Irvine teachers stage protest over contract

Irvine's teachers, as promised, held an unusual faculty outing Wednesday, walking in a long procession over city sidewalks to call attention to their contract negotiations.

Their mile-long parade ended at Lakeside Middle School, the site of the Irvine Unified School District's board meeting, where teacher spokesman Dan Graham told trustees that greater efforts should be made to consider teachers' concerns.

"It is no secret that the teachers make the programs work," he said. "It's not the programs that make the teachers work."

About 400 of the teachers, by Graham's estimate, met at Venado Middle School to make their public march to Lakeside, with representatives from each school carrying hand-made signs to identify their campuses.

Graham is president of the Irvine Teachers Association, the bargaining group for the teachers in their contract talks. He noted this is the first time in the district's 10 years that teachers have gone to work in the fall without a contract.

However, district Superintendent A. Stanley Corey, addressing the crowd of teachers during the board meeting, noted that Irvine is only one of 19 districts in the county that have yet to sign contracts.

Disabled athlete in swim

Amputee Tom Clardy planned to swim to San Pedro from Catalina today.

Amputee athlete Tom Clardy, who works at a Huntington Beach sporting goods store, said he plans to set off late today on a 21-mile swim from Catalina Island to Cabrillo Beach near San Pedro.

For Clardy, 37, the athletic challenge will cap a long, difficult comeback from the days he spent as a suicidal patient at a Utah Veterans Administration hospital.

"I'm not supposed to be working out at all today," he said Wednesday. "But I'm going to anyway. I'm too nervous not to."

Clardy, who resides in Fullerton, spent some time in the surf at Corona del Mar State Beach on Wednesday preparing mentally and physically for the swim.

He said he plans travel to Catalina Island tonight, plunge into the water at about 8 p.m. and arrive at Cabrillo Beach by noon Friday.

Clardy was prepared to make the swim one year ago but could not arrange for an escort boat. He feared that the current swim might be called off when his present escort boat developed serious engine trouble this week.

Rather than delay the feat again, Clardy said he has rented a boat for $1,000 o accompany him on the swim.

A former police officer and Navy frogman, Clardy was hit by a car during a skiing excursion in 1974. His right leg was amputated at the knee. Movement in his left leg was permanently impaired.

After a period of depression in the Utah hospital, Clardy slowly battled his way back to good

Waste plan due change

By STEVE TRIPOLI
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

A proposal that would allow the transportation of radioactive wastes on three major Orange County freeways may be changed before it is put into effect, its sponsors said Wednesday.

The proposal, part of a statewide plan, was authored by the California Highway Patrol with assistance from state transportation officials and the nuclear power industry.

It calls for use of the Santa Ana, Costa Mesa and Riverside freeways, all roads that run through heavily populated areas, as routes for trucks carrying the materials.

Though densely populated areas were not favored by those who drew up the plans population was just one factor used in drawing up the CHP's final proposal, according to Dan Parker of the CHP. Other considerations included road safety and the ability of raids to handle trucks carrying the materials, he said.

The plan, which has attracted criticism from almost all of the areas it affects, was aimed at finding the "safest, most feasible routes" for moving the materials, Parker said.

Though medical and industrial radioactive waste will be among those carried, the biggest potential producer of radioactive waste locally is the San Onofre nuclear power plant. Material from that plant had been transported into San Diego County and across the desert on four 1980 trips to a disposal site in Illinois.

Officials of Southern California Edison Co., which operates the plant located just south of the Orange-San Diego County line, said Wednesday they anticipate no shipments from the site until the early 1990s, when on-site waste storage areas become full.

After that time, said Edison's nuclear fuel supply manager, John Ladesich, as many as two shipments of waste per week could leave the plant by truck.

Ladesich stressed, however, that Edison currently is leaning toward a plan to remove all its wastes from the plant by rail, a process that is faster, cheaper and would require only about six shipments a year.

Parker said hearings around the state are bringing local concerns about the CHP plan to light, and that those concerns may alter the plan eventually.

"We certainly don't think we have a monopoly on knowledge — that's why we're holding the hearings," he said.

At a Los Angeles hearing last weekend, Orange County Rep. Jerry Patterson, D-Garden Grove, was among local people

Two held in Valley rent scam

By PHIL SNEIDERMAN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Fountain Valley police have arrested two men who allegedly tried to rent a local four-bedroom home to 16 different tenants to obtain $1,700 in preliminary payments from each.

