

HOLIDAY HAPPENINGS

A community Christmas

Many residents spend day in celebration, while some are busy traveling and even putting in hours at the office. Still others struggle to make ends meet.

■ Chance to get off streets, start a new life is couple's Christmas wish.

COSTA MESA — On Christmas Day, they had nothing but each other.

Standing in front of a liquor store on Harbor Boulevard, Jim and Vicki (they declined to give their last names) talked of their goals for 1996. They have only one — to get off the streets. The homeless couple, who have been together almost two years, spent the holiday trying to collect enough change to secure a dry place to spend the night.

"Our sleeping bags got soaked in the rain, but we were lucky on Christmas Eve — someone let us sleep in his car," said Jim, 31. "We've been sleeping near the freeway in the bushes. But the leaves are falling off the trees, and our cover's getting blown (off). We'll need to move on soon."

"We were lucky on Christmas Eve — someone let us sleep in his car ..."

— JIM

Every day, the two can be seen near the liquor store, asking for handouts or talking to each other. They are rarely apart. When they speak, Jim will often begin a sentence and Vicki will finish it.

"The holidays are pretty much the same as any other time," Jim said. "Except it's colder," Vicki finished. "A lot of the churches will give out food and other things around Christmas," Jim said. "But we can't store the food," Vicki added. "It's perishable, and it'll start to attract rats after a while."

The couple speak in the weary tones of people who have been down too long, who have lost hope of victory a thousand defeats ago. Both claim they don't use drugs or alcohol. Vicki said her destitute condition was a matter of simple economics. "I was going to school to be a nurse and was on general relief," she said. "Then the government cut my monthly check by $200, and I lost my apartment."

Jim's story is darker. "My brother and I were taken away from my father by the county when I was 5 — they said we were in an unfit home," he said. "I've been in and out of

■ John Wayne Airport enjoys calm before the travel-season storm.

NEWPORT BEACH — The maddening holiday crowd was all but a memory at John Wayne Airport on Christmas Day, a boon to travelers intent on spending the day with far-off loved ones.

Some 15,000 people were expected to pass through the airport on Monday, significantly fewer than the 25,000-plus who use the airport on peak days. Pat Ware, the airport's chief of public relations, said the biggest holiday crush usually comes the day after Christmas.

"That's when most people are returning home from their vacations," Ware said. "This year, our passenger count has been between 6% to 7% above average, so we're anticipating about 26,000 people on Dec. 26."

"Getting into the airport was so easy it was ridiculous," said Janelle Stanton of Orange. "There was no traffic, no lines at check-in. I loved it."

Many of the Christmas Day travelers were divorced or separate spouses there to send their children off to visit Mom or Dad.

Bill Moore, a Laguna Niguel resident, was waiting in the terminal with his six-year-old son, Matthew. Moore said his son makes the Christmas Day commute to Oakland every year.

"My ex-wife gets Matthew Christmas morning and I get him in the afternoon," Moore said. "I don't like it, but I also want him to have Christmas with his mother. At least he gets

■ Those not able to escape the daily grind manage to go about their work with high levels of holiday cheer. 'It's actually kind of pleasant,' a marine safety officer says.

For millions of Americans, Christmas Day was spent assembling toys or sleeping off that sugar-cookie hang-over, but for countless other working-class folks, it was just another blue Monday.

"I don't feel good about having to work today, but at least I'm making money," said Santa Ana resident Gabriel Bustos. Bustos spent Christmas on the corner of 20th and Orange streets, hawking bouquets of flowers.

"I've gotten a little bit of business today," Bustos said. "I make $4.25 an hour, plus a commission on anything I sell. I suppose it's better than just staying home."

Denise Armijo, a dispatcher for the Costa Mesa Fire Department, said being scheduled Dec. 25 simply meant opening presents a little earlier this year.

"I'm fine with it — you gotta work, you gotta work," Armijo said. "I had my thing with my family last night, and I'll do some more with them after work tonight."

For the men and women who's duty it is to protect and serve, working the Christmas shift meant working no fewer than 12 hours on a day when most people chose to sleep in about that long.

Newport Beach Police Sgt. Fred Heinecke was nonplussed about having to work the holiday. "I don't mind it too much," Heinecke said. "I've been with the department 25 years, and I knew when I signed up we'd be rotating through Christmas."

