GEORGE RIDING THE TIDES OF FORTUNE

Susan George, who stars with Laurence Olivier and Michael Caine in the movie Jigsaw Man, has had a rather puzzling life: "My career has always been two steps up, three down; four up, one down," she explains. "I've never been on an uninterrupted climb. And I'm glad." Susan's first role came at age 12 when she was cast as one of the Von Trapp children in The Sound of Music, and she has since appeared in such films as The Sorcerers and Straw Dogs. "The bad moments and wonderful ones I've experienced on the way up and down have been breaths of fresh air. They've let me be a normal human being." George says she likes living her life day to day. "I'm not a mañana person: I don't care what I'll look like when I'm 70. So I lie out in the sun, which, everyone knows, is an express route to premature wrinkles. But if I'm run over by a bus this afternoon, I want to get hit looking brown and healthy, not frail and anemic."

Now that Bianca Jagger has decided to become "a serious actress," she will have to learn to handle the jagged digs of critics and audiences. The Nicaraguan beauty, 39, recently made her theatrical debut at the Williamstown, Mass., Theatre Festival in Daniela Frank, by the Peruvian Alonso Alegria. The play is loosely based — very loosely — on the Janet Cooke saga. Cooke, you'll recall, was the reporter at The Washington Post who won — and lost — a Pulitzer Prize for her graphic, but fictional, account of an 8-year-old heroin addict. Well, in the translation, Janet Cooke has become an illegal Peruvian immigrant in search of a green card, with a brother lost to drugs in the old country. At least one member of the audience didn't get no satisfaction. His capsule review on the way to the parking lot: "We could have had a better time if we stayed home and talked."

like to feel I've diversified over the years; I've branched out and done other kinds of things. I suppose I could play somebody meaner than Dirty Harry if the character was there, if I read a good script. An actor portrays things because they're fun to do." And fun, of course, is the thing to have — any which way you can.

Ginger Rogers and Cyd Charisse, who between them have probably worn out more pairs of dancing shoes than all the Rockettes combined, were working together for the first time on ABC's new series Glitter when they were delightedly surprised — wouldn't you be? — with a dozen red roses each. And from the same admirer. The accompanying cards said simply, "Love, Fred," and if you have to ask, "Fred who?" you'd better catch Silk Stockings the next time it's on the late, late show.

Stephen King has the Midas touch: He can turn horror into gold. The best-seller lists and the movie listings usually sport at least one of his works, but does he think his prose will survive the ages? Says King, with all due modesty, "I rather suspect it might. Horror and science-fiction stories have a way of surviving for a long time, whether they're good, bad or indifferent." The dean of bedevilment, however, has no idea why some of us scare more easily than others: "Actually, I think we all scare easily. But some are better at keeping it a secret. People who are fearless are dangerous. I certainly wouldn't want to drive with someone like that. People who don't know fear don't live long."

It's hard to believe that any daughter of Raquel Welch would have trouble facing a camera, but Tahnee Welch, 21, says, "I used to hate having my picture taken. I always put my hand up to my face and pushed the hair over my eyes. In fact," she explains, "I have all the pictures that I had taken when I was young. If anyone saw me hoard all those photos, they'd think I was vain. Actually, I stashed them away for just the opposite reason." With an acting career in the offing — Tahnee will make her film debut next summer in Cocoon, Ron Howard's current directing project — Raquel's daughter is certain of only one thing: "I won't be singing. I sound like an English schoolboy in a choir. If all else fails, maybe I'll be a Buddhist monk." It's a safe bet Tahnee's mom will have none of that.

My life and those of my close friends is not at all like what has been portrayed in the media," declares Marie Smith, the wife of Rep. Christopher Smith (R-N.J.). "Our lives are very much like those of women across the country who are busy caring for husbands, homes and children. In essence, we are House wives with a capital H."

Mrs. Smith was responding to a Family Weekly questionnaire sent to the spouses of the 421 married members of Congress. In this election year, with the bright lights and packs of reporters following every move each politician makes, we decided to ask the people behind those politicians what their lives were like and whether, from their point of view, the glory, grit, rewards and stress of public service were worth it.

The composite answer was a clear but qualified yes, and the reasons behind the individual answers varied as greatly as the people themselves. The spouses — mostly women (although at least 5 husbands of the 21 women in Congress also responded) — are an extremely diverse group. They range in age from people in their late 20s (at 29, Smith is the wife of the youngest married member of Congress) to their early 70s. They come from big cities, small towns, and rural communities across America. Most have left home to live in or near Washington, D.C., at least for the more than 10 months a year when Congress is in session. Some maintain two households: one in Washington, one in their district. Some have young children; some have grandchildren; some are childless. Many have careers of their own, although as one woman said, "Spousism" is indeed a job in itself. The many who maintain other careers besides are incredible."

In a summer packed with campaigning and conventions, 22 percent of the spouses found time to respond to our questions about their own goals, their marriages, their children, and life in the political arena. One sentiment echoed frequently and fervently: "Please don't try to sensationalize the family/spouse role." We don't think we have. The voices here are the spouses' own.

We gave the respondents a chance to elaborate on their answers and the choice to remain anonymous. More than half the spouses did sign their questionnaires. Among those who gave their names were Betty Wright, wife of the House Majority Leader; Betty Bumpers, wife of the Arkansas senator; Lillian Tower, wife of the Texas senator; Elizabeth (Mrs. Daniel Patrick) Moynihan of New York; and Rita Hollings, wife of the South Carolina senator. Signed or unsigned, all the responses were candid, thoughtful and thorough.

CONGRESSIONAL SPOUSES SPEAK OUT IN AN EXCLUSIVE FAMILY WEEKLY SURVEY

MARRIAGE TO A POLITICIAN: IS IT WORTH IT?

BY JAN BENZEL

One woman who chose not to sign had this reaction: "No, thank you! I'm too smart to let you use my name. I'm a survivor!"

So, it appears, are most of the congressional spouses. The group portrait that emerged from their answers is one of strong, self-assured people, sharing in their spouses' careers. Of those who responded, 69 percent said their spouses' political careers have enhanced their marriages, even though the extreme demands of time and energy leave 10 percent of them often and 57 percent sometimes feeling lonely.

We asked whether the congressmen or their spouses drank more alcohol because of the rounds of obligatory social functions, because of job pressure, or for any other reasons. The overwhelming response was no. Many said they and/or their spouses do not drink at all; some said they drank less than they would normally because "you can never let your guard down. And there is a lot of driving to some events." Almost all said the rumors of drugs being freely used on the Hill are untrue, and that the danger of political corruption is overestimated by the press. We asked them whether they thought politicians were more likely than other people to be adulterous, and to that question about the private lives of public figures came the widest variety of answers. If any agreement emerged, it was the opinion that members of Congress were no more likely to be adulterous than the people they represented.

Most agreed that a political career is all-consuming. As one spouse said, her life is "lonely, demanding and public." The women who feel the biggest burden are those with small children. The representatives and senators have to spend a great deal of time away from home: in their district if they live in Washington and in Washington if they live in the district. Congressional wives with children find themselves — much as a wife of a doctor does during his internship and residency — coping as single parents.

Marie Smith addresses the problem: "Perhaps the greatest concern is how to creatively utilize time for family togetherness. Since this is the highest priority for my husband and me, our three children, ages 5, 3, and 5 months, are familiar sights around his Washington office. They picnic on the Capitol lawn and ride the Capitol subway. I and some of the other wives (mostly young) represent one type of congressional spouse. Our family responsibilities limit our social involvement in Washington."

Most of the younger wives expressed concern that their husbands were absent much of the time, or if they were living in the same place, that they left for work before the children were awake and came home after they were in bed, or were so tired or preoccupied that they were unable to devote time or attention to them.

The general response from those whose children had grown, however, was that such close exposure to the political system was a positive factor in a child's upbringing. (More than 75 percent of the spouses agreed on this point.)

As for the marriages themselves, the great majority of the respondents said having a spouse in politics has helped their relationship. A number of reasons came out, but the most prevalent was that with the pressures of raising young children behind them, the spouses could participate more fully in their mates' careers than they could in any other profession. Some of the comments:

- "We do it together. It's the only way to survive it."
- "We work as a team campaigning. Life is more interesting because we have new experiences to share," said Martha Sundquist, the wife of the Republican congressman from Tennessee.
- "[Our marriage is] enhanced by mutual attempts to improve the quality of the rare time we spend together, and hurt by tensions that build up over long periods we spend apart." This woman, who preferred anonymity, said that she does tend to drink more than she normally would, because of her loneliness.
- Carolyn Moore, wife of the Republican representative of Louisiana, said, "We both enjoy politics — we share more and work at having quality time together."
- Rita Hollings, the wife of Sen. Ernest Hollings (D-S.C.), said, "I'm able to share in politics. I could not if he were in the courtroom or a doctor."
- Phyllis Olin said, "After Jim's [D-Va.] retirement from business, his political career was an important and exciting new venture for both of us." But, she added, "I'm not sure I want my daughter to marry one." Politician, that is.

Many of the spouses were enticed by the opportunities to travel and to meet heads of state and other "interesting" people. Many also said their spouses' happiness to be doing what they wanted helped strengthen their marriages.

Barbara Ann Grassley said of her husband, Charles, the Republican senator from Iowa, "If he hadn't at least tried he would have been unhappy." Another respondent offered: "He's happy in his work. A fulfilled person is a good marriage partner."

Lillian Tower, wife of Sen. John Tower (R-Tex.), was the most voluble. In answers to questions about whether she had given up or postponed her own goals while her husband pursued his career, whether she ever felt lonely, and whether she would prefer it if her husband were in another line of work, she wrote neatly, in red felt-tipped pen: "My goal is to be wife, spouse, mate. That takes precedence over all else. My professional life is of secondary importance. I miss him always when we are apart, but believe so deeply in his work, his goals, and share the same values that I feel more privileged to share his life rather than lonely. A man is what he does. And the more creative he is, the more passionately he applies himself to his life's work, the more he is to be treasured."

A political spouse, by definition, supports and sustains his or her mate, both on the campaign trail and after an election has been won. About 21 percent of the spouses reported that they had given up or postponed professional goals of their own in order to accommodate their spouses' careers. Many of those have since launched careers of their own in fields from medicine to real estate to social work. The job of political spouse sometimes makes demands on personality as well as profession. Thirty-two percent of the respondents said that they occasionally had to suppress aspects of themselves to conform to what are considered appropriate standards of behavior for the spouse of someone in public office.

And many expressed a pronounced longing for more privacy.

- "There is a lack of time for communicating," said Carol Williams, wife of Rep. Pat Williams (D-Mont.).

- Another wife noted, "My husband is deprived of any private life and consequently seems unable to relate to things other than the political arena."

- One anonymous woman painted this dark picture: "I think the public should know what the political family has to put up with. Then perhaps they wouldn't criticize politicians so much. I particularly resent the time my husband spends with his staff outside of working hours. His staff controls his life completely, including his personal life."

"Immediately after the election," this respondent continued, "after the wife has campaigned with and for her husband, going door to door, typing, stuffing envelopes, she is pushed into the background. The staff and the constituents come first. I get very tired of female staff constantly being praised. I can do the same work at no pay and not even get a smile or thank you, but let a female staff worker do the same (at a ridiculously high salary) and she is treated like a queen. The job builds up a man's ego. Women fawn over them like fools, and they think they don't need a wife anymore."

- Another spouse agreed. In response to the question, "Do you find that politicians are likely to be unfaithful to their spouses?" her reply was: "Who knows? They say many are; there are lots of clever, ambitious and pretty women on the Hill." And another: "They [congressmen] are definitely more pursued by predatory, power-hungry females. Powerful people are pursued."

When it comes to using that power, however, an overwhelming majority — 95 percent — said it is in good hands, that the American political process does work. James Schroeder, the husband of Rep. Pat Schroeder (D-Colo.), paraphrased Winston Churchill on the subject: "Democracy is the worst political system — except any other."

Said Carolyn Moore: "If one is not

LIFE INSURANCE— IS A GOOD PRICE ALWAYS A GOOD DEAL?

The answer to the question is NO. But sometimes it's hard to tell what you're getting for your money, unless you shop around... and compare.

Of course, price is one important point of comparison, especially for people over 50. But, unfortunately, when some folks shop for life insurance, price is the only thing they compare.

Are You Getting What You Really Want?

A bargain price isn't much of a bargain unless you get the kind of life insurance you want. And features like these can be very important to you...

- A benefit that won't decrease as you grow older
- A premium that'll never increase over the years
- A guarantee that you can't be cancelled, as long as you pay your premium

You don't have to spend a fortune to get these features. For example, Colonial Penn's Prime Life 50 Plus insurance gives you all of them, plus GUARANTEED ACCEPTANCE, for as little as $6.95 a month.

Don't Be Fooled by Look-Alikes!

But please be careful. There are other guaranteed acceptance life insurance plans advertised to folks over 50 that may look like Prime Life... but there are differences!

Some of those plans actually reduce your benefit as you grow older. So you can end up paying the same premium over the years, while you get less and less coverage.

So... it pays to compare more than price. And when you shop carefully, you might find that the permanent protection of Prime Life 50 Plus is the wise choice for you.

After all, you can't be turned down if you're 50 to 80. And your benefit is guaranteed never to decrease, regardless of your age.

SPOUSE POLL

responsive to the people and doesn't work hard to stay in touch, they'll be defeated. I've seen it too many times."

Kaye Smith, wife of Oregon Republican Rep. Bob Smith, voiced this concern: "The representatives shouldn't have to run every two years — there's too much continual campaigning. The congressmen should be limited to a certain number of terms. The incumbent representative should have to give up his seat to run for the Senate. There are too many members with 30-plus years seniority and too much power."

By contrast, Theodore Johnson, husband of Republican Rep. Nancy Johnson of Connecticut, defended the slowness of the system of checks and balances; he was one of the few respondents to do so. His comment: "The changes are gradual and can be evaluated before they do too much damage."

And Nancy Fuqua, wife of the Democratic representative from Florida, who says that she has come to appreciate democracy after traveling abroad, quipped: "I was once told that there were two things one should never see in the making: sausage and laws."

Two complaints most often made about the system concerned dependence on the media and the enormous expenses incurred by campaigning, commuting or maintaining two residences.

On the media: "Too many people are turned off and don't vote. That is a terrible threat to democracy and, I think, a national shame. The media in general do not portray most [politicians] with any respect, whether or not deserved, so people feel a high disregard, mostly from hear-say or -see."

On the money required: "Something must be done. Good, capable, outstanding candidates will not be able to run, simply because of the cost. It's the television time, buying ads, that takes thousands and thousands of dollars."

Another spouse added, "I wish campaigns lasted two weeks and that there were no PACs [political action committees] and no need to accept PAC contributions."

Perhaps the rigors of campaigning and the pressures imposed by the media and lobbying groups have worn down the spirits of the politicians and their families a bit. Only a third of the spouses said they would want their mate to be president or vice president of the United States. (An interesting footnote: Every husband of a woman in Congress who returned and signed the questionnaire said yes, he would like his wife to be president.) But one woman, who remained anonymous, may have spoken for all the congressional wives when she said: "So many Americans think that we wives, as a whole, are either spoiled prima donnas or are inferior-feeling, overlooked weaklings. We are not! We are normal, well-educated citizens who take quite seriously the trust and faith that has been put in our husbands. We can run a house or houses, raise a family, and adjust rather easily to last-minute changes. We can speak to groups when, at the last minute, Congress keeps the member in session.

"I believe very strongly in what my husband's work involves. He lives for every minute of working for the people of our district — and for America. He's married to his work — but I am his 'mistress' and love the life we have. I go to bed knowing that there will be a tomorrow." PW

Source: Highway Loss Data Institute. Body Styles: S.W. = Station Wagon; Spec. = Specialty. All results are stated in relative frequency of injury claims. A relative injury claim frequency of 100 is average. Relative frequencies of less than 70 are defined by HLDI as "Substantially Better than Average."

The Highway Loss Data Institute (HLDI) is a non-profit public service organization associated with the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety. As it has done for several years, HLDI has summarized and published its findings on the frequency of automotive insurance claims.

This year, HLDI finds that of the top 12 models with overall injury claim experience defined as "Substantially Better than Average," seven are General Motors cars.

We are pleased that GM cars are rated best.

But we are not surprised. In fact, GM cars have dominated these lists ever since HLDI has been summarizing them. Seven years in a row.

We believe this continued excellence reflects not only our cars—their quality, size, weight, and design—but also how and where they are driven.

The results show that our cars and our customers go well together. We trust it will continue that way. We're doing our part to see that it does.

We believe in taking the extra time, giving the extra effort, and paying attention to every detail. That's what it takes to provide the quality that leads more people to buy GM cars and trucks than any other kind. And that's why GM owners are the most loyal on the road. That's the GM commitment to excellence.

Nobody sweats the details like GM.

HELP YOURSELF: SELF-HELP BOOKS WON'T DO IT FOR YOU

When Jaggers, that mysterious London lawyer, tells Dickens' lad Pip that he is "a young man of great expectations," he is not lying. Pip has suddenly come into a fortune, all because he once smuggled food and drink to an escaped convict hiding in a nearby swamp.

Lucky Pip! He didn't have to make his fortune by studying self-help books or attending classes in assertiveness training.

Today we can strive to be realists. "Nobody is ever going to die and leave me a million dollars," we say. But the notion of great expectations remains firmly embedded in our culture. Indeed, it has given birth to a compulsive self-improvement industry.

In an age of diminishing expectations, dreams are all that stand between our young people and total despair. With less education than a technological society requires, it's inevitable that our upward strivers be drawn to books that promise a rich, full life — provided only that a few "simple, basic rules" be rigorously observed. Of course, you must buy the book to learn the rules.

"Fill your life with confidence and success!" exhorts the cover of The Art of Selfishness by David Seabury. Though the author has never met you, one of his chapters is confidently titled, "The Key to Your Problems." Just pay attention and the golden doors will definitely swing open.

A quick browse through a dozen self-help books (best-sellers all) suggests that the trouble with American society is simply too much altruism. Some of us may not have noticed this surfeit of goodwill and kindness, but Robert J. Ringer has. Devote yourself to doing things that will give you pleasure, he advises. Above all, "forget the moral standards others may have tried to cram down your throat." Needless to say, Ringer's book, Looking Out for No. 1, has, sold steadily since 1977.

If you long to be a leader but lack a high school diploma, don't give up the dream, writes Denis Waitley in The Seeds of Greatness. In his view, "leadership is the only true profession for which no formal training is necessary."

But you can give yourself a leg up by learning 10 new words a day. With 70 new words a week you will become "among the most learned and well-spoken individuals in the world."

Another suggestion from Waitley: Buy a set of tapes and record messages to yourself for the days when those new words aren't getting you anywhere. Listen carefully as your own voice says, "I respect and appreciate myself. I am unique and special." (Insufferable, too, a candid friend might add.)

Now, I don't mean to disparage all self-help books. Sometimes it comforts me to know that there are hundreds of strangers out there writing books to make me richer, thinner, lovelier and, of course, happier.

No doubt I should also be interested in learning how I can earn Big Money at home raising fireflies, decorating T-shirts, or selling real estate in Florida by telephone in New York. What self-help shelves are missing is an old-fashioned book full of the sensible advice that gave our grandparents confidence and hope. Advice on the order of, "Study and prepare yourself, and someday your chance will come."

The self-improvement industry raises expectations by playing on fear, loneliness, shame and discontent. Under the Puritan ethic, self-improvement meant the cultivation of one's talents through hard work. Grabbing, shoving and pushing were looked on as bad form. And success carried with it an obligation to help those less favored.

Records on the success of self-help groups are hard to come by. A psychiatrist of my acquaintance says that the only self-help group that really works is Alcoholics Anonymous. Significantly, AA charges no fees, broadcasts no testimonials from satisfied members, and never merchandises its success. To achieve the promised result — permanent sobriety — you simply live life one day at a time without drink. And you assist your fellow alcoholics over the rocky patches.

To wish to be better — i.e., richer, happier — than we are is a normal, healthy impulse. To that end we buy lottery tickets, have face-lifts, sign up for tango lessons, and keep the self-help books on the best-seller list. But somewhere there ought to be a book that tells you: "You're a nice person doing your very best. Take a long, cool look at life... and try to enjoy!" FW

GETTING PERSONAL WITH

BILL MURRAY

EDGING TOWARD A NEW SERIOUSNESS

Attention all old Saturday Night Live fans: Bill Murray is not just a funny guy. Sure, he was in Meatballs, Stripes, Caddyshack and this summer's immensely popular Ghostbusters. Sure, he has a face that launched a thousand laughs. But Bill Murray wanted to sit at the grownups' table...he wanted to make a serious movie.

The Razor's Edge, opening this week, is that movie, a labor of love that Murray and director John Byrum adapted from a novel by W. Somerset Maugham about one man's quest for the meaning of life. Perhaps not so coincidentally, the movie comes at a time when Murray himself seems to have gotten serious about his life. A few years ago he married his longtime girl friend, Mickey, and they now have a 2-year-old son they call Homer. Writer Sara Nelson recently talked to Murray, 34, about the ways in which his life has changed.

Nelson: Why did you want to make The Razor's Edge?

Murray: John [Byrum] got interested in this book, and it was clear right away that this was something that I could do, that I wanted to do: an acting job. I didn't want to do a comedy. And this story is such an amazing tale that I figured, well, even if you mess up you've still got a good story.

Q: Why?

Murray: To an extent, I identified with the spiritual side. All the people who were galvanized to action in their college years now don't have any interest in all that stuff. People who wanted to change the system are now trying to beat the system.

Q: Were you like that?

Murray: The more I know about myself, the more I know I'm two people or more. I mean, I feel funny making this movie because I know I'm basically just an idiot who wants to drive down highways throwing beer bottles out of cars.

Q: Most people would probably call you a comedian. Do you consider yourself a comic actor or an actor-actor?

Murray: You've got to be able to act to be a comic actor, it's just that some people say it's harder. People are always on the edge of tears, so it's not as hard to make 'em cry as it is to make 'em laugh.

Q: Ghostbusters has really made

JUDY BLORE AND "THE HOUSE THAT LOVE BUILT"

By Kathleen E. Hacker

Every day, some of the most frightened people in the world turn up on Judy Blore's doorstep.

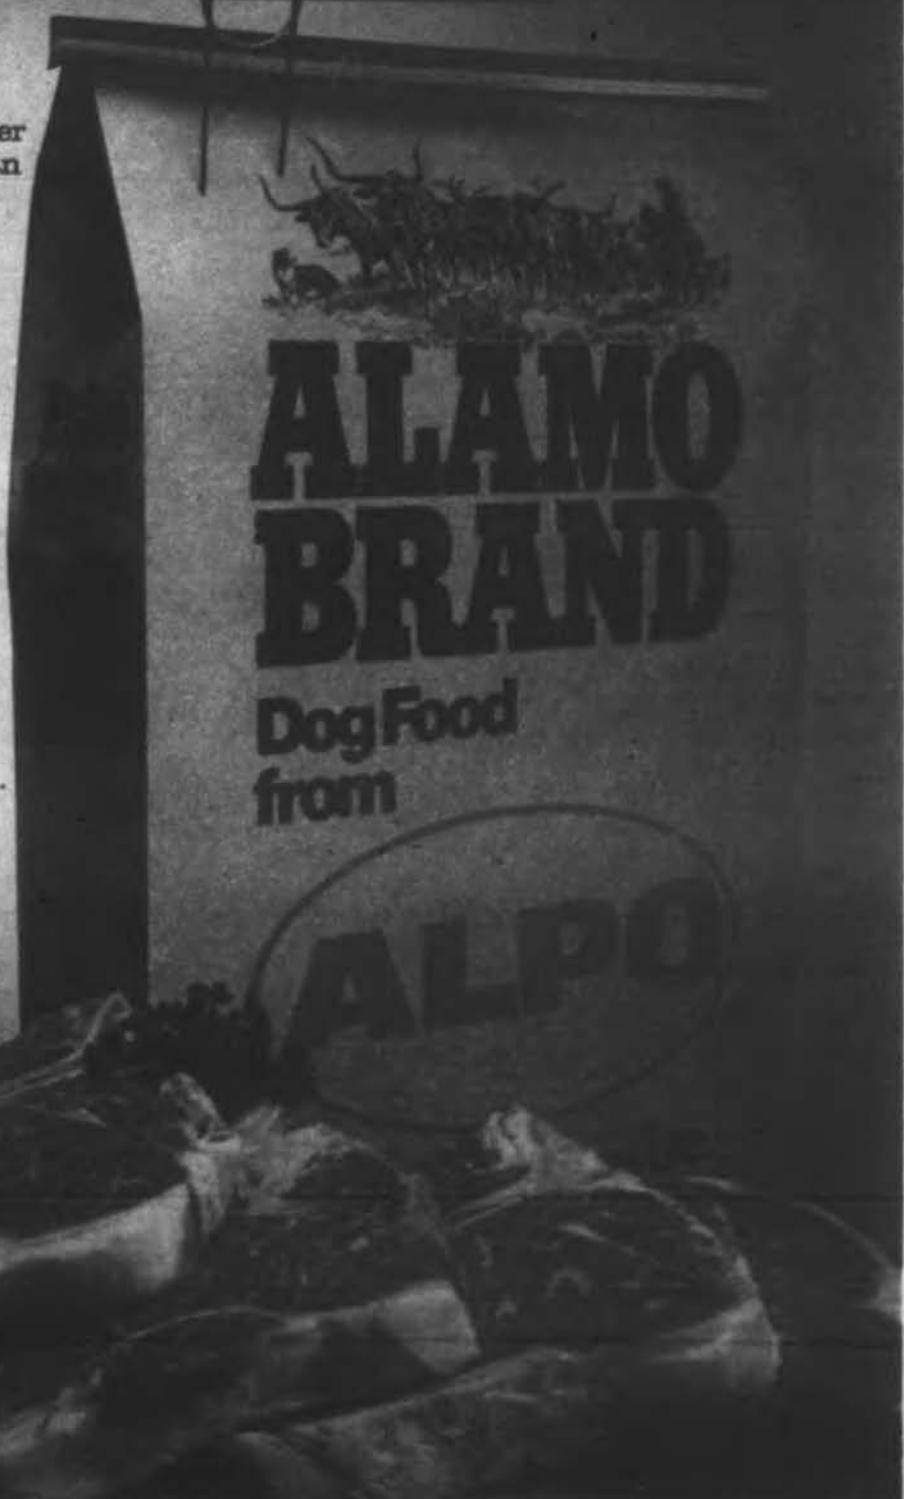

*Real meat

You may already know that there's no better dog food for your dog than ALAMO® BRAND. But what you might not know is that there's no better dog food for your money.