Officers said the two allegedly were working a familiar scheme that ties into the current shortage of rental housing and the prevailing high rents.

Placed in Orange County Jail on suspicion of grand theft, fraud and criminal conspiracy were Gary Richard, 36, of Ronan, Mont., and Allen L. Carlson, 28, of Apache Junction, Ariz.

Fountain Valley police Sgt. Vic Deutsch said the two were arrested Tuesday afternoon while they were concluding transactions with separate prospective tenants at two restaurants near Orange County Airport.

Deutsch said officers found that the two men each carried business cards bearing their photograph and the same phony name — David R. Hall. He said the men possessed documents indicating they had set up appointments to meet 16 prospective renters at the restaurant.

The two men had earlier rented a Fountain Valley home with four bedrooms, a pool and fireplace and then had placed a newspaper ad offering to rent the home for $695 per month, which is significantly below going rates, Deutsch said.

The men allegedly set up appointments with 16 prospective tenants, urging each to bring a cashier's check for $1,700, which they said would cover first and last month's rent, plus security and key deposits, according to Deutsch.

The two even employed an answering service in Arizona to field calls to their "office," he said.

Several prospective tenants were skeptical of the low rent, however, and contacted Fountain Valley police.

After receiving several calls about the home, officers arranged to monitor the restaurant transactions. Police arrested the two men after confirming that they were renting the same home to different people, Deutsch said.

He said officers recovered the deposits and found that the men were carrying 16 separate rental contracts and 16 keys that would not have worked at the Fountain Valley home.

Kidnapped Viet girl, 11, rescued

Kidnappers who held a Vietnamese 11-year-old captive for 27 hours reportedly had plans to execute the Santa Ana girl if police intervened, officers said after rescuing her late Wednesday.

Anh Dao Thi Nguyn was found bound and gagged, but unharmed, in a bedroom of an Anaheim home. Five persons were arrested including a man standing guard outside the bedroom who was overpowered by police, officers said.

Nguyn was grabbed by two men Tuesday while walking to school. Police said the kidnappers later contacted the girl's mother, demanding 200 ounces of gold for the girl's safe return.

Officers said the mother followed the kidnappers' instructions on where to take the ransom late Wednesday while police followed her car.

Officers said they were about to give up when a car began flashing its lights at the vehicle being driven by the mother.

HB man to face murder trial

By DAVID KUTZMANN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

A Huntington Beach man accused of hacking to death his estranged wife and her mother in their Sunnycrest Drive home in June has been ordered to stand trial on death penalty charges of murder, robbery and burglary.

Following a nearly two-day preliminary hearing, West Orange County Municipal Court Judge William L. Mock ruled Wednesday there was sufficient evidence to order defendant Rene Florea Dayco, 41, to face trial.

The slender mechanic's helper is charged with two counts of murder, two of robbery and one of burglary. He also faces multiple special circumstance allegations which could lead to imposition of the death penalty if he is convicted.

Judge Mock ordered Dayco to be arraigned Oct. 4 before Superior Court Judge Luis Cardenas in Santa Ana. The defendant will continue to be held without bail at the Orange County Jail.

Dayco is accused of killing is estranged wife, Shirley Dayco, 27, and her mother, Amelia Harbulak, 65, June 14 in the Huntington Beach home where the women lived with the Dayco couple's three young children.

The defendant was arrested in Rosarito Beach, Mexico, two days after police discovered the mutilated bodies of the women in a bedroom of the home at 14952 Sunnycrest Lane.

The three children were found unharmed with Dayco in Mexico. Police confiscated a number of bloody knives, including a meat cleaver, from the trunk of Dayco's Pontiac Firebird automobile.

According to testimony Tuesday, the defendant's sister-in-law said Dayco confessed to her June 14 that he killed his wife, apparently because she was seeing another man.

The witness, Luz Carabas of agreed that negotiations this summer were made more difficult by the state Legislature's decision not to offer new funding for public education.

"The board has asked me to express its pride and confidence in the work you've done," Corey told the teachers, most of them standing in the jammed meeting room. "But we are engaged in an adversary process under the law called collective bargaining."

Corey, speaking in measured and respectful tones, said he was confident both sides could reach a fair agreement.

Graham said the teacher walk was organized primarily to prove to the trustees that teachers are supportive of their negotiating team's stance. He said they also wanted to draw attention to the current plight of California's education system, which he said is woefully under-financed.

