Teens face adult trial in slaying

Charges filed against 16-year-olds after woman's body unearthed in Mesa

By KAREN E. KLEIN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

First-degree murder charges were filed Tuesday against two 16-year-old boys in the death of a 60-year-old Costa Mesa woman whose body was found in a flower planter in her backyard.

In filing the charges, the district attorney's office asked that both youths be tried as adults, according to Deputy District Attorney Brent Romney.

A Juvenile Court detention hearing, similar to an arraignment, was scheduled today, Romney said. A date will likely be set today for a hearing to determine whether the teen-agers should stand trial as adults, he said.

"On a homicide like this, it's a pretty standard presumption they'll stand trial as adults. That's what we're pushing for," Romney said.

One of the teen-agers, whose names were both withheld because of their ages, lived as a ward in the home of the victim, Eugenia Flores Baker.

Relatives found her body buried in a planter Sunday after noticing freshly turned soil in a garden area where several plants were missing.

Police said an autopsy showed she had been hit several times Friday with a "blunt object."

Both youths attended Back Bay Continuation School in Costa Mesa, and police allege that the other boy was in the Baker's home at the time of the slaying.

Police Lt. Jack Calnon said Mrs. Baker got into an argument Friday morning with the 16-year-old because he was lying to her about not attending school and losing his job.

Mrs. Baker's husband, Ira, said he only knew of the troubles between his wife and the boy from what she told him.

"I can't understand Spanish; they used to argue in Spanish," he told the Associated Press.

Baker said his wife told the youth to leave a few months ago, but the teen-ager resisted.

"Last weekend my wife decided definitely that (he) was going," Baker said.

Funeral services for Mrs. Baker will be held 11 a.m. Saturday at Harbor Lawn-Mount Olive Mortuary and Memorial Park in Costa Mesa.

Patrol car hit, woman busted

Driver charged with hit-and-run, drunken driving

A Laguna Beach woman who allegedly rammed a sheriff's patrol car and clipped two parked vehicles several miles later was arrested early this morning on suspicion of drunken and hit-and-run driving, the California Highway Patrol reported.

Julie Waldrup, 21, was taken into custody after residents on a Dana Point street noticed the woman's battered and smoking Porsche 911 stopped at the curbside.

Investigators said Waldrup touched off the metal-bending episode at about 1:40 a.m. on Coast Highway when she allegedly slammed into the back of a patrol car driven by Orange County Sheriff's Deputy Steven Grosskopf.

The woman, CHP investigators said, pulled away from the wreckage, made a quick right turn and clipped a parked Dodge. Officers said the woman then continued on a short

No candidates at Irvine nuke day?

Agran organizing panel discussion for May 31 event

By ANDREA ADELSON
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Months of efforts by a locally based group to bring the three Democratic presidential candidates to an Orange County forum on nuclear-related issues have so far failed.

But in the candidates' stead, local peace activists including Irvine Mayor Larry Agran have organized a panel discussion on arms reductions to be held May 31 in Irvine's City Council Chambers.

All Democratic and Republican presidential candidates have been invited to the forum which is to take place between 9:30 a.m. and 12:30 p.m., just five days before the June 5 state primary, forum organizer Tim Carpenter said Tuesday.

Colorado Sen. Gary Hart is the only "maybe" in the bunch because he may be in Orange County the day of the forum, he said. President Reagan has turned down the invitation, former Vice President Walter Mondale is "unlikely" and the date is "open to consideration" on Rev. Jesse Jackson's calendar, according to Carpenter.

He contended the non-commital candidates are "unwilling or afraid" to discuss the issue in Southern California, a primary base for the nation's defense contractors.

Josh Baron, a Hart Southern California campaign spokesman, called Carpenter's argument "nonsense."

Hart "has demonstrated his willingness to discuss the issues," Baron said, but the candidate is bombarded with requests for appearances. His May 31 schedule is "fluid," but is dominated by fund-raising efforts "to keep this campaign going," he said.

Instead of candidates, economist William Hartung, journalist Robert Scheer, four local leaders and four elected officials from throughout the

Irvine recognized as Olympic site

By ANDREA ADELSON
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Perhaps it didn't rate right up there with the Soviets' decision to boycott the Summer Olympic Games.

After all, it didn't have international repercussions. The world's press has been noticeably disinterested. And there apparently haven't been any high-level diplomatic sessions to sooth the ruffled feathers. But up until Tuesday night, the City of Irvine has been unceremoniously snubbed.

Now it's all better. After unfurling the "stars in motion" flag and handing out of Sam the Eagle pins, Irvine officially received recognition from Olympic organizers that the city is an official Summer Games venue site.

Irvine has been mentioned only as an afterthought in official Olympic programs. But on July 31, the city will host the swimming portion of the five-event modern pentathlon.

"This is the moment we've all been waiting for," Dick Stevens, Olympic commissioner for the pentathlon, told the City Council. "In spite of the recent disruptions, I

Fans not bothered by 'Temple of Doom' gore

By the Associated Press

"Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom" began its quest for box office glory today amid debate over its graphic violence, which some critics say should be off limits for unaccompanied young viewers.

Directed by Steven Spielberg and produced by George Lucas, the eagerly anticipated sequel to the 1982 blockbuster "Raiders of the Lost Ark" was booked into 1,685 theaters nationwide, many of which scheduled their first screenings at 12:01 a.m. local time.

In New York City, moviegoers leaving the Loews Astor Plaza theater today seemed unconcerned by the film's gore.

"I felt dazzled after just the first 20 minutes," said Leslie Cullen, 22. "It's going to be a hit."

"It's real escapism, fantastic from start to finish," said Jeff Kleinman. "If you want a great escape movie, it delivers from beginning to end."

In California, eager fans camped out for days to be assured of choice seats. Some wore the slouch hats and oversize coats affected by the title character, played by Harrison Ford.

Dianne Elwood, 19, began waiting last Friday at the Edwards Newport Cinema in Newport Beach, which hired 30 new employees to deal with the expected crowds.

"The only people who wait in line are crazy, but we have nothing better to do at the moment," said Gordon Berg, 17, who stood behind Elwood.

"It's like Christmas," said Patrick Labyorteaux, 18, who spent three days outside the National Theater in Westwood. He was first in line for the midnight show.

"We were in the ('Return of the Jedi') line for seven days," Labyorteaux added. "This is kind of routine."

The violent scenes include a hair-raising sequence in which a man's heart is torn from his chest before he is lowered into a pit of boiling lava. That kind of action has prompted worries and some complaints about the effect on young viewers who will likely make up a large share of the film's audience.

Jim Dick — Valley's man in motion

Busy civic leader, 68, uses his retirement to involve himself in community activities

PHIL SNEIDERMAN
PEOPLE IN THE NEWS

It wasn't easy to catch up with Jim Dick one day last week.

In the morning, the 68-year-old Fountain Valley man was at the historical park he's helping to build behind City Hall. As president of the Fountain Valley Historical Society, he was interviewing a 90-year-old Costa Mesa woman who taught school in Fountain Valley 57 years ago.

In the afternoon, Dick was at the King of Glory Lutheran Church, helping to set up props for a production of "South Pacific."

He was also preparing the agenda for the annual installation of officers of the Friends of the Fountain Valley Library set the following day. He was about to begin another year as president of the library support group.

That night Dick attended Fountain Valley High School's Coronet Awards program because his grandson Michael Koelsch was a nominee. He had to apologize for not being able to attend a meeting of coin collectors.

In addition to his club work, Dick is secretary of the Orange County Health Planning Council, a group that reviews hospital expansion plans and tries to control rising health care costs. He's also on Fountain Valley's Housing and Community Development Advisory Committee, which oversees the local use of federal funds. He also lectures on Fountain Valley history before schools, scout groups and service clubs.

"What makes Jim Dick run and run and run...?"

Fountain Valley is a quiet bedroom community of more than 50,000 residents. Yet, it's also a city where many of the same faces keep turning up when you're looking for the people involved in civic and service club activities. Jim Dick is one of those familiar faces.

His wife Doris, who also is active in many of these groups, says she and her husband subscribe to a simple philosophy: If you want to upgrade your quality of life, you have to do more than just fix up you house. You have to help improve your community as a whole.

Like many California residents, Jim Dick is a transplant from the East Coast. But unlike most former Easterners, he never refers to his native Connecticut as "back home."

"The children here all know how their parents came from Oshkosh, Wis., or Dearborn, Mich., but the children should also know something about the place where their home is now," Dick insists. "Doris and I both go back East, but we don't go home (there). Home is here."

Dick grew up in New England and eventually became a criminal investigator for the Connecticut State Police. Then he became an investigator for the U.S. Civil Service Commission. In 1964, he asked to be transferred from Connecticut because of his wife's health problems.

"We researched for six months to find the best climate in the world," Dick recalls. "That was on the south coast of Spain — but I didn't have a job offer there."

The Dicks then settled in Fountain Valley for its particularly mild

County may buy computer to speed fingerprint checks

By JEFF ADLER
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

To better finger the right criminal suspect, the Orange County Board of Supervisors agreed Tuesday to investigate further the possibility of leasing or purchasing a high-technology computer that could match fingerprints lifted at crime scenes with those of 20,000 past offenders in the county.

Supervisor Ralph Clark asked for the board's authorization to look more closely into such a system to gather information on the proposal before summer budget hearings.

Among questions county law enforcement officials and supervisors want answered is whether police agencies now using the system have found it effective as a crime-detection tool.

"I understand, it is being used with good crime detection results by the state Department of Justice as well as law enforcement agencies in such cities as Houston, San Jose, Washington D.C. and Minneapolis-St. Paul," Clark said in a letter to board members.

The computerized system would allow detectives to randomly search for fingerprint matches among the prints of 20,000 persons who have been jailed for past offenses.

Currently, the county sheriff's department only can attempt to match latent prints lifted at a crime scene with those of a known suspect.

"If there are no known suspects, as is frequently the case in such crimes as burglary and housebreaking, there is no practical way to make effective use of the incriminating latent prints found at the crime scene," Clark noted.

Cost of purchasing such a system has been estimated at $1 million. However, the system's manufacturer, an Anaheim-based company, has indicated it would be willing to lease or sell some of the equipment necessary to the county for $129,000 while establishing the fingerprint data base at its Anaheim headquarters.

In a related action, supervisors postponed a decision on borrowing equipment from the U.S. Marine Corps needed to provide security during the Olympic Games this summer.

Before signing an agreement that would permit the county sheriff's department to borrow an observation helicopter and radio equipment from the Marines, supervisors said they wanted to know more about what potential liability the county might face should the equipment be damaged.

The helicopter and radio gear, 60 portable radios and 10 base radio stations, would be loaned to the county at no charge, according to Sheriff Brad Gates.

state will try to focus the nuclear debate at a community level, Carpenter said.

Topics will range from the economic consequences of the nuclear arms race to its psychological impact, he said. The hall holds 150 people.

"We believe the hearing is the first such event of its kind and underscores our commitment to be part of the national dialogue to reduce nuclear weapons and cut a bloated budget," Irvine's Agran said.

The event, called the first of 12 hearings to be held across the nation, is sponsored by the League of Elected Officials of America, a group founded this year by Agran. It has more than 100 members in California, Carpenter said.

The league is a network of local elected officials who sponsored a forum for presidential candidates in January with the aid of 150 mayors and council members from Iowa. Four of eight candidates attended the nationally televised event prior to the Iowa caucus.

The group's members endorse a nuclear weapons freeze.

Agran, an attorney, was co-author of the non-binding Proposition 12 nuclear freeze measure approved by California voters in 1982. Six Orange County cities voted for the freeze, including Irvine and Laguna Beach.

The league was bred from Agran's campaign to mobilize 65 mayors and council members to support the measure in their communities.

Military spending on nuclear arms is robbing cities of essential resources, Agran said.

Among the speakers are Hartung, author of the "Economic Consequences of the Nuclear Freeze;" Los Angeles Times political writer Scheer; Jean Forbath, of Costa Mesa-based Save Our Selves; Torin Segerstrom, scion of a prominent local developer; and Curt Haunfeler, president of the Anaheim High School District board.

Stevens said 66 athletes from 20 countries will participate in the sold-out event to be held at Irvine's Heritage Park Aquatics Complex. The remaining pentathlon events are to be held at the Cota de Caza resort east of Lake Forest. Three other Olympic events are being held in Orange County.

Even two-time Olympic bronze medalist Dwight Stones was on hand Tuesday night, unclasping his own lapel pin to hand to Mayor Larry Agran. He had a pocket full of others to present to the rest of the council. Everyone dutifully wore their pins.

Stones, an Irvine resident, said he was delighted to "be able to go almost on my bicycle to the swimming event."

Stones, a 10-time world record holder in the high jump, is trying out for his third Olympic team after competing in the 1972 and 1976 Olympics. Having the U.S. host the Games "is a decided advantage," Stones said, adding that the U.S. Olympic track and field team is at its best in 20 years.

weather. The city was still rather young (it was incorporated in 1957) and in the midst of a transition from farm area to residential community.

Soon after the move, Dick became active in a local homeowners association, working to ease some racial tensions that had surfaced in the neighborhood.

In 1965, Dick was appointed to the city's traffic advisory committee. He helped develop Fountain Valley's first traffic laws.

In 1966, Dick was appointed to the Fountain Valley Planning Commission. He served as chairman through 1972 and remained on the commission until 1974. During that period, Fountain Valley underwent substantial growth.

Dick said he believes the commission during his tenure faithfully adhered to the master development plan created by the city's early leaders. One exception was that commissioners permitted more single-family housing and less multiple-housing (apartments, condominiums, etc.) than originally planned.

In 1969, Jim and Doris Dick were among the founding members of the Fountain Valley Historical Society. The society was dormant for a while in the early 1970s but revived in time for the national Bicentennial celebrations of 1976.

In recent years, the group has channeled its energies into preservation of some remnants of Fountain Valley's past.

Because of the city's rapid development, nearly all of Fountain Valley's early buildings were demolished to make way for tract housing and shopping centers. In late 1981, a developer discovered three aged structures hidden from view off Bushard Street. The developer said the historical society could have them, but said the group had to act quickly before the bulldozers arrived.

The buildings were a 1920s real estate office, a Japanese bathhouse and a water tower. The city agreed to accommodate the structures at an undeveloped park, but the historical society had to raise $2,400 to move them. Doris Dick, who was president of the group at the time, asked the members at a meeting to at least pledge money for the move. Instead, she had $2,000 in donations in her hand within 10 minutes.

As it turned out, the development that would have destroyed the old buildings never materialized. Still, the threat pressed the society into action. The buildings were moved to an area behind City Hall dubbed "Heritage Park." Jim Dick and other society members have spent many hours renovating the structures and adding landscaping at the park. It may be opened to the public later this year.

When he's not working at the park, you can often find Jim Dick speaking to local school children about Fountain Valley's history. He says most youngsters are woefully uninformed about the community's beginnings as a soggy area full of Artesian wells (the source of the city's name). The land had to be drained to permit the farming of lima beans, sugar beets, tomatoes, peppers and other crops.

"One of the first things these kids ask is what Indians lived here," Dick says. "I tell them no Indians lived in this valley because none of them were dumb enough to live in a swampy riverbed. They lived on the bluffs in Huntington Beach and Costa Mesa."

The local history buff also tells the children how the city fathers barely got Fountain Valley incorporated in time to prevent most of it from being annexed into Santa Ana. Although the founders were mainly farmers, the construction of the San Diego Freeway through town hastened its transformation into a bedroom community, he tells the youngsters.

Jim Dick hasn't slowed down much since retiring from his federal job in 1978.

"I watched too many people who retired from the mills back East," he says. "They just retired, sat on their front porches and died because they didn't know anything else to keep busy."

Right now, Dick is intent on getting the Heritage Park finished as a place for display of historical mementoes from Fountain Valley. He's also pressing the city to use redevelopment funds to build an expanded local library.

Later this year, Jim and Doris Dick hope to do some traveling, visiting friends and relatives back East. But don't expect the couple to give up their civic activities permanently.

"This would only be a brief intermission from what we're doing here," Jim Dick says.

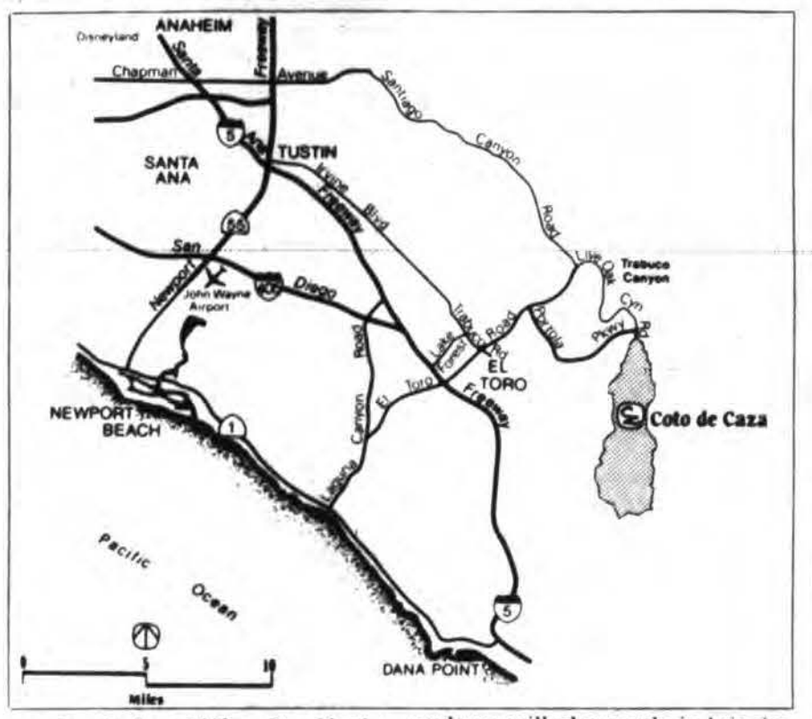
Traffic woes bridged in Viejo

Portola Parkway to guard against future flooding



An arroyo that served as the encampment for Spanish explorer Gaspar de Portola's foot soldiers is now covered by a span of concrete rather than canvas.

The new $8.3 million Portola Bridge and Parkway was opened this week after being dedicated over the weekend with the snip of a golden rope by state Deputy Transportation Secretary Dana Reed.

The 5.5-mile parkway will open up the interior of Rancho Mission Viejo, and the communities of Mission Viejo, Coto de Caza and Robinson Ranch. It's 1,200-foot bridge extends over a stream bed and adjoining countryside from El Toro Road in the north to Plano Trabuco Road in the south.

Four miles shorter than meandering Live Oak Canyon Road, Portola Parkway sweeps over the canyon, saving considerable travel time and ensuring against repetition of the 1980 Trabuco Creek flood that isolated the exclusive resort of Coto de Caza for nine days.

In addition, the completion of the parkway will play a role in bringing Olympic visitors to the resort, site of the modern pentathlon.

Pickups and flatbeds from Coto de Caza were the first to parade down the new thoroughfare Saturday.

The six-column, two-lane bridge is the longest ever built by county road builders and is the product of 22 years of negotiations. Novo Construction Co. and Steve P. Rados, Inc., both of Santa Ana, built the bridge.

Students can screen X-rated film

By the Associated Press

A request that Fullerton College refuse to show the X-rated film "Caligula" was rejected by the college district board as attempted censorship.

Trustee Chris Loumakis had asked the board of the North Orange County Community College District to request that the Fullerton students not show the film using district property or facilities.

But the board rejected that in a 4-2 vote Tuesday night.

"I think by whatever terms you try to word the resolution, it is censorship pure and simple," board vice president Nilane A. Lee said shortly before the vote.

"I feel very strongly we should not interfere with our adult student body. No one is forced to see it," said Trustee Herbert Warren.

Loumakis argued that it was not a matter of freedom, but of giving campus airing to a film "which celebrates sexual brutality."

"This film has no more redeeming value than a child pornography movie," he added. "The issue is not one of academic freedom but of common decency. If our students wish to show this film, there are many private facilities available to do so ...."

However, only trustee Wallace Hardy voted with Loumakis.

"Caligula," made in the mid-1970s by Penthouse Films International, is about the bloody and wanton life of the ancient Roman emperor. Novelist Gore Vidal wrote the script, but later criticized the graphic movie, claiming it had been turned into "basement pornography."

The Associated Students had proposed showing the movie, but not yet scheduled it. Student body President Dale Harrison said a screening is likely.

solid, filled, or plated

So that consumers will not be too confused by the advertising and marketing of gold products, the Federal Trade Commission and the Jewelers Vigilance Committee point out these facts: SOLID GOLD means a piece of gold jewelry is solid, and does not have a hollow. GOLD FILLED jewelry is made from a base metal and has layers of gold mechanicaly bonded to both sides, like a sandwich. The gold alloy must constitute at least one-tenth of the object's total weight, unless it is marked otherwise. The gold coating can eventually wear away. Gold filled jewelry may also be called "gold overlay" or "rolled gold plate." GOLD ELECTROPLATE means gold is deposited on the face of the object electrolytically. To be called by this name, the electroplate must be at least 7 millionths of an inch thick. Anthying thinner must be called "gold wash" or "gold flash." There is a higher standard for watches, which have 750 millionths of an inch of gold to be called gold electroplate. Be sure that you know what kind of gold jewelry you are buying before you spend your money. Deal with a reputable jeweler.

World economic collapse feared

LaRouche presidential candidate offers plan for U.S. prosperity

By JERRY HIRSCH
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

You may have seen them at an airport carrying signs advocating feeding Jane Fonda to the whales or skewering Henry Kissinger with a laser beam. They are members of the National Democratic Policy Committee — a splinter group of the Democratic Party led by Lyndon H. LaRouche.

Mel Klenetsky, national director of the LaRouche campaign for president, was in Newport Beach on Tuesday explaining his organization's proposals.

The main theme of the LaRouche campaign is that the world is heading rapidly toward economic collapse because Third World nations cannot produce enough products to meet the debt payments on their loans to banks.

The United States in heading toward collapse because elected officials and power brokers have allowed the country's infrastructure of roads, bridges, and water systems to disintegrate as the nation shifted to a "post-industrial"economy, Klenetsy said.

LaRouche has proposed a four-point program to return the country to an industrial economy and prosperity, he said,

"The first thing we need to do is develop the credit necessary to do to the economy what Franklin Delano Roosevelt did from 1939 to 1944," Klenetsky said.

LaRouche would make low-interest loans to industry, agriculture and export businesses.

To do this, LaRouche would strip control of the money supply from the Federal Reserve Board, Klenetsky said.

"Congress would issue $500 billion of gold-backed treasury notes for loans at 2 to 4 percent interest rates," Klenetsky said.

The nation's current gold reserves could back the notes if the price of gold in the United States was raised to $750 an ounce, he said.

This would create an industrial expansion large enough to produce the great amounts of steel and other products need to "put the country back together."

"The existing steel mills were built in the 1920s. If we do not rebuild them, you destroy our future potential to produce enough steel to maintain ourselves as an industrial power," Klenetsky said.

One of the larger projects would be a massive water system that would bring water from Alaska through most of North America to the Southwest United States.

"That would ensure adequate water and food supplies for America for hundreds of years," Klenetsky said.

The second part of LaRouche's program would include a $200 million defensive laser system to block incoming nuclear missiles.

"We need that by 1988 or before because the Soviets will have a similar system in place by 1987," Klenetsky said

LaRouche believes such a system is crucial for the protection of the nation from a first strike by the Soviets.

The third portion of the LaRouche program would be a build-up of intercontinental ballistic missiles and other strategic weapons to maintain a balance of power between the United States and the Soviet Union.

Finally, LaRouche would renegotiate the debt of Third World countries so that their loans have more "realistic" interest rates of 2 to 4 percent, Klenetsky said.

"We would issue export credits so that we can exchange our technology for the oil of Mexico and the resources of other Third World countries," Klenetsky said.

He claims LaRouche's total program will create about 8 million jobs and increase the tax base enough to provide the government with enough funds for the various projects.

LaRouche, who will be in California next week, plans to spend about $400,000 in television and radio commercials by the June 5 primary, according to Klenetsky. He will be on the Democratic ballot running against former vice president Walter Mondale, Colorado Sen. Gary Hart and the Rev. Jesse Jackson.

Klenetsky complained that his candidate is not getting the same amount of media exposure as the other candidates.

To counter that problem, the campaign has purchased three half-hour slots for television programs in which LaRouche will outline his campaign platform in detail.

Sierra Club opposing bullet train

By ANDREA ADELSON
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

The concept of getting people out of cars is one the Sierra Club supports. But the 140,000-member organization doesn't believe the San Diego-to-Los Angeles bullet train is a project it can back, a spokesman said Tuesday.

The Sierra Club has become the latest to support a suit pending before the state Supreme Court which would block development of the $3.1 billion high-speed rail system.

"It's not that we are opponents of it, but we are proponents of environmental quality," said Bob Hartman of Lemon Grove in San Diego County.

A law which exempted the project from the state Environmental Quality Act leaves the project fault-free from future questions that may be raised over environmental issues, contended Hartman, a member of the Sierra Club's California Legislative Committee.

A two-year environmental review of the project is already under way by the state Transportation Department.

"If the findings of the review become questioned and if a suit were brought challenging the adequacy of the findings, a trial court would throw it out because (the project) is exempt." Hartman said.

Court briefs supporting the suit have also been filed by two San Diego homeowner's groups and Sacramento-based People's Advocate, founded by tax fighter Paul Gann.

Nat Read, spokesman for American High Speed Rail, said he was "confused" by the brief, filed as a friend of the court last week.

"What they ask for are conditions that already exist," Read said. He said the Sierra Club brief says it supports inter-city rail transit.

Hartman, however, said the group supports mass transit projects but only if they are "utilitarian, economical and environmentally sound. I don't think the American High Speed Rail proposal meets that."

American High Speed Rail proposed to start building the rail system, which would slice through Orange County, in 1985. It would make three stops within the county, including one at a proposed transportation center in Irvine.

The cities of Tustin, Oceanside, Carlsbad, Del Mar and San Diego filed suit in January, contending that lawmakers exempted the proposal from a full environmental review. The suit asks the court to order the Public Utilities Commission be made responsible for reviewing environmental issues along the 130-mile route as well as considering state permits.

A group of 850 Irvine resident whose homes are next to the proposed route of the train made a $1,000 contribution in March to aid the city of Tustin's legal effort.

'30 Cord leads Great Race survivors at Kansas stop

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Texan Ed House, driving a 1930 L-29 Cord, continued to lead the pack as the 3,000-mile Great American Race for antique vehicles marked its sixth day on the road since leaving Los Angeles.

House, of Tomball, Texas, led the procession of the 70 surviving vehicles into the midday stop at Oklahoma City. Drivers were expected to reach Wichita, Kan., before putting in for the night.

Among the other vehicles to reach Oklahoma City by midday were a 1909 Buick racer piloted by Wayne Stanfield and Dennis Holland of Costa Mesa, a 1912 American LaFrance fire engine and a 1903 Mercedes-Benz.

"They're running better now that they're out of the desert and over the mountains," said race spokesman Tex Smith.

Eighty-seven vehicles, all of them manufactured before 1937, set out Thursday from Los Angeles in the competition, which is scored as a time-distance rally. Participants try to complete the course in a time set by the Sports Car Club of America while staying within a 50 mph speed limit.

Older cars are allowed handicaps — the older the car, the more leeway it's allowed from the perfect time.

The competition is being held in conjunction with the Indianapolis 500. The drivers are scheduled for overnight stops in St. Louis and Chicago before arriving in Indianapolis on Friday.

First place in the $250,000 event is worth $100,000. In addition, the three oldest cars to finish split $40,000.

Cabbie returns cash

A reluctant cabbie returned a Newport Beach man's carry-on suitcase containing $7,500 in cash and another $22,500 in jewelry after the taxi driver was assured by Orange County Sheriff's deputies he would not be charged with theft.

A 44-year-old Spyglass Hill resident reported the leaving the suitcase containing $30,000 in valuables in a cab after returning from a trip to Las Vegas Sunday.

The man checked with the Coast Yellow Cab Co-Op but the company could not locate the suitcase. The cabbie was keeping mum because he had heard the case contained $30,000 in cash but when he looked in the suitcase there was only $7,500. The driver was afraid he would be charged with stealing $22,500, according to the sheriff's department.

Monday sheriff's deputies talked to the cabbie and resolved the misunderstanding.

De Lorean on tape: 'I want to proceed'

But defense attorneys dismiss film as 'two salesmen talking'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Prosecutors played their trump card in the John De Lorean drug trial as they neared the finale of their case against the former automaker, but the defense dismissed the taped discussion of a cocaine deal as "two salesmen talking."

In the videotape shown to jurors Tuesday, De Lorean discusses his Northern Ireland sports car company with informant James Timothy Hoffman, the government's star witness.

At one point the automaker hears talk of drugs and says, "I want to proceed."