"My daughter came down from college, so we got up at 5 a.m. and opened presents, then I was off to work."

David Wenger, a Newport Beach marine safety officer, said the chance to spend a quiet Christmas Day looking down upon a chilly, near-empty beach was something he almost looked forward to.

"It's a totally different atmosphere here," Wenger said. "Except for a handful of surfers, there's almost no one in the water, and the beach is virtually deserted. It's actually kind of pleasant."

Amateur sleuth cracks case of stolen auto — his own

■ Costa Mesa resident searches for and finds his coveted VW bus after it was stolen.

By David Silva, Daily Pilot

COSTA MESA — Police here say a resident's resourcefulness helped them make a quick recovery of his prized vehicle, apparently stolen from his home early Thursday morning.

Jonathan Perry said he was sitting in his Fullerton Street home Thursday at approximately 1 a.m. when he heard someone drive off with his classic 1967 Volkswagen bus. He filed a theft report with the Costa Mesa Police Department, but, unsatisfied with the speed of the investigation, did some detective work on his own and found the vehicle in Santa Ana.

"Mr. Perry's very tenacious and did a good job," said Costa Mesa police Capt. David Brooks.

Perry, a commercial diver, said the alleged thieves left a trail of clues leading back to a "chop shop" — a place for dismantling stolen cars. The first clue, he said, came a few hours after the theft, when he noticed a mysterious Honda Civic parked across the street from his home.

"My sister had lived in the house it was in front of and she had just moved out, so I knew it didn't belong there," Perry, 36, said. "I went up and looked into it, and saw an unopened phone bill. Underneath the name on the bill was the name of an auto body shop in Santa Ana."

Perry called the police again, who came out, ran a check on the license plate of the car, and contacted its owner. Perry said the man they reached said he would come get it.

"The police told me they would wait for the man to arrive, but I was thinking by that time, my engine block would be gone," he said. "I told them I was going to the address on the phone bill myself, and they recommended against it."

But Perry went anyway. In what he called "a room in a really, really dangerous part of Santa Ana," he claimed to have discovered bits and pieces of several vehicles, including his own. He

SAM FEDELE

CASEY LUKSCH / DAILY PILOT

Costa Mesa resident and stand-up comedian Sam Fedele, 36, treats daughters Nikki, 2, and Sam, 6, to a tire-swing ride in TeWinkle Park recently.

'Mr. Mom' by day, comedian by night

HE IS

Sam Fedele is a 36-year-old Costa Mesa father of two who fled the fast track of the business world for a career making people laugh as a stand-up comedian. He started doing comedy part time four years ago, but this is the first year he has been a full-time comic.

"I hated my job and didn't want to get up and go to work - it was mundane," said Fedele, who has always wanted to be a comedian.

So the former class clown gave up his partnership in a successful blueprint company to be "Mr. Mom" by day and a comedian by night and hasn't looked back since.

"I'm a 10-times nicer person," he said. "It's been hard but I wouldn't give it up. It's the greatest thing in the world."

DOWN FUNNY LANE

The transition from being a businessman to a comic and Mr. Mom was difficult and different but worth it, Fedele said.

"It's hard," Fedele said. "I spent six years in the Marines and nothing is ever as hard as what I do in the day."

Fedele starts his day at 6:30 a.m. - no matter how late he was out the night before performing in a club - to get his two little girls Nikki, 2, and Sam, 6, up, fed and off to the babysitter.

After dropping his daughters off, Fedele returns

"It's been worth the sacrifice and then some. I look at the statistics and I was one of 90% of the people who hates their job. Now they come into a club and for 15 to 45 minutes I make them laugh and forget all their troubles ..."

- SAM FEDELE

home and jumps on the phone making a flurry of calls to agents and managers booking gigs. He then spends several hours practicing his act - writing and making faces in front of the bedroom mirror. Then housework duties must be done before his wife, Kimberly, comes home. And as night falls, it's off to a club to be Mr. Funny.

"The glamour part is at night, the day is drudgery," Fedele said, laughing.

