Wild storms take toll across nation

By The Associated Press

A huge merciless storm took its high wind, rain and fierce tornadoes to the East on Saturday after unleashing dozens of twisters on the nation's midsection and blasting the West with snow and rain. Nationwide, 31 people were killed and hundreds injured.

The tornadoes — some 79 were reported within a triangle bounded by Texas, Ohio and Georgia — wrecked millions of dollars in property, left hundreds homeless, cut off power and snapped utility poles and trees. The storm derailed part of a train, blew apart a post office, and killed 35,000 chickens.

While the northern Plains shivered under a blast of high winds, hail and snow that closed schools and slickened roads, residents of San Jose got a brief break from the week of rain and floods that has forced 1,800 people from their homes.

Some anxious cabin residents in the Sierra Nevada range began telephoning for rescue after a week-long series of blizzards in the worst storm on record.

Lowland showers were forecast through the weekend, and at nightfall Saturday, snow was falling in the Sierras at 2 inches per hour.

A search in Tuolumne County, in east-central California, for 12 skiers, including three members of a University of California at Berkeley ski team, ended happily Saturday afternoon when the overdue group was spotted in Stanislaus National Forest.

Heavy snow almost blinded the few motorists allowed on highways across the Sierras. Only residents and drivers of emergency vehicles or heavy trucks were permitted on Interstate 80. Amtrak train runs between Oakland and Chicago have been canceled since Wednesday.

Snow was 19½ feet deep at 7,220-foot Donner Pass — 14 feet of it deposited since March 27 — with no end to the storm in sight.

Southern Pacific Railroad supervisor Norman Wells, stationed at a summit switching-signaling facility that keeps snow records, said no greater storm is on the Sierra books for any season, winter or spring.

The weather that rumbled into the mid-Atlantic states Saturday brought thunderstorms early in the day and at least one tornado in Georgia. Although forecasters said the storm system would not be as severe in the East as it was in the Plains, a severe thunderstorm watch was issued Saturday night for parts of New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware and Virginia.

Nolan Duke of the National Weather Service in Kansas City, Mo., said 79 twisters were reported Friday and Saturday. "It's the right time of year for this kind of thing," he said.

The twisters were spawned by the collision of cold air from the north and warm air from the south, all drawn into an enormous low pressure area.

APPLICANTS TANNING — At 8 a.m. Monday at Fountain Valley City Hall, the first 200 applicants will be accepted for one job opening for a $1,600-per-month fireman. By Saturday afternoon, 12 persons were in line led by Randy Bayless of Oceanside who arrived at 3 p.m. Friday.

Falkland tension growing

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Argentina is prepared to fight to defend the Falkland Islands it seized from Britain, President Gen. Leopoldo Galtieri declared early today.

"If the Argentine people is attacked by military forces — be they land, naval or air forces, the Argentine nation in arms will present battle with all the means at its disposal," he was quoted by the official Argentine news agency Telam as saying.

On Saturday, Defense Minister Amadeo Frugoli said "Argentina will not retreat from its position as regards the steps already taken." He added that the rights and property of about 1,800 British sheepherders on the South Atlantic archipelago "will be respected."

A British armada will sail Monday for the Argentine-occupied Falkland Islands, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher told members of Parliament on Saturday as they howled for her resignation. Prince Andrew will be aboard a carrier leading the 40-ship fleet.

"It is the government's objective to see that the islands are freed from occupation and returned to British administration at the earliest possible opportunity," Mrs. Thatcher told the House of Commons at its first Saturday session since the Suez Canal crisis in 1956.

"The Falkland Islands remain British territory. No aggression and no invasion can alter that simple fact."

Several thousand Argentine soldiers seized the South Atlantic archipelago Friday from 79 British marines.

At the United Nations in New York City, Britain won Security Council approval Saturday of a resolution calling for "cessation of hostilities" and immediate withdrawal of Argentine troops from the Falklands. The vote was 10-1, with four abstentions.

An Argentine news agency said the British nuclear submarine Superb was already off Mar del Plata, 1,000 miles north of the Falklands and that hospitals in Mar del Plata had red crosses painted on their roofs and were told to prepare for casualties.

There was no official comment on the report and Mrs. Thatcher and Defense Secretary John Nott stopped short of an outright commitment to attack. But Nott said that if diplomatic efforts failed — "and they probably will" — to dislodge the Argentines:

"We will then have no choice but to press forward with our plans."

Rewards boost memory

But don't expect to become an Einstein overnight

By JOEL C. DON
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Suppose you had a magic memory pill.

You could read through several exhaustive chapters of a textbook and forever have that information firmly implanted in your brain for recall at any time.

In theory, the pill would work. Scientists already have strong evidence that specific drugs and the body's own natural hormones may reinforce the learning process.

The chemicals act like ink. When you come across a significant event or piece of information, the mind stamps an indelible mark on its memory circuits or, more appropriately, clusters of brain cells.

But there's one major drawback to such a quick and easy pill, according to UC Irvine brain researchers who have pioneered the fields of memory and learning.

How does the mind know which information is important and what to disregard?

In the example of the student reading a textbook, the memory pill might help the individual absorb reams of data.

But if the student took a look at his surroundings, he would also saturate his mind with a jumble of information about his clothing, the color of the walls, people he briefly encounters, the scent of a cigarette, scratch marks in a tabletop, an untied shoelace and the exact time he picked up bits of information from his text.

Simply, the student would find it impossible to prevent his mind from becoming overloaded with details and facts — both trivial and important.

"I find it very unlikely that we will have a drug that you can take and become an Einstein overnight because memory is so specific," says UCI pharmacologist James Belluzzi.

Animal studies at the campus have shown that memory can be boosted by drugs, hormones and even electrical stimulation of specific brain centers.

More important, the scientists have focused research on reward or reinforcement activities that apparently trigger production of the body's own memory-enhancing chemicals.

They have found that memory can be influenced when an animal's production of noradrenaline, adrenaline, dopamine and endorphins is stimulated.

There are two general theories of memory. One is that a person remembers everything that happends to him, regardless of importance.

The second, more popular theory suggests only information that is significant is stored and the rest is discarded.

What's needed are positive reinforcement or reward systems to encourage the brain to retain the information, according to

Reagan defends economic plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan acknowledged on Saturday in a national radio address that his economic program hasn't worked, but he said that's because it "hasn't really started yet."

"The reduced budget spending and the 10 percent tax cut in July will be the real beginning of our prorgram," Reagan said.

On Oct. 1, 1981, when the first increment of the income tax cut took effect and many of his budget cuts began, Reagan announced: "On this day, our economic recovery program begins."

In the first of a series of five-minute Saturday noontime radio messages, Reagan said he may accept "some compromise" on the federal budget. But he said he won't bow to pressure to abandon the tax cuts already enacted because that would be "like trying to pull a game out in the fourth quarter by punting on the third down."

During an Oval Office question-and-answer session with reporters, the president said he was turning to radio to "bring the facts to the people" without the confusion generated by anonymous sources and administration critics.

White House aides have acknowledged that the radio talks are part of an effort to reach the American public "unfiltered" by the news media. Reagan has been particularly harsh in his criticism of recent network television coverage of the recession and his economic program.

House Democratic leader James Wright of Texas, in a response he recorded before Reagan delivered his radio address, called on the president to "recognize the harsh realities of suffering among those nearly 10 million Americans who have been thrown out of work" and to consider changing the tax cut enacted a year ago.

Reagan's address was largely a repetition of his oft-stated view that the solution to the current recession lies in reducing taxes and government spending, which he says will bring down interest rates and inflation.

JUST JOUSTING — The Middle Ages spring eternal whenever the Orange County chapter of the Society for Creative Anachronism gathers as it did at Mile Square Park in Fountain Valley. Members of the Kingdom of Gyldenholt re-created the armor, dress, tournaments and dances of the 8th through 15th centuries. Guitarist Lisa Pichel sang — perhaps a protest song from way back then — as contestants battled throughout the afternoon. The winning fighter gets to take the prized helmet home or to a regional competition among the society's 15,000 members nationwide.

Mexican volcano spews lava, ash

PICHUCALCO, Mexico (AP) — El Chinchonal volcano hurled hot rocks, molten lava and debris for miles Saturday night in the biggest eruption since the squat peak in southeastern Mexico turned active last week.

Twelve people were injured.

Earth tremors and loud underground rumblings preceded the eruption at 8:10 p.m. — 6:10 p.m. PST — which was visible eight miles away in villages near Pichucalco.

At Villahermosa, the capital of Tabasco state, 36 miles to the north of the volcano, the smoke and volcanic dust was so dense it covered the night sky and the moon.

Commander Rosendo Martell, the Red Cross area chief, said at his headquarters in Villahermosa that the rain of hot volcanic ash and debris — mostly pebbles and cobbles — was falling over an area where 70,000 people lived. He said the debris was falling in all directions around the peak.

The Red Cross has set up a radio network throughout the state and in neighboring Chiapas state for the emergency.

El Chinchonal turned active last Monday and there have been several big eruptions since.

Youth 'stable' after crash

A 17-year old youth was listed in stable condition Saturday night at Tustin Community Hospital with injuries sustained in an auto accident in Irvine late Friday.

Michael Mendlen, whose home address was not listed by police, spun off Culver Drive shortly before 11 p.m. and struck a utility pole, snapping it in two, according to police.

Two other passengers in the car were uninjured.

According to police, Mendlen's car spun out of control while traveling south near Deerfield after an unidentified white auto cut it off. The white auto did not stop at the scene, police were told.

According to reports Mendlen sustained head injuries in the accident.

Extended forecast

Tuesday-Thursday: Partly cloudy. Isolated showers in the northern mountains Wednesday. Highs: coastal sections 65 to 75, mountain resorts in the 40s. Lows: coastal areas 45 to 55, mountain areas in the 20s.

Coastal

Mostly light variable winds through tonight except southwest to west 10 to 20 knots afternoon. Westerly swell 2 to 3 feet except northwest 5 to 8 feet outer coastal waters. Partly cloudy skies.

U.S. summary

A strong weather system that spread killer tornadoes over America's midsection moved east Saturday to the Atlantic coast, scattering rain and thunderstorms from the Florida panhandle to New York.

Strong thunderstorms and at least one tornado moved through Georgia, while snow and winter-like temperatures spread through the Great Lakes region. Winds of 60 to 70 mph blasted Minnesota and Iowa, with wind chill factors of minus 40 degrees.

It was sunny in the Plains, but a cold front brought rain to the Pacific Northwest.

Rain turned to snow in the Cascades and the northern Sierra Nevada range, where a winter storm warning was posted. Southern California warmed to the 70s, while readings in the 80s were common in Florida.

Temperatures around the nation at midday Saturday ranged from 9 in International Falls, Minn., to 86 in Melbourne, Fla.

Today's forecast called for rain across the Northwest, turning to snow in the Cascades, northern Rockies and parts of the Great Basin. Snow was forecast in the lower Great Lakes region, with rain in New England. The southern half of the nation and most of the Plains was expected to enjoy sunshine.

Highs were forecast in the 20s from Montana to western New York; 40s and 50s from New England through the Ohio Valley, central Plains and Northwest, and 70s and 80s in the South.

California

Southern California can expect partly cloudy skies through Monday.

Orange County will have highs today and Monday in the low to mid 60s, with lows in the 40s.

Inland valleys can expect highs around 85, lows around 50.

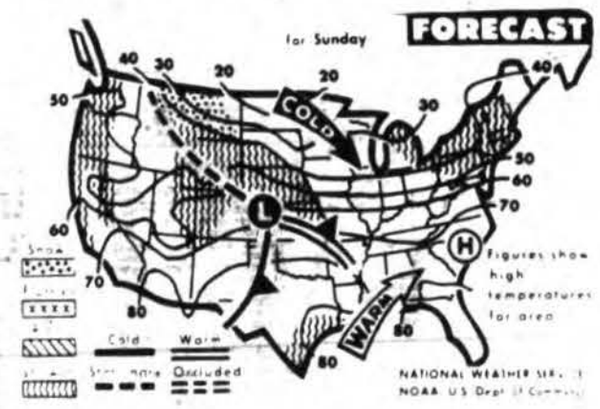

South winds 20-30 mph forecast for mountain areas. Highs 45 to 55, lows 25 to 35.

Winds 20-30 mph expected in all desert areas. Northern desert highs 62 to 72, lows 45 to 52. Southern desert highs 75 to 83, lows in 50s.

Winter storm warning for Sierra north of Yosemite into tonight for heavy snow and strong winds. Travelers advisory in northern mountains and northeast California for snow and winds. Showers throughout Northern California. Snow level near 2,000 feet in far northwest to 5,000 feet in southern Sierra.

OCC candidate nixed post

Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Coast Community College District officials have disclosed that Coastline College president Bernard J. Luskin was unexpectedly appointed to the presidency of Orange Coast College only after the board of trustees' first choice withdrew her application.

District officials said Luskin, who had not applied for the Orange Coast position, was appointed after Judith Eaton, president of Clark County Community College in Las Vegas, rejected the post.

Ms. Eaton said she withdrew because she would have had to accept a "significant" loss in salary and fringe benefits if she had accepted the presidency of Orange Coast.

The Costa Mesa school is considered the nation's largest single-campus community college, with about 33,000 students currently enrolled.

"The district is an extremely strong one, and so is the college," Ms. Eaton said.

But she said the loss in personal compensation, particularly fringe benefits, was the critical factor in her withdrawal.

The Orange Coast president's pay is now budgeted at $58,000 per year. Ms. Eaton said she now earns $56,120, but has a more lucrative fringe benefit package than the Coast district was offering.

She also mentioned the higher cost of living in California.

Contrary to a news release from the district, Ms. Eaton said the college district's financial problems were not a factor in her decision.

Ms. Eaton said she was the first woman president appointed to a college in Nevada and is still the only woman president in the University of Nevada system.

She said the fine reputation of Orange Coast College and the Coast district caused her to apply for the Orange Coast presidency.

Meanwhile, Bernard Luskin, the man drafted for that job when Ms. Eaton withdrew, admitted he was surprised. On July 1, he will take over the helm of Orange Coast from the college's long-time President Robert Moore, who is retiring.

BETTER MEMORY PROBED. . .

UCI's Dr. Larry Stein.

Memory retention is improved after animals have been injected with noradrenaline, adrenaline and dopamine, known as catecholamines, or endorphins, which have become popularly known as the natural opiates of the mind.

"We're being bombarded by the environment all the time," says Stein. "Every once in a while the environment gives a strong, highly favorable signal.

And that signal, scientists suggest, may cause the body to spurt out a gentle reward in the form of catecholaminesmines or endorphins, thus encouraging the mind to retain a batch of information.

Since the body's chemicals provide a reward incentive for learning, some have referred to the experience as a natural "high."

In fact, Stein notes, drugs such as cocaine, morphine, heroin and amphetamines are similar to the body's own natural chemicals.

However, the body regulates its own chemicals to prevent too much or too little stimulation in relation to a specific event.

Stein emphasizes that a person cannot mimic the body's own memory-enhancing biochemistry through the use of illicit drugs. More often, the effect of those drugs radically changes body behavior and mental processes and will not produce the subtle inducements to remember facts and other information.

"My guess is there are internal physiological constraints that prevent us from overdosing with hormones," says UCI Psychobiologist James McGaugh, who is a national leader in memory and learning research.

"We're built in such a way so that we'll likely remember important things. Only when important things happen do we release hormones."

"The body does it in a very discrete way in a particular place in a specific time and in a specific way," explained Belluzzi. "We see memory as a very temporal process."

Daily Pilot Staff Photos

STRONG SIGNALS—UCI pharmacologist James Belluzi, left, and Dr. Larry Stein, an expert in memory research, say the brain must be "rewarded" to retain important information.

Why not discover the right prescription of one of the body's natural brain hormones such as noradrenaline or an endorphin and concoct a daily memory supplement pill akin to vitamins?

People who suffer from Parkinson's disease have been given dopamine to help treat the brain disorder that causes severe tremors and rigid muscles.

"Replacing this chemical in the brain provided some symptomatic relief," Belluzzi says of treatment of the disease.

"But I'm not optimistic that we'll be able to do it with memory because I know the chemical changes must be linked with the changes that happen in time.

"The memory system just doesn't work that way. Once again there is no temporal control. Lots of unimportant facts would come in."

Though the idea for a memory pill to boost the mental prowess of the common person is unlikely, scientists may be able to offer brain-damaged or mentally handicapped individuals some help.

"There will be some cases where there is a memory disorder due to a chemical imbalance," says McGaugh.

"So the aim of the research would not be to have a memory pill so anyone would have a better memory. The application would be for someone with a disordered memory."

In an article on memory research for school publication, McGaugh argued that teachers should not hope for a magic pill for slow learners. There may be a case for drug therapy for the disordered brain, however.

But he wrote teachers would do better if they paid careful attention to memory research that shows the proper environment will trigger a student's body chemistry to encourage memory and learning.

"My argument for education is to figure out the optimal match between the environment and the child," he says.

McGaugh stresses that teachers should find ways to get children excited about school subjects.

Once that happens, the children will provide their own reward or reinforcement for memory and the body chemicals that "print" the important information in the mind.

"If information doesn't command your attention the likelihood of your remembering it is lower," he says.

Flowers, berries top produce

One out of every 10 agricultural dollars generated in Orange County comes from the namesake fruit.

But oranges aren't No. 1 in Orange County. They are far outdistanced by nursery stock and strawberries.

Figures released by county Agricultural Commissioner William Fitchen show that ornamental nursery plants alone accounted for $85.7 million of the $244.4 million in 1981 agricultural production.

Strawberries came in second at $55.7 million, and oranges, mainly Valencias, third at $24.3 million.

The total value of the agricultural products in 1981 was about 1 percent less than in 1980, the best year on record; 1981 now ranks second.

The value of nursery stock and cut flowers, for the 13th consecutive year, maintained its rating atop Fitchen's "million dollar enterprise list," despite the fact the value of 1981 production was 11 percent below 1980.

Agricultural officials said the nursery industry suffered from the downturn in the nation's economy; particularly the slump in the construction industry for landscaping plants.

Income from strawberries and avocados was up. That was also true for truck crops including asparagus, green beans, cabbage, cauliflower, celery, corn, cucumbers, lettuce, mushrooms, peppers, squash and tomatoes.

Income from field crops like dry beans, barley and hay increased. And livestock production value was up.

On the down side was apiculture. While the number of producing bee colonies increased, income dipped 64 percent from 1980. The honey yield was down 61 percent, beeswax, 73 percent.

About 115 acres of tree crop land were lost in 1981. "Valencia oranges again were the principal crop removed," Fitchen said. Of the 115 acres of groves lost 77 were subdivided while business, industry, schools and churches claimed 38 acres.

Watch priorities in paradise

Personal discoveries can fulfill some high suburban expectations

By SANDIE JOY
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Despite the "Reverend" in front of his name, Alan Waterson isn't very religious.

He says so himself.

Instead, he explained, "I'm a deeply spiritual man and probably tender-hearted, which sometimes gets me into trouble."

The 46-year-old co-pastor of Irvine's University United Methodist Church, at University and Culver drives, sees it as more than a Sunday morning place of worship.

It's a community center-type complex where area residents can find activities ranging from marriage and family counseling to pre-school care for their children and meetings of various recovery programs.

"This church really has committed itself to a positive ministry in the community," Waterson explained.

"Seven nights a week we have a real ministry going on here to recovering alcoholics through Alcoholics Anonymous and related programs including Parents Anonymous and Narcotics Anonymous."

All of those groups, while not affiliated with the church, have found a home there for their meetings. Waterson estimates the gatherings "reach an average of 800 people a week."

Use of the church for various community functions is encouraged by both Waterson and the Rev. Ron Allison, the senior pastor.

"My colleague and I have a perfect marriage," Waterson said. "Ron dreams dreams, and I carry them out, and we have a staff of people chosen all from the community."

Becoming a minister wasn't Waterson's early life goal.

"In my teen years," he said, "I was kind of a hell-raiser."

His friends and parents were amazed when he decided to become a minister.

"I don't get back to my home church in Cleveland, Ohio, very often," Waterson said, "but . . . when I go home to speak, I pack them in. They're still amazed."

A trained, practicing drug and alcoholism counselor, Waterson said he's "deeply concerned about our children's use and abuse of drugs. I'm really concerned about the kind of attitudes that many of us as parents have about it.

"I think the intensity of the drug use has a lot to do with the meaninglessness people feel in their lives and the tremendous emphasis on sex.

"I've learned not to be depressed by those things," he said, "but to just season life with the salt of my own life, and not try to put my bag on anybody but to just help people discover meaning within themselves."

Of Irvine, where he has lived with his family for more than 10 years, Waterson said, "I suspect that this community is representative of others in California.

"But one thing separates us from most other communities. We certainly are made up mainly of upper middle and upper class people in the sociological strata."

People move to Irvine with high expectations, he said, "perhaps looking for that nirvana, that peaceful place."

Along with that, the pastor explained, "has gone a denial of reality, . . . the classic psychological way people avoid facing pain."

He added, "Moving to Irvine did not alleviate the pain or the loneliness and, as a result, our problems resurface . . . The difference is that this is a very bright community.

"There's a lot required of us as a community, as citizens and as educators in the community."

Waterson said he hopes the community and its Alcoholism Task Force "can be catalysts or models for change" for other communities.

Waterson's early ministry was directed toward youth and education, and that continues to be among his focuses.

He explained, "As my heart has found it's expression, it's been in caring for people.

"I really get a chance to work out my own salvation through the pulpit as I get an opportunity to share with my people the deep concern of my heart, which probably is why I'm a minister."

Following four years in Genoa, Ohio, the then young minister joined the Navy where he was encouraged to do counseling as a chaplain.

He did a Vietnam tour then returned to the United States and was stationed at El Toro Marine Base.

"And," he said, "this has been home since. It's the longest time we've ever lived anywhere."

At El Toro, he became involved in drug and alcohol counseling and opened a successful drop-in center for which he earned the Navy Achievement Medal.

Later, Waterson was assigned to develop a counseling center for which he earned the Navy Commendation Medal.

Counseling has been his thrust since then, Waterson said, noting that he does "a tremendous amount of counseling." And when he left the Navy, he went into private practice.

"Then I discovered plenty of needs in my own community," he said, "so I do all my counseling out of the church now."

Along the way, Waterson earned a master's degree in marriage, family and child counseling at Chapman College and studied drug and alcoholism counseling at UCLA and at the School of Alcoholism Professionals in St. Louis, Mo.

A thoroughly satisfied, happy man, Waterson said he'd like others to have the message he gives himself. "That's the discovery of meaning through discovery of love, with a capital L, and obviously it refers to for me to my God with a Capital G, one's higher power."

He added, "It's that process of discovering that brings meaning and life satisfaction."

Waterson said he sees that satisfaction in Irvine and he enjoys the bumper sticker that reads, "Irvine . . . another day in paradise."

Of his home community, the pastor said, "It is beautiful, but that still doesn't deny realities that real beauty is in people and we create that beauty in the environment. So we need to get our priorities redirected."

Appeal wins million

FRESNO (AP) — A Los Angeles man disabled when his truck collided with a cow on Interstate 5 was awarded an extra $1 million when he appealed his case against the state.

A Stanislaus County jury awarded Thomas D. Curtis $2,025,000 for paralyzing injuries suffered in the 1973 crash, but Judge Jeremy C. Cook reduced the amount to $331,790.

The 5th District Court of Appeal in Fresno restored $1 million to the award after concluding that state crews should have maintained a fence beside the freeway better.

Water discussions everywhere

By JEFF ADLER
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

The merits of building the Peripheral Canal will be debated in Newport Beach April 15 when proponents and opponents of the proposed project square-off in a forum entitled, "The Peripheral Canal — Salvation or Boondoggle."

Sponsored by the League of Women Voters of Orange Coast, the Junior League of Newport Harbor and the Newport and Irvine branches of the American Association of University Women, the 7 p.m. debate at Newport's Marriott Hotel will be free and open to the public.

Speaking in favor of the canal will be Gerald Meral, California Department of Water Resources deputy director, and David Kennedy, assistant general manager of the Metropolitan Water District.

Meral is in charge of water resource planning for the state as well as the state water project, of which the proposed canal would be part.

Kennedy is responsible for operations, planning and contracts administration for the MWD.

Speaking against the canal will be Tim Brick, who represents Californians for Fair Water Policy, and Ed Giermann, corporate counsel for J.G. Boswell Co.

Brick is a consumer advocate who serves on the Pasadena Utilities Commission and Giermann represents J.G. Boswell, a large cotton-growing concern with extensive land-holdings in the San Joaquin Valley.

FOR THOSE WHO can't make the evening debate, the Orange County Federation of Republican Women will be hosting a Peripheral Canal forum at 10 a.m. Thursday at Saddleback Inn, 1660 First St., Santa Ana.

This debate will feature Giermann speaking against the project and Tom Lovil, a public information officer with the Metropolitan Water District favoring the canal.

The meeting is open to all Orange County women, but reservations are necessary. They can be obtained by telephoning Mrs. Rosemary Johnson at 540-6339 or Mrs. William Rustin at 993-6786.

ORANGE COUNTY Registrar of Voters Al Olson is predicting a 25 percent voter turnout April 13 when voters in the 35th state Senate district will choose a new state solon.

The special election is being held to fill the unexpired term of former state Sen. John Briggs, R-Fullerton, who resigned last year.

Candidates are Republicans William Dougherty, an attorney; John Seymour, Anaheim mayor, and John Keller, a businessman-minister; and Democrat Beatrice Foster, a write-in candidate; Libertarian Les Antman, a certified public accountant; and Independent Mark Foucher, an attorney.

The district includes parts of Buena Park and Tustin and all of Fullerton, La Habra, Orange, Placentia, Villa Park and Yorba Linda.

NO TAX MONEY should be spent on state Sen. John Schmitz's legal defense in a libel suit, say members of the Women's Network Alert.

They say taxpayers who do not want their tax dollars spent to defend Schmitz in the $10 million libel action brought by feminist attorney Gloria Allred should enclose a letter of protest with their 1982 state tax returns.

THE ORANGE COUNTY Chapter of the California Republican Hispanic Council presented its new officers during its annual installation dinner Saturday night.

Honored guests included California GOP Chairman Tirso del Junco, Victor Blanco and Richard Hernandez, past and current state chairman of the council.

Money raised at the dinner will be put toward a county campaign headquarters "to let the Hispanics know the Republicans are here and what we have to offer'" said Cruz Sandoval, chapter chairman.

ARCHITECTS IN politics will be the subject of discussion Thursday evening when the American Institute of Architects gets together in Newport Beach.

Panelists will be Orange County Supervisor Tom Riley; Raymond Watson, president of the Newport Development Co.; Claude Klug, executive director of the Redevelopment Agency in La Mirada; and Pamela Williams, director of government relations for the California Council of the American Institute of Architects.

They will focus on an architect's responsibility to become involved in the political process and what benefits might be gained.

Reservations for the 6:30 p.m. event can be made through the institute's office or by telephoning 557-7796.

Exchange visitors find home Swede home

By JERRY HERTENSTEIN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Suzanne Bellenholt and Sverker Wendelov have learned an enlightened lesson about home far from their native Sweden.

As the first Swedish students to spend a year studying at Laguna Beach High School, they are participating in a new program sponsored by The Sweden-California International Academy.

And while expressing delight in the experience, they admit they now have deeper convictions about their homeland.

"I appreciate now the good things about Sweden," said Suzanne, an attractive, talkative, brown-eyed blonde.

One of her most difficult adjustments when arriving in Laguna Beach Sept. 4 was having to "prove myself."

"I had no background here. In Stockholm I could make a fool of myself and my friends accept it. Here if I act a fool, people might think I am one."

Each also has gained greater respect for parents and friends back home. Sverker is from Gothenburg on Sweden's west coast.

But he says living along the Pacific Ocean is different than the Kattegat Strait.

"I like the weather much better here," said Wendelov although it was raining at the time.

"I spent Christmas on the beach," said Suzanne, a big smile on her face.

Each admitted adjustments to the laid-back lifestyle of Laguna and tolerance toward the different kinds of people.

Gigi Lewerth, executive manager of the academy, recalled when she first took the two to lunch in Laguna.

"We saw someone wearing a wire pyramid on their head and were surprised how well accepted that was," said Suzanne. "Here you can ask someone for the time and get into a whole conversation.

"In Sweden you are face-to-face with someone on a train or bus for half an hour before somebody talks. If you do talk to a stranger, they think you are drunk or a drug addict.

"The people here are nicer, warmer," she said, attributing the indifference in her country to the weather. "The winters in Sweden are so cold and it's snowing all the time."

Their U.S. visit has helped both Swedes learn a new school system and improve their use of the English language.

The Swedish pair are partial to hamburgers, backyard lemon trees and avocados. "I loved those Hostess apple pies," added Suzanne.

And Sverker has shown he is the typical teen-ager. He recently won top prize in a video game contest at a Laguna arcade.

OC arts maturing

In a closing statement at the Business Committee for the Arts colloquium at Fluor Corp., committee vice chairman Philip J. Reilly defended Orange County against charges of being "a cultural wasteland."

"By the appropriate yardstick we should be proud of where we are," he said. "Anyone who levels charges against the cultural state of affairs in this county is confusing growth with maturity.

"We haven't had time to mature culturally — we've been too busy growing. But now, I think things are beginning to change."

Reilly, president of the Mission Viejo Company, closed a half-day colloquium, "Arts Administrators and Corporate Support," hosted by Fluor.

Some 90 community business and arts leaders attended the meeting last Wednesday which was held to help clarify the ways in which museums, theaters and performing centers can get funding from corporations and government grants.

"People look at Orange County with nearly 2 million people and wonder why it doesn't have the kinds of cultural centers that San Francisco or Denver has," Reilly said. "But Orange County hasn't really been a place for much more than 20 years.