Negotiators for both sides are still discussing several issues, but teachers and administrators agree that the primary one is the amount of time teachers should spend in classrooms each day.

Fourth through sixth-grade teachers, because of longer school days, are being asked by the district to spend 305 minutes in the classroom. The teachers want that school day reduced to 275 minutes, the same as for other teachers. They claim the reduction would not cut into what they call "quality time."

For several years, the classroom teacher in Irvine has taught the 275 minutes, with other programs making up the remainder.

DAYCO TO TRIAL. . .

San Diego, said Dayco came to her home at about 4 a.m. and told her he had a "big problem."

According to the woman, it was the custom of men from the Philippine Islands where she and Dayco grew up to beat and kill their wives if they went out with other men.

Dayco and his wife had been separated about a month. During that time, the defendant lived with a friend and his family in Temple City.

That friend, Paulino Ventura, testified Wednesday that Dayco apparently left his home the night of the slayings and returned in the early morning hours with what appeared to be a blood stain on a shirt sleeve and a bruise on his face.

The defendant's three children were with him, Ventura said, and Dayco hurriedly packed his belongings and left.

"I asked him where he was going . . . As far as I know, he just said somewhere," the witness said.

Ventura identified a meat cleaver seized by police from Dayco's car as being one he had owned.

The burglary charge against Dayco involves his allegedly breaking into his estranged wife's house on June 14 and the robbery counts allege he stole the contents of his victims' purses after he killed them.

Bradley backs drilling limits

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley, whose campaign for governor has received lukewarm support from environmentalists, says he'll protect sensitive portions of the California coast from oil drilling.

However, the Democrat said Wednesday he would allow development along the 88 percent of the coast that is not environmentally sensitive, a position that irked a representative of the nation's largest conservation organization.

Bradley, who leads Republican state Attorney General George Deukmejian in recent polls, said the Interior Department's coastal leasing proposal would amount to a "wholesale giveaway" of about a billion offshore acres.

"Secretary of Interior Watt's proposal to put up for sale our most precious resource — 1 billion acres of offshore tracts — is, in my judgment, a most irresponsible proposal," said Bradley in a press conference at the Cliff House as fog shrouded Seal Rocks below.

"We are not opposed to all offshore oil drilling," he explained. "To give you an example, I think only 12 percent of the whole coastline of California has been found to be environmentally sensitive, and therefore must be protected. It is that region we're most concerned about."

Asked if drilling should be permitted in the other 88 percent, he said: "Yes, we have no objection to the rest of it."

Bradley said he sought to protect "only 24" of the 163 tracts proposed for development in Southern California as he "led the fight" against offshore drilling there.

The candidate declined to specify where he would allow drilling and where he would oppose it, but said there would be protected areas all along the state's 1,000-mile coast.

Environmentalists have been waiting for Bradley to take a position on offshore drilling and on the so-called Bottle Bill initiative on November's ballot.

Blasts rock E. Beirut before swearing in

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Explosions rocked Christian-populated east Beirut today about two hours before President Amin Gemayel was sworn in. Authorities said the blasts were at an ammunition dump and radios reported at least 38 people were injured.

The explosions were at an arms depot where the Lebanese army stored tons of Soviet-made rockets hauled out of Palestine Liberation Organization centers in west Beirut, prosecutor-General Assaad Germanos said. Military officials said the first explosion was set off when a shell being unloaded from an army truck went off, causing a chain reaction.

For about an hour, the area resounded with explosions as people ducked for cover from the whizzing rockets and several buildings were on fire.

A woman who escaped the area was screaming, "The military, the military, why do they put it among the people?"

Germanos told reporters the blast occurred at an army depot in the al-Abed Square near the Sin el-Fil residential neighborhood of east Beirut at 9:45 a.m. (12:45 a.m. PDT). The area is near the Green Line that divides Beirut into Moslem and Christian sectors.

Germanos said 28 passers-by were hurt but Christian radio stations gave the names of 38 people it said were injured.

Earlier, police reported "several" wounded but said there were no deaths.

The explosions sent a black cloud of smoke billowing skyward and debris scattered over a wide area. It was not immediately clear what caused the explosion.

Lebanese radio stations said civil defense workers with loudspeakers blared warnings to people telling them to stay off streets around the stricken area as ambulances converged to treat the injured.