"Did Mr. De Lorean at any time in any conversation indicate to you he did not want to participate in the narcotics deal?" Assistant U.S. Attorney James Walsh asked Hoffman on Tuesday.

"No," replied the admitted drug smuggler, who said he went to te Sept. 4, 1982, meeting in a Washington hotel primed by government agents to use "clear narcotics terms."

"The function of the tape was to establish John De Lorean's true intent," said Hoffman.

The 59-year-old automaker was arrested several weeks after the videotaped meeting and charged with conspiring to distribute $24 million worth of cocaine to raise money for his failing car company. He could be sentenced to 72 years in prison if convicted.

After playing more tapes today, Walsh planned to turn Hoffman over to De Lorean's lawyers for what chief defense attorney Howard Weitzman has promised will be an intense cross-examination.

Confronted with what could be the government's strongest piece of evidence, Weitzman noted that nowhere in the videotape does De Lorean himself directly mention drugs.

"If you all think it's a crime to sit and listen to somebody else talk about a drug deal, you're wrong," he told reporters.

Weitzman said he would show that De Lorean, listening to plans for a drug deal, was "stalling," as businessmen often do.

"You had two salesmen talking and I think you have to keep in mind what was going on," said Weitzman.

Solidarity hid Soviet soldier

NEW YORK (AP) — Members of the Solidarity underground in Poland say they have hidden a Soviet Army deserter since martial law was imposed in 1981, the New York Times reported today.

"I simply did not want to go back. I did not see any future there," the soldier said in a clandestine interview.

The soldier, who was not identified, said he had been sheltered in more than 20 homes since he deserted in Silesia in the fall of 1981, when the now-outlawed union's campaign for liberalization was at its height.

"We can last many years," said a woman who helped hide the soldier, referring to Poland's underground movement. "We have food, clothing, doctors, all that is necessary for a normal life.

"It was easier in the beginning," she added. "Now it is getting more difficult because people are becoming afraid."

The soldier said he defected to Poland because "I used to think that maybe Solidarity would take power and on such an occasion I could stay in Poland or I could go to the West."

The Times said the interview was set up through underground channels.

MAYAN TOMB DISCOVERED

NEW YORK (AP) — A near-perfect 1,500-year-old Mayan tomb, with elaborate paintings, pottery and a male skeleton wrapped in a shroud, has been discovered in the remote Peten jungle of northern Guatemala, officials say.

"We do have a sense of elation," Dr. Richard E.W. Adams, the University of Texas anthropologist leading the expedition, told the New York Times in an interview published today. "It's a time capsule that reflects the behavioral patterns of the period. You never know whether you're going to dig down and find just a bunch of rocks."

The Rio Azul Project, named after a nearby river, was the first painted Mayan tomb to be uncovered since the 1960s. The archaeologists believe the tomb dates approximately to the years 420 to 470.

The expedition to locate the tomb is a joint effort of the University of Texas and the Guatemalan government. Guatemalan government guards armed with rifles and machetes have stood guard over the tomb to protect it from vandals.

The archaeologists speculated the site was constructed for the relative of a ruler buried in a nearby tomb. That tomb has been stripped and looted since its discovery.

The expedition has been working the site for the past month. In addition to the paintings and pottery, a crafted jar with hieroglyphics and a screw-top lid was also discovered.

Hart takes Idaho's beauty contest 2-1

By the Associated Press

BOISE, Idaho — Sen. Gary Hart is hoping his sweep of Idaho's nonbinding presidential preference primary provides him a spurt of momentum against Walter F. Mondale when delegates are chosen Thursday in Democratic caucuses around the state. Withl 99 percent of the state's 873 precincts reporting, Hart had 31,537 votes, or 58 percent, to 15,834, or 29 percent for Mondale. The Rev. Jesse L. Jackson received 3,127 votes, or 6 percent. Following Hart's 2-to-1 trouncing of Mondale, the Colorado senator's campaign chairman here, Steve Shaw, predicted the victory would bolster Hart's turnout in the Thursday caucuses.

Killer gives self up

COLUMBUS, Ohio — A convicted murderer who used a fake gun to disarm prison guards at a hospital clinic and then took two of them hostage gave up peacefully today after more than 12 hours of negotiations. The standoff with Paul Brumfield, a 37-year-old inmate from the Southern Ohio Correctional Facility in Lucasville, ended shortly before 3 a.m., said police spokesman Ralph W. Webb.

Casey received documents?

WASHINGTON — House investigators have concluded that some of the Carter administration documents leaked to President Reagan's 1980 campaign went to CIA Director William Casey, sources say. A 2,400-page report naming Casey, who was Reagan's 1980 campaign manager, is set to be released by the House Post Office and Civil Service Committee, ending its one-year probe of the briefing papers case, the sources said Tuesday, speaking on condition they not be identified.

Actress avoids injury

NEW ORLEANS — Actress Brooke Shields, taping a television comedy sketch with Bob Hope at the World's Fair, dove into a pool while wearing a microphone and battery pack but escaped a potentially dangerous shock, an official said today. Miss Shields, dressed as Becky Thatcher for a sketch about Tom Sawyer and Huckleberry Finn, was on a raft in the pool and started shivering after being soaked by a rainstorm. The actress decided it would be warmer in the pool, so she removed a pair of Army boots before diving in. Hope yelled, "Don't," but it was too late to stop her, the official said.

Duke opposes lottery

PALM SPRINGS — Gov. George Deukmejian says he'll oppose a lottery initiative if it makes the November ballot in California. Supporters turned in more than a million signatures last week, apparently enough to qualify the proposal. Profits from the lottery — at least 34 percent of the revenue — would be earmarked for public education programs. But Deukmejian said the proposal would take money from the poor without guaranteeing additional funds for schools.

Molest tapes on leash

LOS ANGELES — The court will keep a firm hand on more than 200 taped interviews with children allegedly molested at the McMartin preschool, a judge ruled. Superior Court Judge Ronald George said Tuesday that defense attorneys in the case cannot copy the videotaped interviews, but may view them in four centers around Los Angeles. The 76-year-old founder and six former teachers of the Virginia McMartin Pre-School in suburban Manhattan Beach have been indicted on 115 counts of rape, sodomy and other felony child-molesting charges.

Dunphy suspects in court

LOS ANGELES — Four men pleaded innocent in Municipal Court to charges of conspiring to commit murder and attempted murder in the shooting of television news anchorman Jerry Dunphy and a companion last October. Prosecutors contend the shooting occurred during a bungled robbery attempt as Dunphy, 62, and make-up artist Sandra Marshall, 36, drove up to the KABC studio in Hollywood before the 11 p.m. newscast on Oct. 24.

Child-stealing rap denied

SAN DIEGO — A fundamentalist Christian battling her homosexual ex-husband for custody of their 12-year-old son has pleaded innocent to charges of felony child-stealing. Betty Lou Batey, 39, of Aurora, Colo., entered the plea during arraignment Tuesday before Municipal Court Judge Robert Coates. She was allowed to remain free on her own recognizance pending a June 27 preliminary hearing.

Girl 'freezes' on stand

LOS ANGELES — A 5-year-old girl broke down in tears and was unable to continue her testimony on closed-circuit television in a hearing for a private school principal accused of molesting Deputy District Attorney Ken Freeman said the girl would not be called to testify today, and a decision would be made later on whether to recall her at all during the preliminary hearing for Campbell Hugh Greenup, 57, charged last month with 16 counts of sexually abusing eight girls at his Greenup School in Northridge.

Moscow trip still on

LONDON — Britain's expulsion of three Soviet bloc diplomats has not changed plans for an upcoming visit to Moscow by Foreign Secretary Sir Geoffrey Howe, a Foreign Office spokesman said today. The Foreign Office reported Tuesday that First Secretary Arkadi V. Gouk of the Soviet Embassy in London left Britain after a May 14 order to expel him. Gouk had been mentioned in testimony during in a recent spy trial in Britain. In apparent retaliation for the expulsion, Moscow ordered a British diplomat to leave the Soviet Union.

N. Korean visits Soviets

MOSCOW — North Korean leader Kim Il Sung, whose nation maintains ties with the rival Communist governments of China and the Soviet Union, today began his first official visit to Moscow in 23 years. Kim traveled to Moscow by train and was given a formal welcome at the Kremlin by President Konstantin U. Chernenko and other top Soviet officials.No details of Kim's schedule were announced.

Distaff diety denied

EDINBURGH, Scotland — The Presbyterian Church of Scotland has brushed aside a study group's suggestion that God could be addressed as "Our Mother" instead of "Our Father." The group suggested that God is not necessarily a male deity and that the characteristics attributed to God in the Bible resemble "everything that is best in the female way of being human."

Reagan nixes notion of troop deployment

Says he's not prepared to send GIs to Persian Gulf, Central America

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says he's not preparing to send American troops to war in Central American or the Persian Gulf, although he is pledging to keep the gulf open to oil tankers despite the brewing crisis in the region.

However, when pressed, the president refused to unequivocally rule out the possibility of sending U.S. forces to either region.

At a nationally broadcast news conference dominated by foreign policy questions Tuesday night, the president also said:

- The Soviet Union may not return to the nuclear arms reduction bargaining table until after the November presidential election, but he is not willing to make any concession to get them back earlier.
- He doesn't believe the United States and Soviet Union are any closer to a "confrontation that could lead to a nuclear conflagration" than before he took office.
- He doesn't foresee an impending recession, despite the rise in interest rates. "There are always some pessimists out there," Reagan complained.
- The increase in the number of Soviet submarines off U.S. shores doesn't worry him. "If I thought there was some reason to be concerned about them, I wouldn't be sleeping in this house tonight," he said.
- "I just hope and pray that the Soviet Union will do the humane thing" and allow Yelena Bonner, the wife of Soviet dissident Andrei Sakharov, to seek treatment of heart and eye ailments in another country.

During the East Room session, the president was asked about the likelihood that U.S. servicemen would become involved in a war in the Middle East, where Iran and Iraq are at war and have attacked oil tankers plying the Persian Gulf.

"I think very slight," he replied. "I can't foresee that happening. As things stand now, no, I don't think so."

In a nearly identical question — this one concerning the possibility of committing U.S. troops to El Salvador if that nation ever appears ready to fall to the communists — the president said:

"We'd lose all those friends and neighbors (in the region) if we did that. They want our help ... But they don't want American manpower there."

At another point, the president was asked why so many people believe the world is moving closer to war rather than peace. "I would say that is because that's all that most of the people have been hearing in political dialogue ... that I somehow have an itchy finger and am going to blow up the world. ..."

But he said he didn't know of anyone more committed to peace than he.

Reagan began the news conference with a statement urging Congress to approve his request for $62 million in emergency aid to El Salvador, now awaiting action in the House.

Committee points finger at CIA director

WASHINGTON (AP) — A briefing book prepared for then-President Carter reached Ronald Reagan's presidential campaign through William J. Casey, now director of the CIA, and the book's use in helping Reagan prepare to debate with Carter is specific evidence of a federal crime, a House subcommittee concluded today.

The panel, capping its year-long probe with a 2,400-page report recommending appointment of a special prosecutor, said it found "no evidence" that Reagan was involved himself in the unauthorized transfer of the briefing book and other Carter administration documents.

Reagan refused to comment on the committee's report. Asked about the matter after a Rose Garden ceremony, Reagan responded, "The press conference ended at 8:30 last night." House Republicans, however, blasted the investigation as "a series of bungling missteps."

The report said that the panel, faced with "not candid" statements by people from both the Reagan and Carter camps, was unable to discover who on the Carter side provided the materials.

But the panel did point its finger directly at Casey as the recipient of the material. Casey, then Reagan's campaign director, has repeatedly said he does not recall seeing any such documents during the campaign.

Hitler diary fraud pair indicted

HAMBURG, West Germany (AP) — A Hamburg court today indicted a reporter and a Nazi regalia dealer on fraud charges in the century's biggest literary hoax, the $3.6 million sale of the bogus "Hitler diaries."

The indictment charged that reporter Gerd Heidemann, 52, knew the purported diaries of Adolf Hitler were counterfeit but convinced his employer, Stern magazine, to pay the huge sum of money for them.

Viet vet gets life term

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — A Vietnam veteran who contended that delayed stress from his war experiences caused him to murder his fiancee was convicted today of first-degree murder.

A Merrimack County Superior Court jury rejected Gary Place's claim that trauma from the war was responsible for the strangulation and stabbing death last summer of Wanda Olsen.

Immediately after hearing the verdict, Place asked Judge William Cann to waive the mandatory life prison sentence and order him executed, but the judge refused.

Cann said the law gave him no choice but to impose a sentence of life without parole.

"All right," Place said.

Jury foreman John Cutting read the verdict shortly before 10 a.m. The jury reached its decision a half hour earlier, ending 9½ hours of deliberations over three days.

French prepare for D-Day fete

CAEN, France (AP) — Paratroopers, warships, airplanes, seven heads of state and thousands of veterans are expected to take part in D-Day ceremonies June 6 marking the 40th anniversary of the Normandy landings.

French Veterans Affairs Minister Jean Laurain, at a news conference Tuesday, detailed the ceremonies in which President Reagan, Queen Elizabeth II, President Francois Mitterrand of France and the heads of state of four other countries will participate.

He said provisions have been made for more than 20,000 spectators at the main ceremony at Utah Beach the afternoon of June 6. Thousands more are expected to attend individual French ceremonies or observations by the countries that took part in the landing of 180,000 troops that led to the Allied defeat of Nazi Germany.

Laurain said heavy security measures would be in effect to assure the safety of the heads of state, with 6,000 gendarmes mobilized.

Young homebuyers advised 'scale down your dreams'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The president of the National Association of Home Builders says his organization may need to educate young homebuyers to the current facts of housing life: less square footage and houses closer together.

Trade association president Pete Herder said Tuesday a nationwide survey, conducted at nine universities, shows college students want, and expect to be able to afford, single-family suburban homes larger than their parents' home.

"They have to downscale their plans," he said.

The survey found 82 percent thought it would be "somewhat to very difficult" to buy a home. But two out of three surveyed thought they would eventually be able to buy a home equal to or exceeding the value of the home where they grew up.

The students told interviewers that home prices and high mortgage rates would be the major obstacle to realizing their dream, but that raising the cash for a down payment would be less of a hurdle.

Humana Hospitals in Orange County Take the . . .

"Carefree" Pledge

If your medical emergency turns out to be a minor one — you won't have to pay any emergency room charge at all!

They're not nice to think about, but emergencies happen in all families. And, when you're ill or hurting, you want medical help right away.

When possible, the first thing to do is to call your family physician. When your doctor isn't available, however, you know there is only one right place to go for emergency medical care . . . the only place in the community where qualified medical help is always available 24 hours a day, every day . . . a professionally qualified, fully staffed and equipped hospital emergency department!

But we understand that cost is also a concern.

That's why the Humana hospitals in Orange County have taken the "Care*free*" pledge.

When in doubt about whether a situation is an emergency or not — it's best to play safe. What if that bump on the head is not "minor?" What if that "heartburn" is really a heart attack? We would rather have you come to us and not pay anything when it isn't serious than have you stay away, and pay the ultimate price, when it is serious.

For care of minor medical emergencies — such as simple bandaging, a couple of aspirins or some good medical advice — we won't charge you our regular hospital emergency room fee. In fact, there'll be no emergency room charge at all! There will be a physician's fee, but it will be nominal.

On the other hand, if your emergency turns out to be a major one, you'll have the peace of mind of knowing all of the professional and technological resources of a modern acute care hospital are available. You pay for what you need . . . with charges scaled in accordance with the amount of diagnostic tests, equipment and treatment required. If you don't really need anything, we don't think you should have to pay anything!

We invite you to make us your hospitals of choice . . . and the fine doctors on our medical staffs your physicians of choice. We hope you'll never have any emergencies . . . but if you do, we hope all your emergencies will be "Care*free*."

D-Day clues 'leaked' through newspaper crossword puzzle

LONDON (AP) — A 14-year-old schoolboy apparently was the unwitting culprit who led British intelligence to suspect that secrets of the 1944 D-Day landings in France were being leaked through a London newspaper's daily crossword puzzle, the paper reported.

If the Daily Telegraph's findings are correct, one of the minor but most baffling mysteries engendered by the Normandy landings has finally been solved.

The trouble began with the May 2, 1944 puzzle which contained a clue whose answer was "Utah," followed by a May 22 clue whose solution was "Omaha." Both were code words for Normandy beaches chosen by the Allies for their landings.

On May 27 came a clue whose solution was "Overlord," the code name of the invasion, and MI5, the British counter-espionage service, began to get interested.

The May 30 crossword had "mulberry," the code name for the artificial harbors being built for the invasion.

And on June 1, with the invasion just five days away, "Neptune," the code name for the D-Day naval operation, turned up.

To MI5, the only possible explanations were an uncanny coincidence or a spy operating through the Telegraph's crossword puzzle.

Leonard Dawe and Melville Jones, the paper's crossword compilers, were questioned at length. So was Dawe's brother-in-law, Peter Sanders, a senior Admiralty official who was living with him. But no answers were uncovered.

Forty years later, the Telegraph reported that a Wolverhampton property manager named Ronald French, has provided a possible solution.

French said that when he was 14 he was a student at a school where Dawe was the headmaster. Dawe used to invite boys to his study where, as a mental exercise, he would have them fill in blank crossword puzzles and afterward make up the clues, then send the puzzles to the newspaper, the paper said.

For instance, when French filled in "mulberry," Dawe made up a clue that went "This bush is a center of nursery revolutions," using the children's rhyme that begins "here we go round the mulberry bush."

French told the paper that as a boy he spent a lot of time with the Canadian and American troops camped near his school, and he had picked up five invasion code words.

French told the Telegraph: "Everyone knew the outline invasion plan and they knew the various codewords. Omaha and Utah were the beaches they were going to and they knew the names but not the locations. We all knew the operation was called Overlord."

French said Dawe called him in soon after D-Day and asked to see his notebooks in which he had written what he learned from the troops. "He was horrified and said the books must be burned at once. He confiscated them and I suppose they were (burned)."

Dawe then gave him "a very stern lecture about national security and made me swear on the Bible that I would tell no one about the matter. I have kept to that oath until now," French said.

The D-Day landings launched the major Allied offensive against Nazi-occupied Europe which culminated in Germany's surrender and the end of World War II in the European theater in May 1945.

Before his death in 1963, Dawe told the BBC how MI5 "turned me inside out and ... grilled my brother-in-law." Jones, the other crossword compiler, also was "put through the works. But they eventually decided not to shoot us after all," Dawe said.

The paper said "full corroboration of the story is, of course, impossible to obtain," but added that it had contacted schoolmates of French who recalled elements of the affair.

'I've got everything here. I've got friends...a home

LE MOLAY-LITTRY, France (AP) — When Howard Gillingham rolled into this Normandy town in June 1944 with the U.S. 2nd Armored Division, the young sergeant from Iowa never dreamed he would one day be married to one of its citizens and running a typical French cafe.

But being a "war husband" has never bothered Gillingham. In the years he has been here he has become part of the scenery, melted into the local population, indistiguishable from most of the other 2,500 inhabitants — except when he speaks.

Over a beer at the Cafe de Paris in Le Molay-Littry, Gillingham's wife, Janine, ribs him gently about his broad accent, and he acknowledges that he never really tried too hard.

"Whatever I picked up at the bar, I did, but the customers got used to it," he said with a smile.

"A lot of people just didn't understand him," added Janine. "I could see it on their faces. He was just lazy. He got the Herald Tribune (an English-language newspaper published in Paris) every day and didn't make any effort."

Gillingham landed in France on June 9, 1944, three days after D-Day in the beginning of the massive operation Overlord and the final push against Adolf Hitler's Nazi Germany. Le Molay-Littry was liberated June 10.

Gillingham's tank maintenance unit set up camp on the outskirts of town, and Janine Massey was among the many young French girls that came by in the evening to listen to the radio and give fresh fruit and vegetables to the American soldiers.

"His friend Charlie was always talking to my girlfriend in English," Janine said. "He talked loud."

But Howard was much calmer and quieter and she liked that, she recalled.

"I was 17 years old and he was 21. He was old."

Her parents were not too thrilled with the budding romance.

"My mother told my father: 'Did you notice how she is seeing the same American every day? I'm afraid she's going to learn a little more than English.'

"There were a lot of GIs engaged to French girls who never came back."

Suddenly, on July 25, Gillingham's unit pulled out and headed for the front farther east.

"He sent a note on a cigarette package saying that he was leaving," Janine laughed. "Somebody brought it to me and said: 'An American gave this to me to give to you.' I didn't even know enough English to read it. I didn't know when he left if he would ever come back."

But he did. After being sent from Germany to a hospital in Reims, France, Gillingham took a couple of days and hitchhiked back to Normandy. And that was it until 1947.

"We wrote to each other for a couple of years," said Gillingham, who had in the interim returned to Oelwein, Iowa. But in January 1947, he returned to France. They were married in April and left for Iowa.

They came back to France in 1952 when Gillingham, a welder by profession, got a job with a Belgian company cutting up wrecked ships on the D-Day beaches.

"Finally we had to go back because it was too hard to make a living in France," Gillingham recounted.

"Then in 1961, my father wrote he was ready to give up this place and retire, and wanted to know if we wanted to take it over," Janine said. So they packed up their daughter and four sons and made the final move.

A year ago, Gillingham retired and turned over management of the cafe to his son, Marc. Now, for Gillingham, it's hunting, fishing, cards and above all, golf.

"I've got everything here," he said. "I've got friends, I've got a home."

And sometimes he even forgets he's an American.

Noted one of his friends, Claude Dupont: "He's always talking about politics, about unemployment. The other day he was talking about how they ought to get rid of all those foreigners taking jobs. He forgets he's one too."

Mystery shrouds couple's post-prom disappearance

'He'd rather be fishing than be with a woman, it's simple as that'

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Twelve days ago, Brian McEwen took Beth Ann Brooks to her high school prom. They haven't been seen since they set out for a post-prom party, and parents, friends and law officers investigating their disappearance are baffled.

"It's just like they were swallowed up by aliens," said Douglas County Sheriff Richard A. Roth.

The sheriff's department has tracked several leads, but nothing has checked out. Now, detectives are hoping a national missing persons bulletin will turn up information on the whereabouts of McEwen, 20, a sophomore engineering student at the University of Nebraska-Omaha, and Brooks, 17, a junior honor roll student at Millard South High School.

They were last seen about 12:30 a.m. on Saturday, May 12. The couple went to the prom Friday night, then drove to McEwen's house where he changed from his rented white tuxedo into blue jeans and a sweat shirt. From there, they went to Brooks' house where she changed clothes.

They vanished on their way to an after-prom party at an Omaha motel, and the mystery began.

Investigators believe the couple may have been abducted or had an accident. They say the evidence does not support their initial theory that McEwen and Brooks ran away.

"That's the first thing that came to my mind, that's the first thing that came to everybody's mind," Sheriff's Sgt. Marty Bilek said Monday. "Every time we tried to confirm that happened, it turned out we discounted it."

"Everything doesn't add up," said Kenneth L. McEwen, noting that his son was supposed to go fishing at 8:30 the morning he disappeared.

"He'd rather be fishing than be with a woman," the elder McEwen said. "It's as simple as that."

Carmella Brooks said her daughter was "happy-go-lucky, really involved in life and living" — not likely to run off with someone she'd been dating off and on for only five or six weeks.

"I'm just completely baffled," Mrs. Brooks said.

The parents say their children left for the after-prom party with no check books, credit cards, extra cash or extra clothing. Friends who went with them to the prom have said the couple had no intentions of running away, Bilek said.

"They're the kind of kids you'd want your own to be," said Brian Tracy, assistant manager at the grocery store where McEwen and Brooks worked. "There's nothing in any of their backgrounds that they'd run away."

"We wanted all along that they really did something dumb (like run away)," said the elder McEwen, a writer in the advertising department at Northwest Bell Telephone Co. "I've come to the point that they were abducted."

Agent Chuck Wiley said the FBI was treating the case as a "possible kidnapping." But the elder McEwen said no one has received anything resembling a ransom demand.

For a few days after the couple vanished, search parties combed wooded areas of Douglas County for McEwen's burnt-orange Jeep Wagoneer. But the search turned up no sign of the couple or the Jeep.

Bilek said authorities are checking several telephone tips from Nebraska, Iowa, Missouri, Kansas and Wisconsin on possible sightings. The sheriff's department and the FBI were working together on the case.

"We're treating it as a very serious incident and we're giving it a great deal of attention," Bilek said. "We care a great deal for the welfare of these two juveniles.

"I'm not going to call it a kidnapping, I'm not going to call it anything," he said. "I'm not going to speculate on what happened. We'll assume that a worst-case scenario has taken place, and hope for the best."

Q: What is the most important quality to look for in carpeting?

A: Resilience! The ability to bounce or spring back, to resume original form after stretching, bending, treading, crushing.

Q: What is the most resilient carpet fiber?

A: Wool. And it is naturally so (have you ever seen a flat sheep?). With wool, nature once again displays her superiority by creating a fiber of incredible complexity (man has, in fact, yet been able to duplicate it). A fiber that is, at once, soft, warm, durable, easy-to-maintain and fire-retardant as well as buoyant. (Deceit isn't the only reason wolves don sheep's clothing!)

Q: How does wool do all these things?

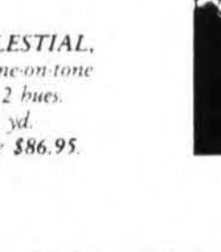
A: Without getting too technical, each wool fiber is composed of tiny molecular chains, coiled within tough, scaly skins. This design provides a natural crimp or springiness that can withstand stretching and twisting without breaking, then can relax between "crises" to preserve strength and molecular continuity for a long, long time. A durability Karastan utilizes to the fullest to give you years of magnificent wear.

Q: Fire-retardant? Please explain.

A: Unlike synthetic fibers which either support or melt under a flame, wool is self-extinguishing when the fire is removed. Burns, such as those from cigarettes, do not permanently mar wool carpet either. Because the burned fibers char rather than melt, the broken ends can be brushed away with a blunt-edged tool and the spot essentially disappears.

Q: What makes wool easy to maintain?

A: The scaly surfaces of its fibers tend to hold dirt high in the pile so that it can be easily vacuumed away. Furthermore, neither dirt, oily grit nor water adhere well to this outer skin, so these are more easily removed. Finally, because wool fibers are opaque, they tend to hide dirt better than smooth, translucent synthetic fibers.



Q: What about spills?

A: Fleece naturally sheds water to facilitate sponge-up operations. Under humid conditions, however, wool actually retains moisture to resist static electricity and repel dust. Hidden benefits few people are aware of.

Q: How do wool's colors hold up?

A: Beautifully. Because of wool's complex chemical structure, it absorbs dyes readily without fixative agents. And the scaly surfaces of its fibers break up the light, resulting in colors that seem more lustrous than they do in synthetic fibers. A bonus: as the carpet ages, the fiber scales also cause the color to deepen and assume the kind of patina so appealing to collectors of antique wool carpets and tapestries.

Q: What sort of textures can I choose from?

A: Our Karastan collection includes sumptuous velvet plushes, rugged Berbers, high loops, low loops, new felted yarns, and more. You're destined to find the absolutely perfect, transformative look for your home here.

Q: What about wool's cost?

A: When balanced against the superior performance, easy maintenance, unparalleled beauty and durability derived, the price of wool is an outstanding value even at full price; at 20%-35% savings, it's a better value still!

Q: You say installation's included. Anything else?

A: In addition to our professional installation, we also provide free room measurement and free disposal of your old carpeting. Come, let us show you all the advantages of owning Karastan wool, on sale now through May 31. In Robinson's Broadloom, 63.

*No payment until November, 1984, on all area rug, carpeting, furniture and mattress purchases of $200 or more on your Robinson's charge (subject to credit approval).

HB lifeguards want to 'oceanproof' kids

Marine department starting Jr. lifeguard program this summer

By JERRY HIRSCH
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Newport Beach lifeguards want to "oceanproof" your child.

The Newport Beach Marine Department is starting a new junior lifeguard program for children ages nine to 15 this summer.

The five-week, five-day program will give children basic instruction in first aid, beach and water hazards, life saving, skin diving, marine safety, ecology, surfing and physical conditioning, said Jack Lincke, a Newport marine safety officer.

"We want to accomplish what we call oceanproofing — teaching the kids the different hazards of the beach environment.

"We want to help them to develop the physical skills to that the have the strength to really enjoy the ocean safely," Lincke said.

Jack Lincke

Some of the skills the lifeguards will teach include how to recognize a dangerous riptide from the shore, how to swim out of a riptide once you are in it and how to enter the water without risking a spinal injury.

Spinal injuries have become increasingly common among local swimmers and the lifeguards and Hoag Memorial Hospital have embarked on a public education program at local schools to make students aware of the problem.