"When the county grew, it grew all at once. It was an overnight growth. Every little hamlet exploded at once and no center grew out of the explosion.

"There was no old culture or old money to help the arts. We have 2 million people here now and most of them have been here about 20 minutes."

Reilly pointed to the proposed Orange County Performing Arts Center, South Coast Repertory, Irvine Meadows and the Business Committee for the Arts itself as proof that "we are beginning to see the change."

"Individual municipalities are putting their competitions aside in order to grow as a county," he said.

"We're starting to add muscle to that frame which grew so fast. When Orange County starts getting a little gray around the temples, the critics will have to stand back."

The national Business Committee for the Arts was formed in 1967 with the support of David Rockefeller, who believed that business and the arts could help each other.

Since then, dozens of the nation's largest corporations have become involved in the committee, including Chase Manhattan Bank, Philip Morris, Ford, RCA and PepsiCa.

The Orange County Business Committee for the Arts was founded in 1981 and is currently supported by such companies as Fluor, the Mission Viejo Company, the Irvine Company, Occidental Research, Pacific Mutual Insurance, Smith International, Disneyland and Bentley Laboratories.

Scientific preparation must be offered early

Across the country, college professors have been grappling with a serious academic problem: Students entering the halls of higher education are woefully lacking in adequate science and math preparation.

The emphasis during the '60s and '70s on high grades rather than a firm science-math foundation is to blame in part. Television has played a role in pulling young minds away from needed reading skills to a flickering tube of junk knowledge.

And teachers must also bear the weight of not pushing students to their limits, settling for mediocrity in classrooms amid bulging enrollments and declining academic course requirements.

The baby-boom problems are over. There should be fewer and fewer excuses for turning out poorly educated high school students.

Nevertheless, many teenagers flock to universities with illusions about their high grade-point averages only to discover they are not prepared for the rigors of college coursework.

Some years ago, UC Irvine professor Mare Taagepera grew frustrated by the inadequate training of her first-year chemistry students.

She was spurred to go out into the community to discover the causes. At some high schools she found teachers themselves weren't prepared to handle instruction for pre-college students. At others, students were taught at a level far below what would be needed to enroll in a basic college science course.

Dr. Taagepera since has held special clinics for high school teachers and students, is offering a UCI Extension course to boost teacher familiarity with topics in science and will participate, along with the Orange County Industry Education Council, in a special summer program to help junior and senior high school teachers better their science teaching skills.

She emphasizes it will take financial commitment from the business and industrial community to make these programs possible.

If this nation is to compete in high technology, students must be sufficiently prepared before they enter college. Programs like those initiated by Dr. Taagepera should serve as a model for institutions throughout the country.

Her efforts and those of others might turn the tide of our educational dilemma.

Tax windfall sneaky

A black lung benefits bill for coal miners, passed by the U.S. Senate and House Dec. 16 with a minimum of debate, attracted little public attention.

Overlooked at first was an amendment offered by Senate Finance Committee Chairman Robert Dole, R-Kan., proposing that the Internal Revenue Service be directed to set an automatic daily deduction for congressional living expenses.

Dole said Congress should not request a firm amount for the deduction so it would not be interpreted as "looking like a tax credit or a pay raise." He suggested, however, that $75 a day would be "appropriate."

That's exactly what the IRS established in January — $75 for every day Congress is in session, plus up to four days of each congressional recess, regardless of where the member might be — even on vacation.

This adds up to a $19,000 yearly deduction for each senator and representative, retroactive for the entire 1981 tax year, and replaces the former flat $3,000 annual expense deduction.

The argument of supporters, of course, is that the high cost of living in Washington imposes a severe burden on members of Congress, especially those who also maintain homes in their own districts.

But the fact is most members live year-round in Washington, along with their families, so the $75-a-day allowance could very well cover a large part of their routine living expenses.

Indeed, a member who owns a home in Washington and chooses to itemize living expenses can additionally deduct $50 a day plus mortgage interest and property taxes for an even bigger break.

The Joint Taxation Committee of Congress has estimated that the new $19,000 expense deduction would provide a typical member with the equivalent of a $10,500 annual pay raise.

The key word, of course, is equivalent. Congress has voted itself only two direct pay raises since 1969, the last, in 1979, raising the annual pay for members to $60,662.

However, in addition to the "expense" deduction, members last year lifted the limit on fees they may accept for writing and speaking engagements and agreed that their annual cost-of-living pay increases would be automatic, without a vote.

To their credit, not all members voted in favor of the new living expense deduction, and some 30 members already have introduced bills to repeal it. A handful have announced publicly that they will not take the deduction. Last week, on the eve of closing down for the 11-day Easter recess, senators managed to sidestep a vote on one of the repeal measures.

The timing of the tax windfall, and the manner in which it was handled, were particularly inappropriate. It came at a time when many Americans were feeling the pinch of both budget cuts and a sharp recession, and was muscled through in a singularly underhanded manner.

It could well be that Washington living costs are hurting many members of Congress. If that is the case, let them put their cards on the table and seek a pay raise. If enough members feel it is justified, there's no reason not to handle it openly.

L.M. Boyd / Touch of red

Do you have some decorative touch of red in every room in your house? If not, why not? More than one interior designer claims that's a good notion. They warn against too much red, however. The color is associated with fire and blood, neither of which you'd want all over the place. It's said people who prefer red more than other colors tend to be intense, impulsive and vigorous.

Q. You said no doctor or nurse has ever been known to catch leprosy from a patient. Maybe not, but if it's not contagious, what about those U.S. soldiers who caught it in the South Pacific during World War II?

A. Special cases, those. They got it from needles while being tattooed by an artist who had it. It's contagious, all right. But not easily transmittable.

Q. What is the average chest measurement among 17-year-old girls?

A. 30.1 inches.

Q. Did you say John Paul Jones died in disgrace, penniless and despised?

A. Am now certain I got that one all wrong. Scholars who've looked deeply into the hero's record say he wasn't wealthy at the time of his death in France, but neither was he a pauper. And he was respected by many who had some understanding of his place in history.

Ideology loses meaning

By CHARLES G. BELL

Dr. Charles G. Bell is a professor of political science at Cal State Fullerton.

It is commonplace to observe that California voters are becoming more conservative. And, it is equally common to observe that political parties are becoming less important. Both statements are true but what does it mean?

Those who might think that party has been replaced by ideology are wrong. And whether one is a "liberal" or a "conservative" — ideology still means relatively little in contemporary politics. And, in fact, sometimes the traditional meaning of "liberal" and "conservative" have lost much of their meaning.

SOME "LIBERAL" Democrats (San Fernando Valley Jews) have been fighting against school integration. And some "conservative" Republicans have been recently arguing that huge federal deficits are not inflationary. Changing times and situations tend to blur and alter what we once thought we believed.

But, if ideology means anything it is supposed to be a guide to the issues. How does one stand on taxes? Which tax is better — the income, property or sales tax? How does one feel about cutting back on welfare, schools or environmental protection? How much confidence does one have in government — the president, state Legislature or the courts?

Ideologues are supposed to have a consistent stand on these and myriad other political questions of the day.

But very few of us are ideologues. The overwhelming majority of us take the issues one at a time. Ask liberals how they stand on the death penalty (the sanctity of human life) and then ask how they feel about abortion? Ask conservatives how they feel about big government (oppressive) and then ask how they feel about expanding the police department, FBI or CIA? The answers are likely to be contradictory.

A 1981 SPECIAL report by the California Poll illustrates the situation. Most California citizens have little problem in describing themselves as either "liberal" or "conservative." And most have little trouble with broad philosophical questions about the role of government or major issues.

When asked what they mean by "conservative," conservatives typically said they were against large government; for gradual (not radical) change; lower taxes; against welfare; etc. etc. — in short, the traditional positions. Liberals, similarly, favored change and new ideas; supported minority rights; and thought government should help people by providing opportunities. Again, these are traditional liberal positions. And, on these kinds of broad philosophical matters, there are clear-cut differences between liberals and conservatives.

But, when asked about specifics — a given tax or government policy — the differences often disappear. Almost uniformly, Californians oppose higher taxes and ideology has nothing to do with their positions. The only tax increase which has support is the so-called sin tax (on alcohol and tobacco). And this support comes from both liberals and conservatives.

And, out of a dozen government policies, there are only a few which engender any ideological split. Welfare, medical care and environmental regulation expenditures are supported by liberals and opposed by conservatives. Increased law enforcement expenditures are supported by conservatives and opposed by liberals. But on spending for public education, higher education, prisons, public transportation, parks and recreation, or highways there are no ideological differences.

What does this mean?

IT'S EASY TO take a broad philosophical position when the alternatives are fuzzy — when the consequences are not clear cut. But when the consequences are clear cut and painful — philosophy gives way to circumstances.

Thus, in 1980, Proposition 9, which would have cut the state's income tax in half, appeared to have a broad base of public support. The early polls showed it winning easily. The tax cuts imposed by the 1978 Proposition 13 initiative had not appeared to hurt needed public services and voters were eager for another tax cut.

But, as election day drew near, voters became convinced that they couldn't have another tax cut and expect public service levels to remain unchanged. In particular, concern about public school budgets turned the tide and Proposition 9 went down to defeat.

Californians were for another tax cut in general but not if it meant a cut in needed services.

The fact is that in California voters are more pragmatic than ideological.

Curb commercial confuses voters

MAILBOX

To the Editor:

In a recent television commercial, gubernatorial candidate Mike Curb attempts to confuse the voters by suggesting that, "Supporters of the Peripheral Canal don't know whether the Canal will cost $680 million or $23 billion." The Peripheral Canal will appear on the June 8 ballot as the major element of Proposition 9.

This irresponsible statement is ridiculous since the state Department of Water Resources has stated implicitly that the cost of the Canal is $680 million in 1981 dollars. The other items included in Proposition 9 bring the total cost to $3.1 billion in 1981 dollars. However, the only major item authorized for construction under this proposition is the Peripheral Canal itself. The two dams and reservoirs proposed are only authorized for feasibility studies at this time, even though the construction costs are included in the package. Estimated inflated costs during the construction period range from $1.3 billion for the Peripheral Canal to a total of about $5.5 billion for the entire package.

The misleading figure of $23 billion was actually introduced by Curb's major campaign contributors, The J.G. Boswell Company and The Salyer Land Company, farming giants from The San Joaquin Valley. Salyer/Boswell coincidentally also happen to be the main contributors to the campaign to defeat Proposition 9. Curb's flagrantly exaggerated cost figure represents the entire cost of everything put into the State Water Project since it began in 1960 through the year 2035, including all operation and maintenance costs. It is clearly not the cost of the Peripheral Canal.

In reality, Curb and his megabuck supporters are not opposed to the Peripheral Canal but, rather they do not want to concede the environmental guarantees for the sensitive Sacramento/San Joaquin Delta and Northern California rivers that are included in the package.

Proposition 9 is a complex political compromise, passed by the state Legislature in 1980, including both representatives from the North and South, and signed by the governor. During the past 20 years more than $50 million has been spent studying the Peripheral Canal and alternatives. Each independent study done by the state Department of Water Resources has concluded that the Peripheral Canal is the best means of providing necessary high quality water, surplus to the needs of the North, to Southern and Central California, while at the same time protecting the environment of the Delta itself.

Bonin trial costly

To the Editor:

The trial of William Bonin in Orange County is only the mid-phase of a gigantic waste of time and money. How many times can he go to the gas chamber?

As everyone knows, he won't get gassed anyway. It is predictable that his execution will be fought through the courts interminably. Bonin can look forward to many interesting respites from the drudgery of prison life as he travels from court appearance to court appearance.

Again, predictably, it will be reviewed by the Rose Bird court some years hence and the decision of his guilt will be overturned. He will be granted a new trial on some flimsy basis such as the police report misstating the color of his van as azure blue instead of cobalt blue.

Meantime, the heartaches of the victims' relatives are rekindled, the tears flow again as this whole sordid mess is gnawed at by courts clogged with caseloads and lawyers supping at the bounty of the taxpayer.

J. W. REID

Citizen action

To the Editor:

The referendum process is a remedy provided to the voters by the State Election Code to correct action taken by elected representatives which does not reflect the will of the people. The process requires a substantial effort by a large number of concerned people in a very limited period of time.

We believe the Newport Beach City Council majority is not representing the will of the residents. Evidence of this is the recent admission by the Irvine Company that the voters would reject the Newport Center expansion recently approved by this City Council majority.

The council's approval of the Beeco Project in West Newport is another example of not representing the will of the residents.

The residents in this city are faced with a drastic increase in (1) traffic, (2) noise, (3) pollution, (4) drainage, (5) city services expense and (6) airport demand due to the council's approval of this project compared to the present General Plan Zoning for this 75-acre area.

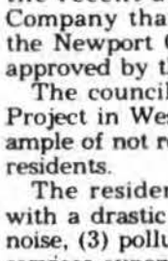

What may prove to be of greater concern is the potential Beeco use of the remainder of the 500 acres of county bluff land over which the city has no control once access to Pacific Coast Highway is provided.

We believe the City Council majority is in the process of changing our community away from the general plan's goal of a low-density residential recreation area to a high-density commercial-industrial city. Residents of this city should have the right to vote on such a radical change.

If we can obtain the approximate 4,300 valid voter signatures by April 12, we know the healthy debate which will follow will prove to be in the best interests of all residents of Newport Beach.

PILOT LOGBOOK

Sheepish applicants?

By FREDERICK SCHOEMEHL
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Don't try to pull the wool over the eyes of Orange County government — particularly if you're bidding for the right to graze sheep near a San Juan Capistrano dumpsite.

The county has about 630 acres near Prima Deshecha landfill that it wants to lease for sheepgrazing. Which seems simple enough.

Of course, you'll have to fill out a grazing lease proposal, including your name, address, telephone number, and the amount you're bidding. There's a $2,500 per year minimum.

SCHOEMEHL

Now, you must also complete the proposer's questionnaire.

For example, did you learn of the avallable lease by direct mail flyer, word of mouth or newspaper, magazine or newsletter? You'll need to restate name, address and phone number and state whether you'll work the lease as a sole proprietor, partnership, corporation or joint venture.

If you're a sole proprietor, you'll need to fill out the sole proprietor's statement. For the third time, you'll need to put down your name and address, and also provide your birthdate, birthplace, Social Security number and driver's license number.

If you're in a partnership, the county will need to know the date it was organized; whether it's of the general or limited variety; the book and page number where any statement of partnership was recorded; whether the partnership has done business in the county, and the names, address and partnership share of each partner, their birth dates, places of birth, Social Security numbers and driver's license numbers.

If you're applying for the grazing permit as a corporation, the county will need to know when you incorporated, and where, whether the firm is authorized to do business in California, whether it is publicly or privately held, where the stock is traded, the number of voting and nonvoting shares, the number of stockholders and the par, book and market rates of the stock.

Oh, don't forget to list the name, title, address and number of voting and nonvoting shares of stock held by each officer, director and principal shareholders. Then add birth dates, places of birth, Social Security number and driver's license number for those folks.

If you're seeking the grazing permit as a joint venture, the county will need to know the name of the organization, whether the venture has been recorded, whether it has done business in the county and the names and addresses, birth dates, places of birth, Social Security numbers and driver's license numbers for each of the joint venturers.

Be sure to attach a copy of the joint venture agreement.

OK, now the county needs a little financial and background information. Have you ever had a bond or surety canceled or forfeited? If you answered yes, tack on an explanation.

Have you ever declared bankruptcy? Any litigation, liens or claims pending against you?

On page 10, you'll be asked to "enumerate in details the duration and extent of your business experience with sheep grazing."

Now, the county will need a few references — four to be exact.

Finally, "Describe your specific plan for sheep grazing operations."

If you still have the energy, additional space is provided in the application for "any other information" you feel would be helpful.

Bids will be opened at 2 p.m. April 26. Better start writing now.

Nearly 50 percent of people die within three months of their last birthday, according to a study made by sociologist Philip R. Kunz of Brigham Young University.

A sampling of 747 obituaries published in Salt Lake during 1975, showed 46 percent of the deaths occur ed within three months of the person's last birthday and 77 percent during the first six months after the last birthday.

Only eight percent were within three months preceding their birthday.

Italian on pole in Prix

By HOWARD L. HANDY
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

LONG BEACH — The battle between the turbocharged Formula One cars and those with conventional engines over the tight, twisting street course for the Toyota Grand Prix of Long Beach today, got a bit tighter during final qualifying sessions Saturday.

Andrea de Cesaris of Italy, driving a conventional Alfa Romeo at a speed of 87.819 miles per hour, grabbed the pole position on his final lap around the 2.13-mile course.

Niki Lauda, the former world champion who has come out of a two-year retirement to return to the racing wars, will sit on the pole with de Cesaris with Frenchmen Rene Arnoux and Alain Prost in a pair of Renaults third and fourth on the grid.

De Cesaris first realized he had the pole when he coasted to a stop in his pit area after the checkered flag halted the session.

"I was calm when I came in," he said. "But when I saw all my mechanics and the other people on the team running toward me so excited, I started crying. It was a wonderful experience."

DE CESARIS said he had a clear track all the way on his final lap and felt this helped him to run much faster.

The 22-year-old driver with only 19 previous Grand Prix starts, has never been on the pole before.

"I've never done this before, but there should be less trouble there," he explained of his front row starting position. "The car I think will be reliable. I expect to finish the race."

Lauda, who is in his third race since coming out of retirement, piloted a McLaren at a speed of 87.698 mph half way through the second qualifying session Saturday.

But the big surprise of the day was the showing of the turbocharged Renaults in taking over the second row. The turbo cars have been at a disadvantage in previous races in Long Beach because of the many turns.

These cars are much faster than the conventional types on long straightaways and in sweeping turns. But they have a power lag when they slow for a turn and conventional cars get back to top speed much quicker.

Arnoux explained the situation in this manner: "Our fastest laps were on racing tires rather than gualifying tires and we were very fast in the morning practice session. We are very confident.

"It's very difficult to use the turbo here. It seems like we are always either in second gear or using the brakes."

Sconiers puts slam on Dodgers, 9-1

Former Orange Coast College star hoping for a chance to stay with the Angels after big hit

By JOHN SEVANO
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

LOS ANGELES — A strange phenomena occurred here at Dodger Stadium Saturday night. The team that acted and played like World Champions was wearing the wrong uniform.

The Angels, who have done nothing wrong since this Freeway Series started Friday, blitzed the incumbent—and real—World Champions, the Los Angeles Dodgers, by the score of 9-1 before a subdued sellout crowd of 46,827.

The fans, primarily Dodger faithful, were given very little to cheer about as the Dodgers played . . . well. . . like Angel teams of the past couple of years.

The Dodgers committed five errors, were booed for their lack of hustle, and could muster but three hits off the pitching trio of Mike Witt, Luis Sanchez and Andy Hassler.

Of course, the big story and the main reason for the full house was the appearance of Fernando Valenzuela, who was making only his second spring outing after reporting 22 days late to camp.

Valenzuela, who started his work in the fourth inning amid more cheers than boos, was rudely greeted by the Angels who touched him up for four runs and five hits in three innings.

"He looked the same as he did last year," said Angel shortstop Rick Burleson, who smacked a 3-2 Valenzuela screwball into left field to score the first two runs of the game in the fourth inning. "He threw just as hard. Like last year, all he has to do is throw strikes and he'll be good."

Valenzuela threw 33 strikes out of the 58 pitches he tossed. Rod Carew was the first batter to face Fernando in the fourth and he promptly laid a perfect bunt down the third base line for a hit. Reggie Jackson then followed with a single to center to put runners at first and second.

Bobby Grich sacrificed the runners to second and third before Burleson's single brought them home.

In the sixth inning, when the Angels nicked Fernando for two more runs, Juan Beniquez opened with a triple to left center. Daryl Sconiers, a graduate of Orange Coast College, followed with a ground ball to shortstop Mark Belanger who booted it to put runners at the corners.

One out later Sconiers executed a perfect delayed steal, and when catcher Mike Scioscia's throw went into center field, Beniquez scored with Sconiers taking third. Bob Boone closed matters — at least against Valenzuela — when he lifted a fly ball to left to score Sconiers.

"I'm ready to start a game," announced Valenzuela after his stint. "They haven't said anything yet as to when my first start would be, but when the manager wants me to start, I'll be ready.

"Everyone has to have his own time, although I don't think time is really important. The way I'm throwing now, I don't think I'm behind."

As for Sconiers, who is hoping to land

CLOSE CALL — Angel base-runner Rick Burleson slides into third base a shade ahead of Dodger third baseman Ron Cey's tag during the fourth inning of Saturday night's Freeway Series game at Dodger Stadium. A Freeway World Series?

Hope springs eternal for Southern California baseball fans

SPORTS COLUMNIST
BUD TUCKER

When the Brooklyn Dodgers and New York Yankees were principals in the same autumn classic, it was known far and wide as the Subway Series.

This was clever use of the fact that the subway was the most convenient way of traveling between Ebbets Field and Yankee Stadium. As a matter of fact, it was possible in the day and age for one to ride the subway without being hit on the head and separated from his worldly goods.

It is at this time of year that the conversation in the taverns and barber shops and similar halls of culture and refinement in Southern California has to do with something called the Freeway Series. This would be a World Series involving the Dodgers and Angels, brilliant use of the fact the freeways are the logical way to get from Dodger Stadium to Anaheim Stadium.

The two teams stage a preview of this sort of an affair each spring and really do not dispute the fact that the three-game exhibition series is an imposter.

TO A MAN, baseball people in this part of the world endorse a freeway series in October as all wool and a yard wide.

"It would be the greatest thing to happen in all my years in baseball," says Angels general manager Buzzie Bavasi who has been around here since the Dodgers pioneered the frontier in 1958.

"Geez," says Tom Lasorda, the manager of Los Angeles, "we nearly sell the ball parks out for the Freeway Series in the spring. If we come back here in October, it will be absolutely colossal.

"A Dodger-Yankee World Series is always big but this would be twice the spectacle."

Similarly, there are those of us in the media who long to see one October Freeway Series before we go to that great press box in the sky.

Actually, it would not seem such a remote possibility. It is simply a matter of the Angels winning the American League pennant and the Dodgers emerging as champions of the other league and the thing is established.

STILL, THE oddsmakers will quote you a price of something like 1,000-1 that it will not happen in 1982 and if you insist on a price, they will quote you on it happening in our lifetime.

Selecting two baseball winners is far more difficult than picking an exacta, according to the odds people. What happens is the manner in which events transpired in 1981. The Dodgers won their thing and subsequently became champions of the universe. The Angels finished up the track.

As the possibility of an October freeway classic in 1982 is discussed, it is again the Angels that are suspect. Despite a payroll of $9 million and such names as Reggie Jackson, Rick Burleson, Bobby Grich, Rod Carew, Don Baylor, Doug DeCinces and Fred Lynn, the Angels somehow do not dispense the aura of a team likely to be there or thereabouts at the finish of an entire summer of commotion.

Spring training games are not much of a legitimate indication, to be sure, but the Angels went through the Cactus League exercises much in the maner of the listless bunch that finished last in the pennant drive of the damaged tournament of 1981.

WHY A TEAM with paper potential that is awesome cannot win has been researched by psychologists and students of human behavior in the leading colleges in the land. Hofstra University engaged several psychologists in the project and the conclusion this panel brought in was that millionaires with long term contracts lack seriously in motivation.

A couple of schools of lesser stature arrived at the conclusion that the team lacks seriously in pitching. Whatever, it would seem that the Angels will see to it that an October Freeway Series is again out of the question in 1982.

Brown dashes to win

OV sprinter captures 100 meters at Orange County meet

Rex Brown of Ocean View High School captured the 100-meter dash in 10.96 and finished third in the 200 in the Orange County track and field championships Saturday at Saddleback College.

The fast track at Saddleback provided excellent times for the running events. Two field events are still to be completed on Monday (10 a.m.) before team scores can be finalized.

The pole vault is in the finals while the triple jump hasn't been started. Both events will be completed at Mission Viejo High Monday morning, the original site for the meet.

Steve Kerho of Mission Viejo won both hurdle events. He ran a 37.11 for the 300-meter lows and a 14.57 in the 110-meter highs. He was voted as most outstanding athlete of last year's meet. The honor will not be determined until after Monday's two events are completed for this year's meet.

Brown got a good jump in the 100 and had the lead after the first 10 meters, pulling away in the middle of the track to win by about three meters.

He appeared to be heading for a double victory in the 200 when he came off the turn in the lead but Aaron Thigpen of Saddleback High nipped him at the finish and Brown finished third. The first three runners were within 5/100ths of a second of each other.

Ruben Espanza ran a fast 1:54.14 in the 800 meters while Mark Junkermann of Los Alamitos was timed in a fast 9:19.12 for the two-mile run. Tustin's Mike Parker won the mile in 4:24.41 and was second in the two-mile with a 9:20.98 clocking.

Eric Schermerhorn of Woodbridge High was named athlete of the meet in the frosh-soph division. He ran the 400 and the 300-meter low hurdles. as Pacifica won the team title.

One of the most exciting races of the meet came in the 400-meter relay. El Modena had a seven-meter lead going into the last leg of the race but Santa Ana Valley closed the gap only to lose by an eyelash, 43.94 for the winner to 43.96 for SA Valley.

UCI sets mark in relay

PHOENIX — UC Irvine entered a two-mile relay team in the Sun-Angel Classic here Saturday night and although the Anteaters didn't win the race, they did set a school record for the distance.

UCI finished sixth in the meet that found the First Inter-city Track Club posting a 7:17.57 effort in winning. UCI was clocked in 7:26.10 to erase the old standard of 7:36.4 by more than 10 seconds.

Members of the UCI team included Steve Kirchhoff, Larry Hand, Joe Young and Juan Nuecke.

Fan has a ball; now he must pay

From AP dispatches

MIAMI — An over-zealous pro football fan who grabbed a game ball during last fall's Miami Dolphins-Oakland Raiders National football League contest has been charged with strong-arm robbery.

Francis Scheiber, 23, an unemployed Hollywood, Fla., air-conditioning worker, has been charged with a single count of second-degree felony following his arrest at the Miami Orange Bowl during the Nov. 15, 1981 game.

He is accused of wrestling the ball from the ballboy's hands after a kick through the uprights, and racing from the end zone into the stands.

If convicted, he faces 15 years in prison.

Authorities say the $55 official ball belongs to the League.

And when a Miami police officer spotted him in the stands with the ball, Scheiber was arrested and taken to Dade County Jail.

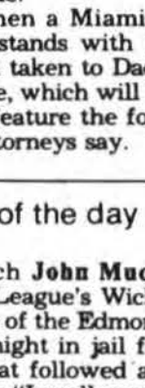

The case, which will be tried in Dade Circuit Court, will feature the football as a key piece of evidence, attorneys say.

Quote of the day

Coach John Muckler of the Central Hockey League's Wichita Wind, after nine members of the Edmonton Oilers' farm club spent a night in jail for a night-club altercation that followed a game marred by 19 penalties: "I really can't believe the whole thing happened. I thought I was in another country, Vietnam or something. It's embarrassing to myself, the Wichita team and the entire Edmonton organization."

Free's hot hand ignites Warriors

World Free pumped in 30 points, 19 in the second half, to lead the Golden State Warriors to a 107-102 victory over Dallas Saturday night in the National Basketball Association. Free scored six points as the Warriors outscored Dallas 12-6 in the closing 2:13 to pull the game out . . . John Long accounted for 25 points and Kent Benson added 23 as Detroit kept its playoff hopes alive by defeating Indiana, 105-102. Detroit trails both Washington and Atlanta by 2½ games in the race for the sixth Eastern Conference playoff spot . . . Dan Roundfield scored 33 points and John Drew added 25 to lead Atlanta to a 106-101 victory over Washington. The victory moves the Hawks into a tie with Washington for the fifth playoff spot in the Eastern Conference as each are 37-37 . . . Forward Adrian Dantley scored 40 points, giving him 82 in Utah's last two games, as the Jazz whipped San Diego, 133-124. Dantley scored 42 points Friday night in Utah's 127-118 triumph over Kansas City, which snapped an NBA season-high 18-game losing streak.

Cook off to a fast start

Betty Cook, the defending national champion, finished first Saturday in the open class of the Michelob Light 200 offshore powerboat race on a wind-stirred Lake Pontchartrain in New Orleans. Cook, a 59-year-old grandmother from Newport Beach, has won three national championships and two world championships. The race Saturday was the first on the Offshore Racing Association 1982 circuit . . . Missouri's Ricky Frazier scored 12 of his 15 points in the second half to rally the West team to a 102-88 victory over the East Saturday in the Pizza Hut Basketball Classic in Las Vegas. Frazier was named the West's most valuable player in the game after leading his team back from a 50-40 halftime deficit .

BIG NIGHT — Former Orange Coast College product Daryl Sconiers was a hero after smashing a grand slam Saturday night at Dodger Stadium in Angels' 9-1 romp.

a spot on the big team after spending five productive years in the minors, he doesn't think he's behind either.

Although Sconiers is hitting only .250 this spring, the first baseman, a notoriously slow starter, seemed to enhance his chances when he belted a grand slam off Dodger reliever Tom Neidenfuer to run the score to 8-1.

"I'm trying to be optimistic," said Sconiers, who belted a fast ball just inside the right field foul pole in the seventh. "I'll wait my turn and then when I get the chance I'll just play like I can. I'm a patient man. I have been all my life."

Angel Manager Gene Mauch, who likes Sconiers' ability to swing the bat, hasn't made up his mind yet on the young first baseman.

"I think he's ready to play in the big leagues," said Mauch. "The man can certainly hit. I've been mulling over in my mind for weeks what I think is fair to him and what I think is fair to us. I don't want to see him sitting around on the bench and getting a minimal amount of at-bats. That's not going to help him, not at his age.