IN THE ACT

Fedele spends several nights a week in clubs around Orange County and has performed at the Galaxy in Costa Mesa, the Irvine and Brea Improvs and the Coach House in San Juan Capistrano to name a few. Oftentimes he is on the road going to gigs in Las Vegas, Utah and Wyoming. His goal is to one day be a headliner or feature act.

What does he use for material? Life.

"Life is fodder," Fedele said. "I've gone from being a rough and tumble jock-marine, to a Brownie leader."

Not only does Fedele talk about how he, "was a marine and now is a big fat babysitter guy," but family life, relationships between men and women and topical issues.

MAKE THEM LAUGH

Going after his dream and liking the results, makes Fedele's early years of paying his dues doing comedy at "open mike night" at restaurants, coffee shops and pizza parlors seem like something to laugh about.

"It's been worth the sacrifice and then some," he said. "I look at the statistics and I was one of 90% of the people who hates their job."

"Now they come into a club and for 15 to 45 minutes I make them laugh and forget all their troubles."

SURF

From Surfline Wavetrak through today

Building surf will brought some west northwest pulses and 4 foot faces Friday with a slow drop through the weekend and a good buildup Christmas Day. The winter solstice and associated new moon brought some of the year's most extreme tides last week. The combination of extreme high tides plus occasional large WNW sets could cause sporadic coastal flooding, so caution is advised. For daily surf reports and forecasts, call (909) 976-SURF. The call costs $1.50 plus any possible toll.

POLICE TIPS

- Persons being forced into vehicles - especially if they are juveniles or females - may mean a possible kidnapping. Record the license plates and call police.
- The abandoned vehicle parked on your block may be stolen. Contact parking control with a license plate number.
- Anyone peering into parked cars may be looking for a car to steal or for valuables left displayed in the car.
- Walk close to the curb. Avoid doorways, bushes and alleys where attackers can hide.
- Have your car keys in your hand and check the back seat area before entering your car.
- If you think you are being followed, drive to a public place or to a police or sheriff's station.
- Require salespeople or repair people to show identification.
- The No. 1 killer of teen-agers, before they go to college, is alcohol-related highway accidents.
- Pay attention to your intuition and instinct. If something just "feels wrong," it usually is.
- Keep emergency phone numbers handy or memorize them.
- Discuss safety plans with family, friends, neighbors, children and baby-sitters.
- Use a purse with a shoulder strap. Carry it with the side that opens toward you. Hold your purse securely.
- Keep a "call police" sign under the front seat of your car.
- If someone signals that something is wrong with your car, drive to the nearest service station to check it. Do not stop and get out of your car.

Balboa Island founder Collins was smooth with rough edge

WS. Collins, the developer of Balboa Island, was a gaudy rascal. Highly personable, smooth as glass and possessing the nerves of those legendary Mississippi riverboat gamblers, he was the ultimate promoter.

P.T. Barnum would have loved him.

He surfaced in Newport Beach in 1902 after a somewhat murky background in Arizona oil wells and gold mines. The first thing he did was, together with a partner, buy from James McFadden all of Newport Beach from the Santa Ana River to Ninth Street in Balboa.

McFadden sold the land for $70.00 an acre and thought he had found a real sucker. He never knew what hit him. Collins cut the land up into 25 foot lots and sold them to the squatters who had been living

there for nothing.

Collins then dropped that partner and took Henry Huntington, nephew of Collis Huntington of Southern Pacific fame, as his new partner. Together they brought the Pacific Electric to Newport Beach. In the deal, Huntington acquired a mud flat known as Pacific Electric Island which, with a little artful dredging, became Lido Isle.

Balboa wanted the Pacific Electric line extended from Ninth Street to Main Street. They got it - for $10,000 in cash plus a 56-foot right-of-way.

About that time Collins started a bank, which promptly closed. Since there was no FDIC in those days, no mention is made of the money left by the depositors in the bank.

Collins then acquired a small dredger and turned his attention to a mud flat known as Snipe Island or Cruso Island.

He named the mud flat Balboa Island and dredged up enough sand to cover most of the mud flat except at high tide. He put up a ramshackle sea wall, sewers that emptied into the bay and began to sell lots for $350 for inside lots and $650 for waterfront lots. Of course, you bought your lot at low tide because likely it was covered with water at high tide.

