WHO'S NEWS

Q: I'm very interested in Richard Nixon; I think he was great at foreign affairs, although I was kind of disappointed in his handling of Vietnam. When did he develop an interest in politics?

—John Earls, Spring Valley, Ill.

A: Nixon, who exited the political stage 15 years ago Aug. 9 when he resigned as president, entered by way of campus campaigns at California's Whittier College. But he tells USA WEEKEND that he didn't get hooked on politics until World War II, when he worked in the Office of Price Administration and served overseas in the Navy. The OPA convinced him of "the dangers of excessive federal power"; the Navy gave him "an abiding sense of the United States' role in the world." So, he says, "my school years made a political career likely, but the war years made it inevitable."

—Lucy Shepard, Colchester, Vt.

A: Because it fits. It's too loose on his ring finger, and once went flying. He can't cut it down—it's inscribed.

TAKE 6: They're on tour with Al Jarreau; album No. 2 is on the way.

Q: I've heard a lot about the popular gospel group Take 6 but not about their Spread Love Foundation. What's it all about?

—Angelita Jackson, Benton Harbor, Mich.

A: The foundation set up by the jazz, a cappella singers will help children, the disabled and others in need. The Grammy-winning sextet of Huntsville, Ala., recently raised more than $18,000 to aid the retarded.

Q: John Irving is my favorite contemporary American fiction writer. Once he gets an idea, how long does it take him to write?

—Amy Dikoff, Wilmington, Del.

A: The Carp author, whose A Prayer for Owen Meany is on best-seller lists, usually takes three to four years to write a novel. He hangs on an old-fashioned typewriter at his restored farmhouse on an eastern Long Island and writes in longhand on an island off Canada. Irving, 47, is at work on a screenplay for The Cider House Rules.

Q: In light of the brouhaha about the Academy Awards show using Snow White without Disney's permission, I've been wondering: Who gave Disney permission to use the characters?

—Marguerite Naresky, La Habra, Calif.

A: Disney's creations, such as Mickey Mouse, Donald Duck and Goofy, belong to the company outright. But Disney had to buy the rights to characters created elsewhere, such as Winnie-the-Pooh, Bambi and Peter Pan. Royalties from Disney's Peter Pan go to the London Hospital for Sick Children, as willed by Peter's creator J. M. Barrie. No one owns exclusive rights to characters from folklore, such as Snow White and Robin Hood. Disney's objection to the Academy Awards skit was the use of a Snow White that looked just like Disney's. Good thing Uncle Walt—who persuaded Annette Funicello not to wear a bikini in the '60s beach-blanket movies—wasn't around to see Snow White and Rob Lowe share the stage.

Q: Have sportscasters Bob Costas of NBC and Brent Musburger of CBS played pro sports?

—Dale Chase, Boise, Idaho

A: No. The closest Costas, 37, got was playing baseball as a kid and being the last guy cut from his high school basketball team. The would-be jock says he was a good shot but, at 5 feet 7, didn't have the height. Musburger was pretty good in baseball (co-captain) and basketball (starting guard) at Shattuck Military School in Faribault, Minn., and eventually became a minor league umpire in the Midwest League. Now he's the highest-paid sportscaster ever, at $1.9 million a year, says Sport magazine.

Q: What is Rue McClanahan's real name? I like her character on The Golden Girls. We're interested in genealogy, and we have a McClanahan way back in our ancestry. Is she from Virginia?

—Dolores Leggill, Trenton, N.J.

A: The feisty golden girl was born Eddie Rue McClanahan in Hekstern, Okla. But with five husbands, she could have had her choice of surnames. Despite tabloid reports she's considering re-marrying hubby No. 1, actor Tom Bish, McClanahan claims no marriage is planned. The 1987 Emmy winner does get to play Burt Reynolds' wife in Modern Love, a fall comedy written and directed by Robby Benson.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY TO...

Della Reese, 58

"I'm always at home on my birthday and Christmas—I want people with my gifts to know where to find me," laughs the singer-actress, born July 6. Otherwise, it's busy, busy, busy: She's a madam in Eddie Murphy's fall movie, Harlem Nights, and stars in L.A. next month in a musical she helped write, His Message Is the Music. Her birthday wish? "Each year, I look for my Corniche." Rolls-Royce. "I hope my husband will have an eggshell-white one with tan leather top and interior in the driveway." Picky, picky.

QUESTION OF THE WEEK

Call him Minnesota Slim

Q: I used to follow all the pool players in New York City and was wondering what happened to Minnesota Slim. He was flashy, and he sure could make the shots.

—Dennis Freeman, Congers, N.Y.

A: Pat lives at the Hermitage Hotel in Nashville. And lives it up.

"I dance seven nights a week," he says. "I go cabaretting and sometimes I sing." He has his own pool table at the Hermitage and still plays plenty. His age? "85 to 100." Girlfriend Ginger Lynn, 36, is a Nashville singer.

The 5-foot-8 Pat has slumped down to 172 from a peak of around 250. Now that billiards is big with Baby Boomers, watch for his '60s TV show to resurface in syndication.

STILL NO. 1

Tom Peters & Bob Waterman argue the USA is now the world leader

BUT CAN WE STAY ON TOP?

For the Fourth of July weekend, the authors team up for the first time since 'In Search of Excellence,' which sold 7 million copies.

Peters and Waterman now globe-trot as industry consultants. Today, they offer a fresh perspective on the USA's place in the world.

Peters at Ruckard, Va., GE jet-engine plant; Waterman in San Francisco neighborhood.

MAX ADLERMAN-HELLING, GNYZ

Awriter we admire moved from California to New York City — and reported that a third of the city is so dangerous that even the police won't go there.

Before you start shaking your head in disgust, we should add that the report was written by Mark Twain about 100 years ago.

Like every generation, ours is prone to believe that life was perfect in the past — and we've really messed it up. Granted, all is not right in the United States today. There's a lot we must do to improve our schools and control drugs. We have created a dependent set of poor who need our help. And we must bring down the deficit.

But the USA, still is No. 1 in the world. By far.

In fact, this is the most exciting time as a worker, as a manager or as a U.S.

citizen to be alive in our nation's history. There's so much openness and change. It's a wonderful time to be experimenting and inventing things.

Look at our economic and military strength, and our personal freedoms. Nobody in the world comes close. And U.S. culture is everywhere. You can travel to any country, including the U.S.S.R., and hear our music, and see our movies.

Saying No. 1 won't be easy. America got its start with, and still thrives on, great causes and exhilarating visions. Apple Computer Inc. started that way, as did IBM Corp. Putting a man on the moon was like that.

Now most of our frontiers are negative: fending off Japan and fighting drugs and the destruction of the environment. It's hard to get anybody charged up with a negative vision. We need to build on our strength and say, "Let's turn it around. Let's solve the arms race. Let's solve the crisis in our schools. Let's make the USA renowned for quality."

Immigrant power: If you were sitting in the U.S.S.R. or China today, the USA would look like a great glowing beacon of hope and opportunity. Everyone wants to attend U.S. universities: Foreign students earn 21.1 percent of our doctorate degrees. China alone has about 40,000 college students here. The upheaval there is at least partly due to the ideas students took home.

And if you're black or Hispanic or Jewish in some other part of the world, you look to the USA. You see people like yourself doing well. That creates direction for the rest of the world.

In fact, our cultural diversity could be our greatest strength of all. There's a wonderful new surge of immigrants.

Hispanics have helped Los Angeles become the leading manufacturing city in the USA, with well over 900,000 general factory workers. In some of L.A.'s industries, Hispanics are almost half the work force. Orange County, Calif., has 250 Chinese, Cambodian, black and Hispanic business start-ups.

An example: Fireplace Manufacturers of Santa Ana, Calif. — with an all-Hispanic work force — exports fireplaces around the world. At midday, on company time, they teach English.

And AST Research of Irvine, Calif., is a Chinese-Pakistani start-up that employs 1,400.

What we see on Dan Rather's news is all the shootings in L.A. The real story is people working themselves to the bone, the way our grandparents did.

Reinventing ourselves: Another made-in-the-USA virtue: In this country, if you start a company and go belly-up, it's reasonably easy to start over again. In fact, it's almost a mark of honor. Apple founder Steve Jobs got pushed out of Apple. Next thing you know, he's on the cover of Nespresso starting NeXT Computer. You couldn't do that in Switzerland. In Europe, business failure cripples your career forever.

In Japan, when you wash out at the high school level, you just can't go on. In the USA, you can succeed if you've got the motivation. Michael Dell quit college his freshman year and founded Dell Computer of Austin, Texas. Now 23, he's worth about $94 million.

Many who worry about our place in the world point to Japan's economic miracle. In fact, USA WEEKEND's poll (results, next page) shows that many of us think Japan is No. 1.

For those who do worry about Japan, a few facts: Japan's productivity — its output per hour worked — is still only 72 percent of ours. It's 91 percent of ours in manufacturing but only 63 percent in the service sector, the sector that dominates both economies.

We have about 12 percent of the world export market; Japan has 11 percent. We created more than 30 million jobs in the past decade — most with good wages.

Yes, we run big trade deficits with Japan, Korea and Germany. But per person, the amount we buy from them is close to what they buy from us — the Japanese, for example, spend about 1.7 percent of their incomes on imports from the USA. We spend almost the same percentage of our incomes — 1.8 percent — on Japanese imports. And our huge, unsung heroes in Japan, from IBM and 3M to McDonald's and 7-Eleven, don't show up in the trade figures because sales are in yen.

True, Japan's gross national product (GNP, the total value of all goods and services produced) is growing faster than ours. But Japanese people pay a high price for their success.

They work extremely long hours (see chart). And once you've earned money in Japan, what do you do with it? Money is supposed to buy a great lifestyle. But it's very hard to live well terribly crowded Japan. Things most people take for granted here, such as ring golf, are next to impossible. In Japan, you get great service, but that's because they use two times as many people to get the same job done.

True Value SUMMER SAVINGS

Decline, not decay: If we're doing so well, why are so many people talking about our decline? We enjoyed a period in the end of World War II to the '60s and early '70s in which we didn't have much real competition. We were like a great baseball team that never lost. Then suddenly parts of the rest of the world started to get very good. So our baseball team that always won started losing some games. Our decline didn't get that much worse. Other countries just got better.

It feels as if we've lost position. In a historical sense, this extraordinary period following World War II — when the world's two other economic powers, Japan and Germany, died, and Britain flattened — was fairyland.

We did give up much of our lead without a fight. During the '70s, our productivity growth was almost flat. We really were producing pretty junky products, from GE dishwashers to Ford cars. Japan and Germany's big advantage was turning out quality stuff. As consumers, we picked up on that and, of a sudden, the USA lost a position we used to enjoy.

The Japanese and German success finally scared us into action. So, to compete, we're empowering workers and automating the heck out of manufacturing.

Across the USA we have world-class, highly automated plants. At IBM'sewriter plant in Lexington, Ky., the man's hand seldom touches items on the assembly line. The line is so flexible, you could reprogram it to make toasters if you wanted. Factories run by Motorola, Hewlett-Packard, Maytag and Ford Motor are among the world's best. Ford workers at the squeaky-clean Taurus plant in Illinois can shut down the assembly line if they spot a defect.

Even in steel, our minimills, like Nucor and Chaparral, are tops. Chaparral in Texas makes steel for only 25 percent of the cost of the big steelmakers. It exports to Germany, even Asia.

You can't go anywhere now and not hear about quality. The training programs are going wild. Johnsonville Foods of Sheboygan Falls, Wis., has four plants with over 400 people. Number of supervisors? Zero. The place is run by highly trained, self-managing teams.

Cashing in on service: One of our key leadership areas is service. We've got some awesome examples. McDonald's sets a standard for the world. So do Federal Express, Wal-Mart and The Limited.

Nordstrom set a new standard for department stores. A week doesn't pass by without an incredible Nordstrom service story popping up.

Recently, a woman who had lost her child in her eighth month of pregnancy went in to purchase a dress at Nordstrom in California's Orange County. The salesperson wouldn't accept her money, saying, "The dress is on Nordstrom." And the salesperson didn't even check with management.

Among airlines, American and Delta are service kings. American has authorized ticketing agents to handle almost any customer problem without calling a supervisor. The only time a supervisor is called is when the employee has to say no. Like Nordstrom, American has given employees awesome power.

Delta really does feel like family. When the airline was having problems, Delta employees took up a collection and bought the company a $30 million airplane called The Spirit of Delta.

Stew Leonard's grocery in Norwalk, Conn., has started a bus service that he calls the "World's Largest Shopping Cart." The bus goes around to senior centers in the area to pick up elderly shoppers. Stew gave out free cookies and gifts on Mother's Day. Riding his bus has become a regular social event.

A tough road ahead: Of course, staying ahead will be an awesome challenge. We're now one of many high-wage nations. A high-wage nation must compete on the basis of quality and intelligence. We've always been the king of mass production, but we never gave a hoot about quality before.

So we have to learn a whole new set of tricks. General Motors' cars must get better — faster — than Honda's and Toyota's. Service firms such as Nordstrom must become the rule, not the exception.

What our companies do is critically important. If the economy is not vital and growing, the country can't support a strong defense. More significantly, if people abroad lose respect for us economically, then the whole ball of wax crumbles. One reason people like our movies and our culture is that it's all tied together. You're perceived as No. 1, so people copy you.

Today, the U.S. worker handling a broom — or the manager sitting at a computer — has to look at life differently. We're basically competing in a global economy. If we don't empower our people to get smarter as fast as our Japanese, Korean or German counterparts, then we'll slowly fall behind.

At Chaparral Steel, based in Midlothian, Texas, the night watchman enters quality and accounting data into the computer. He even does safety inspections.

Now that's an example of building and using the talent of every person.

As part of our improvements, our public schools must restructure, just as companies have. We have to teach people to be flexible. More creativity is what we need, not drills and memorization. We have to let people move ahead and succeed at their own pace.

The typical American tends not to be a very good listener. Since World War II, we have assumed it was our role to tell others how to do things. Somewhere along the way, we forgot how to listen to the rest of the world.

Our executives are by far the most naive on international affairs. We only just recently got into the global market. Not too long ago, one of us bought a cleverly designed flashlight in Hamburg, West Germany. Surprisingly, it was "Made in the USA." But the instructions inside were printed only in English. When will we learn?

We need leadership: As you can see, we are anything but on our last legs. Our place in the world won't precipitously decline. We are and will remain one of the tiny handful of nations that will shape the future of the world.

Every generation wants a leader to part the waters. Phony optimism like Ronald Reagan's doesn't cut it. But just as silly is Jimmy Carter's vision of perpetual malaise. What we need is something in between. Let's take off the rose-colored glasses, realize the continuing responsibility that being a leader puts on us all and articulate an exciting positive vision.

Let's continue to be the role model for the world.

THIS WEEKEND'S PASSIONS

A genteel Bourbon Street weekend

Life's pleasures include reading the paper, walking to church and betting 'two whole dollars on each race' at the track

By Lindy Boggs
U.S. Representative, New Orleans

I go to New Orleans almost every weekend — I love going home. It's difficult for anybody to believe that coming home to Bourbon Street is the most tranquil time of my week. But I don't hear street noise, even in my garden.

WEEKEND WOMAN

You hear the birds chirping, or the water flowing in the fountain. All of your perspective seems deeper; it puts you in a spirit of tranquility. I just feel so comfortable, so at ease when I'm here. It's good for being able to put everything else in its proper perspective. It's the smelling-the-roses-as-you-go syndrome.

The proportions of this funny old house of mine are very pleasant. It's been in the family for years. It was built by a Spaniard in 1795, after a tragic city-wide fire in 1794. It's three stories, brick, with arches and French doors. I spend most of my time in the gallery on the second floor, where I can look out into the garden. Its roof is a sun deck, and I love going up there in the late afternoons. It's great to sit back and allow my old house to envelop me.

I don't get a chance to stay at home much, though. Often if I'm home, I'm having a meeting. My schedule on the weekends is pretty full — ribbon-cuttings, meetings, appearances. But it's what I do. I have no notion of what I'd do otherwise. I feel fine, and I'm never bored.

Usually I'll leave Washington, D.C., for New Orleans either Friday morning or night, and someone meets me at the plane. I may go straight to some event. Then on Saturday morning, if the schedule allows, I love to go to 7:30 Mass at St. Louis Cathedral, two blocks away on Jackson Square. The French Quarter is a little town on Saturday mornings — a little 18th-century, 19th-century town. It's a walking community.

On the way to church, I pass Preservation Hall, Pat O'Brien's, and Papa Noel, the sorcerer who reads palms from a cart he has set up on the sidewalk. It's just wonderful. People are out cleaning the sidewalks and they stop to tell me their problems — lately they've been talking about the bad economy.

After church, I might go with friends to La Marquise or La Madeleine, two French pastry shops in the Quarter. We'll have croissants and cafe au lait. I usually stop by the A&P on the way home for a newspaper, or visit with the people.

If I have time, I can go home, read the paper in the gallery, look out at the garden. When you look out at your garden, your whole world comes together. It's a mostly green-and-white garden, with splashes of color — cool in the summer.

I have so much required reading to do that I rarely get to pick up a book for pleasure. But I'm old enough to have many friends who are published authors. Walker Percy and his wife used to live close to me in the Garden District. Louis Auchincloss is also a friend. Now I'm reading Citizens: A Chronicle of the French Revolution. I learned that Marie Antoinette did not say "Let them eat cake." Isn't that horrible?

I watch little TV on the weekends and rarely go to the movies. Occasionally I get to the racetrack, which I greatly enjoy. I bet two whole dollars on each race. I usually go to the Fairgrounds in New Orleans. I love the horses, the atmosphere, the clubhouse, and I always see lots of friends. I had horses all my life.

The worst part of my weekends now is getting around to all the events — arranging rides, making certain I keep my schedule on time. Occasionally if there's something beautiful blooming in the garden I hate to leave.

I've been commuting for 16 years, so I have a system that works fairly well. Midseason I swap what I've been wearing in Washington for what I've been wearing in New Orleans. If and when I retire, I'd live in New Orleans. But when people ask about that, I tell them — like Scarlett — I'll think about that tomorrow.

THIS WEEKEND'S

10 un-packed parks

You've suddenly decided to head into the great outdoors. But record numbers of people already have booked campsites at the popular national parks. For those who didn't plan ahead, USA WEEKEND offers the best uncrowded alternatives. All you need to do is show up.

Voyageurs National Park, Minn.

With warm days and cool nights, this park in northern Minnesota should be packed in the summer, but it's not. The 120 primitive campsites reachable by boat are never filled. And if you can go between July 15 and Aug. 15, you'll hit peak blueberry season to boot, says the park's Bill Gardiner. The 220,000 acres of forested wilderness and four huge lakes offer fishing, swimming, canoeing, hiking and wildlife, from wolves to loons. Nearly 40 percent of the park is water, and Gardiner says getting out on it is a must. There are tour operators who'll take you out or you can rent your own boat. You can even rent a houseboat, if you want to spend your entire vacation afloat.

For a great introduction to the area, take the guided tour on Namakan Lake with a ranger in a 26-foot canoe.

Big South Fork National River and Recreation Area, Tenn.

This is another underused gem, with more than 350 miles of trails through woods, over rivers and along some of northeastern Tennessee's most beautiful ridges. Campsites range from luxury RV hookups to wilderness spots where you won't run into a soul — although you may run into deer, razorback hogs, coyotes and fox. The park is a canoeist's, kayaker's and rafter's heaven, with the South Fork of the Cumberland River running through deep, rocky gorges. You can also rent horses, if you prefer to see the sights by land. An absolute must, says park archeologist Tom Desjean, is a visit to the spectacular twin sandstone arches in the northeastern part of the park. "It's an astounding geological feature. Bring your camera."

Chiricahua National Monument, Ariz.

Despite its Southwestern setting, this isn't an oven in the summer. With the park more than 5,000 feet above sea level, you'll find Canadian-like climates, with temperatures ranging from the 80s during the day to the 50s at night. Surrounded by the Coronado National Forest, the park features great hikes through pine, oak and juniper with beautiful canyon views. The park is also known for its late afternoon thunderstorms, so bring rain gear and sit back and watch the show. Campsites inside the park's 12,000 acres are limited, but you can camp anywhere in the surrounding national forest. For a great introduction to the scenery, the park's Chuck Milliken recommends the drive up to Massai Point. And echoing his Tennessee counterpart, Milliken says, "Bring a camera."

GOOD BADLANDS VIEW: The wild Badlands National Park promises rugged camping and howling coyotes at night.

Colorado National Monument, Colo.

This park in west-central Colorado suffers from a simple affliction, says chief ranger Hank Schoch: a name that doesn't do justice to its incredible beauty. At the eastern edge of the Colorado Plateau, the park is a wonderland of canyons, rock formations and caves, with hiking, bicycling, horseback riding and camping galore. Evening programs offer everything from wildlife lectures to a history of human occupancy of the area. If you want to get off land and onto the water, the Colorado River flows nearby, perfect for rafting and swimming. Schoch's top tip: Take the 23-mile drive between the park's two entrances for some eye-catching views, then make sure you "get off the trail and into the back country." There you'll run into di-inosaur fossils and the fading evidence of prehistoric Indian culture, and maybe even a bighorn sheep or mountain lion.

Badlands National Park, S.D.

There's only one way to describe the Badlands in southwestern South Dakota: otherworldly. If you've never been interested in geology, this place will make you a convert, with its wild, moonscape-like hills, buttes and steep-walled valleys. The park is inhabited by coyotes, bighorn sheep, bison and prairie dogs, and if you're lucky, you'll catch a glimpse of a bobcat. Campsites rarely fill, says park naturalist Jay Shuler, and there's plenty to do, from well-kept nature trails to self-guided wanderings. The Oglala Sioux exhibit at the Cedar Pass visitors center is a must, says Shuler, documenting the proud heritage of one of the tribes that battled Custer at the Little Bighorn.

Katmai National Park, Alaska

Forget the car. This place is so isolated, you have to take a float plane into it. But the trip is more than worth it, says the park's Lori Rummele. You could wander this 4,361-square-mile park in southwestern Alaska for a lifetime. A week of fishing for salmon and trout, with some bear-watching thrown in, will more than satisfy any civilization-locked adventurer's appetite for wilderness. Dress? Be ready for anything. July days can be freezing or boiling, and insect repellent isn't a bad idea. But if your idea of heaven is fishing and fish, bring a rod and your appetite.

Cape Lookout National Seashore, N.C.

This is definitely for those who want to get away, either by foot or four wheels. Accessible only by boat, the park's three islands are assuredly wild: no water hook-ups, no showers. In fact, no water. "If you plan ahead, it's a great way to go," says park ranger Bob Patton. Bring water, cooler of food and a tent, and you've got 10 miles of sandy, unspoiled coast at your fingertips. Four-wheelers are restricted to two of the islands, so if you want to get away from internal combustion, skip down to island three, Shackleford Banks, where loggerhead turtles nest. There are also populations of wild sheep, goats, cows and horses, and the birdwatching is first rate. And you can wander inland to explore the 236-year-old Portsmouth Village at the northern tip of Core Banks.

Biscayne National Park, Fla.

