixon did not see any smoke, according to Taylor.

The former president plans to spend the rest of the afternoon in his hotel suite before a speaking engagement tonight at Chapman College, Taylor said.

The fire, which sent smoke into the hotel's first-floor kitchen and stairwells, was extinguished quickly by hotel employees. But the total evacuation was ordered as a precaution by firefighters, Ron Cribbet, the hotel's general manager, said.

The fire apparently started in a 50-pound clothes dryer used to launder rags. The blaze was contained within the basement laundry, Cribbet said.

"Whether the machine malfunctioned, we don't know," marketing director Ed Proenza said. Smoke alarms sounded when the fire broke out shortly after 10 a.m., but not enough heat was generated to trigger sprinklers, he said.

"This is the first fire we've had" since the $50 million, 500-room hotel opened in August, Proenza said. "We have lot of false alarms because the alarms are set so sensitively." The evacuation, which guests described as

Older is better in second Great Race

110 vintage autos crank their engines for $100,000 grand prize in Indianapolis

By KAREN E. KLEIN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

When the green flag drops Thursday morning and 110 vintage automobiles crank up and sputter off into the sunrise, bound for Indianapolis, Dennis Holland and his 1909 Buick racer will be there.

So will Bill Halliday and his 1936 Chevy, John Konwiser and his 1928 Rolls Royce Phantom I and Jennifer Goodheart, a.k.a. Ginni Withers of Fountain Valley, in her shocking pink 1906 Mitchell roadster.

All are Orange Coast residents and among the participants in the second annual Great American Race. The time-distance road rally covers 3,000 miles in nine days and is patterned after the movie, "The Great Race."

Holland, Costa Mesa's master shipbuilder, and his navigator,

Wayne Stanfield, 36, of Santa Ana, entered their black racing car in the Great Race, open to cars built in 1936 or before, last year. But having to push the car over the starting line turned out to be a bad omen.

They dropped out of the race for good in Phoenix when a motor pin broke.

This year, Holland said, his goal is to finish the race.

At the checkered flag waits a $100,000 first prize for the fastest car and $40,000 to be split among the three oldest cars to finish.

"The winning car gets to take a turn around the track at the Indy 500," Holland said with an enthusiastic grin.

While building an 18th-century-style Baltimore Clipper ship in the backyard might be enough for most people to take on, Holland said he has spent the past four months tearing down and rebuilding the four-cylinder, 50-horsepower engine of his Buick, the second car ever registered in Orange County.

The car, which sports a number "19" on the grill, belonged to brothers Boyd and Henley Ellis, who owned a

Report: Streets need repairs

By JEFF ADLER
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

More than half of all Orange County surface streets are in need of repair and more than a quarter require major repair, a politically charged report released Monday by the Orange County Transportation Commission has concluded.

The report, drafted by a commission pavement management task force formed in 1982, estimated it would cost $205 million to bring the county's surface-street system into good repair.

Members of the task force visually assessed the condition of 612 streets and highways in the county, or 52 percent of the 1,187 miles of the county's arterial streets. All told, the county and its 26 cities maintain 4,982 miles of arterial highways and local streets.

But the report — released just three weeks before voters will determine the fate of Proposition A, the one

Community college leaders say schools still 'a bargain'

Administrators say they're still offering quality education to county's students

By PHIL SNEIDERMAN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

The top administrators from Orange County's seven community colleges want to get two messages out to the public:

• Community college education will still be a bargain next fall, despite the new tuition fees to be charged.

• Community colleges still offer quality education, despite recent charges to the contrary.

To make their case, the county's community college presidents summoned reporters Monday to a rare, joint news conference at Santa Ana College. The officials said their goal was to correct some misconceptions about the two-year colleges.

Many people mistakenly believe the community college funding crisis ended earlier this year when the tuition bill was approved, observed Dr. Larry Stevens, chancellor of the Saddleback Community College District, which has campuses in Irvine and Mission Viejo.

Under this legislation, students taking six units or more will pay a $50-per-semester fee. For those taking less, the charge will be $5 per unit.

But Stevens described the new fees as "little more than a Band-Aid attempting to close a very serious wound."

To administer the new fee system, additional computers and clerical staff will be needed, he said. At the same time, colleges will no longer be

Mental health is focus in ex-OCC man's trial

When the murder trial of 18-year-old Gabriel Deluca trial opened Monday in Westminster, attorneys didn't argue so much whether the Huntington Beach youth killed a 30-year-old female postal carrier. Instead, most of the attention was directed at the defendant's mental condition.

"We're here to find out why it happened," defense attorney John Dolan told jurors in Superior Court Judge Leonard H. McBride's courtroom in Westminster.

Dolan, who also called Deluca a

"troubled" youth, said he also will show jurors a 90-minute videotape of Deluca being interviewed by Costa Mesa police to reveal the young defendant's mental processes.

Deputy District Attorney Bryan Brown told jurors that Deluca

waited for postal carrier Ida Jean Haxton, a mother of two, in the entryway of his home.

Her body was found several hours after the attack on Jan. 3 in her green U.S. Postal Service car parked in a Costa Mesa church

After decade of debate, Irvine finally appears in reach of a city hall

Irvine, the master-planned city that has mapped out where every road, home, office and shrub will be placed beyond the year 2000, has wrestled for more than a decade on where to put the seat of government. It has no permanent city hall.

The 13-year-old city's first leaders decided policy in small quarters over an old bar called the Spritz Garden opposite UC Irvine.

Beer was brought up to quaff the thirst of city leaders during marathon sessions. Politicians had to compete to be heard over the blare of a juke box.

But only five years after incorporation, the bustling city staff had outstripped its over-the-store space.

orderly and calm, marked the first time the Marriott had been cleared. Guests and employees were alerted to the emergency over the hotel's public address system.

Terry Mohr and Jim Paulus, both attending a sales meeting on the hotel's first floor, said they did not smell any smoke but left the building after the announcement.

"We didn't smell or hear anything," including fire engines, said Paulus, of Crown BBK in Los Angeles.

While firefighters inspected the building, a handful of hotel guests conducted business at poolside tables and hotel employees chatted on curbs outside tennis courts.

percent transportation sales tax increase — drew immediate fire from Proposition A opponents who accused the commission of using the report for pro-tax political purposes.

If passed, Proposition A would set aside about 20 percent of the estimated $5.4 billion the tax hike would raise over its 15-year life for local transportation projects that include arterial road maintenance.

Transportation commissioners, who authored the Proposition A tax plan, denied the report or the timing of its release was in any way related to the tax initiative or the pro-tax campaign.

The report determined that while the money available for street and road maintenance has remained constant over the last decade, the cost of repair has increased 230 percent.

The report noted that financial considerations have forced local governments to maintain streets on a 66-year cycle rather than the recommended 13-year maintenance schedule. In 1982-83, an estimated $36 million would have been needed to keep the maintenance program on a 13-year schedule, but only $7 million was spent by the county and all 26 cities, according to the report.

Because of the maintenance-funding shortfall, 59 percent of the pavement in the county is in need of some repair and 28 percent requires major repair or rebuilding.

6,000-acre bean farm in Costa Mesa. Holland said the car placed fifth in a Los Angeles-to-Phoenix race in 1912.

He has photos of the car in its vintage racing days as well as pennants, news articles and even the drivers' license of one of the vehicle's drivers.

Holland said had his eye on the car, complete with brass headlamps and hickory-wood wheels, for 20 years before he could persuade its previous owner to sell it.

"The guy that owned it was the driver's stepson. When the driver died he told his son to sell it to someone in Orange County if he ever moved away," Holland said.

When asked why he would take on the additional challenge of car building when he only launched his 100-foot schooner late last year, he replied, "This is my therapy."

"I love the historical challenge of it. It was 70 years ago that this car was driven through that part of the country and now it will pass that way again," he said.

On Monday, he told rival racer Bill Halliday he would be tearing the car's engine down once or twice again before the race starts Thursday.

Halliday, of Newport Beach, said his goal is "to whip Dennis," in the race. "I think I have a good chance as any" to win, Halliday said.

He bought and restored his '36 Chevy in 1966 and sold it three years ago to the Barn restaurant in Tustin, where it has been on display.

"I was restoring a 1940 Chevy when I found out the 1936 model was the newest that could enter. So I called up the restaurant and got them to loan me the car for the race," he said.

Halliday said he has "four or five" vintage Chevys at home, but none like the pearl gray and black touring car he will drive in the Great Race.

"It's a sedan delivery car built on a passenger chassis. They were mostly used as drug store delivery cars or paint store delivery cars," he said.

The Great Race will start Thursday morning from the Sheraton Universal Hotel in Los Angeles and finish May 25 in Indianapolis, race coordinators said. Racers will make midday and overnight stops in Las Vegas; Flagstaff, Ariz.; Albuquerque; Amarillo, Texas; Dallas; Wichita, Kansas; St. Louis and Chicago.

city hall-style trappings. It is, after all, only temporary.

Since then, a citizens group and city staff have eyed nearly every large chunk of land within city limits, sizing up its potential as a home for public buildings needed to serve a city of 200,000.

What was envisioned was a "City Center" — a governmental hub with a city hall, police station, county branch library, civic auditorium, school and water district headquarters, and centers for seniors and day care.

Residents even approved, in an advisory vote in 1981, a measure in support of building of a civic center.

Three land plots have been considered seriously: one near UCI, another at the city's geographic center between two residential villages, and a third within an ambitious commercial center planned by the Irvine Co. for the "Golden Triangle," land trapped within three freeways at the city's southeastern edge.

All died for a variety of reasons, shot down by high development costs, a shift in development patterns that still leaves unclear where "downtown" is, and lack of a council majority for any plan. The idea has been dormant since mid-1982 and Irvine continues to operate out of its temporary headquarters.

But on Thursday, Irvine's Planning Commission opens consideration anew on what city officials — with fingers crossed — think may be the permanent quarters for Irvine City Hall.

The advisory Civic Center Committee is supposed to describe its latest plan for 25 acres of farmland beside Culver Drive, south of the San Diego flood control channel.

"It's probably the least optimal, but it meets the minimum acceptable requirements," said Pat McDonald, a Hughes engineer who has worked on the committee since its inception in 1977.

The committee, revived in February, looked at three parcels within an 833-acre area that's called "village 14," the first major village being planned within the city since the mid-1970s.

The new village is bounded by the San Diego Freeway on the south, the Irvine Business Center on the east and by the village of Woodbridge on the west.

To be built over the next decade, it is to have 7,000 homes, 17,000 residents and 48 acres of parks, City Planner Paul Ireland explained recently.

Because it is close to a business and industrial center, the new village is intended as a rather dense housing area for workers. And it is being designed with major thoroughfares, pointed out Ray Catalano, a city planning commissioner and professor of social ecology at UCI. A city hall will only aggravate that congestion, he added.

"But the village shouldn't be sacrificed to traffic," Catalano said. "In some ways, we'll be reducing city hall-generated traffic," he believes, because the centrally located civic center would only draw people into residential sections.

The long-awaited proposal calls for a civic center within "the activity corridor," sandwiched between Alton Avenue and Barranca Parkway. The zone is supposed to act as a spine, linking the major industrial centers at either end of the city. Only about two miles of the backbone is complete, through Woodbridge.

"If the uses are integrated, people can use the center without having to drive all over the city," explained city staffer Pam Sheldon.

Sheldon said the committee dusted off $80,000 worth of plans drawn up but abandoned in 1982. Then a 146,000-square-foot building was sketched out with a $22.4 million price tag.

The committee believes that the old building idea could fit on the new corner, Sheldon said.

McDonald, who has sat through more civic center meetings than he can count, said "the city is running out of choices."

He is disappointed that delays have diluted the city center idea. Now the Irvine Unified School District has an administration building under construction and the Irvine Ranch Water District has located elsewhere.

"No one seemed to be able to put it all together," former mayor Gaby Pryor observed. "I wanted to see it all built together. Our planned community is fragmented. We've lost an important focal point forever," she said.

Assistant City Manager Paul Brady remains optimistic that the central hub idea can still be realized.

The school and water districts "haven't foreclosed on the idea," Brady said. They could relocate later, he said.

And, by putting off the decision, city coffers are fatter with a $2 million civic center fund and the interim facility's property value has nearly doubled, Brady said.

"We can use this as a partial down payment," he said, in combination with other financing schemes, such as industrial bonds.

Two-term Councilman David Sills believes this plan, although still in its infancy, may finally put the controversy to rest.

"This has a good chance of succeeding because it may get three votes," Sills said.

He pointed out that a recent 5-0 council vote agreeing to at least consider the site "was the first show of unanimity" any plan has ever garnered.

allowed to impose special charges such as health fees, even though they must still provide health services.

Despite the problems, Stevens said California's community college students still will be charged less than those in neighboring states. He noted that Washington state community college students pay $175 per quarter and generally enroll in three quarters per year. In Oregon, he said, the charge is $160 per quarter.

Constance Carroll, president of Saddleback's Mission Viejo campus, also said because of the elimination of other fees at the same time tuition is charged, "in some cases the cost of (a community college) education may be less than before."

She added that community colleges remain "the most affordable, most economical educational institutions to attend in California."

Dr. Lee Stevens, president of Golden West College, predicted that California's community colleges will actively recruit students for the coming year because 1984-85 attendance figures will be a guide for future state funding.

"If we fall short (in enrollment) in 1984-85, that will haunt us in the years to come," Stevens warned.

massive crackdown Saturday while others suspected of top-level involvement in the drug ring remain at large, possibly outside the country.

Mobley reportedly had gone to the seaside resort town of Puerto Vallarta in Mexico with family members, including his mother, to celebrate Mother's Day prior to Saturday's raid.

According to one investigator, Mobley was unaware that his alleged drug empire had fallen apart until the Mexican jet he was a passenger on lifted out of Puerto Vallarta.

"My understanding is that the first he heard of it was when he picked up a newspaper during the flight," explained Huntington Beach Sgt. Carl Vidano, a key investigator in the mammoth drug sweep.

"I imagine he had something of a squirmy flight," commented one FBI agent.

Arrested along with Mobley was his wife, Aleyda Machado-Mobley, 24, and his sister, Cindy Lee Croley, 27, of Newport Beach. Both are alleged to have been active in the drug ring.

Mobley, according to drug agents, was a small-time cocaine dealer who hit it big when he married into a family that assertedly had ties to the Colombian drug world.

Police said as far as they can determine, Mobley has never been arrested before. In fact, the only past offense Mobley could be linked to was a violation of a dog leash law in Newport Beach, one officer noted.

Mobley was to be arraigned today in federal court in Los Angeles along with his wife and sister. Fifteen of the 17 people arrested in Orange County on Saturday were arraigned Monday in Los Angeles with bails ranging as high as $2 million. Two others have not been charged.

One of the suspects remained in serious condition today at Fountain Valley Community Hospital. Ronald Ting, 26, of Corona del Mar, was shot in the chest early Saturday by FBI agents.

Ting, alleged to be one of Mobley's cocaine distributors, drew fire from an FBI agent after Ting pulled out a gun.

Two other suspected leaders in the smuggling ring still being sought are Heriberto Machado-Velasquez, 50, a Colombian national, and Octavio Grisales, 43, of New Jersey.

Four others alleged to be drug runners in the widespread operation also are being sought.

Gun-toting cops greet neighbors

Police, FBI agents raid home on family's first morning

By JERRY HIRSCH
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

It wasn't quite a welcome wagon that greeted Ab and Sherry Lopez the first morning in their new home. The Lopez family awoke early Saturday morning to find nine shotgun-toting FBI agents and Newport Beach police officers pounding on their front door and yelling, "you are under arrest."

Ab Lopez, who had a long day Friday moving his wife and two boys into the rented Corona del Mar home on Marigold Drive, ran down the stairs in his undershorts, saw the agents surrounding the home and coolly invited them in, his wife said.

As Lopez opened the door one of the agents shouted, "Don't shoot he is unarmed." A second agent put a shotgun to Lopez's head — and then realized he had the wrong man.

The law enforcement officials were after Farhad Rokni, one of 21 people arrested in Saturday's break-up of a $1/2 billion cocaine smuggling ring centered in Huntington Beach and Newport Beach.

Rokni had moved out of the home only a day before.

"When I heard the police pounding on the door at 7 a.m., I thought it was a practical joke," said Sherry Lopez, adding that her family moved in for six months while their Big Canyon home is being remodeled.

"They were pounding on the door and they said, 'open up in the name of the law. We have a search warrant and you are under arrest.'"

When the FBI realized they had the wrong people, they didn't even search the home. They just asked to use the phone and spent an hour at the house waiting for instructions, Lopez said.

Lopez said her two sons, 11 and 12, were impressed with the agents and police officers' uniforms and guns.

"My husband said he was ready to go back to Big Canyon," Lopez said. "When we woke up Sunday, I asked what was going to happen today."

Newport Beach Detective Mark Everton visited the family Saturday afternoon to apologize and tell them some of the details of the investigation.

"He said that some of the suspects were dangerous and that was why (the officers) were armed," Lopez said.

At the same time the police were surrounding the Lopez home, Ronald D. Ting was shot and critically wounded by an FBI agent as law officers arrested Ting at his rented Sandcastle Drive home — only blocks away from Marigold Drive.