The lifeguards will offer two sessions of the course, one in the morning and one in the afternoon, starting June 25 and two more sessions starting July 30.

There is a $75 fee but the Newport Lifeguard Association is offering at least one scholarship and Lincke hopes to offer more.

For more information on the course, contact the Newport Beach Marine Department at 640-2154. A tryout will be held at the Newport Harbor High School Pool at 9 a.m. Satuday, June 2. All potential junior lifeguards must be able to swim.

But Lincke knows how popular surfing is in Newport Beach and the program will include teaching basic board surfing, body surfing and boogie board skills.

OCC programs set

Children's theater groups, international tours, youth orchestras, swim programs and business seminars are among the 350 diverse programs being offered at Orange Coast College this summer.

The programs are detailed in a 56-page free brochure which is available in the OCC Student Center Building. The office is open 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. weekdays and from 8 a.m. to noon on Saturdays.

MV gas station worker burned in gasoline fire

A Mission Viejo gas station attendant was listed in serious condition Tuesday with second- and third-degree burns following a freak gasoline accident.

Barry Tiemann, 37, sustained burns over 20 percent of his upper body when the gasoline he was draining from a car "flashed" and caught fire.

Tiemann, who was burned most severely on his arms, was flown by helicopter to the UCI Medical Center burn ward following the 5:30 p.m. mishap on Monday.

Firemen said Tiemann was cranking the engine of the car to speed the draining of the gasoline when the "fire" was sparked.

Podiatric Surgical Group keeps pace with research

The average person walks three times around the surface of the earth in a lifetime.

"That's a lot of miles of wear and tear," Dr. Craig Lowe, founder of the Podiatric Surgical Group of Orange County, said.

Within the last five years, foot surgery research has taken great strides. Advancements such as laser technology, microsurgery, and computerized orthopedic medicine are now speeding up the healing and diagnositc process for foot ailments and injuries, according to Lowe. Lowe is a board-certified podiatrist with fellowship degrees by The American College of Foot Orthopaedics, American Academy of Podiatric Laser Surgery, American Academy of Podiatric Microsurgery, and American Academy of Podiatric Sport Medicine.

At the Podiatric Surgical Group of Orange County, quality foot care is provided to each patient to ensure reduced pain, disability, and time off work.

Laser technology involves the use of carbon dioxide lasers which vaporizes diseased tissue with relatively no bleeding, adhesions, or scar tissue, according to Lowe.

This type of treatment is used for routine procedures such as heel spur surgery, ingrown nails, and wart tumors, or for the correction of bunions, hammertoes with corns, and calluses.

Microsurgery, which Lowe performs by looking at the injury through a surgical microscope, is used when nerve tumors, traumatic artery lacerations, or foreign bodies are encountered.

Compurterized orthopedic medicine requires the use of an electrodynogram (EDG). Similar in function to the electrocardiogram which is used on the heart to discover the causes of heart abnormalities, the EDG finds out the mechanical causes for back, leg and foot disease.

What summertime blues?

BILL HARVEY

I remember a time when my biggest ambition was to work very hard, save all of my money and buy a house right on the sand in Newport Beach. Yup. That's what I wanted to do alright. I guess that you could chalk that one up to the ignorance of youth. I've learned a lot since then and I learn even more each time that Ann and I venture down to the beach during the summer months.

As I may have mentioned sometime before, we live fairly close to the beach, at least close enough to where we can hear the surf at night. And the yelling. And the screaming. And the music. We have to make special concessions during the summer. For example, if we plan to go out onto Brookhurst, we have to go up Bushard till we come to a street that has a traffic signal on Brookhurst.

It's that or sit there for upwards of 20 minutes waiting for a break in traffic at an uncontrolled intersection.

Those breaks in traffic can be incredibly few and far between. For example:

Last Sunday, Ann and I decided to treat ourselves. We hadn't been out to breakfast in what seemed like a very long time, so we headed up to Costa Mesa. It was also an opportunity to ride our motorcycle. While we were out, we decided to see if we could find a T-shirt store.

We decided to go to the beach. We decided that since they sold all sorts of tourist goodies there, they'd be likely to have T-shirts. We made it down to Balboa Island alright, and there were two T-shirt stores, but neither had what we were looking for.

We went to catch the ferry. That's when we should have heeded the warning and gone home. There were about 35 cars in line. Now, with regards to motorcycles and the ferry, it's generally accepted that motorcycles are very like bicycles and so we usually ride to the head of the line and get on, keeping to one side. This in no way effects the number of cars that can board. We did this. If we had only gone home instead.

There used to be a T-shirt store on the peninsula at the ferry landing. It was still there, but had changed. No T-shirts. We decided to go up to the Newport pier. There had to be a T-shirt store there.

Heading west on the peninsula, we came to the street where you have to turn left to get to the Newport pier. There was a car ahead of us, waiting to make a U-turn, so we pulled up to his right.

There was a solid line of traffic coming. And still coming. And still some more coming! There was now a string of cars behind us, waiting to turn left. The traffic kept coming! Somewhere, back up the street, a light had to change to red and cause a break in the traffic, didn't it? Well, didn't it?

Apparently not. There was a steady string of bumper-to-bumper traffic as far as the eye could see. I didn't time the thing, but I'm certain that we sat there for at least six minutes, and the traffic showed no sign of lessening.

I suppose that at that point I could have decided to continue up the peninsula to PCH and headed for home, but after investing all of that time in this thing, it had become a matter of honor. I'm absolutely sure that the people in the cars behind us felt the same way.

I was suddenly struck with inspiration! I turned to Ann and suggested that she might enjoy a little stroll along the crosswalk. She agreed.

She got off the bike, went to the island in the center of the street and very bravely inserted her left foot into the flow of traffic. It obediently screeched to a halt and Ann started across. I zipped across the street and waited at the corner for her.

Now, Ann is one of the most considerate people I have ever known. She always thinks of the other fellow. I'm sure that she was doing just that as she very slowly strolled across the street and allowed fully five cars full of waving, clapping, cheering folks, all of whom loved her at that moment, to cross.

You know, I've always known that Ann is pretty enough to stop traffic, but on that Sunday, I was treated to a practical demonstration of that fact.

I don't leave home without her.

RICHARD COHEN

WASHINGTON — Shortly after the last Americans left Vietnam, a friend of mine got into an argument with a noted hawk who contended that if the United States had only persevered it could have won the war. My friend did not argue with that. America could have won, he agreed — but at what cost to the country? The noted hawk got his point. Some wars, he conceded, you win abroad and lose at home.

We are fast approaching that point when it comes to Central America. The area is not yet another Vietnam, neither in scope nor in the extent of American participation, but already we see one pattern being repeated. It's harder and harder to believe what our own government is saying.

That was the hallmark of the Vietnam era. Sure, the United States was involved in an unpopular and unwise war and there would have been dissent in any case. But what gave the dissent its impetus and sometimes its nasty edge of violence was the belief that our own government was lying to us — conducting secret bombings, falsifying figures, deceiving Congress.

All of that is present now in Central America. President Reagan's speeches on the subject are full of Lyndon Johnson-like hyperbole and "facts" of his own concotion — Nicaragua's official anti-Semitism, for instance. We continue to conduct a covert war against the Sandinistas which was launched without announcement or debate. Its existence was revealed in the press — not in a press release — and it still goes officially unacknowledged by the administration itself — much like the so-called secret bombing of Cambodia.

Similarly, American involvement in the mining of Nicaraguan harbors — a virtual act of war — also was done secretly. It was done so secretly, in fact, that some key members of the Senate Intelligence Committee — notably Sens. Daniel Patrick Moynihan and Barry Goldwater — complained that they were just plain deceived.

It turns out now that the United States pumped some $1.4 million into the El Salvador elections, mostly to secure the election of Jose Napoleon Duarte. The reason we know this is that Sen. Jesse Helms shot his mouth off. Whatever you may think of his alleged security breach — and some senators think it's awful — it too contains the unstated bleat of deception. Helms is all but saying, "But I thought we were neutral" — a complaint echoed by some Salvadoran politicians.

And now the press is reporting that the administration seems to have found ways of circumventing congressional restrictions on military aid to Central America. The government allegedly has shuffled budgets, taken Pentagon money and given it to the CIA. The Defense Department, for instance, has allegedly provided the CIA with guns, ships and planes — in effect subsidizing it and allowing it to skirt congressional restrictions on its activities. And there have been even more recent reports that the CIA has prevailed upon the Israelis to function as American surrogates and help the Contras.

We have seen this sort of thing before. The operating mentality is arrogance — the conviction that the situation is so critical, so stark, that it justifies either unethical or extra-legal actions. In the end, Americans and their elected representatives get treated like they, too, are the enemy. Information is witheld. Congress is circumvented and rhetoric is inflated to justify what has already been done.

Already, much of what the administration says about Central America has to be taken with a grain of salt. A kind of Vietnam-era cynicism hovers over this town — a suspicion that the announced agenda is not the real agenda and that despite assurances to the contrary, the worst is yet to come.

Central America is not yet Vietnam. American troops are not really engaged in the fighting and few of them are there anyway. But it resembles Vietnam in the administration's conviction that it has a monopoly on the truth and it must pursue a certain policy regardless of popular opinion. This was the ultimate mistake of Vietnam.

In Central America, the winner has yet to be determined. But the loser is becoming more and more obvious. It's the administration's credibility.

FALN may be making plans to terrorize Olympic Games

JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — Intelligence reports warn that the radical Puerto Rican revolutionary group, known by the dread letters FALN, has set up mobile camps across the Mexican border to train terrorists for attacks on the Summer Olympic Games in Los Angeles.

Ominously, the reports also predict that the FALN's violent leader, William Morales, will soon be released from a Mexican prison and delivered into the custody of leftist authorities in the Tijuana area. That's as close to Los Angeles as he could get to set up terrorist headquarters without crossing into U.S. jurisdiction.

The Soviet grievances against the Los Angeles Olympics, meanwhile, will encourage the terrorists to strike all the harder. U.S. intelligence sources fear. The FALN is led by hard-line Marxists who ape the Moscow line and tend, in the way of young revolutionaries, to translate propaganda into violence.

This group is regarded by the FBI as the No. 1 terrorist threat to the United States, and Morales is this nation's most wanted terrorist. According to an intelligence document, "the FALN has been responsible for over 150 terrorist bombings in the U.S. since its founding in 1973. ... (It) has developed an extensive terrorist network stretching across the U.S. and into Mexico. Morales is also developing links with insurgent movements in Central America."

My associate Jon Lee Anderson spent most of a day with Morales in the maximum security wing of Reclusorio Norte, a model Mexican prison on the outskirts of Mexico City. This was supposed to have been the first of a series of meetings, leading up to a visit to the terrorist camps.

But the dialogue broke down. Morales was willing to continue the screening process but left the decision to his FALN comrades in the United States. They finally said no.

But Anderson did not come back without a story. He's the only reporter, after all, who has been allowed to meet the FALN leader. Morales is a determined revolutionary and Marxist zealot driven at once by idealism and hatred, a would-be usurper who justifies himself as the avenger of terrible wrongs. Yet he's the mere boss of a small gang who seeks to stir up a mass following.

"I am a member of a revolutionary movement which is at war with the United States government," he told my reporter.

The 34-year-old Morales, a slim man with a coffee-colored complexion, is shocking to look at. His mouth, chin and both hands were blown off in a bomb explosion at an FALN bomb factory in New York in 1978. He has a single digit that passes for a finger on each stump. It's all he needs, apparently, to feed himself and attend to his basic needs.

With these stumps, he escaped from the fourth floor of a New York prison hospital in 1979. Incredibly, he used wire cutters, smuggled into the prison, to cut his way through a wire-mesh window screen. With 10 feet of elastic bandage, which he wet to strengthen, he lowered himself down the outside wall of the hospital. He then had to drop more than 30 feet. Police found deep footprints in the grass under his window.

Morales' dramatic escape occurred on May 21, 1979. He disappeared into the underground and, according to an intelligence report, "began operating between Mexico and the U.S." Police located his wife, Dylcia Pagan Morales, in Chicago and traced her incoming calls from Mexico.

The FBI tipped off the Mexican authorities that Morales was plotting to bomb a joint U.S.-Mexican legislative conference. This led to a shootout in the city of Puebla on May 28, 1983. Morales was captured after his companion fell dead in a hail of bullets. A police officer also died in the exchange.

Morales was sentenced to 89 years in prison, which would keep him out of circulation for a long time. But Anderson found Morales confident that he would soon be freed. Telegraphed my reporter: "U.S. lawmen, who want Morales extradited, might do well to worry that he could slip from their clutches in Mexico."

Not long after I received this report, my associate Donald Goldberg learned from intelligence reports that, indeed, Morales is expected to be handed over to leftist authorities in Tijuana. They are expected to give him free rein to direct the terrorist training in clandestine camps in northern Mexico.

BLUNDER OF THE WEEK: The National Gallery of Art, which prides itself on perfection in matters artistic, has a king-sized goof in its richly illustrated new catalog: On page 30 of the "Catalogue of Color Reproductions No. 6," the multi-million-dollar Picasso, "Family of Saltimbanques," is printed backward.

The reversed picture was spotted by a gallery employee — but not before the $25,000 press run of some 50,000 catalogs was virtually complete. But buyers of the $1 catalogs may be winners after all. Like inverted postage stamps, such printing errors have a way of increasing in value. The next press run will display the picture correctly, making the imperfect catalogs collectors' items.

KITCHEN KUTS: Remember when administration budget cutters tried to palm off ketchup as a "vegetable" in school lunches? Now the Office of Management and Budget has dropped a $10 million program that provides stoves, refrigerators and other equipment to schools starting up lunch programs. Aides of Rep. Stephen Solarz, D-N.Y., spotted the omission and are determined to put the heat on the administration to get back in the kitchen.

Nuclear evacuation plan leave this reader nervous

To the Editor:

I am worried about the civil defense crisis relocation plan for Orange County that the federal government is presently working on. I don't see how such a plan can work.

Basically the idea behind this plan is that when our government thinks nuclear attack is imminent, we Orange Countians will drive out into the desert and camp out.

But how can such an approach work? For instance, can you imagine half of the cars in Orange County trying to get on the Riverside Freeway at the same time — with each driver fearing that a hydrogen bomb may explode in the sky above at any second? Yet as I understand it, something close to that is what the federal civil defense people have in mind for us in the event of a nuclear alert.

Even though such thinking is nutty, it is still dangerous. This is because crisis relocation planning — on the surface, at least — contributes to the illusion that safety can be provided to the public in the event of a nuclear attack. Nuclear war thus becomes perceived as a less catastrophic and more acceptable event than it really is — leading to a greater possibility that our government will risk fighting such a war.

This is a very important matter. Consequently, there should be public hearings to examine all aspects of a crisis relocation plan for Orange County before any money is wasted implementing it.

Paper not place for Playmate

To the Editor:

The Saddleback Collee coed who made Playboy magazine's "Playmate of the Year" should be very proud of accomplishing this recognition. However, I don't think the Daily Pilot should be very proud of their decision to display the huge photo on the front page of the Friday, May 11 edition showing her holding the Playboy, with the risque front cover photo.

Anyway, that was a great plug for the magazine. Maybe I should cancel my Daily Pilot subscription and subscribe to Photoplay.

NB's sands a public disgrace

To the Editor:

I read with interest and some amusement the May 7 article in the Daily Pilot concerning our soon-to-be "three wheeling cops" and the long line of volunteers for this new "fun" beach duty. Thereafter I went for a walk along our ocean front from the pier north to the 3300 block and came back mad as hell. Why? Because I realized that, under the present policy, two, 20 or 200 officers on foot, horseback, jeep or motorized tricycles will do absolutely nothing to stem the ever increasing use of our beautiful beach as a dumping ground. The trash and garbage deposited on our beach, sidewalks, streets and in the ocean by the uncivilized ingrates who enjoy the free use thereof is appalling and sickening to the stomach.

I invite the mayor, city council and chief of police to visit West Newport Beach after a busy day, particularly on weekend evenings and see for yourselves the unbelievable trash and filth. Aside from the gross ugliness of what you will see is what you won't see, that is, until you enter the water for a swim and encounter the bottles, cans and a variety of garbage.

I have enjoyed this beach since the early 30s and have been privileged to own an ocean front home for nearly 20 years during which time I have not seen or heard of anyone, being arrested for littering. Unenforced laws are worse than no laws at all. If the police were to begin issuing citations for littering the word would spread and the response from the public would be positive and quick. Our local judges should be encouraged to levy heavy fines or, as an alternative, require that the offenders spend one or two weekends cleaning up the beach, wearing apparel boldly identifying them as litterbugs.

Please, if you have any respect for our beautiful beach and for the residents and taxpayers who pay for its maintenance and upkeep, do something positive now.

Coastline College costly tenant

To the Editor:

In regard to your editorial in the April 4 issue entitled "College district gets a blueprint for the future" you reported that the Evans Management Services report supports Coastline College — the unique "college without a campus."

I was surprised by this because the fact remains that Coastline College has to pay rent on all their different locations. Why can't we put these classes for adults in Orange Coast and Golden West colleges? This would save the taxpayers much money. This money could be used by our two-year colleges and for our young people from kindergarten to 12th grade.

The money that is spent for adult education is taken from our young people.

At a time of tight money do we taxpayers need to pay $2 million a year to operate KOCE TV station?

Prevent tragedy in pools

CHICAGO (AP) — If you own one of the 4 million residential swimming pools in the United States, it's time for a refresher course on swimming pool safety, says Tod Turriff, manager of the public safety department of the National Safety Council.

"Each year between 600 and 700 people drown and another 65,000 are injured in all types of swimming pool accidents," he said. "About one half of these accidents happen in residential swimming pools. Most could have been prevented with proper knowledge and training in swimming pool safety."

He has these safety tips:

• Pool security: swimming pools must be enclosed by a fence or wall at least 4 feet high to prevent small children or unwanted users from getting into the pool. The fence or wall should have a self-latching gate mechanism; latches should be high enough that small children can't reach them. Gates should be locked when the pool is not in use.

Ideally, the fence or barrier should completely surround the perimeter of the swimming pool. When the house is used as a part of the barrier, extra care must be taken to prevent access to the pool area (through doors and windows) by young children.

Although security latches are often used to prevent this type of unauthorized entry, remember that they may also prevent escape in the event of an emergency.

• Deck area and pool: Keep a ring buoy with a line attached and a strong, lightweight pole 10 to 12 feet long in the pool area at all times.

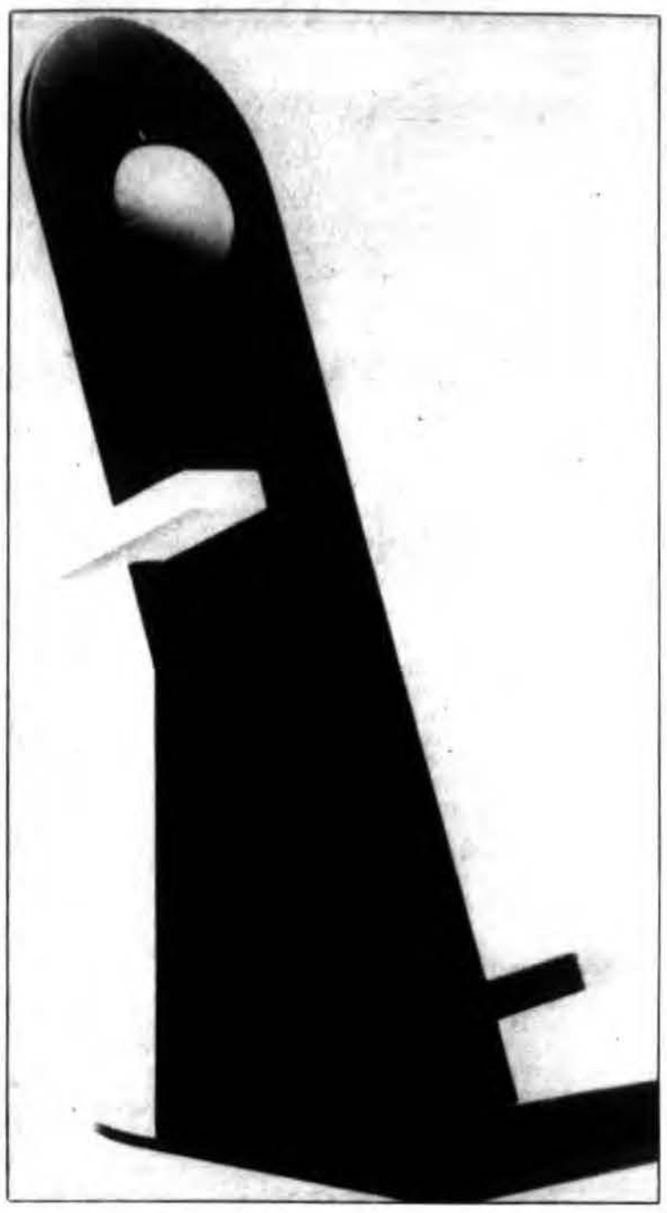
A telephone should be accessible and emergency phone numbers placed right next to it: police, fire, hospital, rescue squad, paramedics, doctor, etc. In case someone falls in or is injured you will be prepared to act fast.

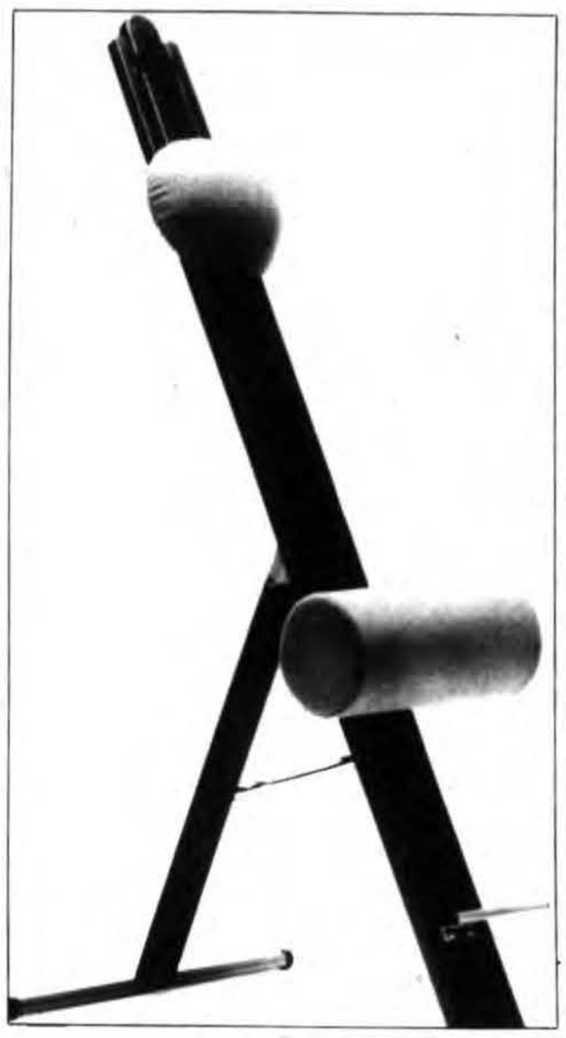
Water depth should be clearly marked on the pool deck and, if possible, above the water line of the pool wall. Markings should be displayed in feet and inches and in a contrasting color to the deck and pool finish.

"Diving into shallow water can result in cervical spine injuries causing permanent paralysis," Turriff said. "Prohibit diving into aboveground pools. Strictly supervise the use of diving boards and water slides — and make sure this equipment is designed for use in your type of pool."

Deep and shallow water areas of a pool should be separated by a semi-permanent float line, he said. This serves as a visual reference for non-swimmers and can be used to support a swimmer in an emergency.

Chairs with style





Take a load off your feet — lean back into a resting position in the Stand-In (left), which offers support for an arm and leg and an adjustable headrest. The Locust High offers an upholstered seat and a head cushion that doubles as a backrest.

These chairs were designed to keep the body aligned

By MICHALENE BUSICO
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Two newly imported concepts in home furniture are about to hit the Orange County market — and it may never be the same.

On first glance, the weary shopper might not realize that sketchy-looking Balans are "chairs," and the conventional looking "Pack and Carry" furniture has made its name by collapsing.

Balans was conceived, the story goes, by two Norwegian architects having a casual dinner. They were sitting on a sofa, watching television and eating off a low coffee table.

"Sitting up and leaning over bunches up your stomach and is an uncomfortable way to eat," Danica furniture store manager LaGrecia Eason said. "The architects decided that there had to be a better way."

The pair collaborated with physicians and physical therapists, who maintain that some conventional seating can contribute to chronic back and muscle pain.

Though the resulting seating varies from low padded round hollows to wooden easel-like structures, all are based on the same two principles: The optimal sitting angle is 120 degrees, not the conventional 90 degrees; and weight should be distributed over the knees and lower part of the body, not the middle.

Eason said the pieces automatically align the spine, promote better circulation, leave the diaphragm completely uninhibited for freer breathing, and give better space to the internal organs.

"A lot of people come in here to try out the chair because their doctor or physical therapist recommended it," she said.

But customers often buy them for sewing chairs, dining room chairs or just because they like the modern, sculptured look of them.

Of course, some people are intimidated by the outlandish designs. Eason coaxes them into trying the innovative furniture by using only Balans in the store's office area.

"For a second you have to forget about the prejudice you might have and just sit in it ... you have to see it won't hurt you," she said. "In the recliner, you are sort of suspended in air — this is the chair people are really scared of — I've had people lean back and scream."

She said older customers are usually the hardest to convince, while children can't wait to play on the furniture that does look rather toy-like.

The Balans stool, the most popular design, costs $175 for the stationary or portable model. The Balans Tripodis, the scary combination of stool, chair and recliner, sells for $430.

Those three styles are currently stocked in the Costa Mesa Danica store,

Your future may hold a better TV set

High-definition means movie clarity on the tube

By CHANGING TIMES
The Kiplinger Magazine

Scene: your living room. Time: the 1990s. You sit back in your easy chair and press a button, and a huge TV screen lights up with the brilliant colors and clarity that you now see only in movie theaters. The screen is extra-wide, and the sound is high-fidelity stereo.

This impressive transformation of the tube may become the biggest revolution in television since the introduction of color in the 1950s. It's called high-definition television, or HDTV, and it could put the clarity of TV on a par with the movies.

What makes HDTV so good? A high-definition TV system has more than 1,000 scanning lines, nearly twice the number of today's TV screens. The dots that make up each line are closer together, so the picture has four or five times as much detail, or resolution, as contemporary TV.

Furthermore, the screen would be 25 percent wider than the screens you see today. HDTV would transmit more color information than ordinary TV, showing differences in hue, saturation and intensity.

The basic technology for HDTV is already available, but because of high costs and other complications, it could take a decade or longer to reach your living room.

First, the Federal Communications Commission would have to allocate vast amounts of new channel space, and broadcasters might have to invest in expensive new cameras and studio equipment. To receive HDTV broadcasts, you would have to buy a new type of TV set that could easily cost more than twice as much as the one you have now.

Would the picture be worth the price? Manufacturers are betting that the movies you watch on pay TV, cable TV and videocassette recorders will make you long for cinematic quality.

Because one channel of high-definition television could require as much bandwidth as five of today's TV channels, HDTV is considered impractical for VHF or UHF broadcasts. Instead, the programming would probably be transmitted by satellite and beamed straight from the sky to a dish antenna on your roof, or satellite signals could be sent to a cable TV operator's dish antenna and then transmitted to your home by cable.

The satellite would probably be a special, high-powered type called a direct-broadcast satellite. The first of those may be launched in 1986.

Before the FCC starts allowing HDTV programs to be bounced off satellites, there's a chance that you'll be able to watch high-definition movies on video cassette tapes. Of course, you would need a new type of videocassette recorder as well as a new TV.

Ironically, high-definition video could come to movie theaters before it enters the home. By using an HDTV videocassette tape in place of film, theaters could eliminate the need to hire a costly projection engineer. Theaters could also receive high-definition video movies directly from production studios via satellite.

Some movie producers are already trying to replace 35mm film with high-definition videotape at the production stage.

YOUNG VOICES A BIG HIT WITH MUSIC GROUP

By ANN CONWAY
Daily Pilot Correspondent

Moist eyes, lumps in the throat and hearty applause greeted 100 kindergarten and first-grade students when they provided the musical entertainment at the Huntington Harbour Philharmonic Committee's recent board installation and luncheon.

Performing in the pool area of the Newporter, the children had dressed in their "Sunday best" to salute the success of the Orange County Philharmonic Society's musical reinvestment program.

Annually, each Philharmonic chapter is awarded 10 percent of its fund-raising proceeds for musical enrichment programs.

For Huntington Harbour, the reinvestment opportunity is sizable. Last year's proceeds from the annual Christmas Symphony of Lights (nightly boat tours through the harbor) netted the group $63,000.