Because even though this 25 lb. bag of ALAMO contains more meat protein than ten pounds of steak, it costs no more than most other dry dog foods.

So with ALAMO, you don't have to pay a high price to meet your high standards.

ALAMO.

With their children in tow, they are ushered inside, into a grand Victorian manse where ceilings rise to dizzying heights, and floors stretch into exquisite mosaics of tile and parquet. Yet the opulence of the century-old house is overpowered by the emotion, ranging from courage to pure shock, that shows on their faces. There are those so distraught they are unable to say who they are or where they have come from.

Judy Blore, an amiable woman with an easy smile and a calming way, understands and welcomes them in. For the past decade, as resident manager of the nation's first Ronald McDonald House, Blore has ministered to the extraordinary needs of parents whose youngsters are afflicted with the most catastrophic of illnesses, chief among them cancer. They've come to seek treatment at Children's Hospital of Philadelphia, and while they wait hopefully for medicine to work its miracles, the house is theirs.

Here they pay $10 a night for a room, and the charge is lowered for those who cannot afford it. A playroom and side-yard park bulge with toys irresistible to any child. A communal kitchen and four elegantly appointed sitting areas draw strangers together. And help — be it in the form of directions to the bus stop, tickets to the zoo, or Judy Blore's sympathetic ear on a long and troubled evening — is never far away.

"We can't heal their children; that's a job outside our realm," says the 39-year-old Blore, who occupies a first-floor apartment with her husband, Wally (a nurse anesthetist), their own brood of four, and a pooch named Truffles. "What we can do for these families is support them through a very difficult time, perhaps the most difficult time of their lives, when they're in a strange city, separated from everything familiar and comforting. We can at least soften the edges of that experience."

This month Blore will be among the celebrants of the 10th anniversary of "the house that love built." There are now more than 60 Ronald McDonald Houses scattered throughout the United States and Canada, and all owe their existence to the experiment begun in Philadelphia on Oct. 15, 1974.

It was set into motion by Philadelphia Eagles wide receiver Fred Hill after his 3-year-old daughter was stricken with leukemia. During her treatment, Hill met with Dr. Audrey Evans, head of pediatric oncology at Children's, to mull over ways to help other parents facing similar crises. The physician, it turned out, had a list of dreams, one of which was the creation of a temporary residence for out-of-town patients and their families.

Hill, his teammates, Eagles management and local McDonald's restaurant owners joined forces and raised the funds to buy and renovate a seven-room rowhouse just a few blocks from the hospital.

you a superstar. How has that changed your life?

Murray: Well, personally, I don't feel that I'm different. But the way people regard you changes. And the way people in the business treat you: All of a sudden you go from being like a piece of meat to being a piece of meat they want.

Q: Didn't you want success?

Murray: You want somebody to say you're OK and that you've accomplished something. I think, though, that if you have a choice, be a writer or something like that. Write books instead of being a movie star. It's much more satisfying to have success without fame.

Q: Don't you enjoy it when people recognize you?

Murray: Sure, but to go over to someone on the street and say, "Yes, I know you screamed my name," takes an enormous amount of energy. It's easier just to act like you're Plymouth Rock. Like, people say, "Hey, there's Mount Rushmore." It's the same thing. The mountain doesn't climb down and say, "Hi, how are you."

Q: So you're comparing yourself to Mount Rushmore... a national treasure?

Murray: No. Charlie Callas [a Las Vegas comedian/entertainer] is a national treasure.

Q: Your wife reads all your good reviews, but she knows you as you really are. Doesn't she want to kill you sometimes?

Murray: Yes, but she always wanted to kill me sometimes.

Q: What does she do? Does she stay at home and take care of Homer?

Murray: She does whatever she pleases.

Q: Is Homer old enough to know that his father's a movie star?

Murray: He recognizes me on TV. He knows what the Ghostbusters symbol looks like.

Q: What does he think about what you do?

With Catherine Hicks in The Razor's Edge.

Murray: I guess he thinks everybody's parents are on TV.

Q: And when he grows up...

Murray: He'll be sent away to a military school in Switzerland. He'll be raised in another country. He'll never be allowed to see my films, and we'll visit him at Christmas, of course. . . . No. Somebody

I know who was interested in spiritual life was making a movie — some sort of Western. He asked a holy man to come and see the movie. And the holy man said, "Why don't you make a movie that pleases your son, that makes your son happy?" And then he left. And the guy fell apart.

Well, I thought about it — that's what I've been thinking about the last week, trying to make a movie that would actually please him.

Q: What are you going to do next?

Murray: I think I'm due to be in a major box-office disaster. A real flop. I think it will be next time out; it doesn't matter what it is. They're going to get me.

Q: Are you content?

Murray: When I look at what I've done with my life and find that every time I get more, I still want more, I wonder, will I ever be satisfied?

Q: What do you think would satisfy you?

Murray: I'd be satisfied if I could ever be quiet. If I could ever shut up. FW

BIGHORN SHEEP

The important first issue in a new series of wildlife sculptures by Lenox.

An original work of art crafted of fine handpainted porcelain. Available by direct reservation only.

High above the timber line in the towering Rocky Mountains, two Bighorn sheep appear poised with surefooted grace on the rugged scarpment, they are an unforgettable sight—symbols of the barren wilderness.

This is the vision that Lenox has captured in Bighorn Sheep. A new work of art in fine hand-painted porcelain. So lifelike you almost expect the two magnificent rams to spring out of sight, leaving only the rocks behind.

The sculpture is a triumph of realism. The coloration of the animals, their musculature, the curve of their great ridged horns, their delicate hooves and keen eyes—all are accurate in every detail.

A Handcrafted Work of Art

Conceived and designed by the artists of Lenox, and created exclusively under their direction by master craftsmen in Japan, each sculpture is individually crafted of the finest bisque porcelain. Then, skilled artisans paint each sculpture by hand. The subtle colors are applied with infinite care, until the work rivals nature. Finally, after the most careful inspection, the title of the sculpture and the world-famous Lenox trademark are added on the base in pure 24 karat gold.

The Lenox name and trademark are your assurance of the highest quality. And, of course, your satisfaction is completely guaranteed.

Available Only Direct from Lenox

Bighorn Sheep is available only by direct reservation from Lenox and will not be sold through even the most prestigious dealers or galleries.
The original issue price is $120, payable in convenient monthly installments of $24 each, with no finance charge. Each sculpture is accompanied by an informative reference folder describing the Bighorn Sheep and its habitat.

Bighorn Sheep is the significant first issue in a major new series of porcelain sculptures, Wildlife of the Seven Continents, by Lenox. As the owner of this important first issue you will be guaranteed the right to acquire each of the subsequent sculptures—without any obligation.

Since each figurine is individually hand-crafted, please allow 8 to 10 weeks for shipment.
Reservations are accepted in strict sequence of receipt and should be received by November 30, 1984. To order, mail the Reservation Appli-

By Ordering Your Mint-Perfect

STATUE OF LIBERTY "DOUBLE EAGLE" COMMEMORATIVE

Celebrating the 100th Anniversary of the Statue Of Liberty

.999 Silver

The authentic Statue Of Liberty "Double Eagle"

You may now acquire direct from the National Historic Mint a first-edition Statue Of Liberty Commemorative—the authentic "Double Eagle" Series "S"—honoring the 100th anniversary of America's historic national treasure.

Layered in .999 pure silver

Limited Series Rare Mint Quality

Rarer than any silver dollar ever minted, it is uncirculated and embodies the American Numismatic Association's standard of perfect mint state quality. Not more than 1,000,000 will be minted in the "S" Series. Thereafter, the dies will be destroyed, thus assuring permanent rarity.

A Unique Historic Event

This issue was struck by the National Historic Mint as a unique commemorative medallion and has never been nor intended to be designated or circulated as currency. We therefore recommend storage in its protective sleeve to protect against mishandling.

Price honored only until November 17

We cannot guarantee to honor requests at the original issue price after November 17. Should you wish to sell or redeem your Statue Of Liberty Commemorative anytime within the next fifty (50) years, we will buy it back for the full cash price you paid.

Lower Serial Numbers

Many collectors desire a low Certificate of Authenticity serial number. Therefore please order promptly. There is a limit of two (2) Commemoratives per address at this price, but requests mailed early enough (before Nov. 9) are permitted to order up to 5.

Since this offering is limited, please respond promptly—use the toll-free number at right to avoid disappointment. Or mail (promptly) to address below.

Send $15 for each Commemorative together with your name and address. Add only $3 shipping and handling no matter how many you order. (New York residents add sales tax.) Mail to: National Historic Mint, "Save The Lady", Dept. 603-128, Box 256, Jericho, N.Y. 11753. (E25110)

Help "Save the Lady"

All funds to restore "The Lady" are required to come from private citizens. Therefore with each Commemorative you order, a donation of one dollar will be made to the Statue Of Liberty/Ellis Island Foundation; and a Freedom Certificate, suitable for framing, will be issued and sent to you "In Grateful Acknowledgement of your participation and support in the Preservation of one of America's National Historic treasures".

"The National Historic Mint is a private corporation not affiliated as an agent or otherwise with the U.S. Government or the Statue Of Liberty/Ellis Island Foundation."

JUDY BLORE

But who would turn it into a home? Dr. Evans immediately thought of Judy Blore, a friend and former assistant. Evans says of her choice: "Judy had a placid disposition and didn't get uptight when things went awry. She was a good mother, a home person, and a strong Christian with a feeling, not of mission necessarily but responsibility for others. She cared. With her there, we knew we'd have the perfect nucleus for the family life we wanted in that house."

Though the job description was at best sketchy, Blore accepted: "My husband and I said, 'Well, here's an adventure. Let's give it a try for a year.' After we'd been here two or three months we wanted to stay. It was good."

Which is not to say it's been easy. Blore is charged with running the house, keeping its books, hiring its staff, and overseeing a small army of 20 volunteers. "I once tried to keep a chart of the number of hours I actually put into this place," she quips, "but I didn't have the time."

In the end, however, administration may be the least of her duties. She is also a playmate to children who she realizes may not survive. She is confidante to their parents, sharing the tension of the wait, their joy when treatment is successful, and their grief when it isn't. For others in her position at other McDonald houses, the emotional roller coaster has proven too much to bear. But Judy Blore has learned to take the high points and the low with equanimity.

"I have memories of a whole gang of kids getting well and going home," says Blore. "I also have memories of a whole parade of kids marching to heaven. It's a very real concept to me: that God is a loving God, that he's here giving the parents the strength and endurance they need on the worst days and helping the children somehow. The closer I stand to a family that's being touched by God in this way, the more I am affected by the ripples.

"One mother said she had been praying for her child's healing when she suddenly realized something: that healing, in addition to being here in this world, might also be on the other side. If I can understand that and get the big picture, then a momentary pain is not unbearable."

She smiles, though— not without a trace of sadness. "Of course, it is not my child. I don't know what it would feel like if it were."

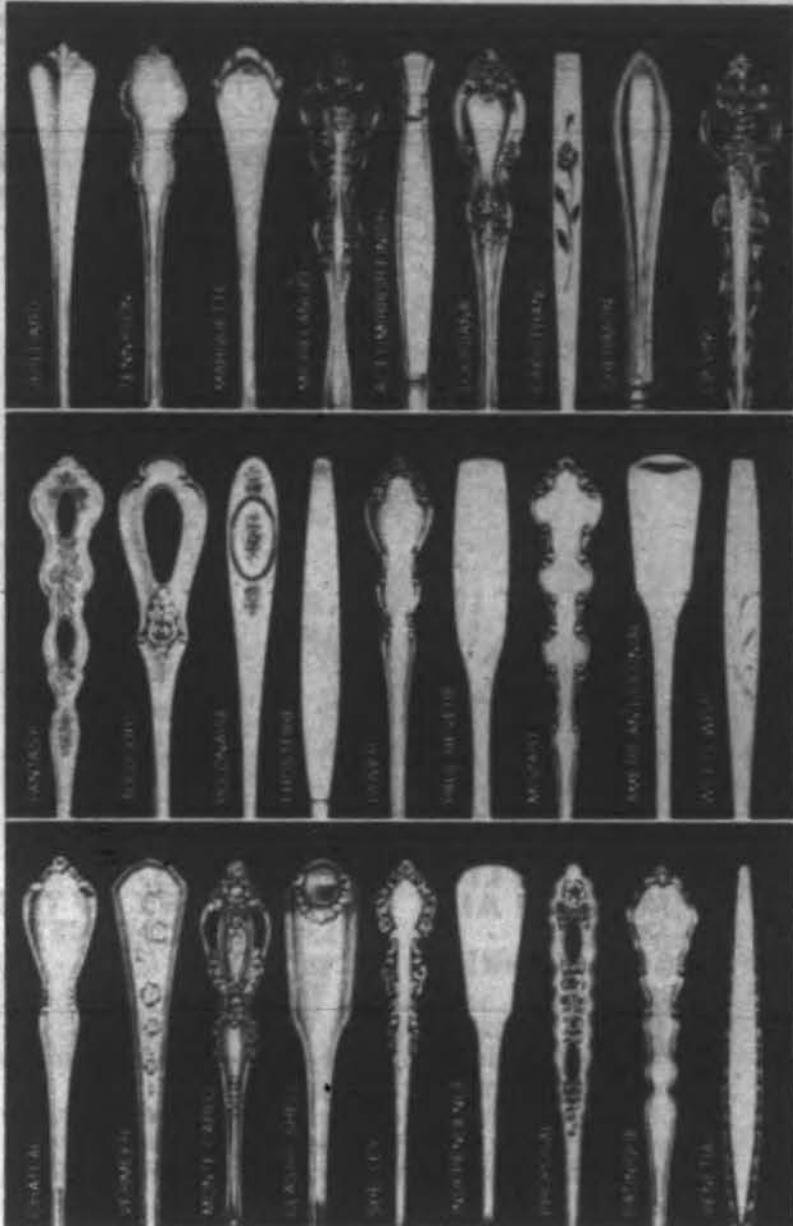

Ranging in age from 2 to 14, the Blore offspring are growing up in an atmosphere that is, to say the least, unique. Instead of scooting around the block on bicycles or roller skates, they careen down the hallways in wheelchairs, in the company of children without hair, eyelashes or eyebrows— children who know as much about the experience of chemotherapy and bone marrow transplants as they do about Saturday morning cartoons. The house, Judy Blore points out, has propelled her children to a level of maturity some adults never reach. "They're very at ease with all kinds of people," says Blore, "and especially gentle with sick kids. There is a surgeon at the hospital who does reconstruction on children born with facial deformities, and they come to the house as really strange-looking people. But my kids have learned that inside is a lovely person. They can see deeper than the surface. And that's a lesson I hope will last them a lifetime."

The past decade has taught Judy Blore herself a lesson or two. "Most of us worry so much about things in life that, on a scale of 10, probably rank about a one," she says. "All around me in this house are people who are dealing with the nines and the 10s and coping remarkably well. Compared to that, the things the rest of us consider valuable may ultimately have very little value at all." FW

GIMME AN L! GIMME AN A! GIMME A L-A-W-Y-E-R!

Ah, those were the days. Alums proudly attended their alma mater's football games in the fall. Looked forward to their class reunions. Sent large contributions to their alumni funds.

But now some graduates have begun to file lawsuits against colleges, claiming that the schools misrepresented what they had to offer.

In one case a student sued his alma mater for partial tuition reimbursement after the university failed to find him a job after graduation. And because school brochures had said that employment was guaranteed, the court ruled in the student's favor. At other places, students are refusing to repay loans on the grounds that the education they received was poor, or at least different from what they had been promised. The Chronicle of Higher Education reports that lawyers are now advising schools to exercise caution in their advertisements.

Whatever happened to "Be True to Your School"?

OUR NEXT SECRETARY OF THE LIQUOR CABINET?

What with all the windy speechifying of an election year, a person can work up a mighty big thirst.

Enter the ever-imaginative pub-tender, catering to all political tastes. Steven Austin, a bartender in Greensboro, N.C., who also works as an advice columnist for the High Point Enterprise, has come up with cocktail recipes inspired by this year's presidential candidates.

Austin's Mondale-Ferraro cocktail (which he describes as "sugar and spice and refreshingly different") is made of vanilla ice cream (for those chilly Minnesota winters), blueberries and strawberries (to complete Old Glory colors), Italian sweet vermouth and amaretto. Add ice and blend. Garnish with one U.S. flag, one Italian flag, two blueberries, and a strawberry.

For Republicans, Austin serves up the Reagan-Bush cocktail ("strong but smooth, with a touch of glitter"). It consists of tequila and triple sec (in honor of the Veep's home state), and orange juice (for California's cash crop). Shake these over ice and strain into a glass. Top with a splash of California champagne for glitter, and garnish with an orange slice and two U.S. flags.

Austin says his customers are pretty evenly divided between the two choices, and even he waffles when pressed about his potable pick. "We bartenders can't play favorites," he reminds us. "We just mix 'em up and serve 'em."

STRANGE BREW AND THE COLA ZOMBIES

There's beverage news from other corners as well. Distant corners. First Hungary: The official Hungarian news agency, MTI, reports the development of a quail-egg liqueur. (This some sort of a yolk?) And what's more, the Hungarians are claiming to have whipped up nothing less than a kind of breakthrough: This liqueur, they say, has the effects of a "love potion" and is quickly becoming extremely popular.

And from Taiwan comes the report that PepsiCo canceled its billboard ad campaign there. The reason? When one of their slogans was translated into Chinese, "Come Alive with the Pepsi Generation" could be read as "Pepsi Will Bring Your Ancestors Back from the Dead." Pretty potent!

STRAWBERRY CONES FOREVER

Is ice cream junk food? That's the question we posed to Philip G. Keeney. But before we get to the answer, let's find out a little about the man who provided it for us.

Philip G. Keeney, Ph.D., is a professor of food science at Penn State. Each January for the past 30 years he has conducted a course in "Ice Cream Basics." And to this course has flocked everyone in the ice cream business, from company presidents to sales and production staff, every one of whom actually makes ice cream while there.

Dr. Keeney describes the ideal ice cream this way: "When you bite into it, it should have a rapid-impact identifying flavor. When you swallow, there shouldn't be a lingering aroma; each new lick should be a new experience."

And now, the answer we've all been waiting for: No. Ice cream is not junk food. "An ice-cream cone contains a generous portion of milk solids and calcium, which is particularly good for women and the elderly. And it's such an enjoyable food. Anyone who goes into an ice cream store is happy. It keeps them from getting mad at people." That's good news. So, on second thought, make that fudge ripple a double, please.

BEDSIDE READING

What are people reading before they retire for the night? Here are two reports:

Michael Tilson-Thomas, principal guest conductor, Los Angeles Philharmonic

"I've been reading The Poems of Rainer Maria Rilke for illumination and simply because it is an infinitely beautiful book, and The Heretics of Dune by Frank Herbert because everyone is entitled to a few obsessions."

Jerry Yahna, director, Big Band Jazz Ensemble of Central Oregon Community College

"Mr. Jellyroll by Alan Lomax. It's the story of Jellyroll Morton, the great jazz performer and one of America's great composers. And I've also been delving into LeRoi Jones's Blues People. I teach a course in jazz and have gotten many insights from this book into the backgrounds of black jazz musicians and their culture."

The gals get their innings

By LORENZO CARCATERRA

Like all great movements, it has started quite well. The Sun Sox, a baseball team made up entirely of women, has applied for admission to the Class A Florida State League.

They hope to play the 1985 season in Daytona Beach, with no major league affiliation. They have filled a fall of cold nights and a winter of icy days with the warmth of hope.

They were fathered by Bob Hope. Not the "I want to tell you it's great to be here" Bob Hope. He had other roads to travel. This Hope is a former vice president of the Atlanta Braves and, one would surmise, a man of vision. He sees the day when it will be common to have women fielding teams in Class A, Double A, Triple A and the majors.

But first things first. The Sun Sox must convince the Florida State League that they are willing and able to compete with other teams made up of men who may not be as open minded as the pioneering Hope.

Daytona Beach may not be ready for an all-woman baseball team. The Florida State League certainly is not ready. Nor, for that matter, is any other league. The only people it seems who are ready are the Sun Sox themselves, Bob Hope and Hank Aaron.

Aaron was among a group who recently watched the ladies practice in Atlanta. He came away impressed.

"It's amazing," the all-time major league Home Run leader said. "A few of them can handle themselves. They're going to have to give them a chance to play."

The Sun Sox could signal the beginning of something exciting or they could turn into a total disaster.

Can hybrid mystery bloom?

'Murder, She Wrote'
American version of British whodunit

By PHIL SNEIDERMAN

Of the Daily Pilot Staff

A millionaire cosmetics king is missing at sea off the coast of quiet little Cabot Cove in Maine. The local police chief suspects foul play and begins questioning the man's four daughters.

He needs help with this puzzling, high-profile case. Who does he call for assistance? The state police? The FBI?

Not a chance. This is definitely a job for the local mystery novel writer.

Huh?

That's the way life goes in the world of "Murder, She Wrote," a new series airing at 8 p.m. Sundays on CBS. Angela Lansbury portrays Jessica Beatrice Fletcher, a Cabot Cove widow who wrote a mystery novel for her own entertainment. A nephew sent it to a publisher, and practically overnight Jessie has become a celebrated mystery writer.

And at the same time, she's begun poking her nose into real-life crimes — and solving them.

In crime novels and TV series, there's a long tradition of civilians intruding in police investigations. The American approach usually involves a private eye like Mike Hammer or Jim Rockford who gets lured into a case by a beautiful woman, then proceeds to anger the local police by finding the dead bodies five minutes before they do.

The American detective is always warned to stay out of police business, and of course he never follows that advice until the culprit is behind bars.

Then there's the more civilized English school of civilian crime-fighting, as illuminated in Agatha Christie's novels or the Sherlock Holmes stories. In these tales, the local police are hopelessly befuddled by a murder case, and they welcome the help of a famous civilian crime expert. And of course, the private detective or mystery writer is always three steps ahead of the dimwitted professional cop in cracking the case.

Which brings us back to "Murder, She Wrote," a hybrid mystery series. Creators Peter S. Fischer, Richard Levinson and William Link have uprooted the civilized English crime-fighting approach and transplanted it to American soil — New England, in fact. It makes for interesting, but not necessarily compelling television.

Perhaps noisy private eye series like "Magnum, P.I." "Matt Houston" and "Riptide" have spoiled us. We've come to regard the weekly mystery as less important than the latest street pursuit, motorboat chase or escape by helicopter. Instead of searching for clues to the killer, we wait for another fiery explosion or deadly exchange of hot lead. On these shows, well-developed leg muscles and a rock-solid fist are more valuable than the gray matter so prized in the English approach.

The first two episodes of "Murder, She Wrote" have been sadly lacking in car chases. Jessie Fletcher prefers to get around by bicycle, for goodness sake. The body count has been relatively low, and last week's lone corpse was thoughtful enough to drift ashore face down.

Whereas the local police usually warn Magnum or the Riptide boys to butt out, the Cabot Cove police chief (Tom Bosley) actually summoned Jessie to the scene last week when the millionaire was reported lost at sea. Throughout the episode, he let Jessie observe and even participate in the interrogation of suspects and witnesses.

In real life, the area where a dead body is found would be roped off to prevent civilian intrusion while the cops look for clues. Jessie not only rode her bike to the scene of the oceanside search, but she managed to find a shoe heel that the police had overlooked.

The friendly police chief let her come along to match it with a suspect's shoe, then let her "borrow" the evidence to help trap the murderer. No word from the district attorney on how all this might stand up in court.

There was one brief, nasty bit of violence in the opening two-hour movie. Jessie was following a suspect through a sleazy New York neighborhood when she was attacked by two punks with an eye on her purse. She was saved by a strong young black man who was — wouldn't you know it? — a fan of her mystery writing.

More typical were the climaxes of the first two episodes, where Jessie found herself face-to-face all alone with the unmasked killer. In the first show it was her urbane publisher, played by Arthur Hill. She pegged him as a murderer late at night outside an isolated mansion by the pool.

As Hill moved closer to Jessie, edging her toward the pool, you wondered: would the killer now kill again? No, he just politely asked Jessie to accompany him while he confessed to the cops.

How sweet.

Then last week, the killer, a woman this time, broke into Jessie's house. When her identity was revealed, she confessed, then threatened to kill the mystery writer. But Jessie calmly informed her that she'd called the police chief just minutes earlier and he'd been listening to their entire conversation. And there was the phone receiver, off the hook, hidden behind some flowers.

Faced with this, the killer simply surrendered without a fuss. How nice of her.

"Murder, She Wrote" isn't a bad show. Lansbury is a pro, and she pitches her character perfectly: not too naive, not too silly, not too snobby. Unfortunately, she's been given scripts that aren't too involving. It's tough to care about stars who are doing a quick turn before getting back to other roles. (In the first episode, for instance, Arthur Hill was on loan from "Glitter".

Heston a hunter at last

Poaching, passions
ingredients of movie
'Nairobi Affair'

By JERRY BUCK

AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES — Oddly enough, Charlton Heston, a man seemingly born to wear a floppy African hunter's hat and safari jacket and carry an elephant gun, has never before played a white hunter.

Heston finally plays the part in the CBS movie "Nairobi Affair," which was filmed entirely on location in Kenya.

It was Heston's fourth film in Africa and first in Kenya. Previously, he did "The Ten Commandments," "Khartoum," and "The Awakening" in Egypt.

Heston, like Stewart Granger in the 1950 version of "King Solomon's Mines," the best of the white-hunter adventure films, has that steady gaze and set of mouth. His eyes search the horizon for game — or trouble.