Located outside Miami, this isn't exactly the coolest point on Earth in July. But the heat also means you won't find crowds, says the park's Lorenza Fong. What you will find is plenty of water, since the park is mostly in Biscayne Bay, and your pick of campsites on Elliott and Boca Chita keys. You'll also find mosquitoes, so bring repellent and a good, tight tent. Add your canoe, fishing rod, snorkel and flip-flops, too, to take advantage of the park's reefs and outstanding fishing. Elliott Key is the more civilized of the two, with rest rooms and fresh water. Boca Chita key is for the more adventurous, with no amenities other than peace and quiet.

Pinnacles National Monument, Calif.

Just inland from Monterey, this is a hiker's paradise. Its main feature is the remains of an ancient volcano that has slipped 195 miles up the San Andreas Fault. Rock spires, spectacular canyons and grand views are highlights. Ranger Augusto Konde recommends early-morning or late-afternoon hikes onto the rock formations for clear-day views to the coast 40 miles away. Or go explore one of the many caves. Private campgrounds on the outskirts provide ample camping.

Multicolored sandstone cliffs, wide beaches, sand dunes, waterfalls, inland lakes and ponds, woods and wildlife make this park on Lake Superior hard to beat, says ranger Gregg Bruff. With more than 70,000 acres in the Upper Peninsula, the hiking is great, especially the 43-mile trail that skirts beaches and cliffs along the lake shores. The trail also offers wilderness camping along its entire length. Bruff recommends seeing Chapel and Miner's waterfalls in the western part of the park, and the canoeing and boating on both Little and Big Beaver lakes and Sable Lake. You can try your hand at fishing them, though you'll have better luck in the spring and fall, he says. Temperatures are cool in July, ranging from the upper 70s during the day to low 50s at night, so bring appropriate gear.

FIRST MEN ON THE MOON
$5 COMMEMORATIVE COIN

An affirmation of American ingenuity and courage, available at the face value of only $5.00. Now you can hold a piece of history in your hand.

Twenty years ago, America landed the first men on the moon. And this year, the self-confident and heroic spirit that put America's flag on the moon's Sea of Tranquility will be officially marked with the issuance of the First Men on the Moon $5 Commemorative Coin. This legal tender coin is being issued by the Republic of the Marshall Islands, where America has an important space tracking station.

The coin dramatically depicts the triumphant moment when American astronauts became the first men on the moon. About the same diameter as a Silver Dollar, the coin is even thicker — and painstakingly minted in a brilliant uncirculated finish. Each coin is protectively encased, after passing exacting minting standards, and is accompanied by an authoritative narrative.

This historic coin will be issued on the anniversary date — July 20, 1989 — and it will be minted only in 1989. It will be available only for a short time and in limited quantity. The coin is offered without any premium over its face value of $5.00, plus $1.00 per coin for shipping, handling, and insurance. Pat Morita, one funny fellow

As 'Karate Kid III' opens this week, we unmask the stoic Mr. Miyagi

Pat Morita's Karate Kid character Mr. Miyagi is so formal you feel like bowing when you meet the 57-year-old actor. But if you did, he'd bow with laughter. Morita is surprisingly glib, slangy and irreverent.

He started in show business as a stand-up comic. And he makes light of everything, including his long illness as a child, and his internment during World War II. "One day I was a very sick child, the next I was Public Enemy No. 1." But it's his stern Karate Kid persona that has brought him fame and a hefty bank account.

You started performing pretty late, at 30. When were you first drawn to show biz?

When I spent nine years in the hospital with spinal tuberculosis, the radio mesmerized me. That magic little box brought laughter, tears, commercial spots. The seed was planted then, but I never had aspirations. Since I was in a body cast for seven years, it was possible that I might not grow up to be anything.

You started your performing as a comic. Are you naturally funny?

No. I couldn't sing or dance but I could talk. I figured if I learned mike technique, I could make a living as an emcee.

Comedians can have a hard time crossing over to dramatic roles. Did you?

Absolutely. They wouldn't even let me read for Karate Kid, originally. When they did, I became Mr. Miyagi before their eyes.

What's the appeal of The Karate Kid?

The chemistry between the old man and the kid became bigger than life. It shows genuine, loving, human conduct.

Do you have that kind of relationship with co-star Ralph Macchio?

Oh, we give each other a call now and then. When he comes out to California, he'll call and say "Hey, Pop, what's happening? Wanna take in a ballgame?" And we try to.

In The Karate Kid III, Daniel turns against Miyagi. Inevitable?

No, the writers needed something to make this story interesting again. And it lets us see our heroes sit opposite ends of thinking and behavior.

How does that happen?

Some relaunch insists on challenging Daniel and Miyagi refuses to train him: To defend a trophy, karate means nothing. To defend honor or life, karate means something.

So Miyagi doesn't train him?

No, he does, eventually. Otherwise, how are we going to do Karate Kid IV?

PAT MORITA: He's happy to be in demand, but would rather "take a break and go off to Kauai."

LYNE GOLDSTEIN

Born: Honolulu, July 29, 1932, in Utah. Call. Dubbed "Pat" by a hospital priest.

Show biz training: "I studied comedians — Udo Kyo, Martin and Lewis, Bill Cosby, Larry Brown — plus studied the art of comedy and performance at the University of Hawaii. I taught me by listening and copying how to write."

Career highlights: The Karate Kid, which earned him an Oscar nomination. TV series: Happy Days, The Fonz, Shogun.

Latest in a round circle tour: the beach in L.A. Currently actor: in The Karate Kid III and for Columbia negotiations on TV, fighting projects.

Will there be a No. 4?
I'd rather do No. 17, then No. 11, then come back to No. 4.

Was Mr. Miyagi a character you could relate to easily?

Miyagi is an amalgam of my father (a Japanese immigrant who worked as a fruit picker) and uncle: very stable, straightforward.

Does that also describe you?

In one way, I am becoming more like him: I'm finally becoming decisive. But he doesn't have any fun. He never gets any girls....

You're in the midst of a second divorce. Does that mean you do get the girls?

Let's just say that I'm enjoying being a bachelor. I've been married all my life — since I was 20 years old — and a little freedom is great.

Nicorette® (nicotine polacrifex)PATIENT INFORMATION

Description: Nicorette is a sugar-free, flavored chewing gum that is used to help you stop smoking cigarettes. Each piece of gum contains 2 mg of nicotine which is released by chewing. The nicotine is absorbed through the lining of the mouth and enters the bloodstream.

Use: Nicorette is used as a temporary aid to help you stop smoking. Your use of Nicorette must be combined with a stop-smoking program that includes education, counseling, and psychological support under the guidance of your doctor or dentist. This combined approach gives you a better chance of overcoming the social habits as well as the chemical (nicotine) dependency involved in smoking.

NICORETTE SHOULD BE USED ONLY WHEN YOU ARE SURE THAT YOU WISH TO STOP SMOKING CIGARETTES IMMEDIATELY AND COMPLETELY.

Nicorette, because it is a source of nicotine, may decrease the frequency and severity of nicotine withdrawal symptoms which some people experience when smoking is stopped. Some of these withdrawal symptoms are cravings for cigarettes, irritability, anxiety, difficulty in thinking, restlessness, headache, drowsiness, and stomach upset.

YOU SHOULD NOT USE NICORETTE:

1. If you are a child under age 18
2. If you are a non-smoker
3. If you have problems (muscle or joint) with your jaw, such as TMJ
4. If YOU ARE OR MAY BECOME PREGNANT.

5. If you are breast feeding.

Current medical opinion considers that nicotine in any form may be harmful to an unborn child. Your doctor may wish to give you a pregnancy test before prescribing Nicorette. If you decide to use Nicorette and are in the childbearing years, an effective form of birth control is advised. If you suspect that you are pregnant, you should stop using Nicorette and talk to your doctor at once. Nicotine in any form passes freely into breast milk and may be harmful to the breast-fed infant.

TO ASSESS THE BENEFIT OF USING NICORETTE AS A STOP-SMOKING AID TO HELP YOU STOP SMOKING, COMPARE WITH THE RISK OF CONTINUING TO SMOKE CIGARETTES. YOU SHOULD CONSULT WITH YOUR DOCTOR ON IDENTIFYING RISKS AND THE DRUGS IF YOU HAVE ANY OF THE FOLLOWING CONDITIONS:

1. Heart disease, a history of heart disease, or believe you are being treated for heart disease
2. High blood pressure, ulcers, or glandular (endocrine) conditions
3. Thyroid disease, ulcers, or glaucoma (eye) conditions
4. Dental problems, dentures, or bridges (dentures, as with other gums, may stick to or damage dental work).

5. Allergy or sensitivity to any of the ingredients in Nicorette. Drug Interactions: Smoking with or without the use of Nicorette may affect your response to other medications. If you are taking other drugs in addition to Nicorette, please discuss with your doctor the possible need for adjustment of those medications.

Side Effects: Side effects of Nicorette which may occur include light-headedness, nausea and vomiting, throat and mouth irritation, hiccups, and stomach upset. Most of these side effects are controlled by chewing more slowly. Other effects sometimes seen include mouth ulcers, jaw muscle aches, headaches, heart palpitations, and more than the usual amount of saliva in the mouth. If these effects occur, they usually do so during the first few days of therapy. In addition, the mechanical effects of gum chewing (any gum) may include injury to the mouth or teeth, jaw aches, and hiccups from swallowing air. These side effects may also be reduced by proper chewing technique. There are other less common side effects which have been reported with the use of Nicorette. Your doctor can answer questions you may have about possible side effects.

IMMEDIATELY REPORT ANY DISTURBANCE ON UNEXPECTED SYMPTOMS OR CONCERNS TO YOUR DOCTOR. Drug Abuse and Dependence: You may transfer your dependence on the nicotine in cigarettes to a dependence on the nicotine in Nicorette. After you have used Nicorette for three months, the amount of gum used each day should be gradually reduced to decrease the risk of nicotine dependence, so that before the end of six months, you should have stopped using the gum. Prolonged use of Nicorette for longer than is recommended does not improve your chances of quitting the smoking habit.

THE USE OF NICORETTE BEYOND SIX MONTHS IS NOT RECOMMENDED.
Overdosage: Nicotine overdosage may occur if many pieces of Nicorette are chewed at the same time or one right after the other. Risk of poisoning from swallowing the gum is small because the nicotine in Nicorette is not well absorbed from the stomach and intestines. Signs and symptoms of overdose may include nausea, increased saliva, stomach pain, vomiting, dizziness, cold sweat, weakness, dizziness, changes in hearing, sleep, vision, coordination, and reflexes.

IF AN UNRESPONSIVE PERSON ON A TABLET CHERRY OR FRUIT FLAVOR NICORETTE CHARTER YOUR INSTRUCTIONS ON LABEL. FOLLOW THE GUM CHARTER YOUR INSTRUCTIONS ON LABEL. FOLLOW THE GUM CHARTER YOUR INSTRUCTIONS ON LABEL.

Caution: The amount of Nicorette gum chewed will vary with each person. The gum should be chewed slowly on and off for about 30 minutes, whenever you feel the urge to smoke. If the gum is chewed too quickly, symptoms in response to rapidly chewing several pieces of gum (light-headed, dizzy, or lightheaded, or to heavy sweating, hiccups, or an irritation of the mouth and throat).

Most people require 10-12 pieces per day during their first month of treatment. More or less may be needed by the individual patient.

YOU SHOULD NOT USE MORE THAN 20 PIECES OF NICORETTE GUM PER DAY.

Revolutionary! 6 French films

By Susan Wloszczyns

July 14 marks the bicentennial of the storming of the Bastille. Say Vive la Revolution! with six decades of revolutionary French movies on tape. (Subtitles except where noted.)

Rules of the Game. The name of the game is l'amour. The players? Aristocrats and servants who spend a weekend in the country trying to untangle the knots in their affairs. Justly considered a masterpiece. 1939, Embassy.

Beauty and the Beast. A "once upon a time" with surreal appeal. Jean Cocteau's poem for the eyes has a pussycat of a Beast who purrs when his captive lovely is near. In his castle, a chorus line of arms sways while holding candles, and diamond tears trickle from Beauty's eyes. 1946, Embassy.

Breathless. Jean-Paul Belmondo is a beat generation Bogey, a hood who exudes cool with every puff of his cigarette. Director Jean-Luc Godard created not so much a movie as a mood — and it still will leave you breathless. 1959, multiple distributors.

A Man and a Woman. And plenty of pleasant scenery and a lot of chitchat and that incessant theme song ("Da da dah, da da dee-dee dah, da da dee-dee dah..."). 1966, Warner, dubbed.

Cesar and Rosalie. With his basset-hound face and overripe mannerisms, Yves Montand has more Gallic charm than a sidewalk cafe. He's a businessman who must share his lover (kittenish Romy Schneider) with a younger man (Sami Frey). 1972, Axon.

Divs. A postman on a scooter is chased by about half of Paris after making a bootleg opera tape. Action for the Dirty Harry crowd, arias for artsy types, eye-zonking sets for those who take a shine to neon. 1982, MGM/UA.

BRIEF SUMMARY OF PRESCRIPTION INFORMATION
CAUTION

DESCRIPTION
Nicorette (nicotine polacrilex) contains nicotine bound to an ion exchange resin in a sugar-free flavored chewing gum base. Nicotine is absorbed through the buccal mucosa when Nicorette is chewed. Each piece of Nicorette contains nicotine polacrilex equivalent to 2 mg nicotine and also contains flavor, glycerin, gum base, sodium bicarbonate, sodium carbonate, and sorbitol. Nicorette is to be used as an adjunct to smoking cessation programs. The chemical name for nicotine is (S)-3-(1-methyl-2-pyrrolidyl) pyridine.

INDICATIONS AND USAGE
Nicorette is indicated as a temporary aid to the cigarette smoker seeking to give up his or her smoking habit while participating in a behavioral modification program under medical or dental supervision.

The efficacy of Nicorette as an aid to smoking cessation was demonstrated in clinical studies which showed that Nicorette gum, in comparison to control chewing gums, increased the likelihood of smoking cessation among participants in behavioral modification programs. As used in the context of this labeling, behavioral modification refers to supervised programs of education, counseling and psychological support. The efficacy of Nicorette use without concurrent participation in a behavioral modification program has not been established.

In general, smokers who have a high "physical" type of nicotine dependence are most likely to benefit from the use of Nicorette. The following subject characteristics are consistent with a "physical" type of nicotine dependence: (1) smoke more than 15 cigarettes per day, (2) prefer brands of cigarettes with nicotine levels greater than 0.8 mg/cigarette, (3) usually inhale the smoke frequently and deeply, (4) smoke the first cigarette within 30 minutes of arising, (5) find the first cigarette in the morning the hardest to give up, (6) smoke more frequently during the morning than the rest of the day, (7) find it difficult to refrain from smoking in places where it is forbidden, or (8) smoke even when they are so ill they are confined to bed most of the day.

The benefits of Nicorette use beyond three months have not been demonstrated.

CONTRAINDICATIONS
Nicorette is contraindicated in non smokers.
Nicorette is contraindicated in patients during the immediate post myocardial infarction period, patients with life-threatening arrhythmias, and patients with severe or worsening angina pectoris. (See WARNINGS.)

Also, Nicorette is contraindicated in patients with acute myocardial infarction.

Current medical opinion indicates that nicotine in any form may be harmful to an unborn child. Nicorette and cigarettes both contain nicotine.
Nicorette may cause fetal harm when administered to a pregnant woman. Use of cigarettes or Nicorette during the last trimester has been associated with a decrease in fetal breathing movements. These effects may be the result of decreased placental perfusion caused by nicotine. Few reports of miscarriages have been received, and a relationship to drug therapy as a contributing factor cannot be excluded. Studies in pregnant drug smokers have shown that maternal nicotine administration produced acidosis, hypoxia and hypercarbia in the fetus.

Nicotine has been shown to be teratogenic in rats treated subcutaneously with 25 mg/kg, which is approximately 300 times the human buccal dose. Studies in rats and monkeys have not demonstrated a teratogenic effect of nicotine in doses which would occur during cigarette smoking.

Nicorette is therefore contraindicated in women who are or may become pregnant, and female patients should be advised to take adequate precautions to avoid becoming pregnant. The physician may wish to consider a pregnancy test before instituting therapy with Nicorette. If this drug is used during pregnancy, or if the patient becomes pregnant while taking this drug, the patient should be apprised of the potential hazard to the fetus.

WARNINGS
The risks of nicotine to patients with certain cardiovascular and endocrine diseases should be carefully weighed against the benefits of including Nicorette in a smoking cessation program in these patients. Specifically, patients with coronary heart disease (history of myocardial infarction and/or angina pectoris), serious cardiac arrhythmias, or vasospastic diseases (Raynaud's disease, Prinzmetal variant angina) should be carefully screened and excluded before Nicorette is prescribed. Occasional reports of tachycardia occurring in association with the use of Nicorette have been reported; however, if an increase in cardiovascular symptoms occurs with the use of Nicorette, it should be discontinued.

As the action of nicotine on the adrenal medulla (release of catecholamines) does not appear to be affected by tolerance, Nicorette should be used with caution in patients with hyperthyroidism, pheochromocytoma or insulin-dependent diabetes. Cigarette smoking is felt to play a protective role in hyperthyroidism and peptic ulcer disease. Therefore, Nicorette should be used in patients with systemic hypertension or peptic ulcer (active or inactive) only when the benefits of including Nicorette in a smoking cessation program outweigh the risks.

PRESCRIPTIONS
Nicorette should be used with caution in patients with oral or pharyngeal inflammation and in patients with a history of esophagitis or peptic ulcer.

The dosage form of Nicorette dictates that it be used with caution in patients whose dental problems might be exacerbated by chewing gum. In such patients prior dental evaluation may be advisable.

Nicorette is sugar-free and has been formulated to minimize stickiness. As with other gums, however, the degree to which Nicorette may stick to dentures, dental caps or partial dentures may depend on the materials from which they are made and other factors such as amount of saliva produced, possible interaction with denture adhesives, denture cleaning compounds, degree of mouth due to other causes and salivary constituents. Should an excessive degree of stickiness to dental work occur, there is the possibility that as with other gums, Nicorette may damage dental work. If this should occur, the patient should discontinue its use and consult a physician or dentist.

The residual use of Nicorette by ex-smokers is not to be encouraged because the chronic consumption of nicotine is toxic and addictive. The physician must, however, weigh the relative risks of a possible return to smoking versus continued, long-term use of the gum.

Instructions for Patients: The patient instruction sheet is attached at the end of the prescription labeling kit. It is intended for distribution by the pharmacist and includes in the package of Nicorette dispensed to the patient. It contains important detailed information on patient education, risks and adverse effects and instructions on how to use Nicorette properly.

Drug Interactions: Smoking cessation, with or without nicotine substitutes, may alter response to environment exposures in ex-smokers. Smoking is considered to increase susceptibility and may lower blood levels of drugs such as theophylline, caffeine, theophylline, theophylline and theophylline, through enzyme induction. Consideration of smoking may result in increased levels of these drugs. Absorption of theophylline may be decreased, and the "toxic" concentration of theophylline may be decreased by smoking cessation. Other reported effects of smoking which do not involve enzyme induction, include reduced placental perfusion and decreased fetal oxygenation, and increased blood pressure with vasoconstriction, which may also relate to the hemodynamic effects of nicotine. Smoking cessation may reduce these actions. Both smoking and nicotine can increase circulating cortisol and catecholamines. Therapy with adrenergic agonists or with antihypertensive drugs may need to be adjusted accordingly to changes in nicotine therapy or smoking status.

Contraindications, Pregnancy, Administration of Facility: Nicotine use not recommended in the United States and elsewhere.

Cigarette reports indicate that nicotine is either an irritant or a tumor-promoter in rats, when it is continuously administered to pregnant and lactating, or lactating, females of rodents, may be carcinogenic in rats. Carcinoma was not produced in the Ames Salmonella test.

Special Handling: Nicorette gum should be kept in its original container until the time of use.

Patent: Nicorette (nicotine polacrilex) is a registered trademark of Lakeside Pharmaceuticals.

decision should be made whether to discontinue nursing or to discontinue the drug, taking into account the importance of the drug to the mother.
Pediatric Use: Safety and effectiveness in children and adolescents who smoke have not been evaluated.

ADVERSE REACTIONS

Adverse reactions reported in association with the use of Nicorette include both local effects and systemic effects representing the pharmacologic action of nicotine. Rare reports of an apparent severe allergic reaction have been received.

Local side effects: Mechanical effects of gum chewing include traumatic injury to oral mucosa or teeth, jaw ache, and irritation secondary to air swallowing. These side effects may be minimized by modifying chewing techniques. Oral mucosal changes such as stomatitis, glossitis, gingivitis, pharyngitis, and aphthous ulcers, in addition to changes in taste perception, can occur during smoking cessation efforts with or without the use of Nicorette.

Systemic side effects: Although the systemic effects seen in trials were generally similar, the reported frequency of adverse drug effects was highly variable, as illustrated by the variation observed in adverse event incidences estimated from the results of two well controlled studies (one performed in the United States, and the other in England) designed to evaluate the safety and efficacy of Nicorette. (See table, below.) Given this variability, the table can be used only as an indication of the relative frequency of adverse events reported in representative clinical trials. It can not predict expected incidences of these effects during the course of usual medical practice.

The only potentially serious systemic adverse effect observed among the 152 patients evaluated in the controlled clinical trials used to support the efficacy of Nicorette was cardiac irritability: a patient displayed what may have been nicotine-induced, but reversible, atrial fibrillation. Cardiac irritability is a well known consequence of cigarette smoking.

A 45-year old male patient participating in a clinical trial of Nicorette was reported to have developed nicotine intoxication requiring hospitalization. After 4 days, he was discharged, fully recovered. His first cigarette one month later, Nicorette was not used during his one-month interval. The relationship of the patient's death to his prior treatment is undetermined. Since the marketing of Nicorette in the U.S., reports of several other deaths and reports including myocardial infarction, congestive heart failure, cardiovascular accident and cardiac arrest have been received. A cause and effect relationship between these reports and the use of Nicorette has not been established.

In addition to the reported effects listed above, the following events have been reported: CARDIOVASCULAR—edema, flushing, hypertension, palpitations, tachycardia, bradycardia, CNS—convulsion, convulsions, depression, convulsions, numbness, parosmia, myopia, double vision, weakness; DERMATOLOGIC—erythema, itching, rash, arthritis; GASTROINTESTINAL—ulceration of liver function tests, constipation, diarrhea; RESPIRATORY—breathing difficulty, cough, laryngitis, sneezing, wheezing; OTHER—dry mouth, systemic nicotinic intoxication.

Reports of miscarriages have been received, and a relationship to drug therapy as a contributing factor cannot be excluded.

DEPENDENCE AND TOLERANCE
Dependence on the use of Nicorette gum has been reported. Such dependence may result from tolerance to Nicorette of tobacco-based nicotine dependence. The use of Nicorette beyond three months has not been demonstrated to increase the smoking cessation rate. Use beyond 3 months should be discontinued to minimize the risk of dependence, after 3 months' usage, patients should be encouraged to gradually withdraw the next 3 months or stop gum usage altogether. (See DOSAGE AND ADMINISTRATION.) In patients who have used the gum for longer periods, gradual withdrawal should be instituted. (See PRECAUTIONS.)