Lopez almost had Rokni as an unexpected house guest for the weekend. Rokni had rented the three-bedroom home for just one month but had asked the landlord if he could stay an extra weekend.

The landlord asked Lopez but she told him, "no" and Rokni moved out Friday as the Lopez family was moving in.

Rokni was arrested in a Santa Ana parking lot about 10 p.m. Saturday.

Marcos foes make good show at polls

But opponents warn of 'monkey business'

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Unofficial election returns today showed opponents of President Ferdinand E. Marcos making a surprisingly strong showing and leading in half of the National Assembly races.

While conceding that the opposition was doing better than expected, Marcos insisted official returns would show his party retained firm control.

"You cannot deny the fact that there was an undercurrent of discontent that has been fanned by the opposition because of the economic situation," Marcos said in an interview on CBS.

But he predicted his party would win about 140 of the 183 contested seats. That would give the opposition about 43 seats, and Marcos had earlier predicted the opposition would take no more than 30 seats.

Opposition leader Salvador H. Laurel said the results were "beyond our hopes and wildest imagination" and he warned against "monkey business" changing the results. He had projected victories in about 30 percent of the races.

Rev. Moon

Rev. Moon gets prison sentence

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Rev. Sun Myung Moon, who claims he is a victim of religious and racial bigotry, is under orders to surrender on June 18 to begin serving an 18-month prison sentence for tax evasion.

The Supreme Court on Monday rejected an appeal by the Korean-born leader of the Unification Church, clearing the way for his imprisonment.

But Moon's lawyer, Harvard professor Laurence H. Tribe, says he hasn't given up. Tribe said he will return to a lower court to introduce new, unspecified evidence that he said could help overturn Moon's conviction.

Meanwhile, U.S. Attorney Rudolph W. Giuliani in New York City said, "We have notified his (Moon's) lawyer that his surrender date will be June 18."

Moon has been free on bail pending the outcome of his appeal and is living at a church-owned estate in Tarrytown, N.Y.

Alabama not just a state; it's 'country'

BUENA PARK — Alabama, country music's reigning supergroup, pulled off its second three-award sweep in two years at the Academy of Country Music's 19th Annual Awards Show.

Veteran stars Kenny Rogers and Dolly Parton, who teamed on the crossover hit duet "Islands in the Stream," won two awards, while Janie Fricke and Lee Greenwood were first-time vocalist winners at Monday night's ceremonies telecast by NBC from Knott's Berry Farm.

Alabama's awards included the group's third straight entertainer of the year prize and fourth consecutive vocal group award.

The quartet also won the album of the year award for "The Closer You Get," which in February earned the best country group vocal Grammy.

Clutching their trophies — shaped as little cowboy hats — group members Jeff Cook, Teddy Gentry, Mark Herndon and Randy Owen said their latest awards were no less exciting than their first ones.

"This is what we dreamed of years and years ago," Owen said.

"It's like winning the Super Bowl, the World Series and the World Heavy Weight Championship all at once," Herndon added.

Since bursting on the country music scene in 1980, Alabama has been showered with awards. Monday night's honor brought to nine their total from the Academy of Country Music, an organization headquartered in Los Angeles.

First solo stroll to Pole reported

LONDON (AP) — British explorer David Hempleman-Adams today became the first person to complete a solo walk to the magnetic North Pole, spokesmen for his expedition said.

Nicholas Schoon, a spokesman based at the explorer's home town at Bristol in western England, said Hempleman-Adams arrived at his destination after a grueling 250-mile walk across the arctic icecap.

The British Broadcasting Corp. quoted a spokesman at the explorer's base camp at Resolute Bay in northern Canada as saying Hempleman-Adams was picked up by plane after completing his walk in 22 days, dragging a plastic sledge loaded with supplies behind him, and was now back at the camp.

The Resolute Bay spokesman said the explorer was in "great shape" and that his first wishes after returning to camp were "to take a shower, to be followed by a very long sleep," the BBC said.

Wilder victim's mom arrested

BOYNTON BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The parents of Rosario Gonzalez, a model listed among the victims of Christopher B. Wilder's reign of terror, face trespassing charges today after police said they found the couple on a Mother's Day search of Wilder's back yard.

The Gonzalezes said they decided to go to Wilder's house after an acquaintance dreamed that the 20-year-old aspiring model, missing since the Miami Grand Prix Feb. 26, was buried on Wilder's property located in a comfortable section of Boynton Beach.

"Yesterday was Mother's Day," Haydee Gonzalez said Monday. "I was sad. I asked my husband to go with me. He said OK."

"We went to the yard, and around the pool, looking under trees, in a canal. We knew it was private property, but they didn't have any signs. We were just walking around, looking to see if there was any place where land was removed."

Law enforcement authorities believe Wilder abducted Rosario while she was distributing aspirin samples at the downtown Miami race. The Australian-born race car driver and wealthy Boynton Beach electrical contractor has been named in the disappearances, rapes or murders of 11 women.

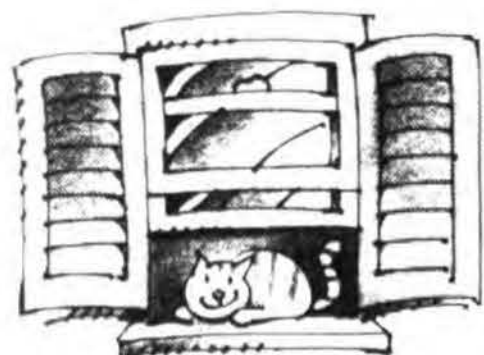

Mrs. Gonzalez said they were searching the yard when a neighbor came out and started photographing them. Shortly afterward, the police arrived, she said.

"I tried to explain who we were, why we were there, that I'm the mother of the missing girl," she said.

Reagan woos Congress for MX missile

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, declaring the MX missile and arms control to be his top priorities, has again drawn the battle line with Congress in a fight over defense spending.

The House was scheduled to begin debating the Pentagon authorization bill today, but no votes are expected until later in the week.

For the last two years, Reagan's personal lobbying has been credited by both MX supporters and opponents with providing narrow margins of victory in the Democrat-controlled House.

Reagan was lobbying again this time around. Deputy press secretary Larry Speakes said the president would meet today with 12 Democrats who were considered undecided in an effort to get their vote.

Reagan will extend his lobbying campaign into Wednesday, Speakes said.

"He will continue to press for approval," said the spokesman. "We are interested in full funding."

But with U.S.-Soviet nuclear arms control talks stalled and new reports casting doubts on the ability of the giant MX to knock out Soviet targets, House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. predicts the House will finally turn down the missile.

In a brief news conference Monday, Reagan said there is "no more compelling priority on my agenda" than congressional approval for the 10-warhead weapon he calls "Peacekeeper," and which he says is necessary to U.S. efforts to control nuclear weapons.

"The Soviets hope, once again, our modernization efforts will be curtailed," Reagan said. "We cannot afford to delay any longer. Without Peacekeeper, the MX, the incentive for the Soviets to return to the negotiating table is greatly reduced."

The bill authorizes the Pentagon to spend $285 billion in fiscal 1985, which begins Oct. 1.

Khadafy nixes barracks attack

Aide says attack was instigated by 'U.S. intelligence agency'

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — A high-ranking Libyan official convened a rare news conference to deny reports that Col. Moammar Khadafy's barracks came under fire during a shootout here last week.

At least seven dissidents were killed in the fighting, and persistent reports within Tripoli's diplomatic and foreign business circles say about 15 rebels managed to attack the barracks where Khadafy usually lives.

"There is no truth whatsoever in the news that was broadcast by the BBC (British Broadcasting Corp.) and the Voice of America which claimed that the terrorist group had attacked the Bab el-Aziziya barracks," Justice Minister Muftah Kalba told Western reporters Monday on behalf of Khadafy.

"The group was recruited primarily by the U.S. intelligence agency and with the complicity of the British government," Kalba said.

Other than Khadafy, Libyan government officials rarely hold news conferences for Western journalists.

Libyan officials have told Western reporters who came to Tripoli following last Tuesday's shooting that the government was annoyed by reports that a gun battle had occurred at the barracks.

But they continued to refuse reporters' requests that they be allowed to go to the heavily guarded barracks to see for themselves if there were any signs of an attack.

Khadafy said last week that 10 terrorists attacked a downtown building and that eight were killed and two captured.

The Libyan government insists the attack was instigated from outside the country and did not reflect opposition to Khadafy, whose 14-year-old regime has been severely strained by plunging oil revenue and chronic shortages of consumer goods.

Kalba said the incident had no "social or political significance" inside Libya, and was sparked solely from outside.

"The terrorists were recruited in West Germany, the United States and Britain and then they were transported to Sudan where they were trained in a special camp," he said.

U.S. spy gets life jail term

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A judge sentencing James Durwood Harper to life in prison for stealing secret U.S. missile documents and peddling them to Communist agents said Harper should never be paroled because "no crime is more serious."

Harper, who pleaded guilty, "was a traitor to this country," U.S. District Judge Samuel Conti said Monday.

The Defense Department described the stolen documents containing Minuteman missile secrets as vital to America's ability to survive a first-strike nuclear attack.

The government said Harper sold the secrets to Polish agents in 1979 and 1980 for between $250,000 and $1 million, and that the Poles delivered the information to Soviet KGB agents.

Harper, 49, stole the documents "not for philosophical reasons but for greed and money," Conti said, adding that his stiff sentence was "based on unconscionable conduct."

Harper said he would cooperate with authorities in their investigation into his spy activities. He will be eligible for a parole hearing in 10 years.

"No crime is more serious than to sell defense secrets to a foreign country," Conti said. "It affects each person... Freedom is our most precious possession, and if we lose that we lose everything."

'FREED' U.S. DUO MISSING

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — More than 1,000 soldiers and police probed deep into the jungles of northern Sri Lanka today for an American couple kidnapped by Tamil separatists, who said they had freed the couple and withdrawn a death threat.

The Marxist guerrillas abducted Stanley and Mary Elizabeth Allen of Columbus, Ohio, on Thursday. The rebels said Monday they were releasing the couple unconditionally, although their demands for $2 million in gold and the release of 20 prisoners were rejected by the Sri Lankan government.

But President Junius R. Jayawardene told The Associated Press by telephone that the Allens "have not been found yet. I have no news of them."

Ronald Oppen, spokesman for the U.S. Embassy in Colombo, said today he believed the couple was "still being held somewhere and we don't know when or where they're going to be released."

"It's a remote possibility that they have been released and can't find their way to civilization yet," he said.

In New Delhi, India, Vice President George Bush said earlier that "we are still in the dark" about the newlywed couple's whereabouts.

The Defense Ministry operations room in Colombo said the search for the pair had been intensified. Security forces scoured the countryside throughout the night without success, National Security Minister Lalith Athulathmudali said.

The Kilinochchi forest, 140 miles northwest of Colombo, is "a jungle infested by dangerous wild animals like bears, tigers, panthers and elephants," Athulathmudali said. "We hope that they have not been set free by one set of wild animals to be devoured by another."

How to tell our new savings accounts from your savings account.

Tiered Money Market Savings Account: rate up to 9.00% yield up to 9.381%.

If you want a savings account that really rates, open one of our tiered money market savings accounts. All it takes is a $2,500 minimum deposit.

Like any savings account, you can make deposits or withdrawals anytime you choose. But unlike other savings accounts, you'll get higher market interest rates for a higher savings balance. Maintain an average daily balance between $2,500.00 and $19,999.99 and you'll earn 8.84% interest per annum. $20,000 to $49,999.99 earns 8.94% interest per annum. $50,000.00 or more earns 9.381% interest per annum. Average daily balances under $2,500.00 still earn a 5.25% interest rate.

We'll even give you check writing privileges of up to 3 checks per month.

Where else can you find a savings account that offers this type of flexibility and high market rate interest? Probably not where you're saving now.

An 8.5% rate yields 8.84% annually. An 8.6% rate yields 8.94% annually. An 9.00% rate yields 9.381% annually. Interest computation is simple interest calculated on a 365 or 366 day basis and credited monthly. Rates are subject to periodic change.

Passbook Money Market Savings Account: rate 9.50%, yield 9.925%.

For those of you keeping $10,000 or more in a 5.5% passbook account, just for the convenience of a passbook, we've got a better idea. Deposit that money in a Pacific Federal Passbook Money Market Savings Account and you'll earn 9.925% interest per annum. That's practically double what you're making now.

You'll get a passbook that works just like your old one. One that lets you withdraw or deposit money anytime you like. With all the safety and security of a passbook. If your balance ever drops below $10,000.00, you'll still earn a 5.25% interest rate.

But at a 9.50% rate instead of 5.5%, it doesn't pay for a serious saver to have anything but our Passbook Money Market Savings Account.

Interest computation is simple interest calculated on a 365 or 366 day basis and credited monthly. Rates are subject to periodic change.

Monthly Money Market Savings Account: rate 9.75% yield 9.75%.

There's a big difference between our monthly money market savings account and other monthly accounts. Our current 9.75% per annum interest rate.

It's a high rate you'd expect to find only on longer term 6 or 12 month accounts. But with Pacific Federal's monthly account, you can earn these market rates for as little as 30 days, just by maintaining a $2,500.00 minimum balance during that time.

Of course, if you want your money to continue to grow, you can automatically renew the account at the prevailing high market rate each time your 30-day certificate matures.

So don't waste any time collecting high interest. Open a Monthly Money Market Savings Account at Pacific Federal and start earning long term rates on your own terms.

The interest computation is simple interest calculated on a 365 or 366 day basis and credited monthly. Rates are subject to periodic change. Call your local branch or 1-800-PACIFIC for current rates. Federal regulations require a substantial interest penalty for early withdrawal.

Feds to build "quake central"

$1M complex may be able to predict tremors

If things work out as geologists expect, the money invested in creating a vast outdoor seismological laboratory in the hills and pastures around the tiny central California town of Parkfield just may be the best $1 million the federal government ever spent in California.

Right now, there are as many seismographs as people in the oak-studded hills near Parkfield, a hamlet of 34 people midway between Paso Robles and Coalinga, site of California's last big earthquake.

And scientists are fairly salivating as they wait for the laser equipment they've set up on farms and ranches to begin producing information.

The ultimate aim of their activity, which began five years ago, is development of a reliable method for predicting earthquakes.

But there's one flaw in their reasoning: The geologists know — or at least they're fairly certain — that a big earthquake will strike in or around Parkfield on Jan. 1, 1988 (give or take four years). But they don't know where any other big quake will hit. In fact, the Coalinga quake and other big California shakers like the 1971 San Fernando temblor and earlier ones in Long Beach and Tehachapi struck along faults whose very existence was unknown.

Scientists are certain Parkfield will be hit soon because quakes measuring Richter 6 or above have struck there roughly every 22 years for a century. The last one came in January, 1966.

So they've set all manner of ultra-high-tech equipment among the grazing cows who normally frequent the hills flanking the San Andreas Fault.

The hope is to record every slight twitch that occurs before, during and after the seemingly inevitable earthquake. With that knowledge, the U.S. Geological Survey believes it will make great strides in the quest for reliable quake forecasts.

But since scientists clearly don't even know where many major, potentially dangerous faults lie, they won't be able to set out instruments to measure pre-quake phenomena in many places, even if they learn what an honest-to-goodness earthquake precursor is. So what good is all the work at Parkfield?

Plenty, says the USGS. "There is no other place in the world that we know of where sizeable quakes are so regular and so frequent," says Allen G. Lindh, one of the chief geologists on the project. "We believe other large quakes also occur at regular intervals, but often hundreds of years apart, so we can't be sure of the exact interval for most. This place is like a scale model of a giant earthquake."

In other words, if scientists can spot the same sorts of things going on in other locations as they'll observe in Parkfield, they'll be able to offer warnings of large quakes well in advance. They almost certainly won't be able to predict every temblor, but Parkfield may help with accurate forecasts for some.

If that saves lives and property, the $1 million-plus spent here will prove a good investment, even if the experimental results can't be put to universal use.

And the experiment is also fun for the people of Parkfield, who have "cooperated completely," according to the USGS.

"It's been a lot of fun to keep in touch with the folks at the USGS," says rancher Andrew Frohlich. "They've got a laser beam thing on my ranch. We give them a full play-by-play of every little shake we feel. But don't worry about us. My house has been here about a hundred years and it just shakes a little in an earthquake and then goes right back plumb."

Phones wear out mattresses

In motels with telephones beside the beds, people tend to sleep on the bedsides closest to the phones. This puts uneven wear on the mattresses, requiring their replacement too frequently. So some smart chain operators design their fixtures so the phones are across the rooms from the beds.

Q. How did tennis come to be scored by 15, 30, 40, deuce, ad?

A. Early in France, the most common silver piece was worth 60 sous with each of its four parts worth 15 sous. Tennis was played for stakes. So points were worth 15, 30, 45 sous. Eventually, after the coin denominations no longer signified, the 45 was abbreviated to 40 merely because it was easier to say.