He organized free trips to Balboa on the Pacific Electric together with a free lunch and started the first ferry from Balboa to Balboa Island. It wasn't much of a ferry, but he promised an eight-car ferry plus 150-room hotel on the island. He also promised a fancy bridge to the mainland but instead put up a rickety wooden structure that barely took two cars.

He built a castle on the small island to the west of the main island, named it Collins Island, and in the castle installed his fourth wife, Apolena. Just what happened to wives one, two and three is unknown.

His sales program flopped and soon lots were being sold for as little as $25 a lot.

And so W.S. Collins left town taking with him his wife, Apolena. It is said that he moved north into the Sierra Nevada mountains and began to sell mountain meadows that were not influenced by the change in tides.

Still, W.S. Collins left an imprint.

Who else in the history of this town has his name not only attached to an island, and a street but also has a street named after his fourth wife?

Holiday lights may have caused blackout, SCE says

COSTA MESA - Too many holiday lights may have been the cause behind a power outage that left about 1,600 hundred residents in the dark Christmas night, officials at Southern California Edison said.

The blackout occurred at about 6:30 p.m. near 20th Street and Orange Avenue. Power was expected to be restored "in three to four hours," said Jo Ellen Allen, an SCE spokeswoman.

"We think that the overload was caused by most people having their Christmas lights on," Allen said. "We were lucky, in that we had a crew near the problem area and they started working on it immediately."

Local bar a holiday haven for some

By David Silva, Daily Pilot

COSTA MESA - Some of the city's more colorful residents made no bones about why they chose to spend Christmas at the Stag bar on 19th Street - free grub and a chance to partake in a different kind of holiday spirit.

"I'm here because I'm broke, homeless and have no family," said Stag regular Norman Graham, 56, of Costa Mesa. "But I've got all my friends here."

The Stag, once voted by the Daily Pilot as the "second worst dive bar in Costa Mesa," has a holiday tradition of putting out free sandwiches and side dishes for its customers.

"We have to give back a little bit of what we take," said Chris Saylor, who runs the bar for owner Tom Tunstall. "We're open 365 days a year, and tonight, it's on us."

Hermosa Beach resident Dino Millikan said it's such hospitality that makes the long drive to the bar worthwhile.

KATSUYA RAINONE / DAILY PILOT

"The Stag's got good atmosphere, good people, and plenty of fine-looking women," Millikan said.

Several said the attraction of spending Christmas at the Stag was the place is so "low-key" - an understandable plus for those who said they didn't couldn't be identified. It's a place where everybody doesn't want to know your name.

But for customers like Jim Edwards, of Costa Mesa, the bar's main appeal is it's a good place to forget one's woes.

"I'm here because my girlfriend's in jail, I'm lonely, and I'm going to have a couple of drinks before I go home," Edwards said.

foster homes and group homes since then. I finally ran away when I was 13 - I guess I had a problem with taking orders. I've been homeless off and on ever since."

The couple said people often tell them to get jobs. How can they apply for a job, they ask, when they have no phone for employers to call back? How can they keep a job when they have no clothes or a place to shower?

"Sometimes somebody will say to us that we have it so easy, that all we have to do is sit around and beg," Jim said. "But then they say, 'I could never do that.' What does that tell them?"

Vicki said she sees other homeless women selling their bodies for money. While she said she doesn't judge them, she refuses to do that.

The merchants at the strip mall where Jim and Vicki hang out want them gone and have even circulated a petition demanding their removal. The owners of the liquor store have, thus far, refused to sign it.

"We just need a place," Jim said. "A job isn't the only answer. We just need to get off the streets for a while."

two Christmases"

Beau Bissonnette, 11, was also traveling alone on Christmas. The San Diego youngster planned to spend the remainder of the year with his father in Houston.

"I don't mind traveling on Christmas at all," Beau, who waited for his flight with his parents, Marja and Shawn Bissonnette. "I like spending the holiday with both families."

While a handful of travelers said they chose to fly on the holiday to take advantage of low air fares, most simply found it unavoidable. Portland, Ore., resident Sam Rauscher said she wanted to wait until the last possible moment before leaving her mother, Jackie Barbour, of Huntington Beach.

"We both have to work tomorrow," Rauscher said. "At least here I get to spend the day with her (Barbour). We haven't seen each other in six years."

also said he found a business card there - with his name on it.