"I know one thing, he's going to play here someday."

Sconiers is hoping that someday is now.

"The way I've been playing off and on this spring, I'm kind of getting used to it," said Sconiers, who has only 25 at-bats this spring. "I wouldn't mind being a pinch-hitter here and there and getting in a few innings every now and then."

Golden West ends unbeaten first half

OCC loses tough one; Gauchos win

Golden West completed a perfect round, Orange Coast missed a chance to climb into first place and Saddleback won a battle of division leaders in community college baseball action Saturday afternoon.

The Rustlers made it 14 straight in the Southern California Conference by routing East Los Angeles, 11-3. Orange Coast let a 3-0 lead slip away before losing to Cerritos, 6-3, and Saddleback tumbled Citrus, 7-2.

Golden West clinched the first half championship in the Southern Cal with its victory Saturday. Doug Irvine led a 13-hit attack with a 3-for-4 performance and knocked in five runs.

Bob Grandstaff and John Altobelli chipped in with two hits apiece, and everyone else in the starting lineup, except one, had at least one hit.

Starting pitcher Ron Hendricks improved his record to 3-0 in a five-inning stint in which he induced 13 ground balls of the 15 outs. The sophomore right-hander gave way in the top of the sixth to the first of two relievers.

Golden West returns to conference play a week from Thursday (April 15) when it travels to Cypress.

Orange Coast appeared on its way to a second straight victory over Cerritos and occupation of first place when the Pirates jumped to a 3-0 lead after seven frames.

OCC starter Jack Reinholtz was in complete command through seven innings, allowing just an early single. But his control left him in the eighth, when he walked back-to-back batters, then he was chased by Steve Moses' triple.

Matt Sferraza followed with a homer and Cerritos was in front to stay. The game was scoreless until the bottom of the sixth when Fred Delaine tripled and rode home on Rick Hopkins single to center.

Scott Darling hit a sacrifice fly with the bases loaded to make it 2-0, then Scott Groot raced home on a wild pitch for OCC' third run.

Casey Smith was a perfect 4-for-4 at the plate as the Gauchos rolled to their win at Citrus. Randy Cumming put Saddleback on the board early with a first-inning two-run homer.

After Citrus scored a run against Gaucho starter Brad Kinney in the sixth, the teams traded runs in the eighth. Kinney worked the first six and was credited with three strikeouts.

In the ninth, Saddleback put the game away when Cummings singled in one run and Bobby Gray drove in another with a sacrifice fly.

The Gauchos are 8-2 in the Mission Conference and return to action Monday afternoon with a makeup game at Chaffey.

Edwards survives winds

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Danny Edwards fought his way through howling winds to a round of par 72 and established a 3-stroke lead Saturday in the third round of the $300,000 Greater Greensboro Open golf tournament.

Edwards, whose only other individual title came in this event five years ago, put together a 54-hold total of 210, six strokes under par for three trips over the wind-raked, 6,984 yard Forest Oaks Country Club course.

"It was just a battle," Edwards said of the winds that gusted to 50 mph, bent flag poles almost to the ground, ripped limbs from trees, toppled at least one ticket booth and moved balls on the green.

"You couldn't play the wind," Edwards said. "It was very gusty and inconsistent.

"You had to play funny shots. You had to play a 4-iron from 130 yards. You had to invent shots that seemed right at the time. Something like 75 or 76 was par out there today.

"You even had to allow for the wind on putts. I saw one, not mine, but one of the guys I was playing with, I saw the wind move his putt two feet off line.

"All you do is try to play the golf course and keep from getting hurt."

"It was not very much fun," said Lanny Wadkins, who shared second with Bobby Clampett and Denis Watson at 213. Wadkins, a winner of the Tournament Players Championship in exteremely difficult wind conditions at Sawgrass in 1978, had a one-over-par 73.

"One of the four or five worst days I've ever seen anywhere," said Gary Player.

Stacy takes four-stroke lead

RANCHO MIRAGE (AP) — Hollis Stacy, who faltered briefly in the middle of the third round Saturday, birdied the final two holes for a 1-under-par 71 and a 4-stroke lead in the Dinah Shore women's golf tournament.

Stacy's 54-hole total is 7-under-par 209 heading into the final day of the Ladies Professional Golf Association's richest event.

Jan Stephenson and JoAnne Carner were both at 213. Stephenson, playing in her third tournament after coming back from a foot injury, fired a 4-under-par 68 and Carner shot 69 over the 6,255-yard, par 72 Mission Hills Country Club course.

Sally Little, with a third-round 71, and Cindy Hill, with a 70, were another stroke behind heading into the final 18 holes.

Tournament defending champion Nancy Lopez-Melton carded a 67 to join a group of six players who are six strokes behind Stacy. Also at 215 after three rounds are Pat Bradley, Beth Daniel, Kathy Whitworth, Donna Caponi, and Lori Garbavz. Bradley was second, three strokes behind Stacy after two rounds, but struggled to a 74 Saturday.

Stacy, coming off a round in which she carded a 31 on the back nine, got off to a quick start in the third round, with birdies on the fourth and sixth holes to move 8-under-par for the tournement. But then she bogeyed No. 8, No. 11 and No. 13 to drop three strokes before finishing with with the two birdies.

"I like the pressure of leading," Stacy said.

Reds regrouping

Dodgers looking for encore performance

By the Associated Press

Once upon a time, you could find the team with the best record in baseball in the World Series. In recent years, the best record at least got you a spot in the championship series of whatever league you happened to be in.

Such will be the case this year if the Cincinnati Reds win the National League West, but all the best record in baseball — 66-42 — got them last-season was a lot of heartache. Any resemblance between last year's Cincinnati Reds and this year's edition is purely coincidental.

The 1981 outfield of George Foster, Ken Griffey and Dave Collins now calls New York home (Foster with the Mets, the others with the Yankees), third baseman Ray Knight works for the Houston Astros and Johnny Bench, once the best catchers around, has forsaken the tools of ignorance to put his hefty chest in front of ground balls at the hot corner.

NEVERTHELESS, Manager John McNamara insists that "we're a better team right now . . . than we were at the end of the season. The big improvement is going to be in our pitching. Tom Seaver, in my opinion, was the best pitcher in the National League last year and we will build the staff around him."

The other building blocks include Mario Soto, Frank Pastore and Bruce Berenyi, with Tom Hume, Jim Kern and Joe Price in the bullpen.

In Los Angeles, Manager Tom Lasorda says the World Champion Dodgers "have neither the cause nor the time to be complacent . . . we have every reason to believe we will be stronger this year."

The big change takes place in the infield, where the old gang which played together for a record nine seasons was broken up when second baseman Davey Lopes was shipped to Oakland. His replacement will be rookie Steve Sax, a .346 bat champ in the Texas League.

The rest of the quartet still finds Steve Garvey at first, Bill Russell at short and Ron Cey at third. If Russell has any more erratic tendencies, Mark Belanger and his Hall of Fame glove have signed on as a backup.

Dusty Baker and Pedro Guerrero will man two outfield spots, with Ken Landreaux or rookie Ron Roenicke in center. Mike Scioscia and Steve Yeager again will share the catching. Fernando Valenzuela, Jerry Reuss, Burt Hooton and Bob Welch are the top four starters and Steve Howe heads a young bullpen.

THE LAST TWO seasons have been close but no cigar for the Houston Astros. The experts say their only weakness is power, but — surprise! — the Astros have outhomered the opposition in each of the last three years.

Manager Bill Virdon feels he will have a stronger club than last year's. His long suit is pitching — Nolan Ryan, Bob Knepper, Joe Niekro, Vern Ruhle, Don Sutton, Joe Sambito, etc.

The San Francisco Giants posted their first winning season since 1978. Manager Frank Robinson says they have "strong starting pitchers, a deep bullpen from both sides, aggressive young players at every position, power from both sides of the plate, a solid bench and good speed."

THE ATLANTA BRAVES have a new manager in Joe Torre, but the team will bear a strong resemblance to previous Atlanta clubs. The nucleus consists of third baseman Bob Horner, center fielder Dale Murphy, first baseman Chris Chambliss, right fielder Claudell Washington, ageless knuckleballer Phil Niekro, plus relief ace Rick Camp. Torre has high hopes that rookie Steve Bedrosian can join the rotation.

The Montreal Expos were coming off a last-place finish when Dick Williams took over as manager in 1977 Two years later, they were legitimate contenders. Williams says he sees "no reason why the Padres can't do the same thing." For 1982, though, San Diego's new manager only promises the Padres will "be a fundamentally sound team that will run a lot."

Prediction: Los Angeles, Cincinnati, Houston, Atlanta, San Diego, San Francisco.

NL WEST PREVIEW

REPEAT? — Billy Martin is hoping his club can return to the American League playoffs after losing to the Yankees last year.

HEAD RED — Cincinnati Manager John McNamara's squad will have to contend with the World Champion Dodgers in the NL West this year.

Billyball vs. Reggie

AL West race shouldn't lack for excitement in '82

By the Associated Press

Billy Martin and Reggie Jackson are in the same division again, Martin as manager of the Oakland A's and Jackson in the outfield for the Angels. That should mean plenty of excitement and fireworks in the American League West.

"The 1981 season was both a good one and bad one for the A's," said Martin. "Good in the sense that we won the Western Division championship, bad due to the unfortunate player strike. We came so close, but our playoff loss to the Yankees showed me that we still must work harder."

Martin thinks his outfield of Rickey Henderson, Dwayne Murphy and Tony Armas is the best in baseball. Mike Heath and Jeff Newman provide solid catching and Cliff Johnson will be the main designated hitter.

The starting pitching is sound with Steve McCatty, Mike Norris, Matt Keough and Rick Langford. The weak spots are the bullpen, which could be stronger with Dave Beard and Jeff Jones, and the infield, where Martin has no stars and must platoon at most positions. Second baseman Davey Lopes, acquired from Los Angeles, should provide some stolen bases and leadership. The latter is more important.

ACCORDING TO Manager Gene Mauch, the Angels boast a potential all-star at each infield and outfield spot. The list includes Rod Carew at first, Bobby Grich at second, Rick Burleson at short, Doug DeCinces at third, with Don Baylor, Fred Lynn and Jackson in the outfield.

The catching is adequate but the pitching, like last year, is questionable, at best. Starter Ken Forsch and reliever Don Aase are the best and Mauch is hoping for vast improvement from Mike Witt, Bruce Kison, Andy Hassler and Geoff Zahn. Keep and an eye on rookie lefty Angel Moreno.

"If every one of our people play to their potential, I don't think there's anyone who can handle us," Mauch says.

Teaxas Rangers Manager Don Zimmer says he doesn't do any predicting, "but I believe we are going to be a pennant contender," His hopes rest on third baseman Buddy Bell and catcher Jim Sundberg, a six-time Gold Glove winner.

Key newcomers include pitcher Frank Tanana, first baseman Lamar Johnson, second baseman Doug Flynn, who made Bump Wills expendable, and former New York Met outfielder Lee Mazzilli.

CHICAGO'S TONY LaRussa seems to have replaced Boston's Ralph Houk as baseball's most optimistic manager. "All winter, I have been predicting White Sox fans can make their plans to attend the American League Championship Series at Comiskey Park this fall — and I mean that," LaRussa says.

Manager Dick Howser is starting his first full season in Kansas City, but the Royals have the same old look. Howser's main problem is finding starting pitchers behind Larry Gura and Dennis Leonard. In an effort to do so, the Royals picked up veteran left-hander Vida Blue from San Francisco. Costa Mesa High and Orange Coast College product Dan Quisenberry is the bullpen ace.

Unlike the Royals, the Seattle Mariners will field plenty of new faces. Jim Essian provides solid catching and Todd Cruz has been handed the shortstop position. If Jim Maler can handle first base, Bruce Bochte will move to left field. Second baseman Julio Cruz and DH Richie Zisk are standouts.

The Minnesota Twins, with one of baseball's youngest teams, move from suburban Metropolitan Stadium to the Hubert Humphrey Metrodome in downtown Minneapolis. Manager Billy Gardner says the change means a transition to a speed-and-defense style.

Prediction: Angels, Oakland, Kansas City, Chicago, Texas, Minnesota, Seattle.

Plenty of new faces head NL East squads

By the Associated Press

The National League East is a perfect example of the baseball credo that it's easier to fire a manager than to get rid of 25 players.

The East's new skippers are Pat Corrales of the Philadelphia Phillies,, George Bamberger of the New York Mets and Lee Elia of the Chicago Cubs. Jim Fanning took over the Montreal Expos only last September, but led them to the division title.

The Expos are a veteran ballclub, but still a relatively young one, and Fanning sees them as "strengthened from a maturity standpoint alone."

The manager says "the sky is the limit" for catcher Gary Carter, center fielder Andre Dawson and left fielder Tim Raines, and predicts that Jeff Reardon could become "the premier relief pitcher in baseball."

MONTREAL'S TALENT doesn't end there. The infield of first baseman Al Oliver second baseman Rodney Scott, shortstop Chris Speier and third baseman Tim Wallach is strong, with rookie Wallace Johnson and veteran Frank Taveras pushing Scott and Speier, respectively. Warren Cromartie will play right field.

The starting pitching is solid with Steve Rogers, Ray Burris, Bill Gullickson and Scott Sanderson, and could be exceptional if David Palmer is over his arm miseries.

The St. Louis Cardinals had the best overall record in the NL East, but the midseason players' strike kept them out of the playoffs because they didn't win either half of the shortened split season.

"I believe we can do it over 162 games in 1982," says Whitey Herzog, who begins his third year as both the manager and general manager. "

Herzog got rid of shortstop Garry Templeton, who didn't want to play — at least not in St. Louis. The new man is slick-fielding Ozzie Smith, acquired from San Diego for Templeton. Herzog calls the quartet of Smith, first baseman Keith Hernandez, second baseman Tommy Herr and third baseman Ken Oberkfell "the best defensive infield in the league, and they can run and hit, too."

THE PHILLIES underwent Operation Shakewell, starting with Manager Dallas Green, who went to the Cubs as executive vice president and general manager. Besides Corrales in the dugout, other new faces include catcher Bo Diaz, shortstop Ivan DeJesus, possibly George Vukovich in right field, Mike Krukow on the mound, and Ed Farmer and Sid Monge in the bullpen.

Swan songs for pair

Lemon, Weaver vow not to return after '82

By the Associated Press

Bob Lemon and Earl Weaver are in their final seasons as managers of the New York Yankees and Baltimore Orioles and Bobby Cox starts his first with the Toronto Blue Jays. But the biggest news in the American League East this year is Reggie Jackson's defection from New York to the Angels.

Despite the Yankees' World Series loss, Lemon was given one final year at the helm for his longtime loyalty to owner George Steinbrenner.

The owner bade Jackson farewell — whether it was a fond one remains open to discussion — after acquiring Ken Griffey from Cincinnati for right field. The rest of the outfield has Dave Winfield in left, Jerry Mumphrey in center. All can fly and the Bronx Bombers have become Steinbrenner's Striders, although Lemon insists it "doesn't mean that the Yankees are forgoing the long ball."

THE INFIELD finds Graig Nettles, Bucky Dent and Willie Randolph back at third, second and short, respectively, and first base will be platooned between Dave Revering and Bob Watson, with Rick Cerone behind the plate. That doesn't leave much room for free agent Dave Collins except as designated hitter, where he must contend with Oscar Gamble and Lou Piniella.

With Rick Reuschel ailing, the Yankees traded with San Francisco for right-hander Doyle Alexander, who was with the team in 1976. He joins Ron Guidry, Tommy John and Dave Righetti as starters. The bullpen of Goose Gossage and Ron Davis is as strong as any.

The Milwaukee Brewers had the best overall record in the division last year, but lost a playoff series to the Yankees. Yet, Manager Buck Rodgers feels that "many of our players didn't have the type of year we expected them to have. Thus, if most of our people have a 'normal' year at the plate for us, we think we are capable of winning the rugged Eastern Division."

For openers, the Brewers return relief sensation Rollie Fingers, who won the AL Most Valuable Player and Cy Young Awards. The starters are Pete Vuckovich, Moose Haas, Mike Caldwell, Randy Lerch and Bob

Waves rock UC Irvine in twin bill

MALIBU — Pepperdine's Waves came from behind in both ends of a double-header to defeat UC Irvine by one-run margins in Southern California Baseball Association action Saturday.

The Waves scored three runs in the eighth inning to win the opener, 3-2, then came back in the eighth inning of the nightcap to score the winning run and break a 1-1 tie with a 2-1 verdict.

UCI scored two runs in the opener without benefit of a base hit and held the lead going into the eighth. The Anteaters were limited to only two hits for the game.

The winning runs came in the eighth on four hits including three doubles. Pinch-hitter Jim Causky doubled with two out to drive in the tying and winning runs off relief pitcher Larry Hicks.

In the second game, UCI scored again without benefit of a base hit. Steve Barnard walked and scored the run on a throwing error.

Costa Mesa, Estancia each earn splits

Tournaments taking over the area high school baseball scene

It's tournament time for Orange Coast area high school baseball teams and the best any of the teams could do was split opening round games Saturday.

Here's how it went:

Bolsa Grande tournament

Costa Mesa and Estancia each opened play in this tournament with the Mustangs losing to host Bolsa Grande in their opener, 3-1, then taking a 7-6 decision from La Serna in a consolation game.

Estancia won its opener, 8-4 over Rancho Alamitos, then lost to La Quinta, 9-2. The tourney is a double-loss elimination affair with both teams returning to action Monday.

Costa Mesa gave up three unearned runs in the third inning against Bolsa Grande and could score only one itself. The Mustangs tallied in the fourth on a walk to Tom Sullivan, a hit batter (Jeff Field) and a single by Kirk Peurrung.

In the second game, Costa Mesa scored the winning run in the top of the seventh on a double by Stan Kurnett and a single by Brian Millett.

Peurrung was 4-for-5 for the two games including four RBI. He also had a triple in the second game.

Estancia used the home run ball to beat Rancho Alamitos. Jim McCahill and Reuben Johnson had back-to-back homers in the fifth inning as the Eagles scored four runs to put the decision out of reach.

Johnson had a big day at the plate, going 5-for-6 for the two games. He also had six RBI for the day.

In the opener, Willie Neiman was 2-for-4 while Steve Nichols was 2-for-3 along with Mike Campeau in the nightcap.

The Eagles return to action at 1:30 Monday at Pacifica High while the Mustangs play at 10:30 at the same site.

Santa Ana Elks tournament

Mission Viejo's Diablos toppled Villa Park, 6-5 while Westminster was winning over Saddleback, 4-3 in this one.

Mike Hollis singled, stole second and went to third on an error to set up Mission Viejo's winning run in the seventh. He scored on a sacrifice fly by Tom Marian.

Westminster scored its winning run with two outs in the bottom of the seventh on a bases-loaded walk.

Other scores in the tournament found Carson defeating Garden Grove, 5-0, and Santa Ana winning over Katella, 11-6.

Newport Christian wins two

Chris Howard hit a two-run homer in the first game as Newport Christian High handed host Avalon a double setback, 2-1 and 5-2 in Academy League action.

Newport Christian opens play in the Maranatha tournament on Monday.

BASEBALL

Santa Anita holds Derby

ARCADIA (AP) — Journey at Sea, a winner of the recent Bradbury Stakes in record-setting time, heads a field of 11 sophomores entered in today's Santa Anita Derby, the final major tuneup for western-based Kentucky Derby hopefuls.

Journey at Sea, who has never been beaten running beyond a mile, will be ridden by Cash Asmussen and break out of post position No. 4.

If all 11 entries go to the post in this 45th running of the 1½-mile event, the winner's share will be a record-breaking $192,800.

White tosses no-hitter for Seahawks

Pam White pitched her third no-hitter of the season as Ocean View defeated Ontario Christian High, 1-0, in non-league women's softball action Saturday.

In another game, Huntington Beach posted a 4-2 decision over University High's Trojans in a makeup game that was rained out earlier.

White, the outstanding pitcher for Ocean View, had 11 strikeouts and walked two batters. Three others reached base on errors and only one runner got as far as third for the losers.

The lone run of the game came in the sixth inning as Lynn Alferi belted the ball over the left center field fence for a home run.

Huntington Beach wasted little time in getting on the board, scoring three runs in the bottom of the first inning. Michelle Reno opened the game with a triple and Vicki Zecca was safe on an error. Dawn Cooper then had another triple to get two runs across.

Irvine cyclists win

Irvine High senior Willie Nicklas won both junior classic events at a recent UCSD Criterium bicycle race competition, moving him closer to a shot at the junior trials in June.

Nicklas is trying to earn enough points to make the U.S. Junior World Team for 1982.

At the same competition in San Diego, UCI student Tom Resh won the "King of the Mountain" competition, a 75-mile Olympic-site endurance test.

Mike Soltaca, a junior at University High, also turned in strong efforts in both junior events. The races were sanctioned by the United States Cycling Federation.

AMERICAN LEAGUE EAST. . .

McClure.

Weaver has announced this will be his swan song in the Baltimore dugout. He hopes to make it something to remember if the pitchers — Jim Palmer, Mike Flanagan, Dennis Martinez, Scott McGregor — stay healthy and the home run power reverts to its accustomed output.

Pitcher Sammy Stewart is Weaver's ace in the hole should someone falter, while the bullpen will be tough if Tim Stoddard returns to his 1980 form to join Tippy Martinez.

The Detroit Tigers may be ready to explode. "With the experience gained from last year's pennant run, we're going to be competitive right to the end," promises Manager Sparky Anderson.

The Tigers traded for outfielders Chet Lemon and Larry Herndon to provide some much-needed right-handed hitting. Kirk Gibson, who may be baseball's next superstar, is the third outfielder.

THE BOSTON Red Sox have plenty of firepower in outfielders Jim Rice and Dwight Evans, third baseman Carney Lansford, second baseman Jerry Remy, plus versatile Dave Stapleton and veterans Carl Yastrzemski and Tony Perez.

The bullpen is well-stocked with Mark Clear, Tom Burgmeier and Bob Stanley, but much will depend on Dennis Eckersley, Mike Torrez, Bobby Ojeda and the rest of the starting pitchers.

The Cleveland Indians had more starters than they knew what to do with — until Bert Blyleven came down with a sore elbow and Rick Sutcliffe suffered a thumb injury. That still leaves Len Barker, Rick Waits, John Denny, Dan Spillner, Silvio Martinez and Lary Sorensen, with Ed Whitson in the bullpen.

COX TURNED the Atlanta Braves into a respectable group and hopes to do the same in Toronto, where the Blue Jays never have finished anything but last in their five-year history.

He has some fine young talent in pitchers Dave Stieb and Jim Clancy and outfielders Lloyd Moseby and George Bell. Other holdovers include DH Otto Velez, John Mayberry at first, Damaso Garcia at second and Alfredo Griffin at short.

PREDICTION: Baltimore, Milwaukee, New York, Detroit, Boston, Cleveland, Toronto.

COMING AND GOING — Baltimore Manager Earl Weaver (left) has announced this will be his last year at the helm, while former Texas skipper Pat Corrales will lead the Phillies.

Grandison headed for UCI

Ronnie Grandison, a 6-7 forward from St. Bernard High School in Playa del Rey, has verbally committed himself to attend UC Irvine in the fall.

Grandison was MVP of the Mission League, averaging 13 points and nine rebounds a game. He was also MVP of the Watts Summer Game last year and was a first team All-CIF selection in 3-A.

NATIONAL LEAGUE EAST. . .

Maddox in center. Pete Rose at first. Manny Trillo at second and the incomparable two-time MVP Mike Schmidt at third complete the infield.

Krukow joins Steve Carlton, Dick Ruthven and Larry Christenson in the starting rotation. Sparky Lyle, Tug McGraw, Mike Proly, Ron Reed and Warren Brusstar will be in the bullpen with Farmer and Monge.

Chuck Tanner, in his seventh season in Pittsburgh, is the dean of division managers and seems to get more optimistic each year.

"Coming into the 1982 season, we have a group of players who know how to win, and, if we stay healthy, I think we have a great chance to be on top at season's end," says Tanner.

His optimism will know no bounds if John Candelaria and Don Robinson come back to join starters Jim Bibby, Rick Rhoden and newly acquired Tom Griffin. Bibby, hoewever, was ailing in training camp. Kent Tekulve, Enrique Romo and Rod Scurry head the relief corps.

THE METS, never before known for their punch, except to field a solid-hitting squad-catcher John Stearns, Dave Kingman at first, Hubie Brooks at third, plus an outfield of George Foster, Mookie Wilson and Ellis Valentine. Foster, acquired from Cincinnati, is the best hitter in the club's 21-year history.

But second base and shortstop are tossups — veterans Tom Veryzer and Bob Bailor, youngsters Ron Gardenhire and Wally Backman — and so is the pitching, where Craig Swan, Pat Zachry and Randy Jones are question marks and Pete Falcone and Mike Scott are inconsistent. Neil Allen, however, is a fine reliever.

"Our first goal with the Mets will be to get to .500, and that's what we hope to accomplish this year," says Bamberger.

The Cubs have some talent in first baseman Bill Buckner, right fielder Leon Durham, left fielder Steve Henderson, catcher Jody Davis and second baseman Bump Wills, acquired last week from Texas. The other spots are up for grabs. Much depends on how much veteran free agents Fergie Jenkins (a starter) and Bill Campbell (a reliever) have left.

Prediction: Montreal, St. Louis, Philadelphia, New York, Chicago, Pittsburgh.

Brabham wins Atlantic race

LONG BEACH (AP) — Geoff Brabham of San Clemente easily raced to a victory in the North American Formula Atlantic Championship Saturday on the Long Beach street course.

The Australian-born driver, son of former Formula One world champion Jack Brabham, beat Brazilian Robert Moreno to the finish line by 7.853 seconds.

It was the second straight Formula Atlantic victory on this course for Brabham, who was driving a new Ralt RT-4. Brabham, who took the lead on lap 11 and held it the rest of the way, averaged 76.423 mph in the 45-lap event over the 2.13-mile circuit through the streets of downtown Long Beach.

Al Unser Jr., son of the three-time Indy 500 winner, was third, followed by Steve Millen of New Zealand and Whitney Ganz. All of the top five finishers were in Ralt RT-4s.

Michael Andretti, 19-year-old son of former world champion and Indy winner Mario Andretti, was scheduled to make his Formula Atlantic debut. However, a broken gear box kept him from ever leaving the pits.

This race was one of several preliminaries to today's Toyota Grand Prix of Long Beach.

Yachting series opens this month

Capistrano Bay Yacht Club has announced that the first race of its eight annual Ocean Racing Series will be the Newport to Ensenada race, April 24-25. The series consists of five races for the Performance Handicap Racing Fleet.

Yachts entering the Ensenada race in classes other than PHRF will have their times recomputed to PHRF corrected times, according to Blaine Rorick, Capo BYC race chairman.

Second race of the series will be to San Onofre and Return on June 12. This will start and finish at Dana Point. Third race is the popular Dana Point to the 14-Mile Bank, July 10; the fourth is scheduled Aug. 8 and has been designated an Olympic format race. The fifth and final race will be the Newport and Return race Sept. 25.

Rorick said an attempt will be made to establish a "C" class in the 207 and above rating range in the interest of establishing a strong group in that handicap range.

Each of the five races will be scored equally and each series entrant will be allowed one throw-out race. Top prize for the series is the ORS Perpetual. Other trophies will be given for day races.

Deadline for entry in the series is April 21. Individual entries for "day racers" will be accepted up to the day of the particular race. Entry fee is $18 for the series and $5 for each single race entry.

For additional information contact Rorick, 496-2077, or Randy DeVore, 493-4751.

Swimmers awarded

The Newport Beach Masterswimmers adult swim club captured more than two dozen individual and another dozen team honors recently in a Southern Pacific Association Masters' swim meet.

Betty Garwood, the team's membership chairman, was the group's top award winner. The 53-year-old schoolteacher took four first places in four different events.

Other top swimmers included 21-year-old Diane Clark, with three firsts; Gloria Marienthal, with a first and two seconds; and Bruce Sumner, who received ribbons in the backstroke and the butterfly events.

Winners of two awards each were Jim Baker and Don Renner, both in the 45-49 age group, as well as Lori Hocker and Jack Garnaus, both freestyle specialists.

Evelyn Breaux, 70, was another winner, nabbing first place in two freestyle events.

Ginnie and Ron Clark, together with Laguna Beach resident Joan Barry, received ribbons in their 40-44 age group. Bill Leach, a coach and teacher at Corona del Mar High, placed in the 200-yard individual medley and in the 100-yard free.

Mexico's Yucatan Peninsula is an imposing place. It is 70,000 square miles of thick tropical jungle, a sanctuary for wild pigs, jaguars, ocelots, spider monkeys, anteaters and iguana. Many of its inhabitants are descendants of the great Mayan civilization, now living in the squalor of tiny thatch huts with dirt floors. Left unattended, these simple dwellings would be totally consumed by the aggressive jungle flora that virtually devoured all of the ancient Mayan cities.

So a tiny L-shaped island on the northeast tip of the peninsula seems an unlikely place for one of the country's fastest growing and perhaps most carefully planned vacation resorts.

Although Cancun is in sharp contrast with its neighboring hostile environment, it also is a paradise for fun-seekers who prefer quiet, informal surroundings to fast-paced, urbanized spots like Acapulco or Honolulu.

Indeed, Cancun hardly is a fluke. The Mexican government compiled reams of data on the country, fed the information into a computer and came up with this location as the perfect spot to build the ideal coastal resort. The average temperature is 80 degrees, the area is spared heavy rainfall and Cancun's coral reef — one of the largest in the world — makes for gentle, warm surf and talcum powder-like sand that retains little of the heat from the blazing tropical sun.