A. The barrister argues the case in court. The solicitor helps the barrister prepare the case.

Riding the 'golden parachute'

Presidency is a sure road to riches in Mexico

WASHINGTON — Mexican President Miguel de la Madrid, who meets with President Reagan in the White House today, has amassed a multimillion-dollar fortune since he took office, according to highly classified U.S. intelligence documents.

Self-enrichment is a tradition among Mexican presidents; it may also be perfectly legal under Mexican law. The presidential salary is secret, and the single political party's only rule, according to one insider, is: "Don't rock the trough."

Perhaps in deference to his country's precarious financial situation and the extreme poverty of its people, de la Madrid is believed to have collected a secret "salary" far more modest than his predecessors'. It is, nevertheless, huge.

One high-level administration source with regular access to ultra-secret intelligence reports told my associate Dale Van Atta that in one series of transactions in the four months after he took office in December 1982, de la Madrid salted away $13 million to $14 million in a Swiss bank.

Another source with access to CIA and National Security Agency data cited one report last fall, based on cable intercepts of international bank transactions, that put the total of de la Madrid's "take" during his presidency at $162 million — minimum. At the CIA, the six-year presidential term is referred to jokingly as the "golden parachute" that carries every president safely to a sizable fortune.

Efforts to reach de la Madrid for comment were unsuccessful, but a spokesman at the Mexican Embassy said the U.S. intelligence information was wrong — "absolutely out of the question." He pointed out that de la Madrid has been mounting an aggressive anti-corruption campaign.

That too is an honored presidential tradition in Mexico. De la Madrid's immediate predecessor, Jose Lopez Portillo, went through the same ritual, calling corruption "the cancer of Mexico." Yet Lopez Portillo, who ruled during the heady days of Mexico's short-lived oil prosperity, amassed a personal fortune. By the CIA's estimate, he salted away a staggering $1 billion to $3 billion.

The symbol of Lopez Portillo's wealth is the luxurious, 32-acre estate he built overlooking Mexico City. It is nicknamed "Dog Hill," in mocking reference to Lopez Portillo's statement that he would "fight like a dog" to defend the shrinking value of the peso.

While many of his countrymen live in adobe or corrugated metal hovels, Lopez Portillo and his family have bathrooms of marble and gold, according to Mexican press accounts. Some floors are made of jade; one is transparent, with a detailed model of the Acropolis visible through it.

The Mexican government installed a power plant for what a Mexican magazine called the "walled medieval fortress overlooking the capital." The public works agency spent $33 million on the access road, sewage and water lines for Lopez Portillo's estate.

SAFETY DEBATE: The Consumer Product Safety Commission will decide today whether U.S. manufacturers should be allowed to export articles that have been banned from the market in this country as dangerous.

At least one commissioner, Terrence Scanlon, favors allowing such exports. He cites a recent court decision which ruled that the sale of products abroad is a matter for the importing nations to handle. An internal commission memo notes that allowing unsafe products to be exported would help the manufacturers recoup their losses, though the price they'd get "in all probability will be substantially less than for complying goods."

Consumer groups oppose the export permission, on grounds that hazardous goods will cause harm wherever they are sold. They also argue that U.S. consumers will be less safe, because manufacturers will have less incentive to be careful if they know they can dump rejected products overseas.

Some companies whose products have run afoul of the commission have indicated they'd sell the faulty items abroad if it were legal to do so.

Forget the politics! On with the Games

To the Editor:
Well, now the Soviet Union won't be here for the Summer Olympics and other countries may be influenced not to come also. But that's just fine because they're communists and we don't like communists. However, we should look at the people affected by this political move, not just their ideologies.

We are all told that the athletes are going to suffer because of the lack of Soviet competition, but what about the people who only watch sports once every four years and expect to see the best. Now every time the Soviet Union, United States or any other controversial country hosts the Olympics, there will be doubt as to who is really the best athlete because half the athletes won't be there.

Now I'm not anti-American; as a matter of fact, I'm very proud to be an American, and I don't agree with many of the actions of the Soviet government, but that doesn't mean that I don't want to see their athletes. I was awed, just as everyone else was, by Olga Korbut, the Soviet gymnast, in the 1972 Olympics, but that isn't to say that I agreed with her government's politics. Similarly I don't condone the drinking or drug taking of professional American athletes, but I still admire the way in which they play their sports. If an athlete who drinks makes the winning touchdown, I don't restrain my applause. He isn't preaching the merits of drinking, but rather he is showing me his ability to play his sport well.

The athletes participating in the Olympics are exhibiting their prowess in a certain area, not saying they are better athletes because they are capitalist, communist, socialist or Marxist. True, the athletes are representing their country, but it is just that, their country, not their country's government. They are representing the people of their country and the people's heritage and pride.

Making the Olympics an extension of world politics serves no purpose but to make the athletes, viewers and people all over the world victims of political strategy. Instead of thinking of politics all the time, world leaders should allow people to participate, either directly or indirectly, in one small area of the world, for one short time every four years, in a competition to see the best athletes, without political involvement.

Water sports at the heart of life in OC

Happily the people on the Orange Coast are devoted to water sports. Among the great spectator sports are the crew races. I am particularly interested as, I hope, are you.

My reasons are probably three times as strong as yours. Reason is I'm a graduate of the University of Washington where a great many greats in the rowing world came from. I am also a loyal alumnus of the graduate school of the University of California (Berkeley), and I've been a staunch supporter of Orange Coast College which has a champion crew. So I have much to cheer about.

Particularly on Saturday, May 5, we had a great regatta on the north channel of Newport Bay.

The Pilot gave it full coverage but the inland papers gave it only minor attention. Why, I can't explain nor can I tell you why this regatta got so little television or radio coverage. Neither did golf until one day the broadcasters woke up and found that they were passing up a great deal of interest on the part of TV viewers.

The camera coverage of the regatta was pathetic. The reason, obviously, was that there was no provision possible for proper camera coverage. I almost wept when I saw the pathetic facility afforded the one cameraman with a single hand-held camera. He stood in a short rowboat with an outboard motor and tried to balance himself. He followed each of the races but apparently he got no satisfactory footage. At least I did not see any.

I've already told you the story of the Sea Pilot, the little Baltic cruiser which, before I stupidly sold the Daily Pilot, was operated by this newspaper. It was skippered by one of our back shop printers. There was a spacious rear deck upon which South Coast News Service, which we owned, could place two tripods with a television camera on each.

What happened to the Sea Pilot? Another sad story.

Otis Chandler, the head of the Times Mirror Company, which had bought the Pilot, was an avid surfer but for some reason he didn't think there was reader interest in sailing or in crew racing. He didn't think the Sea Pilot could earn its keep. I disagreed, but I couldn't pretend that the Sea Pilot could do an adequate job of filming surfers which was the one water sport that Otis had any personal interest in. Surf pictures are best done from the shore.

I had leased, for the Daily Pilot, the boat that I'm talking about. I had had my daughter buy it because I thought it would be well for her to learn something about business.

With two engines and a skilled helmsman it was possible to whirl the little boat around as if on a dime and get magnificent pictures.

I presently grew up on the presence of crew racing, although only in my freshman year did I attempt to row myself.

At that time crew was quite different from what it is now. The races were four miles long instead of today's 2000 meters and the "stroke" was completely different. It was what was known as the Conibear stroke. Hiram Conibear was not an oarsman. He was a physicist and he figured out that a long smooth stroke taken while the boat was making headway would enable it to make more headway.

After a long smooth pull had been completed each oarsman was leaning far back. He would then turn the blade of his oar over the water as if it were a feather, dig in and start a long, effective stroke. This was ideal for a four-mile race because, after each pull, the boat did not lose any "way."

WALTER

The University of Washington was where most of the great crew coaches and oarsmen came from. To my mind quickly come the names of Ed Leader, Rusty Callow and Dow Walling. Also from Washington came some of the great coxswains. Today, not only have some of these coxswains turned coaches, because they are lighter, some of today's fine coxswains are women.

In the fraternity to which I belonged was a World War I flier named Lou Goldsmith. I had helped to pledge him and later to initiate him.

Sand Point airfield was a small army field. It had only one plane — a World War I Ginny with an eight-cylinder Hispano-Suiza engine.

As I have confessed to you, journalism — particularly newspaper reporting and publishing — has been my lifelong ardent vocation. In my junior year I was an upperclass ROTC cadet so I was allowed to ride in the Sand Point plane. In May there was a Washington-California crew race. Lou was a bit of a daredevil and he loved to do stunts. The race was a little late in starting. The spectators were on several ferryboats which followed the race just as did all of us a week ago Saturday.

The spectators crowded the rails and my friend Lou decided to entertain the crowd. He flew up above the clouds, kicked the plane into a spin and spun down through the clouds. When he shoved the stick forward, to flatten the plane into level flight, the engine wheezed once and refused to do more.

In each cockpit was a hand crank which when quickly turned delivered a hot spark. I never twisted a booster handle so fast in my life. The engine did start and we flew up the course and saw the crews just starting. The theory was that from the front cockpit I would crawl up on the wing and wrap my leg around a strut. Scared to death or not, I did so and shot the first pictures ever taken of a crew race from the air. They were published the following Sunday in the Seattle Times.

So, once in a while when I get into a bullfight with a bunch of braggarts — that is my brag.

You can't all be Cal alumni or Washington alumni but you can join me in great pride for Orange Coast College, which won the "junior" varsity. Orange Coast did not enter a varsity race. It didn't need to. I have never seen so smooth a crew as those from Orange Coast — both the four-oar boats and the eight-oar boats.

Orange Coast is a junior college of which all of those who live on the Orange Coast have a right to be proud.

Walter Burroughs is the Pilot's founding publisher.

End the Olympic Games

To the Editor:

Hooray for David Balsiger, et al! They have succeeded in not only embarrassing the Soviets' Olympic Committee, but in becoming an embarrassment to much of our nation as well.

It's about time the world decided to cease having the Olympic Games altogether. They are no longer a contest of world class athletes, but a circus for political clowns.

The young athletes, who have trained so hard for years, now must be told that they have labored in vain. Their dreams shattered.

No doubt the incident with KAL flight 007 was a great tragedy. Nothing will bring them back. But who mourns the death of the Olympic spirit?

Disagrees with editorial

To the Editor

As an instructor at Saddleback College South, I was deeply concerned when I read your editorial (Daily Pilot, May 1).

Your expression of complete support for the political party line of Chancellor Larry Stevens and his spokesman Bill Schreiber is not the issue here. You have every right to support whomever and whatever you choose.

What is at issue is that you arrived at your editorial position without ever consulting any of us on the faculty, and without sending reporters to recent crucial Board of Trustees meetings.

As a result, your editorial on "Pre-Jarvisonian" teachers who work under a "Post-Jarvisonian" Chancellor contains information which is not only misleading, but outright erroneous.

The title alone deserves to be questioned: one of the key disputes between the teachers at Saddleback and the District Administration is the unconscionable cost of the burgeoning District bureaucracy under the leadership of Larry Stevens. Have you or any of your readers ever heard Howard Jarvis speak in favor of expanding the bureaucracy at the expense of the taxpayers?

The problems here at Saddleback are multifold and complex. We on the faculty, as taxpayers and members of this community, can only hope that in your future commentaries you will take the time to investigate both sides of this issue before you draw your conclusions.

Is your daily grind wearing out teeth?

By SUSAN MONAHAN

Daily Pilot Correspondent

Stress, that arch-villain of the '80s, may be responsible for yet another complaint.

If you're prone to nocturnal bruxism — i.e. you grind and clench your teeth in your sleep — there's an 80 percent chance that you're reacting to daytime stress, says John Rugh, Ph.D., associate professor of oral surgery at the University of Texas Health Science Center in San Antonio.

Electrodes on jaw will help night tooth grinder control the unhealthy habit.

Rugh reported his findings at the California Dental Association's recent spring scientific session at the Anaheim Convention Center.

He said that while 56 to 78 percent of the population are "grinders," only about 5 percent of them will have dental problems because of it. "The most obvious problem is wearing down of teeth ... it's esthetically distressing and can damage restorations."

The soft tissue can also be damaged and bruxists may suffer pain which Rugh likened to "a tension headache in the jaw muscles." Long-term bruxism can cause joint problems in the jaw.

Rugh acknowledged that dentists debate whether bruxism is caused by occlusion or psychological problems.

For instance, some dentists maintain that a prematurity occlusion will make people gnash their teeth. In this kind of improper meeting of upper and lower teeth, one tooth always hits first, and the theory is that bruxism is an unconscious attempt to grind the offending tooth down.

But Rugh cited studies which seem to contradict this hypothesis. In one experiment, subjects were fitted with crowns that mimicked a prematurity occlusion. "We expected to see an increase in grinding when the prematurity was put in," he said.

The subjects were hooked up to electromyograph recorders (EMGs) which monitored the muscular activity of their jaws during sleep. "There was no increase in muscle activity with the crowns," said Rugh.

Five of the 10 subjects even showed a decrease, but he explained this wasn't too surprising because "a noxious stimulus tends to decrease muscular activity."

In a few instances, bruxism can be traced to severe malnutrition, said Rugh, and in 5 to 10 percent of the cases brain damage is to blame. Sleep disorder bruxism afflicts some people who go into extremely deep levels of sleep. (Please see GRINDERS/B2)

Overachieving doctor avoids wife's request for vacation

Dear Dr. Algazi,
My husband has refused to take a vacation for the 15 years we've been married. He is a physician and says that he cannot afford to leave his practice. I think he's afraid to be alone with me. What do you think?

LINDA ALGAZI

A Frustrated Wife

Dear Wife,
I think about this problem a lot but I can only guess at your husband's motives. Let's look at the background of a typical medical doctor to try to understand his behavior.

Physicians, as a group, have strange social histories. Most of them do come from solid families who value education and achievement.

Most parents of physicians have encouraged their children to pursue success at all costs.

High school was a time of study. To gain entry to a fine college required a certain amount of discipline and delayed gratification. "You'll play later ... after you achieve your goals" was the prescription for success.

In college, the race continued. Entry into medical school was, and is, dependent on academic excellence. To earn A's at "Pre-Med U" is no easy task.

Fraternity life and partying is often substituted with library time and cramming. Dating and extra-curricular fun of any kind is put on a back burner in most cases.

Like "The Little Engine That Could" in the children's story, the successful candidates and some others forge ahead in a very straight line to the tune of "I think I can, I think I can, I think I can."

Your husband's efforts were rewarded. He was admitted to medical school. As a result of his conditioning, he had probably become well trained in self-denial. If he's like many of his peers, he didn't think of himself as a martyr because he had learned to get his gratification from academic success.

He had won his trophy, but had paid the price. In medical school, there was no let-up; the competition has always been keen for the best residencies and internships.

"You'll play later ... after you achieve your goals" was now internalized. He no longer needed his parents to remind him.

It's hard to break old patterns. I'd guess that your husband's avoidance of vacations probably has more to do with himself than with you.

His comfort zone must depend on his role as a physician. He's learned to take his strokes and identity from how he earns his living and the idea of functioning without his "mask" is probably frightening for him.

Your story reminds me of another physician and his wife. The answer for this couple was to take a vacation in conjunction with a medical meeting at which he was a speaker.

He had allowed himself to travel and to leave his patients in care of a colleague only because he had a professional function at his destination. The fact that the meeting took place at a lovely resort was an added benefit ... and he did it again the following year. His wife was delighted.

Perhaps you could pursue this idea as a solution. Or maybe you could start with a weekend away together.

Tell him, it's doctor's orders.

Immunology supporters put on the ritz

Champagne lunch bunch more serious than usual

"Puttin' on the Ritz" was the theme for the spring fund-raiser put on by the National Society for Immunology at The Ritz restaurant in Newport Beach.

Some 100 people attended the brunch, which featured fresh papaya with raspberries, chicken Viennese and profiteroles.

Gale Granger, a professor of immunology at UC Irvine, presented the gavel to Marilou Sparrow, the new president of the society's directors, and Mary Ann Wells and Gloria Osbrink were introduced as two of the founding members of the Council for Immunology, a support group created to help the society.

Guests watched a video presentation on the human immune response, shown by Sudhir Gupta, which was produced by Newport Pharmaceuticals International Inc. For entertainment, there was pianist Ferdie Fertado and the strolling Ambrosia Strings.

Those attending included Shirley and Bob Gugenheim, Ray and Gloria Osbrink, Peggy and Leslie Cotton, Lee and Jim Gormley, Gale and Barbara Granger, Norman Axene and Yvonne Johnson, Peter Dicaro, Alban Silva, Robert Shaw and Britt Carpenter.

The Immunology Society was formed in Orange County last fall by a committee of scientists and laymen to support basic research into immunological disorders and to eventually construct a treatment facility that will also serve as a research headquarters.

The healthy foot is generally without calluses, corns and rough, hard skin.

Bottom line of health: How do you treat feet?

Nearly three-quarters of Americans over the age of 18 say their feet hurt and 62 percent think this condition is normal, according to a new study on the state of the nation's feet.

The study was conducted by the Gallup Organization for Dr. Scholl's and the American Podiatry Association for May — National Foot Health Month.

What is called an "alarming misconception on the part of the public" by the study's underwriters is responsible for consistent neglect of feet. The younger the respondent, the more likely that foot pain was considered normal.