He contacted the Santa Ana Police Department, who recovered his bus a short time later, Brooks said. While a spokesman for the Santa Ana police say they have a suspect in the alleged theft, it was unclear if anyone had been arrested. Brooks said reports were still being written up on the matter as of press time.

Meanwhile, Perry is happily in possession of his beloved bus. He said the incident provided him with one unforeseen benefit.

"What was a brown and tan bus is now red and tan," he said. "The thieves primed it with Christmas colors. I was actually considering painting it that color before, and now that I see it, it really looks OK."

COAST CLASSIC
TEXT

By Richard Dunn

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 26, 1995

11th annual daily pilot coast classic

CLASSIC QUOTABLES

THEY SAID IT ...

• Marian Catholic Coach Terry Mason, on his team opening against Bellflower on Tuesday: "My kids will probably be in shock ... I think we're the sacrificial lambs."

• Antioch Coach Bob Fisher, on last season's sensation, Marcus Murray, the brother of NBA star Lamond Murray who was an all-tournament choice and finished 1994-95 as the Bay Valley Athletic League Player of the Year, averaging 21 points and 11 rebounds a game: "Nobody knows where he is ... he kind of disappeared in June."

• Sweetwater Coach David Ybarra, who believes in giving his players an educational experience each preseason with a trip away from home: "Last year, we went to Nebraska for a tournament ... and a couple of our kids had never been on airplane before."

• Corona del Mar Coach Paul Orris, whose team opens with Rialto on Wednesday, after hearing the Knights had lost to A.B. Miller (Fontana), 112-104: "We couldn't score 104 points in two games against ourselves."

• Rialto Coach Marty Sipe, on the differences between players in Orange County and San Bernardino County: "With the kids I have up here, we have some talent, but not like down there. The talent we have is so greedy, and they're on such an ego trip. That's not real good basketball, in my opinion."

• Stockdale Coach Dean Andrea, on why his team likes the Coast Classic: "It's just absolutely a terrific experience, the kids love it. They love being down there, everything about it, starting with the officiating. That's the first thing they say ... Most of them aren't aware of what even exists down there. We're bringing lots of parents, the school principal and vice principal, because they've heard so much about it. It's a growing phenomenon up here."

• Hoover Coach Kirt Kohlmeier, on the hook shot: "If we get to about 10 hook shots a game, I'll be happy."

— Kohlmeier, on why he scheduled nation power Crenshaw the past two years: "Hey, I've got Muir and Pasadena in our league, so I can't play nice guys. I've got to play some people."

— Kohlmeier, on the Coast Classic: "Everyone's courteous, including the people who run the snack stands and coaches' room. They do a good job and I appreciate it."

• Dana Hills Coach Bryan McSweeney, on his team finishing 3-1 in last year's Coast Classic, losing only to Rialto in the semifinals: "Rialto's good, but we should've beaten them last year."

TIP-OFF!

■ 11th annual Daily Pilot Coast Classic unfolds today.

COSTA MESA — Officiating and hospitality aside, the bottom line for the success of the the Daily Pilot Coast Classic, which tips off today for the 11th consecutive December, is because of the competition.

It's also one of the most unique tournaments in Orange County, with teams this year coming from five miles north of the Mexican border to the Bay Area suburbs, from the farming community of Bakersfield to the freeways of Glendale, from the brink of Orange County's shoreline to the blue-collar belt of the Inland Empire.

Although host Estancia High has enjoyed success in its own holiday tournament (one championship, three third-place finishes and two consolation titles), Edison has been the king, winning three championships (1987, 1989 and 1994), as well as finishing second once, third twice and claiming a consolation title once.

"We've always played well in the tournament; we like Estancia High School," said Edison Coach Jon Borchert, whose squad defeated Rialto in last year's final, 48-47, on Darren Wynns' game-winning shot.

Among the many questions this year: How good is Marian Catholic?

Its coach, Terry Mason, said during the pre-tournament luncheon Dec. 3 that his squad has everyone back from last year and did well in the summer.

But 16 days later he sounded like a lost sheep in a pack of wolves, when he learned his team was opening pool play against Bellflower (8-2) and Estancia (11-1).