In "Nairobi Affair," which CBS will telecast Wednesday, a ban on hunting because of poaching has turned him into the owner of a photographic safari camp. He had left his wife years ago and his son, a game warden played by John Savage, has never forgiven him. Father and son, long estranged, meet again at her funeral.

Maud Adams also stars as Savage's former wife, who is now romantically involved with Heston.

"We shot it mostly in the bush," says

Charlton Heston

Heston. "That's why I'm of the opinion that 'Nairobi Affair' is not the correct title. We only filmed a few scenes in Nairobi. Mostly, we were in the Masai Mara, a game reserve on one hand and the heart of the Masai people on the other.

The Masai are still largely a nomadic cattle-raising people. They don't recognize national borders. They're tall, handsome people. We shot in a Masai encampment and used some of the people. We filmed one of their dances."

This Hogan's no hero

By LYNDY HIRSCH

Q: I'm a big "Search for Tomorrow" fan and one of the reasons is the actor who plays Hogan. Lately he seems to be missing from the show. Will he return? — C.R., Belleville, Ohio.

A: David Forsyth, who played Burke on "As the World Turns" before coming to "Search" as Hogan, has left the show. David is interested in prime-time work and perhaps a movie. We understand that Marsha McCabe, who plays Sunny on the show, is very disappointed since she felt a wonderful chemistry when she and David worked together. Right now "Search" producers are looking around for a new Hogan.

Q: Can you tell me if the character who plays Alfred in "All My Children" is going to have a larger part? I really like the character and I know many kids on college campuses can relate. — Z.W., New Orleans, La.

A: Bill Timoney, who plays Alfred, is a non-contract player. That means he's on call but isn't guaranteed "x" number of performances per week. With a contract like that, Timoney is not very likely to get a major storyline, at least not at present. Incidentally, Timoney started out as an extra, then moved up to his present status, which is unusual. Before he got the role of Alfred he tried out for the role of Tad Martin which eventually went to Michael Knight.

Q: I recently saw the movie "Beat Street" and recognized one of the dancers from a soap, but I can't place the soap the dancer appears in. Can you help? It's driving me crazy! — E.S., Houston, Texas.

A: Very observant of you. That was Tonya Pinkins, who plays Heather on "As the World Turns," in the break-dance movie "Beat Street," which was directed by Harry Belafonte. It's been a red-letter year for Tonya who married Hubie Kelley this year. Hubie is seen as the Vietnam ghost, Gage Robinson, on "Loving."

Heston says the ban on hunting was imposed in an effort to conserve the game population. "But the poaching has actually increased because you don't have the hunters and the safaris patrolling the area," he says.

"My son is dealing with the poaching problem. Maud Adams plays an anthropologist. In the original draft of the script they had her a night club singer. I said, 'My God, can't we have something a little more related to the story?' We filmed some of the scenes with Maud at the Leakey Institute."

Heston said he and his wife were taken around the institute by Dr. Richard Leakey, son of the late famed anthropologist Louis S.B. Leakey, who pioneered in digging up the remains of early man in Kenya.

"All the original skulls are there in a safe that would survive a nuclear explosion," Heston says. "It was quite an awesome feeling to look at the earliest possible ancestors of homo sapiens."

Turning back to the movie, Heston says. "Part of the picture deals with the generational conflict with my son. That provides the emotional content. But the spine of the story is really the problem with ivory poaching." When Savage is ambushed by four poachers, Heston joins him in tracking them down in the bush.

A major reason director Marvin Chomsky brought the cast and crew to the game reserve was the opportunity to film the game in the wild.

"They are not tame," says Heston, "but the carnivorous animals and the elephants will tolerate people in trucks in their presence. Perhaps elephants less so. The lions couldn't care less. I saw a cheetah kill a wildebeest and a lion take it away from the cheetah. We were within 15 feet."

"The herbivores wouldn't let us come within 50 feet. I'm convinced the only reason a wildebeest was put on this earth is to be a lion's lunch."

Heston, who returned to television last year after a long absence with a role in the CBS miniseries "Chiefs," says he was offered "Nairobi Affair" while appearing on the stage in "Detective Story."

"We did it in Los Angeles and Denver and were considering taking it to London," he says. "But we finally had to break off to do the film. So, I'll probably do a play in London in 1985. We'll do 'The Caine Mutiny Court-Martial,' which has never been done in London."

"I was offered my choice of parts: Barney Greenwald, the lawyer, or Capt. Queeg, which is the flashiest role. I chose to do Barney Greenwald."

Heston, whose last movie was "Mother Lode," written by his son, Fraser, says he was so pleased with the way "Chiefs" turned out that he wanted to do more television. Prior to that, he had not done television since he played with Judith Anderson in "Elizabeth and Essex" 16 years ago.

Sophia 'never younger' at 50

Sophia Loren

By JERRY BUCK

AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES — Sophia Loren, who just turned 50, says she's never felt younger but has reached the point in her career that she is more interested in being a mother than being an actress.

She has a film on NBC next Monday, "My Three Loves," but before that she had not made a movie since her TV biography in 1980.

"It has been my choice to turn down films," says Loren, who still radiates a regal beauty and an enveloping warmth that has made her an international superstar. She is unconcerned about her age or reaching the half-century mark.

Wearing a low-cut white dress with large red polka dots, Loren talked about her life and career the other day in her hotel suite.

"If you're a woman and you have children, the most important thing is to be a mother," she says. "If you have time to spare, then you can work."

"I was devoting my time to my family. And when you are a mother you become more choosy in your work. You leave the house only for the most special projects. I took this film not because I needed work, but because I felt it was a project I could do and share with other women the experiences I have lived as an actress and a woman."

Loren also admits a major reason she accepted the starring role in "My Three Loves" was because of her 11-year-old son, Edoardo Ponti.

"I saw it as an opportunity for my son, if he were chosen, to fulfill his dream to be an actor. Because I liked the story and the possibility of my son being in it, I said yes. But I wanted my son tested first. We tested together and when I saw the result I thought he was perfect."

"My Three Loves," which also stars Daniel Travanti ("Hill Street Blues"), is a romantic comedy-drama about a woman who tricks her ex-lovers into paying for an eye operation for her blind son, Ciro. It was filmed entirely on location in Italy.

She plays Aurora, a taxi dancer who in her younger, carefree days as a chambermaid in Sorrento, Italy, had many rich but temporary lovers. She can't put together enough money for her son's operation and sets out to find her former lovers and convince each that Ciro is his son. The trail finally leads to Travanti, where events take a different turn.

Loren says she was "never more terrified" before starting a movie.

"I had such a responsibility on my shoulders for my son because I was his mother," she says. "We began to shoot and I trusted Edoardo right away. I saw in his face so much love, so much concentration, so much discipline."

"The first thing he did was make friends with the crew. I thought this was a wonderful thing to do. When he started to make friends he was much at peace. He also had to keep up with his school work. It's not easy to be an actor. You move all the time and you work the strangest hours. But he stayed enthusiastic — and looking forward to something more. I told him he must go to school. That's the most important thing."

Loren brought Edoardo with her from their home in Switzerland, and while here he got to meet director Steven Spielberg. "He told me he didn't want any presents for Christmas," she says. He just wanted to make a picture with Spielberg."

She is married to producer Carlo Ponti, and they have another son, Carlos, 15. "Carlos has a great passion for the piano and classical music," she says. "He started playing when he was 6."

Despite her attention to her family, Loren is not abandoning her career.

"I have many projects ahead of me," she says. "I have something I really want to do. When I first read it I said, 'Let's make this. This is worth doing.' It's something I think I need at this time in my career. And I have some other projects. I'll start working next January or February."

Publishers had been after her for years to write a book about beauty. "Then three years ago I didn't have much professional work and I said yes," she recalls.

She celebrated her 50th birthday, Sept. 20, on the road promoting her perfume. After that tour she left immediately on another promotion for her new book, "Women and Beauty."

"In my private life, maybe this sounds immodest, but I've never felt younger," she says.

GH actor in good voice

BY LYNDA HIRSCH

Brad Maule, who stars as Dr. Tony Jones on "General Hospital," is about to lift his voice in song for Los Angeles' DuPree Theater in "Fade In...Fade Out." Maule, who has also sung on GH, made his TV singing debut two years ago on very short notice. Andy Gibb was to sing the song "Arthur's Theme" at an awards banquet, but at literally the last minute Gibb had to cancel out and Brad stepped in. Gloria Monte, the producer of GH, is delighted that Brad has such a fabulous voice and she's decided to use Maule's singing talents on the show so that viewers will realize that the Jones family has a truly musical background.

Look for Deidre Hall, Marlena Evans on "Days of Our Lives," on an upcoming episode of "Hot Pursuit." Remember we told you how fabulous "Hill Street Blues" and "St. Elsewhere" are, well, ditto for "Hot Pursuit." The show is taped entirely on location with no phony New Orleans or Washington backlots.

The show is about a husband (Eric Pierpoint) and wife (Kerrie Keane) on the run from police — the wife has been railroaded for a murder she didn't commit. But the real twist of this series is the chemistry between these two actors coupled with their terrific portrayal of the husband and wife who really rely on each other for emotional and physical support.

It may sound like the old "Fugitive" series since it's done by the same producer, but what's so bad about copying a great show?

When Tony Geary returns to "General Hospital," his Luke "locks" will be in perfectly curly order. When Tony appeared in "Jesus Christ Superstar" he had his hair done in braids. Upon his return to GH he permed his hair. Tony will also be sporting a beard and an earring. He figures that since Luke has sailed the Seven Seas he deserves to wear the earring.

TV buoys Miles Davis

By MARY CAMPBELL

AP Newsfeatures Writer

Miles Davis led jazz into the cool; he led it into fusion. A lot of critics and listeners weren't ready for either move. On stage, he doesn't appear to respond to the audience. He hasn't given many interviews.

Now, with the album "Decoy" out on Columbia Records, Davis making a video of the title tune and cutting a 12-inch single of "Time after Time," he has decided to do some interviews. "The records will sell maybe three times as much as they used to," Davis says. People are saying hello on the street, from seeing him on TV. From the way he talks about that, he isn't finding it half bad.

He didn't give interviews, he says, "because I don't like to talk about what I've done. Now I'm 58, it doesn't matter like it used to."

As soon as he finishes this interview, in a restaurant near his Manhattan home, where Steve Martin is at the next table, he'll practice his horn. If he walks home, he says, he may stop at a men's clothing store and spend a lot of money.

"I better practice every day," he says. "I laid off for four years. It took me two years to get my tone back. There were business reasons. I was tired on the road. We'd just started mixing what they call jazz with rock. Everybody was saying, 'Eh, eh, eh.'

He didn't want to hear that. I'd made 'Bitches Brew' and 'The Silent Way.' That had some good stuff on it.

"You have to change. There's still a lot of guys that don't want to change. Those are lazy people. What we play is harder than what they do. How can they keep doing the same thing, the same progressions? Some music is so boring I don't even listen to it.

"Somebody taped a record I did with Dizzy Gillespie as guest star in 1948 and it sounds like guys are playing today. I let my drummer hear it. He said, 'You were doing that then?' They used to make fun of us. I reminded Milton Berle he called us 'head hunters' at the Three Deuces. He said he was sorry.

"I was in my 20s, playing with Charlie Parker. That stuff they used to make fun of is commercial now."

Tooting his horn

Brian Keith had to get back to "Hardcastle and McCormick."

It's nice to have a break from the car crashes and gunfire of TV's other private eye shows. But you have to provide something else to hold a viewer's attention, like imaginative plotting and colorful characters. Thus far, the mysteries on "Murder, She Wrote" have been more confusing than clever, and the characters have been rather bland.

At first look, this mystery transplant seems to be dying on the vine.

Marple in last year's Christie film, "A Caribbean Mystery."

Robert Urich plays a wealthy industrialist involved in a love triangle in "His Mistress," a TV movie that will air Oct. 21 on NBC. The cast also includes Cynthia Sikes, Linda Kelsey and Mark Shera. Also featured is Sacha Parker, daughter of actress Shirley MacLaine.

In an unusual move, CBS has already decided to renew three of its top-rated prime-time soaps for another season. Affected are "Dallas," "Falcon Crest" and "Knots Landing," all produced by Lorimar.

Jacqueline Bisset, Christopher Reeve and Paul Scofield star in a new adaptation of the classic Tolstoy novel, "Anna Karenina," now being filmed in Hungary for CBS. The story is set in 19th Century Russia.

San Diego pair just couldn't inch their way out of arrest

By JEFF ADLER
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Sometimes, eluding arrest is a matter of inches.

But for two San Diego men, not even 25 tape measures were able to deliver the measure of safety they needed Saturday night.

The two were arrested with the tape measures and other tools valued at $3,000 following a short, high-speed chase through Costa Mesa about 5:30 p.m., Costa Mesa police Lt. Tom Durham reported.

Durham said police were contacted by an employee of Builders Emporium, 289 E. 17th St., who observed one of the men leaving the store with merchandise he allegedly had not paid for.

Police, using their eye-in-the-sky helicopter, pursued the men north on Newport Boulevard, then westbound on Fair Drive and into the Orange Coast College parking lot where they were arrested.

Besides the merchandise allegedly taken from Builders Emporium, the trunk of their car yielded tools believed to have been stolen from other area hardware or discount stores, Durham said. "They were very bold about the whole thing," he added.

Booked into the Costa Mesa City Jail on charges of possession of stolen property, grand theft and burglary were Harold Rohn, 34, and Rufus Hutchins, 42, both of San Diego. Bail was set at $10,000.

Pilot editor for a day leaps right into fray

By JIM de BOOM
Special to the Daily Pilot

The day began with a cup of coffee as I took the place of Daily Pilot Editor Frank Zini in the editor's office. We chatted for a few minutes about what the day would be like, including a meeting with the editorial staff, department managers and later in the afternoon with the publisher.

Promptly at 8:30 a.m., I was confronted by Tom Tait, city editor; Don Fenley, assistant city editor; Tom Clannin, news editor and Steve Mitchell, wire editor, with the responsibility of making some heavy decisions about what was and was not newsworthy.

They gave me a list of over 20 reporters working on, including the plane crash at the John Wayne Airport. "What stories do you want to lead with? What stories are relevant? What do you want to hold?"

I turned to Frank and he said, "You're the boss." So we went with the lead story of the airplane crash at the John Wayne Airport.

I asked if they had anyone covering the anti-airport rally which had occurred the evening before at Mariner's Park.

"No, what happened?" was the response. I gave them contact leads and when the first edition of the Daily Pilot rolled off the press (12 minutes late) at 11:12 a.m., the headline story was about the

State may buy Nixon library site

By The Associated Press

SAN CLEMENTE — The chance that the state may buy seaside land earmarked for the Richard M. Nixon Presidential Library is causing concern among city officials and the company that donated the multi-million-dollar site.

crash at the John Wayne Airport.

I asked if they had anyone covering the anti-airport rally which had occurred the evening before at Mariner's Park.

"No, what happened?" was the response. I gave them contact leads and when the first edition of the Daily Pilot rolled off the press (12 minutes late) at 11:12 a.m., the headline story was about the crash at the John Wayne Airport and the second lead story was (as a result of my comments) "200 Airport Foes Raise $9,000 at Newport Rally."

During my proofreading time I even caught a couple of spelling mistakes, including Vin Jorgensen's name.

I was worried the first edition was late getting off the press because of my slowness. The staff assured me that it was not. But, from the time of the editors meeting until the first edition rolled off the press, I was introduced to more people than I can possibly remember.

I met the production department, printing press operators, display and classified ad staffs and had a chance to do some reminiscing about previous Daily Pilot writers and columnists, including John Sevano (now with the California Angels) and Sacramento columnist Earl Waters (now retired).

Back at the newsroom — my first impression when I arrived at the state tagged the spot as a potential public park 10 years ago.

Acting city manager Gary Brown said Friday he heard Wednesday that the state Coastal Commission had action pending on the case, and the issue was quickly added to the City Council agenda out of fear the city might lose a tax windfall if the land becomes a state park.

Frank Faye, an aide to Orange County Supervisor Tom Riley, said he understood the state wanted the site as an additional backup-support area for the San Clemente Beach and Dana Point Beach state parks.

Daily Pilot was the informal atmosphere of everyone drinking coffee and talking. But, as soon as the clock struck 8:30 a.m., the newsroom became quiet as reporters were typing on their computer terminals and making phone calls to catch up on current stories.

Frank Zini and I left shortly before noon to attend a luncheon to initiate the 1st annual YMCA Service Club Hall of Fame at the Newport Beach Marriott Hotel (see story in Wednesday's edition by Tony Saavedra, photo by Howard Lipin). When we returned, the smooth operating machine of the Pilot had added an article on the front page of the County Edition about two attempted rapes in Irvine.

It's quite impressive to watch real professionals at work as they not only report the news, but the team effort it takes to publish 35,000 copies a day.

Frank and I had some philosophical discussions pertaining to parts of the newspaper business, including what are acceptable/not acceptable letters to the editor and what the newspaper's responsibility is for endorsing political candidates and promoting thought and discussion in editorials.

The staff meetings were enlightening as well, where they dealt openly with concerns, problems and opportunities among the department heads.

Publisher H.L. "Sandy" Schwartz III chaired the final meeting of the day.

The editorial I wrote appeared in Tuesday's edition, not in the edition of the day that I was editor, for which I am sorry.

I am really thankful to my wife Barbara for giving me the opportunity to be "Editor for a Day." Our daughters, Stacy and Jodi, were surprised that I hadn't worked their names into the newspaper that day, nor into the editorial I wrote. They weren't the only ones surprised. Over the next couple of days many people commented on why I didn't include more YMCA information, the Schools Foundation campaign, more on Rotary and so on.

It was interesting to note how many people read the newspaper. There are 35,000 Daily Pilot subscribers from Huntington Beach on down the Coast. It is a professional and competent organization and one we can all be proud of. As the old saying goes ... "If you don't like the product, tell the Pilot editor, and if you like the Daily Pilot, tell a friend and encourage them to subscribe."

To the lucky person who bids on an "Editor for a Day" at next year's Costa Mesa Rotary auction, "You're going to enjoy it!" Jim de Boom Editor, Oct. 8, 1984 two factors can be decided in a relatively easy manner. He said the political feasibility is determined when the nation's elected representatives vote on whether to implement the program. The economic feasibility concerns whether the nation can afford such a program.

But McDivitt insisted that determining whether, printing press operators, display and classified ad staffs and had a chance to do some reminiscing about previous Daily Pilot writers and columnists, including John Sevano (now with the California Angels) and Sacramento columnist Earl Waters (now retired).

Commenting on the rapid advances in space science, McDivitt said the technology used to put men on Gemini 4 in its 66-orbit mission and for the Apollo 9 Earth orbital flight. He has established six world records for space flight. He joined Rockwell in 1981.

The former astronaut said that when he became a military flier in 1950, he never imagined men would land on the moon just 19 years later.

Commenting on the rapid advances in space science, McDivitt said the technology used to put men on the moon now "looks as antiquated as Orville Wright's glider must have looked to World War II fliers."

Asked about the problems in the current space shuttle system, McDivitt said, "I think the hitches and glitches have been tremendously overplayed by the news media.... I think there have been problems, but we're learning as the program is maturing."

the proposal that allow for the use of eminent domain (property can be condemned by the city) and by clauses allegedly giving the redevelopment agency (the seven City Council members) the right to put liens on property if sufficient funds aren't raised to finance flood projects.

This is the point that allegedly bothers Sherry Passmore, a redevelopment consultant who is Alexander's daughter.

Few redevelopment agencies pay off their projects, she said.

Floodwaters damaged 59 homes and caused $4.5 million in property losses in Alexander's neighborhood east of Beach Boulevard in 1983. Throughout the city, 780 homes were damaged and losses were estimated at $15 million in the city.

Alexander said estimated costs to put concrete on the dirt channel banks come to about $55 million alone. Costs to repair pumps and other facilities push the price tag upward.

city in Anjo, Japan, to tell them about nice things of Huntington Beach, they're not talking about Commodore Circle.

But there's another side to the story, as told by Dilip Parikh, an owner of six of the Commodore Circle four-plices.

He doesn't live on the premises.

Parikh acknowledges problems — there are some cockroaches, some of the upstairs toilets back up and the carpets become soiled when tenants repair motorcycles inside the apartments.

But Parikh, who heatedly denies being an absentee landlord, blames the city and nearby condominium owners and some newspaper stories for causing a commotion.

He said the main problem is that too many people are jammed into the apartments and that owners are powerless to control the over-crowding.

First of all, he said, there are lots of kids. And then, he said, there are lots of people in the apartments to whom he hasn't rented. "I see them there, but they say they're amigos. What are you going to do, post a guard at their door 24 hours a day?"

Parikh said city officials could go a long way toward resolving the over-crowding by adopting an ordinance to regulate the number of tenants in apartments. "And then they've got to quit talking about it and help us to enforce it," he declared.

He also says the apartments were built in 1962, long before people bought condominiums in the nearby Village Court and Huntington Creek complexes.

"They (the condo owners) are blaming the poor Mexicans who can't speak out for the loss in values of their homes. But if you look anywhere in the county, the values of condominiums is declining. They (the condominium owners) are throwing trash onto Commodore Circle," he declared.

But real estate saleswoman Wheeler apparently isn't buying it.

"The slum landlords don't give a damn," she said. "They haven't paid Rainbow Disposal and trash has been piling up. I can't believe it in this day and age."

"There have been fires in the garages and they (the tenants) have thrown the heads of cats on our tennis courts."

Doctor suspended after allowing his son to assist

By The Associated Press

DETROIT — A doctor who let his 14-year-old son assist in a bladder operation was suspended for two weeks from practicing medicine, but only after a state board reversed its decision to take no action, officials said. Dr. Leonard Wolin admitted during the Michigan Board of Medicine hearing on Wednesday that he had allowed his son to scrub and enter the operating room because the youth was interested in medicine and had asked to watch. Wolin admitted that during the March 1983 operation on a 50-year-old woman in Chelsea Community Hospital, he had instructed the boy to insert his gloved hand inside the woman's abdomen and feel a catheter balloon in her bladder. He also had his son put in two stitches, despite objections from an anesthesiologist, the board said. The woman recovered normally.

Queen Elizabeth tours Wyoming town

SHERIDAN, Wyo. — Hunters grumbled when they were hustled away from their morning coffee at a store, but hundreds of people were thrilled Saturday as Britain's Queen Elizabeth II took a walk down Main Street of this north-central Wyoming town. Two downtown blocks were prepared for inspection by the queen, on vacation at a nearby ranch until Monday. The first stop on her shopping trip was the Ritz Sporting Goods Store, which had been cleared of its usual morning kaffeeklatsch. The queen spent 15 minutes chatting with Ritz owner Sam Mavrikis, his brother Paul, and Tammy and Chester Davey, his daughter and son-in-law. She also was greeted by Ethel Crawley, 96, a former British subject who once lived near Windsor Castle.

Route 66 passes into history

WILLIAMS, Ariz. — Route 66, the highway made famous in song, story and television, passed into history on Saturday, with a parade of antique cars following along the same route traveled by pioneers and prospectors. The parade opened elaborate ceremonies marking the opening of an Interstate 40 bypass to replace the last two-lane segment of U.S. 66, which once crossed eight states and three time zones from Chicago to Santa Monica. In its better days, the road was the setting for John Steinbeck's 1939 novel "The Grapes of Wrath" and a 1960s television series, "Route 66." Bobby Troup urged people to "Get your kicks on Route 66" in the song "Route 66," which he wrote in the mid-1940s.

Mondale shows gains after debate

WASHINGTON — President Reagan maintains landslide-sized lead over Walter F. Mondale three weeks before Election Day, according to a nationwide Associated Press survey, but the Democratic challenger has "come alive" in many states after his strong showing in campaign debate. "The spread has narrowed considerably," said Pennsylvania Democratic chairman Edward Mezvinsky. The debate "really puts us in the ballgame," he added, in a state where a GOP poll found Reagan with a double-digit lead before the first presidential debate a week ago.

Forecasters expect hurricane to wane

MIAMI — Hurricane Josephine and its churning 85 mph winds ambled northward Saturday, causing gale warnings from North Carolina to Massachusetts, but forecasters said the storm's strength might be sapped as it edged toward colder water. "It's going to continue moving toward the north very slowly," said Bob Sheets, a forecaster at the National Hurricane Center. "The strongest winds will slowly die down, and as it moves on the northeast coast, it should not get any closer to land." As the storm moved parallel to the coast at 8 mph, forecasters expected that a northeast turn would put Josephine over cooler water by Sunday.

1982 auto crash blamed for Gaynor death

INDIO — Actress Janet Gaynor died from pneumonia and complications resulting from a 1982 traffic accident that also injured actress Mary Martin, the coroner's office says. Miss Gaynor, 77, who died Sept. 14 at Desert Hospital in Palm Springs, succumbed to pneumonia due to "complications of trauma with injury information indicating it was an accident that occurred on Sept. 5, 1982, in San Francisco," supervising coroner's investigator Sabas Rosas said Friday. The formal determination of the cause of death had been suggested several weeks ago by coroner's investigators and doctors who had attended the former movie star during her lengthy recovery effort.

Actor Hexum critical after shooting

LOS ANGELES — Actor Jon-Erik Hexum was in critical condition Saturday after he accidentally shot himself in the head with a blank-loaded pistol on the set of the CBS series "Cover Up," a studio spokesman said. Hexum, 26, was transferred to the intensive care unit at the Beverly Hills Medical Center on Saturday morning and was to be kept sedated until the swelling in his head subsides, said Vince Panettiere, a publicist for 20th Century-Fox studios. He underwent five hours of surgery Friday night, performed by a neurosurgical team headed by Dr. David Ditsworth. Hexum was working alone on the sound stage at Fox when he shot himself Friday afternoon.

Globetrotters settle civil rights suit

SANTA BARBARA — A $3 million lawsuit filed by three members of the Harlem Globetrotters basketball team against Santa Barbara police was settled for $75,000, city officials said. Globetrotters Ovie Dotson, 27, Louis Dunbar, 30, and Jimmy Blacklock, 35, claimed in their suit that they were stopped and handcuffed by police investigating a robbery merely because they were black. Under terms of the settlement each will receive $20,000. All three will share in $15,000 awarded for trial expenses. In return, the Globetrotters agreed that police were justified in stopping them on a busy street during the afternoon of Dec. 13, 1983.