More women than men report that their feet hurt, and 33 percent of women respondents say the pain was caused by uncomfortable shoes. But when asked if they would give up the fashionable shoes to relieve foot discomfort, more than one quarter of the women between the ages of 18-34 indicated they would continue to wear high heels knowing that they were damaging their feet.

Despite a willingness by many women to sacrifice their feet for fashion, 84 percent view their feet as attractive.

While the majority of Americans spend more than four hours each day on their feet, nearly half of all respondents to the attitudinal survey cite time spent on their feet as the specific cause of their foot pain.

Other causes mentioned, in order of frequency, were blisters, calluses, corns and ingrown toe nails. Each of these conditions was experienced more often by women than men.

A regular grooming and fitness schedule is the key to minimizing foot problems and should include daily moisturizing and a spritz of foot powder, a weekly regimen of nail clipping and reducing calluses and hard skin with pumice, and exercises such as picking up marbles with toes to increase foot flexibility.

More than one-third of men and women walk as their major form of exercise, with 63 percent of this group exercising on a daily basis. Field sports (football and baseball) were the second most popular exercise/sporting activity, and jogging was third.

5 miles to the foot

They outwear the best tires. They don't need gas, motor or brakes to make them go. They have their own built-in shock absorbers. You can't trade them in or get a retread, though they can sometimes be realigned through surgery.

They're your feet.

Just how far do those feet go?

The American Podiatry Association estimates that the average American takes about 8,000 steps a day. That translates to 4 to 5 miles — up and down stairs, around the kitchen, or at work. Every day.

BACKTALK

Fitness capability comes down to the last stretch

If you have evaluated yourself for minimum muscular fitness (per my last column), you're probably ready to correct your deficiencies. Remember if you had difficulty passing any one of the six tests, you should consider yourself below par. If, on the other hand, you passed all six, you are to be congratulated.

CARY
ROTHENBERG

Those who were unable to hold their heels 10 inches off the ground for 10 seconds have weak hip flexors. To correct a weakness in this major iliopsoas muscle group, many authorities recommend the "rotated leg raise."

To do this, lie on your back with both knees bent. Then straighten one leg, turning the toes outward and gradually lift the leg.

A more effective means of doing this exercise is to add weight, using sand bags and starting with two pounds maximum. If straining or jerking is necessary, you're probably using an excessive amount of weight.

If you were unable to do a straight leg sit up, you must strengthen the weak hip flexors (as just outlined) plus give attention to the weak abdominal muscles.

The corrective exercise calls for you to be on the floor with your knees bent, hands at your sides. Now raise your hands and shoulders off the floor, lower slowly and relax.

For those unable to do a bent-knee sit up, the corrective exercise could be the same as just described, doing a partial sit up, the bent knee isolates the action. This particular sit up is accomplished by action of the stomach muscles only contracting due to the relaxed position of the iliopsoas.

Inability to hold your trunk steady for 10 seconds while lying on your stomach indicates you have weak upper back muscles. The corrective exercise is called the "Single Arm Raise, Prone" done by lying on the floor on your stomach with a pillow under the abdomen. Now raise your arm and shoulder, lower and relax. Then alternate both sides.

If you failed to hold your legs up straight for 10 seconds while lying prone, check for weakness of the lower back muscles.

The corrective exercise is called the "Single Leg Raises, Prone" done by lying on your stomach with a large pillow under the waist. Now raise one leg at a time, lower, rest and alternate. Weakness of back muscles is very rare and should be looked at by your physician or chiropractor.

Failing to touch the floor with your fingertips indicates tenseness and lack of flexibility. A quick and easy three-step exercise will begin to help you tone and stretch the thigh muscles as well as low back muscles.

First...for 60 seconds stand in a bent-over position, as if you were trying to touch your toes. Take note of how far you have gotten — by mentally marking your shins with your fingertips. Don't strain or force the bending. Keep your chin tucked and, very important — never bend to the point of pain, if there is any present.

Second...resume the erect position and go up and down slightly for an additional 60 seconds.

Now stop and once again bend over and see what, if anything, has happened. If you're typical you have gained one or more inches of increase of flexion (bending over) and have started to become more flexible.

If you want to improve your flexibility, this is a great exercise to do. You can become more flexible if you are willing to make the effort. Do this drill each morning and improved flexibility will be yours. Work on your particular muscle weakness and improve your level of muscular fitness.

In our next column, some helpful suggestions on achieving aerobic fitness.

Dr. Cary Rothenberg, a Huntington Beach chiropractor, is host of "Back Talk," a weekly health show on Cable Channel 10 at 7 p.m. Tuesdays.

Norm Axene of advisory board and Yvonne Johnson enjoyed the immunology brunch.

last week included a special celebration for a special little guest of honor — Noelle Bird — daughter of Sue Bird and the poster child for the Cystic Fibrosis Guild of Orange County.

She was celebrating her sixth birthday at the luncheon held to announce the guild's Investors Masquerade Ball, scheduled for Oct. 27 at Fashion Island. ("Investors" refer to those who invest in a child's future by helping finance cystic fibrosis research.)

There was a more-serious-than-usual note to that luncheon. Bellinda Barnett, ball chairman, had a little trouble quieting the audience of about 100 before showing a film detailing the effects of cystic fibrosis.

After the film "you could have heard a pin drop," as one guest put it. Another guest, Amelia Seton, was so moved by the presentation that she led the group in a prayer. The mood lightened only after some of the research toward solving the mysteries of the disease was described.

Spouse of wheelchair victim needs help, too

DEAR ANN LANDERS: May I respond to the woman whose husband is confined to a wheelchair? Her letter hit me right between the eyes.

DEAR NO NAME: You are not alone and countless others have been there before us. That's why support groups are formed.

Your husband is still in the first stages of coping with his illness. Disbelief, frustration and anger are the causes of his outbursts. When he accepts what is, he will be calmer. You can do several things to preserve your own sanity.

1. Call your local home health agency. (Check the white pages of the phone book.) Staff members will evaluate your husband's condition and schedule home visits. He will do for them what he will not for you—for example, follow instructions regarding diet, therapy, hygiene. Fees are based on financial need; call Social Security for Medicare information and your insurance agent to check coverage.

2. If possible, permit your husband to be a decision-maker. As he grows increasingly disabled, he needs to feel respected.

3. Learn to tune out the awful things he says to you. You are a convenient target. He knows nobody else would tolerate such treatment. The person most helpful always is the one most resented.

4. Remove yourself from the role of custodian. If you have a job, keep it. If you don't, get one—preferably one where you will work with people.

5. Hire a companion, if you must, while you shop and do errands. If he can use the telephone, he can be left alone for short periods. He won't like your absence at first and will try to make you feel guilty. Ignore the digs.

6. Be honest. When someone says how cheerful he is and how well he has adjusted, it's all right to say, "It appears that way, but he can be very difficult." There's no need to perpetuate the fantasy that only the patient suffers.

7. If there's a local support group related to your husband's illness, join it. If there is none, establish one.

Take care of yourself. You will be of no help to anyone in times of crisis if you allow yourself to crumble under the strain. —HOPE I'VE HELPED

DEAR HOPE: You have. Thanks for your words of wisdom. Nothing speaks more loudly than the voice of experience.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My husband and I have eight cats—all strays. Last year our veterinarian bills ran close to $400. Four of our cats are over 12 years old. Last week I picked up another stray—badly injured. The hospital bill was $47.

The problem: My husband keeps insisting I ask the veterinarian for a discount because we have been frequent customers for more than 10 years.

The subject came up again last night when our eldest cat had a tumor removed. Another $24. My husband told me to ask Ann Landers. —CAT LOVER IN PA.

DEAR LOVER: If you are middle-income folks, ask the veterinarian for a break. My hunch is that he will cooperate. If his response is no, you've lost nothing.

A no-nonsense approach to how to deal with life's most difficult and most rewarding arrangement. Ann Landers' booklet, "Marriage—What to Expect," will prepare you for better or for worse. MOM'S DIAGNOSIS STRIKES A NERVE Scientific breakthroughs have come and gone in this country and have been totally ignored by my mother.

No one will ever convince her that the responsibility for good health does not lie within the minds of each and every one of us.

From birth to age 11, my mother's cure-all for every malady I ever suffered was the same, "You need a laxative." I went through grade school wondering why kids went around with their legs and arms in a cast when all they had to do was take a candy-flavored cleansing agent before they went to bed.

It was uncanny how she could just look at you and determine how you were ready for a clean start in life. A laxative cured an upset stomach, headaches, fever, stomach rashes, dizziness, and a general run-down feeling. By the time she finished with you, nothing seemed important enough to open your mouth and complain about.

At age 12, a new diagnosis emerged from my mother's lips. "You're just bored." All my friends had impacted teeth, blood disorders, viral attacks, appendicitis, dog bites, pneumonia, kidney infections and vision problems. I had all those things, but I was "just bored" and the cure was "get yourself something to do or I'll find something."

I think I cleaned up enough rooms, snapped enough beans, swept off enough porches, carried out enough trash, folded enough laundry to keep me in good health the rest of my life.

It wasn't until after I was married that my mother, Dr. Strangelove, shifted into her third phase as a diagnostician.

All my ailments for the last 30 years have been attributed to "It's just your nerves."

"Mom, I fainted twice today." ("It's just your nerves.")

"I think I'm pregnant." ("Nonsense, it's just your nerves.")

"I'm calling from Madonna Pavilion. I just gave birth to eight pounds, four ounces of nerves."

You don't get any flowers for "nerves." You don't get a greeting card or a check from your insurance company. You don't even get any sympathy from it. The fact that you allow them to invade your body is your own fault.

A couple of months ago, I began having trouble getting my foot into a shoe. Pain became a way of life. I didn't even want to tell my mother. I checked into a clinic and had surgery on it and then called her.

"What did they do?" she asked.

"They took off a bone spur and moved the nerve over a little bit."

I heard, "Aha!" at the other end of the phone and then, "What did I tell you?"

GRINDERS...
From B1

this condition can usually be relieved by anti-depressants. But aside from these exceptions, "we're seeing more and more evidence that bruxism is the result of stress," said Rugh.

He conducted an experiment in which UCLA dental students were asked to record their high stress days. When they were tested for nocturnal bruxism, Rugh found a significant correlation between hectic days and nighttime grinding.

"We can relieve bruxism by doing things that relieve anxiety," said Rugh. Although some dentists fit bruxists with splints (plastic guards which can be worn on the upper or lower arch), this is not the treatment Rugh recommends for patients going through a stressful period.

Valium can be useful as a short-term treatment, he said, but patients also need to develop coping skills to help them deal more effectively with stress.

Biofeedback devices are sometimes used to make the bruxist more aware of the behavior. One such device, meant to be worn during the day, is an easily concealed portable beeper which goes off when the jaw clenches. For nocturnal grinders, the beeper is equipped with a speaker that makes enough noise to wake up the bruxist.

But there is no real "cure" for bruxism.

"You can limit the damage; it's not likely that you can totally reverse the problem," said Rugh.

Nor is it completely up to the dentist to control the condition. Most bruxists, said Rugh, are "type A" personalities — hard-working, hard-driving perfectionists.

Sometimes just sitting in a Jacuzzi for half an hour or relaxing with a glass of wine can decrease the time you spend grinding your teeth at night. Rugh concluded, "Any way you can treat yourself nice is a help."

Printronix reports $7.8 M earnings for fiscal year

Printronix Inc. in Irvine, manufacturer of computer line printers, has reported operating results for the fiscal year ended March 30.

Earnings were $7.813,000, or $1.70 per share, on sales of $116,326,000. The results of operations include Data Printer Corp., following its acquisition by Printronix in May of 1983.

This compares with earnings of $6,120,000, or $1.52 per share, on sales of $78,181,000 for the previous year, representing increases of 49 percent in sales, 28 percent in net income and 12 percent in earnings per share.

For the fourth quarter ended March 30 Printronix earned $2,770,000, or 60 cents per share, on sales of $35,187,000 compared with $1,853,000, or 42 cents per share, on sales of $20,178,000 for the fourth quarter last year.

Weighted average shares outstanding used in computing earnings per share in both the fourth quarter and fiscal year ended March 30 reflect the public sale of 500,000 shares of common stock in November 1982

'Head of household' taxpayers questioned

Over 380,000 Californians will receive audit questionnaires from the Franchise Tax Board this month.

The questionnaires will be sent to taxpayers who filed Head of Household on their 1982 state income tax return. The Head of Household status is designed to provide a tax break to certain individuals who are either single or legally separated and have maintained a household for a qualified dependent, or an unmarried child for the entire year.

The Head of Household filing status is often misunderstood by California taxpayers. For example, many married couples who are only temporarily separated or who share custody may in fact not qualify for the status. Also many single individuals who have no dependents misinterpret the Head of Household filing status.

Taxpayers who claimed a Head of Household status must complete the questionnaire and return it to avoid a penalty.

New tax laws offer good, bad news for taxpayers

The astonishingly unnoticed law now moving through Congress makes key changes in the way you will file your tax return this year, 1985 and future years. There are restrictions on some tax savers, but there also is good news: bigger charitable deductions and a brand-new type of medical-expense deduction. To be specific:

— A bigger automatic deduction for charitable use of your car. For 1984, the automatic mileage deduction is 9 cents a mile. But starting in 1985, your automatic deduction for charitable travel is 12 cents per mile—a 33 percent boost. A family with, say, 5,000 miles a year of such travel gets an extra $150 in deductions.

But watch this: The automatic deduction for medical travel remains at 9 cents a mile.

— There are new medical-expense deductions for lodging away from home, reports Eli J. Warach, a divisional senior vice president of Prentice-Hall. The cost of overnight traveling to get medical care is deductible as a medical expense. So is the additional travel expense of a companion, if a doctor says the companion is medically essential. But the Internal Revenue Service often has said that lodging (not food) expenses incurred while obtaining outpatient medical treatment in another town are non-deductible.

New deduction: Starting in 1984, lodging expenses connected with away-from-home medical care are deductible (a companion's, too).

The new lodging deduction is limited to $50 per day per person. So for you and your companion, the deduction cannot top $100 per day; nor can the lodging be lavish or extravagant; nor can there be a "significant element" of relaxation or recreation.

— You're getting a reprieve for energy credit. You are entitled to a tax credit equal to 15 percent of the first $2,000 of energy-saving improvements made to a principal residence built before April 20, 1977.

Act now: Add qualifying energy savers to your residence soon. The up-to-$300 credit will not be available after 1985.

— New, tougher rules for income averaging have been adopted. Starting in '84, income averaging is available only to those with a big increase in income (or big drop in deductions). You now can income-average only if your taxable income for the current year exceeds 140 percent of your average taxable income for the preceding years by at least $3,000.

For instance, a taxpayer with a $40,000 taxable income can use income averaging only if his 1984 taxable income exceeds $59,000. Before 1984, his taxable income had to exceed only $51,000 for him to qualify.

Try this technique: If you are claiming extra withholding allowances based on income averaging, you may have to increase your withholding to avoid a possible estimated tax penalty.

But you won't miss averaging to the extent your rise in income is attributable to inflation. Reason: Indexing arrives in '85. Personal exemption deductions, tax rates and the standard deduction will be indexed to counteract inflation. In sum: Your marginal tax rates will stay constant if your increase in income is entirely attributable to inflation.

— While there is a penalty for underpayment of estimated taxes, you avoid the penalty if withheld tax for the year is at least 80 percent of actual tax liability. There also are four so-called escape hatches that allow you to avoid the penalty even if you pay less than 80 percent.

One more change: Starting in 1985, you must include the alternative minimum tax in your estimated tax payments.

NB firm purchases luxury apartments

South Coast Properties, Inc. of Newport Beach has acquired the luxury waterfront Ocean Queen apartment building in Long Beach from Ocean Queen, Ltd., a Redondo Beach-based partnership.

The eight story, 60-unit building located at 1830 East Ocean Boulevard is valued at over $4-million. Exact terms of the transaction were not announced.

"This acquisition is the first of four major additions to our Southern California portfolio this year," commented Richard L. Raschiatore, president of South Coast Properties, a nationwide real estate investment firm. "It also represents our initial re-entry into the California apartment market after several years of activity in Texas," he added.

Bank purchase under way

Citizens Bank of Costa Mesa and Labron Co., Limited, of Hong Kong have entered into a letter of intent for the purchase by Labron of all of the outstanding shares of Citizens Bank of Costa Mesa.

The two parties have agreed to negotiate the terms of the definitive agreement which would then be subject to the approval of the boards of directors and shareholders of the two companies as well as all of the pertinent government regulatory authorities.

Pursuant to the letter of intent, Labron would pay 1.85 times the shareholders' equity which exists as of March 31, 1984 for all of the issued and outstanding shares of the bank.

Useful information on retirement funds

By RALPH SCOTT
Newport Beach CPA

You hear a great deal about Individual Retirement Accounts these days. Here are some little known but useful facts that may interest you.

- The maximum contribution for an individual and his non-working spouse is $2,250 per year. You can decide yourself how much to put in each spouse's account, with the only restriction being that no more than $2,000 can go into either account. Review your overall objectives and if you want to start drawing the money as soon as possible, put the most dollars in the older spouse's account. On the other hand, if you want the money to remain in the IRA as long as possible and continue earning tax free dollars, put the largest amount possible in the younger spouse's account.