Ten years ago there were a little more than 100 inhabitants, earning a meager living from fishing. Today Cancun boasts a population of 60,000 and more than 50 first-rate hotels as well as condominiums and villas.

In the next decade, the population is expected to jump to 100,000, with more than 10,000 rooms offered for the expected tourist demand.

The majority of "locals" actually have been imported to the area to serve the expanding tourist trade. They live in the adjacent Cancun City, a fast-growing town that shouldn't be passed up when looking for bargains in clothing, jewelry and other items native to the Yucatan.

To say Cancun is an island is a bit misleading. Both ends of the narrow strip of land join the peninsula by relatively short bridges, forming a large lagoon. The island is 14 miles long and has a width of a few hundred feet to a quarter-mile.

A modern airport can handle flights from around the world and airlines, including United and most recently American, have opened up routes to this vacation paradise.

We arrived at the Hotel Krystal, one of the latest additions to the island. It is one of the few hotels offering cable TV. But most hotels provide musical entertainment, splendid restaurant facilities, skindiving equipment for exploring the clear, turquoise-blue waters off the island, sport fishing and nightlife that ranges from disco dancing to intimate cabaret-type bars.

You'll find most of the hotel employees have a more than adequate command of the English language,which will assist you in arranging excursions to the many archaeological sites in the Yucatan interior, sailing or fishing trips, visits to nearby island getaways such as Isla de Mujeres and Cozumel and scuba diving explorations of Cancun's numerous lagoons featuring colorful fish of all varieties.

Cancun offers tourists the splendors of a tropical paradise on an island adjoining the neighboring jungle-infested Yucatan Peninsula.

When you hear the word Mexico, you're apt to be warned about the water. The Yucatan, however, has no natural lakes or streams serving as a water source. Water is pumped from underground supplies that filter through cleansing limestone. Besides that, most hotels have added more than adequate filtration systems to their water supply. But if you are truly weak at stomach, bottled water is still available.

You may recall that Western leaders met in Cancun last year for a major economic summit. It was a Mexican government attempt, in part, to show off its new resort. The world leaders sampled the culinary delicacies of this area: lobster, shrimp, conch and various varities of fish. Don't pass up at lease one meal of Gulf of Mexico shrimp, which we found smaller than typical American fare but far superior in its delicate flavor.

Another note about Cancun is its casual atmosphere and well-planned streets and roads. There's no Miami high-rise look to the island since, by law, hotels may build no more than eight stories.

The government seems very concerned about maintaining an easygoing pace to the island and when you're not sunning yourself on the pristine beaches, there's golf, tennis and parasailing in addition to snorkeling, a must for these clear tropical waters.

There are numerous day trips for those who'd like to leave the island oasis. The island of Cozumel lies 50 miles to the south. It can be reached by air, ferry or the new high-speed hydrofoil service. Cozumel is a much older resort island, highlighted by secluded lagoons, a fine selection of open-air restaurants, deep-sea fishing excursions and scuba diving trips.

To the north is Isla de Mujeres, a quaint spot that can be reached by a trimaran. The island is noted for its snorkeling adventure trips and lagoons where you can ride on the backs of giant sea turtles.

By far, most tourists wish to see the remains of 1,500-year-old Mayan cities. Day bus trips, which often include lunch and a tour guide, can be arranged at your hotel.

The Mayan ruins at Tulum are some of the most magnificent of the coastal cities. This site is the only one on the coast to be excavated and partially restored.

The site of Chichen-Itza, 2 ½ hours from Cancun, is the most well-known and popular of all tourist attractions. It is the site of El Castillo, the giant pyramid pictured in many travel brochures. You'll also see temples, the ball court where seven-man teams played a game similar to our basketball and structures showing the period when the warlike Toltecs invaded Mayan cities.

Chichen-Itza was one of the centers of Mayan culture, founded about 500 A.D. It was invaded by the Toltecs, who added their own cultural, religious and architectural developments. But sometime between the years 1000 and 1250, the Mayan culture collapsed and its people dispersed into the jungle. Some archaeologists have theorized plague or invasion, but one tourguide suggested the Mayan people themselves may have rebelled against the elite members of their society. The Mayans, according to the theory, destroyed all those who understood astronomy, mathematics, time-keeping, medical and other achievements, thus leaving a people who gave up great cultural development for a life that turned them back to their primitive ancestry.

When the Spaniards invaded the Yucatan, they found the primitive Mayans scattered about the jungle-encrusted ruins of their former great cities and a people who knew little or nothing of their once spectacular culture. Zealous priests finished off most of the remaining artifacts of the culture, burning nearly all Mayan books and destroying pagan monuments.

Another exquisite daylong trip is to the coastal ruins at Tulum, south of Caucun. The walled city features rare frescoes painted a thousand years ago and an awesome view of the Yucatan coast.

On the return trip from Cancun, make sure you are in a bus that stops at the Xel-Ha lagoon. Remember to bring your bathing suit to explore this natural aquarium filled with beautiful tropical fish. Masks, snorkels and fins can be rented at the site. And you'll be amazed by the dramatic combination of fresh and sea water that fills this lagoon. The warm sea water sinks to the bottom while the colder fresh water from underground rivers remains on top. It's a thrill to swim down to the bottom of the crystal-clear lagoon, as you'll traverse a defined layer of cold and hot water.

Remember to dress casually and lightly in Cancun. Nary a coat and tie can be seen at this resort. The popular season runs from September through April. The summer season generally is much too hot for the tastes of most tourists.

Cancun, no doubt, will soon be discovered as the perfect romantic holiday spot for honeymooners. It is quiet, relaxed and offers that special brand of "amigo" spirit that is much appreciated by travelers seeking a totally problem-free vacation.

Easy Road to a Year 'Round Suntan Without the Burn!

Using the Ultra Violet-A Sunbed at Bio-Health Center in Costa Mesa, Kelly Young looked like she had spent the summer in Hawaii in just 5 visits.

That's why people are going to Bio-Health Center on 17th Street in Costa Mesa and getting in a safe and dark bronze tan on UV-A Sunbeds and equipment.

The nature of this technological breakthrough is quite simple. When a person is exposed to natural sunlight the sun dispenses light, heat and ultra violet radiation. Two ranges of light are dominant however, ultra violet-A rays (long range) and ultra violet-B rays (short range).

Ultra violet-A rays result in the brown tanning of the skin while ultra violet-B rays cause the common sunburn, aging, dryness and peeling common to sun worshippers. The UV-B in the sun is strong enough that few persons can be exposed to sunlight without being affected by sunburn. It should be further noted that the common sunlamp and suntan booths are also UV-B and can cause sunburn and skin damage if overexposed.

European engineers and physicists have been successful in separating long range UV-A from short range UV-B.

Bio-Health Center is using ultra violet-A (long wave) sunbeds which give the skin a deep, dark and safe tan without visible erythema (sublimnal sunburn), and consequently the strain on the skin does not occur.

Since so many persons can tan their bodies but only redden their face, Bio-Health Center is also using a new European UV-A facial unit designed to promote a deep, dark tan in the face.

Dr. Frederick Urbach, M.D., at the skin cancer hospital in Philadelphia, has stated that UV-A lights are quite safe for tanning use. He has also stated that exposure will not result in chronic changes such as aging or skin cancer even with repeated and prolonged use over a number of years.

Dr. Urbach also stated in the Los Angeles Times on November 30, 1980, "If you are going to go out and get a suntan . . . I'd prefer you do it under UV-A lights."

Professor H. Tronnier , M.D., Director of the Dermatological Clinic of the Municipal Clinics of Dortmund, West Germany, stated in his medical appraisal, "Among the numerous devices tested to date, the UV-A sun produced the best tanning effect without a trace of sunburning reaction. The absence of such a reaction demonstrates that no damage to the skin is to be expected with this system . . ."

A true suntan (that which is brown and not red) is caused by UV-A light. Melanin granuals which spread through the skin become a dark brown color on their gradual progression up to the epidermis. The browning effect is caused by their substance being oxidized by long-wave UV-A light. It should be noted that short wave UV-B light can do nothing here because these rays bring into play active substances which can inhibit or even produce regression of the oxidation of the pigment granules. It's no wonder that sunlamps and tanning booths have done little for a deep, dark tan.

Bio-Health has a nominal charge to try these wonder machines. You will relax for 40 minutes while the machine tans both sides of your body at once. Most listen to music, others take a snooze.

Most people have noticed that they are darker after their first visit.

Many hospitals across the country are using UV light and medicine has used ultra violet light for treating skin disease such as psoriasis.

The use of sunlight for jealing and promoting health is one of the oldest medical treatments known to mankind. It goes back to the Assyrians and Egyptians, who would make their patients expose to sunlight. In Greece, Olympic contestants were encouraged to sunbathe in order to improve their stamina. The Romans, also used sun and climtic treatments to heal patients.

Only in the last few decades, thanks to the vastly increased possibilites of medical investigation, was it possible to recognise the effects of sunlight scientifically, and to extend its therapeutic use substantially.

Relatively recently substantial successes were achieved by using ultra violet light in the UV long range (UV-A).

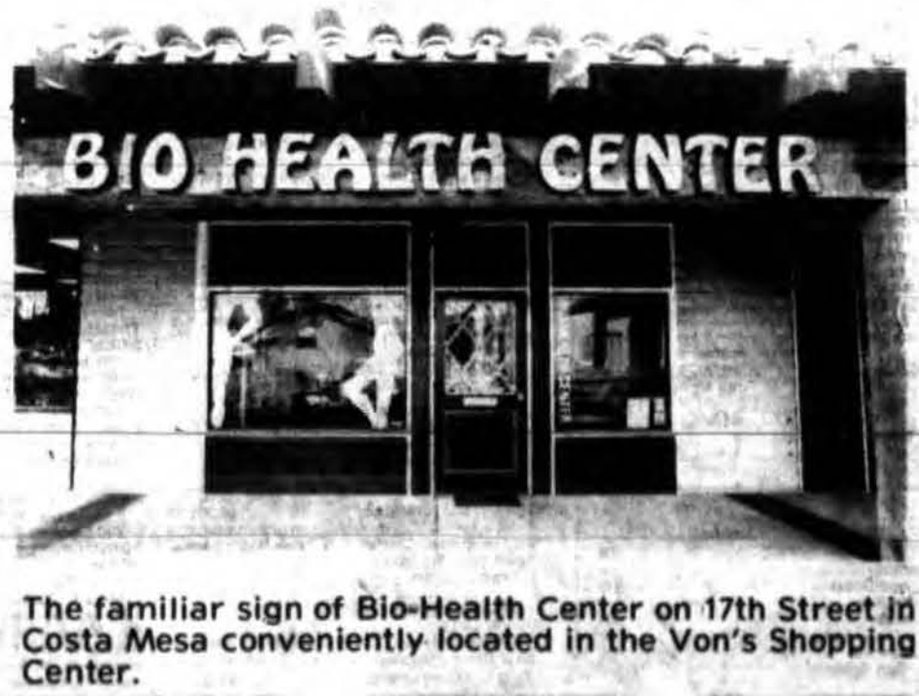

This is all the more important as in today's urban society the sun is losing its beneficial effects more and more. This is mainly the result of air pollution, the construction of high rise buildings which cast huge shadows on the surface, haze and smoke. Furthermore, modern man spends most of his day in closed rooms or factory buildings and has very few opportunities to benefit from sunlight.

It would be wrong to assume that the lack of sunshine can be compensated for in a hurry, tan during holidays. Too much sunlight can be as harmful as too little, and can dehydrate the skin or lead to sunburn. Tanning must be done in reasonable doses, and the UV-A Sunbed is the perfect answer for beneficial sunbathing.

Get a safe, dark tan without the hazards of the sun. Get in on the action & call for an appointment at 645-7717 today.

enjoying the UVA Sunbed at Bio-Health Center is safe and relaxing.

Thinking of your wardrobe as art. . .

By NORA LEHMAN
Daily Pilot STYLE Editor

"CLOTHES-COVERING for the human body — a general term for whatever is worn, or is made to be worn, for decency or comfort."

A Webster definition, it says it. It explains the word. But it doesn't really say it, does it?

Certainly clothes keep us warm and cozy or cool against a cruel desert sun.

With a few notable exceptions, they keep us decent.

For instance, missionary zeal, opting for decency, produced the muu muu. The fact that this tent-like garment was also comfortable helped it to take with the native population.

Short and long variations, in a myriad of colors and fabrics turn up on the fashion front every few years.

We're not without them now.

Everything, in fact, turns up again eventually and if we all had adequate storage space we could perhaps recycle some of these fashion reruns.

Think what a lark it would be, in these days of anything goes, if our mothers and grandmothers had been able to hang onto some of those classics from the '20s — or '30s — and now, with the bigger shoulder-look coming back — the '40s.

Dior's early '50s longer skirt has been with us for sometime.

And although it has a slightly different feel than the original mini — fuller and more flattering, Bill Blass did show a white straight mid-thigh skirt. The blouson top and suede fabrication moved it from the '60s to the present.

But, believe me, the skirt was the same.

Obviously, we seldom have time to look at every piece of clothing we buy with an eye to its lasting qualities — as far as line is concerned, at least.

We tend to update our wardrobe from season to season and then not give much thought to it beyond getting something out of the closet to put on in the morning — to look nice, granted — and, if properly trained as kids, hang them up again at night.

There are ways, however, to avoid the storage-problems syndrome and that's to think of some part of your wardrobe as art pieces.

French haute couture has been with us a long time. An original Chanel suit or Balenciaga dress are without doubt, excellent examples of that centuries-old art form. Both are really pieces of body sculpture — molded to the human form through perfect manipulation of underpinnings — double linings, chains to keep hems weighted and draped correctly, tiny stitching executed as perfectly as diamond facets.

But these are investments far beyond most pocketbooks.

However, with imagination one can invest in classics. It's good advice to take at least part of your available fashion funds and invest them in through-the-centuries shapes.

And, think of alternate places to spend those dollars, as well.

You are more likely to find those classic art-works off the department-store beaten path.

The clothes we've picked to show you on our model, Germayne Cumby, are examples of some of those classic shapes — or, in the case of the Victorian dress — the use of antique fabric and lace in re-created blouse.

While the idea to the U.S. many cultures and countries have regarded clothing as art.

Kimonos like the one Germayne wears on the cover have been art forms in the Oriental culture for centuries. Not only passed from generation to generation in both China and Japan, they are, when not in use, hung on poles on the wall for decoration.

Warren Imports in Laguna Beach and Bobbyo's in Irvine carry antique, as well as more modern kimonos.

They also have available such handsome pieces as obis to use of special accessories.

Maxine and Harry Lawrence, owners of Warren Imports, use obis for decorative strips on silk-covered beds — a good alternative to a wall hanging.

Suzi Brewster, whose eye for fabulous fabrics and wonderful jewelry, takes her clothing right off the wall, too. Wrapping herself in a Scottish paisley, for instance, she'll then choose a piece of jewelry, perhaps a large silver-disc lion's-head pendant combined with coral and turquoise, right off her wall, hook it around her neck and be on her way.

A shopping trip here will dazzle your eye and not only perk up your wardrobe, but give you ideas on how to perk up your house as well.

Betty of Laguna Beach produced the Victorian look dress Germayne wears in the gazebo photograph.

Spending at least two days a week seeking out antique fabrics and laces — from old dresses to tablecloths and bedspreads, in private collections, antique shops, thrift shops, anywhere she hears of something, she can, through her custom dressmakers, turn out something to wear to a garden party or a wedding.

You don't want to keep it any longer? She'll probably buy it back from you.

That is a real investment, then. After all, an investment is supposed to eventually pay something back.

Sharon Wells, at Great Things, can help you decide how you want Charmayne — who, by the way used to be a Newport Beach designer, but has since moved to Arizona — to produce your custom-made dress. She also carries small art pieces that, if you're handy with a needle — you can add to your own basic designs.

Nelly's in San Juan Capistrano, owned by Newporter Marily Wilson, has always specialized in art-form designs that never lose their style. A visit to this shop, or a look at them during fashion shows at the Newport Harbor Art Museum, will be well worth your time. With care, these dresses will last far into the future.

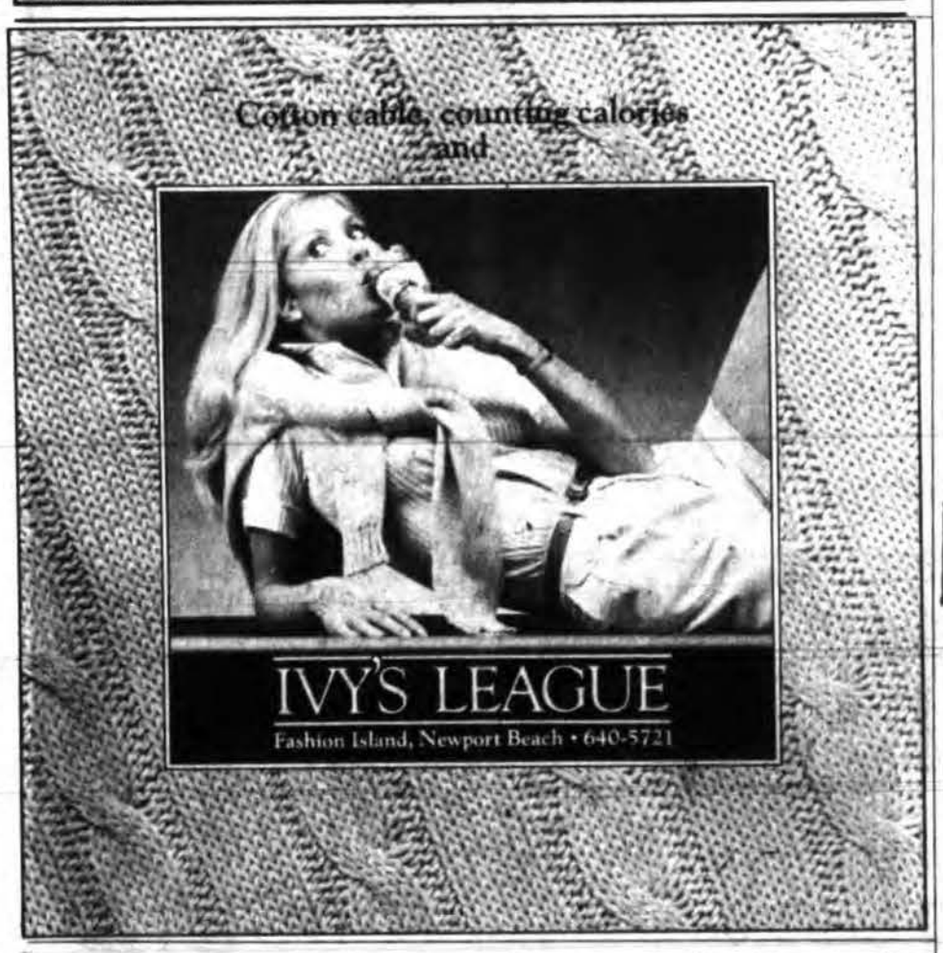

Use your imagination. Wander through thrift shops. Antique stores often have lace in small, and even large amounts around. Think how it can be used then take it to someone like the designers we've introduced to you and see what a spectacular piece you can add to that wardrobe.

Not only are these good investments, but they turn you into taking your wardrobe from the pedantry to the individual.

LOOKING GOOD

The sweet smell of class

By VIDA DEAN
Daily Pilot Beauty Editor

Her name is synonymous with "the sweet smell of success."

She has been an actress, poet and literary critic. She has been an artist, a designer of jeans, trousers, skirts, tops and home furnishings.

And now, Gloria Vanderbilt is entering the world of fragrance with a new offering called simply "Vanderbilt" which its promoters claim will add a touch of aristocratic class to the aroma world.

"Vanderbilt" has been described as the "most feminine of fragrances . . . in essence . . . a semi-oriental floral bouquet blending a profusion of mimosa, jasmine and orange flower with the spicy carnation and fresh leafy-like rose. The lingering woody, fruity tonalities mingle to create an exotic quality and memory." It comes in bottles with graceful swan motifs packaged in breath-of-roses.

The Vanderbilt woman:

- She's 25-49.
- She's a contemporary woman: a woman of the 80's.
- Her household income in $20,000 a year or more.
- She is fashion conscious and is a heavy fragrance user.

Prices for Gloria Vanderbilt's products for perfume, eau de toilette and after-bath range from $7.50 to $200.

OTHER NEW PRODUCTS: You might want to check out Ralph Lauren's new face colors at the local cosmetic counters.

This spring, the designer looks westward, and the colors come from "hills and prairies and the enormous starlit skies."

To complement his buttoned-up shirtwaists, floral and mattress ticking prairie skirts and embroidered white blouses, he offers Daytime Rose and Daytime Peach.

The tones are muted and as soft "as a prairie sunrise" for the eyes, cheeks, lips and he follows this trend with his new nail enamel color.

For night wear, Lauren introduces mauve and bronze to complement his suedes for spring.

The night colors are still soft, but more vibrant and intense since night lights call for a bit more color.

For instance, for a big evening out, you might try his jet/topaz night-eye-color duo with a touch of gold eyeshadow; Cognac-Cream rouge intensified with Copper-Night cheekbones: Cinnamon-Ice lipcolor with Garnet lipshine and Gold-Shimmer alone over Cayenne nail enamel.

MAX FACTOR has added four new products to its long line of cosmetics. All should be available before the month is over.

A creamy, liquefied, water-base foundation has been created especially for women with sensitive skin. Maxi Unshine Oil Blotting Makeup comes in a tube — is hypo-allergenic, and the company dermatologists say it will keep oily skin looking fresh and clean for hours as well as help control shine.

To wear with this foundation is a translucent blushing gel that slips on sheer color that blends easily and lasts for hours without blotching or streaking. The oil-free blusher comes in clear pink, peach, plum and peachbronze.

Max Factor also offers two new eye products. A mascara, Triple Lash, that promises to thicken lashes, condition and color. It also contains a gentle curling lotion to give lashes an uplift. Suggested retail price is $3.50.

In a wand, Max Factor offers waterproof Shadowmaker eye colors. They promise a soft, silky color that blends easily to a lustrous finish on the eyelid and stays that way through a long day at the office or a night on the town without fading or smudging.

FOR THE MEN: Chanel introduces a shaving foam. The creamy concoction contains lubricating and moisturizing ingredients and is scented with the same fragrance in the Chanel for Men Cologne and aftershave.

Trying out new things can be fun, and the cosmetics industry keeps providing us with constant opportunities to enjoy ourselves. Wonder what would happen if suddenly we all discovered the ultimate product for our individual needs, and we never had to look for something different?

Heck, that doesn't sound like fun at all!

IN THE SPOTLIGHT

Germayne Cumby: Orange Coast lady of fasion

It was the summer after her first husband died that Germayne Cumby decided she couldn't cry anymore. She had to get out in the world. Her first step was into the role of the prairie woman in the Laguna Beach Pageant of the Masters' recreation of Harvey Dunn's painting, The Prairie is My Garden.

The original of that painting hangs in the galleries at the University of South Dakota. It was a fitting start for this daughter of the prairie, because this tall, elegant woman was born in South Dakota — in Bowdle — where her father was a farmer.

Lured to California by an ad recruiting workers for the shipyards in Long Beach during WW II, her dad brought her mother and her — she was an only child — to Southern California to live. She was 5-years-old.

She went to Our Lady of Victory grammar school, St. Anthony's High School in Long Beach and then on to Compton College.

Married in 1954, she worked while her husband, Michael Cullen went to med school. It was there the idea for what was to be the only lab of its kind in the country occurred to Michael Cullen. Noting that medical labs often got blood samples from veterinarians for analyzation, and that they were the last things to be taken care of in human labs Michael recognized a need, and

A teal-blue, lightweight wool jersey dress designed and made by Charmayne. Trimmed in velvet, several cotton prints and subtley executed trim, including petit point, ribbons and sequins, the ethnic look of the dress reflects the designer's interest in African art and jewelry. The wooden and gold bracelets, and stone and wood necklaces emphasize the African theme. Jewelry and custom-ordered dress available at Great Things/South Coast Plaza.

Mexican-made red cotton, this Josefa-designed dress is trimmed in turquoise, yellow, emerald green, fuchsia and purple ribbon. Beautifully proportioned, the sleeves and sides are hand-embroidered by women in villages surrounding the valley of Atsmajac, of which Guadalajara is the principal city and home of the designer. Available at Nelly's of Puerto Vallarta/San Juan Capistrano.

He's still a big winner. . .

By NORA LEHMAN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

THEY DO GROW UP: There he was, Eva Marshall's eldest, letting the air out of his cheeks when the telly was on him. Sitting amongst the other nerve-wracked people waiting for the presenters to say, "The envelope, please." Rip, tear. "And the winner is . . ."

Unfortunately, Frank Marshall didn't get the Oscar for best producer for "Raiders of the Lost Ark," but no one can say he lost either. Anyone who gets that close has to be in the winner'scircle. And he did win on The People's Choice.

Well, we all knew he'd do something extraordinary. Any kid coming upon his peers throwing catsup, mustard and mayonaise around on a club terrace who not only manages to halt the nonsense (no elders had dared step into the fray at that point), starts to clean it up, gets the culprits themselves to help and manages to remain friends should have already been up for an Oscar.

Imagine the amount of assurance that took at age 15.

His late pop, Jack Marshall, would have been throwing away funny lines to emphasize his pride and his mom, has been awfully controlled. I would have been ringing strangers' doorbells to boast, I think.

There are three others — Phil, Sally and Matt — to be proud of in that clan, too so Eva, congratulations it's been a job well done.

BONES, BOOKS AND BEHAVIOR: That's part of a title of a talk given by Gerald A. Larue, PhD and professor of Bibilical History and Archeology at USC's School of Religion. He spoke to the Trojan Guild of Orange County recently. The rest of he title? "Who We Are and What It Means to Be Human." It's hard not to be fascinated by subjects like that and there must have been a good turn-out at Dian Sweet's house. Marilyn Kirk, program chairman, arranged it all, and we know Jeanenne Pfenning and Joan Donahue were there.

THE STAGE DOOR Chapter of the Orange County Performing Arts Center (that's hard to get used to. It was OCMC — Orange County Music Center.) are now about four weeks into rehearsal for their May 15 benefit. Titled "Island Fantasies" chapter members are into the performing arts themselves for this one. And the creators of the revue, Doris Pascale and Daphne Walker are directing. Now that's a real undertaking . . . helping all those ladies to dance their way back into the hearts of millions . . . well, maybe hundreds!

Speaking of the OCCPA, the Carousel Chapter of the same org had a delightful do for the premiere of "I Ought to Be In Pictures," over at the South Coast Plaza Edwards Cinema and West in South Coast Plaza Hotel. We found out who all these young, attractive people are who live around us. Like Susan Utman, who jogs by our house every morning to keep herself in shape to be president of the group. And Lurline and George Twist, who live down the block and Felicia Mindte, whose husband Bob, MCed the prize presentations with Kimberly Rothwell. He'd just returned from Europe — just returned — and should have been recovering from jet lag instead of good-humoredly handing out gifts. Not to mention Kimberly Rothwell, who with Mimi Hogan chaired the whole event despite the calls on her time by a very new baby.

It always amuses me who wins the prizes: Martha Fluor, who is so slender it's hard to see her when she turns sidewise got a year at the new health spa — The Girl's Gym and Doug Dodds, who already looks like the ultimate athlete, won time at a place called just that.

Saw Vickie and Mike Gering wandering around the "heavy" hors d'oeuvre table (actually it could have been called a buffet dinner — not the Gerings, the food) and naturally saw them again the next night at: Assessment and Treatment Services Center's Champs Elysees Ball. That's because they chaired it.

Cocktails in the atrium at the Newport Marriott and then on into the ballroom. It looked lovely. That wood paneling does give a warmth missing in other similar spots.

A couple of stand-up comics named J.E.T. Rutter and Denny Carpenter did their number for the auction portion of the party.

They didn't let anyone off the hook, looking over to see, if Tim and Susan Strader and Nancy and Byron Tarnutzer were still hanging out at their tables, or Nora Jorgenson was showing interest and Vin would throw a bid in.

When I asked Liz Toomey whether the bracelet her dad, Dan Aldrich, was bidding on was for her, she said she thought he had her mom Jean in mind . . . but there were borrowing possibilities in the offing.

Aleta Carpenter by the Senator was reminded not to move her hand, much less raise it, but Kit Rutter fared better. J.E.T. sprung for a full length mink and for that got a well-deserved embrace.

Kimberly Rothwell and Mimi Hogan buy raffle tickets from Susan Utman at the Carousel Chapter of the Orange County Performing Arts Center's fund-raising "I Oughta Be In Pictures" premiere . . .

Then, Kimberly Rothwell shares the mike with Bob Mindte as they give out the donated prizes. The Carousel in the background was especially constructed for the event.

. . . He's still a big winner

Irvine's Don and Patty Allen, not to be confused with Dick and Pat Allen of Corona del Mar, were among a number of those from their neighborhood: Brigitte Bastians and Jim Sutherlin, Lou and Christy D'Ambrosia, Bob and Mimi Leverton, Nancy Livingston, Tim and Rhonda Parker, Alan and Barbara Wiener and Gary and Cathy Pleasant.

Laguna Beach people are also supporters of ATSC. Al and Becky Adams were there and the Andy Carlsons. As was Robb Friedline, Russ and Linda Kidder, Tom and Kathie Stephenson and Betty Sutton with Peter Svenkerud, not to mention Alva and Eleanor Wilson.

We sat with Catherine (when she was sitting . . . most of the time she was on her feet working on the auction items) and Delane Thyen. He kept track of the final bids on the items for her and was wearing my glasses. Looked quite nice on him too, before you smile. Kitty Leslie, in a wonderful lynx coat, was also at the table, telling a story about . . . well, I promised not to repeat it, so reluctantly, I won't. I will say, though, that after her experience, she got home expecting all sorts of sympathy from husband Hal, only to have him say, "For blankety, blank sake . . . once okay, but twice?"