Overdosage
Overdosage could occur if many pieces were chewed simultaneously or if rapid succession. Risk of poisoning by continuing the gum is small because absorption in the absence of chewing is slow and unpredictable. The symptoms of nicotine use must likely be followed by the early signs and symptoms of nicotine poisoning. Symptoms and signs include nausea, salivation, abdominal pain, vomiting, diarrhea, and rapid, shallow, difficult breathing and other signs, mental confusion and muscle weakness. Fatigues and prostration will likely occur and hypotension may occur; breathing is difficult; the pulse may be rapid, weak and irregular; circulatory collapse may be followed by terminal convulsions. Death may result within a few minutes from respiratory failure caused by paralysis of the muscles of respiration.

The oral LD₅₀ for nicotine in rats varies with species but is in excess of 24 mg/kg. Death in rodents was due to respiratory paralysis. The oral minimum lethal dose of nicotine in dogs is greater than 5 mg/kg. The oral minimum lethal dose for nicotine in human adults is 40-60 mg.

Under no circumstances should Nicorette be used in children.

TOLERANCE OF PRESCRIPTION

A catheter should be used to avoid contamination of the gum, in unconscious patients with a strong desire, gastric lavage with a water-soluble tube followed by insertion of a nasogastric tube will aid in clearing stomach. Mechanical ventilation for respiratory paralysis may be necessary in severe nicotine poisoning. Respiratory muscle weakness and respiratory collapse may occur and should be treated vigorously.

THIS WEEKEND'S FOOD

Salad as a mainstay

Two new books and a widening array of fixings offer eaters more main-course variety than ever

The easiest way to chill out in the hot summer is with a cool salad. The fact is, we've become a nation of salad eaters, from grazing at the supermarket salad bar to eating precious combinations at fancy restaurants.

Michele Evans, author of Sensational Salads (NAL, $17.95), says restaurants are tossing in more exotic items. "I don't see any end to it. Salads continue to get more sophisticated, encompass more cuisines."

Take Evans' combination of black beans, rice and bananas — a salad with definite Caribbean overtones. Then there's Christopher Idone's smoked fish with blue cheese, new potatoes and red onions — a Scandinavian touch and one that is included in his Salad Days (Random House Inc., $22.50), published this week.

Today's creations are as likely to include slices of rare lamb or slivers of smoked duck as lettuce. You'll find roasted eggplant, pastas of every shape, goat cheese, crayfish tails and wild rice nestled alongside standard greenery.

The main reason salads have moved from side dish to main course is their "healthy" reputation. But watch those sneaky fats. "If you load on Roquefort dressing, you might as well eat a hamburger," says Leslee Reis, chef/owner of Cafe Provençal in Evanston, Ill.

While cheese and meats show up in today's creations, we use smaller portions of those ingredients in salads.

A plus: Salads are fast and economical. "You just throw a piece of fish or chicken on the grill, and cut up some vegetables. I make them interesting by using various oils," says Idone.

Mark Carraluzzi, owner of two popular restaurants near Washington, D.C., looks to leftovers. "I like to have leftover chicken or steak, use whatever kind of vegetable there might be, and sort of mix it up."

Salads can make an evening out at a trendy restaurant more affordable, says Joyce Goldstein, chef/owner of San Francisco's Square One restaurant. "Even people who are on a budget can go to a first-rate restaurant and eat a couple of salads and be very happy. The chefs are putting a lot of creative energy into that part of the menu."

Four chefs' favorite salads

Grilled tuna salad

Grilled tuna, eggplant, peppers and potatoes, with a charmoala dressing — Moroccan marinade of cumin, cayenne pepper, paprika, garlic, lemon, fresh coriander (sometimes called Chinese parsley) and olive oil — Joyce Goldstein, chef/owner of Square One in San Francisco.

Classic potato salad

"The kind with mayonnaise and pepper and vinegar and carrot and stuff, the kind my mother used to make" — Florence Fabricant, columnist for the The New York Times and Nation's Restaurant News.

Grilled chicken salad

Grilled chicken breast, roasted red and yellow peppers, grilled zucchini and yellow squash, three different greens and a light vinaigrette dressing, served at room temperature. "It's an incredibly big salad. It's something the men order" — Mark Carraluzzi, owner of Bistro Bistro in Arlington, Va., and Ecco Cafe in Alexandria, Va.

Mesclun with vinaigrette and croutons

Mesclun is a French mixture of six to eight different young lettuces and herbs, combining bitter and sweet flavors. Serve with garlic croutons and light vinaigrette made with a rich-flavored vinegar and extra-virgin olive oil — Leslee Reis, chef/owner of Cafe Provençal, Evanston, Ill.

THIS WEEKEND'S LETTERS

LITERACY

We at the Literacy Volunteers of America were delighted with your article ("26 Million Can't Read This Story," May 12-14). It will go far in bringing more attention to the problem of illiteracy and the efforts of those who are trying to solve it.

However, your statistics were slightly off. We serve 30,000 adult learners in 39 states (not the 20,000 in 19 states in your article). We now have 360 community programs across the country.

BEVERLY MILLER
Director of Communications
Syracuse, New York

Thank you for your superior article on literacy. For the past three years, I have been involved in helping people to learn to read and write, and I thought your coverage was great.

PEGGY LEONARD

T. BERRY BRAZELTON

I wanted to let you know how much I enjoyed your cover story on T. Berry Brazelton ("Rx for Happier Families," May 19-21). What a delightful, dedicated man he is; we need more of his caliber in the medical profession.

BARBARA C. MAJOR
Jackson, Miss.

CENSORED?

I strongly disagree with Terry Ralkolta, the Michigan housewife who persuaded advertisers to pull sponsorship of the TV show Married... With Children (Who's News, May 12-14).

Being able to choose what we want to watch on TV is one of our most precious freedoms. If there's a program that you don't want to watch, change the channel.

Her plan to persuade Congress to regulate shows is preposterous. If she desires TV controlled by government, I am sure there are plenty of communist countries that could oblige.

TONY SHELESKI
Bay City, Mich.

BOB KNEPPER

I would like to take issue with a quote you published by Houston Astro pitcher Bob Knepper on female umpires (Who's News, May 5-7).

Knepper says being an umpire is not a job God would choose for a woman. He attributes this to a strong Christian faith, but basically he is a sexist. And the sooner the media stop printing his ridiculous comments, the better.

WHAT'S NEXT

How to acquire instant sophistication

Remember how you once wrinkled your nose at people who threw fancy foreign phrases into conversation, thinking it was so pretentious? (Pretentious, moi?)

Now those tongue twisters are becoming part of our daily American slang. "It lends class," says Victoria Neufeldt, editor in chief of Webster's New World Dictionary.

Here's a quick primer from Marion Forrest, whose new cassettes, Culturally Speaking, teach 340 foreign phrases: tempus fugit (Latin) — time flies; inshallah (Arabic) — please God; joie de vivre (French) — joy of living; farstinkener (Yiddish) — something stinks; pezza novanta (Italian) — big shot.

Go figure your odds in the game of life

The next time you're sure you'll win the lottery, just consider: Your odds of lucking out with a grand prize are 1 in 5.2 million.

That unhappy piece of news is only one of the nifty stats in the new book What Are the Chances? Risks, Odds & Likelihood in Everyday Life (Crown, $16.95). Compiled by Bernard Siskin, Jerome Staller and David Rorvik, the book also tells you:

- Which day of the week motorists should wear clean underwear: Saturday, the most dangerous day to drive.

- Whether men or women are more likely to have a crush on themselves: Twenty-eight percent of men think they're handsome; only 13 percent of women think they're pretty.

- The odds that a health complaint is unimportant: Up to 60 percent of complaints to physicians are not significant.

- The chances of having a supernatural experience: 1 in 17; in California, 1 in 3.

A rockin' century of platter-spinning

One hundred years after their debut, jukeboxes still make us flip. Every week, we crank up 76 million songs on the neon-lit time machines.

"When a person drops a coin in a jukebox . . . they don't just get music. They get memories, their happiest days washing over them like an old song," says jukebox historian Charley Hummel.

The first "Nickel-in-the-Slot," based on Thomas Edison's phonograph, was installed Nov. 23, 1889, in San Francisco's Palais Royale Saloon. Today's sign of the times: Jukeboxes made by Seeburg Corp. in Addison, Ill., play only compact discs.

TRENDSPOTTER

Taste of '90s: Burritski in a melting pot

What will we be eating in the future? Here's a tasty forecast from Marty Friedman, editor of Gorman's New Product News, a trade magazine that keeps track of new food products coming into supermarkets.

"Ethnic food is going to get more cross-cultural. Chinese egg rolls with pizza filling and a burrito stuffed with Polish sausage, called a burritski, are already being test marketed.

"We are going to see more sophisticated foods aimed at the growing Hispanic and Caribbean population. But the food will quickly become popular with other people.

"Casera is introducing five new frozen entrées in the New York market. Look for ropa vieja, which literally means 'old clothes' but is a shredded beef stew, fricasé de pollo and stewed chicken.

"Goya is now offering Caribbean Classics boil-in-bag dinners like arroz con pollo — chicken with rice — and its version of ropa vieja.

"Cuban Classics is a new frozen-dinner line in Miami that includes roast pork with rice, beans and yucca, and chicken in yellow rice with fried plantains. Also, watch for more tropical fruit flavors like guava and mango in juices and soft drinks."

Hospitals try a new prescription: Colors, courtyards, fountains

Need rest and relaxation? Try checking into a fancy art deco hospital room, complete with patio and living room.

Did we say hospital? That's right: Hospitals are changing fast. Gone are dingy institutional-white walls with fluorescent lights. New designs emphasize natural light, warm colors and courtyards.

At the Motion Picture and Television Fund Country House in Woodland Hills, Calif., patients get their own patio. Daily rate in the acute wing: $395. (California's average rate: $382.43.)

"There's a very sophisticated market out there. People now realize how important the environment is to the healing process," says designer Michael Bobrow of Los Angeles, who is putting his mark on hospitals from Milwaukee to Shreveport, La.

"Our hospital is more like a hotel, with colors like teal and mauve," says Ted Braun of the new Santa Monica Hospital Medical Center, which has a cascading water fountain, Japanese gardens and big bay windows. Cost: $499 a night.

The patients' response? Says Braun: "Overwhelming approval."

Stories by John Butterfield, Christine Maggio, Laurence Sombke, Len Strazewski and Cecelia Reed.

WELL, WELL: Santa Monica Hospital is dressed up like a hotel.

Pick up the pace with a dance or a race

If it's summertime, it must be festival time. Here are two hot spots this week:

- More than 400 Indian artists and 50 Indian clothing designers show their wares at the Colorado Indian Market in Boulder, Colo., starting Wednesday. Featured: arrowhead making, Apache sky dancing, Chippewa wild rice. (303) 447-9967.

- A coast-to-coast classical gas wraps up Friday (July 7) at Disneyland's Main Street after 3,500 miles and 40 cities. One hundred twenty antique vehicles are in pursuit of $250,000 in the seventh annual Interstate Batteries Great American Race, being run from East to West for the first time. (214) 348-6477.

Crystal Clear

I always found Billy Crystal an OK comedian, but after viewing the movie "Running Scared," I fell in love. Crystal was delightful! Now, I'd like to know all about him. - STACIE COCHRAN, GAITHERSBURG, MD.

Gregory Hines, Crystal

Born March 14, 1947, in Long Beach, N.Y., Crystal is the youngest of three sons of a family that ran the Commodore jazz label. Soon after his 1970 graduation from New York University, he was on tour with an improv act, but it wasn't until 1977's "Soap" that he got his big break. For four seasons, Crystal portrayed the gay Jodie Dallas on this ground-breaking ABC sitcom. Other early credits include the role of the first pregnant man in Joan Rivers' film flop "Rabbit Test" (1978) and "The Billy Crystal Comedy Hour," a short-lived 1982 NBC variety show. In 1984, Crystal became a regular on NBC's "Saturday Night Live," and since then he has been on a reel roll, with hits like: "Running Scared" (1986), "Throw Momma From the Train" (1987) and "Memories of Me" (1988). He married his college sweetheart, the former Janice Goldfinger, in 1970. The couple reside in Los Angeles with daughters Jenny, 16, and Lindsay, 11.

Mystery Series

There was once a weekly TV Western that starred Andrew Duggan as the father and James Stacy as one of the sons. I cannot remember the other son, much less the name of the series. Help! - W. GILBERT, CANTON, OHIO

The title of this CBS Western was "Lancer." The series ran from 1968 to 1971. Andrew Duggan starred as Murdoch Lancer. James Stacy and Wayne Maunder played his sons Johnny and Scott, respectively.

Deuel's Death

Peter Deuel, who starred as Joshua Smith in the TV Western "Alias Smith and Jones," died in the early 1970s while the show was still in production. Can you tell me exactly when he died and under what circumstances? - SUE BOGGS, REDDING, CALIF.

In the early morning hours of Dec. 31, 1971, Deuel was found dead by his girlfriend, Diane Ray. He had been shot in the head. His home was a haven for out-of-work actors, so police initially suspected that a jealous transient might have done him in. Later, when it was established that only Deuel and Ray were home at the time, suicide was ruled the cause of death. Deuel had a drinking problem and had been subject to bouts of depression. Nonetheless, many insiders feel that his death was either murder or an accident.

Mystery Man

Is Avery Brooks, the sexy star of "Spenser: For Hire" and "Hawk," married? Where does he live? - ELIZABETH CHANEY, GREENVILLE, N.C.

Brooks was born in Evansville, Ind., and raised in Gary, Ind. He made his series debut in 1985 as Hawk on ABC's "Spenser: For Hire." Prior to his prime-time debut, Brooks taught theater at New Jersey's Rutgers University, where his wife, Vicki Brooks, is an assistant dean. They have two children and maintain a New Jersey residence.

Brooks: teacher for hire

ON THE COVER

Boris Becker and Steffi Graf are favorites at Wimbledon.

BY GEORGE ROBINSON

Steffi Graf is probably the least imposing-looking monster in sports, but make no mistake about it, she can shred anyone who stands between her and the fancy silverware that comes with each of the Grand Slam titles. Last year she swept them all; this year, she won the Australian Open and still sported an imposing 47-2 match record after the French Open, where she was upset by Spain's Arantxa Sanchez.

Was her defeat at the French Open a fluke? That is what everyone will be speculating about when HBO and NBC air the 112th All-England Tennis Championships, from Wimbledon, England. NBC's coverage airs daily through Sunday, July 9.

"There's a tremendous amount of desire and spirit there," says Anne White, an analyst for the USA Network. "I can't see anyone beating her, unless she gets an injury. She has improved in so many areas. She's a phenomenal athlete."

Graf, she adds, has no discernible weaknesses. "She's improved her volleys so much, and they'll get even better as she plays more doubles. As for her serve, I saw her down in San Antonio, and she was aching people three times in a row, something 'girls' don't do."

Graf's doubles partner, friend and chief rival, Gabriela Sabatini, seems to be stalking her with renewed fervor. It was Sabatini who accounted for Graf's first loss this year, at Amelia Island. Neither Sabatini nor Sanchez is likely to repeat that unusual feat on grass.

If anyone can upset Graf, it might be a name out of the past: Martina Navratilova. Navratilova's decision to skip the clay-court season and focus on Wimbledon was a controversial one. One former champ told us that it was a serious mistake, that "there is no substitute for playing in tournaments."

On the other hand, Navratilova's game is better-suited to grass. "The only question," says NBC's Bud Collins, "is whether Martina Navratilova cares enough about winning her ninth Wimbledon championship."

The men's field is a lot harder to handicap. Ivan Lendl seemed to have finally begun to slay some personal dragons, but his inability to put away a cramp-crippled Michael Chang in the quarters of the French raises new questions. Mats Wilander doesn't seem to like tennis very much anymore, recently losing to unknowns. And John McEnroe has to make up his mind whether he wants to play tennis or daddy; given the brilliance of his career, who could blame him if he chooses the latter?

Wilander's compatriot Stefan Edberg takes a low-key approach to the game, one suited to the staid Wimbledon. Edberg, the defending Wimbledon champ who lost the French Open final to Chang, lives in a London suburb, so the tournament is a short commute for him. And although Chang, a Californian, acquitted himself brilliantly in the French, he may have more trouble on the faster, grass surface of Wimbledon.

Boris Becker would be our choice, however, to win the event. A superb grass player and two-time Wimbledon champion, Becker is once more playing the assertive game that made him a star at age 17.

If Becker and Graf do win their respective titles, it would mark the first time in the history of Wimbledon that both the trophies ended up on their way to West Germany. Whoever wins, when they raise those silver trinkets high above their heads at Centre Court, they will become the latest in a long line of champions, heirs to one of the richest traditions in sports.

INSIDE STORY

David Byrne's hip audio-visual

After four seasons featuring little-known artists, the PBS summer series "Alive From Off Center" has lined up the head of the class. The creator of this season's premiere episode, airing Wednesday, July 5 (check local listings), is David Byrne - front man for the rock band Talking Heads and the kingpin of the mixed-media art world.

Byrne has directed "He Aiyé (The House of Life)," a one-hour program about the Brazilian religion called candomblé. As one might expect, the project is more akin to a National Geographic special than to a music video. "I'm afraid to call it a documentary - that puts people to sleep," Byrne says. "I don't know what to call it. In Japan they call it an 'audio-visual.'"

Those who tune in expecting a visual counterpart to "Belezea Tropical," Byrne's compilation LP of Brazilian pop classics, may be disappointed. "The House of Life" documents candomblé's ecstatic rituals, trances and devotions to colorful deities - phenomena that have made it a religion with an image problem.

"One negative perception is that it's a kind of pagan devil-worship, just a lot hocus-pocus," Byrne explains. "Another er is that it's the superstitions of stupid, primitive people, as if we're all a lot better than they are."

Some people consider Byrne a dilettante: He collaborated with choreographer Twyla Tharp on "The Catherine Wheel," co-wrote the score for "The Last Emperor" (winning an Oscar for his efforts), and directed and starred in the 1986 feature film "True Stories," on top of writing numerous hits for Talking Heads.

Byrne: a dilettante?

But he evidently devoted himself to this project with a single-minded enthusiasm, spending two months in Brazil - a huge chunk of time for an in-demand rock star.

"I went down for about a month before we started shooting, to learn about the people - and for them to learn about me," he explains.

Byrne has developed a reputation as a sort of lay anthropologist, keeping his finger on the pulse of the world beat and sharing his tastes with the rest of us. "I get sent a lot more than I can listen to, which is a good position to be in," he says. "But I still have to go out and find stuff."

Look closely and you can see the scars.

There are no bruises. And no broken bones. She seems the picture of the perfect child. But if you look closely you can see how rejection, fear and constant humiliation have left scars that have tragically affected her childhood.

So now only a shattered spirit remains. And the light of laughter has gone out. Remember that words hit as hard as a fist. So watch what you say. You don't have to lift a hand to hurt your child. Take time out. Don't take it out on your kid.

Fireworks sales ignite debates

Ben Brown buys fireworks from Sean McDowell at the Youth Services Association stand in Costa Mesa.

By R. LANCE IGNON
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

If the law of supply and demand holds, sales of "safe and sane" fireworks in Costa Mesa should boom this year.

Costa Mesa is one of the few holdouts in Orange County that still allows non-profit groups to sell pyrotechnics. So fireworks-lovers who live in nearby cities that have snuffed the practice may well do their shopping in Costa Mesa.

Of course you're not supposed to take the noisemakers home and light them in cities that prohibit sales, but the law is flouted.

"I wish I had time to stand across the street (from Costa Mesa) and arrest people who buy fireworks) as they came back to Newport," said Jim Upton, the city's acting deputy fire marshal.

The debate over legal fireworks has been crackling for the past several years, with the cities of Huntington Beach, Irvine, Fountain Valley and the county adopting prohibitions in the last three years. Aside from Costa Mesa, the only cities that still allow "safe and sane" sales are Buena Park, Fullerton, Garden Grove, Orange, Santa Ana and Westminster.

The debate is largely economic, with a bit of mayhem thrown in. Service groups and community organizations say they'd be crippled without the money they make selling fireworks. Abolitionists say the profits aren't worth the injuries and fire damage caused by products they believe are grossly misnamed.

"So far everything's been running smoothly," she said. "We're keeping our fingers crossed."

The only hitch was festival officials were unable to open the young artists' booth, which provides free arts and crafts lessons for children. Arana said the booth should be open by Wednesday. It is now filled with construction materials from the festival's six-month renovation, which added several permanent buildings to the grounds, she said.

In Fountain Valley, organizers of the Orange County Fiesta worked until 3 a.m. Saturday to replace awnings over 14 booths after fire officials tested the material and found it burned too easily.

Sparklers linked to brush fire

By BOB VAN EYKEN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

A fire apparently caused by fireworks scorched a few hundred square feet of brush and bamboo and threatened an apartment complex on Pacific Avenue near the Costa Mesa bluffs early Saturday, fire officials said.

If fireworks are confirmed as the cause, the blaze will be the first firework mishap of the Fourth of July holiday.

"Evidently there were some kids throwing sparklers off the bank," Costa Mesa Fire Capt. Bob Van Sickle said.

The small, fast-moving blaze was reported shortly after midnight. Residents of the apartment complex said they heard people outside on a wooden stairway that faces out over the bluff. They were heard just before the fire.

"My roommate heard some people out there laughing and giggling," resident Don Benson said. "He didn't think anything of it, but then he saw the glow, and it grew pretty fast."

Benson said he believed some residents on the bluff side of the complex were present when the fire started, but others who were questioned said they had not seen anything.

"I was coming home from work and the police stopped me to ask me where I was going," said another resident, Mike Zeidn. "I told them, 'to my place.' They asked me where, and I said 2201 Pacific, and they said 'it's on fire.' I broke out in shivers. I thought they meant the building. But then they said 'no, it's just a brush fire.'"

Fire officials said residents told them there were people playing with sparklers outside the complex immediately before the fire started.

Costa Mesa is the only city in the Orange Coast where fireworks are permitted.

Only fireworks bearing the safe and sane logo and sold at approved booths are legal. Other types of fireworks, such as bottle rockets, firecrackers and cherry bombs that are legal in other states and in Mexico are strictly prohibited throughout California.

Detective pleads innocent in NB case

By The Associated Press

A private investigator pleaded innocent to charges he organized the brutal beating of actor John Wayne's daughter and her former boyfriend. Oded Daniel Gal, extradited from Switzerland earlier this month, pleaded innocent Friday in Municipal Court to eight felony counts in connection with the attack on Aissa Wayne and financier Roger Luby. The two were confronted outside Luby's home by two gunmen last Oct. 3 who forced them into the garage, tied them up, slammed their faces into the concrete floor and slashed Luby's achilles tendon. Prosecutors charge that the beating was ordered by Wayne's ex-husband, orthopedic surgeon

Thomas A. Gionis, and that Gal hired Jeffrey Kendall Bouey and Jerrel Lee Hintergardt, to carry it out. Gionis, Bouey and Hintergardt are awaiting trial. Wayne and Gionis were in the midst of a bitter custody battle over their 2-year-old daughter, Anastasia, at the time of the beating. Prosecutors charge that Gionis paid Gal $43,000 to carry out the attack and that he hired Bouey and Hintergardt. Gal, who left the United States while the case was under investigation, was arrested April 13 as he attempted to enter Switzerland from France. He was returned to the United States earlier this month.