- You are not required to make contributions every year simply because you have established an IRA. If you find that you are short of cash in any year, you may reduce or skip your contribution.

- Not all IRAs are the same. Be sure that you shop around and establish an IRA where your money will draw the highest yield possible.

- You need not contribute to the same IRA account each year. If you find a more attractive IRA, open a new account for this year's contribution. You may even shift your old IRA fund to the higher yielding IRA.

- Some financial organizations offer IRAs that allow investment choices, a good option to look for. Then monitor your investments and move them around to get higher yields.

Once every 12 months you can withdraw your funds from your IRA, and as long as you put the same amount into another IRA within 60 days, you are not taxed on the withdrawal. With careful timing, this can give you a brief period to use your IRA funds once a year.

Suppose that dummy holds

A K-10-x in a suit and you have J-x in front of it. When declarer leads the suit, it costs you nothing to play the jack. If declarer holds nine cards missing the queen, he might come back to hand and take a losing finesse for the queen rather than play for the drop.

In the trade, that is known as the "idiot's finesse," because West is jeopardizing a sure trick in the suit if he started with Q-J-x—declarer is unlikely to take a first-round finesse if West plays low. However, an interesting version of the idiot's finesse cropped up in the Vanderbilt Team Championship at the recent Spring North American Championships, and declarer was certainly no idiot—he was a many-time national champion.

West led the queen of clubs and East won the ace to shift to a diamond. Declarer played the queen but West did not cover, thereby depriving declarer of a later entry to his hand in diamonds. Now when declarer led a trump, West put up the jack.

In this situation West might play an honor from Q-J-x to protect a trump trick because South, more than likely, has no fast re-entry to his hand. Declarer thought for some time, but he finally decided to play East for a 1147 distribution. He cashed the ace of hearts and, when the jack fell from East, he tried to get to his hand with the ten of hearts to take a trump finesse. East was delighted to ruff with the queen and claim down one.

In the other room, North-South got no further than five spades. So West's deceptive play gained 11 International Match Points for his team.

Edison draws Arcadia in 4-A opener; Barons meet No. 1 team in the nation

By ROGER CARLSON
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

The road to Anaheim Stadium begins Friday for several Orange Coast area high school baseball teams — although roadblocks appear to be in every direction.

Sunset League champion Edison draws perennial power Arcadia, Fountain Valley must travel to No. 1 seeded Notre Dame of Sherman Oaks, and Ocean View has a tough assignment — traveling to St. John Bosco in the first round of the CIF 4-A playoffs.

On the 2-A level Irvine High's

Vaqueros host Diamond Bar with the winner advancing against the same bracket which houses No. 1 seeded Capistrano Valley, the defending champion.

And, Woodbridge High's Warriors, who got into the 2-A playoffs by virtue of winning out on a coin flip, must go up against visiting Saddleback High Wednesday (3:15) in a special wild card game — with the winner qualifying for a first round berth at No. 2 seeded Santa Fe.

El Toro, the Sea View League champion, has drawn Laguna Hills, which finished in second in the South

Capute is 7-1 with a 1.93 ERA and Werhelow has a 3-1 record and an ERA of 0.95.

Notre Dame is 24-0 and has been ranked No. 1 in the nation by USA

St. John Bosco, 15-5 and runner-up to Notre Dame in the Del Rey League, also has strong credentials — including shortstop Paul White (.400), first baseman Paul Ni Cassio (.556), third baseman Kris Jondle (.340) and Ray Griego (.394), a catcher-outfielder.

Angels 4-14 vs. Oriole

BALTIMORE (AP) — The Baltimore Orioles prevailed, as the past records of the opposing pitchers indicated, but it wasn't easy.

Scott McGregor, who has a 14-4 lifetime mark against the Angels, limited the Angels to five hits and pitched the Orioles to a 4-1 victory Monday night.

Geoff Zahn matched McGregor on almost even terms through seven innings, but in the end his career record against Baltimore dropped to 2-11.

"I pitched well enough to win," said Zahn, now 4-3 for the season, "but Scotty pitched a great game."

Form also held for Rich Dauer, an old Zahn nemesis who has a .405 lifetime batting average against the Angels left-handed.

Dauer, who entered the game with a .226 average and was 3-for-26 in seven previous contests, got well in a hurry against Zahn. He doubled home two runs in the third inning, and his single launched a two-run rally which finished Zahn in the eighth.

McGregor, 5-3 after winning his fourth in a row, yielded a two-out RBI double to Juan Beniquez in the fourth and then pitched out of trouble while nursing a 2-1 lead in the eighth.

Canadian title won by Bohay

VANCOUVER, B.C. — Gary Bohay, a product of Fountain Valley High and Arizona State University, swept to the Canadian national wrestling championship Saturday — winning the 62 kilo (136.5 pounds) title with a 6-2 decision over Bob Robinson in the finals.

Bohay earned a berth in the finals with two superior decisions (a 12-point lead ended each match), once by a fall and another by disqualification when his opponent was called for stalling three times while losing, 3-0.

The victory means Bohay enters the Olympic Trials for the Canadian team on May 23 within a field of four (the three finalists at the national championships and another to be decided) with the necessity of beating each of his opponents once.

Absent from the competition was three-time Canadian Olympian Egan Beller, who did not wrestle because of an injured neck.

Except for Bohay, everyone else must defeat their opponents twice in order to become the Canadian representative at the 1984 Olympics in the 62 kilo field.

"So," says Bohay, "I have some room for error. Hopefully I won't need any extra chances. Just three more matches and I'm on the team."

A Dodger story about the one that got away

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Charles Hudson, the Philadelphia pitcher who left the game in the ninth inning for a pinch-hitter, said of the Phillies' dramatic 3-2 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers, "That's what you call a big-league win."

Los Angeles Manager Tom Lasorda would probably call it something else.

Jerry Reuss had thoroughly dominated the Phillies through eight innings, allowing only two hits and facing just one batter over the minimum.

Reuss took a 2-0 lead into the ninth inning on the strength of Franklin Stubbs' first major-league home run.

But it all unraveled in the Phillies' last at-bat.

Reuss gave up his third hit of the game to lead off the ninth, a solid single by Ivan DeJesus. Luis Aguayo followed with an infield roller down the third-base line and Juan Samuel knocked Reuss out of the box with a single to left that scored DeJesus.

"The guy was pitching not a good game, but an exceptional game" Lasorda said of Reuss.

Reliever Tom Neidenfuer, who pitched three strong innings of relief on Sunday, gave up a sacrifice bunt to Garry Maddox that advanced the runners.

Neidenfuer intentionally walked Mike Schmidt to load the bases, and pinch-hitter Von Hayes hit a grounder to Stubbs at first. Stubbs, in his haste to throw home, dropped the ball, allowing Aguayo to score to make it 2-2.

"If he throws home, he's got at least one out, maybe two," Lasorda said. "He had the ball and then just dropped it."

With the bases still full, Neidenfuer got two quick strikes on pinch-hitter Len Matuszek, then hit him on the left forearm to force in the go-ahead run.

"I saw that on the replay, and that pitch wasn't more than four inches inside," Neidenfuer said. "I thought it hit the end of the bat."

The victory was the fourth straight for the Phillies.

"We're starting to roll," said Philadelphia Manager Paul Owens. "To win games like that, especially on the road, really gives you momentum."

Hudson pitched an excellent game, his best of the year, and it would have been a tough one to lose," Owens said.

"That happens," Reuss said. "It's hard to take. Something like that happens maybe once a year."

Until the ninth, Reuss had allowed just a fourth-inning single by Samuel and a sixth-inning single by John Wockenbus.

Hudson, 4-2, allowed four hits in eight innings and Al Holland pitched the ninth to record his seventh save.

Soling, star classes scrambled

Long, cold day hurts Sailors in quest for Olympic berths

By ALMON LOCKABEY
Daily Pilot Boating Writer

LONG BEACH — The winds blew off the Long Beach breakwater Monday, but from several different directions. Consequently, sailors in the Soling and Star classes competing for berths on the Olympic yachting team had a long, cold day on the water.

The first start for the three-man, 27-foot Soling Class had to be aborted because of a drastic windshift, just before the start for the two-man, 22½-foot Star Class. It was nearly two hours before the southerly wind settled down enough for the race committee to get off a fair start.

When it was all over, shortly before 6 p.m., there were some surprises in both classes which scrambled the standings after three races.

Ed Baird of St. Petersburg, Florida was first to finish in the Soling Class and moved into third place in the standings behind Dave Curtis, Marblehead, Mass., and Robbie Haines, San Diego, who had split first place wins in the first two races.

Curtis leads the class with finishes of 8½ for 17 penalty points under the Olympic scoring system. Haines has finishes of 1-2-12 for 21.0 points, and Baird has 6-5-1 for 21.7 points.

Winner in the Star Class was John Dane III of Escatawpa, Miss., to take over sole possession of first place with 23.0 points to 23.7 for Alex Smigelski of Mount Arlington, N.J.. Mark Reynolds of San Diego had a poor 9th place finish, dropping him to third in the standings with 25.0 points.

Peter Wright of Melrose Park, Ill., one of the pre-series favorites, fouled out to spoil his sixth and first place finishes in the first two races, dropping him to eighth in the standings with 45.7 penalty points.

It should be noted, however, that skippers will be allowed to throw out their worst two races in scoring the 10-race series, so early scoring is not particularly significant.

Suns' Lucas ailing; Lakers go for No. 2

INGLEWOOD (AP) — The Phoenix Suns might be without starting forward Maurice Lucas tonight when they challenge the red-hot Lakers in the second game of the Western Conference championship series.

Dr. Paul Steingard, the Suns' team physician, said Monday that Lucas was suffering from acute bursitis under the right heel. Although Lucas was undergoing treatment, he was listed as doubtful for tonight's game.

Lucas complained of pain in the heel after Saturday's opener of the best-of-seven National Basketball Association playoff series.

The 6-9 veteran scored 12 points, grabbed six rebounds and had five assists in the game, won by the Lakers 110-94.

If Lucas can't play, Phoenix Coach John MacLeod said Charles Pittman probably would start in his place.

Pressure defense and depth continue to be among the key for the Lakers, who will be shooting for their ninth victory in 10 playoff games.

The Lakers forced 24 turnovers in beating the Suns in the playoff opener.

Three reserves scored in double figures. Of them, Bob McAdoo, led the Lakers in scoring with 20 points. "The people they've got coming off the bench are starter types to replace starters," said MacLeod. "They have eight or nine starters . . . a lot of weapons."

The Suns stayed close for 28 minutes before Los Angeles' pressure defense helped the Lakers take control.

"This is where the depth of this team becomes such a great asset," said Bill Bertka, the Lakers' assistant coach. "Throughout the playoffs, we've been able to rotate fresh, quality players at our opponents."

"No one likes to be pressured, have a man right in front of him all the time, and it took its toll. There's nothing the Suns can do to change that, either. What they have to do is not make mistakes with the ball."

Phoenix guard Walter Davis believes that for the Suns to have a chance, they must deal more successfully with the pressure.

"There's no doubt that we have to execute a lot better," said Davis, who sat out 16 minutes of the first half of the opening game with three personal fouls. "There were certain plays we wanted to run that they prevented. That has to change."

NCAA goes hard on Oregon State's basketball team

From AP dispatches

CORVALLIS — The National Collegiate Athletic Association has ordered Oregon State to return $342,000 in post-season basketball revenue and remove two basketball scholarships for one year because of NCAA rule violations, the university announced Monday.

The NCAA also placed the university on probation for one year, but did not make the school's athletic teams ineligible for television or post-season playoff appearances.

University President Robert MacVicar revealed the sanctions at a meeting of the school's Board of Intercollegiate Athletics. He said the university would not appeal the ruling.

"Obviously, I'm disappointed that the situation ever occurred in the first place," MacVicar said in an interview after the meeting. "But under the circumstances I believe we are being treated fairly."

The $342,000 was the amount of revenue the university earned in its 1982 NCAA tournament appearance, when the Beavers advanced to the West regional finals.

The NCAA probe uncovered evidence that members of the team sold complimentary tickets during the tournament in violation of NCAA rules. The school also must forfeit victories during the 1982 playoffs, MacVicar said.

MacVicar said he will point out to NCAA officials that about 40 percent of the $342,000 was passed on to other members of the Pacific 10 Conference under conference regulations.

Bandits drop Outlaws, 48-21

TAMPA, Fla. — John Reaves passed for a team-record 378 yards and four touchdowns Monday night to lead the Tampa Bay Bandits to a 48-21 United States Football League victory over the Outlaws.

The triumph was the sixth straight for the 9-3 Bandits, who trail Birmingham by one game in the Southern Division, and spoiled the homecoming of Oklahoma quarterback Doug Williams, who played five seasons with the Tampa Bay Buccaneers of the National Football League.

Reaves, the fourth-rated passer in the Eastern Conference when the night began, connected on 22 of 31 attempts and hurled scoring passes to Marvin Harvey, Spencer Jackson, Eric Truvillion and Gary Anderson. Harvey also caught TD passes from Anderson, a running back, and Truvillion, a wide receiver.

Berra's homer ignites Pirates

Dale Berra cracked a game-winning solo homer, and Jason Thompson hit a two-run shot as Pittsburgh, behind the pitching of Jose DeLeon, edged Houston, 3-2. DeLeon gave up just three hits in eight innings before Kent Tekulve came on. The Pirates ended a three-game losing streak. Tim Raines hit a two-run homer and doubled home the winning run in the top of the 10th inning as Montreal handed San Diego its fifth straight loss, 7-6. The Expos, who led 6-1 at one point, also got a homer from Gary Carter, and Alan Wiggins and Terry Kennedy homered for San Diego.

Niebro (6-1) paces Yankee win

Phil Niebro pitched eight innings for his sixth American League victory in seven decisions, as New York handed Oakland its sixth loss in seven games with a 3-1 victory Monday night. Omar Moreno hit a two-run triple in the seventh inning for the Yankees. Niebro, registering his 274th career victory, yielded only four hits in eight innings before giving way to Dave Righetti, who got the final three outs for his third save. Jim Rice belted a two-run homer in the first inning, and Bob Ojeda and Bob Stanley teamed on a three-hitter as Boston broke a three-game losing streak with a 6-1 victory over Cleveland. Ojeda gave up just two hits, and Stanley held the Indians to one hit over the final three innings. Dave Bergman tripled home a run with one out in the bottom of the eighth inning to break a 5-5 tie, and Detroit defeated Seattle, 7-5. Lou Whitaker singled home an insurance run. The Mariners had tied the score 5-5 with two runs in the top half of the inning on Larry Milbourne's pinch-hit single and a double-play grounder by Bob Kearney. Tom Seaver pitched his first American League shutout, checking Kansas City on five hits, and Scott Fletcher singled in one run and scored another to lead the Chicago White Sox to a 2-0 victory over Kansas City. The victory was the 277th of Seaver's career and halted Kansas City's three-game winning streak.

Chandler still in serious state

INDIANAPOLIS — Race car driver Michael Chandler of Dana Point, whose car slammed into the third-turn wall during practice for the Indianapolis 500, remained in serious but stable condition Monday at Methodist Hospital.

Chandler was unconscious with a severe head injury and remained in the intensive care unit.

Hospital spokeswoman Katherine Walsh-Miller said Chandler had been taken off oxygen and was breathing room air.

She also said Chandler's doctors had determined that surgery will not be necessary at this time. "He is doing as well as can be expected," she said.

Politics brush Olympic flame

Relay continues onward after stop at White House

WASHINGTON (AP) — Like a symbol of the troubled Games to which it is bound, the Olympic flame had a brush with politics at the White House on Monday, and President Reagan was momentarily left holding the torch.

Reagan was kept waiting for 12 minutes as the Olympic torch relay made its way with police escort through Washington's rush-hour traffic. Finally, at 5:12 p.m., former Olympic gymnast Kurt Thomas appeared, jogging effortlessly uphill across the South Grounds of the White House to meet the president and the next torchbearer, Special Olympian Charlotte Pearson, outside the diplomatic entrance to the mansion.

Thomas held the torch aloft and unswerving, its propane-fueled flame flickering in a strong breeze, as Reagan read a brief speech referring only indirectly to the Soviet-led boycott of the summer Games in Los Angeles.

"We will fulfill our responsibilities," the president promised, responding to Soviet charges that the United States could not guarantee the safety of their athletes. "Athletes and Olympic officials of all countries will find a warm welcome in Los Angeles and will be treated equally and without discrimination."

"As you know, the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee and the International Olympic Committee have done everything possible to create a hospitable climate in which all participants will be able to perform to the best of their ability. And I have instructed agencies of the federal government to cooperate fully with Olympic and local officials to ensure the safety of all participants."

Earlier in the day, Reagan had branded the official Soviet reason for pulling out of the games "absolutely false."

When Reagan had finished, Thomas touched his torch to an identical one held by Pearson. But it didn't catch.

They tried again. Still nothing.

Thomas handed his torch, the one with the brightly burning flame, to Reagan, who held it while the former Olympian tried to adjust the specially designed standard of his fellow runner.