High clouds due

with northern desert highs from 95 to 100 and low desert highs of 100 to 108.

Coastal

Increasing high cloudiness. Highs ranging from upper 70s at the beaches to 80s inland. Tonight variable high cloudiness. Lows 65 to 70. Friday considerable high cloudiness. Highs ranging from upper 70s at beaches to 80s inland.

Over outer coastal waters northwest winds 10 to 20 knots with 3 to 5 foot combined seas decreasing tonight and Friday. Elsewhere, light variable winds night and morning hours becoming southwest to west 8 to 16 knots in afternoon and evening hours today and Friday. Southwest swells increasing to 2 to 4 feet by late today continuing through Friday.

California

Ocean-front property dwellers along south-facing beaches were warned to prepare for high waves today, Friday and possibly through the weekend if Hurricane Olivia doesn't die down, the National Weather Service said.

The hurricane was last placed by the weather service about 750 miles south of San Diego on Wednesday, decreasing in intensity as it moved toward the west and northwest at 14 knots, said weather service specialist Allen Thompson.

He said 5-to-8-foot breakers along south-facing beaches were expected today and Friday, noting that some areas expected to be hit are Santa Monica, Long Beach and Malibu.

"If Olivia stalls out and degenerates into a tropical storm there will be a slow subsiding," Thompson said. "But if it starts moving more northward as a hurricane, then it will continue the wave action through the weekend."

Olivia was moving at maximum speeds of 110 knots with gusty winds up to 125 knots. It was expected to decrease in intensity as it moved over colder waters, he said.

"Now is the time for persons with ocean-front property that is subject to wave damage to begin taking protective measures," the weather service said in a statement today.

High tides at Los Angeles Harbor were forecast for this afternoon at 4.7 feet.

More fog and cloudiness were forecast throughout Southern California through Friday with scorching temperatures in the Los Angeles area, Owens Valley and coastal valley areas.

The high in Los Angeles on Friday should be about 90 with 95-to-102-degree weather forecast in valleys. Mountain-area highs may range from 78 to 88.

U.S. summary

Much of the nation had mild temperatures and brilliant blue skies Wednesday, the last full day of summer, as a strong high pressure system held its position over western Arkansas.

Elsewhere, however, a lingering frontal zone and a series of weak storm centers off the East Coast kept the northeastern quarter of the nation under thick clouds and cool temperatures.

Rain showers fell in parts of Virginia, Maryland, Pennsylvania and northern New England. Fort Meade, Md., got the most moisture with 1.23 inches in a six-hour period ended at 2 p.m. EDT.

A southern extension of the frontal zone affecting the Northeast brought widespread cloudiness and thundershowers to the Florida Peninsula. A thunderstorm west of Fort Lauderdale produced wind gusts that toppled trees.

A band of cool air along the southern edge of the high pressure system brought record lows for the date, from the mid 30s into the low 50s, in parts of Alabama, Georgia, Texas, Arkansas, Mississippi, Louisiana, Florida, Missouri and Kansas.

Temperatures around the nation at 3 p.m. EDT ranged from 48 degrees at Johnstown, Pa., to 103 at Yuma, Ariz., and Palm Springs, Calif.

For Thursday, clouds and showers were forecast in New England and the northern mid-Atlantic states, with scattered thundershowers in the southern half of Florida, and some cloudiness with a few showers in the upper Great Lakes and in parts of the central Rockies.

Highs in the upper 50s and low 60s predicted in northern New England, in the 90s in the Rio Grande Valley, in the 80s elsewhere in the Southwest and in the Great Basin, southern Plains and Gulf Coast, and in the 60s and 70s elsewhere.

Inflation rate 3.3%

WASHINGTON (AP) — Falling food and gasoline prices held inflation to an annual rate of 3.3 percent in August, the smallest rise in four months, the government said today.

Prices moderated across the board, except for medical care, the only component in the Labor Department's Consumer Price Index that has risen substantially every month this year.

Largely responsible for August's 0.3 percent seasonally adjusted monthly increase were the 0.1 percent decline posted for gasoline prices and the 0.3 percent fall in food costs.

Railroad strike ending

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says he signed legislation ordering striking railroad engineers back to work to "protect the jobs of our people," but still thinks the government should stay out of labor-management negotiations.

Within hours after the decree became law, union officials said they would comply, thus ending a four-day strike that had shut most of the nation's rail system.