Hercules returns to California

POINT MUGU NAVAL AIR STATION (AP) — A LC-130 "Hercules" cargo plane that arose from the Antarctic ice like a frozen phoenix returned to its home base in California Saturday, nearly 18 months after it was salvaged.
The aircraft and its nine-member Navy crew were greeted by Carol Roberts, a deputy division director of the National Science Foundation, which owns seven of the cargo ships used for supplying material to polar researchers.
"Today we are celebrating a triumph — a triumph of technology, a triumph of knowledge and skill, and a triumph of courage," said Jack Talmadge, a National Science Foundation spokesman.

A team of Lockheed engineers and Navy personnel worked 42 days in minus 30-degree temperatures and 20-knot winds to excavate the icebound Hercules, Talmadge said. It was flown out of its remote crash site on Jan. 10, 1988.
The plane has been in Christchurch, New Zealand for renovation before its return to the United States for the first time in 18 years.

Racers' receptions memorable

By GEORGE OLSEN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff
Sure competing in the Great American Race is hard work. Get up at 4 a.m. Drive 500 miles. Get in at 10 p.m.
But that doesn't mean drivers couldn't have some fun along the way.
The 112 entrants have been judging the reception they and their antique autos get as they pass through cities and towns along the way, said Wayne Stanfield of Costa Mesa.
Stanfield, the navigator for 1916 Mitchell Roadster driven by Alan Travis of Phoenix, said one of the race's sponsors is offering a $5,000 library donation to the city giving the best reception to the racers.
"What does Stanfield look for?"
"From a driver's and navigator's perspective any place with lots of watermelon and lemonade gets a 10," he said.
Beside the drinks that offer relief from the 90-degree weather, Stanfield said he appreciates towns that block off other traffic during the two hours the racers pass through.

Stanfield said the best response so far came Friday on their way to Oklahoma City.
In Jackson, Ark., groups of residents swarmed over each car as it stopped, washing the windows, bringing food drinks for the racers and, most importantly, pointing the way to the nearest restroom.
But the hospitality can be too much of good thing when residents want the racers to stay all afternoon.
"Sometimes people don't seem to understand it's a race," Stanfield said.
The racers have to keep strictly on schedule if they want to win. A daily prize of $5,000 is given for the team coming closest to the set time.
Five seconds separated first and second place on Friday — Day Five.

HOLIDAY

From A1
Chamber of Commerce organizer Joel Vest said the manufacturer's label claimed the fabric was fire resistant.
Vest did get some good news Saturday — the Federal Aviation Administration OK'd plans to hold a laser light show with Tuesday's Fourth of July fireworks demonstration.
The festival attracted 3,800 people for Thursday's opening night, which Vest said is the highest first-night attendance figure in the festival's seven-year history.
Vest said Friday's and Saturday's attendance totals are still being tallied.
Sunny skies with temperatures in the mid-70s also brought visitors to local beaches.
About 70,000 people went to Huntington Beach. "It's really crowded," said lifeguard Jeff Schunk. "There's just a lot of people out having a good time."

Another 85,000 people were reported at Newport Beach. It's a pretty big crowd, said Lt. John Blauer of the Marine Safety division.
Bolsa Chica State Beach lifeguards said 15,000 people crowded the sand there. "It's a really nice day, but the waves are pretty flat," said lifeguard Dan Kneafsey.
Huntington State Beach reported 40,000 visitors, which park officials described as a moderate-size crowd.
Another 2,500 people were at Crystal Cove State Park and an equal number was reported at Doheny State Park.
Lifeguards said cold water, a strong breeze and flat surf kept beach-goers out of the water so there were few rescues.
Huntington and Newport beaches reported 13 rescues each.
Newport Dunes Aquatic Park continued its reopening celebration which began Friday. The park is undergoing extensive, but still incomplete, renovations.
Although park officials expected the campground to be full, the day-use parking lot was almost vacant.

General Manager Kris Jamtaas said the opening was intentionally low key so the new staff would not be overwhelmed while they are still training.
Jamtaas said it was easy for passers-by to not know the park is open because many buildings are still under construction and not much of the landscaping is finished. He hopes the work will be completed within a month.
Saturday's events included a canoe demonstration by the Newport Outrigger Club. "We just showed what canoeing is all about," said club member Kauhi Hookano.
Few people went to Aliso Beach, although health officials reopened all but a quarter-mile section of the beach, which was closed last week after a sewage spill.
Lifeguards said about 2,000 people visited there. "We've only got about a quarter of the crowd of what we normally have," said lifeguard Mac Kaufman

War against gangs may escalate

By BOB VAN EYKEN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff
Costa Mesa may be escalating its war against youth gangs and their increasingly visible calling cards, graffiti.
City Council members will consider an ordinance that would make it unlawful for property owners to allow graffiti to remain in sight for more than 30 days and would provide for city assistance in some cases for the removal of the unsightly scrawls.
Graffiti, as defined by the proposed ordinance, includes "any inscription, figure, drawing, verbal messages, lettering or symbolic message, whether in design or symbol, scratched, carved or painted on the exterior of any real property or permanent structures in public or private ownership which can be viewed from a public street."
A City Council member who read the proposed ordinance said he did not believe the prohibition would apply to painted murals.
"I don't think that's the intent," councilwoman Sandy Genis said.
Assistant City Attorney Jerry Scheer also said he did not believe the measure would prohibit murals, which have sometimes been used in other cities to beautify walls formerly defaced by graffiti.

"There is in case law a definition of graffiti that's been accepted judicially, and basically the language is that it has to be obnoxious," Scheer said. "There is no intention that I'm aware of in this proposed ordinance to make it apply to something that's aesthetically pleasing, such as a mural. The target is hard-core graffiti."
Signs that are in compliance with the city's sign ordinance would also be exempt from the ordinance.
Under the proposed ordinance graffiti on private property that is visible to the public may be removed at the city's expense, with the consent of the property owner.
"It's been shown, I believe, in other cities, that these types of programs which provide for the prompt removal have been effective in discouraging the re-appearance of graffiti," Scheer said.
Costa Mesa officials say the city has experienced an increase in gang activity in recent years and that one of its principal manifestations is graffiti, principally in the north and east sides of town.

FIREWORKS

From A1
"There's no such thing as 'safe and sane' fireworks," Upton said. It hasn't been easy for Costa Mesa to buck the trend. The Orange County Grand Jury has urged the city twice in the last three years to join its neighbors in banning fireworks sales.
So far, a majority of the City Council members has resisted.
But it's not as though it's open season for Costa Mesa fireworks merchants, either.
In March, the council tightened regulations to ensure that only non-profit organizations based in Costa Mesa would be able to do business in the city. This was to prevent interlopers from other cities with fireworks prohibitions from setting up shop in Costa Mesa.
This year the city allowed 23 organizations to set up 24 stands. After inspection by fire officials, the stands are allowed to stay open until noon, July 6.
Merle Pence was putting the finishing touches Wednesday on his booth in a Stater Bros parking lot on Newport Boulevard. It was 11 a.m. and he'd be able to start selling in an hour if the fire inspector got there in time.
Inside the tin-sided booth on makeshift counters stood the items of controversy, innocuous in their neatly wrapped cellophane packages. Most are from China, where 1,100 years of experience with gunpowder yields the most imaginative fireworks, several merchants said.

Pence is expecting brisk sales this year. Indeed, several people stepped up to the wire mesh that serves as the store front before the booth has opened.
"Last year sales went up considerably," he said. "We were able to sell out our entire stock by 10 p.m. on July 4, which we had never done before."
Run by Youth Service Association of Orange County, the booth made $7,000 last year, which was split between two Costa Mesa Boy Scout troops. The funds represented the bulk of each group's annual operating budgets.
"It would break us (if fireworks sales were banned)," Pence said. "There's no other fund-raiser that we can work for seven to 10 days that can net ($3,500) for each troop."
It is this kind of argument that has prevented Costa Mesa from banning fireworks. But Pence, like several other people, believes that the city will eventually extinguish private pyrotechnics.
Yet it will take more than the passage of anti-fireworks laws to put out the urge to recreate the bombs bursting in air. Indeed, Pence and others predict that law-abiding people will turn to illegal fireworks if the "safe and sane" variety are eradicated.
"I don't think you're going to break the tradition of celebrating the Fourth of July very easily," said Tom MacDuff, Costa Mesa fire marshal.
This is not to say that MacDuff is a big fan of legal fireworks. Eight out of 10 of the fireworks incidents in his city last year — that includes fires and injuries — were caused by "safe and sane" products.

"I don't like the name at all," MacDuff said. "I think the name gives the impression that they're safe and sane and they're not when used improperly."
There are two criteria that separate illegal from legal fireworks: the legal ones don't explode and they have no propulsion mechanism, like the infamous bottle rockets that shoot into the sky and end their trajectory with an explosion.
"The majority of our bad fires are from bottle rockets, which travel through the air and land on shake roofs," MacDuff said.
That's not to say that legal fireworks are toys. Indeed, the all-American sparkler is the third leading cause of injury in the fireworks world, followed by the "ground flower," another legal pyrotechnic, according to figures from The California Fire Service.
Moreover, many of them can easily be modified to either explode or travel.
Still, illegal fireworks cause the most fire damage overall, although by a relatively small margin. Illegal fireworks were responsible for two out of three building fires in California during the Fourth of July holidays from 1982 to 1988, according to the state fire service.
The point is, both can spark fires, both can injure. Both need adult supervision by adults who respect their destructive power.

LOTTERY

By The Associated Press
Here are the winning numbers picked Saturday night for the California Lottery's twice-weekly "Lotto 6-49" game: 49, 39, 29, 43, 46, 28 and the bonus number, 15.
Players who correctly guessed all six numbers will share a prize pool of $5.3 million, said Jim Hamblin, a state lottery spokesman.
All those who picked five numbers plus the bonus number will divide among themselves a prize pool of $1.51 million; five of six will share $778,000; four of six will share $707,000. Three of six is worth an automatic $5 per winner.
The numbers were chosen by Lotto machine during a television broadcast originating in Sacramento. The numbers are listed in the order they were announced, but any combination would win.
The sales from Wednesday night to Saturday's drawing were $14.15 million, Hamblin said.
Earlier Saturday, a 22-year-old Vallejo supermarket cashier won $1 million Saturday in the California Lottery's "Big Spin."
Starlene Parker says she bought some lottery tickets because her hand was itching; one of the tickets took her to the "Big Spin."
"I can't believe it — 22 years old and a millionaire," said Parker. She and her husband, Pierre, have a 2½ year old daughter and are expecting a child in October.
She said they will take a trip to the Virgin Islands and "buy a new car — not a fancy one; just a reliable car."
Two of the spinners hit the double and then $100,000 to take home $200,000 each. They were George Holodiloff, an 82-year-old retired commercial artist from San Francisco, and Heark Coe, a 72-year-old real estate manager from Sun City.
Jose Pineda of Los Angeles and Josephine Ordonez of San Rafael each won $50,000; Joel Young of Chula Vista took home $40,000.

TIME OF MY LIFE

A trip into the past helps them remember

Isidore and Penny Myers are back in their new Big Canyon home now, enjoying their surroundings in Newport Beach but haunted by the horror of their recent journey of love to Isidore's ancestral homeland.

Myers, who owns and manages more than a score of business and commercial buildings in Orange County, agreed to travel to Poland to meet nine cousins now living in Israel. All are descendants of Jewish families who once lived in or near Wlodawa, Poland, bordering Russia on the Bug River.

So they met in Wlodawa (pronounced Vlo-da-va), the nine from Israel — led by cousin Mendel Barenholtz — and the Myerses — Isidore and his wife, Penny and his sister, Goldie Singer. For 10 days, they anguished over the fate of other relatives — 50 all told — who were tortured and murdered by the Nazis.

"It was very depressing to visit Poland to witness the awful destruction of all things Jewish," Myers said. "I have been totally possessed by our trip to Poland since our return. While it was a journey of love — our attempt to discover our ancestry — it was not a pleasure trip."

In Wlodawa, Isidore was appalled to find how systematic and thorough the Nazis had been in destroying anything that was Jewish. Many of their relatives had lived in this poor little town; only two — one of them Mendel — escaped.

"The Nazis took the gravestones in the 17th century Jewish cemetery and used them to pave the streets," he said. "They tried to get rid of all the Jews, their culture and moral point of view. Memories were targeted for extinction, especially synagogues, cemeteries, religious objects, books. Nazis confiscated the physical belongings of the victims who were stripped of every article of clothing, all possessions, all personal identity, even their gold teeth were extracted."

In Wlodawa, it was obvious, Myers said, that the purpose of the Holocaust was to destroy all vestiges of Jewish existence.

"The history of the Holocaust," he said, "was the attempt to destroy history. After the war, when survivors told people what happened to them, the tales were so unimaginable that nobody was willing to believe them. It was so awful, and I felt that it could have been very easily me."

Myers took more than 150 photographs in Wlodawa and in Auschwitz, the site of one of the most infamous Nazi death camps. ("Here they gassed or shot the children and old people and kept the others for slave labor until they were too weak to work.")

He also made nine hours of audio tape of conversations, much of it in Polish or Hebrew or Yiddish. These included meetings with local officials, survivors who might have known something of Myers's kin, and narration by guides who helped them in the 10-day exploration of the hideouts.

In time, he hopes to edit the photographs, the tapes, the voluminous notes, and put them all together in some sort of presentation for relatives in the U.S., Israel and South America in order to preserve the family history.

Myers's father left Wlodawa and emigrated to the United States in 1908, and his wife — and Isidore's mother — followed four years later with Myers's older brother.

In 1919, the family moved to Akron, Ohio, where Isidore and his two brothers founded a company that became the multi-million dollar conglomerate Myers Industries Inc., a leader in the manufacture and worldwide distribution of plastic molded small parts and cabinets (Akro-Mils) and tire dealer supplies (Myers Tire Supply Co. and Patch Rubber Co.).

Isidore retired from the company early in the 1970s and moved to Orange County where he became an investor and active in property development and management. He was co-developer of the award-winning Upper Newport Plaza, a mile from the John Wayne Airport.

Myers said he was saddened to learn that there was such a small number of Jews still living in Poland, only between 6,000 and 7,000, whereas before World War II, there were more than 3,000,000 Jews in Poland, comprising about 30 percent of the population. In Wlodawa, Jews made up 67 percent of the population before World War II. Today, not a single Jew remains.

"Poland today is really in the pits because of Communism," he said. "A college professor earns the equivalent of $25 to $50 a month. Those Jews who remain anywhere in Poland are primarily old people who will have no one to replace them when they die."

Before they left on their journey, Myers asked Rabbi Mark S. Miller of Temple Bat Yahm in Newport Beach to give them four prayers they could recite at the Sobibor Extermination Camp where most of their relatives perished. One of these poems is recited frequently even after they returned.

"In the rising of the sun and its going down, we remember them.

"In the blowing of the wind and in the chill of winter, we remember them.

"In the opening buds and in the rebirth of spring, we remember them.

"In the blueness of the sky and in the warmth of summer, we remember them.

"In the rustlings of leaves and in the beauty of autumn, we remember them.

"In the beginning of the year and when it ends, we remember them.

"When we are weary and in need of strength, we remember them.

"When we are lost and sick at heart, we remember them.

"When we have joys we yearn to share, we remember them.

"So long as we live, they too shall live, for they are now a part of us, as we remember them."

PILOT DECADES

Compiled by LARRY NOLAN

July 7, 1949 Curbs for the 4-foot pedestrian walk and two of the circular islands at the intersections were poured this week, according to a progress report on the Balboa Boulevard improvement project issued yesterday by City Engineer J.B. Webb.

Plans for the project, contract for which was let to the Sully Miller Construction Co., call for improvement of the peninsula's principal thoroughfare at both ends of the old Pacific Electric right-of-way — from Alvarado Street to 6th Street in Balboa and from McFadden Place to 19th Street in Newport Beach.

July 6, 1959 Balboa Island became a wild world of its own over a hot Independence Day weekend with the masses of humanity dancing to the beat of the bongo drums, throwing illegal firecrackers beneath the feet of startled pedestrians and disregarding police authority by refusing to disperse from clogged sidewalks.

One of the highlights was a near riot at 9:30 Saturday night in front of a restaurant on Marine Avenue near Balboa Avenue resulting in the arrest of 10 youths, including six juveniles.

July 5, 1959 Fireworks, parades, beauty contests and swimming races drew to beach communities over the weekend crowds whose totals were being gleefully estimated by Chambers of Commerce toeday as near half a million.

The Costa Mesa Chamber of Commerce estimated its show at Orange Coast College Stadium drew 5,000 and Milton Chapman, spokesman for Newport Dunes, said that his attraction drew 12,600 visitors for the weekend with 7,500 remaining through the evening to watch the fireworks, which were visible from almost any point in Newport Beach.

July 4, 1969 The Coastal Area Protective League, simmering and blossoming anew since the Santa Barbara oil disaster, today officially announced three new legislative goals against oil drilling off the Orange Coast.

The league, instrumental in drafting the Shell-Cunningham Act which provides for oil-drilling sanctuaries from the Santa Ana River mouth to the Mexican border, has begun an extensive project to beef up the act's protection provisions.

July 5, 1979 Five residential blazes, ignited by fireworks that landed on rooftops, caused a combined $334,000 damage Wednesday during one of the busiest July 4th holidays in Orange County Fire Department history.

In all, county fire crews battled 73 blazes Wednesday, many of them roof and brush fires caused by fireworks, fire spokesmen said today.

Well-wishers in Moscow bid farewell to Tony Allengena as the youngster begins the next leg of his trip.

Young aviator leaves Moscow

Tony Allengena

MOSCOW (AP) — Tony Allengena, an 11-year-old Californian flying a single-engine plane around the world, left Saturday for the next stop on his journey across the Soviet Union, the Tass news agency said.

He arrived in Moscow Monday with a scroll signed by nearly 1,000 Soviet children that will be presented to President Bush on his return to the United States. He hopes eventually to get 100,000 signatures.

The fourth-grader, flying a blue and white Cessna 210, took off from Moscow's Sheremetevo airport for Kuibyshev, 450 miles southeast, the next stop on his hopscotch journey across the Soviet Union en route to Alaska.

Tony spent five days touring Moscow and passed through Red Square, where West German teen-ager Mathias Rust landed a single-engine Cessna in May 1987 after evading Soviet air defenses. He had hoped to meet with Mikhail S. Gorbachev but was told by Kremlin officials the president was too busy.

Tony, from San Juan Capistrano, began his global flight June 5 in California. His flight plan will take him 19,000 miles around the world in short hops averaging three hours each.

While flying in the Soviet Union, Tony will be accompanied by a Soviet navigator because air controllers on many Soviet domestic routes do not speak English.

The young Californian's entourage includes a second twin-engine plane for a U.S. documentary film crew, a publicity agent, a 10-year-old Soviet pen pal, and Soviet and American journalists.

Repair of scorched land begins

LAKE ELSINORE (AP) — As a new blaze burned Saturday near the Sequoia National Forest, experts began repairing the scorched 8,200 acres near here as officials pleaded for caution with fireworks.

More than 600 firefighters were on the line against the 227-acre fire in the Three Rivers area of Tulare County, south of the Sequoia National Forest, said California Department of Forestry spokeswoman Donna Atwood.

"Its in real steep, brushy terrain...but there are no reports of high winds, which is helpful," Atwood said. Along with the firefighters, two aerial tankers and two water-dropping helicopters worked to douse the flames.

Firefighters hoped to encircle the man-made blaze later Saturday. It was reported at 6:10 p.m. Friday. The exact cause of the fire was still under investigation.

The national forest and its preserve of giant trees were not in danger from the fire.

No homes or other buildings were damaged or threatened, and there were no reports of injuries, Atwood said. The fire was about 150 miles north of Los Angeles.

Firefighters in Riverside County planned to finally surround on Saturday the Lake Elsinore fire which burned 11 homes, and left more than 8,200 acres scorched, including 1,000 acres of the Cleveland National Forest.

Lighter winds and higher humidity — which results in damper air — seemed to be working in favor of the firefighters who have been battling the blaze since it broke out in steep terrain along Highway 78 on Tuesday.

"Judging by the weather right now, and the forecasts, it's looking relatively good," state forestry dispatcher Glenn Patterson said Saturday.

The forest service was beginning to send some firefighters home, he said. Nearly 2,300 were on the line at the height of the blaze 65 miles southeast of Los Angeles.

As they left, a rehabilitation team began studying the area to plan for its restoration. Among those involved were experts on plants, soil, recreation, landscaping and archeology. The burned area includes several prehistoric Indian sites.

"For any fire of this size, they have a rehabilitation team on the site before the fire is out," said U.S. Forest Service spokesman David Reider.

The task of cleaning up the burned canyons and hilltops is expected to take all summer.

Among the first duties is cutting up emergency fire roads to deter off-road vehicle use, and erect barriers to deflect rainwater runoff that could turn into destructive floods during winter rains.

Many of the burned plants, such as chaparral, actually depend on fire to regenerate. The heat pops open pod for seeds, which sprout almost immediately.

Officials estimated the cost of fighting the fire at $1.5 million as of Friday and said it had caused another $1.1 million in damage to structures and watershed. The fire was man-made, but its cause was undetermined.

State forestry spokeswoman Marlene Brandt said Highway 78, the Ortega Highway that links San Juan Capistrano with Lake Elsinore, would remain closed through the weekend for safety reasons.

Drought conditions in the state have left brush and forest areas vulnerable to fires, and the chief of the California Department of Forestry in Riverside County said the danger was increased over the Fourth of July weekend.

"Use good judgment and don't experiment with fireworks," Chief Glen Newman said in a statement warning that use of fireworks is illegal in most county-protected areas.

Rallies urge end to China crackdown

LOS ANGELES — Chinese students burned a Communist flag in front of their homeland's consulate in Los Angeles while 5,000 people on Saturday rallied in San Francisco on the 68th anniversary of the Chinese Communist Party's founding.

An 8-foot statue, a replica of the "Goddess of Liberty" erected during the pro-democracy demonstrations in Beijing's Tiananmen Square, was unveiled in San Francisco's Justin Herman Plaza, where politicians addressed an overflow crowd.

The rally was part of a nationwide effort called "Democracy Day," and participants urged an end to the crackdown on pro-democracy supporters in China since the June 3-4 massacre of at least hundreds of people in Tiananmen Square, the symbolic heart of the nation.

Salcido drops bid to move daughter

SANTA ROSA — The lawyer defending alleged mass-killer Ramon Salcido says his client has withdrawn a request to a judge that his surviving daughter, Carmina, 3, be placed with relatives in Mexico.

Sonoma County Superior Court Judge Arnold Rosenfeld presided at a closed door custody hearing Friday at which Salcido was present under tight security, Deputy Public Defender William Marioni told reporters.

Salcido, 28, has pleaded innocent of the killing of seven people, including his wife and two of his daughters, during a wine country rampage April 14. The bodies of the girls, and Carmina, who was near death, were found at a county dump with their throats cut from ear to ear.