Finally, after a long, seemingly endless, third try, the flame on Pearson's torch flickered to life, and down the driveway she ran, disappearing into the crush of downtown traffic just outside the White House gates.

After she had gone, and after Reagan had paused for a few minutes to shake hands with various Olympic Committee officials and invited guests before going back inside the mansion, an official of the Olympic Torch Relay sponsored by AT&T was kneeling under a tree a few yards from the crowd, still trying to extinguish the stubborn flame on Thomas' used torch.

eighth and advanced on Rod Carew's sacrifice bunt.

But with the potential tying run in scoring position, McGregor fanned Reggie Jackson for the second time and retired Doug DeCinces on an infield pop.

"He threw Reggie offspeed stuff and then turned up the dial and threw an 85 mile-an-hour fastball in on his hands," said Baltimore pitching coach Ray Miller. "Reggie couldn't catch up to it."

"You can't be afraid of your fastball," said McGregor, who threw the fastball for 35 strikes in 39 attempts while making just 102 pitches. "You can't stay in this league without one."

"The whole key to changing speeds is to let the hitter know you can throw something over at anytime, and that will let your fastball get by him a couple of times," McGregor said.

In addition to his two strikeouts, Jackson had two singles, the first launching the Angels' lone rally which ended when Dick Schofield flied out with the bases loaded.

The performance typified Jackson's career experience against McGregor. He has a .305 lifetime average with five homers, but he also has fanned 18 times in 57 at bats.

The victory was the 14th in 17 games for the Orioles, who have dropped 1½ games further off the pace of first-place Detroit in the AL East during the streak. During the same period, the Tigers are 18-4.

The Angels have dropped six of its last seven decisions.

Maulers looking for coach

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Pittsburgh Maulers may hire a permanent head coach before the current United States Football League season ends, club President Paul Martha said Monday.

The Maulers have lost twice since interim head Coach Ellis Rainsberger was appointed April 28. Former Coach Joe Pendry was fired following a 2-8 start when he refused to attend a meeting of team officials called by club owner Edward J. DeBartolo.

"That's a possibility," Martha said, when asked if a coach will be hired soon. "We have had some preliminary discussions."

The Maulers, expected to be among the top USFL expansion franchises this season, are tied for the worst record in the league.

Rainsberger, formerly the head coach at Kansas State, previously said he didn't plan on being a candidate for the job. But Martha said he has been impressed with the job Rainsberger has done, despite the Maulers' 47-26 loss to the Houston Gamblers last Saturday.

World class swimmers converge

Caulkins, Carey top MV card for Swim Meet of Champions

Tracy Caulkins and Rick Carey headline a major swimming invitational at Mission Viejo's Marguerite Center, beginning Thursday — the Swim Meet of Champions — a four-day meet under the banner of Speedo and DuPont.

In all there are 10 world record holders on the agenda. Caulkins, who won the women's high point award at the 1983 Swim Meet of Champions, with seven first place finishes, has captured 48 national titles in his career.

Carey, who is also 21, set a world record in the 100-meter backstroke at the 1983 Pan-Am Games, where he was also a gold medalist in the 200 back.

There will be over 600 competitors, from the United States, Canada, Brazil, New Zealand, France and Mexico. "It'll be a preview of the swimmers who will represent the United States and the world in the Olympics this summer," says Mark Schubert, the meet's director and the head coach of the Mission Viejo Nadadores.

Among the national and world record holders competing:

- Bill Barrett, 24, who holds the American standard in the 200 individual medley — meters and yards.
- Alex Baumann of Canada, in the 200-meter individual medley.
- Jeanne Childs, 24, a Floridian in the 200 breast.
- Tiffany Cohen, 17, of the Nadadores, a distance starlet.

- Rowdy Gaines, 25, world record holder in the 100 and 200 freestyles.
- Matt Gribble, 22, American record holder in the 100 butterfly.
- Nancy Hogshead, 22, 1983 Comeback Swimmer of the Year.

Stop 'domino' effect

Ueberroth says he wants to convince other nations not to boycott Olympics

From AP dispatches

The president of the Los Angeles Olympic Committee, in the face of Soviet insistence that their pullout from the Summer Games is "irrevocable," says he hopes to stem the "domino" effect of other nations joining the boycott.

"We owe it to other athletes from other countries who want to be here to try and reverse" the Soviets' efforts to get others to join them, Peter Ueberroth said Monday. "We'll use resources and we'll use energy because we owe it to the U.S. athletes."

Ueberroth, also saying he has not completely given up on the Soviets coming to Los Angeles, will try to get them to reverse their decision at Lausanne, Switzerland, on Friday, where the International Olympic Committee has called an emergency meeting. The Soviets have announced that they also will attend the meeting, but their officials insist they won't change their decision to stay out of the Los Angeles Games.

Ueberroth said Olympics officials had discussed the possibility of extending the June 2 deadline for declaration of participation in the Games, but that decision remained up to the IOC.

Asked what he will tell the Soviets, Ueberroth replied:

"We will say some nice things and we will say some cooperative things, but we will also say that we were insulted by some of the things (they said), such as that we would try to drug their athletes."

Ueberroth also expressed concern about the list of boycotting nations growing. Seven other countries — East Germany, Bulgaria, Vietnam, Laos, Mongolia, Czechoslovakia and Afghanistan — followed the Soviets' lead in withdrawing from the Games.

"They are trying to influence the better part of the globe," Ueberroth said of the Soviets — a charge that was denied Monday at a news conference by Marat Gramov, chairman of the Soviet Union's National Olympic Committee.

While Ueberroth said he will try to change the Soviets' minds, it's not likely judging by Gramov's statements at the news conference.

He said the withdrawal decision was final, and blamed it on the Reagan Administration.

Gramov reiterated Soviet concerns about U.S. protest groups that planned demonstrations at the Games and about the possibility of defections among his nation's athletes and trainers. He reinstated charges that Western intelligence has drugged Soviets to make them defect, charges that the U.S. State Department have called preposterous.

"This decision of ours is irrevocable," said Gramov, who also holds the cabinet-level post of chairman of the Government Sports Committee. He insisted the withdrawal was not politically motivated and that it wasn't revenge for the U.S.-led boycott of the 1980 Summer Olympics in Moscow.

While taking his hard-line stand against the U.S., Gramov used a softer approach with the IOC. Not only have the Soviets agreed to attend the IOC meeting in Lausanne, but Gramov walked the line of diplomacy when asked if his nation would stage a counter-Olympics.

"We, in principle, are against all alternative, parallel games, or any other kind of games seen as a counterbalance to the Los Angeles Olympics," Gramov said.

Relaxed Johncock seeks 3rd Indy win

Race car driver wants to forget '83 frustrations

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Gordon Johncock, coming off a year filled with disappointment, is more relaxed as he prepares to try for a second time to join the select group of three-time Indianapolis 500 winners.

"The race car that I had last year had a lot to do with it," said Johncock, referring to the frustrating May he spent at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway in 1983 after winning the closest race in Indy history the previous year.

"We just could never get the car working well," he said of the Pat Patrick Wildcat that placed 14th here last year. "The car wasn't consistent. You never knew what the car was going to do. We wrecked three of them during the month (May) last year. The car was just no good."

This year Johncock, 47, is driving one of the new English-built March race cars for the Patrick Team. And, on the first of four days of qualifications for the May 27 race, he placed it in the middle of the second row with an average speed of 207.545 mph for his four-lap, 10-mile qualification run.

"The car's working pretty decent right now," Johncock said Monday as he tested the car with a race-day setup.

"The car seems to be consistent. We're just breaking the tires in and trying various little things that could make a difference in the race, getting the staggers set on our tires and getting ready for the race so we don't have to do it all on 'Carburetion Day.'"

Johncock was referring to the final two-hour practice session on Thursday, May 20, the only time during the week before the race that the cars are allowed on the 2½-mile Speedway oval.

The veteran driver, who won here in 1973 and again in 1982, isn't really satisfied with the starting position of his STP-sponsored car.

"I think we should have been in the middle of the front row without too much trouble," he said. "I don't know if I could have beaten Tom (Sneva) or not, but I should have turned an average of 208 or 209."

Sneva won the pole as the fastest Indy qualifier with a record average of 210.029, recording a record 210.689 mph on his final lap.

Meanwhile, Teo Fabi of Italy, the 1983 Indianapolis 500 rookie of the year and former record pole-winner, said his car began to show signs of improvement on Monday.

"It's too late, but the car is much better now," said Fabi after clocking a lap of 208.429 mph Monday.

The 5-4 driver was dismayed when the best he could do in his qualifying effort Saturday was an average of 203.600 — nearly five miles an hour slower than his 1983 performance.

"The car handled terrible," Fabi said after putting his new Cosworth-powered March in the lineup in the middle of the fifth row. "We had a handling problem with it all week. We're not sure what it is."

Fabi had intended to be on his way to France after the opening weekend of time trials to compete in Sunday's French Grand Prix. He said, though, he would not make the trip "until this car is right."

Ticket drive helping Twins

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The Minnesota Twins may be staying put until at least 1988, thanks to more than $6 million of corporate and public money thrown into a massive, lease-binding ticket drive.

But the ticket buyout and the future of major league baseball in Minnesota still hinges on one thing: The average peanut-chomping baseball fan can't quit buying tickets in hope of getting in free.

Harvey Mackay, the Minneapolis envelope executive who's leading the drive, will be at the Metrodome ticket window today before the Twins-Toronto game.

Seattle Slew connection

Swale is three-year-old son of '77 Triple Crown winner

BALTIMORE (AP) — The 109th running of the Preakness Stakes at Pimlico Race Course on Saturday has a dual Seattle Slew connection.

Claiborne Farm's Swale, winner of the Kentucky Derby and the favorite in the 1 3/16-mile Preakness, is the 3-year-old son of Seattle Slew, the 1977 Triple Crown champion.

Should Swale emulate his sire and win the Triple Crown, it would match a father-son achievement posted only once previously. Gallant Fox won the Triple Crown in 1930, a feat duplicated by his son, Omaha, in 1935.

Among the eight or nine rivals trying block Swale's quest to become the 12th Triple Crown winner is Welcome Farm's Play On, whose trainer Billy Turner engineered Seattle Slew's Triple Crown triumph before being dismissed in a dispute with his owners.

Swale and three other colts he whipped in the Derby arrived at Pimlico Monday after a flight from Louisville, increasing to seven the number of likely Preakness competitors on the grounds.

Robert Masterson's Wind Flyer, runner-up in Saturday's Illinois Derby, arrived earlier Monday after a 14-hour van trip from Chicago.

Accompanying Swale were Kenneth Opstein's Gate Dancer, Loblolly Farm's Pine Circle, and William F. Lucas' Taylor's Special.

Gate Dancer, who was dropped from fourth to fifth while becoming the first Derby horse ever disqualified, will be ridden by Angel Cordero Jr. in the Preakness. Eddie Delahoussaye was aboard in the Derby, when Gate Dancer was guilty of interference in the stretch.

Pine Circle was sixth in the Derby and Taylor's Special was a disappointing 13th after winning the Blue Grass Stakes and the Louisiana Derby. Bill Shoemaker has been named to ride Taylor's Special in the Preakness.

Another of Swale's Kentucky Derby victims, Bwamazon Farm's seventh-place finisher Fight Over, was galloped two miles on Monday. He has been at Pimlico since two days after the Kentucky Derby.

Irvine Feiner's Raja's Shark and Alan S. Kline's S.S. Hot Sauce also are considered probable Preakness starters, while First Edition Stable's Pac Soldier moved from doubtful to possible after working a mile in 1:37 2/5 at Pimlico on Monday.

"We'll have to see how he comes out of the work," said trainer Bill Boniface, father of J. William Boniface, who saddled Deputed Testimony to victory in last year's Preakness.

KC picks McKinney

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Jack McKinney, whose Indiana Pacers finished with the worst record in the National Basketball Association the past two seasons, was named coach of the Kansas City Kings today.

McKinney, who was fired by the Pacers at the end of the 1983-84 season, succeeds Cotton Fitzsimmons, who jumped to the San Antonio Spurs after his contract expired at the end of the season.

"The Kings needed someone of good coaching caliber, and I believe I'm a good coach," said McKinney, 49, who has a career coaching record of 134-207.

"I don't want to look any way but forward, upward. Things have happened bad behind me but that's what made me what I am here today," he said.

Joe Axelsson, president and general manager of the Kings, said McKinney "is as well prepared for this important position as it is possible to be."

Terms of his contract were not disclosed.

'Iron man' McHale top Sixth Man

BOSTON (AP) — He's an "iron man." He never has missed a game in four years as a pro. And he averages 31½ minutes a game.

But technically, big Kevin McHale is a backup center and forward on the Boston Celtics.

In that role, McHale was honored Monday as winner of the National Basketball Association's Sixth Man Award for the 1983-84 season.

"It's nice, but it really should be called the Red Auerbach Award," McHale said in recognition of the Celtics' president and general manager. "He started the sixth man."

Auerbach, the architect of Boston's 14 NBA championships, is credited with starting a major "sixth man" role when he was coach of the Celtics. His first "sixth man" superstar was Frank Ramsey. Then came John Havlicek. Both now are Hall of Famers.

McHale averaged 18.4 points and 7.4 rebounds as the only Boston player to appear in all 82 regular season games during the 1983-84 campaign. He started only 10 games.

Clippers want to make move?

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The San Diego Clippers are reportedly seeking the permission of the National Basketball Association to relocate the franchise to Los Angeles, a San Diego newspaper reported in today's editions.

Clippers president Alan Rosenblatt met in Dallas Monday with NBA Commissioner David Stern, reportedly to discuss the move, The San Diego Union said.

The Clippers attempted to move the franchise to Los Angeles two years ago, but were rebuffed by the league.

Adoption Guild tennis to money nears

23rd edition expanded to new format with eight divisions now being offered

The Adoption Guild of Southern Orange County's 23rd annual tennis tournament is scheduled to begin May 26 with a three-day tour, then finish up with the semifinals and finals at Newport Beach Tennis Club June 2-3.

The first weekend's matches will be played at the Balboa Bay Club, John Wayne Tennis Club, Irvine Racquet Club, Palisades, Mesa Verde and Newport Beach tennis clubs.

Entries are expected to number close to the 600 doubles teams of last year, which came from San Francisco, Arizona, Bakersfield, Santa Barbara and San Diego, among other areas.

A new item in this edition will be a rating system which offers eight different divisions, rather than five. It is similar to the National Tennis Ratings program, which will more closely define the player's abilities.

The divisions will include Open, A+, A, B+, B, C+, C and D, raising the trophy awards from 60 to 96.

Dos Equis is again the sponsor and Manny Fernandez, president of Motezuma Imports, says a party will be held May 26 at the John Wayne Tennis Club, which he is hosting.

All proceeds go to benefit The Holy Family Services. Admission to the semifinals are $2 and finals $3. Juniors are $1.

Among the open entries are Jerry Van Linge, Tom Leonard, Bob Duesler, Ken Stuart, Steve Simon, Susie Warfield, Gail Glasglov, Dick and Gretchen Miller, Mario Parker, Kay Anderle, Kathy May, Barbara Halquist De Groot, Julie Hayward, Sue Lance and Linda Malloy.

Van Linge and Leonard won the men's open title five consecutive years (1977-81) and Duesler is a previous winner on three occasions.

Stuart was one of the game's best-winning four U.S. titles and competing in the French Open and Wimbledon twice, and the U.S. Open seven times.

Simon is also a veteran of Wimbledon and Warfield, with Simon as a partner, won the Kodak Cup and has won the women's open in this tournament for four straight years, in addition to the mixed singles twice (with Simon).

Glasglov, the No. 2 ranked 16-year-old in the United States and No.

1 in doubles, is a veteran of the international circuit with titles in this tournament the past four years, mixed and women's competition.

The Millers recently captured the Lipton Tea Cup in Florida.

Holy Family Services, located at 1403 South Main Street in Santa Ana, is an organization which provides such services as counseling for natural parents whether they choose adoption or elect to keep their child, extended counseling to natural parents who need further help to fulfill the responsibility of being a parent, prevention of child abuse and neglect, foster care for children, and adoption.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Visits, relatives, trips, writing, contacts with exciting individuals make this a dynamic scenario. Imprint your own style, do some detective work, be aware of motives and unique methods. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius persons figure prominently.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Family tradition could be altered or broken. Cycle high and you'll earn more money than originally anticipated. Loved one talks about changing residence, revision career plans. Be diplomatic, strive to understand and to be mature.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Define terms, perfect techniques, get rid of superfluous material. Moon in your sign highlights personality, special appeals, correct timing, popularity and plaudits from peers and public. Pisces, Virgo individuals play outstanding roles.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): What appeared to be a loss will boomerang in your favor. Someone is working in your behalf behind the scenes. Romance is highlighted and you could be meeting object of your affections in clandestine manner. Another Capricorn figures prominently.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Wish comes true, popularity increases, you'll communicate with one at a distance, perhaps overseas. Focus on travel, romance, education and gain through dissemination of information. Aries, Libra natives figure in provocative scenario.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Stress independence, creativity, willingness to pioneer a project. Spotlight on career, goals, ambition and opportunity to achieve "business coup." A Leo individual plays key role, will help you make contacts, will prove a valuable ally.