X-29 jet being prepared for November tests

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE — The X-29, an experimental jet that will test forward-swept wings and other hardware for possible use in future military fighter planes, is being prepared at this desert test base for its first flights. The initial flights of the X-29 will start in late November or early December, National Aeronautics and Space Administration spokesman Les Reinertson said Saturday.

Pizza employees win harassment suit

SAN FRANCISCO — Four former employees of a Shakey's Pizza parlor in Redding have been awarded almost $200,000 in damages stemming from their sexual harassment complaint against two male employees of the eatery. The California Department of Fair Employment and Housing Commission Friday released the results of the decision made last month against Garry F. Hart, owner of two Shakey's Pizza parlors in Redding, and Phillip "Dave" Ayotte, former manager of the restaurants.

Soviets step up missile deployment

MOSCOW — The Soviet Defense Ministry announced Saturday that it is putting new long-range cruise missiles in strategic bombers and submarines, saying the program would "correspond" in scope to U.S. deployment of air- and sea-launched cruise missiles. The announcement, distributed by the official news agency Tass, also reiterated Soviet statements that the military is continuing "successful tests" of ground-launched cruise missiles. The Soviets deployed an early version of the cruise missile in submarines in the 1960s, but these missiles were believed to have been removed later, according to West European diplomatic sources in Moscow.

Weinberger to discuss more aid for Egypt

CAIRO, Egypt — Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger said Saturday he will discuss increasing U.S. military aid to Egypt during his three-day visit here. Weinberger, who arrived Saturday from Tunisia, is scheduled to confer with President Hosni Mubarak, Prime Minister Kamal Hassan Aly and Defense Minister Abdel Halim Abu-Ghazala. Their discussions are expected to focus on specific defense-related issues and the overall security situation in the Middle East.

Egypt now receives $1.1 billion in U.S. military aid annually.

TOKYO — Videotapes filmed at a supermarket in western Japan show a "suspicious" man who may be one of the blackmailers who placed cyanide-laced candies in stores, the daily Asahi Shimbun reported in Sunday editions. The tapes show that the man, in his 30s, appeared at a 24-hour supermarket in Nishinomiyako, near Osaka, western Japan, on Oct. 7 — about one hour before the poisoned candy was found on a shelf in the store, the Asahi reported. In the films, the man touched several candies but did not buy any. He left the store after buying a magazine, according to Asahi.

Duarte receives death threat

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — A group of rightist death squads accused President Jose Napoleon Duarte of treason today for offering to talk with leftist guerrillas and said he will be "a target of our military action."

The communiqué from the Secret Anti-Communist Army was tantamount to a death sentence.

The organization is an umbrella group of several rightist death squads, including the best-known one, the Maximiliano Hernandez Brigade. The threat was delivered to several news organizations in the capital, San Salvador.

It said Duarte was "an enemy of the people for promoting dialogue with the guerrillas."

"Thus, the National Liberation Party and its armed branch, the Secret Anti-Communist Army, declares them enemies of the country and from now on manifests that they will be the target of our military action," the communiqué said. The communiqué indicated "they" referred to all organizations and political parties that support organizations the Secret Anti-Communist Army considers to be leftist.

The communiqué asked members of the armed forces to analyze Duarte's actions and realize that they only fill the traitorous plans of the communist interests."

Duarte is to meet Monday in the northern town of La Palma with representatives of leftist guerrillas fighting the government in a five-year-old civil war.

Applause, cheers herald astronauts' return to earth*Crippen finally gets to put craft down at home base in Florida, not California

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Heralded by twin sonic booms that screeched across beaches and orange groves, shuttle Challenger swooped out of a cloudless sky Saturday and came home to its launch site after a 3.5-million-mile survey of Earth.

Commander Robert L. Crippen guided the 101-ton spacecraft through a 13,000-mile glide across Alaska, the heart of Canada and the U.S. Midwest and Southeast to a precise centerline landing on the Kennedy Space Center runway.

Only a few hundred people were on hand when Challenger touched down, in vivid contrast to the huge crowds that have greeted shuttle arrivals at Edwards Air Force Base. The crowd applauded and cheered.

"The largest crew in the history of space flight is home," said Mission Control. The flight, ending at 12:27 p.m. EDT, had lasted eight days, five hours and 24 minutes.

Marc Garneau, a physicist who is Canada's first astronaut, called it "a voyage of a lifetime, an incredible odyssey of exciting experiences."

Paul Scully-Power, a Navy oceanographer, said the experience was hard to describe, "but give me a few hours and a few beers, and I'll probably be able to describe it."

After a day of worry about winds, the air was so calm at touchdown that a machine, basically a huge propeller, had to be used to blow away any dangerous gases that might vent from the space plane.

The landing ended a personal frustration for Crippen. He had been scheduled twice before to put Challenger down at Kennedy Space Center, only to be waved off because of weather.

come a terrorist target.

It said there was "no logical explanation" for what it described as a major security failure.

Concern over embassy security is not limited to diplomatic missions in the Middle East. U.S. officials said there has been a renewal of death threats against the U.S. ambassador to El Salvador, Thomas Pickering. Some embassy officials frequently have their cars repainted to avoid easy identification.

Shultz said the administration also is making efforts to tighten the chain of command at embassies.

At times, Shultz said, when the ambassador tries to assert authority over non-State Department personnel, "people complain about it and say 'Who do you think you are?' So the nature of this process puts a lot of ambiguity into the situation."

Beirut attack prompts daily briefing*State Department put a series of activities in motion in wake of U.S. embassy attack

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department, prompted by last month's terrorist attack at the U.S. Embassy annex in Beirut, is conducting daily high-level meetings to review potential security problems at U.S. diplomatic installations, Secretary of State George Shultz says.

On his way back from a three-day trip to the Caribbean on Friday, Shultz told reporters that he expects the meetings to be part of his daily routine whenever he isn't traveling.

Other officials, who asked to remain anonymous, said discussions at the meetings involve reported death threats against diplomats, potential terrorist attacks, and progress in the State Department's security improvements at overseas posts.

Shultz said he attends the meetings with Assistant Secretary for Administration Robert Lamb; the top security expert in that bureau, David Fields; Undersecretary for Management Ronald Spiers; and the director of the Office for Counter-Terrorism and Emergency Planning, Robert Oakley.

The meetings, which began Oct. 6, are part of a series of activities that were set in motion following the Sept. 20 attack on the Beirut embassy annex, the third such assault on a U.S. facility in the Lebanese capital in 18 months.

The administration has asked Congress for $110 million for short-term improvements in embassy security and will seek additional money early next year.

FBI foiled terrorists six times last year

WASHINGTON (AP) — The FBI last year prevented six terrorist acts by a Puerto Rican independence group on the mainland, including an escape from Leavenworth Penitentiary, the murder of a Chicago transit worker and two bombings. Attorney General William French Smith said Saturday.

Smith, who said the incidents were foiled through surveillance work and the use of court-approved wiretaps, made the disclosure in a speech prepared for an awards dinner of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith in Los Angeles. His text was released here.

This year, Smith said, "the FBI intercepted in Philadelphia two Libyans before they could carry out their acts of terror. One Libyan bought two bulletproof vests and ordered four 45-caliber handguns equipped with silencers from an FBI undercover agent posing as an illegal arms dealer. Immediately after delivery of three of the weapons to the Libyans, the pair was arrested."

Smith noted that terrorist incidents inside the United States have been declining from 51 in 1982 to 31 in 1983 and eight so far this year.

Bomb: Planted ahead of time?*1 man in custody for questioning in Brighton incident

BRIGHTON, England (AP) — IRA guerrillas bent on assassinating Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher may have planted the bomb in her hotel weeks ago, wrapping it in cellophane and hiding it under floorboards to fool police dogs, Scotland Yard said Saturday.

Mrs. Thatcher was in her room at the Grand Hotel, polishing a keynote address to her Conservative Party's annual conference, when the bomb detonated at 2:54 a.m. Friday, killing four people and injuring 32.

Police reported a man was taken into custody Saturday afternoon at Liverpool airport in northwestern England and brought to Brighton under heavy police escort. Sussex police inspector Allan Anslow did not identify the man and said only that he was being questioned about the bombing.

Firemen on Saturday recovered the body of Jeanne Shattock, wife of the party's west England area chairman, Gordon Shattock. A crane tore off chunks of the devastated hotel's whitewashed facade to reveal the body trapped in a wrecked upper story.

Also killed were member of Parliament Sir Anthony Berry, a former Tory whip whose first wife is Princess Diana's aunt; Eric Taylor, chairman of the party's northwest England chapter, and Roberta Wakeham, wife of chief House of Commons whip John Wakeham. Their bodies were recovered earlier.

Police pressed their search for the bombers as Britain debated how better to protect its leaders without sealing them off from the public.

"If ministers cower behind the castle walls ... (the) battle within will have been lost," said The Times of London in an editorial.

But The Daily Mirror denounced "criminally complacent" security that it said nearly cost the lives of the prime minister and her Cabinet and called for stringent new measures.

"The carefree days before terrorism have long gone," it declared.

London's Sunday Times claimed in a front-page story that police ignored intelligence warnings last Wednesday that an Irish Republican Army bomb attack "somewhere in Britain" was likely.

It said the armed forces were put on alert and the warning was sent to police stations nationwide, including Brighton. Police here refused comment on the report.

Companies crack down on bogus credit card use

VISA issuer beginning to file suits against counterfeiters

MIAMI (AP) — Julio and Marbelia Requia de Armas went looking for their fortune south of the border — using hundreds of counterfeit credit cards to buy gold jewelry in Mexico and resell it in the United States, authorities say.

But when Mrs. Requia was picked up by U.S. Customs Service agents in Miami, with 200 bogus cards hidden in her girdle and $32,000 in undeclared gold, it heralded a new front in the war against credit-card fraud.

The crackdown was especially sweet for VISA International. After Mrs. Requia pleaded guilty to federal charges of illegally transporting stolen or counterfeit credit cards, VISA won an unprecedented lawsuit against the Miami woman. In April, it was awarded $1.12 million in damages.

Her husband and two others remain jailed in Mexico, where 200 more cards were seized.

"We're starting to sue civilly. It's beginning to be a very effective deterrent," said VISA spokesman Daniel Brigham, adding that two similar cases are pending in other federal courts.

"Their (defendants') assets are exposed to being seized. We're hitting them where it hurts," Brigham said.

The U.S. House Banking Committee estimates the industry loses $1 billion a year worldwide because of credit-card fraud. And the American Bankers Association, which has lobbied hard for tough anti-fraud legislation, says that figure could double by 1985 if the problem is left unchecked.

"A few years ago there was literally no counterfeit problem. Then the criminal element figured out a way to make these phony cards with sophisticated equipment," said Russell E. Hogg, president and chief executive officer of MasterCard International.

"We (the board of directors) consider it a very big problem," he said.

The numbers speak for themselves. MasterCard's worldwide losses due just to counterfeiting increased from $12,148 in 1973 to $19.7 million in 1983. VISA losses rose from $5,000 in 1973 to $22.5 million last year.

American Express Travel Related Services said it did not release such figures. But "our overall losses generally have been much less than the other cards ... because our card is harder to counterfeit," said its vice president of security, James C. McGrath.

According to VISA officials, New York, Florida, California, New Jersey and Georgia accounted for 80.4 percent of its counterfeit losses in the 1983 insurance year ended April 30.

"This can have a tremendous impact on the nation's payment system. We see it as tantamount to counterfeiting in U.S. currency," said Samuel Baptista, federal legislative representative for VISA.

Rep. Frank Annunzio, D-Ill., who has worked with Baptista and other lobbyists to establish federal legislation, estimated fraud had driven up by at least 1 percent the interest rate consumers pay on their cards.

Wrap tender onions in nylon pantyhose

VIDALIA, Ga. (AP) — You're likely to see onions in pantyhose, as well as in salad, particularly if the onions come from Vidalia and you follow the advice of Dick Walden of the Vidalia Chamber of Commerce.

"Vidalia onions, grown only in Georgia, are popular all over the United States, due to their unusually sweet taste and juiciness," says Walden. "They're so mild, in fact, that some onion lovers eat these large, sweet onions all by themselves."

But these gentle giants present an unusual storage problem. They tend to spoil if the skins touch one another.

Nylon pantyhose offer the solution, according to the Fiber

Information Center, a service of the Man-Made Fiber Producers Association.

The elasticity and breathability of the man-made fiber makes pantyhose the perfect container to keep your Vidalia onions tasty and fresh, the center says.

Hendrix is his hero, and he wants a permanent shrine

Rock guitarist's fan has collection of memorabilia that has to be moved

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Jimi Hendrix fans, unite. Your hero's stuff may be headed for the Purple Haze.

The late rock singer's No. 1 fan, Al Burge, is looking for help in saving the Jimi Hendrix Electric Church Foundation, a "museum" with the world's largest collection of memorabilia on the guitarist.

Burge was evicted Wednesday from his purple Victorian in the city's Haight-Ashbury District because he owes four months rent.

"I've given and lost everything for this," said Burge, 38. "I'm only worried about what happens now to the collection. I have no problems with the landlord, though — he's a very nice person. He has to look out for his own interests."

The most cherished possessions Burge has are some scarves that Hendrix' father sold him two years ago. Dozens of other items, including a mannequin of the singer, his electric guitar, a piano, books, posters and paintings fill the first floor of the building. The second floor is Burge's office and apartment, and the third floor is a studio where rock musicians Steve Miller and Boz Scaggs once played.

Burge said he has no place to store the collection, and he must clear everything out within two weeks. He hopes some local rock musicians will stage a benefit for the museum, but he isn't confident about that.

The Oklahoma native came to San Francisco in the 1960s after serving in Vietnam and ran a local hangout called the "Underground Head Shop." Then he saw Hendrix in a rock documentary, and was never the same.

"You could say I'm a born-again Hendrix fan," he said. "He was very special. He transcended all people, all arts. I knew that the first time I heard him."

Inspired, Burge opened the Hendrix museum on Nov. 27, 1981 — the rock musician's birthday. Hendrix was 28 when he died from a drug overdose in 1970.

Robot invasion hitting U.S. from Japan manufacturers

TOKYO (AP) — Tens of millions of Japanese robots are trooping off to the United States, an invasion that is turning into one of the year's hottest toy hits.

No ordinary fighting robots, these creations are intricately crafted to fold up — through a series of complex maneuvers reminiscent of a Rubik's cube — into shapes ranging from jetfighters and racing cars to cameras and stereo cassette recorders.

Their names are as imaginative as the twists and turns it takes to transform them. There are "Tequila Gunner," "Idelian Cangrid Harbla" and "Insect Armored Corps Variable Beet Gadoll Beetass."

Tonka Toys and Hasbro Industries of the United States have put in orders of $100 million to Bandai and Takara, Japan's No. 1 and No. 3 toymakers, respectively, to import legions of the little mechanical men in time for Christmas.

"We will ship $75-80 million wholesale this year," Dan Owens, Hasbro's vice president for marketing, said on a recent trip to Japan. "That's more than 10 million units and over three times the number of units shipped last year in Cabbage Patch dolls."

Seichi Haga, design chief at Bandai, maker of such robots as the "MS-14C Mobile Suit Variation Gelgoog Cannon" and "ARV-C Astrogator Round Vernian Buzam," said, "Japanese children have always liked mechanical systems as well as all kinds of vehicles, so that gave us the idea to combine them."

Owens calls them "the ultimate fantasy toy."

They became popular in Japan about 10 years ago with Bandai toy versions of Biomen, five television superheroes who drive block-like trucks and rockets that, when joined together, form a giant metallic warrior.

"Our most popular robots are those from television," Haga said.

Bandai, whose 1983 sales were the equivalent $260 million, and which today commands 60 percent of Japan's robot toy market, came out in 1982 with its "Machine Robot" line — miniature robots that cleverly convert into nearly every imaginable conveyance, including submarines, bulldozers, dune buggies and the American space shuttle.

Haga said he used to have about 100 stalkings about his apartment, "but the neighborhood kids came and took them all away."

Red Mountain's residents finally get land deeds

RED MOUNTAIN (AP) — Residents who have lived illegally in this silver mining town for up to 50 years are finally becoming property owners with the government's blessing.

After years of struggle, five residents received their deeds this month to property in this Mojave Desert community on U.S. 395, about 100 miles north of Los Angeles in northwestern San Bernardino County.

Most of the town's homes were built on Bureau of Land Management property after silver was discovered in the early 1920s. Some residents have been trying to get clear title since the late 1950s.

The federal land patents were personally delivered to the dozen or so residents by Gerald Hillier, district manager for the BLM office in Riverside.

The deeds grant surface rights to property but not mineral rights, which a local mining company owns.

Residents living closest to the Kelly Mine — which is considered the center of mining activity — won't get clear land title. Instead, they will receive letters saying the government doesn't object to their living on federal land if it doesn't interfere with mining activity.

Those residents comprise the opposition Red Mountain Townsite Association.

"Will you look at that?" shouted a surprised Harold Miller, the first resident to receive the land patent. "Oh, boy! What a deal, what a deal!"

Miller is a trustee of Red Mountain Residents, a group favoring the BLM offer. He said he has tried to get Red Mountain residents their deeds for the past three years.

"And I must say it was time well spent," he said. "We're going to have such a celebration!"

The patents range in size from just under a half-acre to about 2.8 acres. The average size is about a half-acre. Residents paid an average of $200 for their lots, although those fronting Highway 395 paid an extra 25 percent, Hillier said.

Mcleans said there are 45 applications still pending.

Educators explore 'responsible' student drinking

Fear college kids might use blackmail to continue to drink at campus parties

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — College deans and other campus leaders say the nationwide drive to adopt a 21-year-old legal drinking age is forcing them to crack down on some beer-soaked campus traditions.

The setting for this week's conference of 125 educators was appropriate: the student union at the University of Maryland, where this summer the student pub was converted into a bake shop.

The higher drinking age is already the law in almost half the states. Under a measure recently signed by President Reagan, the rest will be forced to increase the age to 21, from 18, 19 or 20, within two years unless they want to give up a share of their federal highway funds.

Campus officials who have winked at underage drinking in fraternities and football stadiums are now being faced with courts that are holding party organizers liable for fatal accidents caused by drunken students.

The depth of student emotion on the issue was demonstrated last week when 300 Illinois State University students and other youths clashed with police in Normal, Ill., to protest a law designed to curb loud campus parties.

The 125 educators attending the conference compared notes on how to encourage responsible drinking by students and to hear pledges of support from representatives of the major breweries.

The conference was organized by BACCHUS — Boost Alcohol Consiousness Concerning the Health of University Students — a project started at the University of Florida in 1976 that now has chapters at 180 colleges in the United States and Canada. The conference also marked the start of the first National Collegiate Alcohol Awareness Week.

Dennis C. Roberts, associate dean of students and director of housing at Southern Methodist University in Dallas, expressed fear that educators are being "blackmailed by students" saying, "Well, if you're not going to allow us to drink on campus, we'll drive drunk."

Roberts said he has misgivings about the age 21 bandwagon, saying that traffic statistics show that male drivers age 21-24 have just as high a rate of accidents as those age 18-20.

"Why not go to 25?" asked Roberts, whose own campus imposed a temporary ban on drinking this fall after problems with fraternities and sororities. The drinking age in Texas is 19.

Nancy Schulte, assistant director of residence life for Louisiana State University in Baton Rouge, a state with an age 18 law, said, "We in student affairs are doing lots as far as positive alcohol education, but one block away off campus there are all the bars with the 3-for-1 drinks every day and quarter-beer nights."

Some states lowered their drinking ages in the early 1970s when the voting age was lowered to 18. New Jersey and Maryland already have moved them back to 21. Wisconsin moved its age to 19 in July, and Arizona and Nebraska will move up to 21 in January from 19 and 20, respectively. Ohio moved its age to 19, but voters rejected a move to 21.

Gregory T. Moore, 24, president of a lobbying group called the U.S. Student Association, said the loss of jobs at pubs is a major concern for students. "It's totally unfair," he said.

"Prohibition didn't work in the 1930s, and prohibition from 18 to 21 won't work in this instance either."

Creativity linked to disorders

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Creativity and manic-depression are linked, and treating the disorder may rob artistic people of the natural "highs" that fuel their inspiration, a psychiatrist says.

"Clearly, having a mood disorder doesn't make you creative, but creative people may be helped along by some aspects of their mood disorders," said Dr. Kay Jamison, director of the University of California at Los Angeles' Affective Disorders Clinic.

Jamison studied 47 leading artists and writers at Oxford University and St. George's Hospital in London in 1982 and 1983. All were members of the Royal Academy, Britain's highest academic honor, and many had won other awards.

Jamison found through interviews and questionnaires that 38 percent of the subjects had sought treatment for depression or manic-depressive illness.

Only 1 or 2 percent of the general population seek treatment for such illnesses, although it is believed that 6 percent of all people suffer from them, she said.

"There is a very high rate of serious mood disorders in a group of some of the top writers in Great Britain," Jamison said. "It's a disproportionately high rate."

"It's been thought for a long, long time that there's a relationship between madness and creativity," she said. "That's been apocryphal for some time. I wanted to document the reasons why that may be so."

Jamison rattled off the names of world leaders and acclaimed artists who had exhibited mania, characterized by frenzied excitability followed by depression. Included were former British Prime Minister Winston Churchill and composer George Frederick Handel.

Whiz kids sometimes hard to spot

By the Associated Press

One of America's most precious natural resources is its population of gifted children, but the would-be whiz kids are not always easy to spot.

What to do about them poses another problem.

One figure often used to estimate the number of gifted children, according to the October issue of Town & Country, is the 1972 U.S. Office of Education figure that there are 2.5 million such children in the U.S., half of them unidentified.

That's not surprising, considering that Winston Churchill flunked sixth grade, Isaac Newton was a 14-year-old dropout and Charles Darwin quit medical school.

Bored and unchallenged, many superbrights do become dropouts, as was shown in a statewide Ohio study in the 1960s. It revealed that 3.5 percent of high school dropouts had IQs at or above 120. Other educators estimate that closer to 20 percent of dropouts may have superior ability.

"Most gifted children know that they are different by the time they are five," said Dr. Philip Powell, assistant professor of educational psychology at the University of Texas at Austin.

Powell, himself a gifted child who was reading and writing by age two, was placed in a class for retarded pupils because he showed so little interest in the classroom. Fortunately, his teacher recognized his abilities.

Back in 1972 the Office of Education defined gifted children as those "who by nature of outstanding abilities are capable of high performance."

The Office decided those abilities could be demonstrated in one or more of six categories: general intellectual ability, specific academic aptitude, leadership ability, ability in the visual or performing arts, creative thinking or psycho-motor ability.

The last category was dropped, according to Margaret Sirota, a teacher of the gifted at Wilton High School in Connecticut, when "someone figured out that meant the football team."

Donna Moore, a gifted pre-med student at Princeton, says of educating the gifted:

"Make sure they receive the best education, as early as possible. Involve them in extracurricular programs — athletics, drama, music, student government. School work should be emphasized, but not made a priority. Balance is essential."

Special education is not readily available. In 1976-77, reports Town & Country, only 28 states had allocated $54.4 million to programs for the gifted. Five years later, all 50 states were spending $161.4 million.

"The word 'gifted' still isn't winning any popularity prizes," says James Alvino, editor of the Gifted Children Newsletter, "but there is a new respect for 'excellence' in the air."

Rusting relics from WWII dot forgotten battle ground

By DEAN FOSDICK

Associated Press Writer

ATTU, Alaska — Frozen in time, protected by their remoteness, rusting relics from World War II litter the treeless landscape of this westernmost Aleutian island.

A .50-caliber machine gun mount stands in a pool of brackish water near Massacre Bay where it was placed more than 40 years ago to defend against low-flying Japanese planes.

A village of Quonset huts sits abandoned near a rocky beach, many with roofs open to the sky but furnished with broken-down desks and benches.

Cartridges lie sprinkled around foxholes on the fragile tundra of Engineer's Hill; cartridges left behind by a thin line of American troops who threw back Japanese infantrymen when they came screaming out of the fog with a final "banzai."

And a twin-engine Army pursuit plane that crash-landed after a mission more than four decades ago is a nesting place for birds near Temnac

Bay, a few miles and a mountain range west of a 33-man Coast Guard detachment.

Except for spawning salmon and a variety of waterfowl and wildlife, Coast Guardsmen have the island to themselves. Only about a half-dozen of the 279 islands in the volcanic Aleutian chain are inhabited and most are unspoiled.

Despite their isolation, the islands took on a strategic significance during the early days of World War II.

They curve like a bullet's arc toward mainland Alaska. Attu is 2,424 miles from Tokyo, 1,335 miles from Anchorage. That made it about 12 hours by bomber from the western Aleutians to wartime aircraft plants near Seattle.

Along with nearby Kiska, Attu is the only slice of the United States taken and held by enemy forces since the War of 1812.

One of the toughest campaigns of the war was fought for control of the Aleutians through 15 months of 1942 and 1943.

It resulted in the first theater-wide victory for the United States over the Japanese, and provided American military planners with a number of hard-earned lessons used in later amphibious operations.

Although the winds of war have blown over Attu and the rest of the thousand-mile-long Aleutian island chain, a campaign has just begun to save the relics from scavengers or from being scattered throughout the world.

A National Park Service advisory board is to meet in Boston on Oct. 22 to determine whether Attu should be included as a national landmark along with 20 other military or battlefield sites in the Pacific.

The list includes six other locations in Alaska — World War II bases or airfields at Kiska, Adak, Dutch Harbor, Kodiak, Sitka and Fairbanks, according to Erwin Thompson, a Denver-based historian who visited many of the sites and wrote the nominations.

While one agency of the federal government is considering giving the areas landmark status, another is launching a multi-million-dollar campaign to clear away some of the debris.

The cleanup is funded by the Defense Environmental Restoration Program and is aimed at ridding the sites of metal and concrete buildings, abandoned docks and wharves, remnants of fuel tank farms, vehicles, landing craft, anti-submarine netting and wooden utility poles, a spokesman said.

That has prompted some concern, however, among people who contend the cleanup could disturb the sites.