Four die in head-on crash

TWENTYNINE PALMS — Four people died early Saturday after a car crossed the dividing line on Highway 62, glancing off two vehicles before slamming head-on into another automobile, authorities said.

The driver, Salvatore Parisi, 56, of Montebello, his 52-year-old wife Filomena and his 20-year-old daughter, Mary, were killed, according to Frank Lee, a San Bernardino County deputy coroner-investigator.

Also killed was Beatrice Costa Green, 69, of Burbank, California Highway Patrol Officer Mark Mezzano said.

Museum might get to keep planes

CHINO — A Chino air museum may be allowed to keep two Soviet MIG fighter jets and a third plane bought in violation of a law prohibiting importation of military aircraft from Warsaw Pact nations.

Under legislation approved by the House of Representatives on Thursday, Planes of Fame Air Museum in Chino would be able to retain the planes imported from Poland last summer.

The proposed amendment authored by Rep. Robert K. Dornan, R-Garden Grove, would allow museums and other educational institutions to import warplanes from Poland or Hungary if the craft are disarmed and at least 25 years old.

Marcos remains in critical condition

HONOLULU — Former Philippines President Ferdinand Marcos remained in critical condition and on life-sustaining equipment Saturday with the prognosis for his recovery poor, a hospital official said.

Marcos, 71, was semicomatose. He is afflicted with multiple organ failure and has a serious infection and accompanying fever, according to Eugene Tiwanak, St. Francis Medical Center assistant administrator.

With the removal of his transplanted kidney Thursday, Marcos must undergo daily dialysis to eliminate wastes from his body normally removed by the kidneys, Tiwanak said. Marcos' breathing is aided by a respirator.

Little People condemn dwarf-tossing

BALTIMORE — Traveling shows featuring dwarf-tossing contests are the latest outrage dwarfs find themselves fighting to preserve their dignity and safety, officials of the Little People of America Inc. said Saturday.

"Dwarf-tossing may help financially the person who does it... However, it tears down the structure and the esteem that little people are trying to gain," said association spokesman Ernie Ott.

Florida Gov. Bob Martinez signed a state law last week banning the barroom sport, helping short-statured people fight a lingering perception that they are "non-persons," Angela Van Eiten, a member of the Committee to Ban Dwarf Tossing, said at the association's annual conference.

Abandoned babies crowd hospitals

WASHINGTON — Seven newborns lie sleeping, swaddled in pink and blue blankets and tucked into bassinets in a hospital nursery. Six were born to mothers addicted to crack cocaine and then abandoned.

In the same pale yellow room with green curtains, a 6-month-old girl smiles and gurgles in a swing near two children in playpens. They, too, are "boarder babies," whose addicted mothers abandoned them.

Hospital officials say boarder babies like these at Howard University Hospital are taking up space that could be used for treating sick children.

Mobutu escapes U.S. scorn of dictators

WASHINGTON — Some heavy-handed Third World leaders are scorned by the United States for human rights abuses. Then there's Zaire's President Mobutu Sese Seko, who turned up here last week and received a red carpet welcome.

For the past generation, Mobutu has been a source of both pride and anguish to Washington. It is hard to find a leader anywhere more willing to support Washington's policies than Mobutu, but he is a leader who tolerates virtually no dissent while presiding over what is widely regarded as one of Africa's most corrupt societies.

North Dakota marks centennial

BISMARCK, N.D. — Indians wearing feathered headdresses danced, a peace pipe was passed and ice cream was the hot item Saturday at the Party of the Century, marking North Dakota's 100 years of statehood.

The opening of the four-day centennial event was marked by speeches, a colorful Vietnamese dragon dance and the release of hundreds of balloons into sunny skies as the crowd sang "Happy Birthday."

Ship with chemicals docks in Dubai

DUBAI, United Arab Emirates — An Iran-bound ship believed carrying chemicals used in making nerve gas docked in Dubai Saturday and unloaded unidentified cargo, shipping executives reported.

The 5,608-ton West German-flagged Seacrest Pioneer, which came from Bombay, India, was earlier reported by West Germany's ZDF television network to be carrying thionyl chloride, a component used in manufacturing deadly mustard gas.

Dubai is a major transshipment point for Iran-bound cargo.

Coup leader vows end to civil war

KHARTOUM, Sudan — Sudan's new military leader on Saturday pledged to end the 6-year-old civil war peacefully, promising to make contacts with rebels fighting the Moslem-dominated government. Twenty-eight army generals were fired.

"Our primary goal is peace, and we (the army) are the people mostly suffering from war," Brig. Gen. Omar Hassan Ahmed el-Bashir told a government meeting broadcast on official radio. "I will enlist the help of all experts in the quest for peace."

Communist Party members probed

BEIJING — China's Communist Party celebrated its 68th birthday Saturday by announcing an investigation into how its members behaved during the recent protests for democracy. It said some could be severely punished.

Thousands of people took vows as new party members in Tiananmen Square. Tourists flocked to the Gate of Heavenly Peace, which overlooks the square and was opened to civilians for the first time since the military crackdown last month.

With the party's image at a new low because of widespread corruption and the crackdown, party leaders turned to aging veterans of the 1949 revolution to lead the internal investigation.

One of nation's most famous flag raisers joins amendment fight

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The sole survivor of the six Marines who raised the first U.S. flag on Iwo Jima during World War II says he supports President Bush's call for a constitutional amendment prohibiting flag desecration.

"I like that. I like that very much," Charles Lindberg said Friday of the proposed amendment. Bush, who has called the flag a "unique national symbol," pushed for the amendment earlier in the day in a visit to the Iwo Jima Memorial in Arlington, Va.

That memorial was based on a famous photograph of the second flag-raising on the Japanese island 44 years ago. Lindberg took part in the raising of a smaller flag hours earlier.

Lindberg, 69, said he was outraged with the Supreme Court's recent decision nullifying flag-desecration laws in 48 states. Justice William Brennan wrote: "We do not consecrate the flag by punishing its desecration, for in doing so we dilute the freedom that this cherished emblem represents."

"I thought it was a lousy decision," Lindberg said from his home in suburban Richfield. "I think it's dead wrong. They want to take away everything that represents freedom."

"I wish I had those judges up on that mountain when we raised that flag," he continued. "Maybe they would learn something. Maybe they would learn what it means to people."

When that flag went up, and to hear all those cheers from the harbor, it really made you proud."

The flags raised on Iwo Jima's Mount Suribachi on Feb. 23, 1945, marked the first time the American flag had flown over Japanese territory.

Lindberg and five other Marines tied a flag to a 20-foot water pipe, carried it to the tallest spot on the 546-foot mountain and lifted it into place.

Lindberg still remembers that moment vividly.

"The troops down below began to cheer, and ship whistles out in the bay began to toot," he said last year. "I tell you, it just made you shiver all over."

Four hours later, a larger flag was hoisted in its place. Associated Press photographer Joe Rosenthal captured the event and his Pulitzer Prize-winning shot became one of the most famous in American history. Lindberg was not a member of that flag-raising, which inspired the Iwo Jima Memorial.

Lindberg said he disagrees with those who say desecration of the flag should be protected under the First Amendment.

"I think they carry it too far," he said. "They're misinterpreting what the flag represents. They think it's a play thing, something to protest with."

"I think it should be a criminal offense" to desecrate the flag, he said. "Either love it or leave it."

Pro-choice supporters remove an anti-abortion demonstrator, second from right, after he tried to prevent Shanta Driver, far right, from speaking to pro-choice followers. The confrontation occurred during a protest outside the Northland Family Planning Clinic in Romulus, Mich., on Saturday.

Abortion foes anticipate court ruling with protests

By The Associated Press

More than 240 abortion foes were arrested Saturday as activists on both sides of the issue took to the streets nationwide two days before the U.S. Supreme Court was expected to rule on a Missouri abortion law.

Arrests reported Saturday morning included 103 in Philadelphia, 90 in the San Francisco suburb of Daly City and 40 in Romulus, Mich.

Terry McNitt, a spokeswoman for the Philadelphia group, said more than 100 people protested for 2½ hours by kneeling or sitting in front of the doors of the Northeast Women's Center.

Police said the 103 arrested were released and will be charged later. He said they probably will be cited for trespassing.

The center's acting administrator, Diane Straus, said the center was scheduled to perform more than 30 abortions Saturday. She said several women decided to reschedule their appointments but no one canceled, but McNitt said one woman left with an anti-abortion counselor instead of going to her appointment.

Several hundred anti-abortion protesters and an equal number of supporters of the right to terminate pregnancies demonstrated in front of the Daly City Planned Parenthood clinic, according to police spokeswoman Kim Roccaforte. Those arrested were cited for blocking a sidewalk and released.

The clinic did not immediately return telephone calls Saturday.

In Michigan, about 400 protesters, some favoring abortion rights and some opposed, descended on a clinic in the Detroit suburb of Romulus.

The 40 persons arrested on trespassing charges were trying to block the entrance to the Northland Family Planning Clinic, said police Sgt. Dan Snyder. They were released and ordered to appear in District Court by July 17. No assaults were reported, he said.

Smaller protests were also reported in Des Moines, Iowa, and Durham, N.C., with seven arrests at each city by early afternoon.

In Des Moines, about two dozen protesters were still marching on the sidewalk in front of the Planned Parenthood clinic Saturday afternoon, and three police paddy wagons were on hand. The seven persons arrested earlier in the day were charged with disorderly conduct.

In past protests at the site, the anti-abortion protesters have purposely been arrested en masse after sitting down at the building's entrance. But on Saturday, individual protesters were arrested as they approached women entering the building.

Soviet ship jumper runs amok, naked

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — A Soviet sailor granted temporary asylum in the United States was arrested Saturday after he ran naked through a coastal resort town with an American flag in one hand and a knife in the other, police said.

Before running through Rockaway Beach, Alexander Pitskin, 19, went on a rampage that included smashing church windows and destroying church-owned equipment, said Police Officer Gordon Witt.

"We don't know what caused it, but it looks like he just went bananas and started tearing things up," said Witt.

Pitskin was charged with first-degree burglary, criminal mischief and disorderly conduct, Witt said.

Pitskin, the third mate of the Soviet fishing boat The Izumrudny, jumped overboard in Portland on Wednesday, saying he wanted to "try American."

Operation Hammer pounding LA gangs

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Police swung down Operation Hammer on the city's gangs over the Fourth of July weekend, with the first night's arrest of 235 people netting 136 suspected gang members, authorities said.

"We want the good people in this community to feel your presence" officers were told before they began making the arrests Friday night and into early Saturday in the city's tough south side.

Police were prepared to make another sweep Saturday night in the department's standing program started last summer to sweep streets in gang-infested areas.

The city's Wilmington and San Pedro areas also are targeted for the latest version of Operation Hammer.

"Lately, in the last few weeks, we've seen an increase in gang violence, particularly drive-by shootings," said Assistant Police Chief William Rathburn as he addressed task force members during the Friday night roll call.

"School's out now, the weather's warming up, so we can expect there would be an increase. And we're not going to allow that to continue," he said.

Of the arrests made Friday night, 49 were for felony narcotics violations and two were for misdemeanor narcotics violations.

Other arrests involved such things as weapons charges, outstanding felony warrants and driving under the influence.

The effort "is to let the gang members know they are not going to control the streets," said Lt. Jim Tatreau, who has organized all of the sweeps.

"We want the gang members to feel the pressure," Rathburn told his officers. "But... we want the good people in this community to feel your presence also."

Community outcry over gang thugs who keep residents prisoners in their own homes prompted the sweeps.

There were 452 gang-related slayings in Los Angeles County in 1988, surpassing the 387 such murders reported the year before.

EDITOR'S NOTEBOOK

Back home from Mexico in time for the fiesta

Hola. Just returned from some rest and relaxation, hecho in Mexico. We learned a few things during our stay. Cancun is beautiful, new and expensive. Daddy-O is the hot nightclub in town. The Mayan ruins are worth the trip. Topes means bumps and you had better slow for them when entering and exiting little towns. It is physically impossible to speak to your partner while snorkeling. Ceviche is marvelous in any language.

TOM TAIT

I also learned I am not destined to follow in Hemingway's footsteps. Now that may not come as surprise but I did set out on a personal crusade of sorts.

We went to the bullfights for the first — and last — time.

I expected romance, pageantry and grace. I was more than disappointed. Cruel doesn't quite describe the spectacle of an outnumbered, drugged animal being methodically butchered. Maybe the matador had a bad day, but I found myself silently rooting for the bull, which is equally inhumane.

I will stick with baseball. Ole.

Let me share one of Orange County's best-kept secrets. Tucked between the Lion's Club Fish Fry and the Orange County Fair, a community event could go unnoticed. But John Collins is putting on a fandango in Fountain Valley that may just be worth walking a mile to see during this long holiday weekend. And you may have to walk that far if the aroma of barbecue wafts very far out of Mile Square Park. Some 60,000 are expected during the six-day event.

The Orange County Fiesta, which is sponsored by the Fountain Valley Chamber of Commerce, runs through the Fourth of July at the park. Collins is president of the chamber.

The fiesta had a rocky opening. Electrical problems short-circuited scheduled performances Thursday by Paul Revere and The Raiders and by an Elvis impersonator. But after a lengthy delay the show did go on. There were a few other warts, such as an incontinent portable toilet and some booths that did not pass muster with authorities.

But organizers say the bugs have been worked out and the fiesta is festive.

Besides several concert performances, the fiesta features a carnival with rides for the kids and for the bigger kids. The bold among you should give the Zipper a try.

For browsers, wander by the many booths and exhibits, including booth No. 113 where the Daily Pilot is offering free classified ads and a daily drawing for a dinner for two at the Claim Jumper restaurant. Several other drawings offer cars, including a Ford Thunderbird, a BMW and even a Rolls Royce. I've never seen so many "free cars." The time share business must be good these days.

Of course, the weekend's activities cap off with a free fireworks show on Tuesday.

Who's the fairest of them all?

The folks who work to bring you my favorite newspaper, fared especially well in the annual Orange County Fair Media Contest.

Daily Pilot writers, photographers and even a few of the editors won 23 awards in the fair's fifth annual contest, including seven first place awards.

Paul Archipley, Leslie Earnest, Don Fenley, Jon Ferguson, Lance Ignon, Steve Marble, Kathi Kent Riley, Nick Souza, Christopher Trela, Kirk Wolcott, Alex Williams, Iris Yokoi and Janet Zimmerman deserve congratulations for their award-winning efforts.

Stop in and see their work on display when the fair opens July 12. Better yet, look for it everyday in the Pilot. You be the judge.

Tuesday is July Fourth. Fly the flag. Enough said.

READERS' FORUM

What is going on in Washington?

To the Editor: I can hardly believe it. What is going on in Washington?

I read in my Daily Pilot that it's OK to burn the American flag.

It's OK to dial up a porno message services, and it's OK to put kids to death. Have we joined the nations that we think are barbaric?

That flag which is OK to burn — I hope it's not the flag in the photo on my office wall. The one being raised by Marines at Iwo Jima. Photographer Joe Rosenthal would be very upset if he knew that.

I'm sure it's not the flag tucked away in my dresser drawer, the one I was handed at the grave of my best friend, a police officer who was shot to death by the drug dealer he was trying to arrest.

Is it the flag to which I pledge allegiance each Tuesday morning at my Kiwanis Club meeting?

Maybe it's the flag that Associated Press Bureau Chief Terry Anderson has not seen since March 16, 1985; the day he was kidnapped in Lebanon.

Certainly it's not all those flags local Boy Scouts placed at the veterans' cemetery last Memorial Day. Is it the American flag that flies at every ball game, or the one American Legion members carry so proudly in parades?

Can it be the one that gleams in the sun as I pass the Marine Corps Air Station at El Toro? I sure hope not.

Those Supreme Court justices, in their wisdom, must be talking about some other kind of flag.

Congress makes laws, which is the job of the Congress, as I recall from my 1940 civics lessons. That law says it is not morally correct to allow free access to anyone, with the emphasis on children, to be able to dial up and hear an explicit sexual message. But along comes the U.S. Supreme Court and tells Congress, they can't make such a law. I thought Congress made laws, and the Supreme Court enforced them; or at the very least interpreted them.

Anyone in our company who makes a porno call is fired on the spot, and I'll spend my last buck to defend decency and morality.

I wonder how many calls the justices had to listen to in order to come to their decision?

And now it's even OK to put a child in the electric chair and send a charge of high voltage through their body until they stop breathing. There is some great thinking. Add to that the fact that the Supreme Court says it's also OK to put a mentally retarded person in the gas chamber if they have committed a crime punishable by death.

The very next time we call another country on the carpet for chopping off the hand of a thief, we need only to look at a portrait of the Supreme Court and wonder.

GENE SELIG Irvine

Flag-burning decision is a good cause to fight for

To the Editor:

I would like to extend my gratitude to the members of the Supreme Court.

I have been searching for a cause to make a 40-year-old man feel as though he had a purpose other than making sure his wife could visit Nordstroms more often than my neighbor's wife.

Now that it is permissible to burn the American flag as a political expression, I want anyone considering that noble political expression to please invite me to the event.

Upon my arrival, I plan to exercise my right to defend that flag by placing my foot right in their rear end.

Nobody gets to alienate my country, my flag, or most importantly, my veteran brothers. At least not while I am still living.

I think anyone considering burning the flag as an act of political expression is a coward. But in case you are also suffering from diminished capacity, think twice about burning my flag because someone who loves it will be close by.

Do you feel lucky?

RANDALL COSTNER Balboa Island

Those who burn the flag do so at their own risk

To the Editor:

My name is Sgt. Rick Byers. I am the self-appointed spokesman and representative for over 1 million American soldiers who have died fighting for the freedoms we have today.

They paid the ultimate sacrifice. They cannot speak. They did not come home. So, I will speak for them.

The red, white and blue banner that flies above our cities today is under attack by a handful of "ungratefules" who by luck alone were born in a land of freedom. They simply received freedom for free.

They may be unaware of the countless millions of people around the world who are lined up trying to move to the United States. But no one stands in line to leave this country.

Your fallen comrades proudly carried the red, white and blue banner of freedom onto the battlefield. They fought against any and all enemies. It's more than a flag.

The colors white stand for freedom. For this they died. The color blue is for the sky above where those fallen comrades are watching over our great nation today.

The color red is for the color of their blood. If 20,000 names appeared on each of the flag's 50 stars, it would almost total the number who died for it.

So on July 4, 1989, the greatest and most powerful unwritten freedom lives in the hearts of all true Americans. It is the freedom of speech. It simply says that "nobody" burns an American flag. Nobody.

Our flag is fireproof in the hands of real Americans. So, look around you before you light up. A real American may be standing beside you. Those who have died in its defense would love to change places with you today. They cannot. They died once for you. Don't make them die again.

I hereby declare it hazardous to your health to burn the American Flag in a public place. SGT. RICK BYERS Newport Beach

Burning American flag defiles our patriotism

To the Editor:

I was shocked upon learning of the Supreme Court ruling that the flag cannot be defended by me, now a common citizen, but also one who volunteered and fought for that same flag and the country over which it flies.

I weep for the injustice. I weep for the years lost, the misery, the sacrifices, the hardship and the terrible nightmares still to be endured by those who have defended that flag.

I weep for all war veterans, their families and their survivors.

I weep for those who bled and died in our declared-and-undeclared wars in the belief that it was the patriotic, honorable and necessary thing to do. After all, our government said it was the right thing and in our youth and zeal we answered the call.

We went up against the world's best and toughest military. We beat them and restored peace.

Now our flag and country is attacked from outside and from within. Today it's the flag. What will it be tomorrow?

"I pledge allegiance to the flag of the United States of America and to the Republic for which it stands. One nation under God, indivisible with liberty and justice for all."

Is it my imagination or is the pledge beginning to sound meaningless?

The "allegiance" is threatened. "God" is being removed more and more. Now this new court ruling takes care of the "indivisible."

As adults we seldom hear the pledge of allegiance outside of school functions. The singing of our national anthem is seldom heard outside major sports events where it is rendered by performers who sometimes give their own version. Isn't anything sacred anymore?

When there is another war to fight be sure to draft the ones who defile the flag before you call on me again, OK.

WEASKED

Do you think the sale of safe-and-sane fireworks should be banned?

Julie Magliano Costa Mesa I grew up in Glendale in a hazardous fire zone so we never had them. It was a shock to move to Costa Mesa where they are legal. I haven't gotten used to them yet. My kids love them.

Stephanie Rafferty Corona del Mar I think they should be banned. They're hazardous to young children if they're not supervised, and you can't be sure they're always supervised.

Susan Shusho Laguna Beach No, it's a tradition to celebrate the birth of our country. People just need to be prudent, cautious and responsible.

Dan Schulz Costa Mesa Yes, they should. My little brother blew his finger off one year and a friend lost his hearing. It just seems kind of stupid. Public displays are the way to go.

KEEPING COUNT

Sports collecting: Insanity, but real

CHICAGO — I am writing this from booth 659 at the 10th National Sports Collectors Convention. The place is a madhouse. Across the aisle in the Hyatt Regency Hotel is a complete set of 1953 Topps baseball cards — sale price $5,999. Just a few feet away can be purchased a poster of men who have hit 500 home runs — sale price $875. Nearby, there is a framed photo, circa 1930s, of Rogers Hornsby and Tris Speaker, in their managerial days, posing with arms around each other — sale price, $595.

Next to me, close enough to reach out and touch, may be the most expensive single item in the massive Exhibition Hall, a custom-framed collection of Mickey Mantle baseball cards, 23 in total — sale price $22,950.

This may be the most incredible scene I have witnessed in 32 years of sports writing.

It is insanity, yet it is real. This is more than another "buy, sell, and auction" sports memorabilia show. It is a convention of the nation's most avid collectors, with more than 600 booths occupied by the most aggressive of the estimated five million "sports squirrels" in the United States.

Don't ask me how it happened, this phenomenon of sports collecting, but I now know this: I've thrown away enough press pins, programs, press passes, media guides, ticket stubs and scorecards in my lifetime to have become a millionaire.

But I don't collect. I came here only to peddle my latest book, "Cubs of '69: Recollections of the Team That Should Have Been" (Contemporary Books) and stare at the surroundings in open awe.

Upstairs in a convention room is Sandy Koufax, signing autographs for $16 apiece (no personalized messages, please). Over there is Ernie Banks, signing for $5. Brooks Robinson will be here, too, as will be Bill Madlock, Steve Carlton, Dave Winfield, and Carl Yastrzemski, their signatures to be sold for varying amounts.

My autograph is the cheapest in the house: Buy a book for $17.95 and I'll autograph it for a nickel. That way you give me a $20 bill and I'll return two singles. I figure that's a fair market value for signing a name and a nice, easy way to make change.

The Mayor of Chicago, Richard M. Daley, is expected to be one of 40,000 visitors over four days. The Governor of Illinois, James R. Thompson, wrote the welcoming letter in the program (which is already probably worth saving and selling). Are these people crazy?

Apparently not. There are more than 6,000 collectors stores in the U.S. and the "industry" is exploding.

Consider the major questions of this convention: Will Pete Rose memorabilia go "up" or "down" because of the charges of gambling and possible ban from baseball? (Please see TALLEY/B2)

Volleyball takes center stage

By MARGIE LUCK
Daily Pilot Correspondent

At Laguna Beach yesterday, the main attraction was neither the sun nor the surf — it was the volleyball.