HB drug suspect nabbed at LAX

FBI agents greet suspected cocaine kingpin after jet touches down from Puerto Vallarta

By STEVE MARBLE
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Alan Charles Mobley was five minutes out of Puerto Vallarta when he picked up a newspaper and got an idea what would be waiting for him when his jet touched down in Los Angeles early Monday evening. The Huntington Beach 24-year-old — traveling with his wife and sister — was greeted by FBI agents at the airport and led away in handcuffs. Bail is set at $10 million. Mobley is alleged to be one of the ringleaders of a major cocaine smuggling network that federal, state and local law enforcement officers say they smashed last weekend.

The cocaine ring, which purportedly had direct ties to Colombia, was responsible for bringing more than $500 million worth of the drug into Southern California in the past year, according to federal agents.

Agents arrested 21 people in the massive crackdown Saturday while others suspected of top-level involvement in the drug ring remain at large, possibly outside the country.

Drug agents raided wrong couple — A3.

Mobley reportedly had gone to the seaside resort town of Puerto Vallarta in Mexico with family members, including his mother, to celebrate Mother's Day prior to Saturday's raid.

According to one investigator, Mobley was unaware that his alleged drug empire had fallen apart until the Mexican jet he was a passenger on lifted out of Puerto Vallarta.

"My understanding is that the first he heard of it was when he picked up a newspaper during the flight," explained Huntington Beach Sgt. Carl Vidano, a key investigator in the mammoth drug sweep.

"I imagine he had something of a squirmy flight," commented one FBI agent.

Arrested along with Mobley was his wife, Aleyda Machado-Mobley, 24, and his sister, Cindy Lee Croley, 27, of Newport Beach. Both are alleged to have been active in the drug ring.

110 vintage autos crank their engines for $100,000 grand prize in Indianapolis

By KAREN E. KLEIN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

When the green flag drops Thursday morning and 110 vintage automobiles crank up and sputter off into the sunrise, bound for Indianapolis, Dennis Holland and his 1909 Buick racer will be there.

So will Bill Halliday and his 1936 Chevy, John Konwiser and his 1928 Rolls Royce Phantom I and Jennifer Goodheart, a.k.a. Ginni Withers of Fountain Valley, in her shocking pink 1906 Mitchell roadster.

All are Orange Coast residents and among the participants in the second annual Great American Race. The time-distance road rally covers 3,000 miles in nine days and is patterned after the movie, "The Great Race."

Holland, Costa Mesa's master shipbuilder, and his navigator,

Wayne Stanfield, 36, of Santa Ana, entered their black racing car in the Great Race, open to cars built in 1936 or before, last year. But having to push the car over the starting line turned out to be a bad omen.

They dropped out of the race for good in Phoenix when a motor pin broke.

This year, Holland said, his goal is to finish the race.

At the checkered flag waits a $100,000 first prize for the fastest car and $40,000 to be split among the three oldest cars to finish.

"The winning car gets to take a turn around the track at the Indy 500," Holland said with an enthusiastic grin.

While building an 18th-century-style Baltimore Clipper ship in the backyard might be enough for most people to take on, Holland said he has spent the past four months tearing down and rebuilding the four-cylinder, 50-horsepower engine of his Buick, the second car ever registered in Orange County.

The car, which sports a number "19" on the grill, belonged to brothers Boyd and Henley Ellis, who owned a

Report: Streets need repairs

By JEFF ADLER
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

More than half of all Orange County surface streets are in need of repair and more than a quarter require major repair, a politically charged report released Monday by the Orange County Transportation Commission has concluded.

The report, drafted by a commission pavement management task force formed in 1982, estimated it would cost $205 million to bring the county's surface-street system into good repair.

Members of the task force visually assessed the condition of 612 streets and highways in the county, or 52 percent of the 1,187 miles of the county's arterial streets. All told, the county and its 26 cities maintain 4,982 miles of arterial highways and local streets.

But the report — released just three weeks before voters will determine the fate of Proposition A, the one

Community college leaders say schools still 'a bargain'

Administrators say they're still offering quality education to county's students

By PHIL SNEIDERMAN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

The top administrators from Orange County's seven community colleges want to get two messages out to the public:

•Community college education will still be a bargain next fall, despite the new tuition fees to be charged.

•Community colleges still offer quality education, despite recent charges to the contrary.

To make their case, the county's community college presidents summoned reporters Monday to a rare, joint news conference at Santa Ana College. The officials said their goal was to correct some misconceptions about the two-year colleges.

Many people mistakenly believe the community college funding crisis ended earlier this year when the tuition bill was approved, observed Dr. Larry Stevens, chancellor of the Saddleback Community College District, which has campuses in Irvine and Mission Viejo.

Under this legislation, students taking six units or more will pay a $50-per-semester fee. For those taking less, the charge will be $5 per unit.

But Stevens described the new fees as "little more than a Band-Aid attempting to close a very serious wound."

To administer the new fee system, additional computers and clerical staff will be needed, he said. At the same time, colleges will no longer be

HB murder suspect's mental health cited

When the murder trial of 18-year-old Gabriel Deluca trial opened Monday in Westminster, attorneys didn't argue so much whether the Huntington Beach youth killed a 30-year-old female postal carrier. Instead, most of the attention was directed at the defendant's mental condition.

"We're here to find out why it happened," defense attorney John Dolan told jurors in Superior Court Judge Leonard H. McBride's courtroom in Westminster.

Dolan, who also called Deluca a

"troubled" youth, said he also will show jurors a 90-minute videotape of Deluca being interviewed by Costa Mesa police to reveal the young defendant's mental processes.

Deputy District Attorney Bryan Brown told jurors that Deluca

waited for postal carrier Ida Jean Haxton, a mother of two, in the entryway of his home.

Her body was found several hours after the attack on Jan. 3 in her green U.S. Postal Service car parked in a Costa Mesa church

After decade of debate, Irvine finally appears in reach of a city hall

Irvine, the master-planned city that has mapped out where every road, home, office and shrub will be placed beyond the year 2000, has wrestled for more than a decade on where to put the seat of government. It has no permanent city hall.

The 13-year-old city's first leaders decided policy in small quarters over an old bar called the Spritz Garden opposite UC Irvine.

Beer was brought up to quaff the thirst of city leaders during marathon sessions. Politicians had to compete to be heard over the blare of a juke box.

But only five years after incorporation, the bustling city staff had outstripped its over-the-store space.

By 1978, bureaucrats moved into a allowed to impose special charges such as health fees, even though they must still provide health services.

Despite the problems, Stevens said California's community college students still will be charged less than those in neighboring states. He noted that Washington state community college students pay $175 per quarter and generally enroll in three quarters per year. In Oregon, he said, the charge is $160 per quarter.

Constance Carroll, president of Saddleback's Mission Viejo campus, also said because of the elimination of other fees at the same time tuition is charged, "in some cases the cost of (a community college) education may be less than before."

She added that community colleges remain "the most affordable, most economical educational institutions to attend in California."

Dr. Lee Stevens, president of Golden West College, predicted that California's community colleges will actively recruit students for the coming year because 1984-85 attendance figures will be a guide for future state funding.

"If we fall short (in enrollment) in 1984-85, that will haunt us in the years to come," Stevens warned.

The Golden West president said the University of California and California State University systems have received much larger increases in state funding, partly because those systems have strong alumni networks and more political clout.

"We can't produce votes," he said of the community college system. "We're a fairly safe state agency that can be battered about without serious political consequences."

Dr. Ed Hart, president of Saddleback's Irvine campus, added, "What we're concerned about is a downward spiral (in enrollment and funding)."

Hart said some students may opt to take just five units per semester (costing $25), rather than six or more credits (costing $50).

The college officials said some students may be unaware that welfare recipients will not be charged tuition and that others who cannot afford the fees may be eligible for financial aid.

OLDER IS BETTER IN RACE...

6,000-acre bean farm in Costa Mesa.

Holland said the car placed fifth in a Los Angeles-to-Phoenix race in 1912.

He has photos of the car in its vintage racing days as well as pennants, news articles and even the drivers' license of one of the vehicle's drivers.

Holland said had his eye on the car, complete with brass headlamps and hickory-wood wheels, for 20 years before he could persuade its previous owner to sell it.

"The guy that owned it was the driver's stepson. When the driver died he told his son to sell it to someone in Orange County if he ever moved away," Holland said.

When asked why he would take on the additional challenge of car building when he only launched his 100-foot schooner late last year, he replied, "This is my therapy."

"I love the historical challenge of it. It was 70 years ago that this car was driven through that part of the country and now it will pass that way again," he said.

On Monday, he told rival racer Bill Halliday he would be tearing the car's engine down once or twice again before the race starts Thursday.

Halliday, of Newport Beach, said his goal is "to whip Dennis," in the race. "I think I have as good a chance as any" to win, Halliday said.

He bought and restored his '36 Chevy in 1966 and sold it three years ago to the Barn restaurant in Tustin, where it has been on display.

"I was restoring a 1940 Chevy when I found out the 1936 model was the newest that could enter. So I called up the restaurant and got them to loan me the car for the race," he said.

Halliday said he has "four or five" vintage Chevys at home, but none like the pearl gray and black touring car he will drive in the Great Race.

"It's a sedan delivery car built on a passenger chassis. They were mostly used as drug store delivery cars, or paint store delivery cars," he said.

The Great Race will start Thursday morning from the Sheraton Universal Hotel in Los Angeles and finish May 25 in Indianapolis, race coordinators said. Racers will make midday and overnight stops in Las Vegas, Flagstaff, Ariz.; Albuquerque, Amarillo, Texas; Dallas; Wichita, Kansas; St. Louis and Chicago.

STREETS NEED REPAIRS...

percent transportation sales tax increase — drew immediate fire from Proposition A opponents who accused the commission of using the report for pro-tax political purposes.

If passed, Proposition A would set aside about 20 percent of the estimated $5.4 billion the tax hike would raise over its 15-year life for local transportation projects that include arterial road maintenance.

Transportation commissioners, who authored the Proposition A tax plan, denied the report or the timing of its release was in any way related to the tax initiative or the pro-tax campaign.

The report determined that while the money available for street and road maintenance has remained constant over the last decade, the cost of repair has increased 230 percent.

The report noted that financial considerations have forced local governments to maintain streets on a 66-year cycle rather than the recommended 13-year maintenance schedule. In 1982-83, an estimated $36 million would have been needed to keep the maintenance program on a 13-year schedule, but only $7 million was spent by the county and all 26 cities, according to the report.

Because of the maintenance-funding shortfall, 59 percent of the pavement in the county is in need of some repair and 28 percent requires major repair or rebuilding.

Repairs needed range from minor work such as filling cracks on 30 percent of roads surveyed to more substantial repairs such as resurfacing, required on 20 percent of the roads reviewed. The most extensive repairs needed, partial reconstruction, was needed on 8 percent of the highways sampled, according to the report.

Among the six cities and unincorporated county areas surveyed, San Clemente needed more than 86 percent of its streets repaired, followed by Anaheim with 65 percent, the unincorporated county with 60 percent, Buena Park with 59 percent and Huntington Beach with 56.2 percent. Fountain Valley, the only other Orange Coast city surveyed, needs repairs on about 30 percent of its road system, the report concluded.

city hall-style trappings. It is, after all, only temporary.

Since then, a citizens group and city staff have eyed nearly every large chunk of land within city limits, sizing up its potential as a home for public buildings needed to serve a city of 200,000.

What was envisioned was a "City Center" — a governmental hub with a city hall, police station, county branch library, civic auditorium, school and water district headquarters, and centers for seniors and day care.

Residents even approved, in an advisory vote in 1981, a measure in support of building of a civic center.

Three land plots have been considered seriously: one near UCI, another at the city's geographic center between two residential villages, and a third within an ambitious commercial center planned by the Irvine Co. for the "Golden Triangle," land trapped within three freeways at the city's southeastern edge.

All died for a variety of reasons, shot down by high development costs, a shift in development patterns that still leaves unclear where "downtown" is, and lack of a council majority for any plan. The idea has been dormant since mid-1982 and Irvine continues to operate out of its temporary headquarters.

But on Thursday, Irvine's Planning Commission opens consideration anew on what city officials — with fingers crossed — think may be the permanent quarters for Irvine City Hall.

The advisory Civic Center Committee is supposed to describe its latest plan for 25 acres of farmland beside Culver Drive, south of the San Diego flood control channel.

"It's probably the least optimal, but it meets the minimum acceptable requirements," said Pat McDonald, a Hughes engineer who has worked on the committee since its inception in 1977.

The committee, revived in February, looked at three parcels within an 833-acre area that's called "village 14," the first major village being planned within the city since the mid-1970s.

The new village is bounded by the San Diego Freeway on the south, the Irvine Business Center on the east and by the village of Woodbridge on the west.

To be built over the next decade, it is to have 7,000 homes, 17,000 residents and 48 acres of parks, City Planner Paul Ireland explained recently.

Because it is close to a business and industrial center, the new village is intended as a rather dense housing area for workers. And it is being designed with major thoroughfares, pointed out Ray Catalano, a city planning commissioner and professor of social ecology at UCI. A city hall will only aggravate that congestion, he added.

"But the village shouldn't be sacrificed to traffic," Catalano said. "In some ways, we'll be reducing city hall-generated traffic," he believes, because the centrally located civic center would only draw people into residential sections.

The long-awaited proposal calls for a civic center within "the activity corridor," sandwiched between Alton Avenue and Barranca Parkway. The zone is supposed to act as a spine, linking the major industrial centers at either end of the city. Only about two miles of the backbone is complete, through Woodbridge.

"If the uses are integrated, people can use the center without having to drive all over the city," explained city staffer Pam Sheldon.

Sheldon said the committee dusted off $80,000 worth of plans drawn up but abandoned in 1982. Then a 146,000-square-foot building was sketched out with a $22.4 million price tag.

"The committee believes that the old building idea could fit on the new corner, Sheldon said.

McDonald, who has sat through more civic center meetings than he can count, said "the city is running out of choices."

He is disappointed that delays have diluted the city center idea. Now the Irvine Unified School District has an administration building under construction and the Irvine Ranch Water District has located elsewhere.

"No one seemed to be able to put it all together," former mayor Gaby Pryor observed. "I wanted to see it all built together. Our planned community is fragmented. We've lost an important focal point forever," she said.

Assistant City Manager Paul Brady remains optimistic that the central hub idea can still be realized.

The school and water districts "haven't foreclosed on the idea," Brady said. They could relocate later, he said.

And, by putting off the decision, city coffers are fatter with a $2 million civic center fund and the interim facility's property value has nearly doubled, Brady said.

"We can use this as a partial down payment," he said, in combination with other financing schemes, such as industrial bonds.

Two-term Councilman David Sills believes this plan, although still in its infancy, may finally put the controversy to rest.

"This has a good chance of succeeding because it may get three votes," Sills said.

He pointed out that a recent 5-0 council vote agreeing to at least consider the site "was the first show of unanimity" any plan has ever garnered.

The fire, which sent smoke pouring into the hotel's first floor banquet rooms and restaurant, was extinguished quickly but the total evacuation was called as a precaution by firefighters.

Ron Cribbet, the hotel's general manager, said the fire apparently started in an industrial clothes dryer and did not spread. He said he didn't know whether the piece of equipment had malfunctioned.

The evacuation, which guests described as orderly and calm, marked the first time the Marriott had been cleared since it opened in last August. The hotel has 500 rooms.

Hotel employees reportedly were able to douse the fire before Orange County firefighters arrived on the scene and asked for the evacuation. Guests and employees were alerted to the fire through the hotel's public address system.

Terry Morh and Jim Paulus, both attending a sales meeting on the hotel's first floor, said they did not smell any smoke but left the building after the announcement.

Hotel guests clustered around the hotel's pool after the evacuation and several sales groups continued their business meetings at the poolside.

MOBLEY NABBED FOR COCAINE...

From A1

Mobley, according to drug agents, was a small-time cocaine dealer who hit it big when he married into a family that assertedly had ties to the Colombian drug world.

Police said as far as they can determine, Mobley has never been arrested before. In fact, the only past offense Mobley could be linked to was a violation of a dog leash law in Newport Beach, one officer noted.

Mobley was to be arraigned today in federal court in Los Angeles along with his wife and sister. Fifteen of the 17 people arrested in Orange County on Saturday were arraigned Monday in Los Angeles with bails ranging as high as $2 million. Two others have not been charged.

One of the suspects remained in serious condition today at Fountain Valley Community Hospital. Ronald Ting, 26, of Corona del Mar, was shot in the chest early Saturday by FBI agents.

Ting, alleged to be one of Mobley's cocaine distributors, drew fire from an FBI agent after Ting pulled out a gun.

Two other suspected leaders in the smuggling ring still being sought are Heriberto Machado-Velasquez, 50, a Colombian national, and Octavio Grisales, 43, of New Jersey.

Four others alleged to be drug runners in the widespread operation also are being sought.

Death has been attributed to a blow to the head that caused massive hemorrhaging. A deputy coroner said there was no evidence of sexual assault although her blouse was ripped and her bra was pulled over her head when she was found.