Marian Catholic is a small school (350 enrollment) in Imperial Beach, five miles from the border of Mexico, but the Crusaders have won three of four games in the preseason and feature a pair of 6-foot-6 players, as well as two 6-4 guys.

The toughest pool, pound for pound? Probably Pool B, which has Rialto, Corona del Mar and Dana Hills.

The most competitive pool? Probably Pool C, with Newport Harbor, Sweetwater (National City) and Stockdale (Bakersfield) of which none are expected to win it all, but should beat up on each other pretty good.

In Pool D, the early line is that Thursday's Bellflower-Estancia winner will win the title.

But you can be sure that Rialto and defending champion Edison will have something to say about that in the end. Edison should win Pool A (against Antioch and Hoover), and under Borchert never underestimate the always tough Chargers in games with championship implications.

BELLFLOWER BUCCANEERS

Tourney favorite

■ Bellflower is the team to beat, so they say.

If Bellflower High has any weakness, it's when the Buccaneers race ahead with a sizable lead, then get a little too self-assured and start turning over the ball.

Aside from that, "When we play well, to be frank, we're pretty good," Bellflower basketball coach John Downum said.

The Bucs (8-2) enter the 11th annual Daily Pilot Coast Classic for the first time, as well as favorites to win it all on Saturday. They began the season with a loss against a tough Centennial (Compton) team, then reeled off eight consecutive victories, before losing in the final of the Crescenta Valley Tournament against the host Falcons Dec. 15.

The Bucs return four starters from last year's team that ended 17-9, reached the CIF Southern Section Division III-AA quarterfinals, losing to eventual finalist Dos Pueblos, and finished second in the Suburban League behind perennial section power Artesia.

Leading the way for Bellflower is Kelvin Gibbs, a 6-foot-6 senior center who averages 20 points and 12 rebounds a game. Last year, Gibbs was a second-team All-CIF Division III choice, averaging 15 points, 10 boards and four blocked shots a game.

"He's also the best-passing big man I've seen in a long time," Downum said. "He'll bring the ball up the court if we need him to on the press."

Gibbs, being recruited by virtually every major college on the West Coast, has an arm span of 7-foot-3, according to Downum. "God has really blessed him," Downum said. "He's only 17, so imagine if he could get two more inches. He's got a build that can carry more muscle, and this is what I think (four-year colleges) see ... they see potential."

The Buccaneers also have point guard Ardis Curtis, a first-team All-Suburban League choice last year as a sophomore who averages five assists a contest this season.

Rashard Richardson, a senior who averages 12 ppg, is the two guard, while 6-3 senior Mike Lacy and 6-4 senior Tramel Chatman play forward positions.

ESTANCIA EAGLES

1-2, 1-2, 1-2 ...

■ Candlish and Plock, Candlish and Plock, etc...

There are few big men who can twist and turn in the paint and shoot jumpers like Chris Candlish, and there are few point guards who can consistently drain three-pointers while being difficult to defend like Dane Plock.

But Candlish and Plock, the leaders of Estancia High's basketball team, could have their work cut out in the Daily Pilot Coast Classic, when the host Eagles (11-1) play Bellflower at 7:30 p.m. in the final round of pool play on Thursday, with the winner expected to go all the way.

"I knew they were pretty good, because I saw them in the summer," Estancia Coach Tim Parsel said of the Bucs, who feature 6-foot-6 senior center Kelvin Gibbs, a second-team All-CIF Southern Section Division III selection last year, and junior point guard Ardis Curtis, a first-team All-Suburban League choice last season.

"You can schedule schools smaller than you in the preseason to ensure wins, but it doesn't make you any better," Parsel said. "You get better by playing teams as good or better than you."

Estancia is led by Candlish, a 6-6 senior center, and the Cal State Fullerton-bound Plock, currently leading Orange County in three-point shooting (52%), hitting 38 of 73 from beyond the arch. Plock and Candlish are averaging 18.2 and 17.5 points a game, respectively, while 6-4 sophomore sensation Sam Nelson (9.3 ppg) is capable of taking over at times.

"For Dane to score a lot, it's like pulling teeth, because he just naturally likes to pass," Parsel said. "He's got his three-point shot going now, and that really opens things up for Chris and the rest of the guys. Seniors Nick Novak, Frough Jahid and John Maraya, 6-5 junior Brandon Casillas and 6-3 sophomore Ryan Simpson are also Eagle regulars."