The 35th annual Laguna Open pro beach volleyball tournament attracted about 20,000 spectators in the first of three days of play. Officials of the tournament are expecting to draw a total of 150,000 fans through Monday, the final day of competition.

"It's really intense and the players are playing for money, not just for rankings," said Shar Wallendar, one of the coordinators.

"There's a big difference between this and other tournaments. Here, there's a lot more hype, and a lot more excitement."

Wallendar added that all teams that make it to Monday's finals competition in one of the three divisions — pro women, invitational men and Legends — are "in the money. Believe me, it will be intense," she said.

Christian Kiernan, formerly of Laguna Beach, and partner Tom Riborich fell in the first round of play yesterday, but Kiernan had no regrets playing in his first Laguna Open.

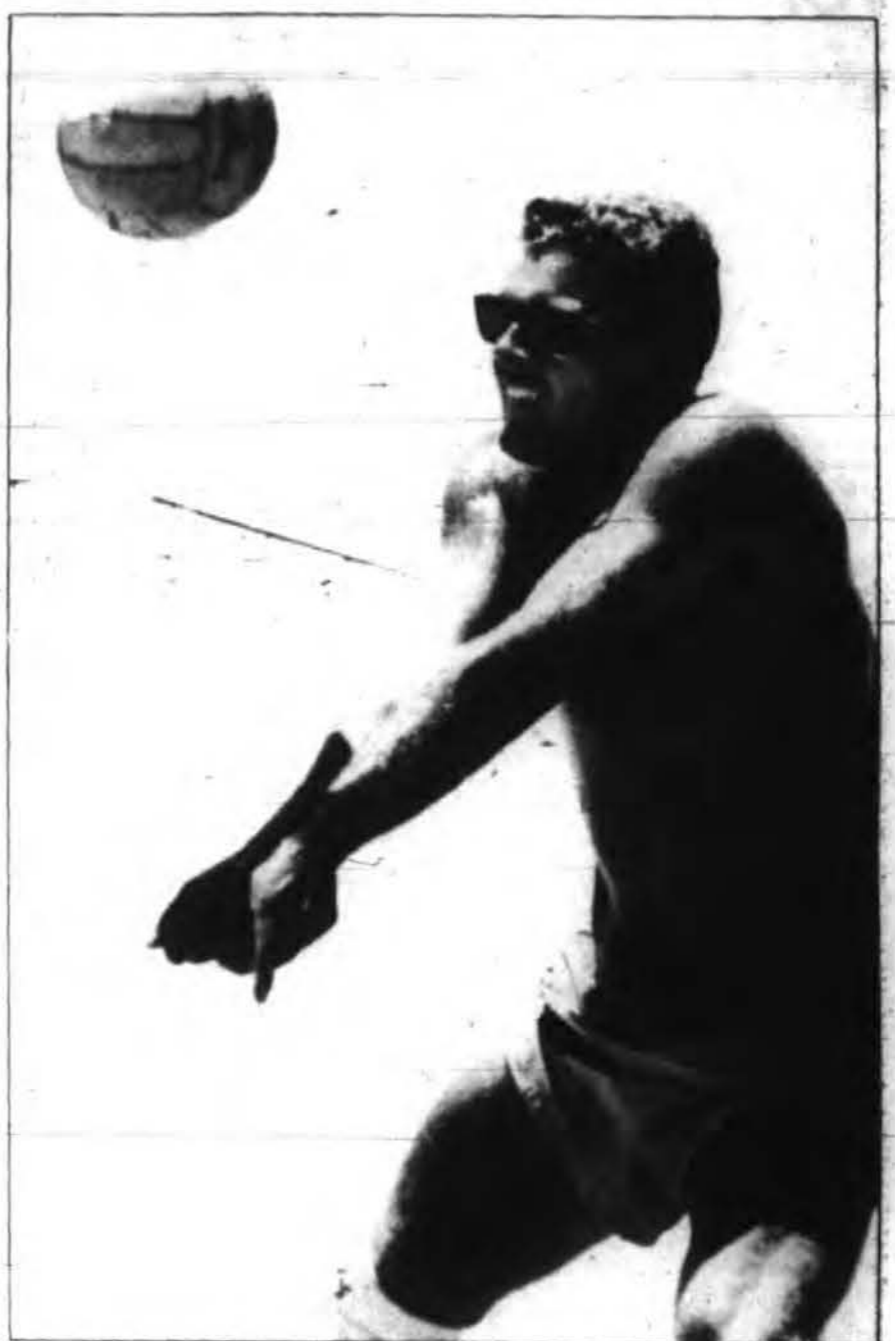

"It's a good tournament," he said. "I now live up in L.A., but I had to come down here for it."

Three Olympic gold medalists — Dusty Dvorak, Scott Fortune and Dave Saunders also made it to the three-day Open.

At the end of the first day of competition, which began at 9 a.m. and didn't wrap up until after 5 p.m., a total of 32 teams in the men's and women's divisions had been reduced to only eight.

Pete Aronchick and partner Mark Eller are the top seeds in the men's division, while defending champion Janice Opalinski and partner Linda Chisom own the top seed in the pro women's competition.

(Please see VOLLEYBALL/B3)

Scott Fortune of Laguna Beach scrambles for ball (upper left), and Stuart Jemesen from Sydney, Australia digs ball during Saturday's action at the Laguna Open. The event, which attracted an estimated 20,000 spectators to the opening day of competition, is now in its 35th straight year of play and is the nation's oldest beach volleyball tourney.

Davis powers Angels to 6-1 win over Minnesota

By MIKE NADEL
AP Sports Writer

MINNEAPOLIS — Two home runs weren't enough to totally satisfy a greedy Chili Davis.

The switch-hitting Davis homered from each side of the plate, leading the California Angels to a 6-1 victory over the Minnesota Twins Saturday night.

But it was a home run he didn't hit, when a second-inning shot was caught at the center-field fence, that Davis remembered most.

"It's a nice feeling (homering twice). If I'd have had that first one go over, that would have been nicer," he said. "Hitters are greedy. We never seem to have enough."

Davis hit his first batting right-handed off Shane Rawley and his second left-handed off Roy Smith. It was the fifth time he has homered from each side of the plate.

When Davis was with the San Francisco Giants, he had a National League-record three switch-hit homer games. Mickey Mantle holds the major-league mark with 10.

It was suggested that the 29-year-old Davis was probably about midway through his career so he might yet catch the Hall of Famer.

"You mean I can beat Mickey Mantle at something?" said Davis, who has four homers and four multi-hit games in his last five contests. "Hey, I don't worry about that. I'll take two right-handed, two left-handed, whatever."

But, of course, three would be better.

Tony Armas also homered as he and Davis continued to pound Minnesota pitching. The Angels have won seven of their last eight games, including three straight routs of the Twins.

With Davis going 6 for 13 with three home runs and five RBI and Armas going 7 for 12 with two homers and four RBI, California has outscored Minnesota, 23-6, in the first three games of the four-game series.

"They're swinging the bats good, but I can tell you they weren't hitting quality pitches," said Rawley, 4-7, who was hit hard and often in his 4 1/2 innings.

"I just didn't feel good out there, so you try to do the best with what you've got. They hit it out of the park."

Winner Kirk McCaskill, 9-4, allowed seven hits in the first four innings but benefited from three double plays. He yielded nine hits in eight innings. Bryan Harvey pitched the ninth.

The Angels remained one-half game behind first-place Oakland in the American League West.

"It's getting close to that time where you start peeping at the scoreboard," Davis said.

The fifth-place Twins, who swept a three-game series from Oakland before playing California and got within 3 1/2 games of first place, are now eight back.

"Maybe the Oakland series took a lot out of the boys," Twins Manager Tom Kelly said. "We haven't even had a sniff of a comeback (against California). They're not letting us up for air, that's for sure. It's tough getting behind night after night. That's not the way the game is supposed to be played."

California's Devon White and Minnesota's Kent Hrbek traded first-inning RBI singles. Armas' fifth homer put California ahead, 2-1, in the second inning.

Davis' 432-foot homer to center in the fourth made it 3-1 and, after White had a fifth-inning RBI triple, Davis hit his 11th homer in the sixth for a 5-1 lead. Wally Joyner had an

Dodgers halt five-game skid, 1-0

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jose Gonzalez picked a perfect time to extend his 10-game hitting streak and end Los Angeles' five-game losing streak.

Gonzalez's sharp grounder bounced off second baseman Jose Lind for a single to score Eddie Murray with two outs in the ninth inning to lift the Dodgers past Pittsburgh, 1-0, Saturday, snapping the Pirates' six-game winning streak.

"I know the team hasn't put everything together, but I know they will," Gonzalez said.

With one out, Murray singled off starter John Smiley, 7-2, and went to second on a walk to Mike Marshall. After Jeff Hamilton popped out to second, Gonzalez, who is 14 for 31, extended his hitting streak to 10 games with his single on an 0-2 pitch.

"When I went up there and swung at the first two pitches, I was too excited," Gonzalez said. "I was just staying with him on the next pitch, looking for something low to hit."

Gonzalez's hitting streak has come at a time when most of the team is in a batting slump.

"He's getting his chance and he's capitalizing," Dodgers Manager Tom Lasorda said of Gonzalez. "Our center fielder (John Shelby) hasn't been producing at all. We've had to go with someone else and he's doing the job."

Jim Belcher, 5-8, pitched the ninth for the victory. Dodgers starter Tim Lary allowed four hits in eight innings, striking out five.

"I was pleased with the effort, but it takes the edge off when you don't get the win," Lary said. "Belcher needed a win, too."

Pittsburgh Manager Jim Leyland said Smiley not only needed a win, he deserved it.

"It's a shame, because Smiley pitched his most outstanding game of the year," Leyland said. "My mind was made up that I was going to take him out after the ninth. There was no sentiment involved in keeping him out there — he looked like he was still throwing good. That's just how I felt."

The Pirates put two runners on base in the fourth and sixth innings without scoring. Singles by Lind and Bobby Bonilla in the fourth put runners at first and third with two out, but R.J. Reynolds grounded out to second.

In the sixth, Lary walked Smiley to lead off the inning and Lind's infield single one out later brought Andy Van Slyke to the plate with two runners on. But Van Slyke's sharp grounder up the middle was snared by second baseman Willie Randolph, who flipped to shortstop Griffin to start a double play.

Rose given support by broadcaster

By JOE KAY
AP Sports Writer

CINCINNATI — Pete Rose says anyone who believes his Cincinnati players can aid an investigation of charges that he gambled on the Reds is "looking for trouble."

The Reds manager, facing a lifetime ban if the charges are proven, got the support of at least one player and the club's radio announcer this weekend in attempting to knock down testimony obtained by baseball investigators.

In testimony by Paul Janszen to baseball investigator John Dowd, Janszen alleged that Rose gambled on Reds games and further charged that several people with the Reds knew about it. Janszen has said he traveled with and placed bets for Rose.

"I spend more time than anybody with Pete Rose," Reds broadcaster Marty Brennan told the Dayton Daily News, charging that if Dowd "left no stone unturned, how come I was never talked to?"

On Friday, Reds relief pitcher John Franco was linked to the investigation by reports that he introduced Rose to Michael Bertolini, a baseball memorabilia dealer who allegedly also helped Rose make bets. Bertolini and Franco went to the same Brooklyn high school, and Dowd's report to Commissioner A. Bartlett Giamatti says Franco knew of Rose's gambling habits.

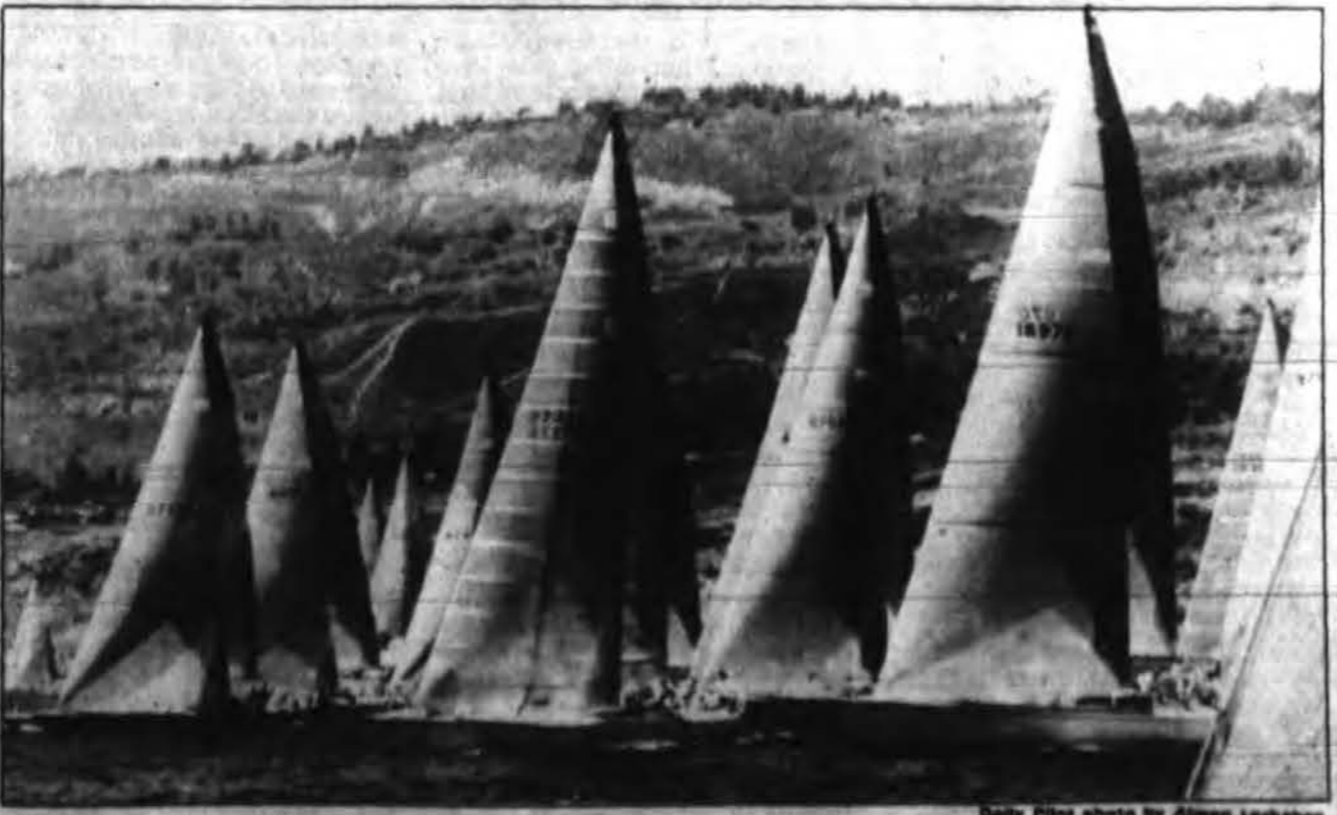

Franco told the Dayton paper he met Bertolini once in a Brooklyn restaurant and, asked if Rose and Bertolini were close friends, said: "Could be."

"We all know Pete liked to gamble," Franco said, "but I don't know anything about him gambling on baseball."

Franco called Janszen's testimony laughable. Brennan said it was true, as Janszen testified, that he knew of Rose's gambling, but "that might be one of the more truthful" (Please see ROSE/B2)

Quick start for Transpac fleet

By ALMON LOCKABEY
Daily Pilot Boating Writer

Fresh northwest winds Friday night got the Transpac race fleet moving earlier than expected and had pushed the fleet leaders more than 200 miles from the start by 9 a.m. Saturday.

The race started Friday at 1 p.m. in a light southwesterly breeze of about 8 knots. The 20-knot northerly that developed during the night contributed to two withdrawals, reducing the fleet to 47, the lowest in many years.

The Class A yacht Grand Illusion, skippered by Ed McDowell of Pacific Palisades, withdrew with a broken boom, and the Class B, Lear Jet, skippered by Samuel-Paullin, Sun City, Ariz., reported she was retiring with a faulty generator.

Lead boats in Class A were Mitchell Rouse's Taxi Dancer and Robert Doughty's Evolution, both out of California Yacht Club, each reporting 218 miles from the start. Paul Simonsen's Mongoose, San Francisco, was two miles astern.

Class B leader was M-1, sailed by Darryl Johnston, Honolulu, and the Class C leader was Flash, Libbie Kamisugi, Honolulu. Leader in the new IMS class was Outa Bounds, sailed by Chuck Cook, Pasadena.

Handicap standings with distances from start:

CLASS B-1, M-1, Darryl Johnston, Hawaii YC, 180; 2, Decaplan, Dave Maginnity, CYC, 174; 3, Allure, Charles Jacobson, Monterey Peninsula YC, 177; 4, Strider, Bill Boyd, South Bay Yacht Racing Club, 170; 5, Ralphie, David Pillsbury, Newport Harbor YC, 169.

since May 1, spending June on the disabled list with a sore back. The Dodgers had Marshall, Kirk Gibson and Murray in the lineup at the same time for only the 19th time in 79 games this season.

The Dodgers placed infielder Mariano Duncan on the 15-day disabled list Saturday to make room for Marshall. The club also moved outfielder Chris Gwynn to the 21-day disabled list. Gwynn has been out since June 12 with a stress fracture of the right foot after going through a 3-for-23 slump in June.

Gooden headed for disabled list as Mets tumble

From The Associated Press
The All-Star break came earlier for Dwight Gooden this year.

Gooden allowed solo homers to Barry Larkin and Kal Daniels before leaving the game in the third inning with a sore right arm Saturday as the Cincinnati Reds beat the New York Mets, 6-2, at Riverfront Stadium.

Mets spokesman Jay Horwitz said Gooden would officially be placed on the disabled list today and the club would recall right-hander Kevin Tapani from Class AAA Tidewater of the International League.

Gooden, 9-4, pitched two-plus innings — the shortest outing of his career — before leaving with what was diagnosed as sore muscles in the area of his right armpit. He has complained of stiffness in that area on several occasions in the past month.

"I hate to do it. It's like cutting off your right arm," Mets Manager Davey Johnson said of putting Gooden on the disabled list. "But it's the most prudent thing to do."

Johnson said Gooden would be unable to participate in the All-Star Game.

Gooden left the game after giving up a first-pitch homer to Kal Daniels leading off the third. It was Daniels' second homer and his first since April 28.

Elsewhere in the National League:

Cubs 3, Giants 2: Greg Maddux allowed two runs in 7 1/2 innings and added two singles and a game-winning RBI to lead Chicago past Rick Reuschel and San Francisco at Candlestick Park.

Maddux, 7-7, won for the sixth time in his last eight starts and snapped a career-high, nine-game winning streak for Reuschel, 12-3. Reuschel hadn't lost since April 28. Maddux allowed seven hits and Mitch Williams pitched 1 1/2 innings for his 20th save.

Cardinals 9, Padres 3: Jose Oquendo had four hits in a game for the first time in his career, including a two-run triple in a five-run second inning, to pace St. Louis at Busch Stadium.

Ted Power, 1-2, pitched 4 1/2 innings of shutout relief for his first victory of the season, allowing three hits. Pat Clements, 1-2, a last-minute substitute for Eric Show, who had a bad back, was the loser.

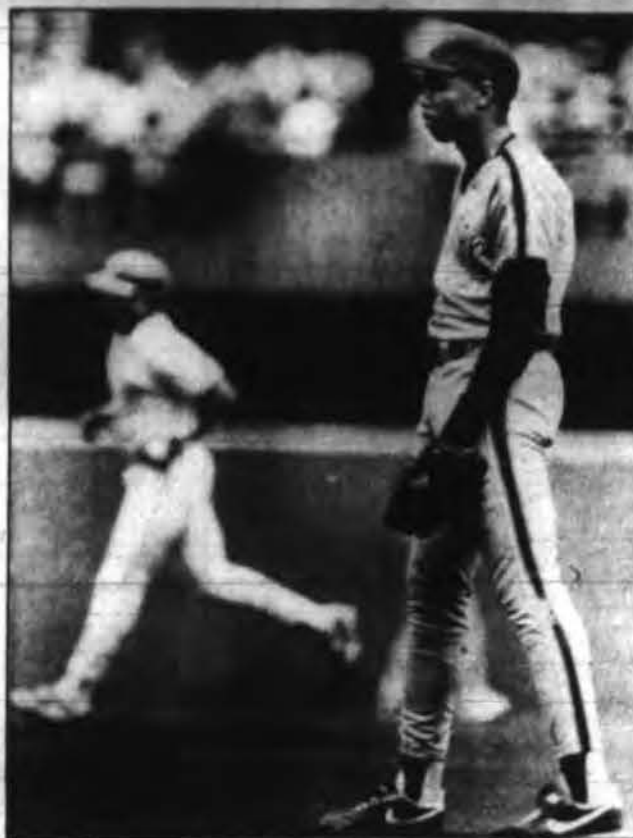

Astros 4, Expos 1: Alex Trevino drove in four runs with two doubles to pace visiting Houston. Trevino had an RBI double in the fifth inning and a three-run double in the seventh.

Larry Andersen, 2-1, pitched three innings and allowed two hits for the victory. Dave Smith got the last three outs for his 16th save. Pascual Perez, 4-9, took the loss.

Phillies 4, Braves 2: Bruce Ruffin won his first game since July 16, 1988, as Philadelphia prevailed at Veterans Stadium. Ruffin, 1-3, who was recalled from Class AAA Scranton-Wilkes Barre of the International League on June 3 after starting the season with the Phillies, allowed one run and six hits in five innings.

Yankees 5, Brewers 1: Rookie Clay Parker pitched 6 1/2 effective innings, leading New York, with a seldom-invoked "fourth out" rule changing the score from 4-1 to 5-1 after the game and depriving Lee Guetterman of a save.

Don Mattingly drove in two runs as the Yankees won their third straight game and again reached the Orioles 8, Tigers 1: In Baltimore, Jeff Ballard snapped two pitching slumps — his own and Baltimore's — by holding Detroit to five hits in 7 1/2 innings and Randy Milligan, Cal Ripken and Craig Worthington hit solo home runs. Ballard, 10-3, won for the first time since June 5.

In seven previous games, Baltimore pitchers surrendered 52 runs and 97 hits in 60 innings, an average of 7.79 earned runs and 14 1/2 hits per game. They gave up 11 runs and 19 hits to Toronto on Thursday night and 16 runs and 18 hits to Detroit on Friday night.

Athletics 6, Indians 4: Rickey Henderson's broken-bat pinch single scored two runs and snapped a 3-2 tie in the sixth inning to lift visiting Oakland. Henderson batted for Mike Gallego with runners at first and third and one out in the sixth. He blooped a pitch from Rich Yeti into center field to score Glenn Hubbard.

Red Sox 3, Blue Jays 1: Eric Hetzel allowed three hits and no runs in 5 1/2 innings in his major-league debut and Mike Greenwell homered for Boston at the SkyDome. Hetzel struck out four and walked four as the Red Sox won their third straight game.

Rangers 1, Mariners 0: In Arlington, Bobby Witt, 0-3 with an 8.15 ERA over his previous four starts, allowed two hits over 7 1/2 innings and Jeff Russell pitched the last 1 1/2 innings for his 19th save to lift Texas to the win.