The chapter uses its funds to hire music teacher Carol Gilfoy who works with students in Harbour View and Smith schools in Huntington Beach and McGaugh in Seal Beach. All are schools that harbor area children attend.

The group also grants money to the Joint Council for Education Technology that supports Channel 12 in providing musical programming for primary grades.

Installed as new Harbour board members for 1984 were Sandra Clouse, chairman, and Yvonne Kelley, Nancy Kasabali, Shirley Stitzinger, Rosemary Smith, Mona Monteleon, Ruth Rowe, Betty Watson and Kay Milano. Jerry Railey (Cruise of Lights chairman) and Joyce Weiss (Boat Parade chairman) also attended.

Enjoying the day were Joyce Reaume, county Philharmonic chairman; James Felton, president of the Philharmonic county board; Bob Elias, executive director, and Bob Watson, 1983 boat parade grand marshal.

It takes a heap o' lovin to make a house a home — or a restaurant a refuge, the way Andreino de Santis does.

At a recent dinner party benefiting the Huntington Harbour Cancer League in his intimate Andreino's in San Clemente, de Santis hovered over his guests with wine pouring, plate clearing and a doting "Is everything all right?" attention to detail.

The results were decidely detaining. Second rounds of espresso and encores of "Arriverderci Roma" on the accordion punctuated an evening filled with generous portions of antipasto (proffered to guests as they "debused" from chartered Greyhounds), glorious Italian varietals (poured while they waited to be seated) and tortellini, veal, scampi and dessert.

Two thousand dollars was the result of the effort spearheaded by Marcia Loughlin, which was a fund-raising first for the group. In the past, the league's annual "Debut" fashion show, held in the fall, has been the only money-maker.

Enjoying the evening were Chuck and Jerry Railey,

PERSONAL STYLE

All it required was a single taste of caviar

PILAR WAYNE

Most people have to acquire a taste for caviar, but I liked it from the start.

Duke had a passion for good caviar. When he was filming "Legend of The Lost" with Sophia Loren in Rome, she taught him to put a big scoop of caviar on a baked potato with some sour cream. That was always a treat for him.

The first time I had caviar was when we were staying in London for the filming of "Circus World." One evening Dimitri Tiomkin, the world famous composer, asked us out to dinner. He took us to this most elegant restaurant and we were seated at probably the best table in the room.

Dimitri turned to the maitre d' and said "bring my favorite for the three of us."

I could not believe my eyes when a few minutes later a huge carved ice camel appeared. From one pack bag hung a bottle of ice cold Stolichnaya vodka, and from the other about five pounds of caviar!

There must have been five waiters around our table serving this delicacy. There were blinis and chopped onions, chopped eggs, sour cream, wedges of lemon wrapped in yellow tulle. It was scrumptious.

Dimitri lifted his ice cold Stolichnaya and said "Skoal." I almost fell out of my seat because the vodka was so strong, but it was very smooth. This has become my favorite way to start a super sit-down dinner!

CAVIAR CREPES

8 prepared crepes, about 4-inch diameter
3 ounces caviar
4 eggs, hard-boiled and coarsely chopped
1 small onion, finely chopped
1 pint sour cream

Mix eggs with onions, a little caviar, and enough sour cream to hold together. Place 2 tablespoons of this mixture on a crepe and roll. Place on a small plate with seams down. On top of crepe, put more caviar. Decorate plate with lemon wedges. Serves 4.

Serve with ice-cold vodka. (Keep your vodka in the freezer.)

Parentless children need love, too

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I feel sad for the woman who wrote "Musings of a Childless Couple." But if people who are crying buckets because they can't have children of their own would take a less than "perfect" child, a whole new world would open up to them. Here is my contribution:

MUSINGS OF PARENTLESS CHILDREN

We are parentless children, not by choice but by fate. Do you know us? I doubt it, because we are kept in "homes." Some of us are handicapped, mentally, physically or emotionally. We come in a variety of colors — yellow, red, black, brown and white.

We are parentless children. Even if we are put in foster homes, we still don't fit in when the conversation turns to parents and families. We really don't have any to call our own.

We will never know the feel of loving parental arms hugging us, or see the pride in our parents' eyes when we accomplish a goal. We will never have the opportunity to delight parents with word or deed. This is a terrible deprivation.

The emptiness of life without parents is indescribable. Only other parentless children can understand the depth of pain and despair that never goes away.

We are parentless children — not by choice but by fate. Please pray for us for we have not given up hope. Pray that even though we are not "fruit of thy womb" or "seed of thy loin" some wonderful people will take us in. Perhaps the reason God made parentless children was to fulfill childless couples who wish to become parents.

Please overlook that we are not all infants, not all perfect, and perhaps not even of your race. Just remember that we have a great deal of love to give and are waiting for someone who wants it. All we need is a chance. — SAD ALL OVER THE WORLD

DEAR SAD: My thanks for a poignant and sensible contribution. I hope somebody listens. Any adoption agency will direct people who are interested in a "less than perfect" child. Such children are plentiful and their gratitude is boundless.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I happen to be a person who enjoys moments of silence. I find it soothing and restful. Silence allows me to be reflective. It calms my nerves. It repairs my soul.

But more and more I am being denied this pleasure because some folks hold the mistaken notion that music is welcome anyplace, at any hour of the day or night.

Yesterday I encountered music in the beauty salon, the dentist's office, the grocery store and the bakery shop. In the evening I got it again on the telephone, waiting for my call to be completed.

Am I some kind of a lone nut or do others feel as I do? Please reply and tell me what, if anything, can be done about this latest form of pollution. — WEAR AND EAR-SORE IN KENTUCKY

DEAR W. IN K.: I've dealt with this problem in the past and believe me, you're not alone. Complain but don't expect anything to change. I'm afraid there are more who like it than don't.

What's prudish? What's O.K? If you aren't sure, you need some help. It's available in the booklet: "Necking and Petting — What Are the Limits?" Mail your request to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Ill. 60611, enclosing 50 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

HELP YOURSELF

Chest pains? Get diagnosis

Heart problem not the only cause of pain

Questions about chest pain are answered by Dr. Coodley, professor of Medicine at the UCI, College of Medicine, Chief of Gerontology at the V.A. Medical Center, and author of "Clinical Heart Disease in the Older Patient" and "Clinical Diagnosis of Chest Pain."

Q. From time to time, I've felt a pain in my chest. How common is chest pain? Does it mean I have a heart problem?

A. Chest pain is extremely common. Like you, most people who have chest pain worry that they might have a heart problem. For this reason, chest pain is the number one reason that people visit their doctors. Chances are, however, that your chest pain is caused by something else.

The percentage of people likely to have a heart problem is actually very small. Numbers, however, rise with age, in males and according to the following risk factors: a family history of heart attacks, tobacco usage, high blood pressure, diabetes and elevated levels of cholesterol.

Q. If my heart isn't the problem, what's causing the chest pain?

A. Chest pain may arise from the stomach, intestines, lungs, arthritic joints, neurological disorders, the heart lining, or the chest walls. Only chest pain that arises from coronary heart disease leads to heart attacks. Gastric acidity, commonly known as "heartburn," is a frequent source of chest pain.

A patient's chest pain may even confuse physicians because patients don't always describe the pain the way a text book might. An orderly approach to locating the source of the pain, however, will usually determine the cause.

Q. What are the usual symptoms of coronary heart disease?

A. In most cases, coronary heart disease is indicated by a pressure pain that appears in the middle of the chest after exertion, exposure to cold or emotional stress. The pain is usually accompanied by shortness of breath, sweating and, on occasion, nausea or an upset stomach.

In addition, the pain should disappear as soon as you stop exerting yourself, get out of the cold or relax. In other words, the pain would suggest coronary heart disease if it stops when you remove the precipitating factors.

Be aware, however, that although the above symnptoms are the usual ones, not every has the usual symptoms.

Q. How do I know when to call a doctor?

A. If any of the above symptoms persist, calling a doctor is the first order of business. No matter what the cause of your pain, there is probably a treatment for it.

Chest pain is a serious matter. With a headache, the pain will usually disappear with time, rest and aspirins, regardless of the cause. Chest pain, on the other hand, requires a proper, early diagnosis.

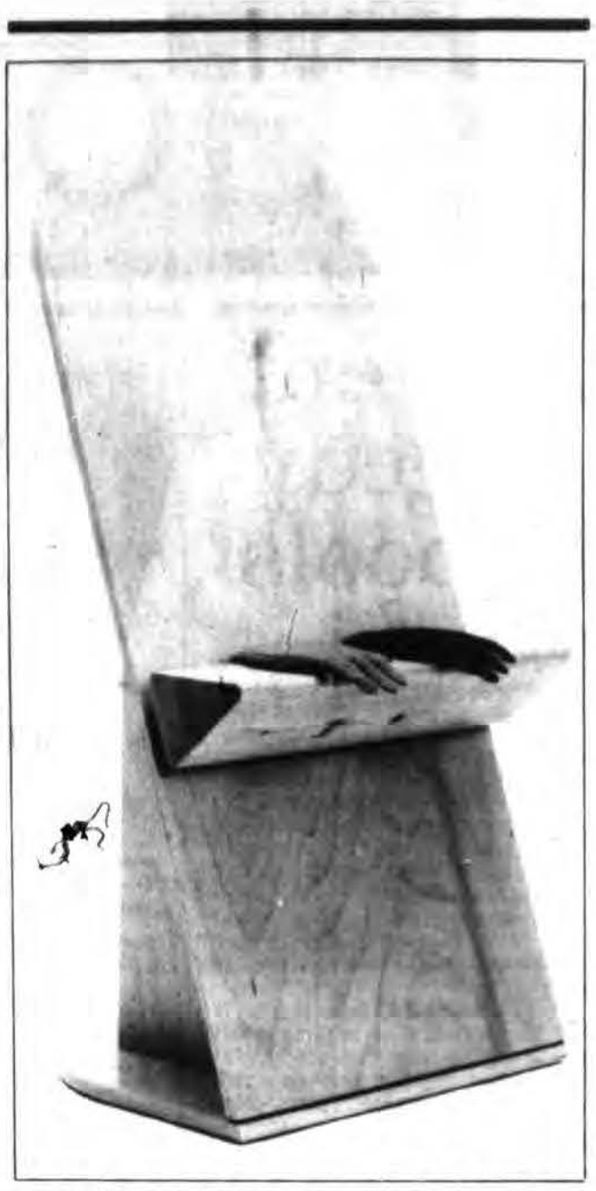
The bride-elect is a graduate of Huntington Beach High School and Westmont College, Santa Barbara, where her fiance is a student.

He is a graduate of Saratoga High School and is the son of Louise and Harold Lominac of Morgan Hill.

An Aug. 18 wedding is planned in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Newport Beach.



The Sit-In combines standing and sitting on a laminated frame with beech veneer. Soft red and black gloves cushion the butcher block seat.

and other models can be special ordered through them or other Scandinavian furniture stores.

Eason plans an exhibition of the entire Balans line in late June.

Meanwhile, New Zealand furniture designers have been working on another common seating problem with an equally innovative concept.

The smaller living areas and more mobile culture of today was the inspiration for the "knock down" furniture developed by Brugger Industries.

The sofas, chairs and loveseats look like any other conventional modern furniture. But unlike the rest, each piece can be quickly and completely disassembled and compactly packed away in a cardboard box.

"The Pack and Carry seating is designed for smaller living areas, people who have jobs that require extensive moving, and for more options to eliminate or add things," Eason said.

Eason expects the Pack and Carry furniture to arrive by the end of the summer.

'Saturday Night' maps 10th year

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Saturday Night Live," NBC's popular comedy series, will return for a 10th season and the network will introduce a weekly news series to compete with CBS' popular "60 Minutes."

"I think we have successfully lived up to the challenge of presenting a comedy-variety program that works consistently well for 90 minutes," Dick Ebersol, executive roducer of "Saturday Night Live," told NBC affiliates Monday.

An 11-part weekly news series, "Summer Sunday, USA," will be broadcast Sundays from 7 p.m. to 8 p.m., beginning July 1, said Lawrence K. Grossman, president of NBC News. The program will feature some of the network's best-known correspondents, he said.

The show "will feature provocative interviews, reporters' stories and a probing look at the week ahead, at politics, at whatever is uppermost on our viewers' minds," Grossman said.

Roger Mudd will anchor two programs on the national political conventions and will provide reports on Democratic and Republican party tickets, Grossman said.

"Saturday Night Live" premiered October 11, 1975, and concluded its ninth season May 12.

The series, broadcast live from New York, brought such comics as Chevy Chase and the late John Belushi to national attention.

Last season, "Saturday Night Live" featured hosts including New York Mayor Ed Koch, former NBC news correspondent Edwin Newman and Betty Thomas of NBC-TV's "Hill Street Blues."

Nominees get 'Tonys'

NEW YORK (AP) — This year, it will be Tony at the Tonys — designer Tony Chase, that is, at the Tony Awards.

Chase is dressing at least three of the nominated actresses for the prestigious theater awards: Glenn Close, nominated for best actress for her role in "The Real Thing"; Rhetta Hughes, up for best actress in a musical for "Amen Corner"; and Liz Callaway, featured actress in the musical, "Baby."

He'll also dress some of the invited guests, including singer Jennifer Holliday who won a Tony for her performance in "Dream Girls."

At last year's Tony awards show, Chase's beaded design for dancer Natalia Markarova stole the show.

'Dallas,' 'Crest' go out blazing

NEW YORK (AP) — The cliff-hanger season finales of "Dallas" and "Falcon Crest" went out in a blaze of top-secret, top-rated glory, leaving fans of the two CBS soaps to spend the summer wondering who shot Bobby Ewing and who perished in the plane crash?

"Dallas" finished first, "Falcon Crest" second and the "Miss USA Beauty Pageant" third in the A.C. Nielsen Co. rankings released Tuesday, giving CBS a slim victory over ABC in the week's prime-time ratings race.

The ABC programs in the Top 10 included the "Return of Marcus Welby" movie (fourth), part one of the "Mystic Warrior" miniseries (sixth), "Three's Company" (seventh) and "The Fall Guy" (ninth).

Lee Rich, president of Lorimar, which produces "Dallas," "Falcon Crest" and "Knots Landing," said the American public enjoys scraping its fingernails on cliffs. "The cliffhanger has to be one the audience can't guess," he said. "It can't be obvious."

Last Friday on "Dallas," Bobby (Patrick Duffy), sitting in J.R's chair, ended the season a bloody mess after being felled by a spray of bullets that presumably were intended for his wicked older brother. Lorimar was so protective of that surprise finish that four versions were filmed, with J.R. (Larry Hagman), Sue Ellen (Linda Gray) and Pamela (Victoria Principal) all taking turns in the hot seat.

Harlequin's musical 'house' full of laughs

By TOM TITUS
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

They wear cowboy hats and sing a lot, but the show at the Harlequin Dinner Playhouse is a good many country miles from "Oklahoma."

To appreciate how far the western musical has progressed since Rodgers and Hammerstein days, one must pay a visit to "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas." It's the show's first staging in Orange County and it's a good 'un.

True, the Hollywood version with Burt Reynolds and Dolly Parton came and went before local audiences had a chance to view the original. But the Harlequin's production (the first, incidentally, before a dinner theater audience) is a Texas mile higher on the enjoyability scale.

Director Richard Vath has whipped up an enthusiastic, energetic production of the ribald collaboration between authors Larry L. King and Peter Masterson and composer-lyricist Carol Hall, based on a true incident involving the notorious Chicken Ranch, which fell victim to a moral minority.

It's all done with down-home gusto and as much flesh as the law allows for the family trade (and even with its lusty ladies of the evening and raunchy dialogue, "Whorehouse" still falls into that category). And it's a splendid entertainment, especially if you've seen "Oklahoma" once too often.

Cary Pitts and Linda McClure.

The show is particularly strong at its core, with Cary Pitts as the sheriff and Linda McClure as Miss Mona, the Chicken Ranch proprietress. Pitts uses his physical resemblance to Andy Griffith just enough to sell his character and turns in a full-bodied performance, while McClure radiates an aura of class as the principal purveyor of the world's oldest profession and sings beautifully.

The comedy of the production takes a turn for the farce in the performance of Bart Williams as the prissy TV "watchdog" who leads the anti-sin forces. The hyperkinetic Williams makes his movie counterpart, Dom DeLuise, appear subtle by contrast.

Also impressive are David Holmes as the shifty, sidestepping governor; Anna Pagan as the feisty maid at the Chicken Ranch, and, especially, Cathy Susan Pyles as a plain cafe waitress bemoaning her unglamorous existence. Sharonlee McLean is excellent as a hard-boiled hooker, while Leigh Scarritt turns in a butterfly-like transformation from an awkward kid to the sexiest siren in the house.

Robert Bingham's two-level setting is splendidly designed, and orchestra leader Jim Ishii keeps the musical pace humming well. The show's downbeat ending could have used some tuning up from its creators, but there's enough raucous entertainment in the first two acts to compensate.

"The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas" should prove another summer sizzler for the Harlequin, which will run the musical at least through Aug. 19 at its plush showplace, 3503 S. Harbor Blvd., just north of Costa Mesa. Call 979-5511 for ticket information.

'Winds of War' to blow again

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Herman Wouk's "War and Remembrance," which continues the story of Pug Henry, Natalie Jastrow and the others in "The Winds of War," will be made into a 20-hour miniseries for ABC.

The 18-hour "The Winds of War," which starred Robert Mitchum and Ali MacGraw, kept audiences enthralled for seven nights last year. More than 140 million viewers saw some or all of the series.

The new miniseries will pick up the story a few days after Pearl Harbor and weave in such historical figures as Winston Churchill, Joseph Stalin and Franklin D. Roosevelt.

There was no early indication whether any of the cast from "The Winds of War" would continue their roles in the new series.

Toni goes for the oldies

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Singer Toni Tennille has wanted to sing standards from the '30s and '40s for the last 10 years.

Her newest album, "Toni Tennille: More Than You Know," includes some golden oldies. In addition, it's her first album without her husband and musical partner, Daryl "The Captain" Dragon.

"I wanted to be singing something else but I didn't really mind singing current pop music," she said. "You've got to be realistic in this business."

As for the Captain, she said the standards aren't his kind of music. "He's into blues and boogie," she said.

But don't worry, the Captain and Tennille are still working together.

"I'm still touring with Daryl and I'll make more albums with him, too," she said. "I can't explain the thrill I had planning it and recording it. It was heave, it was like floating on a cloud."

4 ♠	Pass	4 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Three of ♠.

Once you have opened with a demand bid, there is no need for you to be overly aggressive. You have described your hand, so you can afford to make minimum bids thereafter and leave it to partner to press on.

After receiving a positive response to his two spade opening, South simply showed his second suit. When North could do no better than take a preference to four spades, South wisely elected to pass. The fact that he was void in his partner's suit was a serious drawback. Had North had anything in the way of extra values, he would have found some other bid.

West got off to the best lead of a trump, and when dummy appeared even four spades was no laydown. Declarer was faced with the possibility of losing two tricks in each minor suit, and he could not take advantage of the ace of hearts for a discard because there was no quick entry to dummy.

While declarer could have ruffed a club had West not led a trump, to pursue this course now would be throwing good coin after bad. If declarer leads the ace of clubs and another, the defenders will win the king and play another trump, and now declarer has no way to avoid three more losers in the minor suits.

A sounder plan is to make use of dummy's jack of clubs. Declarer should win the trump and immediately lead the queen of clubs from hand! The defenders have no satisfactory rejoinder.

If East wins the king of clubs, the table's jack of clubs becomes an entry to the ace of hearts, and declarer can discard one of his losers. But by refusing to win the king of clubs East does even worse. Now declarer continues with the ace of clubs and a ruff, and he can make an overtrick by taking a discard on the ace of hearts.

Gateway hotel funds secured

Golden West Capital Group of Newport Beach has secured the financing for the $62.2 million phase one of the Gateway hotel office building complex in Garden Grove, according to an announcement by Golden West President Anthony M. Vitti.

Phase of Gate, way the largest construction project in th history of the city of Garden Grove, will consist of a 16-story, 390-room hotel and a 10-story office building connected by a 10-story-high atrium. It will be located on 36 acres of land at the northwest corner of Chapman Ave. and Harbor Blvd.

Vitti said the loan package of obtained by Golden West, a division of the West Companies, through Bell Savings and Loan Association of San Mateo for Gateway Properties, a partnership of Dr. Robert Beauchamp and Cove Development co.

"It is the single most satisying project with which I've been involved," said Vittie, "because it's one where everybody is a winner. It means more jobs, it means greater tax base for the city of Garden Grove, and it means further enchancement of Garden Grove, and it means a further enhancement of Orange County as a resort destination and prestigious business center."

He said groundbreaking will take place within the next 60 days with completion schedule for mid-1985. Phase two, which will include an entertainment center and shopping complex, is still in the design stage and is budgeted at approximately $20 million. Phase two funding will also be handled by Golden West.

When completed, Gateway will consist of 2.1 million square feet of offices, restaurants hotels facilities, an entertaiment complex, shops and housing units. Architect is WZMH Group California, Inc., of Irvine.

IRAs getting bigger and better

(Editor's note: This is the final part of a six-part series on a major new tax law now being considered by a joint House-Senate conference.)

Under the new tax bill moving quietly but steadily to President Reagan's desk, the Individual Retirement Account (IRA) will become a bigger and better tax shelter than ever.

You, as taxpayers, will be able to make bigger IRA contributions. Some of you will be able to nail down bigger IRA deductions; others will be able to set up IRAs for the first time. Result: More money will go to your pocket, less to the Internal Revenue Service.

Starting in 1984, the House bill would let you make additional contributions of up to $1,750 over and above your regular $2,000 IRA contribution. Although the extra $1,750 is not deductible, it does grow tax-free. You don't pay tax on the earnings until you retire.

What happens if you withdraw funds before age 59½? You pay a penalty and tax on what you withdraw with this exception, reports Eli J. Warach, a divisional senior vice president of Prentice-Hall. You are not taxed on the amount you contributed on a non-deductible basis. This total is subject to neither tax nor penalty. But the earnings on non-deductible contributions must be withdrawn first.

The Senate, though, would allow you to make a bigger fully deductible contribution on behalf of a non-working spouse. While the maximum combined contribution in '84 is $2,250, it jumps to $2,750 in '85 with periodic increases after that. Beginning in 1991, you would be able to contribute and deduct $4,000. That's a significant increase.

The Senate version would make it easier, too, for divorced individuals to count alimony payments as earned income for IRA purposes. How it works: A person receiving taxable alimony — but no earned income — could put $2,000 of it into an IRA and get a $2,000 deduction.

Effective date: starting in 1985. Before this provision, a divorced person receiving alimony could make a deductible contribution only under very limited circumstances.

The Senate also changes the rules on the timing of IRA contributions. Starting with the 1984 tax year, you will have to make your IRA contribution by the April 15 tax-return due date to get a deduction for that year. You no longer can extend your contribution deadline by getting a filing extension for your tax return. It's April 15 — period. But if you get an extension for your 1983 return, you can still make your contribution on or before Aug. 15, 1984, and deduct it on your 1983 return.

The House bill gives you more control over where your retirement-plan money is invested. You can pull out a big chunk of what's in your company's retirement-plan account, roll it over into an IRA within 60 days after receiving it and invest it as you prefer. And you don't have to retire to do this. Effective date: distributions after date of law's enactment.

Before this, in general, you could only roll over into an IRA the lump-sum distribution you received at retirement.

New law exception: Now, before retirement, you can elect to roll over most or all of your funds from a retirement plan or annuity into an IRA. And you're in a position to invest your IRA funds as you wish.

There are special rules that come into play — tough, too.

- You cannot roll over partial distributions into another plan or annuity.
- The distribution must be at least half your account balance.
- The distribution cannot be of a series of periodic payments.
- Most important, the amount left in your plan account — the part you did not roll over — is not eligible for the special 10-year income averaging or capital-gain treatment that lump-sum distributions generally receive.

What's more, the present rule still applies to what is rolled over: no 10-year averaging or capital-gain treatment when the rolled-over amount is distributed by the IRA.

This is the end of my series of six columns on the massive, blockbuster bill to move through the House-Senate conference before it becomes law. I will return with columns explaining the law when and as completed and signed — and how it affects you.

Irvine's Telefile Computer cites lower earnings

Telefile Computer Corp. in Irvine has reported an unaudited fiscal 1984 second-quarter net income of $70,019, or 2 cents per share, on total revenues of $2,771,606 for the three-month period ending March 31.

Though the current reported earnings are down by 65.2 percent from the first quarter net income of $201,437, or 7 cents, on slightly lower revenues of $2,450,536, they remain quite favorable compared with a net loss of $12,824 reported on revenues of $2,394,862 for the second quarter last year.

Year-to-date net income for the first six months of fiscal 1984 was $271,456, or 9 cents, on total revenues of $5,222,142, more than double the net income of $123,167, or 4 cents, on total revenues of $5,009,215, reported at the fiscal 1983 mid-year point.

"The continued strong earnings performance, particularly as reflected in the current year-to-date comparison, with last year, is very encouraging for us," said Samuel V. Edens, Telefile president, chief executive, and chairman of the board.

The lower second-quarter earnings is attributed to the purchase, made by a foreign subsidiary, of a new computer software program.

The purchase, which was fully amortized during the second quarter, produced a $300,000 operating loss for the subsidiary that reduced otherwise healthy consolidated earnings for the period.

Telefile Computer Corp., through its operating subsidiaries (Telefile Computer Products Inc., in the United States; Telefile Computer Products Ltd., in the United Kingdom; and Telefile Computer Products GmbH., in West Germany) designs, manufactures, markets, and services medium- and large-scale mainframe computer systems.

Fire up the grill for the holiday

Barbecue succulent duckling for a delightful change of pace

Memorial Day and backyard barbecues seem to go together. But this year, try grilling duckling for a delightful change of pace.

By using the right accessories, like a roast rack, aluminum foil drip pan and covered grill, this elegant, yet simple-to-cook entree is sure to become an outdoor favorite.

Since duckling tends to be a fatty poultry, be sure to follow these simple tips to prevent flare-ups:

- Set drip pan on the grid; place duckling on roast rack and set in drip pan.
- When using a covered grill, be sure to keep the lid down with the vents open.
- Score the duckling by the joints so the fat can drain out as it cooks.

And for successful overall barbecuing, remember these basic rules:

- Baste sweet sauces onto meat during the last 15 to 20 minutes of cooking to prevent burning.
- Avoid having foods stick to the grill by spraying first with a non-stick cooking spray.
- For extra flavor, add woods like hickory, mesquite or oak, orange peel, garlic cloves or herbs to the fire. These flavor enhancers are great for everything from hamburgers, steak, ribs and chops, to whole fish, poultry, vegetables and nuts.

With these simple rules, grilling two ducklings is as easy as grilling just one. So invite friends to enjoy this succulent entree, basted with either a sweet or tart sauce.

GRILLED DUCKLING

4½ to 5 pound duckling, fresh or frozen, thawed
Soy sauce

Remove neck, giblets and fat from cavity of duckling. Reserve neck and giblets and use for soup stock if you wish; discard fat. Rinse duckling with cold water; pat dry with paper towels. Twist wings to the back to hold neck skin down. Close cavity with small poulty skewers; tie legs together.

With two-tined fork, pierce duckling skin several times at joints. Rub generous amount of soy sauce on skin for color and flavor. Place duckling on roast rack set in a heavy-duty aluminum foil drip pan. Place on cooking grid of grill.

Cover and grill duckling about 1½ to 2 hours; remove fat from drip pan as it accumulates using bulb baster. Duckling is done when joints move easily or when juices run clear when pierced. Makes 4 servings.

Prepare sauce according to directions. Serve duckling with either Red Cherry-Almond Sauce or Burgundy Cherry Sauce.

RED CHERRY-ALMOND SAUCE

1 can (21 ounces) cherry pie filling 1 tablespoon sugar
2 teaspoons lemon juice
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon almond extract

Place cherry pie filling and remaining ingredients in blender or food processor; blend mixture until smooth. Brush cherry sauce on duckling the last 15 minutes of cooking time. Heat sauce and serve with duckling. Makes about 3 cups sauce.

BURGUNDY CHERRY SAUCE

1 can (16½ ounces) dark sweet cherries
⅓ cup red Burgundy wine
1 to 2 tablespoons sugar
1 tablespoon cornstarch
½ teaspoon lemon juice
¼ teaspoon salt

Drain cherries, reserving syrup; set aside. Combine syrup and wine. In small saucepan, combine 1 tablespoon sugar and cornstarch. Add syrup mixture and stir.

Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly until bubbly. Boil for 1 minute. Add cherries, lemon juice and salt. Add more sugar to taste. Serve sauce with duckling. Makes about 2½ cups sauce.

COOK OF THE WEEK

Clarice Musser chooses Stir Fried Pork for an entree and offers a choice of Chocolate Marbled Cheesecake and Almond Cookies for dessert.