They said they expected most striking engineers to resume work at the beginning of their next shift.

Raise nixed for military

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legislation that would authorize a 4 percent pay boost for members of the armed forces has been turned down in the House.

Wednesday's 214-186 vote on the measure, which was brought to the floor under an expedited procedure that permitted no amendments, was 53 short of the two-thirds margin needed for approval.

The bill must either be redrafted by the House Armed Services Committee or sent to the Rules Committee, which will set procedures under which it may be considered again.

Belushi hearing slated

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A county grand jury will begin hearing testimony Tuesday in the drug-overdose death of "Saturday Night Live" comic John Belushi, the Los Angeles Herald Examiner reported today.

But the newspaper said it was unlikely that grand jurors will be asked to return an indictment.

Instead, the Herald Examiner said, prosecutors decided to go before the grand jury hoping to force reluctant witnesses to discuss events leading to Belushi's death. The 33-year-old comedian died of a drug overdose March 5 in a bungalow behind the Chateau Marmont hotel in Hollywood.

Bills now law

SACRAMENTO (AP) — New laws will give tax breaks to computer software firms and World Airways, require prisoners to work for time off sentences, and enable banks to buy shopping centers.

Other bills among the dozens signed Wednesday by Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. require the Public Utilities Commission to monitor large utility construction projects, forbid children from riding in the back of trucks, and add two Legislature-named members to the Unemployment Insurance Appeals Board.

In addition, the Democratic governor signed a package of crime bills at a press conference in Los Angeles.

Soldiers suspicious?

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — A Tel Aviv newspaper today quoted two Israeli soldiers stationed near the Chatilla refugee camp in Beirut as saying they suspected Palestinians were being massacred there but were told by superiors: "It's all right, don't worry."

The Haaretz said its reporter was approached by the soldiers outside the camp and told that on Thursday evening several Palestinian women ran out of Chatilla crying hysterically that their children were being butchered.

Quarantine set

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — The army quarantined a mud-covered neighborhood strewn with rotting corpses following a flood which claimed at least 313 lives there.

Interior Ministry spokesman Orrego Candray, explaining the army's action, said Wednesday that the decomposing bodies in the Montebello neighborhood has caused an outbreak of a viral infection known as parvovirosis.

Horse center planned

By ROBERT BARKER
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

A 25-acre equestrian center will be ready to lodge horses in Huntington Beach's Central Park by January, according to the center's designer and president.

The facility is expected to accommodate about 150 horses with an eventual capacity for 400.

Eddie Milligan, who says he was a jockey in the 1940s under contract with entertainers Harry James and Betty Grable, asserts that his goal will be compatibility with surroundings.

"The horse hasn't been a good neighbor in many cases because of the lack of education of its owner," he said Tuesday.

"Problems can start when people buy a horse for their 12 or 14-year-old daughter. They bring in 10 tons of hay and haul out five pounds of manure.

"The areas can look dirty and messy and have flies and the cities can have problems."

Milligan says the facility will be developed "in a country club atmosphere" of Central Park at Taylor Avenue and Golden West Street and will have hookups to other trails.

He promises that stalls will be cleaned twice a day, manure will be speedily removed and there will be a strict control of flies.

Milligan, 51, president of Better Built Enterprises Inc. in San Dimas, says he expects the bulk of his business will be provided by townhouse and condominium owners "who have always wanted to own a horse but never had the opportunity."

He says he has designed equestrian facilities in the City of Industry and South Pasadena.

Irvine suit on Bee Canyon seen as wedge

The Irvine City Council's lawsuit filed this week to block development of the proposed Bee Canyon landfill doesn't have to reach a court hearing to satisfy city officials.

Mayor Larry Agran said Wednesday they would be satisfied if the lawsuit spurs the Orange County Board of Supervisors to authorize what he termed more meaningful discussions about options for the dump site in the foothills east of Irvine.

Said Agran: "More than anything else, we're hoping to direct the county's attention to the need to explore the new technology, which they've been so reluctant to do."

The lawsuit was filed Monday in Orange County Superior Court. The 10-page petition asks that county officials prepare a supplementary environmental impact report based on increased residential development in the Northwood area since the original document was completed in 1979.

It also seeks assurances that county officials comply with their general plan and the state's laws on canceling agricultural preserves. The suit contends that the 725 acres are part of an agricultural preserve that can't by law be immediately disrupted.