White Sox 6, Royals 4: Harold Baines greeted Kansas City reliever Tom Gordon with a tie-breaking two-run bloop double, capping a three-run rally in the seventh inning at Comiskey Park.

Player finds disposing of tickets at Wimbledon can cause problems

From The Associated Press

WIMBLEDON, England — Nicole Jagerman may have obeyed the law but not the All England Lawn Tennis Club. She found out Saturday that, when it comes to Wimbledon tickets, the club has the final say.

Jagerman, a first-round loser in women's singles, sold tournament tickets to a scalper.

The tickets came from the daily allotment each player receives free and are supposed to be given to friends and relatives.

"I'm going to get in a lot of trouble for this," said Jagerman from the Netherlands. "We are always told we shouldn't sell them."

The club, which warns all ticketholders against resale, said it believed Jagerman's explanation that the scalper forced 10 pounds ($15) on her for the tickets after she tried to give them away. It said no disciplinary action would be taken.

Jagerman offered her explanation in the newspaper that broke the story Saturday morning and again in an investigation conducted for the club by Georgine Clark, director of European operations for the Women's International Tennis Association.

Jagerman said she had given the money she received from the scalper to the club "to do with as they wish."

The Daily Mail ran a front-page photograph Saturday of Jagerman exchanging tickets for money with a scalper.

British law permits ticket scalping, and the sidewalks around Wimbledon are filled with men and women hawkering Centre Court seats for up to 10 times face value.

Orville Moody eagled the final hole to finish off a tournament-record 64 and move into a tie with Frank Beard for the third-round lead Saturday at the U.S. Seniors Open Golf Championship in Ligonier, Pa.

"Under the conditions — a championship course and under championship conditions — it's one of the best rounds I've ever played," Moody said of the 8-under-par effort that broke the Seniors Open record of 65 set by Miller Barber in 1982.

Moody, who won the U.S. Open in Houston 20 years ago this month, shared the 54-hole lead with Beard at 7-under 209. Beard birdied the last hole to complete a 70.

Moody's march over the Laurel Valley Golf Club course finished in spectacular style. He birdied the 14th, 15th and 16th holes, then parred the 17th before his eagle-3 on the final hole.

In other golf Saturday:

■ Larry Mize and Mark McCumber capitalized on two late bogeys by Paul Azinger to move into a tie for the lead after the third round of the Western Open in Oak Brook, Ill.

■ Mize, the 1987 Masters champion, shot a 5-under-par 67 while McCumber, who needed an ace treatment on the 10th hole for his ailing back, had a 71. Both were tied at 10-under-par 206 after 54 holes over the Butler National course.

■ Tammie Green's 2-under-par 70 in wet weather gave her a commanding three-stroke lead after the third round of the du Maurier Classic in Montreal, the third of the four major tournaments on the LPGA Tour.

U.S. sweeps aside Soviets

Karch Kiraly and Steve Timmons ended their brilliant careers with the national volleyball team by leading the United States to a 15-9, 15-9, 15-5 victory over the Soviet Union in the championship match of the USA Cup Saturday night at the Forum. The United States won the tournament for the sixth straight year, including four straight over the Soviets.

Kiraly and Timmons, who guided the U.S. team from obscurity to gold medals in consecutive Olympics, are retiring to pursue other interests, including pro beach volleyball. Timmons was named USA Cup Most Valuable Player for the third time.

Brazil beat South Korea, 15-9, 13-15, 15-6, 15-12, to claim third place.

In other sports news Saturday:

■ Fountain Valley's Rae Rice and Shannon Dolan paced the Batbusters softball team to a 3-2 victory over the Fillies in the opening round of the Escondido Tournament. Rice threw a no-hitter, striking out five and walking none with the runs she allowed the result of three Batbusters' errors. Dolan was 2 for 4 with a triple and scored twice.

■ Eric Breukink of the Netherlands won the prologue of the 23-day Tour de France cycling race and defending champion Pedro Delgado of Spain turned up late at the starting line, finishing the day almost three minutes behind.

■ The Los Angeles Clippers exercised their option for next season with third-year forward Ken Norman but chose not to exercise their option on seven-year veteran guard Quintin Dailey, General Manager Elgin Baylor said. The team tendered qualifying offers to center Benoit Benjamin, guard Tom Garrick and center Ken Bannister. Baylor said the Clippers will not tender offers to second-year players Rob Lock and Grant Gondrezick. Gondrezick underwent treatment for substance abuse during last season and Dailey was suspended for several games for being overweight.

■ Calvin Smith spoiled Carl Lewis' 28th birthday by nipping the Olympic champion in the 100 meters and Abdi Bile snapped Steve Cram's "Dream Mile" winning streak at the Bislett Games IAAF Grand Prix track meet in Oslo, Norway. Smith, a former world record-holder and a bronze medalist in the Seoul Olympics, was fastest out of the blocks and won the featured event in 10.05 seconds. Bile, the Somali who won the 1,500 in the 1987 World Championships, captured the "Dream Mile" in 3:49.90 after a superb kick in the last 50 meters.

■ University of Arkansas basketball coach Nolan Richardson, reportedly the top candidate to take over the Ohio State program, said he has made no decision about his future.

QUOTE OF THE DAY

Lenny Dykstra, on the day he was traded from the New York Mets to the last-place Philadelphia Phillies: "I think the Mets will win the division. I hope they do. I could use the $50,000, or whatever a share comes to this year."

Father watches Allison win

Davey Allison, who took the lead when Mark Martin ran out of gas with five laps left, won the Daytona 400 for his first victory in a Winston Cup race at Daytona International Speedway in Daytona Beach, Fla. Saturday.

Watching the race was Bobby Allison, Davey's father and the winner of six Winston Cup races at Daytona. "It's almost as good as if he'd run second," the younger Allison said. "I wouldn't be here if it wasn't for him. There's no way I can ever repay him, except to go out and try to win some more races."

Bobby Allison has been sidelined since suffering serious injuries in a race crash in June 1988. He won the 1987 Daytona 400 and beat Davey to the finish line at the 1988 Daytona 500.

Elsewhere Saturday:

■ Michael Andretti broke the track record as he nailed down the pole position for the Cleveland Grand Prix Indy-car race. The 26-year-old second generation racer earned his second pole of the season and the eighth of his Indy-car career with a fast lap of 138.127 mph.

■ Irv Hoerr drove off to an easy victory in the SCCA Cleveland Trans-Am race. Hoerr's Oldsmobile Cutlass Supreme averaged 100.6 mph in a race that was slowed by just one full-course caution flag. The winner earned $11,000.

■ Rob Moroso of Madison, Conn., won the inaugural Firecracker 200 NASCAR Busch Grand National Series stock car race at Volusia County Speedway in Barberville, Fla. in an Oldsmobile Cutlass Supreme.

Giants put Garretts on DL

Right-hander Scott Garretts of the San Francisco Giants was placed on the 15-day disabled list Saturday with a pulled left hamstring. Garretts, 6-3 with a 2.75 earned run average, suffered the injury while hitting a two-run triple Thursday against the Chicago Cubs.

To replace Garretts, who was placed on the disabled list retroactive to June 30, the Giants called up infielder Mike Benjamin from Phoenix of the Class AAA Pacific Coast League, where he batted .272 in 73 games.

In other baseball news Saturday:

■ San Francisco outfielder Kevin Mitchell, who leads the major leagues with 25 home runs, has an inflamed left knee, according to the results of his MRI (magnetic resonance imaging) tests. The Giants, who feared cartilage damage, said Mitchell will take oral medication and rest occasionally.

■ The New York Yankees placed left-hander Dave LaPoint on the 15-day disabled list and activated pitcher Clay Parker.

■ Pitcher Steve Ontiveros, plagued by recurring elbow problems, will miss the rest of the season, the Philadelphia Phillies announced.

TALLEY

From B1

Almost everybody thinks "up." Sports collectors are like Lamar and Bunker Hunt speculating in silver. Example: A company named Garlan USA, Inc., from Huntington Beach produced 4,192 miniature statues of Rose in batting stance a few years ago, just after he broke Ty Cobb's record for career hits. They also produced statuettes of other sports stars such as Magic Johnson, Lou Gehrig, Don Mattingly, Mickey Mantle, and others, but hand-manufactured only 1,000 to 2,000 of each.

Now the market kicker: The little replica of Rose sells for $1,000. Magic and Wade Boggs cost only $150. Mattingly is worth $450 and Mantle $300/p. But Why? Why is Pete Rose so valuable?

"Try to find one," shrugged spokesman Bob Martin of Garlan. "It's all supply and demand."

One sports shop operator from Hamilton County, Ohio, was even peddling copies of the Dowd Report for $25. I swapped him a book.

"And the next crash will be foot-card cards," predicts veteran collector Jerome (Mimi) Alongi from DuQuoin, Ill., and you can believe him. Alongi has been around this racket longer than most and has saved such items as James Bottomley's original contract (with signature) and baseball signed by all of the 1967 world champion St. Louis Cardinals.

National Football League trading cards will soon hit the market in force and already there is a "hot item" because Pro Set, the Dallas-based company which produced the cards made a mistake and gave William (The Refrigerator) Perry of the Chicago Bears the wrong number (47 instead of 72). More than 10,000 original wrong-number cards were released and already they're worth $45 each.

Return, now, to that Mantle collection which rests on a card table just a few feet from my stack of books. One of the reasons why Dr. William McAvoy of Omaha, Neb. can ask $22,950 is that one of the 23 circulated cards is the 1952 Topps rookie card of Mantle worth approximately $6,600.

How the good foot doctor so-cumulated the collection is a little zany, too. He had saved the Mantle cards until one day his daughters needed their teeth fixed. So he worked a deal with another collector who was an orthodontist, swapping the Mantle collection for $10,000 worth of braces. The deal sweetened his daughters' smiles but Dr. McAvoy couldn't wait to buy back the collection a few years later when the orthodontist was having financial problems of his own.

But are all of those little poses of Mickey under glass really worth $22,950, with one card worth more than a Yugo?

"I've already had offers this week," said Dr. McAvoy, slyly. "I'll probably sell it for $20,000 before we leave here."

Almost everything is negotiable and the byword is "buyer beware" when you venture into the bizarre world of sports collecting.

But I'm holding firm on that five-cent autograph. Somebody in this room has to show some stability.

Coaches named for All-Star game

NEW YORK (AP) — Buck Rodgers of Montreal and Jack McKeon of San Diego were named coaches for the National League All-Stars, and Joe Morgan of Boston and Doug Rader of host California will coach the American League, the leagues said Saturday.

The announcements were made by NL President Bill White and Manager Tom Lasorda of Los Angeles, and AL President Bobby Brown and Manager Tony La Russa of Oakland.

things Paul Janzani said.

"I have no indication, subtly or openly, that Pete Rose bet on baseball," Brennan said.

Rose said it was ridiculous to ask him players what he did on the field because he knows what he knows, and he knows everything about what I but I don't think it's funny," Rose told New York Newsday.

Rose and Giampatti, meanwhile, were set on a collision course in state court this week. Barring intervention by an appeals court, a state judge will hold a hearing in Cincinnati on whether to grant a preliminary injunction that would indefinitely extend Rose's protection against suspension or firing.

Giampatti's attorney, under a court order, tried to keep Rose's name out of the hearing. Rose's attorney, however, refused to do so. He expects to testify when the hearing begins Thursday before Hamilton County Common Pleas Judge Norbert A. Nadel.

There's an outside chance that the Ohio Supreme Court would step in and nullify Nadel's restraining order. Deputy Commissioner Francis Vincent Jr. said baseball hasn't decided whether to appeal to the Supreme court this week to try to block the Thursday hearing with Nadel.

Unaware of death threat, McEnroe breezes to win

By RICK WARNER

WIMBLEDON, England — John McEnroe didn't know it at the time, but his third-round match at Wimbledon Saturday was a deadly serious matter.

McEnroe, playing under a death threat he wasn't aware of, beat fellow American Jim Pugh, 6-3, 6-4, 6-2, to move into the fourth round for the first time in four years.

After the match, which was played under heavy security, it was revealed that an unidentified man had threatened to kill McEnroe in calls to the All England Club and a national newspaper.

McEnroe's manager, Sergio Palmieri, was informed of the death threat before the three-time champion walked on Centre Court to play Pugh. But Palmieri didn't tell McEnroe until after he beat Pugh and completed a victory in doubles with partner Jakob Hlasek.

"We cannot tell yet whether this is a serious threat, but we are treating it with great caution and have taken what we think is the proper action to negate it," said chief inspector Ray Dunn of Scotland Yard.

McEnroe appeared calm during his match against Pugh and didn't mention the threat in his post-match news conference. Instead, he talked about his steadily improving game.

"That was my best match so far," said McEnroe.

who was stretched to five sets in the opening round and four sets in the second round. "I felt relaxed out there and I kept my concentration."

While McEnroe breezed to victory, America's newest tennis star struggled to reach the fourth round.

Michael Chang, the 17-year-old French Open champion, used his speed to overcome the power of The Netherlands' Michiel Schapers, 4-6, 6-3, 7-5, 7-5. The normally placid player from Placentia got fired up and pumped his fists after saving a set point in the third set.

"There are times when you have to get pumped up," Chang said. "If the adrenalin isn't going, you're not going to win the match."

For the first time since opening day, there were no rain delays. There also were no major surprises, although the No. 8 women's seed, Pam Shriver, was eliminated by fellow American Gretchen Magers.

Defending men's champion Stefan Edberg beat American Scott Davis, 6-3, 6-4, 4-6, 6-2, just before nightfall and fourth-seeded Mats Wilander continued his string of straight-set victories with a 6-3, 6-3, 6-3 win over Jason Stoltenberg of Australia.

Also advancing were eighth-seeded Tim Mayotte and No. 16 Amos Mansdorf. Mayotte, who reached the fourth round in all but one of his eight previous Wimbledon appearances, did it again with a 6-4, 6-1, 6-3 victory over fellow American David Pate.

AREA ROUNDUP

Irvine, Newport Beach to host AYSO Games

The Daily Pilot

More than 1,700 American Youth Soccer Organization players will participate in the AYSO National Games July 3-8 on fields in Irvine and Newport Beach.

The Games, celebrating AYSO's 25th anniversary, will feature competition for boys and girls from coast to coast and Hawaii, in four age divisions (under-19, under-16, under-14 and under-12).

Opening ceremonies will get under way with the Parade of Players Monday morning at 9:30 at the UCI stadium.

The Games, sponsored by The Irvine Company, will feature a Team and Soccerfest format. The one-day Soccerfest event is scheduled Monday from 1-5 p.m. Soccerfest teams are formed at random from the pool of team players plus individual entrants.

Team play kicks off Tuesday with games scheduled from 8 a.m.-3 p.m. for the 90 entered teams. Games will be played during the week at nine multi-field sites.

The finals will be played on Saturday morning at UCI, beginning at 9 a.m.

On Tuesday at 8:30 a.m., an estimated 2,000 runners will compete in the fifth annual Huntington Beach Fourth of July Parade 8k.

The run kicks off the annual Huntington Beach Fourth of July Celebration and follows the route of the oldest community Independence Day parade in the nation.

The starting gun will sound at 8:30 a.m. at the Huntington Beach Civic Center. The route consists of two loops along Main Street between Yorktown and Sixth Street.

Donations of $16 entitle participants to entry and T-shirts. All proceeds benefit the March of Dimes. Entry forms are available through the March of Dimes office in Costa Mesa or Sport Chalet, 16242 Beach Boulevard, Huntington Beach.

For more information, contact the March of Dimes office at 631-8700.

Recently, the South Irvine Little League Dodgers defeated the North Irvine Cardinals, 5-3, to win the city-wide minor league championship.

Pitcher Jimmy Haney of the Dodgers held the Cardinals to one run through three innings, while Jerry Coleman finished. George Kline and Eric Johnson keyed the Dodgers' offense.

The Newport Harbor Lawn Bowling Club will hold its 1989 annual Ladies and Men's Pairs Tourney on Wednesday, July 19.

The 1988 ladies champions, Dottie Panacek and Alma Diggins, as well as the 1988 men's champions, Ro Dombrow and Leonard Diggins, will be competing.

Thirty-two bowlers in dress whites will occupy all 16 rinks of both bowling greens. Competition will begin at 10 a.m. and run throughout the afternoon.

The Equitable Old-Timers Series arrives at Anaheim Stadium next Sunday at 12:15, featuring a star-studded lineup of the game's greats.

The complete rosters have not been finalized, but 25 Hall of Famers have already committed to participate.

The visiting Equitable National League All-Stars will be managed by Cooperstown enshrinee Roy Campanella. His coaching staff includes five Hall of Famers: Ray Dandridge, Billy Herman, Monte Irvine, Ralph Kiner and Enos Slaughter.

Lou Boudreau, a Hall of Famer who skipped four teams during his 16-year managerial career, will pilot the Equitable AL stars. Hall of Famers Luke Appling, Bobby Doerr, Rick Ferrell and Johnny Mize are the AL coaches.

Former Cincinnati Reds standout Johnny Bench and umpire Al Barlick, two of the newest members of the Hall of Fame, will also participate.

VOLLEYBALL

From B1

Today, Opalinski and Chisom take on Lori Zeno and Gayle Stammer for the right to play for the money on Monday. Their opponents will be the winner of the Dale Keough-Hall and Carolyn Kirby-Lisa Strand and Judy Bellomo match, also today.

The Legends competition is on tap today. Among the former greats who will be competing are Mike O'Hara, Gene Selznick and Gary Hooper. O'Hara, of Pacific Palisades, placed second in the Laguna Open three times in the 1950s, with three different partners.

He was a 1964 Olympic team member and will be inducted into the Volleyball Hall of Fame in Springfield, Mass. in October.

Selznick was the first legend of beach volleyball, winning the initial Laguna Open in 1955 and again every year for the next six. He is known around the world as "Mr. Volleyball."

Hooper was a Laguna Open winner in 1977 and runner-up in 1978, and has won 14 open events. He was a 1978 world champion.

The finals of the three divisions will be held on Monday amid a great deal of hoopla.

Beginning at noon, there will be a presentation of flags by the El Toro Marine Corps color guard, followed by brief messages from dignitaries (a possible telephone hook-up with President George Bush is planned, but has not been confirmed).

The presentation of awards will take place immediately following the finals. There is a $70,000 purse and gold commemorative rings that will go to the winners of each division.

The action gets started Monday at 1 p.m. with the Legends final, followed by the women's final at 2 and the men's final at 4.

Just look at shares sold by managers

AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK — Wall Street hates the word "bet," which it associates with the somewhat frantic and relatively low-brow activities at casinos and racetracks that contrast with the serious business of stock exchanges. Betting is gambling. Wall Streeters say. They consider it an often irrational and addictive activity that generally brings nothing but woe to participants and families, whereas investing builds happiness and nest eggs.

As they see it, gambling is for the uninformed, the unfortunate, the touts and dreamers. In contrast, investing is rational, considered, informed, calculated, prudent. It is productive: it builds the economy.

Betting is low-class, investing is high. Bettors are hot-headed, investors are cool. Betting is blind, investing is informed. Betting is for losers, investing for winners. Betting may flirt with the law and sometimes flout it, but investing is all-American, wholesome, democratic. But — with due respect for such definitions and opinions — some of the people who run U.S. free enterprise aren't strongly inclined to make either a bet or an investment in the very companies with which they associate.

Proxy statements tell the tale, showing that executives of major U.S. businesses sometimes have surprisingly small investments in their own companies. Directors sometimes have what is called an odd lot or fewer than 100 shares. Still, these are the people whose job it is to convince others to invest in their corporations, and for most people the most convincing argument for investing is the potential for corporate growth and profit.

The case of managers and directors who decline to invest heavily in their own companies, or who sell when others are buying, has long been a curious phenomenon in U.S. corporate life. And it is closely watched.

It is, in fact, a key measure used by smart investors. If managers and directors aren't enthusiastic investors, why should outsiders want to buy in? If managers are selling, doesn't that suggest a lack of faith in the future?

Often, but not always, high-level managers sometimes are compelled to sell for personal reasons, such as to pay taxes, settle estates or raise money to support a certain life style.

But when several insiders lower their holdings simultaneously it often is enough to provoke speculation that they know something the public doesn't. That type of speculation now involves Lockheed Corp.

The Wall Street Journal noted this week that Robert Fuhrman, Lockheed vice chairman, sold 8,635 shares in February and 5,000 more on May 25, reducing his holdings to 1,000 shares. Seven other insiders were sellers in recent months.

While such decisions could be personal, they are watched closely by advisory services — as potential evidence the future might contain some bad news. Indeed, that is often the case.

Are these managers, therefore, betting against their own "team"? That's where the distinction between betting and investing and sports and business becomes clearer. Managing a business is not managing a team.

Business, unlike sports, isn't played a game at a time, but all the time. The season isn't limited, but endless.

Lori Markowicz, director of the association's Irvine office.

Newport firm barred from New Mexico

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — A Newport Beach brokerage company has been barred from doing business in New Mexico for the next five years and must post money to reimburse local governments that suffered damages in dealing with the company.

A New Mexico Securities Division spokesman said Friday that Liberty Group, Liberty Capital Markets Inc., agreed to put up $75,000 to satisfy any judgments or settlements reached in ongoing litigation with two New Mexico counties.

The settlement with the division also required Liberty Group to pay a $15,000 civil penalty and a $5,000 administrative assessment.

Liberty Group also must pay a $5,000 reimbursement to the North American Securities Administrators Association for costs of an investigation, the settlement said.

The city of Santa Fe sued Liberty Group Ltd. in December, alleging the company overcharged for handling city investments.

The city accepted an undisclosed cash settlement from the company in May.

Similar lawsuits brought by San Juan and Bernalillo counties are pending, the division said.

Arbitration agency gives cheap solution to contract disputes

By DONNA MOONEY
Daily Pilot Business Editor

A trucking and excavation firm acting as a subcontractor finishes a job for a land owner. The firm bills the landowner, but the latter refuses to pay. In turn, the excavator seeks $1 million in pay and damages.

If the case had occurred even as long as five years ago, the two parties might still be waiting for a court date, and could spend thousands of dollars in legal fees.

But a practice that's been around for many years, now being put to use more often, is giving businesses an expedient, cheaper — and private — alternative.

Arbitration involves an impartial third party who reviews the dispute and makes a decision to which both parties are bound. And with stamp from court, the decision carries the same power as one handed down by a judge.

As businesses sprang up in Orange County over the past decade, disputes naturally followed. And then she expects the office will process 400 by the end of the year, ranging from labor disputes to auto insurance claims. Fees to the not-for-profit agency range from $300 for claims below $25,000, to $1,425 for claims over $5 million.

While those prices remain an attractive alternative to court, the agency still faces the task of educating industry representatives.

"I think a lot of people are hesitant without knowing how it operates," said Tom Pistone, member of the agency's advisory committee and attorney for Stradling, Yocca, Carlson & Rauth in Newport Beach. As a result, AAA hosts annual seminars in Anaheim and Los Angeles.

But industries must go beyond the arbitration table to look for causes and solutions to disagreements in our fast-paced society, Markowicz said.