For Clarice Musser, the best gift is a cookbook.

Although, she says, she has quite a collection, she is overjoyed each time she receives a new one.

Of course, the books don't just sit on the shelf. . .she uses them.

"I love to cook, especially gourmet, but that's a little tough on the budget," said the Huntington Beach mother of two.

Fortunately, her family likes to eat and will eat most anything, so that encourages her to experiment with new recipes. However, when her husband Guy, after tasting a new dish, says, "It will be OK if you cook this again next year," she knows he doesn't care for it and the recipe is eliminated from her repertoire.

She said she likes being creative, and to expand her talents she has taken classes in gourmet cooking and now is learning cake decorating techniques.

Musser said she has been cooking since she was 8 and has always enjoyed it. "I learned from my mom who is a great cook. She let me help in the kitchen all the time and was so patient," which Musser said she tries to be with her 9-year-old daughter.

Her mother still sends recipes and they are "always by touch, taste and feel. I've adopted a lot it. . .I suppose you have to do a lot of cooking to achieve the touch, taste, feel."

When Musser prepares an extra special menu, she says, "it deserves a fine table. I get out the crystal, silver and china, even if we're not having guests for dinner. Afterall," she reasons, "who better deserves this treatment than my family?"

Her favorite cuisine is Oriental, and a recipe she is especially fond of "because the kids will eat spinach in this dish" is Stir Fried Pork. It's low in calories but packed with nutrients, and it is colorful, she says.

She shares this recipe, one for Almond Cookies and an Avocado Soup, an original, with Daily Pilot readers.

STIR FRIED PORK

Appropriately, the book begins with an introduction to basic cake decorating, including detailed instructions for using a decorating bag and other equipment to make borders, drop flowers, roses, leaves, shells and scrolls.

There are also many fast and simple decorating creations requiring no special equipment, like Gumdrop Cats, Frosted Cranberries and Orange Peel Tulips.

SENSIBLE EATING

Only good picnic is a safe one

By AMY SANDERS, M.A.
Registered Dietitian

Picnics are a pleasant and relaxing way for family and friends to celebrate warm-weather holidays. But they're only fun if no one gets sick from contaminated food.

All foods contain some harmful microorganisms, which under certain conditions can become poisonous. It is, therefore, essential to be aware of such conditions, and to take precautionary measures to insure the safety of our foods.

Food can be infested by growth of various bacteria and other parasites: Salmonella on meats and poultry, trichinella on pork and streptococci in mixed dishes. Food poisoning can occur from the growth of toxins produced by bacteria such as staphylococci.

Most bacteria can be destroyed by high heat and multiply slowly at cold temperatures. So make sure cooked foods are thoroughly cooked throughout, especially if in large containers, or cooked in a microwave. Bacteria grow best at temperatures ranging from 50 degrees to 140 degrees F; therefore, it is wise to chill cooked dishes quickly after cooking.

Once these foods are taken out of the refrigerator, they should be kept at no more than 45 degrees, well covered and never be left standing out in the sun. The new plastic foam picnic baskets that contain "blue ice" work well for this. Also, to discourage bacterial growth, it's advisable not to prepare food too far in advance.

Streptococci and staphylococci may flourish in foods prepared under unsanitary conditions. Germs from colds, cuts, skin infections annd improperly cleaned utensils may be the cause. It's important to scrub cutting boards well with detergent and hot water after cutting raw meat, chicken or fish, especially before preparing salads or other foods that will be eaten raw. It's also a good idea to handle foods as little as possible.

Microorganisms capable of contaminating foods do not thrive well in an acid environment. For years we were warned to beware of picnic foods containing

ETHNIC FOODS GO LIGHT

Make hearty rice salads for wholesome main dishes

Traditional ethnic specialties are likely to be eclipsed in popularity by Oriental and Mexican foods, predicted restaurateurs responding to a 1980 trade survey by Institutions magazine.

The restaurant operators also forecast a steady increase in the consumption of poultry, fish, cereal grains and fresh produce. Both of these predictions appear to be coming true. And now is the time of year when menus featuring ethnic dishes prepared with lighter, more healthful ingredients are most appreciated.

Among the lighter, more wholesome main dishes expected to appear on menus this summer is the rice salad. Salads made with rice are perfect for warm weather menus because they are both refreshing and satisfying. Cooked poultry or seafood, vegetables from the garden, a favorite pourable dressing and cooked rice are the only ingredients needed for the simplest American-style salad.

But don't stop there. Because cooked rice adapts beautifully to the flavors of many cuisines, you can create exciting versions of favorite ethnic dishes.

Streamline salad preparation by keeping cooked rice on hand. It's easy if you plan ahead and cook an extra cup of rice whenever rice is on the menu. Refrigerate the extra to use in a salad a day or two later.

Team cooked rice with chilies, avocados and other south-of-the-border ingredients to create a cool variation of the tostada. Tijuana Shrimpy Rice Tostada Salad starts with a spicy shrimp and rice mixture made extra easy with packaged chili seasoning mix and canned green chilies.

Preparing the salad ahead saves time later while allowing the flavors to develop fully. When ready to serve, spoon salad onto crisp lettuce rafts and garnish with tomato, avocado and tortilla chips.

Oriental dishes are known for their light, fresh flavor and varied textures, and Gingered Far Eastern Rice Salad is no exception. The crunchy texture of fresh bean sprouts, radishes and celery complements the fluffy separate-grained rice.

And the slightly sweet vinaigrette is as full-flavored as it is light in calories. Its intriguing flavor comes from fresh ginger, a popular, readily available Oriental seasoning which can be kept on hand in American freezers.

TIJUANA SHRIMPY RICE TOSTADA SALAD

3½ cups chilled cooked converted rice
1 pound cooked medium shrimp
⅔ cup dairy sour cream
1 can (4 ounces) chopped green chilies, undrained
1 envelope (1¼ ounces) chili seasoning mix
2 to 3 tablespoons water
2 tablespoons lime juice
1 large head iceberg lettuce
1 medium tomato, corasely chopped
1 small avocado, peeled, seeded and sliced
Tortilla chips (optional)

Combine rice and shrimp in large bowl. Blend sour cream, chilies, chili seasoning mix, water and lime juice until smooth. Add to rice mixture; mix well. Cover and chill several hours.

When ready to serve, slice lettuce into rafts ¾-inch thick. Divide rice salad evenly between lettuce rafts.* Garnish with chopped tomato, avocado slices and tortilla chips. Makes 6 servings.

*If desired, salad may be served on lettuce-lined plates.

GINGERED FAR EAST TUNA RICE SALAD

2½ cups water
1 cup converted rice
3 tablespoons soy sauce
⅓ cup vegetable oil
⅓ cup red wine vinegar
1 to 1½ teaspoons grated fresh ginger
1 teaspoon sugar
1 can (13 ounces) tuna packed in water, drained*
1 cup fresh bean sprouts
1 cup sliced celery
½ cup thinly sliced radishes
2 cups shredded fresh spinach

Bring water to a boil in medium saucepan. Stir in rice and 1 tablespoon of the soy sauce. Cover tightly and simmer 20 minutes. Remove from heat. Let stand covered until all liquid is absorbed, about 5 minutes. Transfer to large bowl and cool to room temperature.

Combine oil, vinegar, ginger, sugar and remaining 2 tablespoons soy sauce in small bowl. Add to rice with tuna, bean sprouts, celery and radishes; mix well. Cover and chill several hours. Just before serving, stir in spinach. Makes 6 servings.

*Two 7-ounce cans tuna packed in water may be substituted.

Hostess prefers English trifle

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

Barbara Beaumont was born in England and grew up there. With a degree in Romance languages from Oxford University tucked away, she taught French and English in Italy, Switzerland and South America. Because cookery is one of her great interests, she always delved into the cuisine of the country she was working in.

Now married and living in the United States, she keeps track of what's cooking in various corners of the world through her work as North American representative of PPC (Petite Propos Culinaire), the international journal on food, cookery and cookery books published in London by Prospect Books.

When I asked her for a recipe for a dessert she liked to serve to guests, she said, "Nothing is better than a good English Trifle. It fits in after so many main dishes from other countries."

BARBARA BEAUMONT'S ENGLISH TRIFLE

Custard, recipe follows
1½ cups fresh orange sections
1½ cups fresh pineapple chunks
3 dozen lady fingers
½ cup (about) raspberry jam
¼ cup cream sherry
1 cup heavy cream, whipped
Toasted slivered almonds
Candied violets, if desired

Make custard.

In a colander over a bowl, toss together the oranges and pineapple. Drain fruit; set aside.

Split lady fingers; sandwich each pair together with ¾ teaspoon jam. Brush one side of filled lady fingers with sherry. Reserve 10 filled lady fingers for the top.

Line the bottom and sides of a 3-quart straight-sided glass serving bowl with the remaining filled lady fingers, placing sherry-coated side against glass. Spread ½ cup of the custard over bottom layer of lady fingers.

Top with 1 cup of the orange and pineapple mixture. Repeat layering with remaining custard and fruit; top with reserved lady fingers. Cover; refrigerate 3 to 4 hours.

Just before serving garnish with whipped cream, almonds and, if using, candied violets. Makes 10 to 12 servings.

CUSTARD

½ cup sugar
2 tablespoons cornstarch
2 cups milk
2 egg yolks, slightly beaten
1½ teaspoons vanilla

In a 2-quart saucepan stir together the sugar and cornstarch. Gradually stir in the milk until smooth. Whisk in egg yolks. Over medium-low heat, stirring constantly, bring to a boil. Cook until mixture is thickened and boils 1 minute. Off heat, stir in the vanilla.

Turn into a bowl; cover with plastic wrap without pressing down on surface. Refrigerate until cool — about 1 hour. Use as directed in Barbara Beaumont's English Trifle. Makes about 2½ cups.

Try turkey stir-fried

One of the best things about home entertaining today is the trend toward keeping menus simple. The lavish, time-consuming banquets of the not-too-distant past simply don't fit our busy lifestyles anymore.

Ever since fitness became a national pastime, party planners have been lightening up meals for guests by cutting back on the number of dishes served, and by relying on popular light meats such as breast of turkey.

The convenience and versatility of these fully cooked portions of turkey breast have made them a menu staple for streamlined dinner parties.

Sometimes, a new and interesting recipe creates an instant theme for a dinner party, making the selection of appetizers and desserts a breeze.

For example, Chinese Walnut Turkey is the kind of specialty that might be found at an Oriental restaurant. Almost a meal in itself, it suggests egg rolls or a light soup to start, and almond or fortune cookies to complete the menu.

If a wok is available, add a bit of showmanship to the presentation. Arrange the cut-up breast of turkey, vegetables, walnuts, ginger and combined spicy sauce ingredients attractively on a tray, then quickly stir-fry the meal at the table.

Another time, go new-style Italian with Parma Turkey and Fettuccine Verde, a zesty combination of turkey, mushrooms and tomatoes in a creamy sauce accented with Parmesan cheese. Serve with al dente spinach fettuccine, a simple tossed salad in a vinaigrette dressing, and crusty rolls or Italian bread.

CHINESE WALNUT TURKEY

1 pound breast of turkey
2 tablespoons oil
3 slices fresh ginger
3 green onions, cut into 1-inch pieces
2 green peppers, cut into 1-inch chunks
1 cup walnut halves

Sauce

¼ cup water
¼ cup soy sauce
¼ cup dry sherry
2 tablespoons cornstarch
2 tablespoons catsup
1½ teaspoons sugar
1 teaspoon red pepper flakes
¼ teaspoon garlic powder
4 servings hot cooked rice

Cut turkey into thin strips; set aside. Fry ginger in hot oil in wok or Dutch oven until golden brown; remove and discard ginger slices. Stir-fry onions and green peppers 3 minutes; add turkey and walnuts.

Stir-fry 5 minutes more. Combine sauce ingredients; pour over turkey and vegetables. Stir and continue to heat until sauce thickens. Serve over hot rice. Makes 4 servings.

PARMA TURKEY AND FETTUCCINE VERDE

1 pound breast of turkey
1½ cups half-and-half
1 cup (2 ounces) sliced fresh mushrooms
¼ cup Parmesan cheese
2 tablespoons dry white wine
2 tablespoons cornstarch
1 tablespoon chopped fresh basil or ½ teaspoon dried basil
¼ teaspoon onion powder
2 tomatoes, cut into 1-inch chunks
6 ounces spinach noodles, cooked

Cut turkey into ¼-inch slices; set aside. Combine next seven ingredients; pour into large skillet. Cook and stir on medium heat until mixture thickens and boils. Add turkey. Cover. Simmer 10 minutes.

Place turkey on platter. Add tomatoes to skillet; stir and heat through. Serve with turkey and noodles. Makes 4 servings.

Can the U.S. government shut off the cows?

There's too much milk being produced in the United States. Both critics and supporters of the federal government's dairy price support program agree on this.

Supporters of the new dairy legislation, which was signed by President Reagan late last year, hope to reduce the nation's milk output and cut the amount of money the government spends in buying and storing surplus dairy products.

Critics, however, contend that the new program will be difficult to administer, that there is no cap on payments to any one producer, and that some farmers will be paid for output reductions already made before the law took effect.

Another criticism is there's no guarantee that troublesome surpluses won't re-emerge after the 15-month diversion program ends March 31, 1985.

The new program is the fifth piece of dairy legislation since 1981 that attempts to reduce surpluses. The first four were not successful. And 1983 ended with record production and record government expenditures.

So what does all this mean to you, the consumer? As a taxpayer, you pay for the price support program; as a consumer of dairy products, you pay higher prices than you might pay if a free market economy existed for milk as it does for most food crops.

Many low income consumers have benefited, however, as recipients of the "free" surplus cheese and butter distributed throughout the country by the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA). School food programs also have received the surplus dairy products.

While the dairy industry produces more and more milk, consumers have not been increasing their consumption proportionately. As the population has grown, the total national consumption of dairy products has gone up, but per capita consumption has gone down.

The result of the growing gap between production and consumption has been excess fluid milk that is manufactured into butter, cheese and nonfat dry milk. Much of it ends up in government storage.

The expanding use of imitation cheese in fresh and frozen pizzas, snack type foods, and as a component in packaged cheese sauces has contributed to the surplus cheese problems. The primary ingredient in imitation cheese is casein, which is a nonfat dry milk product, 90 percent of which is imported from New Zealand, Australia and European countries.

The problems of providing fresh milk to consumers are more complicated than they are for some other commodities. Consumers expect fresh milk on the shelves whenever they shop, but they shop more frequently on some days than others.

Further complicating the situation are seasonal fluctuations. Generally, a cow gives more milk in the spring and summer than in the fall and winter. Likewise, the demand for different dairy products fluctuates seasonally. We eat more ice cream in the summer, for example.

Therefore, the industry must produce some oversupply or reserve of fluid milk, especially during the flush production season, to make sure there's enough fluid milk to meet consumer demand at all times. And the excess goes into processed products.

QUESTIONS WE ARE ASKED:

— Q. I've been reading that some pizza manufacturers are using imitation cheese, but I haven't been able to find any pizzas that tell you on the label that imitation cheese was used. Isn't this required?

— A. Not at present. Current USDA standards permit pizza manufactureres to use a blend of nine parts non-dairy (imitation) cheese to one part natural cheese, without requiring notification to consumers.

Without such notice on labels, many consumers are under the false impression that most, if not all, frozen pizzas contain 100 percent cheese instead of the lower-cost imitation cheese.

Some amendments have been proposed in USDA's grading standard to require that pizza contain a minimum of 12 percent natural cheese and that a pizza label be required to include the name of the natural cheese, the cheese substituted, or the imitation cheese, and that the product be qualified as "containing imitation cheese and cheese" if the cheese substitute is nutritionally inferior to the natural cheese.

— Q. I have a problem digesting milk — it gives me stomach pains and gas — and the doctor says I have lactose intolerance. So I don't drink milk. Could I tolerate sweet acidolphilus milk?

— A. Probably not. Sweet acidolphilus milk is simply ordinary pasteurized milk to which bacteria, L. acidophilus, have been added. A recent study showed that this unfermented milk was no better tolerated than ordinary milk by people with lactose intolerance.

You might, however, be able to tolerate fermented milk products such as yogurt and buttermilk. During the fermentation of these milks, bacteria consume the milk sugar — lactose — to which you're intolerant and replace it with lactic acid.

— Q. How much ice cream does a child have to eat to get calcium equivalent to what he gets from drinking a glass of milk? My 5-year-old son refuses to drink milk but he will eat ice cream, and I'm concerned that he get enough calcium.

—A. An 8-ounce glass of milk contains about 300 milligrams of calcium. To get this much calcium your son would need to eat about 1½ cups (14 fluid ounces) of regular ice cream or 1¾ cups of ice milk.

The major problem with this substitution is sugar, fat and calories. While ordinary milk has about 3 percent fat and 150 calories in 8 ounces, regular ice cream has about 11 percent fat, much added sugar and 405 calories.

Ice milk has less fat (about 4 percent) but more sugar than ice cream and 1¾ cups would have 325 calories. Thus, substituting ice cream or ice milk for milk wouldn't be a practical way for your child to get the 800 milligrams of calcium he needs every day.

Team tangy sauce, steak

The natural flavor of beef straight from the barbecue is unbeatable.

But many outdoor chefs enjoy serving a secret sauce or relish on the side for that extra finishing touch. This chunky Horseradish Sauce, an American adaptation of the traditional English sauce, offers a tangy flavor contrast to a grilled steak.

Chopped radishes, green pepper and green onions add a unusual crunchy texture to this zesty horseradish-based sauce.

When cutting a porterhouse steak, a sharp knife is a must! Cut along both sides of the T-bone with as little tearing of the meat as possible. The bone should be practically bare.

Then carve the steak into diagonal slices. Each serving should include a piece of the top loin and a piece of the tenderloin.

A porterhouse steak is particularly juicy. Use a carving board with a well so you can catch the juice. Pour the juice over the sliced steak just before serving.

GRILLED STEAK WITH CHUNKY HORSERADISH SAUCE

2 bunches radishes, tops removed
1 small green pepper, quartered
2 green onions
3 sprigs parsley
2 tablespoons prepared horseradish
1 tablespoon Dijon-style mustard
¼ teaspoon salt
1½ pound beef porterhouse steak

Place radishes, green pepper, green onions and parsley in food processor or blender; process until chopped. Mix with horseradish, mustard and salt; cover. Refrigerate at least 3 hours no longer than 24 hours.

Trim excess fat from steak. Cook steak on barbecue grill 4 inches from medium-hot coals, 8 to 10 minutes per side for rare or until desired doneness. Season with salt and pepper, if desired. Serve with Chunky Horseradish Sauce. Makes 4 servings.

Beans gaining favor

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

The country cuisine of America has been growing steadily in popularity and nowhere has this been more pronounced than in bean cookery.

For generations, both here and abroad, beans have been the mainstay of the laborer. They are hearty and usually cheap. Even today a bean dish that is the centerpiece of the meal can be cooked for a family of four for a little more than a dollar.

Bean specialties have also shown up in the gourmet field, such as the Brazilian special composed of black beans and sour cream laced with spices and a little rum.

One of America's favorites is the Boston baked bean classic that is still a Saturday night standby in many New England homes and a Sunday breakfast special as well in some.

In America's southland the blackeyed pea still holds sway. It serves as the base for the "Hoppin' John" stew, which includes salt pork or bacon, rice and seasoning, along with the beans. This is a New Year's tradition in many southern homes.

Americans are also becoming fond of an old Italian favorite. It comes from Florence, where the white beans of Tuscany, cooked and spiced with lemon juice and olive oil, are garnished with chunks of white tuna. Americans can substitute canned white beans for the Tuscan variety.

Many varieties of dried beans have become popular as the centerpiece in salads, including red beans, navy and lentils.

Red kidney beans, refried and laced with chili powder, have long been a standby in Mexico. And the Arabs puree chick peas with sesame paste to serve with dinner.

Some cooks consider it a must to soak dried beans for hours before cooking, but others feel it is sufficient to simmer them until tender. There is also a theory that beans are more digestible if you bring them to a boil and then soak them for about 12 hours.

Beans have always been key ingredients in such soups as this mixture of white beans and frankfurters.

BEAN SOUP

½ pound dry small white beans
Water, as needed
2 teaspoons chicken bouillon granules
½ onion, chopped
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon ground cumin
⅛ teaspoon pepper
8 ounces frankfurters, sliced ½ inch thick
1 can (8¾ ounces) canned whole kernel corn, drained
1 cup diced red potatoes, peeled
Chopped parsley

Wash beans and soak in 3 cups cold water overnight, but don't refrigerate. Drain and rinse beans. Add five cups fresh water, bouillon, onion and seasonings. Cover and simmer 1 hour, until beans are almost tender. Add frankfurters, corn and potatoes.

Simmer 30 minutes until beans and potatoes are tender. Ladle into bowls and garnish with parsley. Makes 4 servings.

Fish entree economical

Team seafood, vegetables in two easy main dishes

Whet your family's seafood appetite with two new, low-cost entrees that combine the best of fish and vegetables in one easy dish.

Families looking for low-calorie meals will find this crustless quiche ideal for quick dinners.

It's a healthful blend of frozen chopped spinach and any frozen white fish, be it haddock, cod, sole, turbot or perch. This flexible recipe lets you take advantage of the frozen fish specials at your local supermarket.

For an elegant main dish, here's another combination of fish and vegetables, this time featuring frozen sole and frozen zucchini slices. The low-cost ingredients in the Sole-Zucchini Casserole bake up into a rich, bubbling casserole that has great eye appeal and color.

FISH AND SPINACH QUICHE

1 package (16 ounces) frozen white fish fillets
2 eggs, lightly beaten
1 package (10 ounces) frozen chopped spinach, defrosted
2 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese
1 tablespoon chives or chopped green onion
Salt, pepper and ground nutmeg to taste
1 tablespoon margarine

Preheat oven to 400 degrees, simmer frozen fish in salted water 10 minutes, or until fish flakes easily with fork. Flake fish into lightly greased 9-inch pie plate.

In small bowl, combine eggs, spinach and seasonings. Pour over flaked fish, then dot with margarine. Bake 20 minutes. Serve hot, or cut into wedges and serve cold with green goddess dressing. Serves 4 to 6.

SOLE-ZUCCHINI CASSEROLE

1 package (16 ounces) frozen sole, thawed
1 tablespoon thawed frozen lemon juice
1 package (10 ounces) frozen zucchini slices, thawed
½ cup frozen chopped green pepper
¼ cup frozen chopped onion
1 tablespoon margarine
1 can (10¾ ounces) cream of mushroom soup, undiluted
1 can 2¼ ounces) sliced ripe olives, drained
2 tablespoons dry white wine
1 tablespoon chopped parsley
1 tablespoon chopped pimento
½ teaspoon dill weed

Sprinkle fish with lemon juice. Roll up each fillet, then cut in halves. Place rolls in shallow 1½-quart baking dish. In saucepan, saute zucchini, green pepper and onion in margarine, cooking until dry. Stir in remaining ingredients.

Heat just to boiling, then pour over fish rolls. Bake at 350 degree 15 to 20 minutes, or until fish flakes easily with fork. Serves 4.

Egg beverages provide mini meals in a glass

Dieters, break out the eggs for nutrition-packed drinks that are surprisingly low in calories!

One large egg, for a mere 80 calories, supplies naturally good protein, a liberal supply of important minerals and all the vitamins except vitamin C. And, if you combine that egg with a vitamin C-rich fruit or juice, the end result is a mini-meal in a glass.

Apple Yogurt Nog is a compatible combination of eggs, yogurt and crisp, bright apple bits. Pineapple Pick-Up is a refreshing blend of eggs and pineapple mellowed with a dollop of honey.

Either can get your day off to a wide-awake start or beat the "hungries" at a later hour. Serve them to balance a mid-day meal, satisfy the kids after school or quench your thirst as a late-night snack.

Apple Yogurt Nog is more healthful with about ¼ of the protein, 17 percent of the calcium, 20 percent of the phosphorus and 19 percent of the riboflavin you need for a day. It's great as a light meal to offset heavier ones. Pineapple Pick-Up is just what its name implies — a savory sipper that provides substantial amounts of needed protein, vitamins and minerals for the calories it costs. Sip it any time of day to satisfy your cravings with calories that count!

APPLE YOGURT NOG

1 cup (8 ounces) plain yogurt
2 eggs
2 small unpeeled apples, cored and chunked
2 teaspoons brown sugar
¼ teaspoon almond extract
Cinnamon sticks, optional

Place all ingredients except cinnamon sticks in 5-cup blender container. Cover and blend at medium speed until smooth, about 45 seconds. Pour each serving into 12-ounce glass. Serve immediately with cinnamon-stick stirrers, if desired. Makes 2 servings.

PINEAPPLE PICK-UP

1 can (8 ounces) crushed pineapple in juice
2 eggs
1½ tablespoons honey
¼ teaspoon vanilla
Mint leaves, optional

Place all ingredients except mint leaves in 5-cup blender container. Cover and blend at medium speed until smooth, about 45 seconds. Pour each serving into 6-ounce glass. Serve immediately garnished with mint leaves, if desired. Makes 2 servings.

SAFE PICNIC...

mayonnaise. But we now know that improper food handling and prolonged standing in warm temperatures cause contamination, not the mayonnaise, if properly made.

The vinegar in the mayonnaise actually helps prevent bacterial growth. If serving a fruit salad, it helps to include high acid fruits such as pineapple, oranges, kiwi fruit or strawberries.

Potato salad should be slightly on the tart side and raw or cooked vegetables marinated in vinegar or lemon juice, are suitable choices.

In general, avoid dishes made with cream, milk or eggs, such as filled pastries, custards and puddings. These foods are quickly destroyed by bacteria, so use the fermented versions, such as cheese and yogurt instead.

Flies and other insects can add to contamination of picnic foods. Special net food umbrellas are useful for loose foods like breads and whole fruit or cut melons. Bring along sufficient bags so trash can be neatly wrapped before disposing in containers as far as possible from eating areas.

Don't prepare too much food. Estimate as close as possible the amount of food that will be needed, since leftovers will most probably be unsafe to keep.

Don't gamble with your health: When in doubt, throw it out!

MIX, MATCH A HOLIDAY COOKOUT

Shout hello to summer with a Memorial Day picnic. Invite the neighbors to this backyard smorgasbord of mix-and-match meat and sauces to create Saucy Grilled Sandwiches that easily serve 10 to 12.

There's something for everyone at this picnic! Grill tender chunks of steak, chicken and frankfurters on skewers and serve in pita bread pockets or crusty rolls. An assortment of toppings and fresh vegetables lets your guests create their own individual combination sandwiches.

Pick a topping. Each one is a snap to prepare. Sweet Mustard Sauce boldly combines spicy mustard and currant jelly with chili powder and onion. For a mild and creamy accent, choose California Topping. Its smooth base is quickly made from a packaged sour cream sauce mix. Shredded cheese and zucchini add a lively texture and color. Let the traditionalist choose Zesty Tomato Sauce served warm from the grill. The touch of Worcestershire sauce will be an inviting surprise.

Complete the picnic with iced tea and homemade strawberry ice cream for a delicious welcome to summer.

SAUCY GRILLED SANDWICHES

1 slice sirloin steak, about 1-inch thick
6 chicken breast halves, skinned and boned
½ pound frankfurters
Crusty rolls or pita bread
Tangy Sweet Mustard Sauce
California Topping
Zesty Tomato Sauce

Cut steak, chicken and frankfurters into 1-inch pieces. Arrange on separate skewers. Grill over hot coals, turning frequently, 10 to 12 minutes for steak and chicken, 5 to 7 minutes for frankfurters. Serve on rolls or pita bread with choice of sauces. 10 to 12 servings.

TANGY SWEET MUSTARD SAUCE

½ cup currant jelly
¼ cup mustard
2 tablespoons sherry, if desired
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 teaspoon chili powder
¼ teaspoon onion salt

Combine ingredients in small saucepan; simmer 5 minutes, stirring with fork or whisk until smooth. Makes about ½ cup sauce.

CALIFORNIA TOPPING

½ cup shredded unpeeled zucchini
½ teaspoon salt, if desired
1 envelope (1¼ ounces) sour cream sauce mix
⅔ cup milk
½ cup shredded Monterey Jack cheese

Sprinkle zucchini with salt; let stand while preparing sauce. Combine sauce mix with milk, stirring with fork until smooth; let stand 10 minutes. Place zucchini in strainer and press out excess liquid. Stir in drained zucchini and cheese. Makes about 1½ cups sauce.

ZESTY TOMATO SAUCE

1 small onion, chopped
1 tablespoon oil
1 can (8 ounces) tomato sauce
¼ cup water
¼ cup lemon juice
2 to 3 tablespoons brown sugar
2 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce
1 chicken bouillon cube

Cook onion in oil in saucepan 5 minutes, until tender. Add remainig ingredients. Simmer, uncovered, 15 minutes, stirring to dissolve bouillon cube. Makes about 1½ cups sauce.