The County Counsel's office can respond in writing to the suit's contentions, and then a hearing will be set to schedule legal proceedings, said Irvine City Attorney Roger Grable.

Meanwhile, Agran noted, officials from both sides may try to negotiate an out-of-court settlement.

TV show pleases Crean

Congressional candidate polishes image

By JEFF ADLER
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

SAN DIEGO — Republican congressional candidate Johnnie R. Crean and his campaign consultant Allan Hoffenblum seemed pleased after their unprecedented live half-hour television show aimed at voters in the 43rd Congressional District went off the air.

The Tuesday night show, which featured Crean answering questions telephoned in by viewers, was designed to counter what Crean and image-maker Hoffenblum believe is Crean's negative image among voters.

"From what I saw of it, it appears we accomplished our objective — to show another side of Johnnie Crean up close and live," Hoffenblum said.

Smiling, Crean also was jubilant in the studios just after the show.

"I think it went great," Crean said. "It was a lot of fun."

Crean appeared calm as he articulately answered 13 questions, 11 of which were phoned in by viewers, during the carefully orchestrated broadcast. Questions ranged from the conduct of Crean's primary campaign to the anti-handgun initiative, Proposition 15, to abortion.

About 30 questions, which were screened by Hoffenblum behind the scenes, did not make their way to the candidate. Those included legalization of marijuana and gay rights.

Hoffenblum explained, prior to air time that questions would be selected based on what he perceived to be viewer interest.

"The more provocative, the better," he said.

The half-hour show, which pre-empted Tic Tac Dough on San Diego's KFMB-TV, Channel 8, was seen between 7:30 and 8 p.m. in San Diego County and portions of south Orange County served by cable television. It was hosted by former "Today" show anchorman Frank Blair.

The sprawling 43rd Congressional District includes portions of south Orange County and much of north San Diego County.

Hoffenblum said cost of the production, including promoting the show throughout the district, was $50,000.

On the other hand, Crean's write-in opponent in the general election, Ron Packard, canceled his scheduled campaign appearances Tuesday night and paid $53 for a room in which to hold a news conference shortly after the broadcast concluded.

"I wasn't sure whether I was seeing 'To Tell The Truth,' 'The Price Is Right,' or the 'Johnny Cash TV Special'," Packard said.

The man who lost the Republican primary to Crean by 92 votes called the production a "blatant attempt by Johnnie Crean to try and buy credibility with money."

He added that the cost of the show, amounting to what he said a congressional candidate earns in one year, was "almost immoral."

Crean told reporters he was not surprised by the questions because he has heard them all during his campaigning. "It's my job to know what people's issues are," he commented.

Additionally, Hoffenblum said Crean had rehearsed the show, including possible questions, three times prior to airtime.

What the public saw was Crean repeating the themes he has stressed since the primary, that he is a "no-nonsense Republican businessman" committed to reducing the size of government.

As he has since the primary election, Crean again apologized for the tenor of his primary campaign saying he regrets the tactics he employed.

While the broadcast was airing, Crean's Democratic opponent Roy "Pat" Archer opened his headquarters to anyone in the district who wanted to watch.

Conductor-arranger Pete King dies

Pete King, a music arranger, composer and conductor who orchestrated such movies as "South Pacific" and "Camelot," died Tuesday at his Newport Beach home. He was 68.

Services for King will be held Saturday at 1:30 p.m. at the Church of the Hills at Forest Lawn in Hollywood Hills.

King was the conductor-arranger for Fred Astaire, Pat Boone, Bing Crosby, Vic Damone, Doris Day, Dean Martin, Frank Sinatra and Lawrence Welk.

He recorded more than 25 record albums with the Pete King Chorale and the Pete King Orchestra and had a lengthy list of movie credits including "Dr. Doolittle," "Flower Drum Song," "State Fair" and "Bells are Ringing."

A native of Greenfield, Ohio, King began his music career as an arranger on the Fred Allen Show in New York City.

He was the musical director for Paramount Pictures, working on "The Godfather" and "Day of the Locust."

AT YOUR SERVICE

GI loans may include condos and mobile homes

DEAR PAT: Can a veteran use his GI home loan to buy a mobile home or condominium? I'd also like to know if you have to make your own loan arrangements.
J.F., Huntington Beach

Veterans can use the GI loan to purchase, construct, alter, improve, repair or refinance a home. This includes the purchase of condominiums and mobile homes, with or without a lot, according to the Veterans Administration.