SWEETWATER RED DEVILS

Red Devils deep

■ Sweetwater has an abundance of experience.

What Sweetwater High of National City lacks in size, it makes up for in speed, quickness and in-your-face defense.

Red Devils Coach David Ybarra, however, is more concerned about his team's possible tournament-opening jitters, when Sweetwater (5-4) faces Newport Harbor in the first round of pool play Wednesday (2:30 p.m.) in the Daily Pilot Coast Classic.

"Our first game in tournaments has always been our worst game," said Ybarra, in his 10th season as coach, who frequently has his team travel each year to a different preseason tournament.

Sweetwater, playing in the Coast Classic for the first time, has an enrollment of 1,700 to 1,800 students, and competes in the CIF San Diego Section Division II. It has a tradition of winning, while Ybarra has been recognized five times as the Metro League Coach of the Year.

In 1990, when Sweetwater finished 29-2 and won a CIF championship, Ybarra was named San Diego County Coach of the Year by the Los Angeles Times (San Diego Edition).

The Red Devils, who return eight players from last year including five who started on occasion, had a junior varsity team finish 19-1 last season.

"We're not a very big team, but we have lots of good athletes. We need speed and quickness to keep the pressure on, because taller teams — they just pound the ball inside on us," Ybarra said. "We try to play a full-court game."

Sweetwater starts Robert Williams (point guard), Lee Nafarrette (two guard), Ralph Solorio (three), 6-foot-4 Jay Houston (four) and Ricky Nation, a 6-1 forward. Williams, Nafarrette and Nation average scoring in double figures, while Nation is the Red Devils' top rebounder.

"We've never been to Orange County or Los Angeles to play in a tournament," Ybarra said. "Last year, we went to Nebraska for a tournament, and two years before that, we went to Corbin, Kentucky, and we've been to Canada three or four times."

MARIAN CRUSADERS

Tourney enigma

■ Marian Catholic is team with conflicting clues.

Among the biggest mysteries of the Daily Pilot Coast Classic are Marian Catholic High's Crusaders of Imperial Beach, and not because of their, well, interesting uniforms.

Their uniforms were stolen last summer, so Coach Terry Mason's squad has been playing games in practice gear. But exactly how the Crusaders (3-1) will perform against two of the best teams in tournament — favored Bellflower and host Estancia are both in their pool — is unknown.

During the coaches' pre-tournament meeting, Mason reportedly said that his squad has everyone back from last year and did well in the summer.

But earlier this week, Mason sounded like a lost puppy in a ferocious jungle when he learned his team was opening the tournament against Bellflower (8-2) on Tuesday at 2:30 p.m.

"My kids will probably be in shock," Mason said. "I think we're the sacrificial lambs."

Marian Catholic, a San Diego

Section Division V school with an enrollment of 350, won only two games last year, losing 21.