Newport, Balboa Island and CdM were amply represented. As a for instance, Gary and Joanne Hunt, L.D. and Margot Christiano filled out Garing-Strader table. Jim and Vickie and Bob and Lori Warmington shared a table. Roger and Mary Turner, Richard and Ceil Nelson and more of our neighbors, Jim and Pat Stegall sat together. Bill and Elaine Parker were at that table, too as was Anne Nutt. Saw Barbara and Bob Shelton and was alerted to Marilyn and Cal Schmidt's presence by some offhand remark made by the Rutter-Carpenter combo.

Fran and John Applegate were sitting with Jinny and Ike Kempler and Roy and Jean Studer — all admiring the jewels and furs coming by.

One more comment: I don't know the name of the security guard who was sent along when all these goodies were brought to the hotel, but he was certainly conscientious. He was never more than a couple of feet behind the lady wearing the most expensive item. One step closer and he might have caught the heel of her shoe. Could have been one of life's little embarrassing moments.

Serious in his work, but I mustn't fault him. One should take a $20 thousand plus necklace as a fairly serious matter.

LORDY, LORDY! Time is passing much too quickly here. That Huntington Beach Philharmonic Committee, under the obviously able and efficient leadership of our Christmas Cover Lady, Gloria Hyams, plus vice chairman Kathleen Suddarth and Boat Parade Chairman Betty Watson, has already announced the name of the individual who's to lead the '82 Huntington Harbour Boat Parade. It's Tom Kasabali. He was selected by past grand marshals and captains for the time and effort he's devoted to the parade over the years.

Selection also honors Mrs. Kasabali's participation in Philharmonic activities.

The Grand Marshal Ball was held recently at the Newport Marriott to honor the Symphony of Lights committee, the winners of the Boat Parade and the home awards.

Working on that committee were Karen Mohrhoff, June Frandsen (her husband, Dick was the 1981 Grand Marshal), Audrey Clark, Sally Fenton, Betty Henry, Judi Lawson, Kay Milano, Lindy Smith — and two more, hold on — Shirley Stitzinger and Audrey Thompson.

Pictured here are members of the first board at the first tea for the brand new Harbor Ridge Women's Club. Seated are First Vice President Virginia Campbell, President JoAnne Mix, and Fashion Chairman Susan Barlow. Standing and toasting the future are Gina Shear, ways and means chairman; Marilyn Reese, second vice president; Emily Butler, hospitality chairman; Liz Schnepple, social chairman and Audrey, Kapelus, treasurer.

Germayne wears silk pants and turtle-neck top under an Indonesian Ikat coat and turban. By local designer Suzy Brewster, the large shell and faux-coral strands necklace plays well against the brown, black and off-white of the fabric. Known for her imaginative use of unusual and often antique fabrics, Suzy custom-designs for her clientele as well. Coat and jewelry available at Suzy Brewster/Corona del Mar.

This Clara Igonda designed black raw-silk dress is trimmed with fuchsia ribbon and a piece of Indian mirror work. A Los Angeles architect, Igonda started designing in her spare time, and has an innate sense of color and proportion. Dress and hat from Nelly's of Puerto Vallarta/San Juan Capistrano.

Antique lace is used in this handmade reproduction of a Victorian blouse. The layered skirts are French, c. 1890-1910 and were originally used as petticoats. Flowers at the waist are from the same period. From Betty/Laguna Beach. The Frank Olive garden party hat, white hose and shoes are from Neiman Marcus/Fashion Island.

Germayne Cumby: Orange Coast lady of fashion

in 1965, he and Germayne met it by starting the Veterinary Reference Labs. They started with six veterinary hospitals in Orange County using their services and soon grew to be the largest in the United States. Sea World, Lion Country Safari, racing stables — they all used their services.

Michael Cullen died in 1973, and Germayne, who had been his vice president now found herself president of this burgeoning business. She ran it for several years and then finally admitted that trying to be super woman — a widow with four children and an increasingly successful business — was more than she wanted to handle. Single parenting was taking more time than she anticipated. She sold the lab to Interstate Labs and "retired."

She took up modeling — something she'd always wanted to do. Highly successful at that, she again found herself terribly busy. It was easier to cut back on time commitments under these circumstances than selling the lab business, however.

Volunteering in the Pageant of the Masters for four summers Germayne's children volunteered with her. At one point all four children were involved in this project in one way or another.

Five years ago Germayne married Dick Cumby. She brought three girls: Corinne Cullen Dowd, Cindy Cullen and Candee Cullen, and a boy, Craig, to the marriage. Dick brought two girls and a boy — Anita, Peggy and Don — to their marriage. They have, as Germayne calls it "a full house (two kings and three queens) in the grandchildren department."

Dick is director of the Gaylord Division of Crown Zellerbach and as such does a good deal of traveling. Germayne goes with him when she can. Since their marriage they've done a good deal of traveling to Europe, Mexico three times, Hawaii twice and all over the states.

During Dick's short hops, though, Germayne keeps herself busy . . . busy . . . busy.

Interested in giving back to the community that's been hers since moving to Orange County in 1965, she's been a member of the Ebell Club of Laguna Beach for a number of years, chairing their fashion fund-raiser for the past two years.

Last year she was on the American Diabetes Society Association Premiere Committee and this year she chairs it.

Much involved, although luckily there is no diabetes in her family, she found a volunteer home there one day when Sandi Ventura, vice president of the Bank of Irvine, called her and asked her to address envelopes.

She went back several times, realizing how much she liked the women she was working with.

Electronic Exercise — Just Lie There and A Machine Exercises For You

Using the muscle stimulator, combined with Bio-Health Center's favorite diet, Brad Aspin went from a size 38 pant to size 30 in just 2½ weeks. His mother Norma saw similar results (size 12 to size 8) in the same 18 day period. These are just two of the many successful & happy Bio-Health Center customers.

That's why people are flocking to Bio-Health Center on 17th Street in Costa Mesa and becoming regular participants of electronic exercise with amazing results.

The principle behind this phenomenon is straight-forward. In a so-called "voluntary" contraction, that is to say during everyday movement, the brain sends a signal along a nerve to the "motor joint" of a muscle. This signal, similar to a weak electric current, is a message to the muscles to contract.

In electro-muscular stimulation at Bio-Health Center, electrodes in the form of conductive rubber pads are placed on the surface of the skin over the motor points of 16 major muscle groups. When a very weak electronic current is applied through the pads, the signal finds its way through the skin to these motor points and causes the muscles to contract, just as if it had received a signal from the brain.

During the contraction of these muscles, the muscles are actually expending energy and doing the work. Patrons of Bio-Health often comment that the exercise feels thorough and really works the entire muscle. Most say you have to try it to appreciate it. Doctors say that 45 minutes of stimulation is equivalent to 800 to 1,500 sit-ups and/or leg raises.

Despite exercising your muscles 800-1,500 times in 45 minutes, persons feel no pain during treatment and most don't even feel that familiar soreness like in normal exercise. The current stimulates circulation which at the same time rids the muscles of waste products and toxins. Bio-Health Center participants do feel a tightening and firming of their muscles and very often after the 1st treatment.

Bio-Health Center is currently treating men and women from the ages of 18 to 87 years old. Some come to Bio-Health Center just for the exercise firming up their flabby muscles and improving their overall body tone. Others, who are overweight, combine this electronic exercise with Bio-Health Center's favorite diet program allowing a substantial weight and inch loss.

At first people say it feels strange and are amazed at how thoroughly it exercises the muscles. Then they relax and progressively work through their 45 minute treatment. Afterwards persons experience a five minute relaxation cycle that feels like a massage.

Doctors are sending their patients to Bio-Health Center for this outstanding exercise program. In some cases, these persons are unable to do normal exercise due to back injury, etc., allowing them to now exercise muscles for the first time in years.

Bio-Health Center has a nominal charge to try this wonder machine. On your first visit a trained technician will do a full set of body measurements then let you lie atop a padded table for treatment that will take approximately 45 minutes. During this time the technician will educate you further on what is transpiring, which gives you further understanding of the sensations you are feeling.

After your first treatment, the technician will remeasure & calculate the results. First time users have experienced inch loss varying from 2" to 9" overall. This change is primarily caused by the toning of the muscle due to the extensive exercise it has just completed.

This type of equipment has been widely used in both the medical field and in areas of professional sports.

In medicine, electronic stimulation has been widely used in hospitals for the re-education of paralyzed muscles. In these cases, where voluntary exercise is impossible, there is obviously no substitute for electrical stimulation. In cases of paraplegia or homiplegia following a stroke, electro muscular stimulation is invaluable for preventing loss of tone or atrophy in affected muscles.

Other areas of medical use include the treatment of bed sores by improving muscle tone and blood circulation.

In Sports, hamstring, muscle strain and other injuries have been treated by doctors without risk. Top soccer clubs in Europe have long known the benefits of muscle stimulation in the treatment of muscle and ligament injuries. The practical advantages of greatly reducing the time spent by top players inactive due to injury can be imagined.

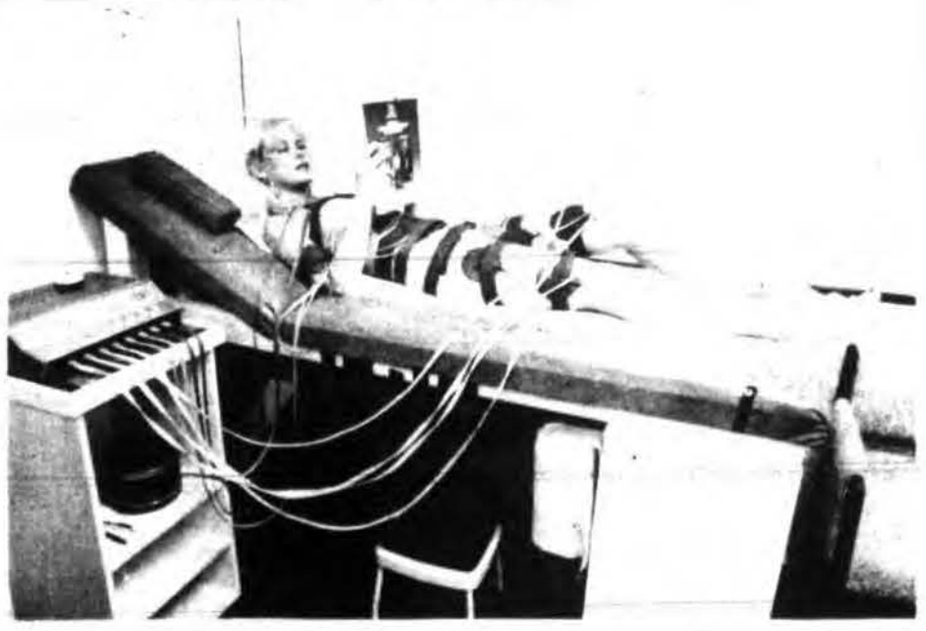

East Europeans became the foremost exponents of electrical stimulation for muscle power training. Other countries are using muscle stimulation to train every type of athlete — from the endurance needed by long distance runners, to explosive power required by sprinters and high jumpers. The fastest girl in the world, Angella Taylor, for example, uses muscle stimulation in training.

Electronic exercise, however, is not for everyone. The stimulation could interfere with pacemakers worn by persons with heart disease, pregnant women and persons who carry metal in their abdomens because of surgery.

Long gone are the days when control of calorie intake was believed to be the only way to keep in shape. Modern thinking now concludes that exercise is an essential factor in the quest for total body health.

Bio-Health Center in Costa Mesa also specializes in other European concepts which include Cellulite Control and U.V.A. Tanning Beds and Equipment.

If you want to be more active, alive and have a great looking body without the drudgery of strenuous exercise and uncomfortable diet programs, get in on the action and try giving Bio-Health Center on 17th in Costa Mesa a call.

Kelly Young is in her bathing suit, catching up on the local news, while her machine is keeping her in shape with its electrical impulses.

Wonder who put the irresistibility in model home?

By MARY JANE SCARCELLO
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Some real estate salesmen close a deal with numbers, statistics and cold, bare facts.

Carole Eichen sells with carpet, drapes, home accessories and a sure feel for the market, but she doesn't get a dime of commission money when escrow closes.

As president of Carole Eichen Interiors, she has designed or directed the design of more than 12,000 rooms in 16 years. Residential builders count on her model homes to sell houses almost as much as they rely on an alert sales staff.

"If ever there was a need to sell a product, it's today," she said in an interview at her new Santa Ana office. "I'm there to do all I can to make a builder's product stand out."

Although the slow-down in real estate sales is relatively recent, model homes long have been considered more than just a place to display furniture from a local department store.

"There's a reason for everything I do," she said of her interior design. "Even the things I put on a kitchen table link the home to the market we want to identify with. People have to visualize themselves in the house."

To target a market, Ms. Eichen goes over research provided by builders, learns about the home's neighborhood and checks out competing projects before planning a series of model homes.

Lunchboxes lined up on the kitchen counter, loaves of bread and mixing bowls in a home with country decor tell the buyer that this is a family home intended for the wife who is not employed and young children.

On the other hand, a bottle of wine, and a package of escargot casually placed in a kitchen tells a different story about prospective buyers.

As she recently told builders at a Newport Beach seminar, the second bedroom in a model home best indicates the target market.

For a family, extra bedrooms are decorated for children, but for a singles or "mingles" market, they become dens, offices or a second master bedroom.

"To succeed, you fill a void," she says of her target technique.

Her own success came quickly.

"I was always creative," she said. "In school I wouldn't pay attention because I was always drawing and sketching."

As an adult, Ms. Eichen began in residential design but stopped to raise two children. Feeling a need to do more, she opened a retail store in Fullerton selling Mexican imports of furniture and accessories.

"But business was lousy," she recalled, "so I decided to do some model homes in a new development in San Juan Capistrano to help sell my furniture.

"Of course, they'd never heard of me, and the models were already contracted for, but I was born to have chutzpah, and they let me bring in some sketches."

Daily Pilot Photos by Richard Koehler

DESIGNING WOMAN — Carole Eichen looks over her decorators' cubicles and discusses color and fabric samples with Margo Hazlett before starting afternoon of office work.

As a result, she did five models for the townhouse builder.

"It took me five weeks to install them, although today it would take me five days," she recalled. I did everything myself — I even went to Moskatel's and bought plastic flowers to make the floral arrangements."

Her San Juan Capistrano models — varying from antique showcases to bachelor pads — led to jobs in San Jose and Calabasas, and when her designs appeared in Westlake, she said, "I was on my way."

"It really happened fast — within two or three years — and I didn't have to suffer, although I worked hard," she said.

"I never had any education in design or business, and I didn't go to college, which I certainly wouldn't recommend to anyone. Design and business were a hard combination, but I learned the business side from my father, who's very good at it."

She has 25 employees now, some of whom have been with her for 15 years. All are women, except for two warehousemen.

"I've encouraged several secretaries to become junior designers, and I let everyone go out on an installation once in a while," she explained. "That way they learn to understand the problems of the other departments. A company can't run well if people are isolated."

Ms. Eichen encouraged input from employees while designing her pride and joy, the new office tucked away in an industrial park near the 55 Freeway.

Rust carpeting accents the white and beige contemporary furniture touched with chrome and glass of the first floor offices and conference room.

Decorator cubicles open to an airy two-story ceiling and adjoin a room lined with shelves for wallpaper samples. (A smaller room upstairs contains carpet samples).

Stairs lead up to a recreation section decorated in bright primary colors. A small lounge and kitchen are by a room with shower and exercycle.

An entire department upstairs is set aside for accessories, her trademark in model home design. Rooms are planned down to such minute details as the color of soap or seashells used in a bathroom.

Although Ms. Eichen abandoned plastic flowers long ago, she still individualizes her designs. Live indoor plants

Irregular maintenance of chimney can create serious fire hazard

By PAT DUNN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

In an attempt to beat escalating heating costs, many Californians are burning wood to heat their homes. While wood-burning stoves and fireplaces can be both attractive and practical, improper installation or irregular maintenance can create a serious fire hazard.

I. Donald Terner, director of the California Department of Housing and Community Development, pointed to some alarming statistics.

"The increased use of wood as a fuel, either in a stove or fireplace, has led to more than 110,000 residential fires annually," he noted. In addition, wood-fueled home heating equipment accounted for more than half of all heating equipment fires, and more than 40 percent of the resulting deaths."

Terner cautioned that the problem does not lie primarily with the stoves themselves, but rather with their installation, and the upkeep of the chimney and connecting pipes.

The California Department of Housing and Community Development offers the following additional information on wood-burning stoves, fireplaces, and fireplace inserts, and their potential for chimney fires.

When wood in a fireplace or stove burns incompletely, a black, tarlike substance — creosote — is formed. It is highly flammable; when deposited on the inside walls of a chimney and exposed to high temperatures, it can ignite and even destroy your house. The only way to eliminate creosote is to clean the entire chimney frequently, whenever a buildup begins.

No wood stove, including those inserted in a conventional fireplace (fireplace inserts), will be safe or efficient without the proper chimney. The four chimneys described here are those most commonly found; the first three are prefabricated, metal chimneys.

CONSUMER CLOSE-UP

TRIPLE WALL, air insulated chimneys are the safest and most efficient for wood-burning stoves. They use static air as an insulator to maintain a consistently higher inner flue temperature. Properly maintained, they are excellent, long-lasting chimneys.

DOUBLE WALL, solid pack insulated chimneys are hard to install. More importantly, they are unable to protect your home should the inner liner be damaged in a chimney fire.

THERMO-SIPHON chimneys are totally unsuitable for wood-burning stoves. It is easy to confuse them with triple wall, air-insulated chimneys because their appearance is similar, but they operate very differently.

MASONRY CHIMNEYS are commonly built for regular fireplaces, but they are generally unsuitable for wood stoves or fireplace inserts. They usually have too great a flue capacity for the burning unit, creating a slow draft and a cool flue which results in large amounts of creosote buildup.

The excessive temperatures of a chimney fire from a wood stove in a masonry chimney (over 1700 degrees F) may expose the wood support beams of the house to the flames.

Approximately four-fifths of all stove related fires are caused

Small farms OK, mid-size hurting

STOCKTON (AP) — Contrary to conventional wisdom, it is not small farmers who have trouble surviving but rather middle-size growers dependent entirely on farm income, an economist maintains.

"There's a stability and strength on small farms where they get a substantial share of income from other sources," says J. Patrick Madden, an agricultural economics professor at Pennsylvania State University.

Many of the smallest farmers and-or their spouses hold outside jobs to supplement farm income, he notes.

"In the middle, farmers are trying to earn their entire livelihood from farming. That's tough," Madden says.

Madden says statistics show that sales increased in the 1970s for farms with gross sales under $10,000 a year or over $40,000 but decreased every year for farms with incomes of $10,000 to $40,000. Income showed a "sharp increase" for farms with sales over $100,000.

"Evidence supports the idea of the disappearing middle syndrome in U.S. agriculture," Madden says.

He says his ideal would be for farms to have "owner-operators rather than hired managers, self-employed businessmen instead of having decision-making in the hands of large firms."

Madden would prefer "people to be full-time farmers or devoting most of their time to it."

"A lot of people in farming have other jobs and occupations. That can be a nice cushion, but I would like to see it done in such a way as not to cut family farms out. There is competition between part-time and full-time farmers," he says.

He adds that what he calls "hobby" farmers, who make their basic living in other ways, can "distort prices" by paying too much for land or equipment and selling crops at cost because they do not need a profit.

"That undercuts the position of those trying to earn a living from farms," he says.

Small farms are not an ideal if they are too small for anyone to earn a living, he warns.

"The Jefferson idea of family farms did not include deprivation," Madden says. "Peasants on the land is not the ideal of this country or any country.

"We're not interested in getting a lot of people out there with limited resources but in providing an opportunity to let people get into a situation where they make decent earnings."

Pension inequities hit

BPW aims legislation against feminization of poverty

WASHINGTON (AP) — A great many American women are being forced to live their later years in poverty because of the inequities in the nation's pension laws and corporate pension policies, the nation's largest organization of working women asserts.

"The feminization of poverty among older women is about to become an American trademark," says Phyllis Harrison, president of the 165,000-member National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs (BPW).

"Currently two out of every three older Americans living in poverty are women, and the inequities in our pension laws and programs are a major factor behind this travesty."

In an attempt to reverse the situation, BPW members around the country are now working to eliminate discrimination against women in pension coverage.

"Pension discrimination against American women is rampant, affecting not only the working woman, but also the homemaker," Ms. Harrison declares.

One of the worst problems, she points out, is that federal law does not require pension coverage for individuals under the age of 25.

"The greatest percentage of women in the American work force are between the ages of 20 and 24," says Ms. Harrison.

"When you realize that most of these women are not covered by pension plans, and add to that the fact that women in their mid- to late-20s often quit work to have children, you realize the magnitude of American women who are unable to gain pension credits."

On a broader scale, women are clustered in jobs where no pension plans are provided, she notes, citing recent data which shows that while women constitute 43 percent of the U.S. labor force, only 31 percent of all women workers were covered by a pension plan.

Many of these covered workers will never actually receive any retirement benefits. In 1972, only 21 percent of retiring women workers received pension benefits compared to 47 percent for men.

Because of the efforts of women's groups such as BPW, Ms. Harrison says, working women are becoming more aware of the inequities they face in gaining adequate pension coverage.

"Unfortunately," she adds, "the same is not true for the non-working homemaker. Too often these women incorrectly assume that their husbands' pension program will provide them with adequate income during retirement."

American women must begin to question corporations more thoroughly on their pension plans, advises Ms. Harrison. "Many homemakers are shocked to discover that their husband's pension payments are reduced significantly or eliminated upon his death.

"And too, many pensions programs state that if a person dies before retirement, the accrued pension benefits are forfeited, leaving the widow high and dry."

To eliminate some of these inequities, the BPW is calling for a lowering of the number of years required for full vesting, for liberalizing the current "breaks-in-service" rules, for lowering age-participating requirements, and for instituting career portability of pension credit.

READY FOR DELIVERY — Carole Eichen checks row of bins that contain all decorating accessories for each room in a model home to expedite their movement to the site.

Shrinking world is in the chips

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — As the world of electronics shrinks, computers and other high technological equipment, silicon chips used to store and process mountains of information also have shrunk.

One of the challenges to engineering is designing a package to hold the miniature chips. At Honeywell's Solid State Electronics Division here, special frames or containers for the chips are designed for particular needs.

Packaged chips tap into tiny electrical channels to put impulses on wires big enough to keep track of a store's inventory, run an airline's reservation systems or operate an oil refinery.

The average chip isn't as big as the pushbutton on a telephone, yet it can handle more information than a room-sized computer, according to Dr. Carl Nomura, head of the division.

'LAST MODEL HOME MUST BE MEMORABLE' . . .

are coordinated with the decor and outdoor landscaping.

"We make our own floral arrangements of silk or dried flowers here," she noted, "and we even do things like sew lace on handtowels ourselves."

From a confusing array of dishes, silverware, placemats, soap dishes, throw pillows and the like, employees create order in a series of large bins lining the walls.

Each is assigned to one room in current models so items can be delivered for installation all at once.

"We expedite, because time is money," Ms. Eichen pointed out.

As might be expected, offices are strikingly handsome, with curving walls, soffited ceilings and indirect lighting.

Piece de resistance of the building is a conference room complete with projection booth, light control panel and cabinet with built-in wine rack, refrigerator and hot plate for coffee. Textured wallcoverings can be used to pin up floor plans like a wrap-around bulletin board when Ms. Eichen gets down to the business of presenting model home plans to a builder for approval.

For her presentation, floor plans include samples of carpet, tile, drapes, upholstery fabrics and even plants to be used within the model.

"I want the builder to get the feel of each house," she explained, walking around a display left from a recent presentation.

"I purposely start with a house giving a light feel to give an uplift. The next house has a powerful, punchy feel."

Showing a decor of black and beige with heavy use of travertine marble at the end, she said, "The last house must be memorable. I want to strike a chord within people so they'll remember it when they go back home."

While builders review model home plans, she happily feeds them breakfast snacks of strawberries and wine because "everyone likes to be pampered, and everyone likes a touch of class."

"It's all in how you do it."

How she does things is very important to Carole Eichen. "Years ago a public relations person asked me what I wanted in this business, and I said, 'I want to be the Tiffany of the industry,' she said.

"I know what value I've brought — I've been an educator to design students and the public."

She has established "decorator days" at model homes to meet with the public for free and offer them her design expertise as a bonus to builders.

She donated an ongoing scholarship to the UCLA Extension school of design which to date has awarded $8,000 to 23 students. Last year she received full membership in the American Society of Interior Designers.

Her designs are used in almost every part of the United States, and she has given workshops in Japan.

She spends about 45 to 50 hours a week on the job but manages to get away to a desert home about every three weeks with her husband, Robert Passovoy, president of an Orange County drapery company.

"People say they can't picture me changing diapers or gardening or cooking," she said, "but actually I care for a garden because I love flowers, and I make soup every Sunday.

"But you have to be a strong businesswoman to compete."

She quit smoking three years ago after going through 2½ packs a day for 20 years, and a recent diet made necessary by allergies led to a weight loss of 35 pounds.

"I never knew I had such small wrists," she said. "I went from a large size 12 to a size 3 in two years. I really like myself and am at a wonderful place in my life right now.

"I'm creating everyday, and I can't ever imagine myself not doing that. I'm never afraid of running out of ideas. I have so many things I want to do I could just burst."

SAFE CHIMNEY INSTALLATION . . .

by faulty installation. To install stoves correctly:

— Follow the manufacturer's instructions.

— Choose a stove that is the appropriate size for the area to be heated. The biggest stove is not necessarily the best for your purpose.

— Buy only chimney systems that carry the Underwriter's Laboratory label (UL) or that of another recognized testing laboratory.

— Never mix chimney systems (such as triple wall in one section and double wall in another).

— Be sure that the size of the chimney/stovepipe is the same as the stove opening, or follows the manufacturer's specifications.

— Never decrease the chimney's size, and only increase it to a maximum of one inch in diameter, if absolutely necessary.

— Chimneys should be as straight as possible.

— A short chimney is usually the most efficient, but be sure it extends at least 3 feet higher than any portion of the building within 10 feet.

— For mobilehome owners: Any stove installed in a mobilehome must be specifically approved for mobilehome use.

The fuel you burn in your stove is an equally important factor in its safe use.

For wood stoves, you should select only seasoned, dry hardwoods for maximum efficiency and minimum creosote production. Also, avoid driftwood or any wood with a salt or chemical content that will quickly begin to destroy a metal chimney. Finally, safe operation requires these safety precautions:

— Never allow children to play near a stove when it is lit.

— Never use gasoline, kerosene, or charcoal lighter to start the fire.

— Never place things such as plants, papers, or furniture close to the stove.

— Never throw Christmas trees or many rapidly burning papers into the stove.

— Never think that you can inexpensively and safely heat your home without putting some time, effort and thought into proper burning of the wood.

Seniors' project opened

Casa Santa Maria, a 100-unit, low-cost housing project for senior citizens, has been dedicated by Bishop William Johnson of the Catholic Diocese of Orange, which sponsored the project's construction.

Construction was financed with $6.2 million in National Housing Act funds. Rent subsidies are provided by the federal government for the facility, which is adjacent to St. Pius V Church on Orangethorpe Avenue in Buena Park.

Occupancy is open to all those who qualify under federal regulations, but the facility currently is filled and there is a waiting list, according to a spokesman for the Diocese of Orange.

To be eligible for a unit, a person must be 62 years old or older or have a significant physical handicap such as being confined to a wheelchair. Individuals must have an adjusted income of less than $15,250. The income limit for couples is $17,400. Applicants must be in good health and able to care for themselves. Casa Santa Maria is designed for independent living for seniors and has no medical, nursing or food services.

The seven-story structure includes a multipurpose room, lounge, crafts room, lobby, coin-operated laundry and outdoor patio area. Apartment units include a living room, dining area, kitchen, bedroom, bathroom and private balcony. The building has a complete fire sprinkler system.

Realtors back court ruling

LOS ANGELES (BW) — The California Association of Realtors said it views as favorable the U.S. Supreme Court's recent announcement that it will review a California case that supports state law under the Wellenkamp ruling, upholding the rights of homebuyers to assume existing federal mortgage loans without an increase in interest rates.