The loan applicant is required to make his or her own arrangements through the usual financing channels, then VA guarantees up to 60 percent of the loan to a maximum of $27,500 for home loans, and 50 percent up to $20,000 for mobile homes. The current GI home loan interest rate is 14 percent for home loans, 14.5 percent for home improvement loans, 16 percent for mobile home loans and 15.5 percent for a mobile home and lot, or lot only, effective Aug. 24, 1982.

State income tax changes

DEAR READERS: California personal income tax rates for 1982 will be indexed by 9.3 percent, according to the Franchise Tax Board.

The tax rates, standard deduction and personal and dependent exemptions are being revised to reflect the full change to the California Consumer Price Index.

Millions of California residents whose taxable income was unchanged or increased slightly will pay lower state income taxes when they file tax returns next year and taxpayers whose income kept pace with inflation will pay the same or slightly higher taxes than last year.

The standard deduction for single taxpayers will increase from $1,400 to $1,530 while the personal exemption credit increases from $35 to $38. For married taxpayers, the standard deduction increases from $2,800 to $3,060 and the personal exemption credit increases from $70 to $76.

The board cited the example of a married couple with two children whose income for both 1981 and 1982 was $25,000. Their 1981 state income tax would be $533 and their 1982 tax would be $467, a reduction of $66. Their income tax would be the same for both years if their 1982 income rose to $26,328.

Because of indexing, the 11 percent maximum state income tax rate will apply to a married couple's taxable income in excess of $48,400 for 1982. In 1977, before the legislature enacted indexing, taxable income above $31,000 was subject to the 11 percent rate.

Three fact sheets: indexing examples and values; California cumulative tax benefit from indexing for the 1982 income year; and 1982 tax rate schedules are available to readers who send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to At Your Service.

Earned income tax rules

DEAR PAT: What is the current rate for earned income credit on federal taxes?
K.L., Newport Beach

Internal Revenue Service says earned income credit is based on a sliding scale which varies with the amount of income. For example, at income levels of $5,000 or less, the rate is 10 percent, but as income levels increase, the percentage rate of the earned income credit decreases.

Son's book reveals dark side of William Saroyan image

By LINDA DEUTSCH

LOS ANGELES (AP) — In the gallery of American literary icons, William Saroyan seemed an uncomplicated figure — a mustachioed, avuncular Armenian writer who loved people and chuckled at their foibles.

Aram Saroyan

But now, a year and a half after his death, Saroyan's son has stepped from the shadows to tell us the image we saw was a fraud perpetrated by the great tale spinner himself.

Aram Saroyan's shocking, "Last Rites," an unsparing memoir of his father's dying days, has unmasked the author of "The Human Comedy" and "The Time of Your Life" as a tormentor of his wife and children, haunted by childhood fears which paralyzed him emotionally, an angry, unforgiving man.

"How well I know the black poisons of his soul," Aram Saroyan writes at the outset of a book which has been compared to "Mommie Dearest," in which Joan Crawford's daughter, Christina, revealed the horrors inflicted by her movie star mother.

But "Last Rites," is more than an expulsion of anger. It is the story of a son's determination to understand his father's demons and to make peace. In the end, it is a healing story.

"As long as I've been alive," Aram Saroyan said in an interview, "I remember people coming up to me with stars in their eyes, saying, 'Oh, you're the son of the famous writer.'

". . .At a certain point, you really want to believe what everybody is telling you about your parent — you want to be part of the group, part of the gang. For years, I was trying to go along with everyone else."

Then, he said he admitted that everyone else was wrong.

"In the case of my father, there he was — almost 180 degrees opposite of his public persona."

It was in April, 1981, when he learned his father was dying in his home town of Fresno, that Aram decided to write his thoughts and found "it was like a torrent unleashed . . . This book was like an emotional unclothing of feelings I didn't even know were there."

Its publication, he said, was a catharsis — "I'm amazed to find how relieved I am. To have all the cards on the table is a relief and a release."

Ironically, the 38-year-old Saroyan sees his book as an enhancement of his father's literary career — a view of the real man which will bring new readers to his work.

"He lost the attention of a hell of a lot of people as his career went on by promoting the image of the Santa Claus of American literature," Aram said. "No one could quite swallow that."

But Aram has been asked whether it's proper to disclose his father's dark side now. One critic accused him of parent assassination. Aram disagrees.