Deluca, an Edison High School

dropout and a former welding student at Orange Coast College, has been described as a "loner" by neighbors.

He was arrested the day after the slaying after police and postal agents along with a pair of bloodhounds brought in from Texas retraced the mail woman's route that had taken her past the Deluca family's home on Jon Day Drive in Meredith Gardens neighborhood in southeast Huntington Beach.

An investigator reportedly found a five-inch hunting knife in the car.

Defense attorney Dolan said Deluca is a troubled youth with a history of mental illness. Deluca was intoxicated on tequila and marijuana when Haxton was assaulted, Dolan said.

If convicted, Deluca faces a maximum sentence of 25 years to life in state prison, attorneys said.

Older is better in second Great Race

110 vintage autos crank their engines for $100,000 grand prize in Indianapolis

By KAREN E. KLEIN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

When the green flag drops Thursday morning and 110 vintage automobiles crank up and sputter off into the sunrise, bound for Indianapolis, Dennis Holland and his 1909 Buick racer will be there.

So will Bill Halliday and his 1936 Chevy, John Konwiser and his 1928 Rolls Royce Phantom I and Jennifer Goodheart, a.k.a. Ginni Withers of Fountain Valley, in her shocking pink 1906 Mitchell roadster.

All are Orange Coast residents and among the participants in the second annual Great American Race. The time-distance road rally covers 3,000 miles in nine days and is patterned after the movie, "The Great Race."

Holland, Costa Mesa's master shipbuilder, and his navigator,

Wayne Stanfield, 36, of Santa Ana, entered their black racing car in the Great Race, open to cars built in 1936 or before, last year. But having to push the car over the starting line turned out to be a bad omen.

They dropped out of the race for good in Phoenix when a motor pin broke.

This year, Holland said, his goal is to finish the race.

At the checkered flag waits a $100,000 first prize for the fastest car and $40,000 to be split among the three oldest cars to finish.

"The winning car gets to take a turn around the track at the Indy 500," Holland said with an enthusiastic grin.

While building an 18th-century-style Baltimore Clipper ship in the backyard might be enough for most people to take on, Holland said he has spent the past four months tearing down and rebuilding the four-cylinder, 50-horsepower engine of his Buick, the second car ever registered in Orange County.

The car, which sports a number "19" on the grill, belonged to brothers Boyd and Henley Ellis, who owned a

Report: Streets need repairs

Of the Daily Pilot Staff

More than half of all Orange County surface streets are in need of repair and more than a quarter require major repair, a politically charged report released Monday by the Orange County Transportation Commission has concluded.

The report, drafted by a commission pavement management task force formed in 1982, estimated it would cost $205 million to bring the county's surface-street system into good repair.

Members of the task force visually assessed the condition of 612 streets and highways in the county, or 52 percent of the 1,187 miles of the county's arterial streets. All told, the county and its 26 cities maintain 4,982 miles of arterial highways and local streets.

But the report — released just three weeks before voters will determine the fate of Proposition A, the one

Community college leaders say schools still 'a bargain'

Administrators say they're still offering quality education to county's students

By PHIL SNEIDERMAN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

The top administrators from Orange County's seven community colleges want to get two messages out to the public:

•Community college education will still be a bargain next fall, despite the new tuition fees to be charged.

•Community colleges still offer quality education, despite recent charges to the contrary.

To make their case, the county's community college presidents summoned reporters Monday to a rare, joint news conference at Santa Ana College. The officials said their goal was to correct some misconceptions about the two-year colleges.

Many people mistakenly believe the community college funding crisis ended earlier this year when the tuition bill was approved, observed Dr. Larry Stevens, chancellor of the Saddleback Community College District, which has campuses in Irvine and Mission Viejo.

Under this legislation, students taking six units or more will pay a $50-per-semester fee. For those taking less, the charge will be $5 per unit.

But Stevens described the new fees as "little more than a Band-Aid attempting to close a very serious wound."

To administer the new fee system, additional computers and clerical staff will be needed, he said. At the same time, colleges will no longer be

HB murder suspect's mental health cited

When the murder trial of 18-year-old Gabriel Deluca trial opened Monday in Westminster, attorneys didn't argue so much whether the Huntington Beach youth killed a 30-year-old female postal carrier. Instead, most of the attention was directed at the defendant's mental condition.

"We're here to find out why it happened," defense attorney John Dolan told jurors in Superior Court Judge Leonard H. McBride's courtroom in Westminster.

Dolan, who also called Deluca a

"troubled" youth, said he also will show jurors a 90-minute videotape of Deluca being interviewed by Costa Mesa police to reveal the young defendant's mental processes.

Deputy District Attorney Bryan Brown told jurors that Deluca

waited for postal carrier Ida Jean Haxton, a mother of two, in the entryway of his home.

Her body was found several hours after the attack on Jan. 3 in her green U.S. Postal Service car parked in a Costa Mesa church

After decade of debate, Irvine finally appears in reach of a city hall

Irvine, the master-planned city that has mapped out where every road, home, office and shrub will be placed beyond the year 2000, has wrestled for more than a decade on where to put the seat of government. It has no permanent city hall.

The 13-year-old city's first leaders decided policy in small quarters over an old bar called the Spritz Garden opposite UC Irvine.

Beer was brought up to quaff the thirst of city leaders during marathon sessions. Politicians had to compete to be heard over the blare of a juke box.

But only five years after incorporation, the bustling city staff had outstripped its over-the-store space. By 1978, bureaucrats moved into a allowed to impose special charges such as health fees, even though they must still provide health services.

Despite the problems, Stevens said California's community college students still will be charged less than those in neighboring states. He noted that Washington state community college students pay $175 per quarter and generally enroll in three quarters per year. In Oregon, he said, the charge is $160 per quarter.

Constance Carroll, president of Saddleback's Mission Viejo campus, also said because of the elimination of other fees at the same time tuition is charged, "in some cases the cost of (a community college) education may be less than before."

She added that community colleges remain "the most affordable, most economical educational institutions to attend in California."

Dr. Lee Stevens, president of Golden West College, predicted that California's community colleges will actively recruit students for the coming year because 1984-85 attendance figures will be a guide for future state funding.

"If we fall short (in enrollment) in 1984-85, that will haunt us in the years to come," Stevens warned.

The Golden West president said the University of California and California State University systems have received much larger increases in state funding, partly because those systems have strong alumni networks and more political clout.

"We can't produce votes," he said of the community college system. "We're a fairly safe state agency that can be battered about without serious political consequences."

Dr. Ed Hart, president of Saddleback's Irvine campus, added, "What we're concerned about is a downward spiral (in enrollment and funding)."

Hart said some students may opt to take just five units per semester (costing $25), rather than six or more credits (costing $50).

The college officials said some students may be unaware that welfare recipients will not be charged tuition and that others who cannot afford the fees may be eligible for financial aid.

6,000-acre bean farm in Costa Mesa. Holland said the car placed fifth in a Los Angeles-to-Phoenix race in 1912.

He has photos of the car in its vintage racing days as well as pennants, news articles and even the drivers' license of one of the vehicle's drivers.

Holland said had his eye on the car, complete with brass headlamps and hickory-wood wheels, for 20 years before he could persuade its previous owner to sell it.

"The guy that owned it was the driver's stepson. When the driver died he told his son to sell it to someone in Orange County if he ever moved away," Holland said.

When asked why he would take on the additional challenge of car building when he only launched his 100-foot schooner late last year, he replied, "This is my therapy."

"I love the historical challenge of it. It was 70 years ago that this car was driven through that part of the country and now it will pass that way again," he said.

On Monday, he told rival racer Bill Halliday he would be tearing the car's engine down once or twice again before the race starts Thursday.

Halliday, of Newport Beach, said his goal is "to whip Dennis," in the race. "I think I have as good a chance as any" to win, Halliday said.

He bought and restored his '36 Chevy in 1966 and sold it three years ago to the Barn restaurant in Tustin, where it has been on display.

"I was restoring a 1940 Chevy when I found out the 1936 model was the newest that could enter. So I called up the restaurant and got them to loan me the car for the race," he said.

Halliday said he has "four or five" vintage Chevys at home, but none like the pearl gray and black touring car he will drive in the Great Race.

"It's a sedan delivery car built on a passenger chassis. They were mostly used as drug store delivery cars," he said.

The Great Race will start Thursday morning from the Sheraton Universal Hotel in Los Angeles and finish May 25 in Indianapolis, race coordinators said. Racers will make midday and overnight stops in Las Vegas; Flagstaff, Ariz.; Albuquerque; Amarillo, Texas; Dallas; Wichita, Kansas; St. Louis and Chicago.

STREETS NEED REPAIRS...

percent transportation sales tax increase — drew immediate fire from Proposition A opponents who accused the commission of using the report for pro-tax political purposes.

If passed, Proposition A would set aside about 20 percent of the estimated $5.4 billion the tax hike would raise over its 15-year life for local transportation projects that include arterial road maintenance.

Transportation commissioners, who authored the Proposition A tax plan, denied the report or the timing of its release was in any way related to the tax initiative or the pro-tax campaign.

The report determined that while the money available for street and road maintenance has remained constant over the last decade, the cost of repair has increased 230 percent.

The report noted that financial considerations have forced local governments to maintain streets on a 66-year cycle rather than the recommended 13-year maintenance schedule. In 1982-83, an estimated $36 million would have been needed to keep the maintenance program on a 13-year schedule, but only $7 million was spent by the county and all 26 cities, according to the report.

Because of the maintenance-funding shortfall, 59 percent of the pavement in the county is in need of some repair and 28 percent requires major repair or rebuilding.

Repairs needed range from minor work such as filling cracks on 30 percent of roads surveyed to more substantial repairs such as resurfacing, required on 20 percent of the roads reviewed. The most extensive repairs needed, partial reconstruction, was needed on 8 percent of the highways sampled, according to the report.

Among the six cities and unincorporated county areas surveyed, San Clemente needed more than 86 percent of its streets repaired, followed by Anaheim with 65 percent, the unincorporated county with 60 percent, Buena Park with 59 percent and Huntington Beach with 56.2 percent. Fountain Valley, the only other Orange Coast city surveyed, needs repairs on about 30 percent of its road system, the report concluded.

city hall-style trappings. It is, after all, only temporary.

Since then, a citizens group and city staff have eyed nearly every large chunk of land within city limits, sizing up its potential as a home for public buildings needed to serve a city of 200,000.

What was envisioned was a "City Center" — a governmental hub with a city hall, police station, county branch library, civic auditorium, school and water district headquarters, and centers for seniors and day care.

Residents even approved, in an advisory vote in 1981, a measure in support of building of a civic center. Three land plots have been considered seriously: one near UCI, another at the city's geographic center between two residential villages, and a third within an ambitious commercial center planned by the Irvine Co. for the "Golden Triangle," land trapped within three freeways at the city's southeastern edge.

All died for a variety of reasons, shot down by high development costs, a shift in development patterns that still leaves unclear where "downtown" is, and lack of a council majority for any plan. The idea has been dormant since mid-1982 and Irvine continues to operate out of its temporary headquarters.

But on Thursday, Irvine's Planning Commission opens consideration anew on what city officials — with fingers crossed — think may be the permanent quarters for Irvine City Hall.

The advisory Civic Center Committee is supposed to describe its latest plan for 25 acres of farmland beside Culver Drive, south of the San Diego flood control channel.

"It's probably the least optimal, but it meets the minimum acceptable requirements," said Pat McDonald, a Hughes engineer who has worked on the committee since its inception in 1977.

The committee, revived in February, looked at three parcels within an 833-acre area that's called "village 14," the first major village being planned within the city since the mid-1970s.

The new village is bounded by the San Diego Freeway on the south, the Irvine Business Center on the east and by the village of Woodbridge on the west.

To be built over the next decade, it is to have 7,000 homes, 17,000 residents and 48 acres of parks. City Planner Paul Ireland explained recently.

Because it is close to a business and industrial center, the new village is intended as a rather dense housing area for workers. And it is being designed with major thoroughfares, pointed out Ray Catalano, a city planning commissioner and professor of social ecology at UCI. A city hall will only aggravate that congestion, he added.

"But the village shouldn't be sacrificed to traffic," Catalano said. "In some ways, we'll be reducing city hall-generated traffic," he believes, because the centrally located civic center would only draw people into residential sections.

The long-awaited proposal calls for a civic center within "the activity corridor," sandwiched between Alton Avenue and Barranca Parkway. The zone is supposed to act as a spine, linking the major industrial centers at either end of the city. Only about two miles of the backbone is complete, through Woodbridge.

"If the uses are integrated, people can use the center without having to drive all over the city," explained city staffer Pam Sheldon.

Sheldon said the committee dusted off $80,000 worth of plans drawn up but abandoned in 1982. Then a 146,000-square-foot building was sketched out with a $22.4 million price tag.

The committee believes that the old building idea could fit on the new corner, Sheldon said.

McDonald, who has sat through more civic center meetings than he can count, said "the city is running out of choices."

He is disappointed that delays have diluted the city center idea. Now the Irvine Unified School District has an administration building under construction and the Irvine Ranch Water District has located elsewhere.

"No one seemed to be able to put it all together," former mayor Gaby Pryor observed. "I wanted to see it all built together. Our planned community is fragmented. We've lost an important focal point forever," she said.

Assistant City Manager Paul Brady remains optimistic that the central hub idea can still be realized.

The school and water districts "haven't foreclosed on the idea," Brady said. They could relocate later, he said.

And, by putting off the decision, city coffers are fatter with a $2 million civic center fund and the interim facility's property value has nearly doubled, Brady said.

"We can use this as a partial down payment," he said, in combination with other financing schemes, such as industrial bonds.

Two-term Councilman David Sills believes this plan, although still in its infancy, may finally put the controversy to rest.

"This has a good chance of succeeding because it may get three votes," Sills said.

He pointed out that a recent 5-0 council vote agreeing to at least consider the site "was the first show of unanimity" any plan has ever garnered.

Construction site body identified

The body of a man discovered at a hotel construction site was identified as Kayvan Khaloghi, 23, of Irvine, police said today.

Investigators haven't determined if the death was an accident or suicide, but "are fairly confident there was no foul play," Sgt. Dick Bowman said.

Khaloghi's family, natives of Iran, apparently went "into hysterics" when told of the man's death.

Bowman said. Police had trouble trying to learn the man's whereabouts during the past two days.

After an autopsy on Monday, a deputy coroner set the time of death as sometime Saturday, and determined the cause of death to be head injuries consistent with those suffered from a fall, Bowman said.

The man's body was found beneath a 12-story fire escape at the Hilton Hotel construction site at 17900 Jamboree Road in Irvine. Khaloghi was not employed as a construction worker at the site, which had been closed for the weekend, according to police.

Khaloghi had come to the attention of authorities recently. He was recently cited by Irvine police for setting a fire in a greenbelt area, Bowman said.

he heard of it was when he picked up a newspaper during the flight," explained Huntington Beach Sgt. Carl Vidano, a key investigator in the mammoth drug sweep.

"I imagine he had something of a squirmy flight," commented one FBI agent.

Arrested along with Mobley was his wife, Aleyda Machado-Mobley, 24, and his sister, Cindy Lee Croley, 27, of Newport Beach. Both are alleged to have been active in the drug ring.

Mobley, according to drug agents, was a small-time cocaine dealer who hit it big when he married into a family that assertedly had ties to the Colombian drug world.

Police said as far as they can determine, Mobley has never been arrested before. In fact, the only past offense Mobley could be linked to was a violation of a dog leash law in Newport Beach, one officer noted.

Mobley was to be arraigned today in federal court in Los Angeles along with his wife and sister. Fifteen of the 17 people arrested in Orange County on Saturday were arraigned Monday in Los Angeles with bails ranging as high as $2 million. Two others have not been charged.

One of the suspects remained in serious condition today at Fountain Valley Community Hospital. Ronald Ting, 26, of Corona del Mar, was shot in the chest early Saturday by FBI agents.

Ting, alleged to be one of Mobley's cocaine distributors, drew fire from an FBI agent after Ting pulled out a gun.

Two other suspected leaders in the smuggling ring still being sought are Heriberto Machado-Velasquez, 50, a Colombian national, and Octavio Gnsales, 43, of New Jersey.

Four others alleged to be drug runners in the widespread operation also are being sought.

Death has been attributed to a blow to the head that caused massive hemorrhaging. A deputy coroner said there was no evidence of sexual assault although her blouse was ripped and her bra was pulled over her head when she was found.

Deluca, an Edison High School

dropout and a former welding student at Orange Coast College, has been described as a "loner" by neighbors.

He was arrested the day after the slaying after police and postal agents along with a pair of bloodhounds brought in from Texas retraced the mail woman's route that had taken her past the Deluca family's home on Jon Day Drive in Meredith Gardens neighborhood in southeast Huntington Beach.

An investigator reportedly found a five-inch hunting knife in the car.

Defense attorney Dolan said Deluca is a troubled youth with a history of mental illness. Deluca was intoxicated on tequila and marijuana when Haxton was assaulted, Dolan said.

If convicted, Deluca faces a maximum sentence of 25 years to life in state prison, attorneys said.