Retired Brig. Gen. Benjamin Talley, whose Army engineers built the 15 to 20 airfields used to launch attacks against the Japanese during the Aleutian campaign and who landed with the invasion force that eventually recaptured Attu, leans toward preservation.

"The monument of the battlefield is the carnage that's still there," said Talley, 81. "There's a strong move, and I think with some sense, not to disturb those things."

Teacher quits classroom to operate Nevada brothel

By TIM DAHLBERG

Associated Press Writer

PAHRUMP, Nev. (AP) — Russell Reade once directed the sex education program at a small high school in Northern California before quitting in frustration over low pay. Sex also has a lot to do with his new career but in a different way — he's now partner and manager of a thriving brothel in this farming community.

"I turned a few heads when I did this," Reade admitted. "But I just couldn't get paid what I was worth as a teacher and I was tired of knocking my head against the wall."

Until two years ago, Reade was chairman of the science department at Analy Union High School in Sebastopol, where he had taught biology and sociology for 15 years.

But, faced with constant problems financing supplies for his department and bitter over making only $25,000 a year, Reade decided to chuck, at least temporarily, his teaching career.

"High school could be so exciting and so challenging but it isn't," said Reade. "The most creative and brightest people won't settle for what the public will pay. I was one of them, a superior teacher, and I didn't get paid what I thought I was worth."

The idea of buying a brothel popped up in the Wall Street Journal, of all places. There, sandwiched in between brokerage ads and stock quotes, was an ad that caught the attention of Reade and his partner, wealthy childhood friend Kenneth Green.

"The ad said something like 'Legal in Nevada and good cash flow,'" Reade recalled. "We pursued it and researched it for a full six months before finally making the decision to buy."

What they bought for $1.1 million was the Chicken Ranch, probably the most lucrative brothel in Southern Nevada because of its proximity to Las Vegas. Located only 55 miles from the desert gambling resort, the Chicken Ranch garners the lion's share of tourists interested in legal prostitution.

To make it easier for would-be customers, the Chicken Ranch runs what Reade calls the "world's only free airline," employing two planes to shuttle prospects from Las Vegas to a landing strip adjacent to the brothel.

Others come by limousine or cab — a $175 roundtrip fare — to mingle with one of the 20 women ranging in age from 20 to 38 years old who work there. He says there is "always a waiting list" for women who want to work in the brothel.

"For those who choose to work in brothels, they know this is the Rolls Royce of brothels," he says. "We take good care of them, plus it is the closest brothel to Las Vegas which means it commands the highest fee."

Reade rejects the notion that his brothel exploits women, pointing to the fact they keep half of everything they make and are counseled on how to save and invest their earnings — which he says can be quite substantial.

"Since I used to be a school teacher, I've taken a unique approach to this business," he said. "We treat the working ladies with courtesy and respect and we put on training sessions with experts showing them tax planning and investment portfolios. We hope they can educate themselves and invest smartly so they can protect themselves past their prime years."

Reade, 43, divorced and the father of a grown son, admits he shocked quite a few people in rural Sebastopol when he quit teaching to become part-owner of the Chicken Ranch.

Some in the community have shunned him, but Reade, who lives now in a Parhump condominium, says others in his home town have taken it in stride.

"My friends are still my friends," he said. "They have a good time kidding me about it, some I think are envious."

Others, he adds, inquire about a discount at the brothel.

"I tell them if they show up at the door I'll make sure they get a good deal."

Some who have shown up at the door are former students who Reade says are "just curious about it" and also want to visit their old teacher.

"I've also had former students call me here and ask me to write job recommendations for them," he said.

Reade does not rule out a return to the teaching profession, something he admits he misses despite the fact he has tripled his income in his new career. Still, says Reade, he might have problems getting a teaching job again because of his present occupation.

"I'm not so sure anyone would really hire me anymore," he said. "I'm a very strong applicant but I wonder if there were only two applicants for the job, if they wouldn't take the other applicant?"

Lauchlan given bum rap because of unjust system

To the Editor:

In reply to E. Richards, Costa Mesa, Sept. 25, and all the other misinformed readers of your paper, I would like to set the record straight with a few facts as opposed to allegations and sensational headlines.

Before Officer William Lauchlan had a chance to say anything in his own defense and before he went on trial, the press and prosecution had returned their own verdict of guilty. All the public and would-be jurors ever saw were sensational headlines. E. Richards and you the editor were not present in court when one after another of the so-called "victims" took the stand and poured forth stories that were proved to be lies, and impossible to have taken place both physically and in the time span. No big black headlines told of these happenings nor were there photographs of the women who had lied.

Officer Lauchlan voluntarily took a polygraph test, given to him by a very reputable firm that specializes in polygraph examinations. All of his physiological responses were indicative of truthful answers. He pleaded not guilty to all charges. He also offered to take any other test the assistant district attorney could set up — but the assistant D.A. declined to take him up on it.

The "system" maintains that if a man insists on his innocence then he should be jailed because he is not remorseful. It would be a good idea if the "system" insisted that the accuser should take a polygraph test when there is no evidence and it is only one person's word against another. No one seems to have given a thought to the fact that these women were able to say whatever they liked, with no evidence to prove any of it.

On the one count that the jury returned a verdict of guilty, the girl had changed her story five times, but the jury were not aware of this fact because they were not in the court at the preliminary hearing and they did not see any of these people before they had been coached in their answers.

The jury were all people from areas where this story was front-page news for weeks — so they all probably had a preconceived idea of how they would vote.

How many of you men and officers out there are thinking, "There but for the grace of God go I?"

The case in question, this officer is a good husband and an excellent father and a first-rate officer — with many letters of recommendation to his credit. In the one year he was with Costa Mesa Police Department he saved four lives — a lady in a burning car, a tiny baby who had stopped breathing and two small children from a burning house.

Not only has this officer lost his livelihood, his character and any prospects of a future career, he has lost his wife and children and his home. There is no easy way for him to start over again. Included in all this heartbreak are his parents and his family, who also have to sell their home and everything they have worked hard for all their lives to pay for the legal expenses. There is no easy way for them to start over at this stage of their lives.

I feel strongly that only people in a position of knowing the facts should be allowed to express their opinion in public or criticize and I know there are not too many of you in this case because on his family and friends bothered to listen to the facts in court. They are the people who still believe in him and are standing by him.

Populist party offers a choice

To the Editor:

There is a new political party active in America today. It is organized in every state and is on the ballot of nearly half of them, including California. This is the Populist Party and its candidates for president and vice president are Bob Richards of Waco, Texas and Maureen Kennedy Salaman of San Francisco.

Bob Richards is best known as a two-time Olympic gold medal winner in pole vaulting. A former college professor, Richards is now a successful businessman in oil and real estate. His life and work have been depicted in numerous radio and TV documentaries. Richards has served as a presidentially appointed goodwill ambassador to Asia.

Maureen Kennedy Salaman is a radio and television personality, editor, author and longtime advocate of freedom of choice in medical care and nutrition. She is president of the 100,000-member National Health Federation and has been active in Project Freedom, an organization that has led the fight for a full accounting of American servicemen missing in action.

Richards and Salaman are asking the American people to rally behind the Populist Party platform. The basic premise of the platform is this: "Power to the people — not to the special interests." The Populist Party places America first.

The party recognizes that the state of the economy is the No. 1 concern to many Americans, and has laid out a platform that forthrightly offers bold solutions to problems the major parties ignore:

- Enact fair tariff laws to protect American jobs and industry from foreign competition.

- Restrict immigration to protect employment for American workers. No amnesty to illegal aliens.

- Repudiate the ever-skyrocketing national debt, except federal debt held by investors who have actually paid for government securities with money they have earned.

- Revitalize the family farm and encourage public support for American farmers. Provide parity to family farmers and support development of fuels derived from farm commodities, thus reducing our dependency on foreign oil.

- Restore to Congress the authority to coin money and regulate the value thereof. Abolish the privately owned Federal Reserve System, which creates high interest rates for the personal profits of the international bankers.

- The Populist Party believes that a strong economy at home and peaceful dealing with all nations will place America first.

Those interested in helping the Populist Party in California should contact: American Independent Party, P.O. Box 427, Lemon Grove, CA 92045 (619) 460-4484 Chairman Eileen Shearer.

The Populist Party National Committee (membership $10 per year) may be contacted at P.O. Box 76737, Washington, D.C. 20013, or at (202) 546-5530.

It's the Year of the Pig in Congress, where lawmakers lack courage to cut

WASHINGTON — The thing was done in the early hours of Oct. 3. Senator James McClure, Republican of Idaho, a candidate for majority leader, cajoled his colleagues into a voice vote on a tiny amendment to the continuing resolution to keep the U.S. government in operation.

The amendment would forgive The John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts, playmen of the Washington sparkles, of all $33 million in back interest owed the American people, and forgive, in advance, the next 33 years in interest payments on a $20 million loan you and I made to the Kennedy Center for a parking lot years ago.

Guy V. Molinari, Republican of New York, described the bailout: "It is a rather sad episode and Senator McClure is going to have to answer for his own actions ... How do we, with all the rhetoric and nonsense over deficits and a balanced budget, justify this in advance — a total giveaway?"

"They became pigs," the angry conservative fumed about the elite who run Kennedy Center; they "said they had friends on the Hill who could solve this for them." Unfortunately, they were right.

Among the Draconian measures Molinari and colleagues Clay Shaw and Gerald Solomon had in mind to require Kennedy Center patrons to pay more of the cost of their own entertainment was a hike from $3 to $4 in the price of nightly parking for programming on PBS. From the howls on that one, you would have thought Ed Meese just up-ended the portable soup kitchen that prowls the White House neighborhood.

What does this suggest? Only this — despite the campaign rhetoric about the "deficit crisis," business is going on very much as usual at the grand bazaar on Capitol Hill.

Here are a few excerpts from inside this story deep inside this morning's paper: "Reagan tried to eliminate the community service block grant ... but Congress approved $374 million ... Reagan tried to eliminate the work incentives program ... but Congress approved $270 million ... Reagan sought $115 million to train health professionals, but Congress approved $234.5 million ... the funds included a big boost for nursing programs, including fellowships and research grants for which Reagan sought $14 million and Congress approved $66.7 million ... Congress increased a block grant for maternal and child care from $399 million last year to $478 million. Congress also approved sizable increases for the National Institute of Health, where the administration had sought to hold the line ...

So much for the spirit of sacrifice in America's capital in 1984.

While the Kennedy Center bailout is immense, in terms of the institution's size, it is piddling alongside the administration's bailout of Continental Illinois, where, at last report, the U.S. taxpayer will have to come across with perhaps $3.5 billion to make whole the idiocies of the bubbleheads who ran into the ground America's seventh largest bank.

While the Kennedy Center raid appears to have succeeded, the glitterati were rebuffed in an earlier run at the Treasury. Several weeks ago, President Reagan, showing some moxy, vetoed a huge increase in funding for the elite's television programming on PBS. From the howls on that one, you would have thought Ed Meese just up-ended the portable soup kitchen that prowls the White House neighborhood.

Reagan: Is he past his prime?

Nation needs to know whether he's still fit

WASHINGTON — Irwin "Tubby" Harrison, a Democratic pollster, has the wrong nickname. It should be "tasteless." Harrison is quoted in the Wall Street Journal, exulting over Ronald Reagan's performance in his debate with Walter Mondale: "It takes away that macho image. He's an old man." Shame on you, Tubby.

If Reagan is slowing down, if at 73 he's slipping off to senility, is occasionally befuddled, unable to come up with the precise word and verbally treads water by repeating himself, it's indeed a cause for concern and should be discussed. He is, after all, the president and the job calls for mental acuity. The effects of old age are not a trivial prospect and after the recent debate the American people have to face up to it.

But doubts concerning Reagan's age should be no cause for glee in the Democratic camp. In the first place, we all have our off nights. Maybe Reagan did not sleep well. Maybe he ate something that disagreed with him. Maybe, for some unexplainable reason, he simply was not himself. The president and I share the same birth date, Feb. 6, and maybe that explains why I, 30 years younger than he, sometimes can't remember what happened five minutes ago. I am the one, after all, who once left my office to go to lunch, remembered to check my appointment book, returned to my office — and forgot why I had come back.

Secondly, if Reagan is handicapped by his age then that is just plain sad. The man has accomplished an awful lot in his life. He entered politics late, a second or maybe third career for him, and it would be tragic if time — sheer age — robbed him of the chance to complete his work. No one who has read my column would accuse me of being a Reagan fan, but that does not mean that I — or countless others like me — want fate to do what in all fairness Walter Mondale should be able to do on his own.

But life, as John Kennedy once observed, is not fair and there remains the possibility that Reagan is alarmingly past his prime. If that's the case, there's nothing anyone can do about it. No amount of wishing can change matters — and no amount of naps or lackadaisical schedules can turn back the clock. There will be times when world events, and not Mike Deaver, will control Reagan's schedule and the nation can ill afford to have a president who's literally asleep at the helm.

There have been suggestions that the president undergo tests for senility — and make the results public. One of those tests entails doing mental feats such as counting backward from 100 by sevens. I tried that, got to 93 and gave up, concluding that's why the Japanese make calculators. I could not blame Reagan if he took that suggestion, placed it on his woodpile and chopped it to pieces.

But the real test — the test of the presidency itself — is performance. If the president and the men around him really want to put the age issue to rest, they ought to spring Reagan from the Deaver-Baker-Darman bubble and show us what he can do. Let's see him really campaign. Let's see him make more than two stops a day. But most of all, let's see how the president performs if, like Mondale — like almost any candidate in memory — he takes questions from the traveling press. Then and only then will the voters know if President Reagan is up to the job he seeks.

So far, though, Reagan has conducted no such campaign. His re-election effort has been a succession of staged events — of balloon barrages and flag waving and hearty smiles for the television cameras. That kind of campaign tells us all the things we either know already or don't need to know at all — that Reagan is personable, that he's a master at pageantry, that he's a wonderful grand master of any parade. What we don't know is if he's worth a damn after four in the afternoon.

But after Louisville, that is the preeminent question — or one of them. The president is 73 now, 74 in February and will be nearly 78 at the end of the next term. The issue of age is a serious one, not beyond politics (because nothing is), but beyond cheap shots. Only Ronald Reagan himself can put it to rest. Let Reagan be Reagan. And let us see exactly what that is.

Mondale's flying liquor tab hefty — unpaid — $1,600

Audit uncovers sloppy bookkeeping, longstanding debt by then-VP Mondale

WASHINGTON — Along with the standard subjects of insoluble bar-room debates — Would Jack Dempsey have licked Joe Louis? Could a lion beat a tiger? — here's another conundrum the boys might want to kick around between the halves: Which is worse, a deadbeat or a moocher?

The question arises from an internal audit of the 89th Military Airlift Wing's in-flight fund, which covers the liquor consumed aboard Air Force Two by recent vice presidents and their drinking buddies. It turns out that Walter Mondale ran up an unpaid tab of $1,579.81. As for the incumbent, George Bush's airborne bar bill is picked up by the Republican National Committee.

My associates Tony Capaccio and Donald Goldberg obtained a copy of an internal audit of the 89th, the elite Air Force outfit that's responsible for ferrying presidents, vice presidents and other VIPs around the world. The ledgers on Air Force Two appear to have been sloppily kept.

About that dusty, yellowing Mondale tab: Unlike your average corner saloon, Air Force Two allows its distinguished patrons to sign for their purchases and pay later. There was a built-in collection problem with Mondale, though: Once he left office, he naturally stopped coming around to the flying tavern, where he could have been presented with his outstanding bill.

But the keepers of the books were unwilling to be stiffed indefinitely by their fallen-away customer. Minutes of a meeting of Air Force financial officers in March 1983 contain a notation that "since Walter Mondale is now a presidential candidate" the tab could be sent to his campaign headquarters. "Hopefully the bill will be settled," the minutes added. Monthly reports since then indicate Mondale postponed payments on the bar bill until my office began making inquiries.

A Bush campaign official was reluctant to discuss the vice president's Air Force Two liquor bills. "I don't think we want to get into that," a Bush aide said. She asserted that the money involved was "not very much." The Air Force auditors disagree. Worrying about potential abuse in the plane's liquor dispensary, they wrote in a June 1983 audit: "The stewards were not maintaining adequate controls over the Air Force Two liquor inventory. This liquor was purchased by the Republican National Committee for Air Force Two missions and was of significant value."

Indeed, during 1981, when the Republican National Committee first began stocking the bar aboard Bush's plane, $5,000 was spent on food and liquor. One purchase tracked through campaign records showed an expenditure of $1,816.43 to a liquor store near Andrews Air Force Base for "supplies." "We could not determine whether the disposition of the liquor inventory was proper," the auditors complained.

One mystery involving four missing cases of Smirnoff vodka remains unsolved. The auditors followed the paper trail through the Andrews officers' club, the 89th Military Airlift Wing, the Presidential Pilot's Office and finally the White House Staff Mess, which paid for the missing vodka.

The auditors reported: "We attempted to contact the individual who signed the check, but were unsuccessful." At least Mondale is in the clear on this one.

Footnote: A Republican National Committee spokesman explained that the committee picks up the vice president's liquor tab to avoid charges that public funds are being used for entertaining.

Size is Tijuana's claim to fame

Largest city on the West Coast is Los Angeles, true. You want to win a small wager? Bet the fellow on the next stool he can't name the second and third largest. They're Vancouver, Canada, and Tijuana, Mexico.

Army dependents of old — wives, children and that group of ladies known as camp followers — long were classified in the military transport records as "baggage." Unkind though it be, the word is still in the vernacular

New career blooming for arts patron

Decorating at social benefits leads to start of Flowerworks

By VIDA DEAN
Daily Pilot Style Editor

It took Barbara Glabman a few years and a couple of moves before she really got into the pace of Orange County living; but after five years, she has made her mark.

The original quest of a lifestyle change from Beverly Hills to the "Green Acres" of San Juan Capistrano was a battle lost to the gophers. So while San Juan lost a "farmer," Newport Beach gained an artistic designer, a stickler for perfection.

"We wanted a different lifestyle," said Barbara, explaining the 1979 move from Beverly Hills to San Juan. "I would have an opportunity to be a farmer with fruit trees and vegetables. But the gophers were too much. Besides, although the lots around us had been sold, nobody was moving in, and we couldn't find anything to get involved with.

"I was beginning to feel like Bill Murray in 'Caddy Shack,' that movie really hit home. I was out every morning fighting gophers and field mice."

So after another move to try life on the peninsula, the Glabmans — Barbara, husband Jim and sons Brian, 17, and Bart, 15, — found their ideal spot in Dover Shores.

"It's perfect here and the space is controllable. I can still do limited gardening with fruit trees and flowers. I like everything to look perfect like Disneyland."

by Richard Koehler

And, there was no problem finding involvement — Barbara, a fine arts graduate of University of Southern California is on the board of the Fine Arts Patrons of Newport Harbor Art Museum, a member of the Sophisticates, an ATSC support group, and an officer in the Sound of Music chapter of the Orange County Performing Arts Center. She and her husband are founders.

The Glabmans are also active in the Hoag 552 Club, Golden Circle members at South Coast Repertory Theatre and Sherman Gardens where she was an officer of the Volunteer Association for two years.

"Four months ago I felt I needed something more to do. My sons had reached the self-sufficient stage — Brian is now a senior at Newport Harbor High School and Bart is a sophomore at Culver Academy in Indiana — and it was time for me to get on with it."

"Flowers had always been my hobby. I had always done my own floral arrangements and served on organization decorating committees. (Just recently she was in charge of decorations for 552 Club's western party). Friends complimented me on the flowers in my home."

The hobby has turned into a business —

"I'm very excited about Flowerworks and I'm not treating it as a hobby. I call myself a 'good time floral designer.' I love to do weddings and I don't do funerals," Barbara explained.

"I will go to a person's home and do all of the flowers for the whole house for a party. If they want me to I will do the table and provide props. I don't have a shop, because I don't do individual arrangements."

She also does custom silk flower and dried arrangements. Samples of her work are on display in the room settings at one of her husband's four stores.

LOOKING GOOD

Visit Beautylab, use makeup often, listen once

"We definitely make the world's best products," says Ida Stewart, vice president of the Estee Lauder Co. and special assistant to Mrs. Lauder. "But, they won't do a woman the slightest bid of good unless she uses them regularly and properly!"

Stewart will be at Robinson's, Newport Beach, from noon to 3 p.m. Tuesday, to make sure customers know the proper way to apply EL makeup and skin care products (and, of course, to encourage them to use regularly).

"Cosmetics are actually a form of good manners. Helping a woman to present her best face can ease relations between people. Good skin care and the right makeup indicate a healthy self-esteem and respect for others. I'm important enough to bother ... and you are important enough for me to bother ... and your caring for me makes me feel important," Stewart explains.

"What I try to do is encourage women ... to inspire them to feel good about themselves and their life and encourage them to get on with it. Mrs. Lauder has always believed this."

"One reason Estee Lauder has been so successful is because of her understanding of people and their need for quality. This understanding has given her a unique perspective on cosmetics. Mrs. Lauder once looked at a woman with deep facial lines and told her that the problem was in her feet, not her face. What she recommended was a pair of comfortable shoes."

"I love to demonstrate both ideas and products," says Stewart, "and help people with their questions."

Stewart, who has been with the Lauder Co. since 1958 (and is considered Mrs. Lauder's right hand), is headlining Robinson's all-week Beautylab '84 which will feature in-store seminars, makeup demonstrations and color analysis.

Additional Beautylab highlights include a Saturday presentation from 1 to 2:30 p.m. by professional makeup artists from Ralph Lauren, focusing on how to coordinate wardrobe and makeup colors for a pulled-together, polished look. There is a $20 reservation fee, which is applicable toward the purchase of Lauren cosmetics. Reservations may be made by calling the executive secretary at the store.

On Friday, from 11:30 a.m. to 7:30 p.m., individual color analyses will be offered by Ultiime II experts. This requires a $15 reservation fee, also applicable toward purchase.

Other companies, too — Borghese, Chanel, Charles of the Ritz, Dior, Clinique, Elizabeth Arden, Germaine Monteil, Irma Shorell, Lancaster, Lancome, Orlane, Payot and Stendahl will have representatives available to help interested woman put the finishing touch on their fall fashion look.

Now, if you want to find out some of the beauty secrets of the stars, here's your opportunity. Wayne Massarelli (I'm told he's the top celebrity makeup artist in the world) will be at May Co., South Coast Plaza on Wednesday to present a 6:30 to 8 p.m. seminar in the restaurant. His clients include Donna Mills, Farrah Fawcett, Cheryl Ladd, Nancy Reagan, Victoria Principal, Sheena Easton and many more.

The seminars also will feature experts with the latest "how-to's" of fashion. There is a $5 fee for the event (includes a light supper and 10 percent discount coupon). Prepaid advance reservations are required and may be made by calling the store's executive office.

"It's so easy to look nice if you listen just once."

Makeup artist Richard Stevens made that statement shortly after he arrived in Orange County in 1981 from the Midwest. In an early Looking Good column, Richard said he wanted to educate women from the neck up through makeup application and lectures.

He began in the county by doing makeup in clients' living rooms and eventually established himself (in '82) at Andrea's in Corona del Mar and appeared on cable television.

This week he called to say he's moving on at the end of the month ... to Beverly Hills. On Nov. 1 he will open the Richard Stevens Cosmetic Studio on Robertson.

One of my favorite tips from Stevens that comes into play every morning was mascara application — "Apply mascara with the tip of the wand after the excess has been removed. As it dries the lashes can be separated with the wand." (He also said don't spend a lot of money on mascara. "The cheapest will stay on if your lashes are oil free.")

FIND BEAUTY, FREEDOM

Estee Lauder offers her do's and don'ts on how to be in control:

• DO STRIVE for a positive attitude, exuberance (and that includes the best of health), excellent beauty habits — with some exercise every day, mental as well as physical. There is nothing so beautiful as a well-adjusted mind and body!

• DO LEARN to use makeup properly — to blend colors.

• DO ASK yourself: Which do I take better care of — my skin or my pots and pans? A husband doesn't inspect the saucepans, but he does like to look at you!

• DO UNCLUTTER your life — closets, cupboards and your mind. Get rid of clothes you don't wear, dabs of cream, worn out compacts, outmoded thoughts. You will gain a wonderful new sense of freedom.

• DO LEARN to accept things as they are — the weather, a late plane, aging. Acknowledge compliments simply and gracefully. Never say "I can't wear that," "I can't cook" or "I look awful in green." Learn to live up to your highest potential. With the right makeup, you too can wear green!

• DO REMEMBER that the good life is not just for other people. It's for you!

• DO ENJOY the rainbow and let the pot of gold find you, and you can make each day a glorious, rich, bountiful experience.

• DO DON'T DECORATE your face the way you do a room or garden — with a splotch of color here, a dab there.

• DO DON'T LOOK for magic from anything — whether it's a cream or a perfume. Have a plan, a program and follow it faithfully. You'll find magic along the way.

• DO DON'T FALL into the I-don't-have-time syndrome. It's a cop-out. If you care enough, you'll find time!

FASHION CALENDAR

CAREER BLOOMS...
From B1

Although Barbara's floral designing has become a vocation, she manages time for hobbies. Gardening still remains the major one, but cooking and eating come next on the list and she writes a monthly restaurant column.

"I'm developing an interest in wine — learning from visits to wineries, tastings, classes and auctions," she added.

She does some free-lance interior designing and is a collector — she and Jim collect picture frames, antique walking sticks, ink bottles and boxes. "I like boxes — silver ones and tortoise. Whenever we travel I love to visit flea markets and poke around."

Other interests include art — primitive African and pre-Columbian and contemporary and Chinese porcelain. "Also, ballet and theater," said Barbara, adding, "that's the reason I love New York." (She returned today from her most recent trip there.)

When she's shopping for clothes, Barbara says she looks for styles that are comfortable and easy to wear.

"I love soft fabrics like silk and cashmere. I'm a contemporary woman who likes simplicity and elegance with classic lines." And, yet, she's not totally opposed to dramatic clothes and knock-'em-dead dresses.