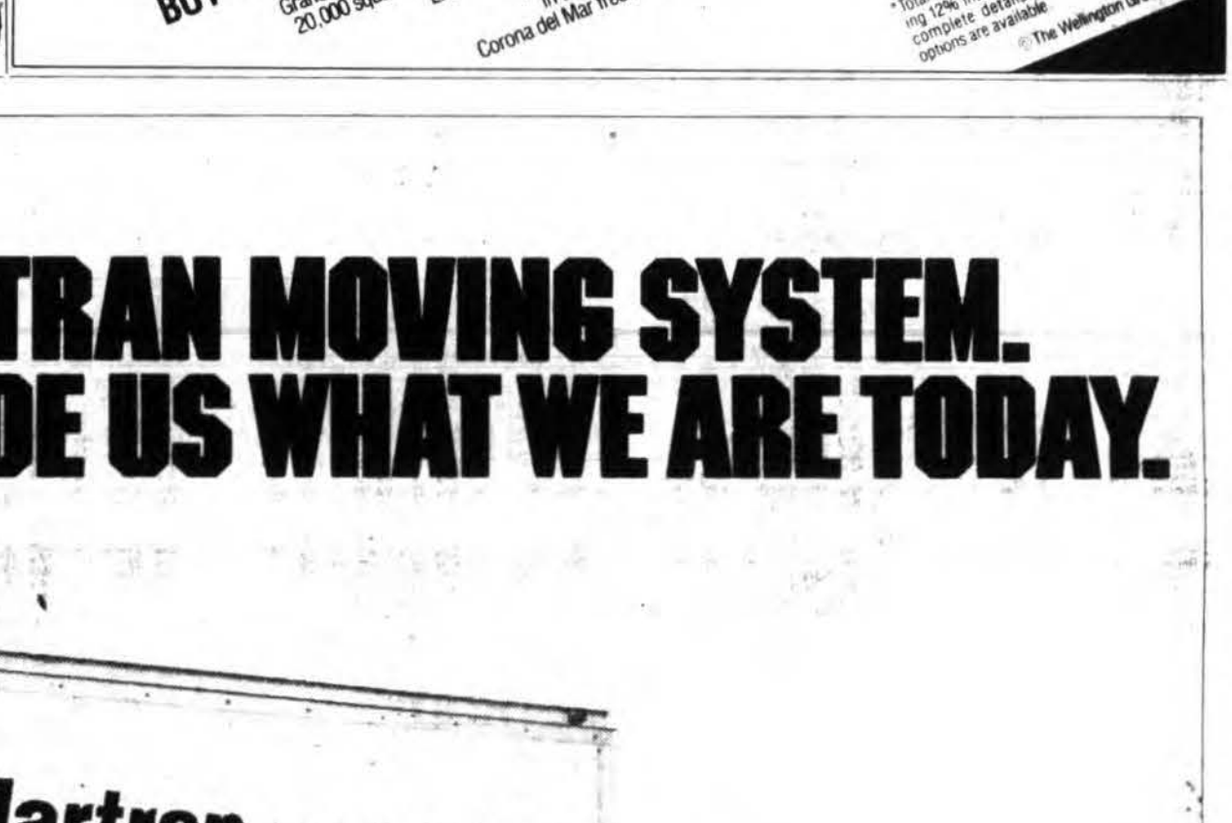

"We welcome the opportunity for a definitive ruling that will finally resolve the issue of whether mortgages originated by federally chartered savings and loans are exempt from state due-on-sale prohibitions," C.A.R. President Seb Sterpa said.

California state law under the 1978 Wellenkamp decision prohibits the automatic enforceability of due-on-sale clauses by state-chartered lenders.

Two recent cases in the state's district courts of appeal, Panko vs. Pan American Federal Savings & Loan and De La Cuesta vs. Fidelity Federal Savings and Loan held that federally-chartered savings and loans are prevented from automatically enforcing due-on-sale provisions under the state Wellenkamp decision.

The U.S. Supreme Court is expected to hear that De La Cuesta case, settling the question of whether federal law pre-empts state law on this issue.

In California the Wellenkamp decision upholds the rights of home owners to freely transfer property despite lender imposed due-on-sale provisions that purport to restrict this freedom.

STAN-SHAW CORPORATION

INTRODUCING THE JARTRAN MOVING SYSTEM. AND THE PEOPLE WHO MADE US WHAT WE ARE TODAY.

We figured it was time to take a good, long look at the whole idea of moving yourself.

So we did. We took a good, long listen, too.

We listened to the problems people encountered when they moved themselves. And tried to come up with a solution.

We call our solution the Jartran Moving System. An economical, practical way to move yourself.

Our trucks are made for people who aren't truck drivers. Most of them have automatic transmission, radio and bucket seats. Power steering and power brakes. Along with special aerodynamic Nose Cones® to improve mileage and handling.

We can provide you with lightweight, easy-to-tow trailers. Moving equipment like hand trucks and moving pads.

You get a complete Moving Guide that tells you how to wrap, pack, tie and tow. And a 24-hour toll-free number to call if you have any problems down the road.

All that, plus a network of dealers all over the country, adds up to the Jartran Moving System. A professional way for an amateur mover to move.

Calling in-laws Mom, Dad not always proper

DEAR ANN LANDERS: "Virginia Quandary" hit a raw nerve. They wanted to know if it was proper to ask their soon-to-be-daughter-in-law to call them Mother and Dad. I hope they take your advice and do so at once.

My parents taught me at an early age to respect my elders. I was never permitted to call any adult by his or her first name unless that person invited me to do so.

I, too, am engaged to be married. I have known my future in-laws for nearly four years. I still call them Mr. and Mrs. Many times I have wondered why they never asked me to call them by their names — or better yet, Mom and Dad. I can only assume they don't want me to get that familiar.

I hope all future in-laws will take this letter seriously. You can be sure the soon-to-be-spouse of your daughter or son would love to call you Mom and Dad, but they must be invited to do so. — ONE WHO IS WAITING

DEAR ONE: I disagree. Not all soon-to-be-spouses want to call their in-laws Mom and Dad. I, for one, could never have called my beloved mother-in-law Mother. That name was reserved for my own mother. I did call my mother-in-law Gustie, however, from the moment we met, because she asked me to. Her warmth and openheartedness would have made anything more formal seem ridiculous.

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I just read the letter from the woman who was upset by her daughter's lack of loyalty. She was angry because "Martha" entertained her father and his mistress.

My parents were married 25 years when Dad had an affair. Mom and Dad fought about it for eight years before they were divorced.

I like Dad's woman friend very much and believe she is good for him. Although Mom is dating, she is cool to me because I socialize with Dad and his companion. She tells everyone who will listen that I have abandoned her. I know she resents my closeness to my father, but she refuses to allow me to be close to her.

Why can't divorced parents keep their problems between the two of them and leave their children out of it? I want a relationship with them both. Instead I am the rotten apple of my mother's eye. Any comments? — CALIF. DAUGHTER

DEAR DAUGHTER: Same song, second verse. I've heard it dozens of times, and as the divorce rate continues to mount, I'll be hearing it more.

Marital splits are usually so emotionally charged that it's difficult to get the parents to be objective, but I'll keep trying. My sympathies are with the children.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My best friend received an engagement ring from a young man she has been dating for three years. The diamond is so small you need a magnifying glass to see it. When Harriet showed me her ring, I had to be honest. I told her if he couldn't afford a diamond big enough to see, he should not have given her any engagement ring and put the money into a lovely wedding band.

Now Harriet is very cool to me. I don't think I owe her an apology, but I would like to know what to say to get things on the track. — NOT SO TERRA FIRMA IN WHITE PLAINS

DEAR NOT SO: You have said enough already. Your comments on Harriet's ring were unkind and uncalled-for. Hope time heals the wound. I can't think of any way to clean up that one.

Taurus: Relations are complicated

Monday, April 5

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You discover "hidden assets." More persons approve of your performance — job gets done and you receive credit long overdue. News comes from a distance, involves travel opportunity and chance for greater self-expression. Watch Sagittarius!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Relationship gets "complicated." Dispute could arise concerning restriction, confinement, need for change and desire for greater security. Individual in position of authority is willing to make room for you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Study Taurus message for valuable hint. Be ready for change, travel, variety and special request by member of opposite sex. Emphasis also on security, property, safety measures and the close of a longstanding transaction. Watch Virgo!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Focus on relatives, domestic situation, messages which could result in short trip. Family member discusses expenditure designed to beautify surroundings. You win through diplomacy, not via forcing tactics.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your requirements are subject to change. Emphasis on payments, collections, insurance, special rights and permissions. Terms will be defined, but not in way originally anticipated.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): This can be your power-play day! Lunar and numerical cycles high; judgment, timing, intuition hit bull's eye. Emphasis on pressure, challenge, ability to promote product, chance to gain wider attention and increased compensation.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Fears, doubts are erased; you break losing pattern and confidence is restored. You'll have access to privileged information. More persons respond favorably to your ideas, views.

HOROSCOPE

Pot-Shots BY ASHLEIGH BRILLIANT

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You make valuable new contacts which could lead to greater independence of thought, action. Accent on friends, hopes, wishes and opportunities for successful business venture.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Follow through on hunch, first impressions tend to hit mark. Individual in position of authority helps you regain sense of direction. Emphasis on teaching, improving security and rising above "petty politics."

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Emphasis on distance, language, travel and special studies. Open lines of communication; surprise invitation is received, you'll purchase apparel as result. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius persons figure in scenario.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): It may be necessary to revise, review and rebuild on a more suitable structure. Become aware of cost factors, financial status of one who offers "unusual" contract. Dig beneath surface, reject superficial claims.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 26): Discern motives, check clues, be aware of subtle nuances. Focus on legal rights, permissions. Maintain low profile while being a keen shrewd observer. Spotlight also on partnership proposals, public relations and marital status.

IN SUSPENSE — Author Raymond Obstfeld holds his "Dead Heat," nominated as best paperback of '81 by the Mystery Writers of America.

Mystery hero put on hold

By JODI CADENHEAD
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

For Raymond Obstfeld life has been a series of mysteries.

At 30, the Costa Mesa resident is already the author of 11 books and was recently nominated for the prestigious Edgar Allan Poe Award by the Mystery Writers of America.

"I certainly don't expect to win," said the youthful looking author. "But then again I didn't think I'd be nominated."

But now the Orange Coast College instructor says he may give up his days of unsolved crime with his bungling hero Harry Gould (at least for awhile) and ride off into the sunset with a new character named Rolling Thunder who makes his living in the Wild West as a part-time judge and bare-knuckle boxer.

Never mind that Obstfeld hadn't even read a western before he submitted his first one for publication last year.

It didn't stop him 10 years ago, when as a student at an experimental college in Northern California he wrote his first mystery novel. It took five years to get "The Goulden Fleece" published by Ace/Charter, a paper back subsidary of Grosset & Dunlap.

He was asked to write three more Harry Gould novels—that year.

"It makes a lot of difference when someone is paying you money," said Obstfeld.

The nomination of his novel "Dead Heat" by the Mystery Writers of America as the best paperback of 1981 came as a surprise.

A busy and prolific writer, who spends five hours a day at the typewriter, Obstfeld said he got interested in writing westerns when he chanced upon a subscription for a western series.

He now has a contract to write his own series.

As if he doesn't have enough to keep him busy, Obstfeld just finished a novel under the name of a famous author. He will do another one this year.

His contract allegedly prevents him from divulging the name of the author who has written 38 books and was seen recently on the "Today" show.

"When the royalties come in I'll make more money than I've ever made before," said Obstfeld with a smile.

A writer's life is rarely one of riches, lamented Obstfeld. His four Gould novels netted him $10,000.

The son of two German-born delicatessen owners, Obstfeld left home at 18 against their wishes to enter the experimental college. Even then he had dreams of becoming a writer.

Explaining his keen interest in mystery, Obfsteld said, "We all seem to be involved in an adventure we don't completely understand. It's as if everyone knows more about what's going on than we do."

"There's always something that the character has to find," explained Obstfeld. "But in the end he always ends up finding out more about himself."

Recounting of battles gets sharper

ROME '44. By Raleigh Trevelyan. Viking. 366 Pages. $17.95.

BOOK REVIEW

The cruel and bloody Italian campaign of World War II, holds a special fascination. Of the scores of books on the subject, "ROME '44" provides perhaps the best and most readable overview yet, even better than Dan Kurzman's excellent "The Race to Rome" in 1975.

Sprightly writing and thorough research deserve much credit but, more important, as the years pass new classified material is made public. Major participants now are willing to disclose secrets of the past.

Thus it is possible in "ROME '44" for Raleigh Trevelyan to document the fact that twice the Allies had opportunities to cut short the campaign, cut off tens of thousands of Germans, save untold lives and shorten World War II.

In both cases bad generalship saved the Germans. He makes a persuasive case that U.S. Lt. Gen. Mark W. Clark, commander of the Anglo-American 5th Army, must bear the chief responsibility

During the winter of 1943-44, the Allied and German armies were stalemated on the Cassino front. Thousands of Allied soldiers were sacrificed against the sophisticated entrenchments of the Gustav line, hinged on Cassino.

To bypass Cassino, the Allies made a dramatic amphibious landing, far behind the Gustav line and only a few miles south of Rome.

When the Allied VI Corps stormed ashore at Anzio Jan. 22, 1944, the Germans were completely surprised. The beachhead was unprotected.

The nearest large German unit, the Hermann Goering Division, was a day's march away. Fifty thousand Americans and British landed unopposed. The road to Rome was open.

"Only a miracle could have saved us," German Col. Eugene Dollman said later. "That miracle appeared in the form of Gen. Clark."

For at Clark's suggestion, the cautious VI Corps commander, Gen. John P. Lucas, landed 50,000 men and a staggering 18,000 vehicles without opposition and ordered them to dig in BAD GENERALSHIP IN ROME? . . .

on the coastal lowlands.

The Alban Hills were a few thousand yards away, but the Allied forces were not allowed to occupy the high ground. The Allied army was a sitting target.

So surprised were the Germans that momentarily they considered a withdrawal north of Rome — until the Allies failed to move. Then the Hermann Goering Division arrived followed by a stream of reinforcements which led to a German force of 175,000 men surrounding an Allied beachhead army of 125,000 men.

A chance for the Allies to liberate half of Italy at one stroke was gone. One of the bloodiest battles of the war followed.

Fatal error No. 2 came with the Anzio breakout and the capture of Cassino. Clark was obsessed with the desire to be the liberator of Rome.

After the breakthrough, the Allied armies could have cut across with almost no opposition to the road center of Valmontone and cut off the escape route of Col. Gen. Eberhart Mackensen's retreating Germans, more than 100,000.

Field Marshal Alexander, the theater commander, ordered Clark to take Valmontone. Clark's excellent field commanders, men like Gen. Lucien K. Truscott, fully agreed. The 1st U.S. Armored Division reached the outskirts of Valmontone almost without resistance.

Then came a startling command from Clark: the U.S. forces were to turn north from Valmontone and capture Rome. They did in a blaze of publicity for Mark Clark.

This reviewer, who covered the whole period as a war correspondent, recommends "ROME '44" as the best book yet on the subject.

THE CAPRA TOUCH — Jimmy Stewart and Thomas Mitchell in a scene from "It's a Wonderful Life," the film Frank Capra calls his personal favorite.

Frank Capra . . . After 20 years, his touch current

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

HOLLYWOOD — It has been a long, long season for show business awards, but tonight brings one that is really special: "The American Film Institute Tribute to Frank Capra."

For a director who hasn't made a movie in 20 years, Capra is remarkably current. He is a hit during his frequent visits to college campuses. Film festivals throughout the world devote retrospectives to his remarkable movies. Young filmmakers speak with hushed reverence about "the Capra touch," and many try to emulate it.

A few years ago I introduced Capra to young Steven Spielberg, then riding the crest of "Jaws" and "Close Encounters of the Third Kind." Spielberg was awed. "Every time I go on location, I take a print of 'It's a Wonderful Life,'" he told Capra. 'I run it for the cast and crew and tell them, 'This is the kind of picture we're trying to make.' "

Capra was immensely pleased, since the 1946 James Stewart-Donna Reed fantasy is his particular favorite.

Stewart is the appropriate emcee for the CBS tribute, which was taped at the Beverly Hilton on March 4. Among those tossing posies to the director were Capra players Claudette Colbert, Bette Davis, Donna Reed, Peter Falk, Lionel Stander, Fay Wray and Jane Wyatt.

Also others who wished they had worked for Capra; Bob Hope, Steve Martin, Jack Lemmon, Fred MacMurray, Bette Midler, Donald Sutherland and Charlton Heston.

Miss Colbert, who won the Oscar for "It Happened One Night," observed: "Frank created the genre of the romantic comedy; I know, because I played in plenty of them."

Richard Pryor
Some Kind of Hero
The Army is doing it to him in the daytime.
His wife isn't doing it to him at night.
And his girlfriend charges him by the hour.
Richard Pryor keeps getting caught with his pants down.

Melina Mercouri . . . As Greece's culture minister, toughest role

By KERIN HOPE
Associated Press Writer

ATHENS, Greece — Actress Melina Mercouri, who gained international fame in the movie "Never on Sunday," has set aside her stage and film career to bring arts to Greek villagers, help poor but talented film directors and keep the country's ancient ruins from crumbling.

She is the culture minister in Greece's new Socialist government and works 17 hours a day at it. She calls it her most demanding role.

"There is so much to get done and we admit we don't have any experience," the 56-year-old actress told a group of reporters recently. "But we do bring a fresh approach and tremendous enthusiasm to the job."

She got the job from Premier Andreas Papandreou after his Panhellenic Socialist Movement won a landslide victory in last October's general election.

It was a major personal achievement for Ms. Mercouri, who was stripped of her Greek citizenship by a previous military government and lived in exile in Paris and New York in 1967-1974.

Civil servants in the Culture Ministry were taken aback at first by her whirlwind approach to the job.

"She turned out to be so dynamic. She's not afraid of taking decisions and she's surrounded by lively young advisers," said a ministry official who declined to be identified.

Ms. Mercouri won a record 3.5 billion drachmas ($58 million) allowance for the Culture Ministry in this year's budget to carry out her tasks.

In keeping with her usually fiery acting style, she made an impassioned personal appeal for the return of the Elgin Marbles — more than 70 pieces of classical sculpture from the Athens Acropolis shipped to London in 1810 by Lord Elgin, British ambassador to the Ottoman sultan who ruled Greece then.

"These sculptures are an integral part of the Acropolis and should definitely be returned," Ms. Mercouri said after a speaker in the House of Lords in London claimed during a debate that the sculptures were safer in the British Museum than exposed to the polluted Athens atmosphere.

She also has asked that the Venus di Milo, now in the Louvre in Paris, be brought back to Greece on loan, if not for good.

"Every villager in Greece should have the chance to see these classical Greek masterpieces," she said.

. . . Melina Mercouri

promoting artists' tours and setting up cultural centers in small towns and villages comes high on her list of priorities. It is also an important part of her party's decentralization policy.

"The arts belong to everyone and everyone should have access to them, not just an elite in Athens and Salonica," Ms. Mercouri said. "In the past cultural policy hasn't met the needs of the people. We have to make the quality of ordinary people's lives much better."

Improving libraries in Greece and introducing music education in schools are also part of her long-term plans to give less privileged Greeks a better chance of enjoying the arts.

She has also started reorganizing the government-financed cinema center to give talented local directors a free hand in quality filmmaking.

"You used to bankrupt your whole family getting the money to make a non-commercial film," Michael Kotouzis, one of the minister's advisers said. "Melina knows the problem well. There are good directors in Greece who desperately need support."

Behind the scenes, she is backed by her husband, American film director Jules Dassin, who sometimes appears at her side on official occasions but steers clear of the Culture Ministry.

After the ministry closes at lunch time, Ms. Mercouri uses her fashionable downtown apartment as an office.

"She's on the go all the time," said her private secretary, Emaela Paavlides. "She's up by 7:30 a.m., has coffee and is at her desk before 9. In the afternoons and evenings, she sees people at home."

Where archaeology is concerned Ms. Mercouri makes a point of inspecting ancient sites herself. She toured the 4,000-year-old Minoan Palace of Knossos in Crete after receiving reports the unique monument was in danger of collapse.

"It wasn't as bad as was feared," she said. "We're organizing an on-the-spot conservation team to carry out restoration work and will have to restrict tourists to special walkways in the future."

MELINA MERCOURI . , . sets aside acting for her most demanding role.

She is also pushing ahead with restoration work on the Acropolis temples and has ordered a clean up of parts of the 5th century B.C. fortification wall that once joined Athens with its port of Piraeus.

She is not neglecting her constituents in Agios Ioannis Rentis, a shabby district of Piraeus she first got to know when preparing for the movie "Never on Sunday" in the early 1960s.

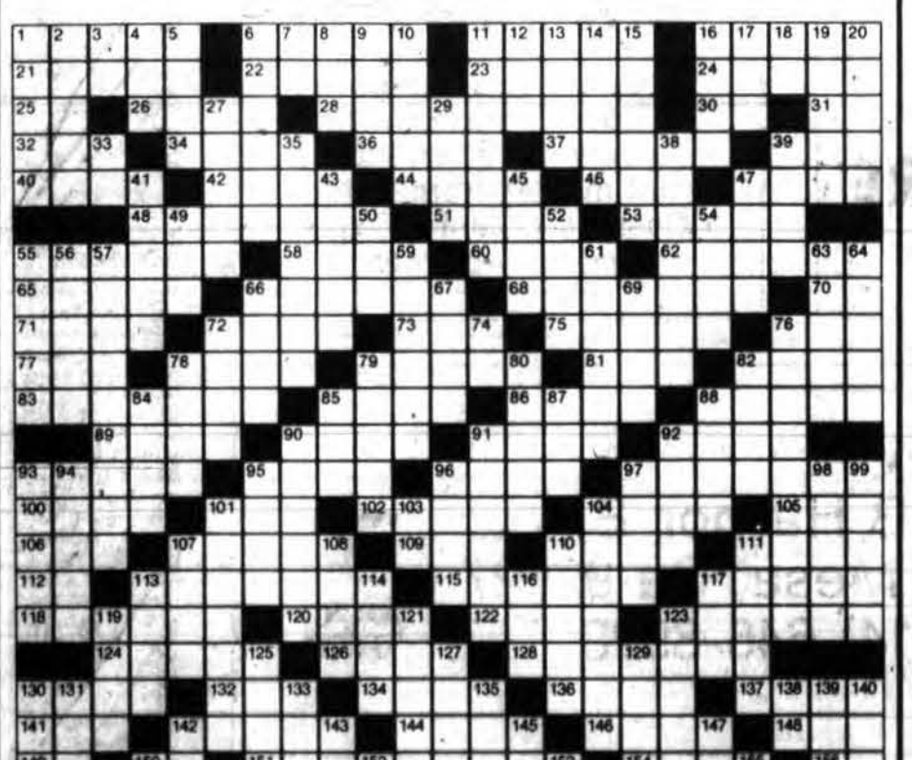

"She comes down to her office here regularly," Mayor Ioannis Grillos said.

Nor has she forgotten her commitment to feminism, the platform that took her to Parliament for the first time in the 1977 elections.

Series set on energy regulations

A three-part lecture series that looks at recently-approved Title 24 energy regulations will be offered at Orange Coast College this spring.

The series, "Title 24 Energy Regulations For Residential Buildings," will meet on successive Saturdays, beginning April 17, from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. in Room 121 of OCC's Technology Building.

The series is designed for architects, building contractors, city officials and home owner-builders.

Lecturers are Bill Abernathy, Mike Boardway and Marius Cucurny of OCC's Energy Engineering Department.

Series fee is $40. Preregistration is recommended. Tickets, if available, will be sold at the door.

For information, phone 556-5880.

Artist honored

Central Federal Savings' new office in Laguna Hills has announced that Laguna Hills artist "Speed" Raysson is the recipient of the association's "Popular Award," given in conjunction with its grand opening art show in January and February.

Raysson received the $350 award because his painting entry in the show, titled "Navajo Grin," was voted as the favorite, or most popular, by visitors to the office.

The announcement was made at an art reception hosted by Central Federal Savings for new local art exhibitors through April, C. Elmo Gillett and Arleen Huseby Gillett.

Tax for roads

MARTINEZ (AP) — Contra Costa, Alameda and Santa Clara counties are exploring the possibility of imposing a three-county gasoline tax to pay for road maintenance.

ASK OMAR

Q.—I have heard so many different opinions about opening the "better" minor suit when you play five-card majors that I am thoroughly confused. The other night I held:
♠Q953 ♡K872 ◇Q76 ♣AK
As far as I'm concerned, the club suit is infinitely better than the diamonds—it has two sure tricks when diamonds might not produce one. But we got into a horrendous contract and partner blamed me for my choice of opening bid. What's your view?—R. Johnson, Philadelphia, Pa.

(This question has been awarded the weekly prize.)

A.—You don't give me enough information to judge with any degree of wisdom. I don't know your partner's hand, how the auction developed or even what the final contract was, so it is impossible for me to tell whether the opening bid or the subsequent auction was the cause of your debacle. One thing is sure, though—you opened the bidding in the wrong minor suit!

This is not just a problem that faces those who play five-card majors. The same difficulty arises when you play four-card majors and choose to open with a convenient minor because of a rebid problem or because your major suit is not biddable.

First, to say that you have to open your better minor is slightly inaccurate. It is more correct to say that you should open your longer minor. Thus, on the hand you submitted, you should have opened the bidding with one diamond. However, I cannot say whether that, in itself, would have avoided disaster.

Consider these two hands:
a) ♠K985 ♡QJ ◇9874 ♣AKJ
b) ♠K985 ♡AJ7 ◇AK8 ♣Q62

If you were to open your "better" minor, you would probably choose one club with hand a) and certainly one diamond with hand b). However the correct opening bids are one diamond with hand a) and one club with hand b), following the principle of the longer minor. True, hand b) has equal length in clubs and diamonds, but you should try to avoid opening a three-card diamond suit if there is any other reasonable option available.

Q.—Please give me your opinion of the following hand:
♠AQJ32 ♡AQ ◇KJ7 ♣AJ9

Would you open the bidding with one spade or two spades?—R. Barber, New Haven, Conn.

A.—Neither. With 22 points in high cards and a balanced hand, I would open two no trump. The fact that I have a five-card major is no bar to an opening bid of two no trump. In all other respects the hand is an admirable two no trump opening. It has tenaces, which means that the hand should be led up to, rather than through, and stoppers in all suits.

Families sought for hosts

The Japan America High School Council, a private, non-profit organization, is seeking host families for selected Japanese high school students.

The students, 15-18, will attend local high schools for the 1982-83 term. One aspect of their education while here is participation in the life of an American family.

Students chosen for the program are screened on the basis of motivation, maturity, English proficiency and interest in American culture.

While living here, their host families are provided a $100 monthly allowance for expenses. Students provide for their personal purchases, transportation, and medical expenses with funds supplied by their parents.

Applications are being accepted. Contact Steve or Alice Goodson, 6878 N. Laureen, Fresno, 93710, or call (209) 298-3512.

Few took rocker Joan Jett seriously — until she hit No.1

AP Newsfeatures Writer

Joan Jett is eating in a Japanese restaurant, answering interview questions while manipulating chopsticks, when her manager, Kenny Laguna, comes in to tell her that her single, "I Love Rock 'n' Roll," has gone to No. 1 in the singles chart in Record World Magazine. It's her first No. 1 record.

"I'm totally stunned. I don't even realize it yet," she says. She brings it out to think about again several times during the interview, like a new and immediately prized gift.

At one point she says, "No. 1 in the country! It blows me away to think. Me! Do you realize who I was going up against — the J. Geils Band, Stevie Wonder, Journey."

And later, in a tone of wonderment, she says, "To see your record go No. 1 in the country. You're looking at a map that is so big! Top 40 is amazing."

Miss Jett and Laguna recall the turndowns she got before Neil Bogart signed her to Boardwalk and put out the "I Love Rock 'n' Roll" LP by Joan Jett and the Blackhearts.

She says, "in a certain way I've gotten a little bit of the last laugh. Epic Records told me due to their high standards they were unable to sign a person with a voice like mine. I was bitter."

Laguna says, "Atlantic said she didn't have the class to be on the label. People keep telling us not to burn our bridges, but we never had any bridge.

"RCA said radio wouldn't play this record. And they all passed on her hit song, 'I Love Rock 'n' Roll" with her singing it. It was the first song on the tape we sent around."

Reviewer Ton Lucia, writing in Reading, Pa., said about a live performance, "I haven't heard a band play traditional Chuck Berry style 12-bar rock 'n' roll with such spirit and religious intensity in years."

Miss Jett, 23, grew up in Rockville, Md. Her father's insurance employer transferred him to Southern California in 1975. She had listened to early 1970s British glitter rock music and started going to Hollywood from the family's suburban home to listen to live music, wanting to get into the business.

"My family has been behind me," she says. "I knew how worried they were. I was very determined. They said to me to do what I wanted to do, and they hoped I was doing the right thing. Now, my record is as much of a thrill and shock to them as to me."

Miss Jett got into an all-girl band, the Runaways, which Mercury signed in 1977, putting out the first of five albums. Kim Fowley is now credited or blamed for giving the group its image of tough teenage sex tigers, below-age temptors of men.

Their biggest acclaim was in Japan. "We had 2,000 kids meet us at the airport. I got my hair ripped and clothes torn. We'd had people jump on stage during a concert but that was the first time I knew what it felt like to be a mini-Beatle. I think an all-girl band playing sweaty rock 'n' roll was really revolutionary for them."

In America, the Runaways weren't so popular. "I think it was because of our jailbait image," Miss Jett says. "Nobody was going to take us seriously.

"In January 1979 we had a meeting. It was time to pack it in. It was very depressing."

Miss Jett cut three sides for singles with two musicians who had been in the Sex Pistols. She made essentially a solo album, "Joan Jett," for Ariola in Germany.

It came out on a record label Miss Jett and Laguna started in America, Blackheart, after turndowns from major U.S. labels. Boardwalk reissued it as "Bad Reputation" in 1981.

Laguna says, "All she wanted to do was run a road show. All I wanted to do was dump the responsibility. But I knew she'd get more money on the road if she had a record out. We didn't have a distributor. We sold them out of the back of a car."

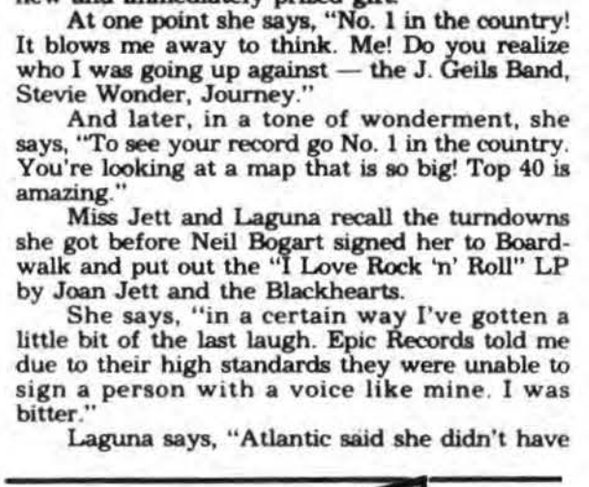

But Laguna didn't dump the responsibility. Neither a manager or a man for causes before, he says that Joan Jett's making a success became a cause to him.