Serve fish, pasta

Italians have long considered fresh fish and pasta as the staples of their diet. Fish, a high protein, low fat food, combines well with the carbohydrates in pasta.

For Italian Butter Crumb Fish, dip fillet in melted butter, roll in a seasoned crumb mixture and bake just until the fish flakes. Serve with noodles Parmesan, buttered zucchini and sesame bread sticks.

ITALIAN BUTTER CRUMB PERCH

¾ cup fine dry bread crumbs
.6-ounce package Italian salad dressing mix
1 teaspoon oregano leaves
1 teaspoon rosemary leaves
¼ teaspoon paprika
1 pound ocean perch fillets
½ cup sweet cream butter, melted

Heat oven to 350 degrees. In 9-inch pie pan combine all ingregients except fillets and butter; mix well. Dip fillets in melted butter, then roll in crumb mixture to coat. Place in 13 x 9-inch baking dish. Drizzle with remaining butter. Bake for 25 to 30 minutes or until fish flakes with fork. Yield: 4 servings.

Spice it with green chilies

You can use mild or hot green chilies for this main-dish soup.

SOUTHWEST SOUP

¼ cup chopped onion
½ cup chopped green pepper
1 tablespoon vegetable oil
10¾-ounce can condensed tomato soup, undiluted
1½ cups chicken broth
14½-ounce can golden hominy, drained
4-ounce can chopped green chilies, drained

In a medium saucepan gently cook onion and green pepper in oil until they are as tender as you like. Add tomato soup, broth, hominy and chilies. Heat, stirring often, to simmering. Makes 4 servings.

Keep stuffing moist with grapefruit

A wonderfully new stuffing for your Sunday roast chicken combines rye bread, onions and celery with walnuts and juicy pieces of grapefruit. This flavor combination is guaranteed to send everyone back for seconds.

The zesty grapefruit adds its special moist texture and taste to the crunch of the nuts and the savoriness of the rye bread (if you favor caraway, a seeded rye works extremely well).

Another way to add savory zing to chicken, turkey or lamb is to offer a Savory Grapefruit Jelly. Made with fresh pink grapefruit, the color of this shimmering concoction is an attractive pale rose.

SAVORY GRAPEFRUIT JELLY

1½ cups boiling water
¼ cup dried leaf savory, crumbled
2 large grapefruit, peeled and sectioned (reserve juice)
5 cups sugar
2 bottles (6 ounces each) liquid pectin

In a small bowl combine water and savory. Cover. Let stand 15 minutes; strain into a large saucepan. Add grapefruit sections, any juice reserved from sectioning and sugar.

Heat to boiling, stirring to dissolve sugar. Add pectin, stirring constantly. Boil rapidly 1 minute.

Pour into hot, sterilized jars. Seal. Or, jelly can be stored in refrigerator, unsealed up to 6 weeks. Yield: Seven ½ pints.

SAVORY GRAPEFRUIT STUFFED CHICKEN

6 tablespoons butter or margarine, divided
¾ cup chopped onion
¾ cup chopped celery
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon dried leaf marjoram, crumbled
⅛ teaspoon pepper
1 grapefruit, peeled and sectioned
4 cups cubed rye bread
4 cups chopped walnuts
1 3½ to 4 pound roasting chicken

In large saucepan heat 4 tablespoons butter; saute onion and celery until tender. Stir in salt, marjoram and pepper. Add grapefruit, bread and nuts; mix well. Spoon stuffing into cavity of chicken.

Place chicken on rack in shallow roasting pan. Sprinkle chicken with salt and pepper. Melt remaining 2 tablespoons butter; add any juice accumulated from grapefruit sections. Brush on chicken. (Roast, uncovered, in a 350 degrees oven 1 to 1¼ hours, until chicken tastes done. Yield: 4 servings.

Tour scheduled for Chinatown

Taking some of the mystery out of shopping in Chinese markets will be Hugh Carpenter, food expert who has devoted the last 10 years to promoting Chinese cuisine.

He will conduct a tour through markets and restaurants of Los Angeles' Chinatown May 31. The tour will begin in Corona del Mar at 9 a.m., returning at 3 p.m.

"The best ingredients are essential for creating outstanding flavor in Chinese cuisine," said the renowned chef, who abhors the use of the controversial MSG.

"Just as the various brands manufactured in the United States differ in taste and quality, so do those produced in the Orient," he said, admitting that he has strong opinions on which brands to buy and which ones to avoid.

Carpenter, who has taught more than 1,000 cooking classes in the United States, has presented elaborate banquets for such notables as Julia Child, James Beard and Baron Philippe Rothschild.

The six-hour event will cost $30, and includes round-trip transportation by bus, the guided tour and lunch at one of Carpenter's favorite restaurants.

For reservations and information call Fassero's, 2919 E. Pacific Coast Highway, 673-2343.

JERRY MEAD

You've probably never heard of the East-Side Winery unless you live near, or frequently visit, the small community of Lodi. East-Side has been in Lodi with its winery and vineyards since Repeal, which means the operation is now half a century old.

East-Side is a cooperative winery owned by the growers who supply the grapes. Historically, co-ops do not make very good wine, because their reason for being is to use the farmers grapes, whatever the quality, not to attempt to make the best wine.

Until recently that was exactly the situation at East-Side. Wines under the Royal Host label were adequate at best, and sold at very low prices competing in the bottom level jug wine market.

Enter a new president, a new marketing director-consultant, and give a talented winemaker the go-ahead to make the best instead of the most, and all of a sudden the picture changes.

Ron Kent, the new marketing director and oenological consultant, knew instinctively that just making better wines wouldn't be enough.

The folks who had been buying the jug wines for years wouldn't appreciate the improved wines and probably wouldn't pay the higher prices that would have to be charged. That meant a new label, a new brand, to reflect the new style and quality.

The new label is Oak Ridge, the name coming from an oak tree that dominates one of the winery's major vineyards. This regal tree has stood its ground through three generations of winemakers, and is depicted on the new label.

Before anyone is misled, let me say that Oak Ridge wines are not the greatest wines in the world, but they do offer some of the greatest values. The pricing of all the wines is very reasonable, and, when compared to wines of comparable quality, generally less expensive.

Most Oak Ridge wines, it should be noted, are meant for immediate consumption, though a couple of the reds will benefit from a few years in the bottle.

Basically the Oak Ridge wines are intended to be the "house" wines at your house, offering quality superior to the "jugs" at very little more money.

Barrel Red 50 ($3.99 for 1.5 liter): Here's a non-vintage generic red that you'll enjoy drinking day after day and that would make a good "house" pour for restaurants.

What makes it so good? The blend features three of the finest red wine varieties; Cabernet Sauvignon, Zinfandel and Petite Sirah. The wine is soft and easy to drink with some really good flavors.

Blanc de Blanc ($3.99 for 1.5 liters): Would you believe 100 percent Chenin Blanc in this bargain priced quaffing wine? Very fruity, off-dry (slightly sweet) and very, very easy to drink. An absolute summertime "best buy."

Do not be confused by the fact that Oak Ridge makes a wine labeled Chenin Blanc that costs nearly twice as much and isn't nearly as tasty.

California Rose ($3.99 for 1.5 liters): Made from two top grape varieties, Cabernet and Merlot, this wine has a gorgeous color, tremendous fruit aroma and lots of fruit flavor. It is a bit too sweet for me, but the majority of people will probably like it just as it is. Serve it icy cold.

French Colombard 1983 ($3.50 or less): My favorite wine in the line, and the kind of white wine that causes me to refill the glass again and again. It is low in alcohol which encourages consumption, but mainly it just tastes so fresh and fruity, with hints of melon, and the bit of sweetness is nicely balanced by acid. Another "best buy."

"White Tail" 1983 White Zinfandel ($4 or less): The "White Tail" name comes from the back side of a deer that frequently dines in the vineyards, and whose love for Oak Ridge grapes earned it immortality on a wine label.

This is another wine that is too sweet for me, but is absolutely super as this style goes. Fans of Sutter Home should love it. While it does have the sweetness I find distracting, it does have more fruit than most of the genre.

The only wine I really don't like is the Chenin Blanc, so don't hesitate to try other wines in the line that include a White Burgundy (misnamed in my opinion), Blanc de Noir, Zinfandel and Gran Sirah.

The wines are just being released, so if you have difficulty finding them contact the winery directly for the outlet nearest you: Oak Ridge Vineyards, P.O. Box 440, Lodi, CA 95241.

WORLD'S LARGEST — More than 150 California, Washington and Oregon wineries will sample their best at the seventh annual Orange County Summer Wine Extravaganza at the Disneyland Hotel Convention Center on June 10 from 4 to 8 p.m. To my knowledge this is the largest public exhibition of wines under a single roof. You can visit more wineries in a single afternoon than you could visit in a week running around wine country.

Tickets may be ordered by those over 21 by sending $20 to: Wine Extravaganza, P.O. Box 397, Garden Grove, CA 92642. A sell-out in previous years, tickets, if available, will be $25 at the door. A self-addressed, stamped envelope to the above address will expedite the return of your tickets by mail.

DINNER & BRUNCH — If you're visiting wine country this summer, or happen to be fortunate enough to live there, I can't think of a more delightful way to spend an afternoon or evening than at one of Weibel Champagne Cellars delightful events titled "Brunch in the Vineyards" or "Starlight Dinners."

The menus are a real gourmet delight, and the cuisine is catered by one of Northern California's finest chefs, Andre Mercier. The brunches are $25; the dinners $45, and prices include champagne, meal (many course), wine, tax and gratuity. Speaking of wine, everyone thinks of Weibel for champagne, but the winery offers some of the best values in mature red wines available.

For dates and menus, write to: Weibel Events, P.O. Box 3398, Mission San Jose, CA 94539.

Add rice to diet

Although rice may be the staff of life for half of the world, in America it takes a back seat to bread as the favored member of the breads and cereal group of the four foods group — milk, meat, vegetables and fruits, breads and cereals.

But the California Dietetic Association suggests you remember rice when planning meals. The ancient grain is versatile, relatively inexpensive and a good source of B vitamins.

While there are more than 7,000 varieties of rice in the world, only a few are commonly found in the United States: brown; white, which is generally enriched; parboiled or converted white rice and precooked or instant rice.

None of these varieties should be rinsed prior to cooking or food value will be lost.

Be sure and cook rice in only the amount of water that will be absorbed during cooking — generally one cup raw rice to two cups water. If water must be drained off cooked rice, an inordinate amount of vitamins are lost.

Potato pancakes spiced up

Although the Rio Grande divides Texas and Mexico, the cuisines flow together. Wisps of Texas barbecue smoke and the pungent perfume of Mexican chilies combine in Tex-Mex, a spirited cuisine of Southwestern United States.

Tex-Mex is a casual, colorful mixture of vibrant tastes and vivid Southwestern ingredients. That wonderful blend is the inspiration for these crisp potato and corn pancakes.

Potatoes and corn are combined with garlic, onions and chili powder for a spicy pancake that will add zest to favorite grilled or barbecued meats. A cool yogurt-based chile salsa is great on both the pancakes and the meat. Adjust the hotness of the salsa according to your taste.

Potatoes give these pancakes a great nutritional boost. A medium potato supplies 35 percent of the U.S. RDA of vitamin C, 20 percent of B6 and 10 percent of niacin, iron and copper, along with smaller, but still significant amounts of other vitamins and minerals. And all that for only 100 calories.

Potatoes add a touch of Tex-Mex cookery to many dishes. Spice up a Sunday brunch with poached eggs served on a bed of crisp hashed browns and topped with a spicy salsa. Or add diced green chilies and red kidney beans to a vinaigrette-dressed potato salad.

Sauteed potatoes with onion and chili powder help stretch the more expensive meat ingredient for tacos and enchiladas. And if you prefer a less exotic dish, try a hearty baked potato topped with your favorite chili con carne recipe. It's an easy and nutritious meal.

These Tex-Mex Potato-Corn Pancakes were developed by noted food writers, Jinx and Jeff Morgan. The Morgans are the authors of the "Cooking For Two" column in Bon Appetit magazine.

POTATO-CORN PANCAKES WITH CHILE SALSA

2 tablespoons butter or margarine
¾ cup chopped onion
1 clove garlic, minced
3 tablespoons flour
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
¾ teaspoon chili powder
3 eggs, separated
¾ cup fresh, frozen or canned, drained, corn kernels
3 medium potatoes (about 1 pound)
Pinch cream of tartar
Oil, for frying
Chile Salsa, recipe follows*
Green pepper rings (optional)

In skillet heat butter. Add onion and garlic; cook over low heat until tender but not brown. Turn into mixing bowl; cool. Stir in egg yolks, mixing to blend well.

Combine flour, salt, pepper and chili powder. Stir into onion mixture. Stir in corn.

Peel and grate potatoes; place in cold water for 5 minutes. Squeeze as dry as possible, then drain thoroughly on paper towels. Beat egg whites with cream of tartar until stiff but not dry. Add potatoes to corn mixture; blend well. Fold in egg whites.

In skillet heat about ¼ inch oil. Form batter into 3-inch pancakes; cook until bottoms are brown and set, about 5 minutes. Turn; brown on second side.

To keep warm, arrange on cake rack and place in warm oven. Serve with Chile Salsa. If desired, garnish with green pepper rings. Makes 6 servings.

CHILE SALSA: In small bowl combine 1 medium tomato, peeled, seeded and chopped, ¼ cup each chopped mild green chilies and green onion and 1 cup unflavored yogurt or sour cream. Stir to blend; chill.

*NOTE: Bottled salsa may be substituted for the Chile Salsa.

Pea soup omits the salt

When you are having lunch or supper for half a dozen of your family and-or friends who are cutting down on salt, you may be interested in serving the following green pea soup.

It has excellent flavor, interesting texture and good color — and no salt is added during its making. If some of the group you are feeding use salt, you can have a shaker of it, along with a pepper grinder, on the table.

NO SALT PEA SOUP

¾ cup thinly sliced leek (white and pale green part only)
1 clove garlic, minced
1 tablespoon sweet butter
Two 17-ounce cans sweet peas (no salt added), undrained
½ cup heavy cream
½ cup milk
½ cup unsalted chicken broth
1 cup parsley leaves, finely chopped (½ cup)
4 teaspoons lemon juice
½ teaspoon dried crushed marjoram
Dash of ground nutmeg
Dash of freshly ground pepper

In a medium saucepan, over low heat cook the leek and garlic in the butter, stirring often, until softened. Turn into an electric blender with one can of the peas, the cream and the milk; whirl until smooth. Turn into the saucepan.

Turn the remaining can of peas, the broth, parsley, lemon juice, marjoram, nutmeg and pepper into the electric blender and whirl until smooth; turn into the saucepan. Simmer, stirring occasionally, for 15 to 20 minutes. Makes about 6 cups.

Time-saving cake and frosting mix substitutions are offered wherever possible. There also are special cooking and decorating tips, such as how to make sugared roses, how to cut and assemble tiered and cut-up cakes, and storing instructions.

SPRING FLOUR CAKE

Yellow Layer Cake, recipe follows
Lemon Butter Frosting, recipe follows
Red, yellow and green food color

Bake Yellow Layer Cake as directed. Split cake to make 4 layers. Reserve ½ cup Lemon Butter Frosting for decorating. Fill layers with about ⅓ cup frosting each, alternating pink and orange layers. Frost cake.

Tint 3 tablespoons reserved frosting pink with 1 drop red food color, tint 3 tablespoons frosting orange with 2 drops yellow and 1 drop red food color and tint remaining 2 tablespoons frosting green witn 1 drop green food color.

Make 6 to 8 rosettes with pink frosting on top edge of cake; make rosettes with orange frosting between each pink flower. Make leaves with green frosting. 12 to 16 servings.

YELLOW LAYER CAKE

2 cups all-purpose flour
1½ cups sugar
½ cup shortening (half margarine or butter, softened, if desired)
1 cup milk
3½ teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon vanilla
3 eggs
Red and yellow food color

Heat oven to 350 degrees. Grease and flour 2 round pans, 8 or 9 x 1½ inches. Beat all ingredients except food color in large bowl on medium speed, scraping bowl constantly, until blended, about 30 seconds.

Beat on high speed, scraping bowl occasionally, 3 minutes. Tint half of the batter pink with 6 drops red food color. Tint remaining batter orange with 4 drops yellow and 2 drops red food color. Pour batters into separate pans.

Bake until wooden pick inserted in center comes out clean, 30 to 35 minutes. Cool 10 minutes; remove from pans. Cool completely.

LEMON BUTTER FROSTING

6 cups powdered sugar
⅔ cup margarine or butter, softened
¼ cup lemon juice

Beat all ingredients on high speed until frosting is smooth and spreading consistency. If necessary, stir in additional lemon juice, 1 teaspoon at a time.

Rosettes: Using a star tip, press out frosting, using steady, even pressure, into a circle. Then, without stopping, spiral the frosting on top in a smaller circle, finally ending the swirl in a peak as you decrease pressure.

Basic Leaf: Using a leaf tip, hold the decorating bag at an angle to the surface. Squeeze and hold tip in place to let the frosting fan out to form base of leaf. Decrease presure as you slowly pull the tip away and lift slightly to draw the leaf to a point.

Good for you!

Detroit's wins in April and May are just as crucial as those at the end of the year

Nobody came in on the noon balloon from Saskatoon and asked me, but...

●Detroit outfielder Chet Lemon says cautiously, "You can't win a championship in April and May," but he is wrong, of course... Those games count exactly as the ones in September.

●Rams running back Eric Dickerson will be the "star" of a cartoon series of the Superman type entitled, "Eric Dickerson and His Pals"... Can you picture pals Kent Hill, Bill Bain and Jackie Slater in cape and leotards?

●The difference between Al Davis moving the Raiders here and Donald Sterling bringing the Clippers from San Diego is the pockets of the two owners... Sterling's are empty... Davis has a sportscaster and sports columnist in his.

●If the word for the 1984 summer Olympic Games is not "tarnished," how about "diluted?"

●Show me a guy who has 12 martinis watching sports on TV and I'll show you a guy who doesn't know the score.

●If Jerry Buss holds still for the Clippers to move to the LA Sports Arena, look for the Laker owner to have a substantial piece of the San Diego cable sports TV action.

●Perhaps the supermarket chain which brags about feeding 10,000 Olympic athletes will get sued for false advertising.

●Something calling itself a scouting combine is staging a pro football tryout camp in Glendale and charging the free agents $78 to sign up.

BUD TUCKER
SPORTS COLUMNIST

●If you think pitching coaches aren't important, check out Marcel Lachemann of the Angels and Detroit's Roger Craig.

●Today's rating quiz... Which is more overrated — Dick Williams, Don Shula or the French bread you buy in airports?

●The Lakers are a long way from the best basketball team of all time but far and away the best basketball team of 1984.

●The last United States Football League injury and sickness report contained the names of 91 players... and four franchises.

●When the Clippers play night games at the LA Sports Arena, the injuries will be outside in the parking lot.

●A Dodger-Detroit World Series sounds comfortable and the next best thing to a Freeway Series.

●LA Express quarterback Steve Young says he admires Vince Ferragamo and Jim Plunkett who probably admire Young's agent.

●When ABC announced its Olympic roster, two assignments that stood out were Lynn Swann on weightlifting and Howard Cosell, who swore to the world he would never again cover boxing, covering boxing.

Irvine tumbles in eight

Vaqs let four-run lead vanish in 7-6 CIF loss to Artesia

By HUGH SILER
Special to the Daily Pilot

ARTESIA — Irvine High's baseball team came within three outs of advancing to the CIF 2-A quarterfinals Tuesday before succumbing to Artesia High, here in eight innings, 7-6.

"You make it to the playoffs and anything can happen," a dejected Irvine Coach Bob Flint said. "There is not much I can say except we fell apart."

Irvine jumped to a 1-0 lead in the first on a single, a walk and a RBI ground out by Bobby Hamelin.

The Vaqueros made it 5-1 in the second when Jeff Bielman started things with a walk. That was followed by a fly ball by Jim Martin to right field that was lost in the sun. A sacrifice fly followed by a base hit by Darin Wallentine brought Bielman and Martin home.

John Scott then added an RBI-triple into the alley in left-center, which proceeded to roll almost endlessly through the Pioneer outfielders and when the relay was wide, Scott scored.

Irvine starting pitcher Mike Henigan breezed through the first five innings and at one point retired 13 of 14 batters.

"Henigan threw a heckuva game for them. I just kept telling myself that we would get them next inning," a happy Artesia Coach Tony Guggiana said.

Artesia finally got its offense untracked in the sixth when it scored two runs on three hits to make things close again at 5-3.

Irvine added what appeared to be an insurance run in the seventh when Remy Rahmatulla walked and came around to score on an infield out by Wallentine.

Artesia, faced with a do-or-die situation in the bottom of the seventh, received the three runs it needed to send the game into overtime. A walk, a single and a triple by Jeff Grant, (who was 4-for-4) sliced Irvine's lead to 6-5. Grant then scored

Detroit: No letup in sight

Tigers (33-5) now 15-0 on the road after 3-1 victory

By RICHARD DUNN
Special to the Daily Pilot

Motown's latest hit, the Detroit Tigers, climbed on top of the California circuits Tuesday night, at the expense of the Angels.

The Tigers are riding the wave of the finest start in their history, and ultimately remain undefeated on the road (15-0), as they roared into Anaheim Stadium with their road show and nipped the Angels, 3-1, before 41,253.

Indeed, the Tigers seem to be playing music — not only on the road, but at home, as well. Their overall record is now 33-5, and things just seem to be going their way.

"It seems like every time (manager) Sparky (Anderson) sends somebody out to do something, it gets done — very well," Tiger catcher Lance Parrish was saying, "and now that we've gotten out to this start, it seems like everybody believes in each other."

The Tigers' road win streak is now one shy of the American League record of 16, set by the 1912 Washington Senators, and two shy of the Major League record, set by the 1916 New York Giants.

"Nobody cares about records or anything — we're just hungry," Parrish said, "we just want to get to the World Series, and everybody on the club has the right attitude."

But the Tigers, now working on a seven-game winning streak, definitely had the ball bouncing their way Tuesday night.

They not only executed properly and got clutch base hits, but they made things happen offensively — as well as defensively.

With two outs in the first inning, right fielder Kirk Gibson singled, stole second and took third on Angel catcher Bob Boone's throwing error. Good teams will always take advantage of mistakes and poor execution by their opponents — and Detriot did just that.

Parrish got his club on the board first with a sharp, clutch single to center, scoring Gibson. "It seems like, the last couple of weeks, we always score in the first inning," Parrish said later, "and it carries over and gives us momentum."

Rod Carew homered in the bottom half of the first, but that was all the Angels were to be heard from the rest of the game.

Detroit first baseman Dave Bergman doubled with one out in the second, moved to third on Boone's passed ball, then scored on Chet Lemon's ground out — mistake No. 2 for the Angels — which, indirectly, led to the Tigers' run.

Like a vacuum, Kirby cleans the house

Ocean View catcher's two-run homer propels Seahawks past St. Paul, 7-6

By ROGER CARLSON
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

SANTA FE SPRINGS — There's one with every contender — the .297 hitter (.279 in league play) who doesn't really do much in the way of individual honors — he just wins games and makes a season.

So it went for Ocean View High catcher Mike Kirby Tuesday at St. Paul High School in the second round of the CIF 4-A baseball playoffs as he slammed a two-run homer in the ninth inning to snap a 3-3 score and ignite the Seahawks to a 7-6 triumph.

The victory sends Coach Ken Moats' Seahawks into the 4-A quarterfinals Friday against Bay League champion South Torrance, which advanced with a 9-6 victory over No. 2 seeded Camarillo Tuesday. Friday's game will be at Ocean View, beginning at 3:15.

Ocean View dodged bullets all day long Tuesday — as St. Paul left 10 runners stranded, and in turn, handed Ocean View a dozen baserunners with free passes on a diamond which was definitely in the rough and without fences — unless you want to count the ones that are some 500 feet to left and right and 700 feet to center.

But two can play this game and Kirby's rocket to deep left off a high, fast one from the third of four St. Paul pitchers, sent David Tinkle home from first ahead of him.

Had he hit this one in Fenway Park it would have been a single — maybe a fielder's choice with the runner forced at second — the ball was hit so hard.

In a conventional high school facility it might well have caromed off the wall and the runner held at third.

But Kirby's belt bounced to that wall 500 feet away and in he came. It rattled St. Paul pitching to such an extent, two singles and a walk followed to set up Chris Spaniac's two-run single, which appeared to be just frosting at the time, making it 7-3.

St. Paul rallied with a two-run shot up the middle by St. Paul catcher Chuck Graham and Dave Carney's two-out smash down the left field line went for a solo homer to make it 7-6. Matt Jones got the final batter to bounce to Tinkle and Ocean View was home free.

"Kirby is the most underrated kid we have," said Moats. "The reason we're here is because of Mike Kirby. He gave a summer to baseball and he has become an excellent receiver with no passed balls, throws out most of the people that run on him and is 7-for-7 in CIF.

"We're here because of Dean Douty, Matt Jones and Mike Kirby."

St. Paul began as if it were going to blow the game open — getting two runs in the first inning without a hit.

But Ocean View rallied with two in the second inning.

Dodgers outhit Phils, 8-3...

...But it's runs that count, and Philadelphia has more

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Fortunately for the Philadelphia Phillies, runs and not hits are what counts on the baseball scoreboard.

The Phillies registered their 10th straight victory Tuesday night with just three hits — one a broken-bat blooper over the pitcher's head to the shortstop.

But all three hits figured in the 3-1 triumph over the Los Angeles Dodgers.

They got two in the third inning, the broken-bat single by Ozzie Virgil and a slicer to right by Ivan DeJesus.

Virgil scored on a wild pitch and DeJesus came home on an infield out to make it 2-0.

The Phillies added a run in the third on a pair of walks and Virgil's solid hit to center. And that was it. The Phils didn't get another hit.

Meanwhile, lefthander Jerry Koosman pitched a gutty seven innings against the wounded Dodgers, who have four regulars sidelined.

Koosman got out of a two-on, one-out jam in the third with a double play pitch. He escaped with just one run in the fifth despite a bases-loaded, none out situation. In the sixth he got Franklin Stubbs for the final out with two Dodgers on the bases.

Then, in came Al Holland to work the final two innings and earn his 10th save of the season, tying him with Goose Gossage of San Diego for the National League high.

Holland allowed one hit and extended through 14⅔ innings his string of not allowing an earned run.

It was Holland's sixth save this month and fifth in his last six appearances. Not bad for a guy who last year at this point in the season had one save.

"Health baby, that's the difference," said Holland.

He started last season on the disabled list. Still, he wound up the season with 25 saves for the National League champion Phils.

"I'm throwing the ball the way I want to right now," said Holland. "And the more I pitch the more consistent I get.

"I had a good breaking ball tonight and had my fastball down and in the strike zone. My velocity and location were there.

"I'm not getting the strikeouts just now but I don't worry about that as long as I'm getting them out."

Koosman said he was able to get the Dodgers to hit the ball where he wanted when he had to.

"And the guys behind me did a heck of a job," he said. "I'm very pleased."

Koosman said he made some good pitches in key situations to keep the runners on third. He now is 4-5 after a 1-4 record, with a 1.98 ERA in his last four starts, winning three of four games.

Phillies' manager Paul Owens analyzed the night: "When you're going good you win these games. Once you get it rolling the players don't think they can get beat. We got clutch pitching and the hits counted."

Two hitting streaks were stopped and two other continued. The Phillies' Juan Samuel ended a 15-game string and Len Matuszek a nine-gamer. For Los Angeles, Pedro Guerrero and Franklin Stubbs extended strings through nine games.

Dodgers' manager Tommy Lasorda felt loser Bob Welch (3-5) deserved a better fate.

Lakers seek clincher

INGLEWOOD (AP) — While Coach John MacLeod of the Phoenix Suns is aware that his team is on the verge of elimination from the National Basketball Association playoffs, he's not about to give up just yet.

"It's not the best of situations," admitted MacLeod, whose team trails the Los Angeles Lakers 3-1 in the best-of-seven Western Conference final series. "But we're not out of it yet. We still have a chance. All we can do is give it a good shot."

Game five will be played at the Forum tonight and will be televised on Channel 2 beginning at 8:30. If the Suns win and prolong the series, game six would be at Phoenix Friday night.

However, the odds are strongly against the Suns prolonging the series. The Lakers beat the Suns by 16 points in each of the first two games of the series at the Forum, and Los Angeles has a 7-0 record in playoff games at home this year.

Douty selected Player of the Year; Moats also lauded

Ocean View High's Dean Douty and Ken Moats were named the Sunset League's Player of the Year and Coach of the Year by the league's coaches — selections that were dominated by runner-up Ocean View, third-place Fountain Valley and fourth-place Westminster.