Designer criticized for quote

MILAN, Italy (AP) — A description by designer Karl Lagerfeld of his new collection as "shaped to be raped" created a small tempest at the Italian ready-to-wear shows in Milan last week.

The controversial phrase was in an English-language press release handed out at the Fendi spring-summer presentation.

To the German-born Lagerfeld, the designer behind the Fendi label, the phrase is only a "word game" he "can't resist" playing.

But many found nothing playful in the line. "Perhaps he said it to be cute, but that kind of cuteness was out with high buttoned shoes," said Lorrie Eyerly, fashion director of New York's Frederick Atkison company.

Some said the line was evidence that the new sexy look of mini skirts, shorts and see-through fabrics being shown in Milan for next year's warmer weather could indeed incite trouble.

A few attributed the unfortunate phrase to male insensitivity.

Join tour

A shopping excursion to the Los Angeles Garment District will be conducted Saturday, Nov. 10, by Orange Coast College's Community Service Office. Registration deadline is Friday, Oct. 26.

The $25 fee includes transportation and informative handouts about the district, provided by the tour escort. Shoppers will find summer fashions on sale as well as fall specials.

A bus will depart OCC's Auditorium Circle at 8:30 a.m. and return about 4 p.m.

To buy tickets, go to OCC's Community Service Office in the Student Center Building on the campus at 2701 Fairview Road, Costa Mesa, from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. weekdays and 8 a.m. to noon Saturdays, or phone 432-5527.

Blonde bombshell puzzles Las Socias

As Burt Reynolds look-alike promotes movie's premiere

By VIDA DEAN
Daily Pilot Style Editor

Volunteer models mingled with the 440 guests during the social hour at the Las Socias (women's auxiliary of New Directions) fashion show and discussed the Hollywood costumes they would wear later — all except one.

"I'm to be a surprise," said Judie Argyros, hiding out backstage at the Westin South Coast Plaza Hotel in a blonde wig ready to do a Marilyn Monroe routine. "Don't tell anyone," she added as Dolores Virtue (Maria Montez) and Jackie Rodgers (Jean Harlow) were showing off their costumes.

When Judie came on stage, (George was smiling) everyone was asking "Who is this?" as she strutted about looking like MM's double.

Las Socias Founder Dot Clegg out "Claudette" Colbert; Jan Baker was Betty Grable; Diane Rinker, show chairman, was wearing a Rita Hayworth costume and Hyla Berte was outfitted in one of Greer Garson's gowns.

Others showing off gowns from the Hollywood Museum were Jan Baker, Jean Klug, Carolyn Shea, Sandy Van Landingham and Sarah Nicol (her husband is chairman of the ND board.)

Recently there's been a lot of interest in gowns worn by the stars — Sandpipers and the Laguna Philharmonic went Hollywood and then the Las Socias. "There's even more interest in foreign countries," said John LeBold of the museum, who has taken the fashions around the world through a government exchange program. "People went crazy over Greta Garbo's handkerchief in Russia."

The event also featured fashions from Saks Fifth Avenue presented by Billie Wallerich.

"I don't want to look like a man," said one guest as menswear styles were shown. "The question would be 'Who is going to wear the suit and the wingtip shoes today — you or your husband?'"

With the well-received designer suits, gowns and Revillon furs there was no such question.

This, Las Socias' second fashion show, is expected to raise $30,000 for New Directions (residential recovery home for women with chemical dependencies). Nancy Reagan was honorary chairman (not there, but lending her name) for the affair.

Those that did show included Nancy Hines, Junior League president; Linda Tucker, president of the Dolphins; Harry Rinker, William Baker, chairman of the board of Del Taco (an underwriter along with Rinker and the Irvine Co.), Catherine Thyen, Cecce Presley, Emma Jane (former Las Socias president) and Tom Riley, Terry Kymla, Maria Crutcher, Virginia Zenz and Harriet Pfleger.

The Old West came to life again for 200 guests at an Orange County Master Chorale benefit at the ranch estate of Gayle and Robert Anderson in Orange Park Acres.

Ranch Foreman Willie Moreno added excitement to the evening with a demonstration of his roping and riding skills and the cowboys and cowgirls had the opportunity to stroll around "town" with its store fronts, saloon, casino and pose for a complimentary Old Tyme Photo.

Huntington Beach Mayor Jack Kelly was emcee for the entertainment which featured the Californians (during the chuckwagon dinner), soloist Mic Bell, The Reinsmen (with a country flavor) with the O.K. Chorale Can-Can dancers adding a little "spice."

Lucky players (blackjack, craps and roulette) won donated prizes. The biggie was an original oil painting by Laguna Niguel artist, Robert Schaar, won by Ward and Fran Wiseman.

Donna Bunce, committee chairman said, "We may have started a tradition tonight. Now I know how the West was won." The honorary committee included Irene and Jim Bentley, Patricia Fredricks, Jacque and Robert Heebner, Nora and Vin Jorgensen, Helma and Jim Nagamatsu, Elaine and Bill Redfield, Floss and Ed Schumacher, Jeanette and Hal Segerstrom, Don and Judy Oliphant and unable to make it Dolly and Don Karcher.

Master Chorale Director Maurice Allard is a good guy and had on the white hat to prove it; Nick O'Malley, Nicole Raate and Gerry Wakeland were greeting guests and Supervisor Harratt and Irv Wieder were having a good time chatting with Jack Youngblood of the Rams. Others partying western style were Costa Mesa Mayor Donn and Jean Hall, Councilwoman Norma Hertzog, with daughter Carolyn and Kathleen and Michael Lawler.

Laguna Niguel Chamber of Commerce members gave their monthly get-together an Oriental flavor. (Members Charles and Charlene Neal were wearing gorgeous kimonos). A variety of hors d'oeuvres — shrimp tempura, egg rolls and won tons — were available on the 30-foot table at the El Niguel Country Club with the chef cooking them up hot for the 125 guests.

"We have 400 members and meet in a different place each month for our mixers," said Charlene (she and her husband are investment advisors). "Although Laguna Niguel is not incorporated, we are a feeling chamber with a lot of community spirit and a concern for the total community."

Others there included Realtor Don Beckenbaugh, Bill and Jean Peters (Monarch Restaurant Corp.) the Billy Birds (he's with Deck City), gourmet shop owner Cheryl Moore, Ray Averett and wife Glory (both in real estate associated with Coldwell Bankers), Burt Meyers, vice president of the chamber, Gary and Margot Knight, Jim Krembas, Kathy and Allan Usevich (Travel Accommodations), Dale Yearout (Edison) and actress Cindy Vance.

"I'm better looking and younger than Burt Reynolds," said the star's look-alike Fred Leaf at the American Diabetes Association fashion show in the Ritz-Carlton. "Burt said the same thing," Leaf added.

But, it will be the real star featured in "City Heat" along with Clint Eastwood when ADA sponsors the movie's premiere at a fund-raiser Dec. 5 at Newport Cinema.

The Sundial Fashions show attended by 262 officially launched the promotion of the premiere which opens simultaneously with the Los Angeles ADA group.

Bunny Pero, show chairman, also will be in charge of the premiere, which includes a dinner dance at the Hotel Meridien.

Fashions they saw (Leaf was flirting with all the models) included everything from sportswear and city dressing to evening wear with accessories (beaded bags, jewelry, belts) nearly stealing the show.

Is that Burt Reynolds kissing Floss Schumacher at preview for movie premiere?

Fashion show and premiere chairman Bunny Pero stops by Jean Tandowsky's table.

Donna Hardy and Melanie Singer saw favorites among the fashions paraded.

Helene Chazan and Sherry Johnston supported American Diabetes Association.

Pink Panther, Winners, Peacock Alley present fun

By VIDA DEAN
Daily Pilot Style Editor

The Pink Panther will strike again ... Sunday, Oct. 21, SCOOP (that's the South Coast Organization of Planned Parenthood) will gather for an evening of fun at the Newport Resort.

It's California casual attire for the 6-to-11 p.m. event with gourmet dining and dancing on the schedule.

The all-male Winners' Circle of South Coast Medical Center has set its third annual charity ball for Oct. 26. The black-tie event will be in the Ritz-Carlton Hotel and Joe Moshay and his orchestra will provide the music. (I remember last year's ball and these "winners" and their ladies are great dancers.)

A few of the men working out party details are Don Beckenbaugh, ball chairman; John Lawson, patron co-chairman and Thomas Lowe, invitation chairman. All proceeds will help underwrite the cost of major medical equipment at the South Laguna hospital. Beckenbaugh can be reached at 643-2505.

Another organization going to the Ritz-Carlton ... Holy Family Madreiras Auxiliary members and guests will be there Saturday for the 20th annual Peacock Alley fashion show. Fantastic door prizes ... including a mink jacket donated by M. Jacques, a designer dress from

Estella Allardale plus others. The Mmes. Beverly Tuttle, Carl Holmberg, Russell Davis, Frank Tharin, Clifford Anderson Jr., L. Dale Huffman, Henry Ultman, Anthony Telich and Robert Segal are in charge of arrangements. (Small in number (31), this group does a big show and makes a large sum each year for Holy Family.)

Accomplishments extraordinaire ... Florence Brooks started a new career at the age of 65. Inspired by Miss Lillian Carter, Brooks joined the Peace Corps as a volunteer and was assigned to Lesotho (South Africa), lived in a mud hut, dug walls and floors, no electricity or running water and "loved every minute of it."

The Seattle woman, who is now 72 and a recruiting specialist for the Peace Corps in Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Alaska, will be at the Balboa Bay Club on Wednesday for the Fashionables' meeting. Her "Life Begins When You Want It To" program is scheduled after an 11 a.m. reception and luncheon.

Friends of Brooks wishing to attend may call Mildred Mead at 673-3438 on Monday for reservations.

("A lot of people here know Florence," Mildred said.) Brooks, the widow of Long Beach attorney John Brooks, was very active in social events. She will address James Roosevelt's Institute at Chapman College on Thursday.

Hell's nicer these days

Thousands of tourists go to Hell each year.

They stare, awed by the blackened and jagged rock formation that gives the little district its unusual name. And they send letters and cards to friends with the "Hell" postmark clearly stamped on the back, and greetings like, "This is a Hell of a place," or, "You saw me in Hell first."

Hell can be found on the Grand Cayman, the British Crown Colony located 480 miles south of Miami. For the tourists who visit the island for its renowned white-sand beaches and first-class diving, Hell is a popular side trip.

And now it is getting a $24,000 facelift to make it more respectable. Christened in the 1930's by Alan Cardinal, the Commissioner on the island, Hell's intriguing formation, which resembles the charred remains of a hell fire, is a weathered form of the local rock, ironshore.

Common around the island, but in a less dramatic form, ironshore is made up of eroded material from the cliff-like limestone formations, coral reef remains and shells which grew in shallow water and were cemented together over time.

In 1962, Hell opened its own district post-office for tourists who wanted to mark their visit officially. It was operated from the home of a local resident, Janet Parsons (a name common in the Hell district).

Now the Cayman Islands Government has allocated $24,000 to a beautification program. A new post office, with beds of tropical plants, has been built, along with three shops which will sell local crafts. A boardwalk has also been built to provide better access to the Hell formation. Previously, the only viewing point was at the local bar, Club Inferno, which is run by the McDoom family.

through January 7.

Cost of the trip is $1,286. The fee includes roundtrip airfare, superior tourist class hotels, daily continental breakfasts, a medieval banquet, a farewell dinner, four plays, a city tour, the tour is set to run December 27 tours of museums and art galleries, and an eight-day Explorer pass.

Tour leaders are Golden West College professors Brian E. Conley and Judith Ackley.

Conley, a GWC art professor, has done advanced study in London and Geneva. He conducts classes at U.C. Irvine on the history and appreciation of prints, and the business of art. He also serves as an art consultant for museums, galleries, and an international corporation.

Ackley has done graduate work in British theatre, and has led tour groups to theatre performances in Los Angeles, New York, and the Ashland Shakespeare Festival in Ashland, Oregon. She is thoroughly steeped in London's theatre scene.

Highlights of the tour will include visits to the National Theatre, Covent Garden, the Tate Gallery, and the British Museum. A New Year's Eve dinner and party will be held at London's famous Beefeaters, with its roasting medieval theme.

For information about the tour, phone 834-9225 or 892-7711.

• To take advantage of discounts, always make reservations for ground transportation, including trains and auto rentals, ahead of time.

• Before traveling to foreign countries, find out the names of English-language physicians in the area where you'll be staying.

• Carefully weigh the pros and cons of advance hotel reservations — and prepare accordingly.

• Travel with one suitcase — lightly packed.

• Try networking: Arrange ahead of time to meet people at your destination through friends, associates or organizations.

With the booming dollar and rebounding economy, more Americans than ever are packing their bags and taking off for their favorite travel spots.

But, says travel authority Arthur Frommer, author of "Europe on $5 a Day," the travel explosion also may mean an explosion in travel mistakes. Too many people still do not properly prepare for their vacations.

"This is unfortunate," according to Frommer, "because intelligent travel preparation is neither difficult nor particularly time-consuming and will add immeasurably to one's enjoyment and peace-of-mind."

Frommer has summarized what he believes are the seven most basic travel preparation steps in a brochure published by Citicorp Travelers Checks, "The Seven Secrets of Smart Travel."

According to Frommer, who has authored more than 40 travel guides, the seven secrets are:

DEAR READERS: We have had many requests over the years for those hands we consider to be our favorites. That makes quite a list. Opening lead: King of ♦.

The Ten of Spades was obviously used to the better things in life. He sat by the side of the pool and sipped at a mint julep as he reminisced with some old friends.

"It was a strange hand," he mused. "We were going to make our contract if I won a trick and, as it developed, we would also make it if I did not.

"To start matters off, I found myself in the unusual position of being one of the lowest cards South held. Naturally, he opened the bidding with two clubs and received a negative response of two no trump. He introduced his second suit and, after North took a preference to clubs, he went on to game.

"West led the king of hearts and East signaled with the queen. West dutifully continued with a low heart and declarer wisely took the precaution of ruffing high. He led his low trump to the table's nine and ruffed another heart to strip that suit from dummy. Now declarer cashed a high trump.

"Had either defender failed to follow, declarer would have had to rely on something good happening in spades or a successful finesse of the diamond queen. But when both defenders followed to the second trump, the hand became a cinch.

"Declarer continued by cashing the king-queen of spades. Had the knave dropped, he would have used me to ruff a diamond from the table, conceded a diamond and ruffed a diamond for his contract. When the dastard did not appear, declarer led a low spade from the board. Had East followed low, I would have been finessed. Should I win, declarer has his diamond discard. If West captures me with his jack, he is end played. When East showed out, declarer led me and allowed West to capture me with his jack as a diamond was shuffled from dummy. West was forced either to lead a diamond into declarer's A-Q, or else lead a ruff-suff by leading a heart. Either way the contract was safe.

"This hand occurred in a major team championship. At the other table the declarer did not appreciate the niceties of the end position. He ruffed me in dummy and led a diamond, but when East alertly inserted the eight of diamonds, declarer had to lose two diamond tricks for down one."

Writer relives nightmare of crash with drunk driver

LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I've never written to you before, but this isn't really a letter to you, it's to one of your readers. Since everybody reads Ann Landers I am sure he will see it.

Dear Sir: I'm sorry to disturb you after so many years (nine to be exact), but I think you'll remember the circumstances surrounding our meeting. I just wanted to drop you a note to tell you what became of me. So far as I know you have never inquired.

Remember the night you drank too much at an office party and insisted on driving home? That's when we met.

My brother and I were driving through a one-way tunnel and you were, too — only you were going in the wrong direction. The result was a terrible head-on collision. I am the one who lived. My brother didn't make it. He was 17.

I was in a coma for three months — suffered 43 broken bones, had 27 operations — mostly plastic surgery and skin grafts. After three years in the hospital and six years in therapy I am still going to the rehabilitation hospital three times a week. But I live. They never thought I would.

Oh, I almost forgot, they told me how the judge handled the case. Too bad you lost your license for six months. I'm sorry about the inconvenience.

I heard your wife was mad as the dickens because she had to drive you to work and back.

Take care of yourself and your children. They should be about the age to drive by now. Please tell them to be careful. There are a lot of drunken drivers out there and they can change an innocent person's life in a split second. I'm signing this — THE VOICE OF EXPERIENCE

DEAR VOICE: Thank you for a letter that should shake up a few million people. You'll be pleased to know the judges are a lot tougher on drunken drivers than they used to be. As far as I am concerned, they can't be tough enough.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a widow, 75, and not in the best of health. (I'm on a walker due to equilibrium problems.) For the last 10 years I have employed a retired Army man twice a week to do the heavy cleaning and the laundry and drive me to the market for grocery shopping. He is honest to the penny, hard-working, polite and pleasant. I should also tell you he is married and has six children.

On the last two trips he exposed himself in my presence. I was shocked but pretended not to notice. I am not afraid of rape. The man has never touched me or uttered a suggestive sentence in all the years he has been in my employ. I have, however, had to lock up my lingerie because he used to spread the dainty garments on the bed and look at them.

I hate to fire this man because good help is hard to find these days and he is an excellent worker. Should I speak to him if he exposes himself again? Should I have my attorney write and tell him he could go to jail and be fined? Why is he like this and what should I do? — SAN ANTONIO READER

DEAR S.A.: This man is an exhibitionist. (Exhibitionism is a form of mental illness.) He may go no further than he has but you should not take the chance. Call an employment agency, enlist the help of your friends and neighbors, and get a replacement soon. The convenience of having this man's services is not worth the risk.

Sex barriers still existing in particular areas of home

ERMA BOMBECK

The private bastions for men and women are crumbling.

There isn't a day goes by that another volley does not blast a hole in the "FOR MEN ONLY" sanctuary or an invasion of men isn't noted in an area that used to be exclusive for women.

It began with the unisex bar stool and progressed to locker rooms, beauty shops, home ec classes, health spas, altars, delivery rooms and service clubs. The sex barriers came tumbling down one by one.

Someone observed there is no place left anymore where a man can go to be alone or a woman can find solace away from men.

A contraire. I don't know where men go for privacy, but I can name a lot of places where women can find more peace and solitude than anyone has a right to have.

One of them is in the kitchen after a big meal when all the food has been eaten and a favorite television show is about to begin. You can hear a pin drop as you go about preparing to wash all those dirty dishes and the only way you'll know anyone else is in the house is when you hear, "Give us a break! Wait until the commercial to run that garbage disposal, will you?"

And how about the living room when it has just been painted and the drop cloths are all around and the paint cans are open and your husband says, "Well, that does it. Don't forget to use masking tape on the windows when you do the panes and on the floor when you do the woodwork."

Not to worry. I would venture a guess that even with unisex bathrooms, only women will be admitted into that exclusive club of all times: the bathroom scrubbers of America who must have the skill to change a toilet tissue spindle, flush, scour, pick up towels and wax without fear of male invasion.

Reiner looks back on early TV days

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Carl Reiner is having great success in the movies these days, but admits he misses the early days of television comedy.

Reiner was a writer and second banana for Sid Caesar on "Your Show of Shows." He put those experiences into "The Dick Van Dyke Show," in which Van Dyke played a writer on a TV variety show.

His latest film with Steve Martin is "All of Me," which also stars Lily Tomlin.

"I tried hard to recruit Lily Tomlin as Dick's wife in that second series."

he said, referring "The New Dick Van Dyke Show," which ran from 1971-74. "We had several conversations, but she didn't think it was right. She knew what she was doing."

Reiner is nostalgic about his pioneer days in television, but he's not sure he could make it work again at a level he would find satisfying. He quit the second Van Dyke show because of network strictures on the scripts.

INTERMISSION

'Cat,' 'King' open on local stages

The likes of Tennessee Williams, Rodgers and Hammerstein and Samuel Beckett descend on Orange County this weekend as four new stage productions open and a fifth visits for a one-night stand.

The curtains go up Friday night on Williams' "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof" at the Mission Viejo Playhouse, Rodgers and Hammerstein's "The King and I" by the Fullerton Civic Light Opera, Beckett's "Endgame" at Saddleback College and the musical "Spoon River Anthology" at Golden West College. A touring production of "Dear Liar" will be offered Sunday afternoon only at UC Irvine.

The Mission Viejo Playhouse, which has endured a now-you-see-it, now-you-don't existence for the past several years, has relocated at La Paz School, 25151 Pradera Drive, Mission Viejo, where Williams' "Cat" opens a four-weekend run Friday. Robert Michael Conrad is directing.

Teri Angeline and Clint Richards will play the leading roles of Maggie and Brick, with Ted Knorr as Big Daddy and Becky Hayes as Big Mama. Bob Hines, Rene Surratt,

TOM TITUS

Bruce Coen, Claire Lemire and Brian Wolf are featured in the production, which will be performed Fridays and Saturdays at 8 p.m. through Nov. 10. Reservations are taken at 841-4245 or 673-4601.

"The King and I," the musical that has become a career for Yul Brynner, goes on stage at Fullerton's Plummer Auditorium under the direction of Jan Duncan. Performances will be given Fridays and Saturdays at 8 p.m. and Sundays at 2 p.m. through Nov. 4, with ticket information available at 526-3832.

A single weekend of production is planned for "Spoon River Anthology" in the Actor's Playbox Theater at Golden West College under the direction of Chuck Mitchell. Mike Owens, Winifred Warga, David Longridge, Duncan Raymond and Marion Christie comprise the cast.

Curtain times are 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday and 3 p.m. Sunday in the Playbox on the Huntington Beach campus. Reservations 893-8378.

"Endgame," an allegorical drama by the author of "Waiting for Godot," will be performed for two weekends in the Studio Theater on the Mission Viejo campus with curtains at 8 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays and 2 p.m. Sundays. Call 831-4656 for details.

Jerome Kilty's "Dear Liar," a two-character play based on letters exchanged between playwright George Bernard Shaw and actress Mrs. Patrick Campbell, will be presented next Sunday at 3 p.m. in the Fine Arts Concert Hall on the UCI campus. Norman Welsh and Mary Corrigan star, and tickets may be ordered by calling the box office at 856-6617.

Meanwhile, South Coast Repertory has extended its Second Stage production of Caryl Churchill's "Top Girls" for another week. The all-woman show now plays through Oct. 28 at SCR, 655 Town Center Drive.

Costa Mesa (957-4033). Performances are given nightly except Mondays at 8:30 (Sunday at 8) and weekend afternoons at 3 p.m.

Two other local productions draw their final curtains next weekend. They are:

"On Borrowed Time" at the Laguna Moulton Playhouse, 606 Laguna Canyon Road, Laguna Beach (494-0743), today at 2:30, Tuesday through Saturday at 8 p.m. and next Sunday at 2:30.

"Caucasian Chalk Circle" in the Drama Lab at Orange Coast College in Costa Mesa (432-5527), giving final performances Thursday through Saturday at 8 p.m.

Elsewhere on the footlight front, these shows are continuing their respective engagements:

"For the Use of the Hall" at the Irvine Community Theater, Turtle Rock Community Park, Sunnyhill Road at Turtle Rock Drive, Irvine (857-5496), Fridays and Saturdays at 8 p.m. through Oct. 27 with a matinee next Sunday at 2 p.m.

"Kismet" at Sebastian's West Dinner Playhouse, 140 Ave. Pico, San Clemente (492-9950), Thursdays through Saturdays at 8 p.m., Sundays at 1 and 7 p.m., through Nov. 4.

"Move Over, Mrs. Markham" at the Harlequin Dinner Playhouse, 3503 S. Harbor Blvd., Santa Ana (979-5511), nightly except Mondays at varying curtain times through Nov. 18.

"Anything Goes" at the Curtain Call Dinner Theater, 690 El Camino Real, Tustin (838-1540), nightly except Mondays at varying curtain times through Nov. 11.

"Boffola" at the Grand Dinner Theater, 1 Hotel Way, Anaheim (772-7710), nightly except Mondays at varying curtain times through Oct. 28.

"Bleacher Bums" at the Gem Theater, 12852 Main St., Garden Grove (636-7213), Wednesdays through Saturdays at 8 p.m., Sundays at 7:30 through Oct. 27.

"Nude With Violin" at the Cypress Civic Theater, 5700 Orange Ave., Cypress (527-1949), Fridays and Saturdays at 8:15 through Nov. 3.

"The Fantasticks" at the Buena Park Civic Theater, 7631 Melrose Ave., Buena Park (523-0351), Fridays and Saturdays at 8 p.m. through Nov. 10.

Hammer meets the Hulk

Stacy Keach, who plays Mike Hammer in the detective series, gets a lift from Lou Ferrigno, formerly the Incredible Hulk, in a scene from an upcoming episode of the Hammer series.

Singer George Jones
'cleaning up his act'

NASHVILLE (AP) — Country music star George Jones says honkytonk drinking turned into years of alcohol and drug dependency. But he says the wild ways that got him the nickname "no show" Jones for his habit of missing concerts are behind him now.

"I was about as crazy and messed up and wild as you can get. I was doing all kinds of drugs, marijuana, cocaine, booze. You name it and I was doing it," Jones said. "Changing my life wasn't easy ... But now that it's done, it's fantastic," he added. "A couple of years ago, I realized it was up to me to put the pieces of my life back together again," he said. "I did some strong, deep thinking, and I knew it had to change, and I knew I had to do it alone."

Jones, who is divorced from country singer Tammy Wynette, said if he had to divert blame for his alcohol and drug abuse from himself he would point to the atmosphere of country bars and night clubs, where careers either blossom or die on the stem.

'Heart' brought director home

By DOLORES BARCLAY

Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — For director Robert Benton, one of the joys of going home again was remembering the taste of hot biscuits and the smells of cotton mills and the Texas farmland.

He journeyed to Waxahachie, Texas, a dusty town south of Dallas, to drink in his past and celebrate his family's roots to create what is certainly one of the year's most outstanding films, "Places in the Heart."

Almost literary in its approach, the movie outdistances other excellent works by the filmmaker — "Bonnie and Clyde," "Superman," the Academy Award-winning "Kramer vs. Kramer." It is perhaps Benton's most artistic work.

"I think that when I saw it all strung together, I was surprised at what a romantic view I had of my past," Benton said in an interview at his New York office. "I thought I had a more realistic view."

"It was a labor of love. It was a heavily fictionalized version of a number of stories that actually happened and offered me a chance to go back home."