Miss Jett says, "I feel like I've paid a lot of dues. I don't feel like this is luck. I do really feel like I deserve it. I did work hard and take a lot of abuse. It took very much determination."

Kennybunkport?
Isn't that the boat that won The America's Cup in '75?
NO
If you're not sure who (or what) Kennybunkport was, don't feel bad—you're not alone.
Kennybunkport is one of 14 distinctively different apartment floorplans at Seawind Village in Huntington Beach. Seawind Village is a result of totally personalized professional planning.
The kind of attention you deserve.
• A perfect blend of nature and living—nestled in a forest with babbling brooks and quiet ponds, cooled by natural ocean breezes. Add to that tennis courts, swimming pools, a jacuzzi and a convenient location near shopping and employment and you've got a place anyone would proudly call home. (Even Kennybunkport!)
One and two bedroom, one and two bath apartments from $515.00
Seawind Village in Huntington Village
15555 Huntington Village Lane Huntington Beach, CA

FAMILY WEEKLY

The New F.B.I.

An Exclusive Interview With Director William H. Webster

The Rites and Wrongs Of Spring

How to Win Big In Small Claims Court

By Judge James E. Morris

Lotsa Pasta

Justice for all women lawyers.

ASK THEM YOURSELF

Send the question, on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

Daniel: No Miss-nomer for her.

FOR PRISCILLA RUTH MACDOUGALL, attorney in Madison, Wis.

Do you find that people seeking legal advice feel comfortable with female attorneys? —E.T., Racine, Wis.

● Because men are associated with power and authority in this society, both women and men assume that male attorneys will be more effective in the courts and with other lawyers. In areas traditionally associated with female attorneys, such as family law, it may be that women prefer to be represented by women, although family-law practitioners disagree on this point. In large cities, however, where women attorneys are numerous, the prejudices diminish. That has happened in Madison. In 1970 there were only 150 licensed female attorneys in Wisconsin. Now there are more than that in Madison alone.

FOR DON ETHAN MILLER, author of The Book of Jargon (Macmillan)

How does jargon differ from slang? —J.M., Bend, Ore.

● Jargon is the specialized vocabulary of a specific profession or subculture. Doctors, mechanics, musicians, dancers, computer programmers all have their own jargon. Slang, on the other hand, is the colorful variant of any language, used in colloquial verbal expression — but rarely in official or written form.

FOR KATE JACKSON, star of Making Love

You've done movies and TV — which do you prefer? —F.K., Decatur, Ala.

● Movies. On a series it's a 12-hour day, five days a week. It's one show right after the other; rare are the days off. It amazes me to see Charlie's Angels and think of how much work went into an episode. Even if we were tired, we still had to appear full of spirit. Now when I watch, it looks so effortless.

Richard Avedon

FOR PLACIDO DOMINGO, opera star

Do you think you could make a record the way singers did in Caruso's time? —N.T., Danbury, Conn.

● I'd like to try doing it the way he did. I understand that the equipment still exists. I'd like to see how Caruso did it, without splicing or dubbing. I think that method was better for the voice than today's methods with digital sound. Also, recording in stereo is good for the orchestra, but bad for the singer.

FROM THE "ASK" EDITOR

RAMBLINGS: Still steamed up over President Reagan's remark about Oh! Calcutta! — "I liked it better when the actors kept their clothes on" — is Norman Kean, producer of Broadway's clothesless musical. Fumes Kean: "More than 70 million have seen our show since it opened in 1969 — this outnumbers those who voted for Reagan for President." . . . Margaret Truman Daniel, daughter of our 33rd President, gives the biggest smiles to those who call her Mrs. Daniel rather than Miss Truman . . . . When Henry Mancini saw the artwork for Henry Mancini Plays Your All-Time Favorites, his new five-record album, he had a most unusual complaint — that the artist was too generous: "You gave me too much hair, my baton is too long," he quipped. . . . Newlywed Dorothy Hamill has, according to a knowledgeable waiter who served her and new hubby Dino Martin, a diamond ring "larger than Liz Taylor ever wore!" . . . WEATHER REPORT: Hollywood beautician George Caroll was closing up shop when the heavens opened, and within minutes a crowd of furious wet-haired women invaded the salon. No one had alerted these hatless glamour gals, en route to a big bash in the San Fernando Valley, to the possibility of rain. One woman, who had shelled out $50 for her coif, muttered she would assassinate the weatherman . . . . Meteorologist Willard Scott of the Today Show, on the other hand, has to deal with reverse accusations. Since he began telling what the heavens have in store, restaurateurs have treated him coolly. When he announces that a travelers' advisory is in effect, people stay home. "But weather doesn't stop me," Willard assures. Fact is, he has a positive approach: "I never say partly cloudy. I say partly sunny." . . . INTERNATIONAL ITEMS: Hopes that Saudi Arabian women would be allowed to drive were dashed when a Government official informed: "It would mean they'd have to take off their veils, be alone with strangers, run the risk of breaking down and falling into incalculable sins." . . . Hundreds of souvenirs, from a $2,000 gold watch to 20-cent balloons, are being readied for the Pope's May visit to London. Most unusual of all the items approved by church officials is a set of six beer mugs.

PRO AND CON

Should the U.S. Revive the Military Draft?

PRO Representative Charles Wilson (D.-Tex.), member, Appropriations Committee

Thanks to the all-volunteer force, military manpower is the weakest link in our national defense. The plain truth is that we simply don't have the quantity or the quality of volunteers in the armed services to meet our defense needs. There have been great lags in recruiting for both active and reserve units. We now have an Armed Forces with substandard education, heavy racial imbalance and a dropout rate double that of the draft era.

Send questions of national significance, on a postcard, to "Pro & Con," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $10 for those published.

CON Representative Les Aspin (D.-Wis.), member, Armed Services Committee

The draft is unfair and unnecessary. We would only take a handful of draftees at best, because even in the worst recruiting year — the services never missed their goals by even 2 percent. In fact, the services are growing larger today under the volunteer system. As for allegations about "dumb" recruits, they just aren't true. Last year, for example, the services took in more high-school graduates than in any year under the draft.

Woodfin Camp & Associates

Webster at the F.B.I. laboratories: "We are doing our work effectively and within the requirements of the law."

THE

By Ernest Volkman

The 1970's were not a good time for the F.B.I. In the wake of Watergate, it was revealed that the F.B.I. — the chief Federal law-enforcement organization — had itself broken the law, engaging in a series of illegal domestic spying operations. These included illegal break-ins and harassment of dissident political groups.

After the death of Director J. Edgar Hoover in 1972, there were further revelations about his dictatorial control and "dirty tricks" by the F.B.I. Two successors to Hoover, L. Patrick Gray 3d and Clarence Kelley, seemed to spend much of their time defending the Bureau against the latest disclosures.

When Jimmy Carter was elected President, he appointed William H. Webster, a prominent Federal judge, as the new F.B.I. Director. Webster set about quietly to improve the Bureau's image, and now, more than five years later, the F.B.I. is enjoying something of a revival in its prestige. Not that the F.B.I. is entirely free from controversy: Its Abscam investigations, despite a long string of convictions, still arouse debate over whether such undercover operations constitute entrapment. But the Bureau today is very different than it was under Hoover.

Clearly the F.B.I. is now entering one of its most challenging periods: It faces an apparent upsurge in domestic terrorism, rampant drug trafficking and renewed espionage efforts in this country by the Soviet Union and Soviet-bloc countries. In an exclusive interview with FAMILY WEEKLY, Director Webster discussed these challenges and how the F.B.I. plans to confront them.

Q: In the mid-70's, particularly, there was considerable publicity about some of the Bureau's domestic intelligence efforts. Are you satisfied at this point that the Bureau is as it should be, that everything is strictly legal?

A: I certainly am. One of the difficulties that the Bureau encountered in those days was not an inability to follow the rules but the absence of any guidelines as to what was expected of the F.B.I. in those very turbulent times. Even the President of the United States assumed that he had authority to order the F.B.I. to do certain things that the courts later held he did not have. As all of that has been clarified, the Bureau has developed internally and through the Attorney General's guidelines, methods and procedures to insure that we are doing our work effectively and at the same time within the requirements of the rule of law. There's more than just writing rules. There's the sense of commitment. Every new agent that comes on board receives 60 hours of legal instruction. And every special agent in the field gets an additional 16 hours of instruction from his principal legal adviser, who is a lawyer-agent, assigned to each of the 59 field offices for just that purpose. In addition, they're there to give ongoing advice.

Q: Still, there is concern in some quarters that the problem of domestic terrorism can lead to a repetition of some past abuses.

A: Well, we try to minimize the risk that something [a terrorist incident] will happen before we know about it. But those concerns really reflect an inadequate understanding of the way a terrorist group functions. Most of these groups are small, cellular, very difficult to penetrate, and we rely primarily upon informant information; in some cases, in ongoing operations, we've been successful in using undercover agents inside the organizations. But one has to assume that the F.B.I. has enough agents to put in each of these small groups around the country — which we don't, which we wouldn't want to do.

As for the Brinks case, I have to limit myself in what I can say because those cases are still going through the courts. But the Brinks robbery really surfaced a group of individuals associated with old radical causes, engaging in a single, violent activity. What was interesting about it was the association of individuals who had belonged to organizations that were not known to have ever functioned together. We have, by means of both utilization of our terrorist program and our bank-robbery program, with the help of local law-enforcement authorities, rounded up almost all of those who were associated with that particular exercise.

NEW F.B.I.

An Exclusive Interview With Director William H. Webster

I think it would be natural for people involved, who followed those turbulent times, to assume that the Weather Underground was on the move again. We see absolutely no evidence that the Weather Underground, as such, is a viable organization. What appears to be here is the continued activity of violence-prone persons who have been associated with the Weather Underground. We've seen in Europe and other places that as old, violent organizations dwindle in size, they reach out for other groups to help sustain the cost of underground activities.

Q: You don't see any so-called resurgence in terrorist activities?

A: Well, not on the basis of the Brinks robbery. And I don't want to be put in the position of forecasting what economic changes might produce in the country, but at the present time, the number of incidences of domestic violence is well under control. We continue to watch for these, but our major concern is the number of organizations with international and foreign connections that are engaging in violent activity in the United States. There are still groups around that would advocate the violent overthrow of the Government.

Q: What about charges that domestic radicals are being controlled or influenced by foreign powers?

A: Well, these old domestic terrorist groups really don't lend themselves to being manipulated by foreign groups. They're unmanageable. We're not in a position to talk about the extent to which those groups may be receiving some kind of financial or material assistance directly or indirectly from countries unfriendly to the United States. But even those who look for the connection think it's a comic-book concept to see the K.G.B. running these groups. They don't and they can't. They don't have to. As long as the groups are capable of creating problems, there's no need.

Sometimes in these discussions about what's at the root of it, I think it's reasonable for a person to say, "Well, if the Cubans are involved, then the Russians are involved." But we look at it exactly in terms of what we're able to demonstrate.

Q: Recently you were quoted as saying that the alleged Libyan hit teams supposedly sent over to this country by Muammar Qaddafi did not exist.

A: I didn't go that far, I think. I said, "We have never confirmed . . . ." We were talking about where did all this publicity come from? And I said, "We've never confirmed it, nor have we issued any kind of denial." We're just trying to do our work. I think it's rather inappropriate for the F.B.I. to be announcing that something's on and something's off.

Q: You mentioned the case of the K.G.B. and domestic terrorism. But the K.G.B. is also supposed to be making an espionage effort in this country. Is that true?

A: Well, I don't think it's a sudden shift in policy. I just think it's an intensified buildup in the effort of the Soviet Union and Soviet-bloc countries to acquire more and more of our high technology. We're improving our ability to detect it, so there's always the age-old argument, "Are you accurately reporting it or are more people telling you about it?" But they have far more people engaged in this activity than we have anywhere in the world. We're outmanned in terms of men under arms and equipment.

The one thing that we do have, at least for the time being, is technological superiority over most of our competitors. It really is time for American businessmen as well as Government officials and anyone who is in possession of classified information — there are thousands who are — anyone who has highly developed proprietary information of his own and goes into the high technology capability of this country . . . all these people need to be more sensitive to the types of efforts [to gain information] which are very subtle, sometimes not so subtle. We have to protect our research.

Q: But isn't it true that so much of this stuff is available in our own open literature?

A: No question about that. And I think in our society that's part of the payoff for being unclassified and for the things that people are willing to share and put in libraries. You could build an atom bomb from what you can find in the library if you know how to carry out instructions.

Where we really have not done an adequate job as far as our citizens are concerned is in making them aware of the voraciousness of the Soviet appetite in all these areas. There is sometimes a failure to recognize recruitment effort when it's being made. We're focusing hard on this in the Silicon Valley area in California because there's so much there and the recruitment effort has been quite high.

We have found over the years that most of the secrets that are given up by employees of corporations — and to some extent this is true of people in sensitive Government positions — have not been given up for ideological reasons, but for money, by carelessness, loose talk.

Q: On the question of Abscam-type investigations: There is a continuing uneasiness surrounding such investigations. Is there any way, really, of getting at this type of crime without an Abscam-type of undercover operation?

A: In those cases what we usually start with is a large smell. For example, the docking case on the West Coast. Everybody — the shippers, the warehousemen — was paying off labor-union officials. Everybody knew that. The smell was there. How are you going to prove it when you have no people ready to come up and tell you about it? In another case, we did have one businessman who, for a variety of reasons, decided to tell us how it worked. When we knew how it worked, the way to prove it was to set up our own operation, to do business with these people, to be extorted, to see whether they were going to accept bribes and to follow the pattern and develop the evidence. And in that way we gained a case.

In some cases we use undercover agents who can function and give direct testimony; in other cases we have to rely on the informant. Then in addition to that we have the vehicle of more sensitive techniques — the court-authorized microphone or court-authorized wiretap. And in those cases we need the probable cause to get those things in place. When we do have them in place, we have very convincing evidence.

So I'm giving you a kind of long-winded answer to a very reasonable question. But in those so-called victimless crimes, we must have the ability to use sensitive techniques. They are more intrusive, but they can be managed so that third parties and others are not going to be adversely affected by it. The law of entrapment protects those who are not predisposed to engage in these activities. It's kind of funny, just a footnote, that in Abscam only about half of the defendants ever raised the entrapment issue. When we look back on some of those situations, we see that nobody reported it, nobody turned the money in.

THE NEW F.B.I.

Q: Still, there are some disturbing problems, aren't there, in these kinds of cases?

A: We won't always succeed; we'll have some losses. But what we do do is try to control the activities to protect the rights of citizens. Even since the beginning of the Abscam case we've substantially strengthened our procedures. Every undercover project has to go through the field office and have the approval of the special agent in charge. It comes back here, it's reviewed at the program level or at my desk. And it finally reaches the undercover review committee. The undercover review committee is composed of people from the investigative and technical side, the administrative side and our legal counsel division. And we have three representatives from the Department of Justice who sit in on those committees at an early stage. They review it for its worthiness, for the procedures, whether the procedures are necessary to do the job, whether it's lawful. And we often lay down specific requirements for that particular operation. I've participated in a number of those and I've sent some back. I'm worried about third parties getting hurt by this.

Q: There also has been renewed emphasis on organized-crime cases, correct?

A: We're having successes in our approaches to this work now. One of the techniques being used is the same technique people are criticizing — or some people have criticized — in Abscam, being used effectively in organized crime. It's much more difficult and hazardous. Every time you put an undercover agent in an organized-crime group or a terrorist group you're exposing the agent to a lot of risk. But wiretaps, computerization of the Bureau, and our ability to maintain a very sophisticated, on-line, organized-crime information system — now functioning in 21 cities — permits us to stop worrying about what they eat and who they sleep with and follow what they're doing.

And the focus that I have stressed at the Bureau is to get up off the streets, reaching beyond the streets into the upper echelons. Just knocking off street soldiers doesn't do anything to the organization itself. And as a result of this kind of an effort, where staying power is emphasized, we stay on rather than make quick little arrests, until we get the evidence on more important people. The last 18 months I think are clearly, way out, far and above the best years we've ever had in the history of the Bureau. The top four people in the Los Angeles organized-crime family have been convicted...the conviction of Joseph Bonnano — 30 years of effort. The conviction of Nick Cavella in Kansas City, the head of the Kansas City operation; the conviction of Frank Tieri, the Genovese family; the Contesta group under indictment, Santos Trafficante in Florida. Two convictions of Carlos Marcello. No one ever thought that would be achieved. FW

When Marriage Gets to Be a Pain

The onset of vague aches and pains in middle age may be a sign of marital boredom, says Harvard psychiatrist William Appleton. An uninteresting marriage may also cause insomnia, fatigue, depression and similar complaints for which there is no apparent physiological basis.

According to Appleton, marital boredom is most likely to occur when the husband and wife are between the ages of 30 and 40, the decade in which often a man and woman are wrapped up in separate pursuits, each advancing in his or her own career. Such a couple may find they have grown apart, and are unable to become interesting to each other again.

To get through this often difficult time, Appleton suggests keeping communication as open as possible and not expecting your spouse to meet all your emotional needs.

Engendering Curiosity

Do most mothers want to know the sex of their unborn child or do they want a surprise? Amniocentesis, a technique for analyzing an unborn child's cells, is now making such knowledge available. And according to a report in the Los Angeles Times, statistics compiled by the genetic researchers at U.C.L.A.'s Medical Center show that only one of every 10 mothers does not want to be told what her baby's gender is. Those who do want to know give reasons ranging from "It gives me a head start on my relationship with the child" to "Now I know what to buy for the baby."

Dead Giveaways

For his birthday, a man gets a bright red sport coat from his fiancée, despite the fact that he's repeatedly refused to wear that color. A woman's Christmas present from her husband is a microwave oven, even though he knew she wanted a negligee.

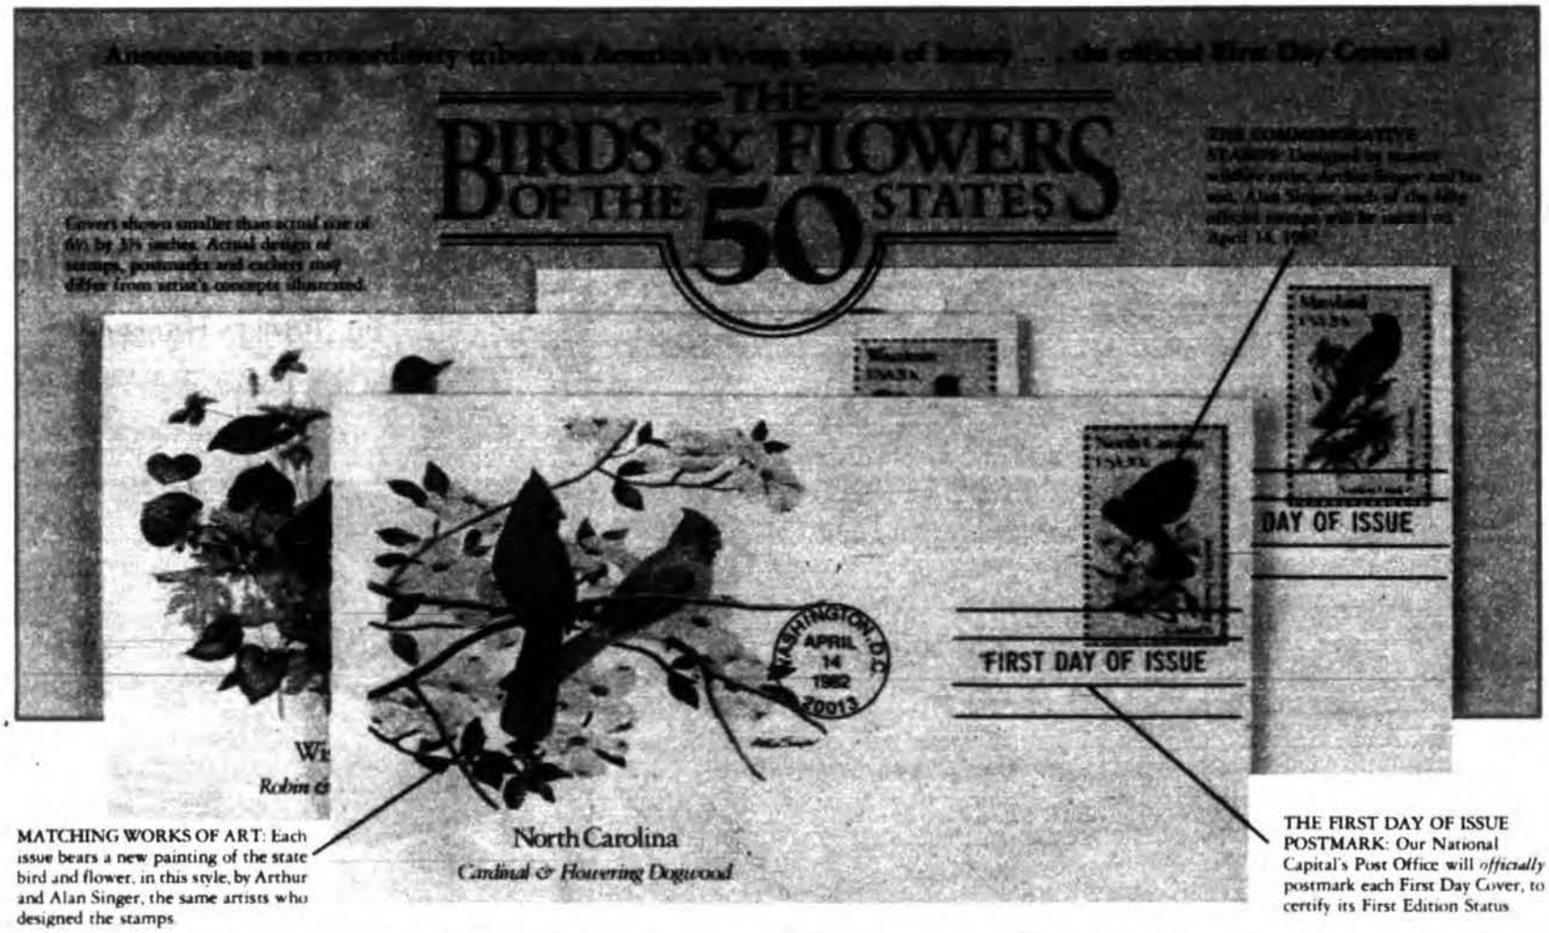

The gifts men and women give to one another can carry important and not always pleasant hidden messages, psychologists note. For example, a person whose presents are consistently inappropriate may be indicating buried hostility. A reluctant gift-giver may unconsciously seek to make the recipient feel guilty for putting the giver to the trouble and expense of buying the present. Conversely, the lavish present is sometimes a way for one person to try to dominate the relationship. And the person who insists on exchanging gifts of equal value is actually using that technique to deny the possibility of unequal feelings in a relationship.

The thoughtful gift, on the other hand, says Washington, D.C., counselor Michael Abrahams, reflects awareness of the recipient's taste, honestly expresses the giver's feelings and conveys the idea that the person getting the gift is someone "special."

Update on Children and TV

While some experts have suggested that television violence may make young people more likely to commit violent acts, communications specialist George Gerbner has a slightly different view of the subject. Research by Gerbner, who is dean of the School of Communications at the University of Pennsylvania, found that witnessing TV mayhem leads not so much to aggressiveness as to anxiety and insecurity. Youngsters who watch a lot of television violence, Gerbner notes, tend to see the world "as a mean, cruel place."

John Murray, of California's Boys Town Center for the Study of Youth, has a more optimistic vision of TV. He reports that preschool-age children who repeatedly watch programs that stress humane and altruistic themes show signs of increasingly constructive behavior. But more subtle positive values — sharing, cooperation and empathy — show no increase. Murray thinks it is because these, unlike violence, cannot be shown on TV in dramatic ways. FW

The Complete First Edition Collection of surely the most beautiful — and important — U.S. stamp issue in history . . . including both stamps and First Day Covers designed by America's premier wildlife artist and his talented son.

Subscription Deadline: April 14, 1982
Original Issue Price: $1.95 per Cover

From sea to shining sea, America is blessed with an abundance of beautiful birds and flowers. Americans know it, and are proud of it. And with each new song a bird sings, and each new flower that blossoms, that pride is renewed and strengthened.

To forever affirm this pride and respect for the natural environment, each of the fifty states has chosen an official state bird and flower as recognition of nature's bounty . . . and an everlasting part of America the Beautiful.

It is appropriate, therefore, that The Birds & Flowers of the 50 States is soon to be the subject of what is surely the most beautiful — and important — series of U.S. postage stamps in our nation's history. For, on April 14, 1982, the U.S. Postal Service will issue fifty different official commemorative stamps, to honor these living symbols of our great nation.

Exquisite stamps by America's greatest wildlife artist and his son

Significantly, each stamp in this important series is a triumph in craftsmanship by a man who is often called America's greatest living wildlife artist, Arthur Singer, and his gifted son, Alan. For over two years, the Singers labored together to achieve the perfection and absolute fidelity to nature this tribute deserves. Thus, as leading citizens gather in our Nation's Capital on April 14, they will participate in the inauguration of a stamp series without parallel.

At these special ceremonies, First Editions of the new stamps . . . First Day Covers . . . will be officially certified by the coveted, one-day-only, First Day of Issue postmark of our National Capital's Post Office. These will be but a small fraction of the total number of stamps eventually printed and available to the general public.

Appropriately, Fleetwood, America's oldest purveyor of First Day Covers, will issue The Birds & Flowers of the 50 States in one complete collection of fifty official First Day Covers, each bearing a coveted First Edition stamp and postmark.

Matching works of art by the designers of the stamps

In addition, and of special importance to knowledgeable collectors, each of these official First Day Covers will bear a matching new work of art to enhance each stamp — created through the combined efforts of the designers of the stamps themselves, Arthur Singer and his son, Alan Singer. Only rarely do First Day Covers of America's stamps bear such art by the actual designers of the stamps. Thus, the First Day Covers available through Fleetwood are very desirable indeed.

Each subscriber will receive, without additional cost, a luxurious collector's album to protect and display the First Day Covers. In addition, complete information about each state bird and flower will be printed on the back of each Cover.

For Arthur and Alan Singer have painstakingly recreated colorful, authentic stamps and cachets which perfectly complement one another . . . from the flame-red plumage of Ohio's Cardinal to the soft pink, sweetly-scented Mayflowers of Massachusetts. This landmark collection will be acclaimed by collectors and nature lovers from each and every state.

A single, Limited Edition

The Birds & Flowers of the 50 States will be issued only once . . . and only as a complete collection. The distinctive postmark will certify to you that it can never be issued again. The original issue price for the collection is $1.95 per Cover.

To reserve your collection, simply enclose a modest $10 deposit with your application, and you will be billed in five monthly installments of $17.50 each.

Subscription Deadline: April 14

Do take advantage of your opportunity to acquire this important collection by postmarking your order no later than April 14, 1982 . . . the First Day of Issue of the new stamps, and the last date on which Fleetwood can guarantee acceptance of your order. Mail your application today to: Fleetwood, One Unicover Center, Cheyenne, Wyoming 82008-0001.

Pasta

For Meals to Please Busy Families

By Marilyn Hansen

Bart J. Davito Photography

Sarah Powers prepares to serve one of her family's favorite dishes: Vermicelli With Spinach Pesto Sauce.

In England around the time of the American Revolution, macaroni meant a fashionable person. Today, macaroni — or "pasta" — means versatility, nutrition and good eating.

The word pasta comes from the Italian word for paste, which is the dough's consistency before it's shaped. It's made of semolina or durum-wheat flour mixed with water, and is then kneaded, shaped, rolled or cut.

Not all Americans crave the same kind of pasta. Midwesterners prefer elbow-shaped pasta; Southerners relish tubular shapes, such as rigatoni. Across the country, dozens of shapes and sizes of pasta are sold. And some aficionados are making their own.

But pasta's popularity really evolved because of its convenience. Although some stores sell freshly made pasta, for most of us it's simpler and more economical to buy a box of pasta at our local market and cook up a big potful. The James Powers family of Weston, Conn. has discovered that pasta makes a great start for many inventive meals. Mrs. Patty Powers says, "If you keep basic things in the house, such as three or four kinds of pasta, a selection of cheeses and spinach, onions, garlic, herbs and stock, you can make most anything."

The family, which includes six children, agrees wholeheartedly that vegetables especially are appetizing when served as part of a stir-fry pasta dish.

Pasta also fits in with the U.S. Dietary Guidelines that recommend we eat adequate amounts of starch and fiber. There's appetite appeal and good nutrition in these recipes from Patty and Jim's collection.

CHICKEN, ZUCCHINI AND RED PEPPER STIR-FRY

4 large chicken breasts, split, skinned and boned
2 cloves garlic
4 small zucchini (about 2 lbs.)
2 medium red peppers, cored and seeded
1 bunch scallions including stems, cut into thirds
1 can (8 oz.) water chestnuts, drained
½ lb. medium-size mushrooms
5 tablespoons vegetable oil
¼ cup bottled oyster sauce*
1 tablespoon soy sauce
½ teaspoon sesame oil
½ teaspoon salt
Linguine Pancake, recipe follows

1. Cut away tendon and any excess fat from chicken breasts. Place on foil-lined cookie sheet. Place in freezer just until chicken firms up for easier slicing. Do not freeze solid.

2. Meanwhile, insert metal chopping blade in mixer bowl of food processor. Process garlic (or chop fine with French knife). Remove chopping blade and insert slicing blade. Place zucchini in feed tube vertically and process (or cut in slices with knife). Turn garlic and zucchini into a bowl; set aside.