"I think we've lost touch with what it means to live with other people successfully," she said. "We have to realize that we are not islands and relearn how to live in peaceful co-existence."

arbitrators listen to the case for about five days and are paid about $450 each per day by the two parties.

In 30 days the arbitrators deliver a decision. They decide that while some excavation work was completed, the firm hadn't completed all the work necessary under the contract. As a result, the land owner must pay, but only $750,000. Contractors like the idea of an inexpensive solution to disputes.

"I don't think anybody wins going to court," said Bud Greenleaf, owner of Greenleaf Demolition & Grading in Huntington Beach. He added, "A contract is no better than the guy who signs it."

Richard Caldwell, vice president of Stellway's Excavating & Grading Inc. in Fountain Valley, said arbitration saves a contractor about $10,000 a year. "It's a necessary. We insist on arbitration clauses in our contracts."

AAA's Orange County office has handled 100 cases since opening three months ago. Markowicz said she expects the office will process 400 by the end of the year, ranging from labor disputes to auto insurance claims. Fees to the not-for-profit agency range from $300 for claims below $25,000, to $1,425 for claims over $5 million.

Bank of Canada replaces bill with 'loonie' coin

By SOLL SUSSMAN
Associated Press Writer

TORONTO — The Bank of Canada stopped issuing dollar bills Friday in the latest step of a program to phase in the 11-sided, gold-colored "loonie" coin.

The Royal Canadian Mint has 240 million of the new $1 coins already in circulation and believes that any reluctance among Canadians to use them is fading, spokesman Michael Francis said.

Dollar bills remain legal currency indefinitely, but their life expectancy under normal use is from nine to 12 months. The $2 bill is now the smallest issued by the Bank of Canada.

Francis, in an interview from Ottawa, said banks and retailers might tire of handling both $1 coins and bills. He predicted that the coin might become standard by the fall.

He said the mint was distributing 1 million of the "loonies" weekly in January and the number rose gradually to 5 million weekly by May. The mint distributed 9.8 million of the new coins one week in June, he said.

It is nicknamed for its design of a loon, the bird that makes its distinctive call in many northern Canadian lakes.

The mint learned some lessons from the quick fade of a U.S. $1 coin before launching the coin. The Canadians found the U.S. Susan B. Anthony coin was too close in size to the quarter, confusing consumers and the public relations campaign wasn't extensive enough before the coin's launching in 1979.

On the cutting edge of summer fashion

"The future's so bright, I gotta wear shades ..."

Wraparound shades, that is. Multi-colored, mirrored-surfaced, Oakley shades that are so durable they can withstand the close range blast of a 12-gauge shotgun, and at least a couple scuffings from burning beach sand or dousings with briny sea foam.

The future is bright indeed for the Irvine-based Oakley manufacturing company, makers of the futuristic sunglass that at times seem to be on every human face on planet Earth, or to be more specific, on the face of every surfer, biker, motocross rider, sunbather, tourist and Southern Californian under 18 years old.

Oakley, according to several local retailers, is king of facial fashion for the Summer of '89, which is bad news for former eyewear monarchs Vauvnet and Ray-Ban, maker of the retro-classic Wayfarer sunglass.

Of course, the wraparound look is not new. A quick check of recent pop-culture history shows the streamlined goggle-style look popping up in Fellini movies and Onassis bios, as well as on Yoko Ono album covers and in Hollywood films about muscular androids with German accents and machine guns.

But now, according to beach and sportswear cognoscenti, the fashion has spread. It is now not only acceptable but in some sense mandatory that the both the action enthusiast and the fashion monger hang Oakley Blades across the bridge of his or her nose.

Inside South Coast Plaza on a recent Thursday morning, the air was its usual regulated cool, despite the scorching heat outside Costa Mesa's gargantuan shopping mall.

As shoppers streamed through the mall's spacious corridors, Dan Koosed, a stocky, brown-haired man in his late 20s, slipped on a pair of $110 Oakley Iridium Blades.

Ruth Frankel: The animals' best friend

"I would not give much for that man's religion whose dog and cat were not the better for it."

— Abraham Lincoln

By RAMONA PETERS
Daily Pilot Correspondent

People often ask Ruth Frankel why she spends so much time, money and energy on animal causes when there are people with overwhelming needs.

Frankel, president of the Animal Assistance League of Orange County (AAL) replies, "In our civilized society there are three helpless groups which must be protected from fear, exploitation and suffering. The first two groups are children and elderly, and their welfare is subsidized by the government and private sector. The third group consists of animals. However, local government services are generally limited to control and disposal of animals, with welfare receiving little priority. The helpless animals have only volunteer humane workers to protect and care for them."

Frankel, one of the four founders of the AAL in 1973, became so involved in the organization that she retired from her teaching and administrative responsibilities at Oceanside Community College to devote full time to running the non-profit organization.

During the ensuing years Frankel has developed many successful programs, the latest being the Pro-Bono Program, in which 50 Orange County veterinarians have volunteered to handle one free case each month for indigent owners of sick or injured pets.

Frankel feels much of the League's success is because they started small, established a solid foundation and continued to expand with a strong sense of purpose. She also attributes success to the unique services of the AAL which extend to people as well as animals.

"The Pet Helpline, the organization's main project since inception, is the only service in Orange County which is available for supporting the needs of pet owners or citizens with animal concerns," Frankel said.

With the exception of the operators staffing the Pet Helpline, all other workers in the AAL are volunteers with widely varying backgrounds. According to Frankel, "The organization attracts people from all walks of life. However, they share one common objective — to make life better for animals."

She also indicated that regardless of the social and economic differences within the volunteer ranks, they remain a committed, homogenous group.

Aside from the common cause of the AAL, Frankel attributes this to the bonding effect created by "an extra dimension of sensitivity — of character and attitudes which animal lovers share."

Eleanor Page, also a founding member and presently an educational chairperson in AAL, describes Frankel as being a "calm, cool, organized director." Page feels Frankel has been the "mainstay of the organization." She also considers Frankel mainly responsible for the six Disneyland Community Service Awards presented to the League.

While Frankel said she finds the work interesting, the humane volunteer also experiences frustration and heartbreak because all the homeless animals can't be saved or the grieving pet owner helped in every case.

And the problem is only going to get worse. As Orange County increases in population, the burden of "a throw-away lifestyle" becomes even more apparent when dealing with the ever-growing problems of unwanted and abused animals.

"We must avoid the 'occupational hazard' of becoming overwhelmed by the tragedy and suffering of those beyond our help, so that we don't become cynical or discouraged," she noted.

Also, in the face of so much that needs to be done, Frankel admits that she and the humane volunteers must constantly guard against becoming immersed in the activities of the organization to the detriment of a personal life.

"Finding a happy medium is a never-ending struggle," Frankel said, "but although the work is time-consuming and demanding, it is very fulfilling."

Phony felons finagle funds for Cancer Society

"Jailiee" Paul Salata surrenders as a jail uniform is put on him by Jim de Boom as part of the "Jail and Bail" fundraiser.

The American Cancer Society filled a few jails again this year, and raised in excess of $80,000 for cancer research, education and patient service programs.

Although the jails, located at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel, the Atrium Irvine and the Bank of America Tower in Orange, were makeshift and all in good fun, arrestees were very serious about raising bail for the recent two-day "Jail and Bail" event.

More than 100 community leaders were arrested by "Keystone Cops" and taken to the nearest of the three jails. Jailies were then tried and sentenced to one hour in jail—and allowed unlimited phone calls to raise their bail for release.

Jerry Kobrin was once again top jailie, raising in excess of $5,000. Because of his success at raising top dollars for the past two years, a special award has been named in his honor. Those who raise $1,500 or more now receive "Jerry the Jailie" awards, which will be presented at the Aug. 8 recognition party.

A few local jailies participating in the 1989 Jail and Bail included L.A. Ram Rich Saul, John Stillman, Jody de Boom, Dan Beals, Paul Salata, Lloyd Wright and Ed McCauley.

The University Club at the UCI campus was the site for the second annual Lockhart Symposium Dinner hosted recently by the UCI Brain Imaging Center Committee and the UCI Department of Psychiatry.

The 80-plus guests joined dinner chairs Sandra Brodie and Jean Liechty for the late afternoon symposium to hear Dr. Sam Keith's presentation on the "National Mental Health Research Program." Keith is deputy director for clinical research at the National Institute of Mental Health.

Guests were also treated to a tour of the Brain Imaging Center and introduced to the new $2-million cyclotron, equipment which allows researchers to produce radioactive isotopes for use with the PET (positron emission tomography) scanner.

The $75-per-person ticket total supported research at the Brain Imaging Center, reputed to be the only facility in the world to use the PET scanner exclusively for psychiatric research. It is the center's goal to expand understanding of the brain.

Dinner sponsors also included Athalie Clark, Doug Liechty, Richard and Carmen Kratz, Marjorie and Eldon Lockhart, Gerald Brodie, Floss and Ed Schumacher, and Dorothy and Donald Bendetti.

Guests supporting the center and learning more about mental health included Louise and Bill Arnold, Mary Lou Hornsby, William and Blyn Bunney, Hal and Mimi Birnkrant, Z. Alfred, Bill and Betty Palmer, William and Gabrielle Vaccobozzi, Tom and Emma Jane Riley, Carl and Mary Raymond, Connie Northland, and William and June House.

Fragrance creators working overtime at the ol' factory

By VIDA DEAN
Daily Pilot Correspondent

There will be another new fragrance out late this month. Max Factor will introduce Jaclyn Smith's "California."

Smith, ex-Charlie's Angel, has been a spokesperson for MF since 1974. In her own words, Jaclyn Smith's California is a fragrance to "bring out the natural beauty in every woman." The full-bodied floral-woody bouquet has been poured into a voluptuous flacon, and wrapped in a rich Pacific sunset.

Wow! Actually, it's a concoction of muguet, rose, geranium, vanilla, oakmoss and musk and it sells for $12.50 for cologne to $200 for perfume in a limited edition bottle.

I haven't sniffed a sample ... it's probably nice if you like floral scents. My problem would be when someone said "what is that fragrance you're wearing?" and you'd have to answer, "California."

Maybe the perfume people are running out of perfumy names. Have you noticed how many new ones are available now? Julio Iglesias will call his fragrance "Only" and I kind of like that. And Baryshnikov is calling his new women's fragrance "Misha" and a new one coming from Dior for men will be called "Fahrenheit."

I was chatting with Gildas, the Newport Beach designer who does wonderful things with beading, and he jokingly said, "Everybody is coming up with a new fragrance. I'm going to do one and name it 'Bead.' I will put a bead in each bottle."

I liked that idea, but he added, "Just kidding, all of my time is taken up with putting beads on the dresses."

Have you noticed that ties are (Please see VIDA/C3)

BLADES

out of the mall's ceiling. Light hit the Blades' reflective surface and warped into psychedelic blobs, of silvery yellow and shimmering orange.

Koosed, his eyes shielded by a molded plastic lens of color, said wearing Blades makes him feel like he just walked off the set of "The Terminator" or "Star Wars."

Koosed is a manager at the Snowden Mize sports-wear store, which features all the brightest and most daring surf trunks, tanktops and other clothing items vital to the Post-modern beachgoer.

Koosed said Oakleys of various models lead Snowden Mize sunglasses sales, comprising as much as 45 percent of the business at an outlet that sells several pricy name brands such as Bolle, Style Eyes, Vaurmet and Ray Ban.

The colorful iridiums are not the only ones that sell, either, he added, noting that Blade styles with gray lenses are also popular.

Koosed said a part of the Oakley appeal is the interchangeability of the glasses' plastic parts.

Especially for young buyers, Oakleys are simply more fun than stodgier brands, he said. With Oakley Blades, the wearer can completely disassemble each pair and change the color of the nose piece or the earpieces.

The plastic "frames" (the traditional term barely applies to the minimalistic Oakleys) already come in the newest and most outrageous colors. Mixing the framepieces allows combinations that are just that much more outrageous, Koosed said.

The Blade style, which includes the regular Blade and the narrower RazorBlade, is the most distinctive model the company offers, but Oakley has also carved out a slice of the more sedate sunglasses market with its Frogskin-style glasses, which start at about $35.

Frogskins feature traditional frames with lenses that are traditional except for the material. They look like the popular Wayfarer, which Ray-Ban rode to the top of the sunglasses world about five years ago, when rockability and '50s nostalgia were hugely bankable crazes and the public hungered for the sunglasses frames popularized by Buddy Holly.

Koosed said the allure of Oakleys appears to be growing, and spreading throughout the world. Tourists catch on to Oakleys' California look during two-week vacations to Disneyland and end up buying a pair to take back with them to Indiana, Texas or Maine, Koosed said. He said the Europeans and Japanese seem especially hooked.

This, of course, does not change how distinctly Californian he said he felt during a recent trip east, when he was the only one he saw walking down Pittsburgh sidewalks wearing the colorful Blades.

Regardless of its cutting-edge California image, Oakley did not set out on fashion mission, representatives said.

The firm started out manufacturing pragmatic sports equipment for motorcycle riders.

Founder Jim Jannard launched the company about 15 years ago. Jannard's first action was to take the Oakley name from his English setter and slap it on a line of motorcycle handlebar grips, according to Renee Conners, advertising manager for the firm.

As the fledgling company grew, its products extended to goggles for motocross and skiing (the products still command a large following on dirt tracks and snowy slopes, Conners said).

The step from goggles to wraparound sunglasses was not a difficult one, according to Conners. Oakley sunglasses use the same lens material as the goggles, a sturdy polycarbonate patented by Oakley under the name Plutonite.

Plutonite is so durable that Oakley representatives use its steely resilience as a marketing ploy. In some stores, a single Oakley Blade lens sits perched atop a display case full of various Oakley products.

The lens is not factory fresh, however. In fact, the lens is battered, blasted at close range with a shotgun. No surprise, it's not pretty.

But it's not shattered or cracked, either. It's not even scratched. The victim lens, said to be peppered with buckshot from a distance of 10 yards, is simply gouged in approximately 15 spots across its surface.

And even these gouges don't pierce the thin, lightweight plastic.

Such durability makes the glasses essential to many involved in recreational sports, Conners said. Their versatility bodes well for the company's future in other parts of the country.

"We're selling more sunglasses all the time," said Conners. "Like most trends, the Oakley trend started in California then moved to the East and the Midwest."

On a clear, sunny Monday morning on Balboa

Island, a Ferris wheel spun slowly with all but one car empty.

Near the Ferris wheel, four young men sat around a circular white table.

One of the men was David Procida, 30, of San Juan Capistrano, who writes for Cycle News motorcycle magazine. Procida slipped off his black-rimmed sunglasses and fingered them slowly, his elbows on the table.

"These are called Gatorz. They're made by a San Diego company," he said flatly. "They're like Oakleys but they're better priced. They'll have a wraparound model out by the end of July, and that'll give Oakley some competition."

As a writer, Procida said, he deals constantly with the motorcycle world from which Oakleys arose.

He said Oakley has been cagey in its marketing, designating certain motocross riders as "Oakley factory pilots." By naming riders pilots, the company not only sponsors their sunglasses needs, but elevates them in status, honoring their acrobatic aerial feats often taken for granted by race fans, Procida said.

From his seat beside Procida, Dave Lopez agreed with his companion about Oakley's marketing shrewdness.

Oakley hasn't made a wrong move since it introduced its Blades in 1985, Lopez said.

Lopez is a 28-year-old resident of San Juan Capistrano who operates heavy machinery for a living.

Although he doesn't wear Oakleys, he has no shortage of opinions on this summer's eyewear craze.

Oakley was brilliant to saturate the volleyball crowd, the surf crowd, the mountain bike crowd and the bikini crowd, Lopez said.

ANN LANDERS

Recalling life with an alcoholic father

DEAR ANN LANDERS: More than 600 students from 42 schools in Germany, Great Britain, Italy and Belgium submitted entries to the third Annual Patch High School Junior ROTC writing contest on courage and drug prevention.

ANN LANDERS

The winner of the high-school-level competition was a 16-year-old who asked that his name be withheld. I hope you will print this lad's entry, Ann. It is remarkably good and appeared first in The Stars and Stripes newspaper.

Dear Stuttgart: That 16-year-old has written a heartbreaking piece. I wonder how many other young people are walking in those same sad shoes. Here is the prize-winning essay and my thanks for sending it on:

THE WAY I SEE IT If I had the attention of the world for two minutes, I would tell everyone about the hell I have been through living with an alcoholic parent.

I would tell them about the nights I have lain awake until morning, wondering if my father was dead, killed in an alcohol-related accident. And sometimes wishing he was. I would also pray that he did not take an innocent life with him.

I would tell the world about my 12th birthday party. My eight best friends were there. Two people had to carry my dead drunk father into the house. I would talk about the night when I was 9 years old, how I was crying on the couch because of the harsh words he was screaming at my mother.

I would recall the nights I cried myself to sleep because my father told me I was worthless, rotten and stupid. I would tell about the times at sports banquets, parties, dinners and other public places when my father became profane and belligerent and embarrassed all the members of our family.

VIDA

From C2 getting wider? Most ties, according to the Neckwear Association of America, measure 3 1/2 inches. Some designer ties go up to 4 inches wide.

Ties were wide back in the 60s, but these new ones differ in shape. The knot area is narrower and allows for a smaller, neater knot.

And then I would talk about the times when he wasn't drinking and how he loved me as only a father could love a son. He taught me how to bowl and told me about the problems he experienced when he was a teenager, and how he would give me a hug when I really needed one.

I would recall the times he showed up at the swimming meet to cheer me on and the nights he helped me with my dreaded trigonometry. How strange that these conflicting personalities belong to the same man.

At the end of my two minutes I would say something to let people know that alcohol is a potent drug that can change a person from someone who is lovable to someone who is despised.

I hope that through my suffering I may convince at least one alcoholic to seek help because alcohol is a drug that destroys more than a person, it can destroy a family as well. — A Student Wishing to Remain Anonymous

Dear Readers: At this moment I am trying to locate that young man to ask if he has ever heard of Alateen.

Alateen is an organization for teenagers who have an alcoholic parent. This self-help group has chapters all over the world. Like Alcoholics Anonymous, it costs nothing to join. The underlying message of Alateen is to stop pleading with the alcoholic to quit drinking, but to change your attitude toward the drinker and make him take responsibility for himself.

Gem of the Day: Here's a tip for success from Kemmons Wilson of Memphis, Tenn., founder of the Holiday Inns. "Work half a day. It makes no difference which half. It can be either the first 12 hours or the last 12 hours."

Tie patterns are much bolder, and purple used with other colors such as olive green, is the new "power" color.

Have you noticed vests for women in the stores? They will be a hot item for fall. Rich floral prints and plaids are great investment for pants and skirts.

Have you noticed how "perfect" cosmetics are getting to be? "Perfect" is part of the name for numerous items. Estee Lauder has Perfect lipstick... $15 a tube with claim that it will stay on longer and the longer you use it the longer it will stay on.

Intelligent Skincare has announced that in September its Perfect Focus Color Corrector will be on the market. It's a fragrance-free, oil-free product home a reasonable club slam on this hand.

Note that South, Dorothy Truscott of Riverside, N.Y., had no hesitation in introducing her shabby club suit at her second turn—the alternative of one no trump is never attractive with a singleton in partner's suit and no soft values. Not surprisingly, that excited North no end, and the slam was reached in quick time.

West led the jack of hearts, taken by declarer's ace. If trumps were 2-2, declarer could claim the hand, so the first step was to draw two rounds of trumps. When East showed up with a trump trick and spades failed to break, several declarers threw in the towel and ended up down one.

Mrs. Truscott demonstrated that there was no reason to be bothered by the fact that she had not picked up all the trumps. She cashed her high diamonds, discarding a heart from dummy, and ruffed a heart. After cashing the ace and king of spades, declarer continued with a spade from dummy. Since it would not help East to ruff (declarer would simply discard a loser and claim her contract), he discarded a diamond. There followed a heart ruff and another spade from the table. When East again discarded, declarer simply continued with her crossruff. Thus, declarer raked in 12 tricks, via two spades, two diamonds, a heart, two high trumps and five ruffers. Trick 13 was won by West's queen of spades and East's queen of trumps.

'Great Balls of Fire' leaves out the best parts

Dennis Quaid turns in a kinetic performance as the manic Jerry Lee Lewis in "Great Balls of Fire," the story of Lewis' rise from obscurity in Louisiana to national success in the '50s.

By DOLORES BARCLAY
Associated Press Arts Editor

Some of the best movie biographies were films that were carefully researched and written and based on a variety of sources, such as "Lawrence of Arabia," "Gandhi" and "Raging Bull."

These were movies that gave as full and complete a portrait as the screen would allow — with performances to match. And with such standard-bearers, why does Hollywood continue to seek out books, usually best sellers, that give only a fragmented (and sometimes biased) account of an event or life, and rush to make a movie? Are the creative minds of the film industry incapable of doing original research and stories?

These questions come to mind with "Great Balls of Fire," Jim McBride's movie on the life and times of the piano-pumping rocker Jerry Lee Lewis, based on the book by Myra Lewis with Murray Silver, McBride and Jack Baran did the screenplay.

Dennis Quaid is a treat as Lewis. He's manic, lewd, adorable and crazy. He swaggers about with childish abandon, and dances with the piano like a careless lover. At times, though, Quaid becomes almost cartoonish in his portrayal. But that's OK, because Jerry Lee Lewis was a walking comic book.

Myra (Winona Ryder) was Jerry Lee's third wife. She also was his third cousin and 13 years old when they married. He was 22.

Ryder ("Heathers") continues to impress with her film work. She is a great casting choice for the pubescent, pulchritudinous bubble gum-chewing Myra. She is wide-eyed and dreamy-eyed, giggly and pouty, lusty and innocent.

The year was 1958, and Lewis had already shot to the top of the charts with "Whole Lotta Shakin' Goin' On" and "Great Balls of Fire." But his marriage to Myra shocked a staid post-war public, and Lewis' career crumbled.

The movie is centered on Myra and Jerry Lee's relationship (it should have been titled "Jerry and Myra") and abruptly ends with the birth of their son, Steve Allen, who drowned in a swimming pool when he was 3.

Somewhere out there, a printed message says at the end of the movie before the credits run, Jerry Lee Lewis is playing his heart out.

He is? Don't bet on it. His career had indeed peaked in the '50s, and he's struggling now to make a recording comeback. What happened over the last three decades is grist for a rip-roaring movie.

After Myra, Lewis married three more times. His fourth wife, Jaren, drowned in a swimming pool in 1982 while suing for divorce; his fifth, Shawn, 23 years his junior, died of an apparent drug overdose in 1983. Within a year he married Kerrie, 21, who filed for divorce in 1986, accusing him of physical abuse and infidelity. They're still together.

Lewis also bounced in and out of court, filed for bankruptcy, has had tax problems and drug and alcohol abuse problems. He also rammed his car into Presley's gate at Graceland.

None of this surfaces in McBride's superficial effort.

"Great Balls of Fire" is fun to watch, especially Quaid's gymnastics and clownish grimaces. But the movie lacks authenticity; it seems to be laughing at itself and at the era it purports to chronicle.

The Adam Fields Production, released by Orion Pictures, is rated PG-13.