Starring Sally Field as a woman who fights for her family's survival in the Depression, "Places in the Heart" is a quiet tribute to the people and places Benton knew as a child.

"When I was growing up, all life was around the courthouse and you could hear the chimes no matter where you were," he said. "I have never seen New York as exciting or as crowded as that square at Christmas."

Benton, 52, left Waxahachie in 1949 to attend the University of Texas in Austin. He moved to New York to pursue a master's degree at Columbia University.

His mother died in 1979, two weeks before the publicity swing for Benton recalled about the actress' effort to get into character.

Benton began thinking about "Places in the Heart" 10 years ago. The story he had in mind dealt with his father's side of the family and two brothers who were bootleggers. He wrote a script and thought it was too violent.

"Then I remembered the story about my grandmother," he said, "and I opened the door to that woman and she pushed her way in and took over and it just became her story. She would not tolerate sharing the movie with anyone else."

"I think I never got to say goodbye and I think if I exorcised anything (with 'Places in the Heart'), I got to say goodbye," he said.

The movie also gave Benton and others in the project a chance to talk about their pasts, he said.

"Everyone connected with the movie had grown up at a certain time out of New York and in the South or Southwest," he said. "The movie was a collaborative effort. We all put a lot of pressure on ourselves to get it right. I think it meant something to a lot of us and therefore, making sure it was right was as important to Sally Field or Danny Glover as it was to me."

The film is rich in details: dinner plates turned over before the food is served; women wearing girdles under their cotton dresses; the dead laid out on a dining room table and bathed in cloths soaked in aspirin to prevent discoloration.

"Sally, on the first day of shooting, was wearing my grandmother's perfume. I hadn't smelled that in 40 years. It was also her grandmother's perfume and was a coincidence,"

Detroit is ready to party

Tigers hoping to avoid another trip to San Diego

DETROIT (AP) — The Detroit Tigers take a 3-1 lead into game five of the World Series today and both the ballplayers and the city are primed for the biggest celebration Motown has seen since 1968.

"This is what we want," said Tiger infielder Darrell Evans after Detroit's 4-2 victory over the San Diego Padres on Saturday. "We really want to get this one. This is the biggest ballgame we'll ever play."

"We've hungered for it from the start of spring training."

The Tigers, who beat the St. Louis Cardinals in seven games in the 1968 World Series, are making only their only first post-season appearance since winning the American League East in 1972.

The Tiger victory Saturday was sparked by second baseman Lou Whitaker and shortstop Alan Trammell — the 1-2 batters in the Detroit order. Whitaker had two hits in four at-bats and scored a pair of runs, both on homers by Trammell, who was 3-for-4 with four RBI.

"We know we need production and we try to get on base and get runs," Whitaker said. "We're winning. We just don't slack off. We won't relax (today), either."

Situation is desperate for Padres

Trammell powers Tigers within win of Series title, 4-2

DETROIT (AP) — Alan Trammell and Lou Whitaker proved double-trouble Saturday for the San Diego Padres, and Jack Morris pulled off a World Series double of his own.

Trammell and Whitaker, renowned as a double-play combination, accounted for all four of Detroit's runs — Trammell with two homers and four RBI with Whitaker on base — as the Tigers moved within one game of winning their fourth World Series title.

The Tigers defeated the Padres, 4-2, in game four, and that gave Detroit a 3-1 advantage in games in the best-of-seven Series. Game five is set for today, with opening-game starter Mark Thurmond going for San Diego against Detroit's Dan Petry.

"I'm not a home run hitter. Those were just coincidence," said Trammell, the Tigers' shortstop. "When Lou Whitaker gets on base, I'm a much better hitter. When a guy gets on base, I want to do my best. It's kind of contagious."

Morris, the Tigers' right-hander,

Lasorda strikes out when it comes to writing

Nobody came in on the noon balloon from Saskatoon and asked me, but...

• Dodger Manager Tommy Lasorda is far less colorful as a World Series columnist than he is as a manager, in fact, as a scribe, Lasorda strikes out which says very little for the ghost writer.

• The main objection to minor league manager Moose Stubing getting the Angels' job seems to be that "Moose" is too undignified for the major leagues but Stubing has

• Maybe Moose could change his name to Yogi.

• New Orleans Saints Coach Bum Phillips says running back Earl Campbell "just happened to come available" so he grabbed him but Saints quarterback Richard Todd says his understanding is that Bum was trying to get Earl for two years.

• The Los Angeles Clippers do not have any history but they'll make some if Bill Walton starts the season healthy.

• Bum Phillips on his western wardrobe: "I went out of style 20 years ago."

• Guess who would have been better off in 1903, 1919, 1920 or 1921... in those years the World Series were best of nine.

• Historians say baby booms are caused by long, drawn-out periods and events like World War II... how about an NBA season?

• Rams tight end Mike Barber on his history of knee operations: "I

• The National Hockey League has entered an agreement with a national brewery which will award trophies and $200,000 to players based on something it calls "power ratings" ... Perfect for a brewery because hockey players will spend every cent on beer.

• Bad joke: Whoever buys the San Francisco Giants from Bob Lurie does not get the pitchers and catchers... batteries not included.

• Gambling experts say football wagering has developed almost as many systems as horse racing and that some of the formulas work some of the time.

• Las Vegas book operator Sonny Reisner says Californians drive over when a California team is involved in big events like the World Series to "place bets, have dinner and see a show like Rodney Dangerfield" ... Well, people who bet on sports certainly don't get no respect.

Titans' offense makes its pitch

Fullerton remains unbeaten behind QB Allen, 21-12

By ROGER CARLSON

Of the Daily Pilot Staff

They still may be the Cal State No-names, even after seven straight victories and a third Pacific Coast Athletic Association triumph with a convincing 21-12 triumph over San Jose State Saturday afternoon.

But whether the Cal State Fullerton Titans ever get their due recognition, one thing seems certain, they may never be truly satisfied, and perhaps that's just what makes them the unbeaten that they are.

"Every time I read the paper," said quarterback Damon Allen, "it's the defense wins again, but we're putting points on the boards. I want everyone to know who we are. But it's never what the offense does."

Allen was his usual self — completing 15 of 27 passes (55.5 percent) for 207 yards, 3 touchdowns and again, no interceptions before 9,260 at Santa Ana Bowl.

He upped his career yardage to a school record 3,162 yards and his touchdown passes give him 14 for the year with just one interception.

While those numbers were indeed impressive, nevertheless the defense did it again Saturday, shutting San Jose State off at the pass again and again.

Allen, however, may have a point, too.

After 11 possessions resulted in 11 punts by the two foes, Allen struck with lightning-like quickness on a pair of touchdown passes to put his Titans into a lead they would not relinquish.

The first wake-up call came with 4:56 left in the half when first he went deep to Corn Redick for a 52-yard hookup, followed by a 36-yard scoring strike to Wade Lockett.

San Jose State, buried and forced to punt for the seventh time in the first half because of the Titans' very sound defense, put the ball into Allen's hands again.

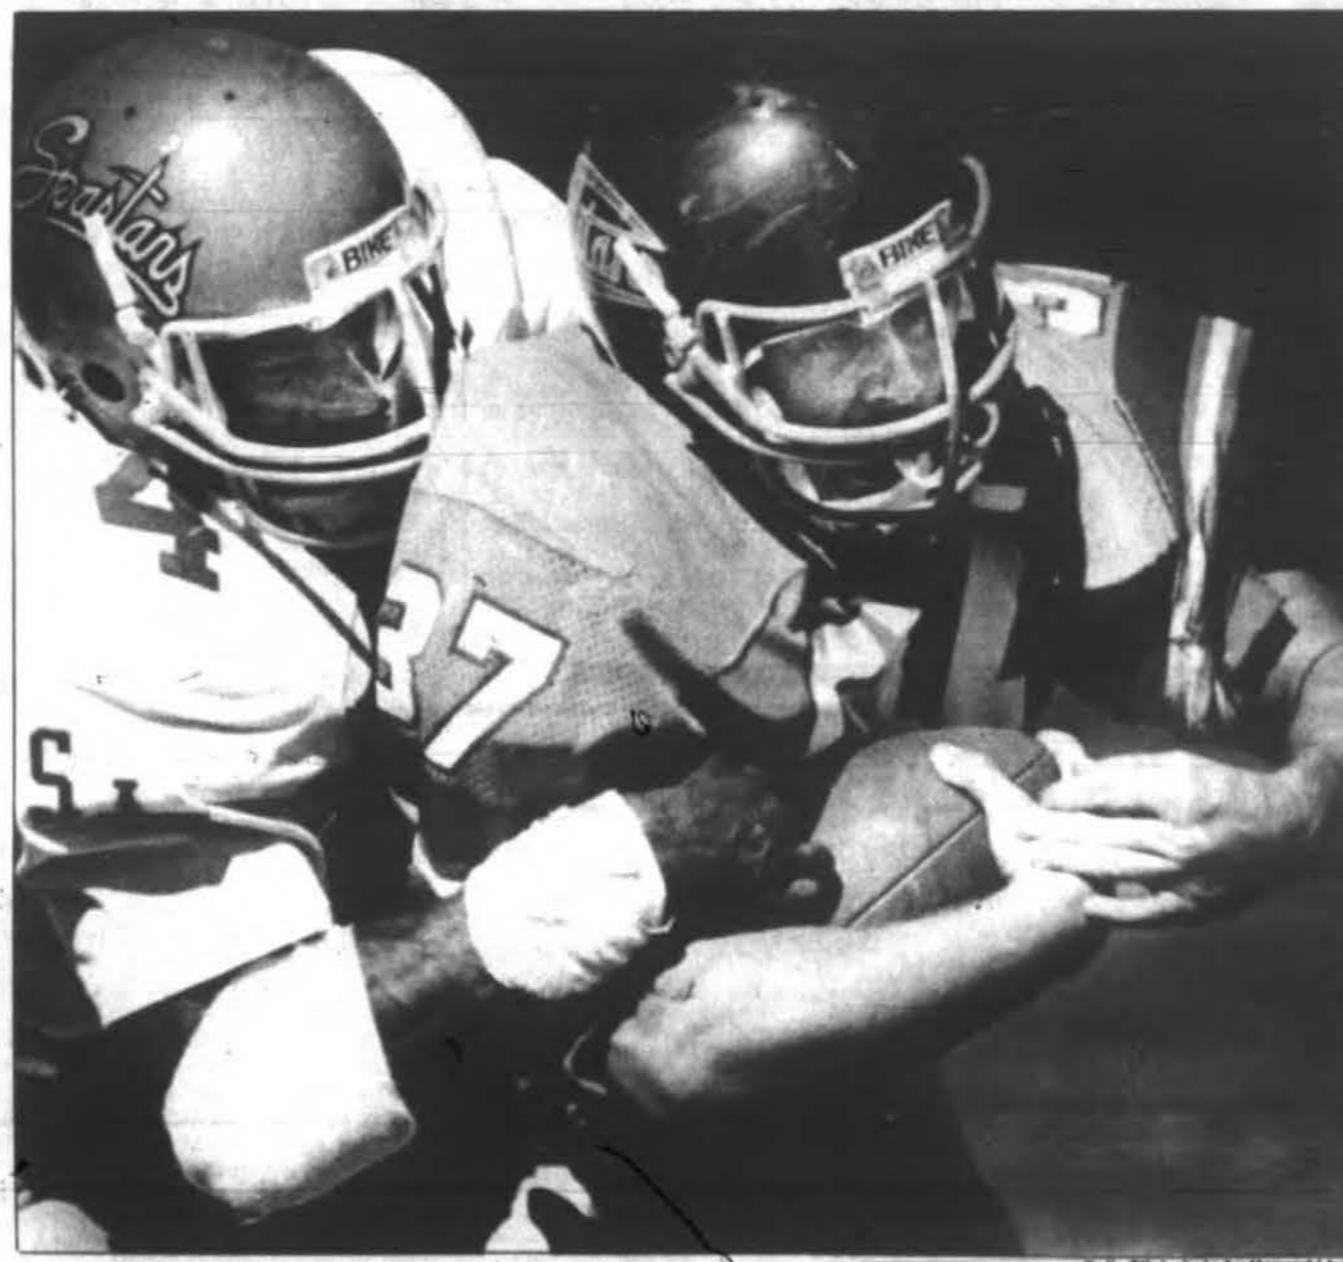

With his brother, Marcus Allen, taking in the action, Damon drilled a 15-yard strike to tight end Bob Kent with 48 seconds remaining in the second period and Greg Steinke's second of three PATs staked Coach Gene Murphy's defending PCAA champions to a 14-0 halftime edge.

The Spartans threatened in the second half, but only mildly, as Fullerton maintained a dominating way.

San Jose State was forced to punt after taking over at the Fullerton 35 with a fumble recovery, and although the Spartans did cut the margin to 14-6 on the next series, that missed opportunity was a tell-tale sign of things to come.

"You're darn right that was a big

Lee rescues last-second win for UCLA

Place-kicker keeps perfect record intact after Bruins let 24-7 lead disappear

PASADENA (AP) — John Lee made it a perfect 16-for-16 in field goals this season by booting a 47-yarder as time ran out Saturday, giving UCLA a wild 27-24 Pacific-10 Conference football victory over Washington State.

"I told my holder, 'Just hold it straight up and down and we'll see what happens,'" said Lee, a junior from Downey who had kicked an earlier field goal in the contest. "I gave that kick an extra little bit."

"I was going to kick it just like I kick any ball in our Wednesday practice."

UCLA got its chance to win after Washington State, which had rallied from a 24-7 deficit to tie the game in the final period, botched a 45-yard field goal attempt with 52 seconds to go.

A low snap from center by Bill Williams aborted the try by John Traut and the ball rolled all the way to the Washington State 49-yard line, where UCLA took possession. The Bruins then drove into position for Lee's game-winning kick.

Williams became the WSU snapper two weeks ago when the regular snapper, Pili Tutuvanu, suffered two broken bones in his leg.

"We had to go with a tackle (as the snapper), and the pressure got to him," said Washington State Coach Jim Walden. "I'm sick to death. We ought to be 2-0 in the conference."

"I feel sorry for our kids. Maybe they have a bad-luck coach. I don't know why God likes (UCLA Coach) Terry (Donahue) so much. I'm very proud of what my guys are doing, and wouldn't trade them for any darn team in the conference."

The Bruins, two-time defending Pac-10 champions, now have a 1-1 league record and a 4-2 overall mark.

"I didn't say anything to John Lee before the kick," Donahue said.

"What do you say to him? He knows more about kicking than I do. I'm just glad he ran out to kick that field goal instead of me."

"I'm delighted to be 4-2. Our kids are excited for the first time in a couple of weeks. Both teams fought about as hard as they can."

Washington State began its late rally on a 1-yard scoring run by quarterback Mark Rypien with 14:15 remaining to cut UCLA's lead to 24-14.

Traut booted a 32-yarder with 7:31 left to make it 24-17 and the Cougars earned their short-lived tie on a 1-yard plunge by Rueben Mayes with 2:25 to go. Traut's conversion made it 24-21.

It was the first rain test for the new Omni artificial turf — the first of its kind to be installed in the United States. And the reviews weren't good.

"I'm glad I don't have to play half my games on this kind of turf," Crutcher said. "It kept me from making a good cut out there."

The Trojans, 4-1 overall and 3-0 in the conference, jumped to a 10-0 first quarter lead, taking advantage of a blocked field goal try and a bumbled Oregon punt attempt.

Football team in a daze after fifth straight thrashing

From AP dispatches

BOSTON — Tim Fitzgibbons knew it would be a rough season. He had no idea it would be this rough.

"I couldn't believe what happened. I couldn't imagine losing a game 82-0," the Fitchburg State quarterback said. "I never even heard of it. It was tough coming home on the bus ride."

The Falcons already had been crushed, 40-0 and 56-6. Then came the massacre by Ithaca College. After six years with a club team, Fitchburg's first season in varsity football almost ended with that third game.

"We were at the bottom, as low as we could emotionally get the Monday after the Ithaca game," said David Secino, a full-time tailor who became part-time head coach in late June after his predecessor quit.

"We're all asking ourselves, 'Is it really worth going out there, getting used as a doormat every week and getting blown out?'" Falcon offensive guard Jeff Paluzzi said.

Ithaca used its starters for only the first quarter and ran simple plays but "it was almost impossible to stem the tide," Ithaca Coach Jim Butterfield said.

The Fitchburg players held a crisis meeting. The football program hung in the balance. Three or four players quit. Most chose to continue. And things are getting better.

The losing margins have dropped, to 45-0 and 51-0 in the last two games. The Falcons are 0-5 but won't lose this weekend. They're not scheduled to play.

Quote of the day*Fred Smeras, a member of the 0-6 Buffalo Bills: "We have to do something. If it means going out and giving somebody a drop kick in the face to get the guys going, that's what we have to do."Green ups lead to three shots

Veteran Hubert Green, seeking his first triumph in three years, banged out a 3-under-par 67 Saturday to increase his lead to three shots after the third round of the Southern Open Golf Tournament at Columbus, Ga. Green, a winner of 17 tour events, including the 1977 U.S. Open, but a non-winner since the 1981 Hartford Open, had a 54-hole total of a 198, 12-under-par over the hilly, narrow, 6,791-yard, par-70 Green Island Country Club course.

Scott Hoch was alone in second at 201 in the battle for the first prize of $54,000. He had a 68 Saturday while defending champion Ronnie Black ripped out a 66 for a 202, good for third place. Whitworth is seeking her first official tour victory outside the United States.Islanders rebound from defeatMike Bossy scored on a 30-foot slapshot at 59 seconds of overtime to give the New York Islanders a 7-6 National Hockey League victory over the Chicago Black Hawks Saturday night. The Islanders, who were routed 7-2 by New Jersey in their season opener Friday night, won their home opener for the fifth consecutive year and 10th in the last 11. Ron Duguay scored a pair of second-period goals and added an assist as Detroit trimmed New Jersey, 4-1. Defenseman Risto Siltaneva scored on a 45-foot slap shot at 2:25 of overtime to give Hartford a 3-2 victory over Boston. Calgary defenseman Paul Reinhardt scored two goals and Jim Pepinski added another on a penalty shot as the Flames defeated Quebec, 7-2. Miroslav Dvorak and Tim Kerr scored third period goals as Philadelphia came from behind to spoil Washington's home opener, 4-2. Don Beaubre recorded 42 saves in the Minnesota net and rookie Scott Bjugstad scored the game-winning goal to lead the North Stars to a 3-1 victory over the New York Rangers. Jim Benning scored a power-play goal 2:41 into overtime to give the Maple Leafs a 4-3 victory over Buffalo in the Leafs' home opener. Chris Chelios scored a goal and Tom Kurvers, his defense partner, had two assists as Montreal beat Pittsburgh, 4-3, in the Canadiens' home opener.Paxson hopeful of signing

PORTLAND, Ore. — Free agent Jim Paxson said Friday that "things have picked up considerably" in his negotiations with his old team, the Portland Trail Blazers.

Paxson confirmed that the New York Knicks have submitted an offer-sheet proposal to an arbitrator to determine if the proposal violates the National Basketball Association salary cap rule.

RIVERSIDE — Despite its strongest effort so far this season, the Orange Coast College football team came up short against Riverside City College Saturday, falling to the Tigers, 19-17, in a Mission Conference contest.

The loss dropped Orange Coast to 0-4 this year (0-2 in the conference), the worst start ever for the Pirates under Coach Dick Tucker, who is in his 23rd year at the school's helm. Riverside is 2-1 in Mission play and 4-1 overall.

In defeat, the Bucs did find some offense, gaining a season-high 229 yards. And the Pirate attack generated two touchdowns, doubling the output of the previous three games.

Riverside opened the scoring in the first quarter, marching 87 yards in eight plays, capped by a 29-yard scoring strike from Nick Butera to Robert Henderson. The conversion failed and Riverside led, 6-0.

After an exchange of punts, the OCC offense got in gear. From their own 17, the Pirates mounted their longest drive of the year, moving 87 yards in nine plays culminated by a Ken Laszlo to Bill Brown touchdown pass of 18 yards. The PAT gave Coast a 7-6 advantage.

The OCC drive was kept alive by scampers of 20 and 10 yards by Laszlo and a key third-down pass completion by the Bucs' quarterback.

Moments later, the Pirates grabbed the lead to 10-6 when Bill Lytle booted a 38-yard field goal. Coast kept the four-point edge until the third quarter.

Nixon unhappy with contract

LOS ANGELES — Guard Norm Nixon has left the Los Angeles Clippers for the second time in two weeks because he wants his contract renegotiated, the National Basketball Association team said.

Nixon did not accompany the Clippers to Anchorage, Alaska, where they began a weekend series with the Los Angeles Lakers with a 121-96 loss Friday night.

Early last week, Nixon missed the first two days of training camp, saying he wanted an extension on his contract. Nixon is to become a free agent at the end of this season.

Clippers President Alan Rothenberg said that the Clippers will not consider giving Nixon an extension or a raise unless he returns to the team and promises to not leave again.

Lendl, Jarryd paired in final

SYDNEY, Australia — Ivan Lendl, crediting a new diet, thrashed American Eli Teltscher, 6-1, 6-1 Saturday and advanced to the final of the Australian Indoor Tennis Championship where he will meet Anders Jarryd of Sweden on Sunday.

Jarryd rallied to beat Ben Testerman of the United States, 2-6, 6-2, 7-6, winning the third-set tiebreaker 7-3 after staving off match points in the 11th and 13th games of that set.

The Czech broke Teltscher in the first, third and seventh games of the first set and did likewise in the fourth and sixth of the second.

Lendl, ranked second in the world, needed only 65 minutes to dispatch the eighth-ranked Teltscher, winner of the GWA Classic at Brisbane last week.

Plunkett to miss four games

LOS ANGELES — Raiders quarterback Jim Plunkett was placed on injured reserved list with a torn abdominal muscle and will be out of action for at least the next four games, said team spokesman Al Locasale said Saturday.

Marc Wilson will be in as quarterback for today's game against the Minnesota Vikings, he said.

Locasale said the team will play with 48 players against Minnesota and will not fill the vacancy on the roster.

Plunkett suffered the pulled stomach muscle during the first quarter of last Sunday's game against Seattle.

Suns' Davis out eight weeks

PHOENIX — Guard Walter Davis, a five-time National Basketball Association All-Star who paced the Phoenix Suns last season with a 20-point scoring average, will be out of action for at least eight weeks after undergoing arthroscopic surgery on his left knee, a team official said.

Doctors at Phoenix General Hospital found Davis had suffered a full tear of the posterior cruciate ligament and partial tears of both the anterior cruciate and medial collateral ligaments, said team spokesman Tom Ambrose.

Davis, who has been with the Suns ever since winning rookie of the year honors in the 1977-78 season, suffered the injury Tuesday night in a pre-season game against the Lakers at the Forum that was cut short after his injury because the playing surface was so slick, Ambrose said.

"We knew San Jose State wasn't going to turn the ball over seven times, but you make your own luck," said Murphy. This time the Titans were one-up in turnovers, losing two fumbles as opposed to three lost fumbles by the Spartans.

The Spartans coach also told of the article he read recently citing that the PCIAA is the best kept secret in the Western Hemisphere.

"There's a lot of five-year guys on this squad," he said. "Since Day One, there's 24 seniors who remember and we want to retain last year's attitude."

The Titans were up by a 21-12 margin and the final turnover finished the Spartans.

Fullerton entered with a phenomenal 27-6 plus margin in turnovers after six victories, but the tag of "lucky" may be eating on the Titans, if for nothing else than perhaps they need something to be irritated about.

"There's a lot of five-year guys on this squad," he said. "Since Day One, there's 24 seniors who remember and we want to retain last year's attitude."

The Titans were up by a 21-12 margin and the final turnover finished the Spartans.

Fullerton entered with a phenomenal 27-6 plus margin in turnovers after six victories, but the tag of "lucky" may be eating on the Titans, if for nothing else than perhaps they need something to be irritated about.

"We knew San Jose State wasn't going to turn the ball over seven times, but you make your own luck," said Murphy. This time the Titans were one-up in turnovers, losing two fumbles as opposed to three lost fumbles by the Spartans.

The Spartans coach also told of the article he read recently citing that the PCIAA is the best kept secret in the Western Hemisphere.

Last-second field goal lifts Texas to tie

Sooners let five-point lead disappear in last 2:04, 15-15

From AP dispatches

DALLAS — Texas place-kicker Jeff Ward drilled a 32-yard field goal at the final gun Saturday and the top-ranked Longhorns managed a 15-15 tie with the No. 3-rated Oklahoma Sooners in a clash of two previously unblemished teams.

After Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer decided to take an intentional safety to make the score 15-12, the Sooners punted with 2:04 left in the game and Texas out of time outs.

A pass interference call and an offsides helped the Longhorns and quarterback Todd Dodge completed a 15-yard pass and an 11-yard pass to the Oklahoma 10-yard line, setting up the field goal.

Switzer threw a towel to the floor in the locker room and said, "I can't get a call. All the calls made against us there at the last were by Southwest Conference officials."

Boston College 24, Temple 10: Fullback Steve Strachan capped an 80-yard scoring drive with a short plunge in the fourth quarter and safety Daye Pereira raced 35 yards with a pass interception less than 1½ minutes later, rallying fourth-ranked Boston College.

BC, led by quarterback Doug Flutie, struck back after Temple took a 10-9 lead on Jim Cooper's 37-yard field goal on the second play of the fourth period.

Air Force 21, Notre Dame 7: Halfback Jody Simmons rushed 24 times for 141 yards, scored one touchdown and set up another, leading Air Force to victory over Notre Dame.

Nebraska 33, Missouri 23: Doug DuBose rushed for 162 yards and one touchdown and Marc Munford ran 57 yards with a pass interception for another score, sparking sixth-ranked Nebraska.

Ohio State 45, Illinois 38: Tailback Keith Byars' fifth touchdown of the game, a 3-yard sweep with 36 seconds left, gave eighth-ranked Ohio State the victory over Illinois, a game in which the Buckeyes trailed by 24 points.

Iowa 40, Purdue 3: Iowa quarterback Chuck Long bombarded 14th-ranked Purdue for 369 yards passing and four touchdowns, leading the Hawkeyes.