3. Insert red pepper in feed tube vertically. Process (or slice into ⅛-inch slices with knife). Insert scallions vertically. Process (or slice by hand). Process water chestnuts (or slice by knife). Put mushrooms on their sides in feed tube. Process (or, cut lengthwise into thirds). Set aside in bowl.

4. To process chicken using slicing blade, wedge chicken into feed tube so slicing disk will cut against grain (or cut by sharp knife into ¼-inch-thick slices).

5. Heat 2 tablespoons of the oil in large wok. Stir-fry chicken, one half at a time, using more oil if needed, over high heat; remove to bowl.

6. Add any remaining oil to wok with garlic and zucchini. Stir-fry 2 minutes. Add chicken along with red pepper-mushroom mixture, oyster sauce, soy sauce, sesame oil and salt if desired. Stir-fry 4 to 5 seconds or until heated through. Serve with Linguine Pancake.

Makes 6 to 8 servings

*Oriental-style oyster sauce, available in gourmet section of supermarket or fine-food specialty shop.

Oriental-style sesame oil.

LINGUINE PANCAKE

12 oz. linguine
1 tablespoon salt
4 qts. boiling water
2 tablespoons sesame oil*
2 tablespoons vegetable oil

1. Gradually add linguine and salt to rapidly boiling water so that water continues to boil. Cook uncovered, stirring occasionally, until just tender. Drain in colander. Place in bowl and toss with sesame oil.

2. While linguine is cooking, preheat oven to 500°F. Place a 15½ x 10½ x 1-inch jelly-roll pan or 15-inch diameter pizza pan on bottom rack for 10 minutes.

3. When pan is very hot, remove from oven and add the vegetable oil. Tilt pan to coat bottom and sides evenly. Spread linguine evenly in pan using two forks. Return to oven.

4. Bake, uncovered, 20 to 25 minutes or until golden brown on top and bottom. Cover with foil during last few minutes if linguine browns too much. With scissors, cut into 6 or 8 portions and serve with chicken stir-fry. Makes 6 to 8 servings

*Oriental-style sesame oil.

PASTA PRIMAVERA

2 cups fresh broccoli flowerets
2 tablespoons olive or vegetable oil
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
2 medium onions, chopped
2 large cloves garlic, chopped
½ lb. mushrooms
2 cups snow peas (¼ lb.)
1 cup sliced zucchini
1 cup cubed red pepper
1 cup small peas
2 ripe tomatoes, peeled and diced
½ cup chopped parsley
1 teaspoon dried basil leaves
½ teaspoon crushed red pepper flakes
1 cup chicken broth
1 cup heavy cream or half-and-half
½ cup unsalted butter
16 ozs. vermicelli
2 tablespoons salt
4 to 6 qts. boiling water
½ cup freshly grated Parmesan cheese

1. Drop broccoli into boiling water for 3 to 4 minutes; drain. Chill in cold water; set aside.

2. In large wok or skillet, heat oil and 2 tablespoons butter. Add onion, garlic and mushrooms. Sauté 2 to 3 minutes. Add remaining vegetables except tomatoes. Heat through, then add tomatoes, parsley, basil and red pepper.

3. Meanwhile, in a medium saucepan, bring the chicken broth, cream and butter to boil, reduce heat. Simmer 1 to 2 minutes or until it begins to thicken.

4. Gradually add vermicelli and salt to rapidly boiling water so that water continues to boil. Cook uncovered, stirring occasionally, until tender. Drain in colander. Place in large bowl. Pour cream mixture over and toss. Serve vegetables in well in center. Sprinkle with cheese. Pass additional cheese at table if desired.

Makes 6 to 8 servings

Build a unique collection of porcelain plates capturing the wonders of childhood ...for just $14.95 a plate.

Twelve collector's plates bearing original works of art created exclusively for this series. Each plate hand-decorated with 18 karat gold.

Please mail by April 30, 1982.
Limit: One collection per person.

You have the unusual opportunity to build a porcelain plate collection that is original—charming—and very fairly priced too. A collection of exceptionally beautiful plates that portray the exuberance and joy of young children discovering the miracle of nature.

These collector's plates are not only fun to own—but are works you'll want to display in your home and treasure as a family heirloom. For each plate has the quality and feeling of a lovely oil painting that has been translated into fine porcelain.

Created by a highly talented artist

The twelve plates that comprise the collection all bear original works of art created exclusively for this collection by the noted American artist Max Altekruse. His paintings have been exhibited widely and have won many awards.

In this unique series, each work is set in a different month of the year. In January, a young boy and girl build a snowman. In February, two children learn to skate on a frozen pond. In March, the youngsters water bright yellow daffodils. And so on all through the year ... until December, when they're bringing home a big new Christmas tree.

Each plate is a gem. Because the artist has a keen insight into the wonders of childhood—and the ability to translate what he sees and feels into captivating works of art.

Works of beauty to display in your home

The plates measure 7¼ inches in diameter, and the design covers the entire surface of the plate. Moreover, no fewer than 14 ceramic colors will be used in the creation of each plate. And the plates will be fired at 1350 degrees F to assure the accuracy of the colors.

As an extra touch of beauty, the plates will be individually hand-decorated with a border of 18 karat gold. The plates may be displayed on a table or in a breakfront—and each one will be fitted with a special device for hanging.

Excellent value for plates of this quality

The price for each plate is just $14.95—a very favorable price when you consider that porcelain plates of comparable size and quality sell for $35 to $65 in gift shops.

Because these plates are crafted exclusively for us in Japan, it is important that your order be mailed by April 30, 1982 to assure prompt delivery. Mail the order form at right to The Collectors Studio Inc., 800 Third Avenue, New York, New York 10022, by April 30th.

Plate shown smaller than actual size of 7¼" diameter.

The Collectors Studio stands behind the quality of its works. You may return any plate for any reason, within 15 days for your choice of replacement or a full refund.

VERMICELLI WITH SPINACH PESTO SAUCE

2 cloves garlic
½ cup fresh parsley leaves, stems removed
1 pkg. (10 oz.) frozen spinach, thawed and squeezed dry
2 tablespoons unsalted butter
⅓ cup grated Parmesan cheese
¼ teaspoon salt
Freshly ground black pepper
¼ cup olive oil
8 oz. vermicelli, linguine or spaghetti
1 tablespoon salt
3 qts. boiling water

1. Place chopping blade in food processor. While machine is on, process the garlic, parsley and spinach.

2. Add butter, cheese, ¼ teaspoon salt and pepper. Process, on and off, until blended. Gradually pour in olive oil and process until smooth and well blended. Chill in refrigerator. Makes 1½ cups Spinach Pesto Sauce.

3. Gradually add vermicelli and 1 tablespoon salt to rapidly boiling water so that water continues to boil. Cook uncovered, stirring occasionally, until tender. Drain in colander. Toss with Spinach Pesto Sauce.

Makes 4 servings

Note: For a little less concentrated flavor, the same amount of sauce can be used for 1 lb. vermicelli, linguine or spaghetti.

STRAW AND HAY

4 oz. spinach noodles (about 2 cups)
4 oz. medium egg noodles (about 2 cups)
1 tablespoon salt
3 qts. boiling water
6 tablespoons unsalted butter
2 tablespoons finely chopped shallots or chopped green onions
¾ lb. mushrooms, cut into ¼-inch cubes
1 teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon ground white pepper
1 pkg. (8 oz.) boiled ham, cut into julienne pieces
1 cup heavy cream or half-and-half
½ cup grated fresh Parmesan cheese

1. Gradually add noodles and salt to rapidly boiling water so that water continues to boil. Cook uncovered, stirring occasionally, until tender, drain.

2. While noodles are cooking, in large skillet or frypan, melt 3 tablespoons butter over medium heat. Add shallots. Cook until a pale golden color. Turn heat to high. Add mushrooms and cook until they have absorbed butter, then turn heat to low.

3. Add the 1 teaspoon salt and pepper. Stir mushrooms gently and turn heat up high; cook 3 minutes. Turn heat to medium. Add ham and cook 30 seconds, stirring.

4. Stir in ½ cup cream and cook until slightly thickened. Heat remaining butter and cream in small saucepan until hot. Add to noodles and toss. Then add mushroom mixture and toss. Sprinkle with cheese.

Makes 4 servings

MINESTRONE WITH PARSLEY PESTO SAUCE

1 cup dried white navy beans, rinsed
2 cans (13¾-oz. size) chicken broth
2 qts. water
2 teaspoons salt
1 small cabbage (1½ lbs.)
4 medium carrots, peeled (½ lb.)
2 medium potatoes, peeled (½ lb.)
1 can (35 oz.) Italian-style tomatoes, crushed
2 medium onions (½ lb.)
1 clove garlic
1 stalk celery
2 medium zucchini (½ lb.)
¼ cup olive oil
1 large, ripe tomato, cored and peeled
1 teaspoon salt
Few twists freshly ground black pepper
¼ cup chopped parsley
1 cup broken thin spaghetti
Parsley Pesto Sauce, recipe follows

1. Place beans in medium bowl. Cover with water and refrigerate, covered, overnight.

2. Drain beans and place in 8-qt. pot. Add broth and 2 qts. water. Stir in 2 teaspoons salt. Bring to a boil. Reduce heat, cover and simmer for 1 hour.

3. Cut core from cabbage. Cut into sixths. Insert slicing blade in mixer bowl of food processor. Process cabbage, carrots and potatoes (or thinly slice). Add to soup with canned tomatoes. Cook, covered, 30 minutes.

4. Meanwhile, cut onions in half. Process onions, garlic, celery and zucchini (or slice by hand).

5. In large skillet, heat oil. Sauté vegetables, stirring frequently, 5 minutes. Cut tomato into ½-inch cubes. Add to vegetables along with 1 teaspoon salt and pepper. Cook, uncovered, stirring occasionally, for 2 minutes. Add to bean mixture along with parsley. Heat to boiling. Add spaghetti and boil, cooking 10 to 12 minutes, or until spaghetti is tender.

6. Serve soup as is; stir in pesto just before serving, or pass pesto at the table to stir in individually.

Makes about 5½ quarts

PARSLEY PESTO SAUCE

1 clove garlic
1 cup parsley leaves, stems removed
¼ cup butter, softened
¼ cup grated Parmesan cheese
1 teaspoon dried basil leaves
½ teaspoon dried marjoram leaves
¼ cup olive or vegetable oil
¼ cup pine nuts

1. Insert chopping blade in mixer bowl of food processor. Process, on and off, garlic, parsley, butter, cheese and herbs until well blended. (Or blend by hand with mortar and pestle.)

2. Gradually add oil, then nuts. Process until smooth. (Or blend in oil slowly, chop nuts and fold in.) You can also use an electric blender for this recipe.

Makes about ¾ cup

BEHAVIOR

The Rites and Wrongs of Spring

The Bettmann Archive

By Mary Ellin Barrett

Emily Dickinson dubbed the syndrome "a little madness." Noel Coward called it "a certain lilt in the air." But to most people it's simply "spring fever," and if crocuses are poking up in your backyard, you're probably feeling it now — and wondering what it is about the season that's sparking your romantic flights of fancy and frivolous behavior.

While no one appears to have done an in-depth study of the restless, festive way we feel on the first sunny days of spring, psychology experts offer several possible explanations.

Some specialists say we're simply celebrating winter's end — the chance to shake off heavy clothes and cabin fever, raise the windows and run outside. "Everything is more difficult in the winter," notes Fred Strider, Ph.D., associate professor of medical psychology at the University of Nebraska Medical Center. "The family is cooped up together. It's an expensive and stressful time. Almost every society has some kind of celebration in the springtime. It's a sense of deliverance from a period of stress."

Tom W. Smith, a research analyst with the National Opinion Research Center in Chicago who has studied surveys of happiness, agrees. Smith found that good moods tend to peak near the beginning of spring and "then wane somewhat" as summer approaches, indicating that spring fever may be an immediate, intense reaction to the change of seasons. "Spring is like being released from prison," he says. "You have this immediate rush of euphoria."

Spring may work on us in even subtler ways, according to Michael Cunningham, Ph.D., assistant professor of psychology at Elmhurst College in Elmhurst, Ill., and a specialist in meteorology and mood. One possibility may be that as the days grow longer, increased exposure to sunlight activates our glands. "There is evidence that light affects the hypothalamus and pineal gland in various species of birds and animals," he says, "stimulating their mating and migratory activities" and there has been some speculation about similar effects in humans. Another factor could be that solar radiation increases the concentration of negatively charged ions in the air. Cunningham notes that studies have associated high levels of negative ions with relaxation and reduction of anxiety. Finally, some investigators have theorized that ultraviolet rays may contribute to feelings of "health and well being."

But while such physiological and psychological effects may incite some people to feverish happiness, in others the stimulation appears to have just the opposite effect. Research has indicated that loneliness and mental hospital admissions both increase in the spring. Suicides also peak at this time, reports Calvin Frederick, Ph.D., a psychologist and authority on suicide based in Los Angeles. Often the people who feel these negative effects are already depressed when spring arrives, Dr. Frederick notes, and since depressed people "are always tending to compare themselves negatively to others and put themselves down," they look around at all the happiness and festive activity and their feelings of sadness and inadequacy get worse. "They feel they're just really lost because they're in the doldrums and everyone else is not."

At this point, most hypotheses about the causes of spring fever are mainly conjecture, but one thing is clear: As the days grow longer and warmer, few people will escape its contrasting effects or fail to feel what Shakespeare called "the uncertain glory of an April day." FW

Official 200th Anniversary

AMERICAN EAGLE

COMMEMORATIVE BELT BUCKLE

JUST $19.95

Plated with SOLID SILVER Layered with

PURE 24-KARAT GOLD

STRICTLY LIMITED EDITION

THE AMERICAN EAGLE, stirring symbol of our great nation's eternal vigilance in defense of freedom, was adopted for the Great Seal of the United States by the Continental Congress on June 20, 1782. Now—200 years later—the eagle continues to soar free and unfettered over the greatest bastion of freedom the world has ever known.

To commemorate the 200th anniversary of this proud symbol of our country, International Monetary Mint master engravers and minters have struck a special, high-relief, limited-edition collector's buckle in silver plate, accented with a layer of pure, 24-karat gold, it will be offered only during the commemorative year, after which time the dies will be permanently destroyed.

Each buckle will be individually numbered, and each original owner will be permanently registered in the Official Archives of the Mint. Your buckle will be sent to you in a specially designed Collector's Presentation Case, and protected by our unusual Unlimited Money Back Guarantee. The American Eagle Commemorative Buckle will be worn proudly by every patriotic American fortunate enough to possess one, and will be passed on as a proud heirloom to generations to come.

NOTE: These buckles will be minted in a strictly limited edition. Lowest Registry Numbers will be assigned to the first orders received; to assure that you receive a coveted low Registry Number, prompt action is strongly urged (limit 5).

International Monetary Mint is an independent agency not affiliated with the U.S. Mint or any government agency.

The Road to Raleigh is:

Yellow lines and just laid asphalt.
Endless stretches of black ribbon that run all the way to where the sun disappears.
It's telephone poles and fence posts,
you keep passin' 'em one by one.
It's those rows of corn, that sea of wheat.
Tall trees blocking out the sun.
It's 13 speeds in an overdrive gearbox.
And a CB handle
when you've got the country music turned off.
The road to Raleigh is a man who gets up when he wants to...
goes to bed when he says.
Pushes himself to the limit and then relaxes with gusto.
He doesn't give a damn what you think.
The road to Raleigh has the feel of hard rain and blowin' snow.
The light of a rising sun,
the pale of a pea soup fog.
It's got the smell of hot coffee.
And the stench of diesel fuel.
It's got men.
It's got freedom.
It's got the flavor you can only get
When you're on the road to Raleigh.

Take the road to flavor.

LAW

Winning Big in Small Claims Court

By James E. Morris

The dry cleaner has ruined your leather jacket and claims he's not to blame. Your landlord is refusing to refund your $200 security deposit. Your car has been hit and the insurance company of the driver at fault will pay only half of your loss.

You have a choice in each case. You can go away angry, muttering to yourself. Or you can make the other person right the wrong and turn over the money due you — through small claims court, a simple, convenient, swift, low-cost procedure. A division of the local courts, small claims court resolves claims involving relatively small amounts of money in an informal manner.

Although no sum is too small, the maximum amount for which you can sue in small claims court varies from state to state, ranging from a low of $150 in Texas to a high of $5,000 in Virginia. New York and California have maximums of $1,500, which is average for all the states.

You do not need a lawyer in small claims court — in fact in some states, including California, lawyers are not allowed. Even in the states where legal counsel is permitted, the appearance of a lawyer doesn't improve your chance of winning. In small claims courts, judges want to hear directly from the people and get at the truth without following strict rules of law.

If you have suffered a financial loss because someone failed to fulfill a contract or agreement, or if someone has injured you or your property, you have a chance of winning in small claims court.

Once you decide to sue, call your local small claims court. The clerk will tell you when you can file your claim, how much money you should bring for the filing fee and what documentation you need for your official meeting with the clerk. The filing fee can be as low as $2 or as high as $20. It will be added to any award you receive if you win your case.

When you meet with the clerk, you must provide the correct name and address of the person you are suing. Describe your claim briefly. A court date will be set, and a notice to appear will then be served by the court to the person you are suing. If that person contacts you, feel free to discuss the claim — you may be able to agree on a settlement.

Before your court date, gather pertinent documents: estimates of repair, sales receipts, photographs (for instance, in the case of the ruined leather jacket, it would be good to have the sales receipt and any photo showing the undamaged jacket). Arrange for the actual product involved and/or witnesses who can substantiate your claim to be in court with you. Rather than write out a presentation to read to the court, simply jot down a few key words to refresh your memory.

When your case is called, you will stand in front of the judge, take an oath, and then tell the judge your story informally, step by step. Present any documents, physical proof or witnesses you may have to support your claim. The judge may ask you questions and will give the other person an opportunity to speak. You may ask each other questions. Act naturally, and be sure to be polite, courteous and concise.

If the person you are suing does not show up in court, you will receive a default judgment — an award in your favor. If the other party appears in court, the hearing will probably take no more than 20 minutes. Most often judges do not give decisions in court but mail them within a few days. If you win and the other party refuses to pay, you can apply to have an enforcement officer collect payment.

It doesn't matter if your claim is against a large corporation, a prominent person in the community or your next-door neighbor. You can succeed in small claims court if you have a valid claim and can prove it. FW

James E. Morris, a town justice, is the author of You Can Win Big in Small Claims Court (Rawson Wade).

Now! You Can Start Your Own "Million Dollar" Zoysia Lawn!

FREE UP TO 900 PLUGS!

Lakeland's Famous 30-Below-Zero Zoysia Takes Wear, Tear, Cookouts, Children's Games . . . After 30 Below Zero Winters, It Bounces Back Green, Thick, And Beautiful! Closest Thing To An Indestructible Lawn You Have Ever Seen!

Zoysia Lawn Wasn't Mowed Or Watered For A Month! Not A Weed In Sight!

If your family is like mine, you're squeezing every dollar to make sure you have enough to go around. And it looks like things are going to stay that way.

One way to cut expenses is to cut the costs, and work, of lawn care. For example, a woman wrote about her zoysia lawn that she had mowed it only twice ALL SUMMER. She hadn't spent a cent on weed-killers. Not one cent for fertilizers. Yet her lawn was as green and weed-free as a pile carpet.

ZOSYIA LAWNS STAY GREEN THROUGH HEAT AND DROUGHTS

Let the scorching sun burn lawns around you into hay—your zoysia stays fresh and green, an emerald isle of beauty. I have yet to water my own zoysia lawn. One day I saw that my sprinkler had gotten cobwebs! In Iowa, a zoysia lawn was declared the area's "Top Lawn—nearly perfect." Yet this lawn had been watered only once that entire summer!

CUT YOUR WATER BILLS. SAVE THE WORK OF LAWN SPRINKLING. START A FAMOUS ZOYSIA GRASS LAWN NOW.

Weed-killing chemicals are NOT NEEDED for a weed-free Zoysia Lawn

How is it possible that Famous Meyer Z-52 Zoysia stays weed-free without using expensive, risky chemicals? It grows so thick that crabgrass (weed) seeds don't get enough light to germinate!

Has Cut Mowing To Once A Month

Zoysia grows sideways, not just up like ordinary grass. It forms a thick, interwoven carpet of turf that keeps its well-groomed look weeks longer. It cuts your mowing by half, 2/3 or more!

No-Reseeding—Not Ever!—With Lakeland's Famous Zoysia

Plug in Lakeland Zoysia and never buy grass seed again. Zoysia lawns don't grow old; they just grow better. They sparkle under 100° heat . . . stay green through droughts. They resist diseases and insects which ruin ordinary grasses. After sharp frosts, they only give up their green color, then green up better than ever each following Spring. Famous Zoysia gives you the closest thing to an indestructible lawn you have ever seen.

Ends Washouts on Steep Slopes Perfect Where Other Grasses Do Poorly

Deep-rooted zoysia holds soil in place, stops it from washing away from slopes. It's your perfect answer for worn out or weedy areas, too.

In a typical newspaper article I read (quote):

NO NEED TO DIG UP YOUR LAWN
PLUG IN Z 52 ZOYSIA

"upgrading your current lawn" requires the right selection of grass seed plus "regular applications of fertilizer (and lime where needed)." This article also said you need, "weed, insect and disease control." Sound familiar? Of course!

Why not forget all that work and expense, and plug in Famous Meyer Z-52 Zoysia? To upgrade your lawn with zoysia, don't dig it up. Just set plugs into holes in the soil a foot apart or less. Let those plugs spread toward each other ao form a carpet of solid turf. Growth is so vigorous it chokes out old growth you want to get rid of, WEEDS INCLUDED.

From Coast to Coast People Write to Mike Senkiw

From Hudson, N.Y., E. LaRoche writes how he planted plugs "in the worst possible place—clay with weeds and gravel . . . It formed a 4" thick carpet of grass. Not children, dogs, cats, rabbits, extremely hot sun or drought could kill it."

From Sacramento, Calif., J.M. writes how he bought our Zoysia "for a weed infested spot —it took care of the problem."

From Indiana, M.A. Low, Sr. writes how he visited a physician friend in Albert Lea, Minn. where he saw a "whole back yard was entirely in zoysia and it was beautiful...a deep green."

The success of many thousands of delighted Famous® Zoysia owners awaits you. Prove it to yourself today.

"Same Day Fresh"

The day we cut your plugs is the day they are on their way to you. Because freshness counts, Lakeland has 2 shipping points, one in the Midwest and one in the East. Your plugs go out form the nearest point "Same Day Fresh" and ready to grow, shipping charge collection the most economical way. On credit card orders, the shipping cost will be prepaid by us and billed to your account.

Poor Soil? No Problem!

Our Famous Zoysia plugs are so vigorous we guarantee them to grow whatever your soil—from heavy clays to sandy sub-soils. You cannot lose.

Lakeland's Total Guarantee

- Drought Won't Kill It
- Heat Won't Kill It
- Cold Won't Kill It
- Disease Won't Kill It

Even though we don't know your soil, we guarantee EVERY plug of Famous Z-52 Zoysia to live and grow in it. No ifs. No buts. Should any plugs fail to grow, just let us know within 60 days. We replace them FREE. That guarantee clearly means that Famous Zoysia has to do everything we say — and more! Otherwise there's no way we could give you such unique protection.

Meyer Z-52 Zoysia Grass was perfected by the U.S. Govt. and released in cooperation with the U.S. Golf Association.

IT'S SO EASY AND INEXPENSIVE TO START A MAGNIFICENT ZOYSIA LAWN

Start your own magnificent, perennial zoysia lawn with as few as 100 plugs. Just let your plugs establish solid turf. Then take up transplants and plug in other places to your heart's desire. Plugged areas grow right back into solid turf. Your supply of plugs is endless.

Prices and Bargains

If you plant more grass that sits there and struggles—or dies on you—you may not miss your work and money. It's the time you cannot recover! So please don't confuse Lakeland's 30-Below-Zero Zoysia with any ordinary turf offered as a "bargain." If our plugs cost a little more in the beginning, they remain, in the long run, the only true bargain for your lawn.

Order guaranteed Famous zoysia plugs now, for delivery from our nearest shipping point. Your order will be sent at the earliest proper time to plant in your area.

PEOPLE QUIZ

Do Athletes Sport The Greatest Self-Esteem?

By John E. Gibson

TRUE OR FALSE

1. Your chances of sustaining sports injuries depend to a large extent on your personality.

2. Men who really like to win at sports have positive attitudes about women.

3. People who engage in sports activity have greater self-esteem than do armchair sports enthusiasts.

4. Teen-agers may engage in many activities, but what really turns them on is participating in athletics.

ANSWERS

1. True. In a study of character and injury of runners, conducted by Canada's North Bay Psychiatric Hospital (Ontario), injured and noninjured male runners were contacted following competitive road races and given standard personality tests. The study found that the injured runners were less tough-minded and self-reliant than the noninjured runners. They were also found to be less forthright in expressing themselves.

2. False. In studies of the correlation between men's attitudes about sports and various personality characteristics, investigators from Northwestern University and Loyola University of Chicago found that men who are more concerned with winning than with sportsmanship tend to have negative attitudes about women and admire traditional masculinity. The researchers also found that men who like contact sports often wish their bodies were more muscular.

3. True. In a Hillsborough Community College (Fla.) study comparing personalities of students who exercise with those of students who do not, results showed that "people who participate in regular physical activity have a better view of their bodies (are happier with the way they look), as well as a higher self-concept (are self-approving of how they think, feel and act)."

4. True. A University of Chicago study of the value of sports reported that "sports are more likely than any other activity to make a youngster feel . . . strong, alert, happy and motivated." The investigators also found that when adults were in charge of teen-age games, the youngsters reported more concentration and control, but in unsupervised activities with their peers, the subjects felt happier, more sociable, freer and more skillful. WHAT IN THE WORLD

By Eliot Kaplan

LIONS & TIGERS & BEARS OH MY!

When you count sheep at night, do the little woolies leap right on into your dreams? Well, if you're a child, you're four times as likely to dream about animals than if you're an adult, reports psychologist Robert Van de Castle. The younger the child, the more animal dreams he has.

Richard Bennett

Van de Castle, director of the Univ. of Virginia's sleep and dream lab, says dogs, horses and cats dominate both kids' and grown-ups' dreams, although children's nights are often frequented by threatening animals like snakes, lions, tigers, bears and spiders.

Animals in dreams represent our dark, unacceptable, "animal" instincts, believes Van de Castle, because animals freely and uninhibitedly engage in aggression, sex and a whole host of forbidden acts.

As to why children's dreams more often feature creatures, "Adults are more familiar with recognizing and dealing with these animal feelings," says Van de Castle. "Children haven't yet learned other ways to handle this aspect of their character."

IN THE BAG

David Lyon is asking 31 million Americans to come out of the closet. These are the folks who carry their lunch to school or work every day.

So last April, Lyon, a former advertising exec, founded the Brown-Bag Institute. Four times a year, he does extensive phone surveys before peddling his information on brown baggers to various companies for a fee of $20,000.

Understandably, Lyon is reluctant to divulge his research for free, but he did tell us that only half of brown baggers are concerned about saving money. The rest simply don't like the food choices available or want to save time.

He also predicts that "Reaganomics" will boost brown bagging, as school-lunch and food-stamp programs continue to be cut.

Disgruntled brown baggers everywhere can air their gripes and give away their ideas by writing to: Brown-Bag Institute, Box 122, Dept. FW, Greens Farm Station, Westport, Conn. 06436.

GETTING BLOOD FROM A BEAN

Blood banks often face critical shortages of specific blood types. But a new procedure is brewing that may one day solve that problem.

As reported in the Journal of the American Medical Association, an enzyme taken from green coffee beans was used to remove a sugar molecule from type B red blood cells, converting them to type O. (Type O blood, "the universal donor," can be transfused safely to individuals with any blood type.) The converted blood was successfully tested first on gibbons, then on three humans, one each with types A, B and O.

It is hoped that an enzyme can soon be found that converts type A to type O, since 40 percent of Americans have type A blood, while only 10 percent have type B.

AN INTIMATE LOOK AT YOUTH

Over 30 percent of 13- to 15-year-olds have had sexual intercourse (60 percent of 16- to 18-year-olds), yet 70 percent of teens have never discussed birth control with their parents. One quarter of teen-agers drink more than once a week. The number-one problem for teens is school. Their biggest fear is losing their parents. Ninety percent want to get married someday but 74 percent plan to live with someone first. Ninety-two percent think they'll get what they want out of life. Almost 70 percent of teens say they feel good about themselves.

These are among the startling revelations in The Private Life of the American Teenager, for which authors Jane Norman and Dr. Myron Harris surveyed 160,000 teens across the country.

"Kids really want to use their parents as sounding boards," remarks Norman, who has a teen-age son of her own. "They want our advice but without us insisting that they take it. They want to be told that their opinions matter, even when we don't agree with them. And they want to be trusted. It seems that kids who are trusted and know it tend to live up to that trust."

PLAY BALL (BEEP, BEEP)

Don't think that just because of his success with one import—Mexico's fantastico Fernando Valenzuela— Dodger manager Tommy Lasorda now has a yen for young Japanese phenoms. No, Lasorda and friend were in New York recently to show off the latest line of futuristic baseball equipment from Japan's Mizuno Corp. Included are helmets over which a manager can radio instructions to batters and runners, and electronic gloves for pitchers and catchers to exchange signals.

Mizuno has even come up with a Computerized Pitching Analyst that instantly measures the speed, effectiveness and placement of a pitch. And though Lasorda's best practice fastball failed to register, it wasn't because the former major-league pitcher (who later lost his job to Sandy Koufax) has completely lost his stuff. No, the machine was just on the fritz.