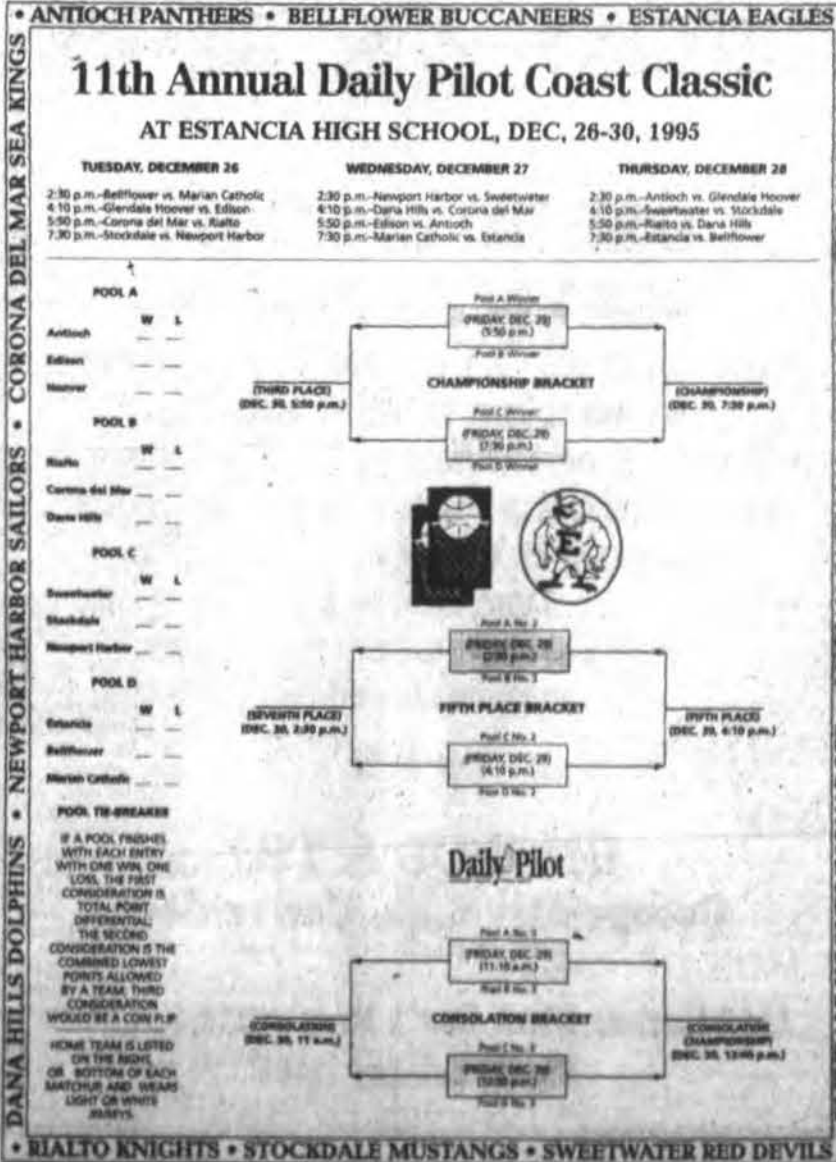

"We're a small school, so this will give our kids a chance to see some big-time basketball," he added. "It will give them a chance to see different styles of basketball and intensity. My kids are not at that level of intensity, but I think playing in this tournament will help."

The Crusaders, led by 6-foot-6 senior Gerardo Gonzalez (23.5 points per game) and point guard Marcus King (6.5 assists a game), who can score and pass, will typically keep the pace slow and work the ball inside.

"We've been stressing fundamentals, we don't like to get into helter-skelter basketball," Mason said. "We very seldom take any three-point shots."

Jean Kuebber, a 6-6 junior center and an exchange student from Germany, and twin brothers LaVon Lynch and LaJuan Lynch, who play the three and four positions, respectively, are the other Marian Catholic starters.

"What we like to do is run a semi-patient offense," Mason said.

RIALTO KNIGHTS

A two-speed unit

■ Fast and faster are the only two speeds they know.

There's no low gear for Rialto High's Knights, who enjoy a four-quarter track meet as much as anybody.

"A lot of teams try to spread it on us throughout the year, and in our league (San Andreas), teams try to slow it down. Only A.B. Miller and Pacific don't slow it down," Rialto Coach Marty Sipe said.

Rialto, which lost to Miller in the San Andreas opener, 112-104, has been giving up an average of 50 free throws a game, part of the reason why the Knights lost four of their first six games.

A welcomed sight for spectators last year in their inaugural season in the Daily Pilot Coast Classic, the Knights reached the title game and lost to Edison, 48-47, on a buzzer-beating shot, after defeating Corona del Mar, Huntington Beach and Dana Hills (in overtime).

Rialto, a relatively new school which will have its third graduating class in June, finished 19-9 last year and reached the CIF

Division I-AA semifinals.

A tough, scrappy team that will play a transition game the entire way and "press until we get the ball," Rialto has talent but lacks discipline, according to Please stop by to file your fictitious business statement at the Daily Pilot, 330 W. Bay St., Costa Mesa. If you cannot stop by, please call us at (714) 642-4321 and we will make arrangements for you to handle this procedure by mail.

How do you tackle the diamond suit in this hand? It depends not on the suit itself, but on what is required for the contract as a whole. Note how slowly South conducted the auction. Despite having a sound opening bid facing a partner who opened, South took pains to describe the holding accurately below game level, thereby enabling the partnership to reach their best spot while leaving open the option of playing in a partscore on a real misfit.