Alabama 6, Penn State 0: Van Tiffin kicked two fourth-quarter field goals, as Alabama upset 11th-ranked Penn State, the first shutout of the Nittany Lions in 18 years.

Florida 43, Tennessee 30: Running backs John L. Williams and Neal Anderson combined for 278 yards and a pair of touchdowns as Florida outscored Tennessee.

Kentucky 17, Mississippi 13: Sparked by a 24-yard run on a fake punt, 19th-ranked Kentucky drove 83 yards in the fourth quarter and George Adams scored on a 1-yard run, giving the Wildcats the win.

LSU 34, Vanderbilt 27: Dalton Hilliard ran for 152 yards and one touchdown to lead 12th-ranked LSU.

Georgia 18, Mississippi 12: Freshman Cleveland Gary scored on a 6-yard run in the fourth quarter as 15th-ranked Georgia overcame four turnovers.

South Carolina 45, Pittsburgh 21: South Carolina quarterbacks Allen Mitchell and Mike Hold combined for four touchdown passes as the 17th-ranked Gamecocks romped.

49ers get first win of season

Long Beach State amasses 584 yards in 24-22 victory

From AP dispatches

LOGAN, Utah — Quarterback Doug Gaynor threw for two touchdowns and ran for a third as Long Beach State defeated Utah State, 24-22, Saturday in a Pacific Coast Athletic Association football game.

The victory for the 49ers was their first of the season, moving them to 1-5 overall and 1-2 in PCAA games. Winless Utah State fell to 0-5 overall and 0-3 in conference play, its worse start since the Aggies began 0-6 in 1976.

Despite its record, Long Beach entered the game ranked third nationally in passing offense, while Gaynor was ranked fourth in the nation in passing offense. The 49ers tallied 584 total yards offense, 333 of those passing, to offset a second-half Utah State rally.

In other games involving West Coast teams:

Pacific 21, New Mexico 7: Sophomore tailback James Mackey rushed for 156 yards and scored on a 2-yard run in the third quarter to seal the Tigers' PCAA victory over New Mexico State.

Pacific dominated throughout, scoring on a 22-yard pass from Mike Pitz to Michael Scott in the first quarter, soon followed by a 39-yard scoring pass from Scott to Kurt Heinrich. Senior tailback Ken Locklin rushed 102 yards for the Aggies.

Washington 37, Stanford 15: Hugh Millen fired two touchdown passes and Joe Kelly ran back one of No. 2-ranked Washington's five interceptions for another TD as the Huskies routed Stanford in a Pacific-10 game.

Millen, who completed 13 of 22 passes for 176 yards, and running back Jacques Robinson, who had 68 yards on the ground, didn't have an easy time against Stanford's defense, but they had plenty of chances.

Oregon State 9, California 6: The host Beavers edged the Bears in Pac-10 game as halfback Donald Beavers scored the game's only touchdown from a yard out early in the fourth quarter.

Nevada-Las Vegas 33, Idaho State 20: Quarterback Randall Cunningham completed 21 of 26 passes for 274 yards and a touchdown to lead the Rebels to the non-conference victory in Las Vegas.

San Diego State 24, Utah 24: Quarterback Mark Stevens hit wide receiver Danny Huey with a 49-yard touchdown pass with 2:10 remaining, then passed to Thurman Beard for the two-point conversion as Utah tied San Diego State in a Western Athletic Conference game in San Diego.

Entries for this year's MAME awards total 556

With the final count now in, entries for this year's Sales & Marketing Council's 11th annual Major Achievement in Merchandising Excellence (MAME) awards total 556, according to Barbara Smith, MAME chairperson and sales & marketing director for Long Beach-based EPAC Development.

Smith said that response from the building and related industries to this year's MAME has far exceeded all expectations, explaining that last year some 300 entries had been received and the committee had been hoping to increase entries to 400 in 1984.

Under the auspices of the Building Industry Association of Southern California, the Sales & Marketing Council annually sponsors the black-tie event, where the outstanding marketing and merchandising efforts of builders and related services are honored and recognized by their peers.

According to all reports, Smith said, this may be one of the most successful MAMES witnessed for the past several years. At last count, donations from the industry in the form of $100 for friends, $250 for sponsors and $500 for patrons had reached $13,000.

Additional information regarding the donation program is available by calling Donna Morean, with Homes For Sale magazine, at 957-8433 during normal business hours. In addition, Smith said, based on current reservations attendance is expected to surpass last year's tally of 800.

"What A Feeling" sets the theme for this year's MAME as the Sales & Marketing Council looks forward to another 10 years of outstanding merchandising in Southern California's housing market.

MAME takes place Nov. 3 in the Pacific Ballroom of the new Anaheim Hilton & Towers Hotel, starting with cocktails at 6 p.m. followed by dinner and the program at 7 p.m. Tickets are $125 per couple and $500 for a table of eight. Reservations can be made by calling Rhonda Fedden, Burton Advertising, at 556-0460.

Landmark Bank moves office

Craig D. Collette, president and chief executive officer announced Landmark Bank has moved its Lake Forest/Irvine office to 15771 Rockfield Blvd., Irvine.

The move into the new 6,000 square foot building will enable better customer service by providing sit down teller stations, 24-Hour Banking (ATM) and safe deposit boxes. Landmark will continue offering SBA, commercial, accounts receivable and installment loans along with checking, savings, insured money market and retirement accounts.

Financial Corp.'s restraints mark end to feverish growth

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Financial Corp. of America's severe staff reduction sends a signal that the nation's largest S&L holding company is ending a decade of feverish growth that caused it to run afoul of federal regulators.

It also demonstrates how thoroughly FCA's new chairman and chief executive, William Popejoy, has eradicated the policies of his controversial predecessor, Charles Knapp.

Knapp resigned 6½ weeks ago amid a virtual flood of funds being withdrawn by skittish depositors and under pressure from regulators worried that his fast-growth policies were imperiling the stability of FCA's chief subsidiary, American Savings & Loan Association.

FCA on Thursday announced it will lay off one-fifth of its 7,500 workers, with a significant portion of those coming from its huge loan-production staff. Other layoffs will come from its management, staff, administrative and technical divisions.

"While there will be significant reductions in the loan area, American Savings will still have a sizable loan-production staff and plans to maintain a lending volume comparable to that of other major S&Ls," FCA said.

However, that means the S&L will have to sharply curtail past growth

Lower-priced housing offers best opportunity

By JOY DEE ANTHONY

Daily Pilot Correspondent

Now that we have lower inflation rates, says Robert Dunham, president of the Newport Economics Group, you don't see people in moderate-income brackets buying expensive homes because of the increased equity. Today, the relation between income and house price is a lot more consistent. Therefore, the lower-price range housing market "represents the clearest opportunity" for potential sales, he concludes.

Though Orange County households typically earn more than their Los Angeles counterparts, medium income workers earn just a bit more than $30,000. "In this area that doesn't buy much more than a lot," Dunham said during a "Forecast 1985" seminar recently.

"Demand for apartments," Dunham adds is "extremely high." The lack of inflation is making a big difference. Homes don't appreciate fast enough to make the investment worthwhile for many people. In addition, single households, on the upswing because of high divorce rates and late marriages, increase apartment demand.

The inventory of apartments falls into two groups: those built in the late fifties or sixties, and those built in the early seventies. "We really have not built any apartments to speak of in the last 10 years," Dunham remarked. As a consequence, vacancies are extremely low. On a national level, about 3 percent of all apartments are unoccupied. Here in Orange County, Dunham said, it's more like 1 or 2 percent.

With that kind of demand, "rents are beginning to rise more than inflation," a phenomenon we haven't seen in years, Dunham remarked.

On the plus side, the rate of production of new apartments is beginning to boom, especially in San Diego County. About 20,000 projects have been recently filed for development for all of Southern California, with half going to L.A. County and around ten percent going to Orange County. It's hard to know whether some housing projects filed as condominiums will be used later as apartments, Dunham adds.

Because California has more retirees than any other state in the U.S., the demand for housing for those over 65 will continue to be high, Dunham says, especially for developments without nursing facilities. Typically, these housing projects will consist of not more than 125 units. Anything larger becomes too institutional and not home-like, he explained.

Based on a survey which looked at 7,000 apartment units for the general Orange County public, Dunham said that the greatest number of vacancies are to be found in the Laguna Hills area. The small number of vacancies found in the survey should act as a signal to those interested in apartment production.

CDB Inc. expands office

CDB Incorporated, an Orange County-based investment banking and venture capital firm, has expanded its offices and acquired new facilities as a result of increased business and new partner additions.

"We can still be found at our 4600 Campus Drive address, however, our new offices will be located in expanded quarters, just upstairs from our previous facilities," said Walter W. Crutten III, president of CDB.

"CDB's expansion is a direct result of increased business opportunities and a decision earlier this year by the firm to broaden its expertise in equity financing," said Crutten.

Beacon Hill preview sales now under way

The Stellrecht Co. has opened a sales trailer this weekend for preview sales of its Beacon Hill Cove patio homes in Laguna Niguel's master-planned community of Beacon Hill.

"We encourage prospective buyers to visit soon," said Dale Butler, director of sales and marketing, "if only to enjoy the fresh ocean breezes and beautiful coastal views."

Homebuyers can choose from one- and two-story plans with three bedrooms and two baths to four bedrooms and 2½ baths. Interiors will offer between 1,700 and 2,450 square feet of living space.

The neighborhood of 40 view-oriented homes patio homes will follow a New England architectural theme reminiscent of the 19th century seafaring city of Boston. They will feature exteriors of brick and masonry with detailed lattice work and cut shingles.

Special touches such as shiplap siding, gabled roofs and carriage house windows will also be used.

Inside, the homes will offer skylights and greenhouse windows.

Recreational amenities include a swimming pool, whirlpool spa and lighted tennis courts, all within walking distance. Hiking and biking trails are available at nearby Salt Creek Regional Park.

Garden models ready for viewing

The model complex for Irvine Pacific's new Windwood Garden Homes is open for viewing, according to Candy Shepard, director of sales and marketing.

The complex, located in central Irvine, features four models, decorated by Raydra Interiors of Anaheim.

Prices start below $115,000.

Designed to appeal to young marrieds and singles, Windwood Garden Homes are designed to offer the privacy of a detached home, combined with the efficiency of a condominium.

"The design of the Garden Homes is rather unique in that the homes are clustered in groups of four," said Shepard. "This concept allows us to be very price competitive with condominium-style housing, while at the same time offering privacy and other attributes usually found only in detached homes."

Shepard said the two- and three-bedroom Garden Homes will offer four floor plans ranging up to 1,458 square feet, and attached, two-car garage. The exteriors will reflect early California styling, combining earth-tone wood siding with shingle roofs.

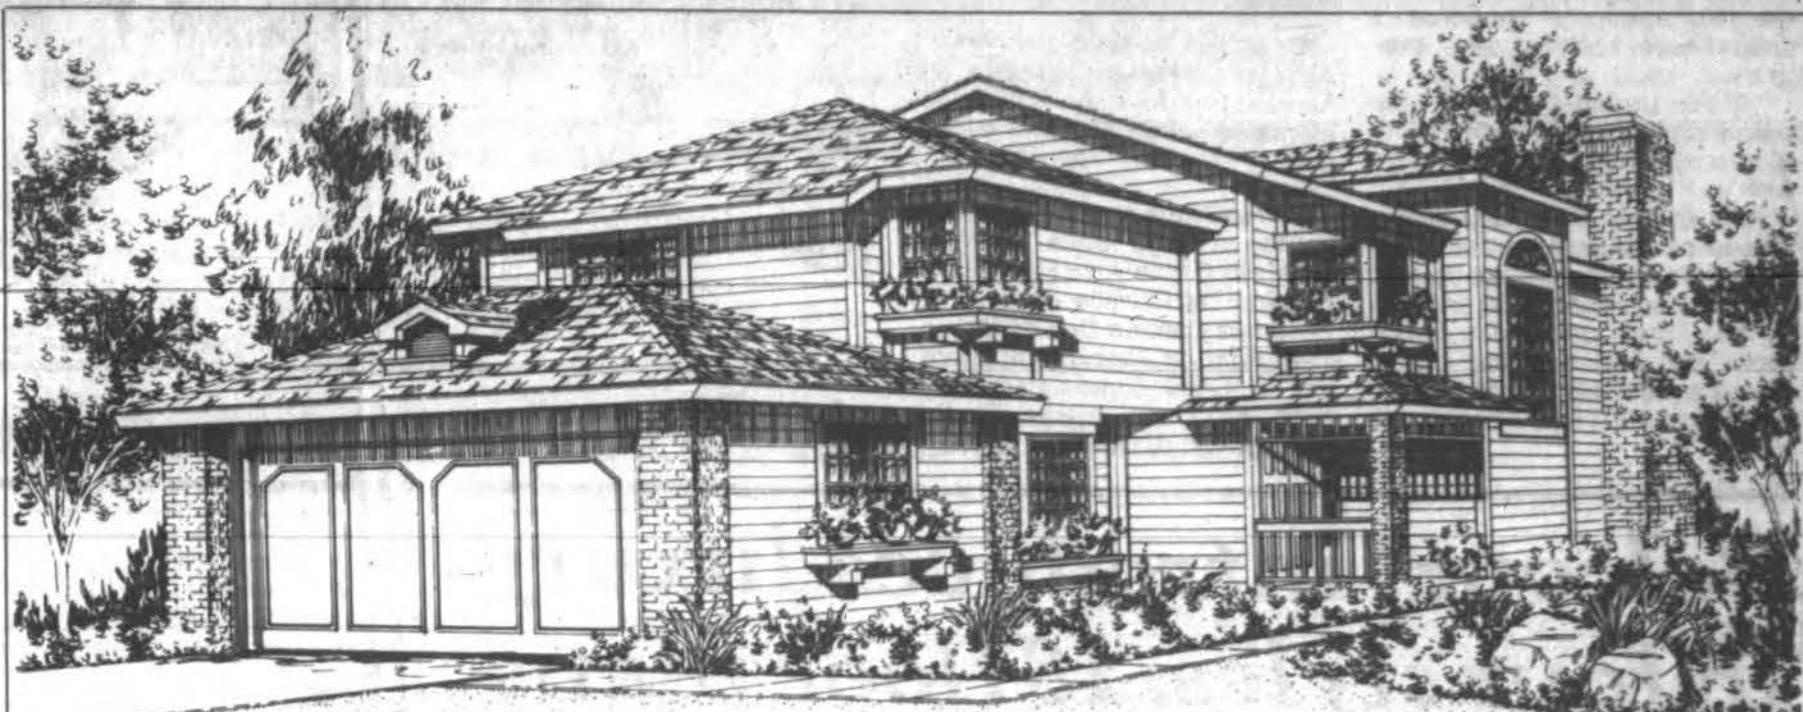

Interior amenities include wall-to-wall carpeting, wood parquet or ceramic tile entries, and step-saver kitchens featuring microwave oven, dishwasher, oak cabinets, ceramic tile counter tops and plumbing for refrigerators and icemakers. The homes are set for installation of air conditioning.

The development will eventually consist of 145 units, with the first move-ins expected early next year.

adventures at Salt Creek Beach and the Dana Point Harbor and Marina.

Ponderosa Shores inaugurates broker co-op plan

Brokers earn 3 percent commission upon sale of San Clemente homes

Real estate brokers can take advantage of a new 3 percent broker co-op program being offered at Ponderosa Shores in San Clemente.

"Ponderosa Shores has generated a great deal of excitement among homebuyers because of its high quality and its coastal location," said Sylvia Michler, marketing manager for the Southern California region of Ponderosa Homes, builder of the single-family community. "Now real estate brokers can offer their clients these fine homes and earn a full 3 percent commission on the sale, thanks to Ponderosa's limited-time broker co-op program."

"We're urging brokers in the area to inspect these homes and to discuss this special program with us," she said.

Available in five floor plans, Ponderosa Shores homes range from 1,819 to 2,668 square feet and offer two bedrooms and den to four bedrooms plus bonus room and two to three baths. Prices are $173,000 to $232,000, subject to prior sale of any or all plans.

Through December 31, Ponderosa is offering buyers a special 3-2-1 buy-down financing program on fixed and variable rate mortgages. During the first year, the interest rate is discounted 3 percent; the second year, 2 percent; the third year, 1 percent; finally reaching the fixed note rate the fourth year.

"This is a bonanza for buyers," Michler said. "First of all, they can qualify at the first-year rate, which is 3 percent lower, and the money they save can be used for interior decorating and landscaping."

Designed by Aram Bassenian, AIA, of Newport Beach, the homes strive for a sense of casual elegance suited to living by the sea.

To reach the models and sales center at 2953 Calle Frontera, take the Santa Ana Freeway to Camino De Estrella east, which becomes Camino De Los Mares. Turn right on Avenue Vacuero, left at Calle Guadalajara, and right on Calle Juarez to the intersection of Calle Frontera.

San Clemente's Ponderosa Shores homes strive for casual elegance appropriate to a life by the seashore.

Belcourt introduces luxury in four styles, 18 floor plans

Prices range from low of $445,000 to $1 million plus

A diversity of floor plans and exteriors can be found today at Belcourt, the J.M. Peters Co.'s luxurious, walled and gated residential development in Newport Beach.

"We have four distinctively different home styles, encompassing 18 different floor plans," said Tom Hover, Peters' vice president for marketing. "The homes range in size from the 2,254-square-foot Plan A in the Terrace Collection up to the 5,223-square-foot Plan Six in the Gallery Collection."

Adding to the residential options at Belcourt is the Custom Lot Collection, permitting the buyer to have his own architect prepare plans — within Belcourt guidelines — for his own special, one-of-a-kind residence.

"Several of our buyers have selected a particular custom lot and then have had one of our estate-class Gallery homes built on it, with whatever custom modifications they choose," Hover said. "This provides the buyer a maximum amount of flexibility in selecting home style and lot size and location, while at the same time taking advantage of the many benefits of living in Belcourt."

In all, six Gallery Collection plans are available, ranging in size from 3,565 up to 5,223 square feet. Gallery prices currently start at $1.4 million.

Another detached residential series is the Manor Collection, less formal in concept, and reflecting more of a leisure lifestyle approach keyed to families. Manor homes range in size from 3,304 to 4,411 square feet, with prices starting at $690,000.

For those who prefer a formal style, Belcourt Towne Collection offers four sophisticated townhome plans from 2,969 to 4,432 square feet, with prices beginning at $535,000.

The newest residential style at Belcourt is the Terrace Collection, four plans in a limited-edition neighborhood with its own recreation center. The homes range in size from 2,254 to 3,351 square feet and are priced from $455,000.

Along with the perimeter wall and guard-gated entry, Belcourt's homes feature built-in, state-of-the-art electronic systems.

Full details on all residential options at Belcourt are available. Call 720-1016 for information on the Gallery, Manor, Towne and Custom Lot collections and 640-1501 for the Terrace Collection.

Proud equestrienne at Nellie Gail Ranch

15-year-old Julie Willich has become a superlative equestrienne since she started taking lessons at the Nellie Gail Ranch Equestrian Center, winning reserve champion status at a five-day show in Sacramento. The center, located on five acres at the Laguna Hills community, offers a wide range of services, including boarding facilities. Julie's parents, Richard and Nancy, have taken advantage of the center for consultation and assistance with their new venture in horse breeding. For information about the center or other aspects of Nellie Gail Ranch, call 831-7370.

Only a few townhomes remain at OrangeTree Villas, a luxury townhome community in Irvine, where developer Presley of Southern California is holding close-out sales.

"We are extremely pleased with the phenomenal success of OrangeTree Villas," said company President Terrance Barry. "Within two weeks of the grand opening, the entire first phase was sold out. Now, only a few homes are still available in the final phase."

OrangeTree Villas is designed in four- and eight-unit clusters, with California-villa style adobe-white walls and red tile roofs. A recreation center offers a heated pool, spa and cabana.

Buyers have a choice of two floor plans, each with two bedrooms and two or 2½ baths.

Plan A, Valencia, is a two-story design featuring a living room and dining room that face onto a private deck.

Plan B, Mandarin, offers either a private balcony or patio that opens off the living room. The home also has a formal dining room.

Kitchens feature a double oven, dishwasher, disposer, ice-maker plumbing and cast iron double sinks. Also included are ceramic tile counter tops, oak cabinets and a breakfast bar.

Master bedrooms have oak cabinets and cultured marble pullman tops; splashes highlight the master baths.

Additional amenities include carpeting, a ceramic tile entryway and window coverings for all windows except baths. Electric tric heating and air conditioning are also standard.

To reach the townhomes, take

EXPERT ADVICE Suit OK if public project's at fault

By SIMON SYKES

Let us suppose you own an old home in an expanding part of town.

The new development all around creates the need for more electrical power, and the city installs new overhead power lines.

The new lines pass directly over trees on your property. One windy night the trees and the power line meet.

The resulting electrical fire seriously damages the roof of your home.

You can sue the city under the theory of inverse condemnation (which allows compensation for injury to property caused by a public improvement project).

The city claims your suit is out of line, and that the theory of inverse condemnation does not apply.

A case like this recently went before a California appeals court.

The court ruled in favor of the owner, stating that if he could prove the fire was due to the installation of the power lines too close to the trees, the suit could continue.

Grandview homes' hilltop location draws buyers

A hilltop location that provides most homes with sweeping views of the Saddleback Valley is one of the reasons Landmark Homes/Grandview Series is one of the fastest-selling developments in South Orange County, believes Ralph Decker, sales manager at the garden townhome development in El Toro.

"The beautiful location of the Grandview townhomes among the rolling hills has been a particular attraction to buyers who want a home that offers spectacular views of the surrounding area," Decker said.

Decker said the townhomes have been designed and arranged to take full advantage of the views. "For example, all the homes have been designed with sliding glass doors and large windows across the rear of the units to allow full enjoyment of the views from major living areas," he noted. "And, of course, the views are even more breathtaking from the surprisingly large, fenced rear yard that each home enjoys."

Decker reported that the first phase of 30 homes has been completely reserved and names of those interested in purchasing are now being taken for the second phase.

Priced from $129,500, four two-story floor plans in the Signal Landmark development are currently available. They range from 1,386 to 1,794 square feet of living space, with three plans offering three bedrooms and one plan having two bedrooms and a loft.

Community recreation features in the first phase of development include a large swimming pool, tennis court and clubhouse with lounge, kitchen and shower facilities for both men and women.

The sales office and decorated models at The Grandview are open daily from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. The development can be reached by taking the Santa Ana Freeway to the El Toro Road exit and driving east on El Toro Road to the development, just past Trabuco Road. More information is available by calling 859-2472.

Lantern Bay Villa sales top $2 million at preview

Lantern Bay Villa sales topped the $2 million mark during a recent two-day private pre-opening sales promotion, according to broker Joe Lovullo.

Lovullo said clients were waiting at the curb of the Lantern Bay sales office at 8 a.m. the first and second mornings of the invitation-only two day sales campaign — even though 9 a.m. was announced in the invitation as opening time.

The first five prospects bought villas in the few remaining first release group of 28, as well as in the second release group of 28 slated for delivery by early spring of 1985. Prices for the villas range between $205,000 and $600,000.

Overlooking Dana Point Harbor, Lantern Bay is an 80-acre community that combines 112 condominium style villa homes and 46 homesites.

Lantern Bay models and sales office are located at No. 8 Lantern Bay Drive in Dana Point.

Models may be seen by appointment by calling 661-2508.

Stoneybrook in MV designed to attract move-up homebuyer

A mix of interiors designed to depict the lifestyle of today's move-up buyer greeted home shoppers when Mission Viejo's Stoneybrook homes opened for sale last month. Stoneybrook is the first neighborhood built in the new gated and private community of Canyon Crest, which Mission Viejo Co. officials envision as a highlight within the master-planned Mission Viejo Community. Ultimately, Canyon Crest will house 937 luxury single-family homes and a $2 million recreation center, including an 8,000-square-foot private recreation club. The full Canyon Crest community is expected to be developed over a period of 10 years, with recreational facilities in place by early 1986.

Stoneybrook's five floor plans feature distinct interiors, ranging from bright primary colors to a tropical resort theme.

In the 2,223-square-foot Foxglen, aimed for older couples whose children are on their own or away at school, an eclectic mix of multi-toned woods, tortoise shell, glass and brass accents are blended with soft peach and wedgewood blue tones. The Foxglen plan features separate living and family rooms, both with fireplaces, a formal dining room and breakfast nook, and a loft with private bath that can be used as a third bedroom.

The Millpond plan, offering 2,184 square feet living area, features bright interiors designed for a growing family with toddlers at home. Bold splashes of colors reminiscent of a child's first box of crayons contrast with stark white backgrounds. The three-bedroom, two-bath home features a formal living room with fireplace adjacent to a step-up dining area. A separate, sunken family room, also with a fireplace, lies adjacent to the step-up breakfast nook and country-style kitchen.

Informal elegance has been combined with a tropical resort theme in the 2,449-square-foot Oakmont, with monochromatic tones of natural beiges and caramels, grass cloth wall coverings and rattan and glass accents punctuated by black and burgundy accents. A curving staircase creates a focal point in the Oakmont, which features four bedrooms, three baths, separate family and living rooms, both with fireplaces, a formal dining area with French doors opening to an outside patio, and a breakfast nook with window seat.

In the 2,645-square-foot, two-story Heathergreen plan, soft pastel tones have been set against a white and aqua background to create a contemporary environment for the mature family with teenage children. A bonus room upstairs can be used as a home entertainment center. The plan also includes separate living, family and dining rooms on the lower level of the home.

The Summerfield, the largest of the five plans offered with 3,087 square feet, aims for a feeling of formal elegance combining mauve and rose tones with natural and medium-toned woods and accents. In addition to offering four bedrooms, three full baths and separate living, family and dining rooms, the Summerfield features a bonus room and a private sitting area off the master bedrooms.

In each home, buyers will find a range of custom quality appointments reflecting the exclusive Canyon Crest lifestyle. Fireplaces are detailed with oak, marble, river rock and stone, while entries feature ceramic tile or wood parquet flooring.

Prices for Stoneybrook are expected to start at approximately $220,000.