Edison, which swept to the title with a three-game cushion, picked up just three first-team berths — getting no one on the second team, nor on honorable mention.

Those from the championship squad honored were catcher Paul Ellison, shortstop Chip Damato and outfielder Todd Nash.

Douty was one of three Ocean View players on the first team, joined by fellow pitcher Matt Jones and infielder Robbie Gibbs.

Fountain Valley, which began 0-3 in league play, but rallied in the latter stages to nip Westminster in the race for third place, finished with four players on the first team — infielder Gary Schoonover, pitcher Bob Sharpnack, Ray Llamas at designated hitter and David Leonard at utility.

Westminster's two first team players are infielder Greg Villegas and outfielder Guillermo Roses. Marina's Chad Reed and Huntington Beach's Pat Gordon round out the first team.

Clippers deny report they'll stay in San Diego

From AP dispatches

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Officials of the National Basketball Association San Diego Clippers steadfastly denied a published report Tuesday that they will back out of an announced move to Los Angeles and remain in San Diego.

The San Diego Tribune, quoting what it said were sources close to the team, said the Clippers may stay in San Diego for two more years.

But Glenn Mon, assistant manager of the Los Angeles Coliseum Commission, said he's still planning for a pro basketball franchise under his roof next season.

"When (team President Alan) Rothenberg heard about the rumors, he said 'There's no truth to them. We are the Los Angeles Clippers and you can find us at the Los Angeles Sports Arena.'"

The Tribune cited unnamed sources, who said team owner Donald Sterling met with Peter Graham, operator of the San Diego Sports Arena, last Thursday telling Graham that he would keep the Clippers in San Diego for two more years.

"Our understanding is that the Clipper management might be hedging on whether to move or not," said Bob Payne, president of the Greater San Diego Sports Association. "It looks like they might not be willing to give up their lease on the Sports Arena. They don't want to break that and then find they have no place to play, which could happen."

The Clippers have two years remaining on their Sports Arena contract, which would cost a reported $375,000 to buy out.

The NBA owners are expected to consider the proposed move during meetings June 26-27 in Salt Lake City.

Driver Chandler improving

INDIANAPOLIS — Race car driver Michael Chandler was making steady progress and may be discharged from Methodist Hospital by the end of the week, officials at the hospital announced Tuesday.

Chandler, 26, was hospitalized after his car slammed into the third-turn wall during practice for Sunday's Indianapolis 500 on May 11. He was unconscious with a severe head injury for 2½-days. A hospital spokesman said he is now in good condition, making slow progress.

Chandler suffered cerebral contusions, cuts, bruises and lacerations in the May 11 crash. He was taken directly from the track to the hospital by helicopter after being removed from his race car.

Chandler, of Dana Point, is the son of Otis Chandler, board chairman and editor in chief of the Los Angeles Times-Mirror Corp.

Kings hire Perry as aide to GM

INGLEWOOD — Don Perry, fired as coach of the Los Angeles Kings last winter, has been hired by the National Hockey League team as a special assistant to the general manager, it was announced Tuesday.

Perry, 54, coached the Kings for part of the 1981-82 season, all the of 1982-83 campaign and part of the 1983-84 season before being dismissed and succeeded by Roger Neilson.

Neilson wasn't retained by the Kings at the end of the season. Los Angeles has been without a head coach since that time.

Perry lives in upstate New York, which will act as his home base while he works with the Kings' organization, the team said, adding that his first role in his new position will be to assist the club at the NHL amateur draft on June 9.

Elster signs with New York

Golden West College slugger Kevin Elster has signed a contract with the New York Mets and will report to Little Falls, N.Y. in the Class A New York-Penn League in the middle of June.

Elster, a shortstop who had signed a letter of intent with Arizona State University, hit .330 with the Rustlers this season with 14 extra-base hits, including five home runs.

Elster was chosen second by the Mets in the winter draft.

Margerum to undergo surgery

LAKE FOREST, Ill. — Chicago Bears wide receiver Ken Margerum, a product of Fountain Valley High, will be sidelined for the upcoming season by a knee injury and is heading for his West Coast home for surgery and rehabilitation because he says he'd "go crazy" watching his teammates prepare to play.

"One of the reasons I'm doing the rehab at home is it will be easier than watching the other players practice every day," said Margerum before departing Monday for his home in the San Francisco area. "I'd go crazy doing that.

"I think this could be the year for them," he continued. "Not being part of it, I'm just sick to my stomach."

Margerum suffered ligament damage to his left knee in the last 10 minutes of the final practice at last week's mini-training camp and will require major surgery and a long rehabilitation process, said Bears trainer Fred Caito.

Van Fleet leaves 49er AD post

LONG BEACH — Corey Van Fleet, the athletic director at Long Beach State since September of 1982, has resign his post at the university, effective June 30.

Van Fleet, 47, took over the position after serving 10 years as the athletic director at Oakland University in Rochester, Mich.

In a prepared statement, Van Fleet said: "I have enjoyed my associations at the university and with the 49er Athletic Foundation family. I look forward to tracking the success of our 49er teams during the next several seasons."

Schnellenberger to USFL?

CORAL GABLES, Fla. — Howard Schnellenberger, coach of the national champion Miami Hurricanes, said Tuesday that he hopes to decide on a possible move to the United States Football League within three days, but emphasized that he won't take a position with the Washington Federals unless the club moves to Miami.

During an interview with The Associated Press, however, the 50-year-old coach gave strong indications that he is leaning toward accepting a reported five-year, $3 million contract that would give him part ownership of the USFL team as well as a six-figure salary for life.

"There's a lot more to it than money as it relates to the excitement of being with a new team, (having) part ownership of the club and being president and general operational officer," Schnellenberger said.

TENNIS

CdM reaches semis with easy victory

But Uni, Estancia, Artists eliminated from CIF playoffs

Corona del Mar was the lone survivor among area high school tennis teams competing in the CIF playoffs, as fellow Sea View League members Estancia and University were ousted from 4-A competition and South Coast League champ Laguna Beach fell in the 3-A.

Here's how it happened:

The Sea Kings, defending CIF 4-A champions, although seeded third in the playoffs, put host Rolling Hills away, 17½-6½ with the last round of singles left unplayed with the verdict already tucked away.

It sets the Sea Kings up with a semifinals match against South Torrance High Thursday at South Torrance.

Heffern

It wasn't one of the Sea Kings' more memorable victories, because, as Coach Dave Heffern put it, "It was just something we had to get out of our way. Our attitude wasn't good, but we're going to be ready to play Thursday against South Torrance."

Once-beaten South Torrance is seeded No. 2 and thrice-beaten Miraleste is seeded No. 1 in the 32-team eliminations, something that obviously rankles the Sea Kings, who have been seeded third despite their glowing record.

"Miraleste should be playing South for the right to play us," says Heffern. "But Santa Barbara will give Miraleste a run."

Tuesday's victory was keyed by the play of singles stars Scott Brownsberger, David Propp, Mike Briggs and Brian Bennett, along with doubles stars Frank Hinman and John Hostetler.

Trojans ousted by Santa Barbara

Santa Barbara's depth in singles proved the difference as the Trojans were eliminated from the CIF playoffs, 17-11, at the Racquet Club of Irvine.

The two teams played dead even in doubles, but University was swept in No. 3 and No. 4 singles and that was the key to the match.

"They had a couple of crucial service breaks in singles that hurt us," said University Coach Gary Sisel. "We had a terrible start and almost came back, but had to win the last two doubles sets and couldn't."

Standout Chris Greer highlighted the Trojans' efforts, winning three of his four singles matches, but was tripped up by Santa Barbara's No. 1 player.

University, the Sea View League runner-up and fourth seed in the tournament, finished the season at 18-5.

Eagles overmatched by South Torrance

Estancia found second-seeded South Torrance too strong, and saw their season come to an end after a 23½-4½ loss at home.

The Eagles played without singles player Ron Alarya (sidelined with the flu) and were forced to use a junior varsity player in No. 4 singles, but it didn't make much difference.

The Sea View League's third-place team finished the season at 17-7.

Artists miss their chances

Laguna Beach High had its opportunities to pull out its match against Sierra League champion Los Altos, but the second-seeded Artists fell for only the second time in 23 outings, 15-13, in a 3-A quarterfinal.

"The kids played too tight," explained a disappointed Laguna Coach Art Wahl. "We needed one more point and we would have won the match on total games."

The cause seemed lost as Laguna entered the final set of four singles needing to sweep, but won the first three and had Todd Brumfield leading the Conquerors' No. 1 player Steve Jung, 5-2. That's when Jung, realizing his team needed the set, came alive to win the next three games and pull even at 5-5.

Brumfield rebounded for a 6-5 edge, but Jung forced a tie-breaker which he won easily, 7-2.

"You can't blame Brumfield, he did a helluva job to play their No. 1 kid so tough," said Wahl. Jung had beaten the Artists' other players by scores of 6-3, 6-2 and 6-0 before coming up against Brumfield.

Olympic official: More will join boycott

NEW YORK (AP) — Calling the Soviet-led boycott of the Summer Olympics "a blatant political decision" Col. F. Don Miller, executive director of the U.S. Olympic Committee, predicted Tuesday there would be 20 to 25 nations — and possibly as many as 50 — absent from the Los Angeles Games.

Despite the boycott of the Soviet bloc nations, Miller nevertheless predicted the Olympics would be "a complete success." He termed the Soviet-led boycott "political overtones of self-serving nonsense."

Miller also predicted that the Soviet Union would compare the medals earned by the United States this year with its medals in the 1980 Moscow Games, boycotted by the United States.

SOFTBALL

Marina erupts, 18-0

Barons, Conquerors, Monarchs also win

Marina, Fountain Valley and Mater Dei each advanced with shutouts in the second round of the CIF 4-A softball playoffs, with the Vikings scoring an eye-opening 18 runs against Bay League champion Rolling Hills.

In the small schools division, top-seeded Newport Christian marched into the quarterfinals with a win over Westridge.

Marina 18, Rolling Hills 0

Viking Coach Susie Calderon was as surprised as anyone with the ease in which her team advanced.

"Yes, it was surprising because they were No. 1 in the Bay League," she noted, "but the kids were just hitting the ball hard. We had some nice solid hits and they made good contact with the ball."

The Vikings will play Northern League champ Righetti, which also pounded out a lopsided victory Tuesday. The game will be Righetti's home game.

For Marina, Julie Larsen tossed a one-hitter, a leadoff single to left field in the third inning.

Christy Larsen went 3-for-4 with 2 RBI; Lori Crouse had three hits and knocked in a pair; and Jill Bellamy chipped in with two hits. Tracy Ferguson doubled in a pair of runs in the third inning to ignite Marina (now 24-5).

Fountain Valley 2, Simi Valley 0

Things didn't come quite as easily for the Barons as it did Marina, but Staci Haynes made a pair of third-inning runs stand up with a three-hitter.

Haynes struck out four and walked three, escaping a first-and-third, one-out predicament in the top of the first.

Fountain Valley tallied its runs in the top of the third on the same play. With runners at second and third, Therese Puchalski laid down a two-strike squeeze bunt, scoring Lea Young from third and, when the ball was overthrown, Christy Alvarez raced home from second.

The Barons (15-10) next face second-seeded Garden Grove (27-1), a 1-0 victor over Cerritos Tuesday.

Mater Dei 1, Villa Park 0

The Monarchs advanced with the 13-inning verdict as Noel Manfre led off with a single, went to second on an error and scored when Debbie Wagner's bunt resulted in an overthrow at first.

The Monarchs' Carrie Sullivan went the distance to earn the win, striking out eight and walking three. She escaped a jam in the 11th when Villa Park placed the tying run at third and one out.

Mater Dei, 18-8 overall, next faces Kennedy on Friday.

Newport Christian 5, Westridge 2

Winning pitcher Kelly Davidson helped her own cause with a solo homer in the third and Darcy Degele tripled in the second and scored on a wild pitch to key the Conquerors' attack.

Degele also had a single and extended her streak to eight straight hits before flying out the last two at-bats.

On the mound, Davidson struck out seven and walked one.

Newport Christian (18-1) plays Pasadena Poly on Friday.

Team tennis rosters announced by King

INGLEWOOD (AP) — Billie Jean King announced Tuesday the rosters of the six teams that will compete in this year's Team Tennis season at the Forum July 10-15.

The six teams will compete in a six-day single-elimination tournament with last year's top two teams, the Chicago Fire and the Los Angeles Strings, receiving first-round byes.

The abbreviated format was adopted by the league to avoid competition with the Olympics. The league said it will return to its normal, month-long season next year.

King will play for Chicago and be joined by Sharon Walsh, Trey Waltke and Ben Testerman.

Buchan in command at sailing trials

Veteran skipper wins second straight to widen his point lead over Cayard

By ALMON LOCKABEY
Daily Pilot Boating Writer

LONG BEACH — Veteran Star sailor Bill Buchan is showing a liking for the light, southerly breezes off the Long Beach breakwater.

The 49-year old Bellevue, Wash. skipper won his second straight race in the Olympic trials Tuesday to widen his point lead over Paul Cayard of San Bruno.

Scoring Tuesday was based on the best five-of-seven races with the race committee allowing two throwouts. With two throwouts, Buchan has 16.7 penalty points to 29.0 for Cayard who finished fifth (worth 10 points) which he must hold after throwing out two eigth-place finishes.

Buchan's throwouts at this stage of the competition have been an 11th (17 points) and a 6th (11.7 points).

John Dane III of Escatawpa, Miss. finished second to keep him in fifth place with 35.0 penalty points.

Dave Chapin of Springfield, Ill. won Tuesday's race in the Soling Class but the win failed to move him above sixth place in the standings. Robbie Haines of Coronado is still leading the class with 23.7 penalty points despite a third-place finish Tuesday.

Ed Baird, St. Petersburg, Fla. who finished second, is being protested by Dave Perry, Southport, Conn., who placed seventh, because of a pre-start collision. If Baird is disqualified, it could knock him out of second place in the standings. (Yachts are considered to be racing from 10 minutes before the starting gun).

Perry declined to state after the race under what rule he was protesting, but it was presumed to be a right-of-way violation. Perry said he did know if Baird was filing a counter-protest.

Tuesday's results:

Soling (Seventh race) — 1. Dave Chapin, Springfield, Ill.; 2. Ed Baird, St. Petersburg, Fla. (pending protest); 3. Robbie Haines, Coronado; 4. Stephen Grillon, Redondo Beach; 5. Don Cohan, Springfield, Ill.; 6. Dave Curtis, Marblehead, Mass.; 7. Dave Perry, Southport, Conn. (pending protest); 8. Bill Allen, Spring Park, Minn.; 9. Buddy Melges, Zenda, Wisc.; 10. Soling standings (best 5-of-7) — 1. Haines, 23.7; 2. Baird, 30.4 (pending protest); 3. Curtis, 36.7; 4. Perry, 37.4 (pending protest); 5. Dennis Stiefel, Bay St. Louis, Miss., 40.4; 6. Chapin, 42.4; 7. Cohan, 44.0; 8. Allen, 48.0; 9. Melges, 55.7; 10. Gerard Coleman, Buffalo, N.Y., 61.0.

Star (seventh racer) — 1. Bill Buchan, Bellevue, Wash.; 2. John Dane III, Escatawpa, Miss.; 3. Augie Diaz, Miami, Fla; 4. John MacCausland, Cherry Hill, N.J.; 5. Paul Cayard, San Bruno; 6. Houston will get Olajuwon

NEW YORK (AP) — The Houston Rockets took advantage of an incorrect "tails" call by the Portland Trail Blazers today to win a coin flip and the right to select 7-foot All-America Akeem Olajuwon with the first pick in the June 19 National Basketball Association draft.

Both teams had announced previously that they would use the first selection to take the 7-footer from Nigeria and the University of Houston if they won Commissioner David Stern's flip of a 100-year-old silver dollar.

Since both teams expressed a desire to make the decisive call, Stern made a preliminary flip that was won by Portland owner Larry Weinberg. Then Stern flipped again, Weinberg called "tails," and the toss came up heads.

It will be the second year in a row that the Rockets will have the first choice in the draft. In 1983, Rockets' owner Charlie Thomas correctly called "heads" in a coin toss with the Indiana Pacers.

They used the first pick to select 7-4 Ralph Sampson, who could team with Olajuwon to form a potentially awesome frontcourt, barring a trade.

Portland had hoped to have the coin fall its way, just as it did in 1974, when Philadelphia incorrectly called "heads" and the Trail Blazers were able to choose Bill Walton, who led the Trail Blazers to an NBA title three years later.

The Blazers had said that if they lost the flip, they would take Sam Bowie, the 7-footer from Kentucky.

Saddleback College's baseball team, which had beaten Southwestern four times during the regular phase of the Pacific Coast Conference schedule, hit a road block Tuesday against the Apaches in the first round of the Shaughnessy Playoffs.

The Gauchos' bid for a fifth straight win over Southwestern (17-15) was denied as the visitors rallied for an 8-3 victory.

"We're all in the same boat now," said Saddleback Coach Jim Brideweser, referring to the fact his team is on the verge of elimination from post-season play. As the conference champion, the Gauchos must be beaten twice, while the rest of the field will be eliminated with a single setback.

Now, the Gauchos await an opponent for Saturday's next round at Saddleback, needing a victory to avoid elimination.

Steve DeAngelis put the Gauchos (23-13) in front with a third-inning three-run homer — his 26th career home run — which followed walks to Ken Henry and Mark Webster. But Saddleback's offense was silenced after that.

The Apaches pushed around sophomore starter Mike Lomelli (9-7) and a pair of relievers, producing three homers among their 11 hits.

In the other PCC Shaughnessy matchup, San Diego Mesa was eliminated by falling to Palomar, 6-4, setting up a Southwestern-Palomar matchup Thursday.

HOROSCOPE

SYDNEY OMARR

Thursday, May 24

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Time spent alone will prove productive. Accent on spiritual values, perfection of techniques. Be sensitive to needs of one who is confined to home or hospital. Temporary delay will actually prove beneficial. Know it, gain inner strength.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Major commitment is made. You get what you want, you'll have more responsibility as result. Focus on desire, aspirations, romance and important career opportunity. Individual who aided in past is again available — know it, don't permit pride to block progress.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Study Taurus message for valuable hint. Focus on promotion, prestige, participation in community or political project. Potential is tremendous and you'll be aware of it. Get rid of burden which is not your own to carry in first place.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Stress independence, willingness to plan ahead for education, travel and long-range commitment. Spiritual values come into focus, you'll know where you want to go and you'll gain rare insight into methods of arriving at chosen destination.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Accent on studies which include the occult, the mantic arts, unsolved mysteries. Dig deep, reject superficial responses, realize financial potential can be much more than originally anticipated. Protect legal rights — don't co-sign.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Go slow, lie low, avoid scattering efforts. You'll become more aware of body image, of publicity, of public relations, of legal rights and permissions. Long-distance communication relates to future travel or marital plans. Gemini figures prominently.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Focus on payments, fiscal responsibility, employment, care of pets and dependents. Be specific, attend to details and become aware of fine print. It may be necessary to overturn previous methods, to imprint your own style. Scorpio plays key role.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Emphasis on speculation, pleasure principle, change, travel, variety and associations with children. Romance dominates, actions tend to be based on impulse, as contrasted to logic. You could receive publicity, planned or otherwise.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Important domestic adjustment dominates. Be diplomatic, stress safety, security and long-range policies. Purchase of art object or luxury item could aid in beautifying surroundings. Taurus, Libra, Scorpio natives play key roles.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Define terms, open lines of communication, expect visit from relative in transit. See people as they are, not merely as

Irvine agrees on civic center site

Council votes unanimously in favor of 25-acre Culver Drive location

By ANDREA ADELSON
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Irvine's leaders made city history Tuesday night, unanimously agreeing for the first time in 13 years on where to break ground on a permanent civic center.

The council set in motion long-awaited plans to build a government hub on 25 acres at Culver Drive near the San Diego Creek channel. The parcel is now planted with crops and is part of a new residential village being planned by the Irvine Co.

After about 45 minute of discussion Tuesday, which had been preceded by years of debates over the best site, the council finally took the plunge and committed itself.

"To have a 5-0 vote is history tonight," Councilman David Sills told his colleagues.

"It will change," retiring Councilman Bill Vardoulis said as a parting shot. Vardoulis will step down from office after June 5.

The vote is only the first of many decisions city leaders will face in designing the new seat of government, estimated two years ago to cost $22.4 million. It was envisioned as a "City Center," for a city hall, police station, county branch library, civic auditorium, school and water districts' headquarters and with centers for day care and for the elderly.

The first voices of opposition surfaced Tuesday, with representatives from homeowner groups in Culverdale and Woodbridge expressing concern about how their neighborhoods will be affected by traffic and commercial development expected to be built near the new complex.

"I realize speed is necessary, but you're not planning ahead" to accommodate traffic and future demands for expansion, Bea Shapiro, spokeswoman for Woodbridge residents, told the council.

"The best place for City Hall is in Costa Mesa, where it won't affect anyone," Vardoulis joked.

Assistant City Manager Paul Brady said the vote only "gives a fix for future planning," which can be designed around the proposal.

Police allege HB man illegally solicited funds for Olympics

By ROBERT BARKER
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Fountain Valley police have arrested a 28-year-old Huntington Beach man who allegedly was going door-to-door soliciting contributions to help support U.S. Olympic athletes, detectives said today.

When Edick A. Anderson III was arrested Monday on suspicion of illegal solicitation of funds and falsely representing a Huntington Beach charitable organization, he had donations of $37 in his possession — $35 in checks and $2 in cash, police said.

Officials were unsure how long Anderson had been soliciting donations and didn't know how much money he might have collected.

Fountain Valley detectives said Anderson allegedly was carrying papers indicating he was soliciting funds for the Minor Sports Foundation of America when he was

No candidates at Irvine nuke day?

Agran organizing panel discussion for May 31 event

By ANDREA ADELSON
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Months of efforts by a locally based group to bring the three Democratic presidential candidates to an Orange County forum on nuclear-related issues have so far failed.

But in the candidates' stead, local peace activists including Irvine Mayor Larry Agran have organized a panel discussion on arms reductions to be held May 31 in Irvine's City Council Chambers.

All Democratic and Republican presidential candidates have been invited to the forum which is to take place between 9:30 a.m. and 12:30 p.m., just five days before the June 5 state primary, forum organizer Tim Carpenter said Tuesday.

Colorado Sen. Gary Hart is the only "maybe" in the bunch because he may be in Orange County the day of the forum, he said. President Reagan has turned down the invitation, former Vice President Walter Mondale is "unlikely" and the date is "open to consideration" on Rev. Jesse Jackson's calendar, according to Carpenter.

He contended the non-commital candidates are "unwilling or afraid" to discuss the issue in Southern California, a primary base for the nation's defense contractors.

Josh Baron, a Hart Southern California campaign spokesman, called Carpenter's argument "nonsense."

Hart "has demonstrated his willingness to discuss the issues," Baron said, but the candidate is bombarded with requests for appearances. His May 31 schedule is "fluid," but is dominated by fund-raising efforts "to keep this campaign going," he said.

Instead of candidates, economist William Hartung, journalist Robert Scheer, four local leaders and four elected officials from throughout the

Irvine recognized as Olympic site

By ANDREA ADELSON
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Perhaps it didn't rate right up there with the Soviets' decision to boycott the Summer Olympic Games.

After all, it didn't have international repercussions. The world's press has been noticeably disinterested. And there apparently haven't been any high-level diplomatic sessions to sooth the ruffled feathers. But up until Tuesday night, the City of Irvine has been unceremoniously snubbed.

Now it's all better. After unfurling the "stars in motion" flag and handing out of Sam the Eagle pins, Irvine officially received recognition from Olympic organizers that the city is an official Summer Games venue site.

Irvine has been mentioned only as an afterthought in official Olympic programs. But on July 31, the city will host the swimming portion of the five-event modern pentathlon.

"This is the moment we've all been waiting for," Dick Stevens, Olympic commissioner for the pentathlon, told the City Council. "In spite of the recent disruptions, I

Fans not bothered by 'Temple of Doom' gore

By the Associated Press

"Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom" began its quest for box office glory today amid debate over its graphic violence, which some critics say should be off limits for unaccompanied young viewers.

Directed by Steven Spielberg and produced by George Lucas, the eagerly anticipated sequel to the 1982 blockbuster "Raiders of the Lost Ark" was booked into 1,685 theaters nationwide, many of which scheduled their first screenings at 12:01 a.m. local time.

In New York City, moviegoers leaving the Loews Astor Plaza theater today seemed unconcerned by the film's gore.

"I felt dazzled after just the first 20 minutes," said Leslie Cullen, 22. "It's going to be a hit."

"It's real escapism, fantastic from start to finish," said Jeff Kleinman. "If you want a great escape movie, it delivers from beginning to end."

In California, eager fans camped out for days to be assured of choice seats. Some wore the slouch hats and oversize coats affected by the title character, played by Harrison Ford.

Dianne Elwood, 19, began waiting last Friday at the Edwards Newport Cinema in Newport Beach, which hired 30 new employees to deal with the expected crowds.

"The only people who wait in line are crazy, but we have nothing better to do at the moment," said Gordon Berg, 17, who stood behind Elwood.

"It's like Christmas," said Patrick Labyorteaux, 18, who spent three days outside the National Theater in Westwood. He was first in line for the midnight show.

"We were in the ('Return of the Jedi') line for seven days," Labyorteaux added. "This is kind of routine."

The violent scenes include a hair-raising sequence in which a man's heart is torn from his chest before he is lowered into a pit of boiling lava. That kind of action has prompted worries and some complaints about the effect on young viewers who will likely make up a large share of the film's audience.

Jim Dick — Valley's man in motion

Busy civic leader, 68, uses his retirement to involve himself in community activities

PHIL SNEIDERMAN
PEOPLE IN THE NEWS

It wasn't easy to catch up with Jim Dick one day last week.

In the morning, the 68-year-old Fountain Valley man was at the historical park he's helping to build behind City Hall. As president of the Fountain Valley Historical Society, he was interviewing a 90-year-old Costa Mesa woman who taught school in Fountain Valley 57 years ago.

In the afternoon, Dick was at the King of Glory Lutheran Church, helping to set up props for a production of "South Pacific."

He was also preparing the agenda for the annual installation of officers of the Friends of the Fountain Valley Library set the following day. He was about to begin another year as president of the library support group.

That night Dick attended Fountain Valley High School's Coronet Awards program because his grandson Michael Koelsch was a nominee. He had to apologize for not being able to attend a meeting of coin collectors.

In addition to his club work, Dick is secretary of the Orange County Health Planning Council, a group that reviews hospital expansion plans and tries to control rising health care costs. He's also on Fountain Valley's Housing and Community Development Advisory Committee, which oversees the local use of federal funds. He also lectures on Fountain Valley history before schools, scout groups and service clubs.

"What makes Jim Dick run and run and run...?"

Fountain Valley is a quiet bedroom community of more than 50,000 residents. Yet, it's also a city where many of the same faces keep turning up when you're looking for the people involved in civic and service club activities. Jim Dick is one of those familiar faces.

His wife Doris, who also is active in many of these groups, says she and her husband subscribe to a simple philosophy: If you want to upgrade your quality of life, you have to do more than just fix up you house. You have to help improve your community as a whole.

Like many California residents, Jim Dick is a transplant from the East Coast. But unlike most former Easterners, he never refers to his native Connecticut as "back home."

"The children here all know how their parents came from Oshkosh, Wis., or Dearborn, Mich., but the children should also know something about the place where their home is now," Dick insists. "Doris and I both go back East, but we don't go home (there). Home is here."

Dick grew up in New England and eventually became a criminal investigator for the Connecticut State Police. Then he became an investigator for the U.S. Civil Service Commission. In 1964, he asked to be transferred from Connecticut because of his wife's health problems.

"We researched for six months to find the best climate in the world," Dick recalls. "That was on the south coast of Spain — but I didn't have a job offer there."

The Dicks then settled in Fountain Valley for its particularly mild

County may buy computer

By JEFF ADLER
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

To better finger the right criminal suspect, the Orange County Board of Supervisors agreed Tuesday to investigate further the possibility of leasing or purchasing a high-technology computer that could match fingerprints lifted at crime scenes with those of 20,000 past offenders in the county.

Supervisor Ralph Clark asked for the board's authorization to look more closely into such a system to gather information on the proposal before summer budget hearings.

Among questions county law enforcement officials and supervisors want answered is whether police agencies now using the system have found it effective as a crime-detection tool.

"I understand, it is being used with good crime detection results by the state Department of Justice as well as law enforcement agencies in such cities as Houston, San Jose, Washington D.C. and Minneapolis-St. Paul," Clark said in a letter to board members.

The computerized system would allow detectives to randomly search for fingerprint matches among the prints of 20,000 persons who have been jailed for past offenses.

Currently, the county sheriff's department only can attempt to match latent prints lifted at a crime scene with those of a known suspect.

state will try to focus the nuclear debate at a community level, Carpenter said.

Topics will range from the economic consequences of the nuclear arms race to its psychological impact, he said. The hall holds 150 people.

"We believe the hearing is the first such event of its kind and underscores our commitment to be part of the national dialogue to reduce nuclear weapons and cut a bloated budget," Irvine's Agran said.

The event, called the first of 12 hearings to be held across the nation, is sponsored by the League of Elected Officials of America, a group founded this year by Agran. It has more than 100 members in California, Carpenter said.

The league is a network of local elected officials who sponsored a forum for presidential candidates in January with the aid of 150 mayors and council members from Iowa. Four of eight candidates attended the nationally televised event prior to the Iowa caucus.

The group's members endorse a nuclear weapons freeze.

Agran, an attorney, was co-author of the non-binding Proposition 12 nuclear freeze measure approved by California voters in 1982. Six Orange County cities voted for the freeze, including Irvine and Laguna Beach.

The league was bred from Agran's campaign to mobilize 65 mayors and council members to support the measure in their communities.

Military spending on nuclear arms is robbing cities of essential resources, Agran said.

Among the speakers are Hartung, author of the "Economic Consequences of the Nuclear Freeze;" Los Angeles Times political writer Scheer; Jean Forbath, of Costa Mesa-based Save Our Selves; Torin Segerstrom, scion of a prominent local developer; and Curt Haunfeler, president of the Anaheim High School District board.

arrested in the area of La Luna Avenue and Ash Street.

But officers said the organization underwent a name change about two years ago and officially became the American Youth Sports Foundation.

Detectives also disclosed that the original president and founder of the American Youth Sports Foundation — 39-year-old Donald L. Green of Huntington Beach — was convicted in Long Beach Muncipal Court Monday of making fraudulent solicitations that prosecutors said involved hiring youths for door-to-door fund-raising that supposedly was to help Olympic athletes. Police believe the two incidents are unrelated.

In the Fountain Valley case, Detective Dennis Menna said, Anderson didn't have a city business license.

Menna said Anderson claimed he turned over proceeds to an unidentified official for the sports foundation each Friday at a Denny's Restaurant in Fountain Valley. He said he kept 30 percent of the solicitations for his salary, Menna reported.

Foundation officials declared Anderson wasn't an employee, Menna said.

Menna said police were alerted to the solicitation by a resident.

He added that Southern California is a particularly vulnerable area for organizations collecting money for athletes, especially in the year of the Olympics.

"I'd be very, very leery of making contributions if the solicitor had no valid business license signed by an appropriate official," he declared.

think the unfortunate circumstances have brought people together." He referred to the Soviet-led boycott of the Los Angeles Games.

Stevens said 66 athletes from 20 countries will participate in the sold-out event to be held at Irvine's Heritage Park Aquatics Complex. The remaining pentathlon events are to be held at the Cota de Caza resort east of Lake Forest. Three other Olympic events are being held in Orange County.

Even two-time Olympic bronze medalist Dwight Stones was on hand Tuesday night, unclasping his own lapel pin to hand to Mayor Larry Agran. He had a pocket full of others to present to the rest of the council. Everyone dutifully wore their pins.

Stones, an Irvine resident, said he was delighted to "be able to go almost on my bicycle to the swimming event."

Stones, a 10-time world record holder in the high jump, is trying out for his third Olympic team after competing in the 1972 and 1976 Olympics. Having the U.S. host the Games "is a decided advantage," Stones said, adding that the U.S. Olympic track and field team is at its best in 20 years.

weather. The city was still rather young (it was incorporated in 1957) and in the midst of a transition from farm area to residential community.

Soon after the move, Dick became active in a local homeowners association, working to ease some racial tensions that had surfaced in the neighborhood.

In 1965, Dick was appointed to the city's traffic advisory committee. He helped develop Fountain Valley's first traffic laws.

In 1966, Dick was appointed to the Fountain Valley Planning Commission. He served as chairman through 1972 and remained on the commission until 1974. During that period, Fountain Valley underwent substantial growth.

Dick said he believes the commission during his tenure faithfully adhered to the master development plan created by the city's early leaders. One exception was that commissioners permitted more single-family housing and less multiple-housing (apartments, condominiums, etc.) than originally planned.

In 1969, Jim and Doris Dick were among the founding members of the Fountain Valley Historical Society. The society was dormant for a while in the early 1970s but revived in time for the national Bicentennial celebrations of 1976.

In recent years, the group has channeled its energies into preservation of some remnants of Fountain Valley's past.

Because of the city's rapid development, nearly all of Fountain Valley's early buildings were demolished to make way for tract housing and shopping centers. In late 1981, a developer discovered three aged structures hidden from view off Bushard Street. The developer said the historical society could have them, but said the group had to act quickly before the bulldozers arrived.

The buildings were a 1920s real estate office, a Japanese bathhouse and a water tower. The city agreed to accommodate the structures at an undeveloped park, but the historical society had to raise $2,400 to move them. Doris Dick, who was president of the group at the time, asked the members at a meeting to at least pledge money for the move. Instead, she had $2,000 in donations in her hand within 10 minutes.

As it turned out, the development that would have destroyed the old buildings never materialized. Still, the threat pressed the society into action. The buildings were moved to an area behind City Hall dubbed "Heritage Park." Jim Dick and other society members have spent many hours renovating the structures and adding landscaping at the park. It may be opened to the public later this year.

When he's not working at the park, you can often find Jim Dick speaking to local school children about Fountain Valley's history. He says most youngsters are woefully uninformed about the community's beginnings as a soggy area full of Artesian wells (the source of the city's name). The land had to be drained to permit the farming of lima beans, sugar beets, tomatoes, peppers and other crops.

"One of the first things these kids ask is what Indians lived here," Dick says. "I tell them no Indians lived in this valley because none of them were dumb enough to live in a swampy riverbed. They lived on the bluffs in Huntington Beach and Costa Mesa."

The local history buff also tells the children how the city fathers barely got Fountain Valley incorporated in time to prevent most of it from being annexed into Santa Ana. Although the founders were mainly farmers, the construction of the San Diego Freeway through town hastened its transformation into a bedroom community, he tells the youngsters.

Jim Dick hasn't slowed down much since retiring from his federal job in 1978.

"I watched too many people who retired from the mills back East," he says. "They just retired, sat on their front porches and died because they didn't know anything else to keep busy."

Right now, Dick is intent on getting the Heritage Park finished as a place for display of historical mementoes from Fountain Valley. He's also pressing the city to use redevelopment funds to build an expanded local library.

Later this year, Jim and Doris Dick hope to do some traveling, visiting friends and relatives back East. But don't expect the couple to give up their civic activities permanently.

"This would only be a brief intermission from what we're doing here," Jim Dick says.

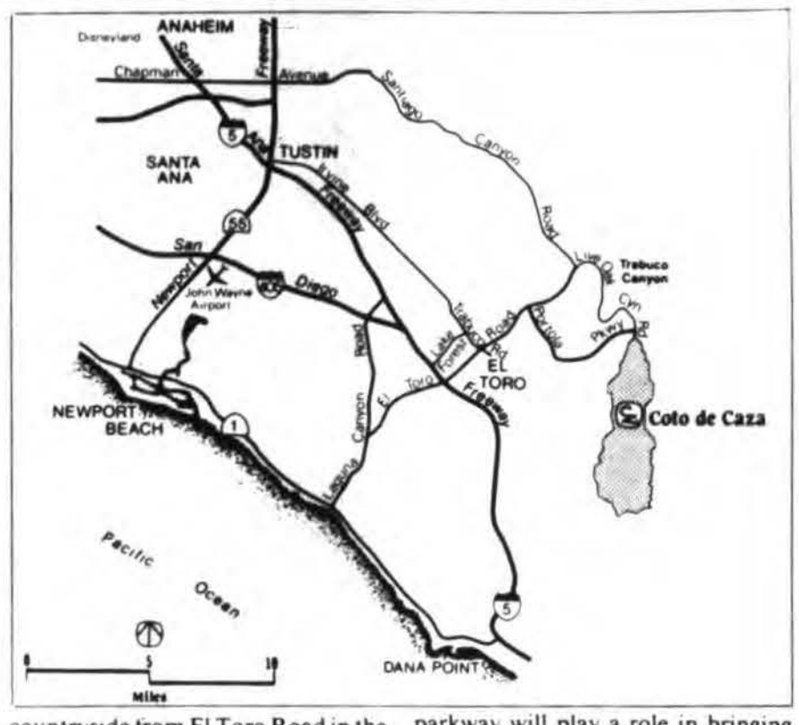
Traffic woes bridged in Viejo

Portola Parkway to guard against future flooding



An arroyo that served as the encampment for Spanish explorer Gaspar de Portola's foot soldiers is now covered by a span of concrete rather than canvas.

The new $8.3 million Portola Bridge and Parkway was opened this week after being dedicated over the weekend with the snip of a golden rope by state Deputy Transportation Secretary Dana Reed.

The 5.5-mile parkway will open up the interior of Rancho Mission Viejo, and the communities of Mission Viejo, Coto de Caza and Robinson Ranch. It's 1,200-foot bridge extends over a stream bed and adjoining countryside from El Toro Road in the north to Plano Trabuco Road in the south.

Four miles shorter than meandering Live Oak Canyon Road, Portola Parkway sweeps over the canyon, saving considerable travel time and ensuring against repetition of the 1980 Trabuco Creek flood that isolated the exclusive resort of Coto de Caza for nine days.

In addition, the completion of the parkway will play a role in bringing Olympic visitors to the resort, site of the modern pentathlon.

Pickups and flatbeds from Coto de Caza were the first to parade down the new thoroughfare Saturday.

The six-column, two-lane bridge is the longest ever built by county road builders and is the product of 22 years of negotiations. Novo Construction Co. and Steve P. Rados, Inc., both of Santa Ana, built the bridge.

Teens may be tried as adults

By KAREN E. KLEIN

First-degree murder charges were filed Tuesday against two 16-year-old boys in the death of a 60-year-old Costa Mesa woman whose body was found in a flower planter in her backyard.

In filing the charges, the district attorney's office asked that both youths be tried as adults, according to Deputy District Attorney Brent Romney.

A Juvenile Court detention hearing, similar to an arraignment, was scheduled today, Romney said. A date will likely be set today for a hearing to determine whether the teen-agers should stand trial as adults, he said.

"On a homicide like this, it's a pretty standard presumption they'll stand trial as adults. That's what we're pushing for," Romney said.

One of the teen-agers, whose names were both withheld because of their ages, lived as a ward in the home of the victim, Eugenia Flores Baker.

Relatives found her body buried in a planter Sunday after noticing freshly turned soil in a garden area where several plants were missing.

Police said an autopsy showed she had been hit several times Friday with a "blunt object."

Both youths attended Back Bay Continuation School in Costa Mesa, and police allege that the other boy was in the Baker's home at the time of the slaying.

Police Lt. Jack Calnon said Mrs. Baker got into an argument Friday morning with the 16-year-old because he was lying to her about not attending school and losing his job.

GOLD
solid, filled, or plated

So that consumers will not be too confused by the advertising and marketing of gold products, the Federal Trade Commission and the Jewelers Vigilance Committee point out these facts: SOLID GOLD means a piece of gold jewelry is solid, and does not have a hollow. GOLD FILLED jewelry is made from a base metal and has layers of gold mechanicaly bonded to both sides, like a sandwich. The gold alloy must constitute at least one-tenth of the object's total weight, unless it is marked otherwise. The gold coating can eventually wear away. Gold filled jewelry may also be called "gold overlay" or "rolled gold plate." GOLD ELECTROPLATE means gold is deposited on the face of the object electrolytically. To be called by this name, the electroplate must be at least 7 millionths of an inch thick. Anthying thinner must be called "gold wash" or "gold flash." There is a higher standard for watches, which have 750 millionths of an inch of gold to be called gold electroplate. Be sure that you know what kind of gold jewelry you are buying before you spend your money. Deal with a reputable jeweler.

No candidates at Irvine nuke day?

Agran organizing panel discussion for May 31 event

By ANDREA ADELSON
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Months of efforts by a locally based group to bring the three Democratic presidential candidates to an Orange County forum on nuclear-related issues have so far failed.

But in the candidates' stead, local peace activists including Irvine Mayor Larry Agran have organized a panel discussion on arms reductions to be held May 31 in Irvine's City Council Chambers.

All Democratic and Republican presidential candidates have been invited to the forum which is to take place between 9:30 a.m. and 12:30 p.m., just five days before the June 5 state primary, forum organizer Tim Carpenter said Tuesday.

Colorado Sen. Gary Hart is the only "maybe" in the bunch because he may be in Orange County the day of the forum, he said. President Reagan has turned down the invitation, former Vice President Walter Mondale is "unlikely" and the date is "open to consideration" on Rev. Jesse Jackson's calendar, according to Carpenter.

He contended the non-commital candidates are "unwilling or afraid" to discuss the issue in Southern California, a primary base for the nation's defense contractors.

Josh Baron, a Hart Southern California campaign spokesman, called Carpenter's argument "nonsense."

Hart "has demonstrated his willingness to discuss the issues," Baron said, but the candidate is bombarded with requests for appearances. His May 31 schedule is "fluid," but is dominated by fund-raising efforts "to keep this campaign going," he said.

Instead of candidates, economist William Hartung, journalist Robert Scheer, four local leaders and four elected officials from throughout the

By ANDREA ADELSON
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Perhaps it didn't rate right up there with the Soviets' decision to boycott the Summer Olympic Games.

After all, it didn't have international repercussions. The world's press has been noticeably disinterested. And there apparently haven't been any high-level diplomatic sessions to sooth the ruffled feathers. But up until Tuesday night, the City of Irvine has been unceremoniously snubbed.

Now it's all better. After unfurling the "stars in motion" flag and handing out of Sam the Eagle pins, Irvine officially received recognition from Olympic organizers that the city is an official Summer Games venue site.

Irvine has been mentioned only as an afterthought in official Olympic programs. But on July 31, the city will host the swimming portion of the five-event modern pentathlon.

"This is the moment we've all been waiting for," Dick Stevens, Olympic commissioner for the pentathlon, told the City Council. "In spite of the recent disruptions, I

Fans not bothered by 'Temple of Doom' gore

By the Associated Press

"Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom" began its quest for box office glory today amid debate over its graphic violence, which some critics say should be off limits for unaccompanied young viewers.

Directed by Steven Spielberg and produced by George Lucas, the eagerly anticipated sequel to the 1982 blockbuster "Raiders of the Lost Ark" was booked into 1,685 theaters nationwide, many of which scheduled their first screenings at 12:01 a.m. local time.

In New York City, moviegoers leaving the Loews Astor Plaza theater today seemed unconcerned by the film's gore.

"I felt dazzled after just the first 20 minutes," said Leslie Cullen, 22. "It's going to be a hit."

"It's real escapism, fantastic from start to finish," said Jeff Kleinman. "If you want a great escape movie, it delivers from beginning to end."

In California, eager fans camped out for days to be assured of choice seats. Some wore the slouch hats and oversize coats affected by the title character, played by Harrison Ford.

Dianne Elwood, 19, began waiting last Friday at the Edwards Newport Cinema in Newport Beach, which hired 30 new employees to deal with the expected crowds.

"The only people who wait in line are crazy, but we have nothing better to do at the moment," said Gordon Berg, 17, who stood behind Elwood.

"It's like Christmas," said Patrick Labyorteaux, 18, who spent three days outside the National Theater in Westwood. He was first in line for the midnight show.

"We were in the ('Return of the Jedi') line for seven days," Labyorteaux added. "This is kind of routine."

The violent scenes include a hair-raising sequence in which a man's heart is torn from his chest before he is lowered into a pit of boiling lava. That kind of action has prompted worries and some complaints about the effect on young viewers who will likely make up a large share of the film's audience.

Jim Dick — Valley's man in motion

Busy civic leader, 68, uses his retirement to involve himself in community activities

PHIL SNEIDERMAN
PEOPLE IN THE NEWS

It wasn't easy to catch up with Jim Dick one day last week.

In the morning, the 68-year-old Fountain Valley man was at the historical park he's helping to build behind City Hall. As president of the Fountain Valley Historical Society, he was interviewing a 90-year-old Costa Mesa woman who taught school in Fountain Valley 57 years ago.

In the afternoon, Dick was at the King of Glory Lutheran Church, helping to set up props for a production of "South Pacific."

He was also preparing the agenda for the annual installation of officers of the Friends of the Fountain Valley Library set the following day. He was about to begin another year as president of the library support group.

That night Dick attended Fountain Valley High School's Coronet Awards program because his grandson Michael Koelsch was a nominee. He had to apologize for not being able to attend a meeting of coin collectors.

In addition to his club work, Dick is secretary of the Orange County Health Planning Council, a group that reviews hospital expansion plans and tries to control rising health care costs. He's also on Fountain Valley's Housing and Community Development Advisory Committee, which oversees the local use of federal funds. He also lectures on Fountain Valley history before schools, scout groups and service clubs.

"What makes Jim Dick run and run and run...?"

Fountain Valley is a quiet bedroom community of more than 50,000 residents. Yet, it's also a city where many of the same faces keep turning up when you're looking for the people involved in civic and service club activities. Jim Dick is one of those familiar faces.

His wife Doris, who also is active in many of these groups, says she and her husband subscribe to a simple philosophy: If you want to upgrade your quality of life, you have to do more than just fix up you house. You have to help improve your community as a whole.

Like many California residents, Jim Dick is a transplant from the East Coast. But unlike most former Easterners, he never refers to his native Connecticut as "back home."

"The children here all know how their parents came from Oshkosh, Wis., or Dearborn, Mich., but the children should also know something about the place where their home is now," Dick insists. "Doris and I both go back East, but we don't go home (there). Home is here."

Dick grew up in New England and eventually became a criminal investigator for the Connecticut State Police. Then he became an investigator for the U.S. Civil Service Commission. In 1964, he asked to be transferred from Connecticut because of his wife's health problems.

"We researched for six months to find the best climate in the world," Dick recalls. "That was on the south coast of Spain — but I didn't have a job offer there."

The Dicks then settled in Fountain Valley for its particularly mild

County may buy computer to speed fingerprint checks

By JEFF ADLER
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

To better finger the right criminal suspect, the Orange County Board of Supervisors agreed Tuesday to investigate further the possibility of leasing or purchasing a high-technology computer that could match fingerprints lifted at crime scenes with those of 20,000 past offenders in the county.

Supervisor Ralph Clark asked for the board's authorization to look more closely into such a system to gather information on the proposal before summer budget hearings.

Among questions county law enforcement officials and supervisors want answered is whether police agencies now using the system have found it effective as a crime-detection tool.

"I understand, it is being used with good crime detection results by the state Department of Justice as well as law enforcement agencies in such cities as Houston, San Jose, Washington D.C. and Minneapolis-St. Paul," Clark said in a letter to board members.

The computerized system would allow detectives to randomly search for fingerprint matches among the prints of 20,000 persons who have been jailed for past offenses.

Currently, the county sheriff's department only can attempt to match latent prints lifted at a crime scene with those of a known suspect.

"If there are no known suspects, as is frequently the case in such crimes as burglary and housebreaking, there is no practical way to make effective use of the incriminating latent prints found at the crime scene," Clark noted.

Cost of purchasing such a system has been estimated at $1 million. However, the system's manufacturer, an Anaheim-based company, has indicated it would be willing to lease or sell some of the equipment necessary to the county for $129,000 while establishing the fingerprint data base at its Anaheim headquarters.

In a related action, supervisors postponed a decision on borrowing equipment from the U.S. Marine Corps needed to provide security during the Olympic Games this summer.

Before signing an agreement that would permit the county sheriff's department to borrow an observation helicopter and radio equipment from the Marines, supervisors said they wanted to know more about what potential liability the county might face should the equipment be damaged.

state will try to focus the nuclear debate at a community level, Carpenter said.

Topics will range from the economic consequences of the nuclear arms race to its psychological impact, he said. The hall holds 150 people.

"We believe the hearing is the first such event of its kind and underscores our commitment to be part of the national dialogue to reduce nuclear weapons and cut a bloated budget," Irvine's Agran said.

The event, called the first of 12 hearings to be held across the nation, is sponsored by the League of Elected Officials of America, a group founded this year by Agran. It has more than 100 members in California, Carpenter said.

The league is a network of local elected officials who sponsored a forum for presidential candidates in January with the aid of 150 mayors and council members from Iowa. Four of eight candidates attended the nationally televised event prior to the Iowa caucus.

The group's members endorse a nuclear weapons freeze.

Agran, an attorney, was co-author of the non-binding Proposition 12 nuclear freeze measure approved by California voters in 1982. Six Orange County cities voted for the freeze, including Irvine and Laguna Beach.

The league was bred from Agran's campaign to mobilize 65 mayors and council members to support the measure in their communities.

Military spending on nuclear arms is robbing cities of essential resources, Agran said.

Among the speakers are Hartung, author of the "Economic Consequences of the Nuclear Freeze;" Los Angeles Times political writer Scheer; Jean Forbath, of Costa Mesa-based Save Our Selves; Torin Segerstrom, scion of a prominent local developer; and Curt Haunfeler, president of the Anaheim High School District board.

Stevens said 66 athletes from 20 countries will participate in the sold-out event to be held at Irvine's Heritage Park Aquatics Complex. The remaining pentathlon events are to be held at the Cota de Caza resort east of Lake Forest. Three other Olympic events are being held in Orange County.

Even two-time Olympic bronze medalist Dwight Stones was on hand Tuesday night, unclasping his own lapel pin to hand to Mayor Larry Agran. He had a pocket full of others to present to the rest of the council. Everyone dutifully wore their pins.

Stones, an Irvine resident, said he was delighted to "be able to go almost on my bicycle to the swimming event."

Stones, a 10-time world record holder in the high jump, is trying out for his third Olympic team after competing in the 1972 and 1976 Olympics. Having the U.S. host the Games "is a decided advantage," Stones said, adding that the U.S. Olympic track and field team is at its best in 20 years.

VALLEY CIVIC LEADER BUSY...

weather. The city was still rather young (it was incorporated in 1957) and in the midst of a transition from farm area to residential community.

Soon after the move, Dick became active in a local homeowners association, working to ease some racial tensions that had surfaced in the neighborhood.

In 1965, Dick was appointed to the city's traffic advisory committee. He helped develop Fountain Valley's first traffic laws.

In 1966, Dick was appointed to the Fountain Valley Planning Commission. He served as chairman through 1972 and remained on the commission until 1974. During that period, Fountain Valley underwent substantial growth.

Dick said he believes the commission during his tenure faithfully adhered to the master development plan created by the city's early leaders. One exception was that commissioners permitted more single-family housing and less multiple-housing (apartments, condominiums, etc.) than originally planned.

In 1969, Jim and Doris Dick were among the founding members of the Fountain Valley Historical Society. The society was dormant for a while in the early 1970s but revived in time for the national Bicentennial celebrations of 1976.

In recent years, the group has channeled its energies into preservation of some remnants of Fountain Valley's past.

Because of the city's rapid development, nearly all of Fountain Valley's early buildings were demolished to make way for tract housing and shopping centers. In late 1981, a developer discovered three aged structures hidden from view off Bushard Street. The developer said the historical society could have them, but said the group had to act quickly before the bulldozers arrived.

The buildings were a 1920s real estate office, a Japanese bathhouse and a water tower. The city agreed to accommodate the structures at an undeveloped park, but the historical society had to raise $2,400 to move them. Doris Dick, who was president of the group at the time, asked the members at a meeting to at least pledge money for the move. Instead, she had $2,000 in donations in her hand within 10 minutes.

As it turned out, the development that would have destroyed the old buildings never materialized. Still, the threat pressed the society into action. The buildings were moved to an area behind City Hall dubbed "Heritage Park." Jim Dick and other society members have spent many hours renovating the structures and adding landscaping at the park. It may be opened to the public later this year.

When he's not working at the park, you can often find Jim Dick speaking to local school children about Fountain Valley's history. He says most youngsters are woefully uninformed about the community's beginnings as a soggy area full of Artesian wells (the source of the city's name). The land had to be drained to permit the farming of lima beans, sugar beets, tomatoes, peppers and other crops.

"One of the first things these kids ask is what Indians lived here," Dick says. "I tell them no Indians lived in this valley because none of them were dumb enough to live in a swampy riverbed. They lived on the bluffs in Huntington Beach and Costa Mesa."

The local history buff also tells the children how the city fathers barely got Fountain Valley incorporated in time to prevent most of it from being annexed into Santa Ana. Although the founders were mainly farmers, the construction of the San Diego Freeway through town hastened its transformation into a bedroom community, he tells the youngsters.

Jim Dick hasn't slowed down much since retiring from his federal job in 1978.

"I watched too many people who retired from the mills back East," he says. "They just retired, sat on their front porches and died because they didn't know anything else to keep busy."

Right now, Dick is intent on getting the Heritage Park finished as a place for display of historical mementoes from Fountain Valley. He's also pressing the city to use redevelopment funds to build an expanded local library.

Later this year, Jim and Doris Dick hope to do some traveling, visiting friends and relatives back East. But don't expect the couple to give up their civic activities permanently.

"This would only be a brief intermission from what we're doing here," Jim Dick says.

Traffic woes bridged in Viejo

Portola Parkway to guard against future flooding

An arroyo that served as the encampment for Spanish explorer Gaspar de Portola's foot soldiers is now covered by a span of concrete rather than canvas.

The new $8.3 million Portola Bridge and Parkway was opened this week after being dedicated over the weekend with the snip of a golden rope by state Deputy Transportation Secretary Dana Reed.

The 5.5-mile parkway will open up the interior of Rancho Mission Viejo, and the communities of Mission Viejo, Coto de Caza and Robinson Ranch. It's 1,200-foot bridge extends over a stream bed and adjoining countryside from El Toro Road in the north to Plano Trabuco Road in the south.

Four miles shorter than meandering Live Oak Canyon Road, Portola Parkway sweeps over the canyon, saving considerable travel time and ensuring against repetition of the 1980 Trabuco Creek flood that isolated the exclusive resort of Coto de Caza for nine days.

In addition, the completion of the parkway will play a role in bringing Olympic visitors to the resort, site of the modern pentathlon.

Pickups and flatbeds from Coto de Caza were the first to parade down the new thoroughfare Saturday.

The six-column, two-lane bridge is the longest ever built by county road builders and is the product of 22 years of negotiations. Novo Construction Co. and Steve P. Rados, Inc., both of Santa Ana, built the bridge.

Students can screen X-rated film

By the Associated Press

A request that Fullerton College refuse to show the X-rated film "Caligula" was rejected by the college district board as attempted censorship.

Trustee Chris Loumakis had asked the board of the North Orange County Community College District to request that the Fullerton students not show the film using district property or facilities.

But the board rejected that in a 4-2 vote Tuesday night.

"I think by whatever terms you try to word the resolution, it is censorship pure and simple," board vice president Nilane A. Lee said shortly before the vote.

"I feel very strongly we should not interfere with our adult student body. No one is forced to see it," said Trustee Herbert Warren.

Loumakis argued that it was not a matter of freedom, but of giving campus airing to a film "which celebrates sexual brutality."

"This film has no more redeeming value than a child pornography movie," he added. "The issue is not one of academic freedom but of common decency. If our students wish to show this film, there are many private facilities available to do so ...."

However, only trustee Wallace Hardy voted with Loumakis.

"Caligula," made in the mid-1970s by Penthouse Films International, is about the bloody and wanton life of the ancient Roman emperor. Novelist Gore Vidal wrote the script, but later criticized the graphic movie, claiming it had been turned into "basement pornography."

The Associated Students had proposed showing the movie, but not yet scheduled it. Student body President Dale Harrison said a screening is likely.

solid, filled, or plated

So that consumers will not be too confused by the advertising and marketing of gold products, the Federal Trade Commission and the Jewelers Vigilance Committee point out these facts: SOLID GOLD means a piece of gold jewelry is solid, and does not have a hollow. GOLD FILLED jewelry is made from a base metal and has layers of gold mechanicaly bonded to both sides, like a sandwich. The gold alloy must constitute at least one-tenth of the object's total weight, unless it is marked otherwise. The gold coating can eventually wear away. Gold filled jewelry may also be called "gold overlay" or "rolled gold plate." GOLD ELECTROPLATE means gold is deposited on the face of the object electrolytically. To be called by this name, the electroplate must be at least 7 millionths of an inch thick. Anthying thinner must be called "gold wash" or "gold flash." There is a higher standard for watches, which have 750 millionths of an inch of gold to be called gold electroplate. Be sure that you know what kind of gold jewelry you are buying before you spend your money. Deal with a reputable jeweler.