"How well I know the black poisons of his soul," Aram Saroyan writes at the outset of his book.

"We all know that Fitzgerald was an alcoholic, that Hemingway took his own life. This just tells us they are mortal men, and it makes their achievement more remarkable.

"People have not really been interested in my father's work in the last 20 years," said Aram. "Making him a flesh and blood human being will certainly spark new interest. It already has."

For the son, who has struggled to carve a literary identity of his own, "Last Rites" was a breakthrough into the literary mainstream after years of obscurity.

"Last year was the first year I pretty much made a living from writing," said Aram who lives in Bolinas, Calif. with his wife, Gailyn, a painter, and their three children, Strawberry, 12, Cream, 9, and Armenak, 6.

"This book has gotten better reviews than I've gotten on anything I've ever written," said Aram of the work which poured out in a rush of emotion in April and early May, 1981.

"I have since completed a new book, a straight biography of my father and his work," he said. "I don't talk about him in this book as my father but as William Saroyan, the writer."

He also has a screenplay based on the early life of his mother, the former Carol Marcus, now Mrs. Walter Matthau, and the friends of her girlhood — Oona O'Neil and Gloria Vanderbilt.

"It is set in the 1940s and it's about three debutantes who married famous men," says Aram. "The main thrust is the romance between my mother and father."

Although neither Aram nor his sister, Lucy, has received a penny from their father's $1.3 million estate, the son has begun to see a different legacy.

"I realize now that somehow or other I've inherited a vocation," said Aram. "I know that I learned a lot from my father as a writer. And at the very end of his life, he showed me the deeper part of himself I'd never seen before . . . . He did give me that, and I can't imagine anyone giving a more healing gift at the end of a life."

"I'm hoping," Aram adds, "that my book will encourage people — no matter how difficult their relationship with their parents may be — to approach that final passage and try again. I was amazed at what happened."

Parents rally to save lost school programs

Well aware of the fact that a student who has not learned to read will be able to master very little else in the school curriculum, 300 families and one generous anonymous donor have raised $45,000 to restore remedial reading programs in six elementary schools in the Newport-Mesa Unified School District.

Remedial reading was among the programs cut from the financially ailing school district's budget last year.

So parents took matters into their own hands and formed the non-profit Newport-Mesa Schools Foundation to raise money to restore lost programs. Their ambitious goal is in the neighborhood of $1 million.

Wisely, the first gift of $45,000 was earmarked for the reading classes. It will be used to hire six part-time reading specialists who will work with a total of 200 students throughout the year at the six schools.

Fund-raising committees were established last spring at each of the schools and 300 donations, ranging from $1 to $1,000 each produced the first $30,000. A donor who chose to remain anonymous added $15,000.

The funding cuts that have hit so many school districts in the wake of Proposition 13, court rulings and dwindling state budget allocations, also have resulted in sharply curtailed offerings in the areas of music and foreign language instruction at the elementary school level.

While restoration of remedial reading deserves a top priority, it is to be hoped that, with the good offices of the schools foundation and the generosity of concerned citizens, other desirable classes may be restored in due course.

California has lagged behind shamefully in the amount of personal income channeled into the school system, now ranking last in the nation. This eventually may be remedied, but the children can hardly wait while the state plays catch-up.

Efforts like that of the Newport-Mesa Schools Foundation and similar groups in other communities can help fill the void.

Flood insurance hike

Fountain Valley City Council members have no choice but to approve an ordinance that will not win them any popularity contests.

By Nov. 17, on order of the Federal Emergency Management Agency, the council must adopt a new flood plain management ordinance that will result in sharply increased flood insurance fees for most homeowners in the community.

The city tried, unsuccesfully, to appeal a federal map that places 95 percent of Fountain Valley under two to three feet of water in the event of the type of flood that is likely to occur once every 100 years.

So now, unless the ordinance is passed by Nov. 17, banks and savings and loans will not be able to loan money for the purchase or construction of homes and the city itself no longer would be reimbursed for flood damage to city property.

With the new flood management ordinance in effect, people buying homes in the Fountain Valley flood plain — that is most of the city — will be required to carry $75,000 worth of flood insurance at an annual cost of about $280. The present minimum coverage required by the federal government is $35,000, costing between $88 and $160 depending on when the policy was purchased.

It has not been established whether present homeowners will have to increase their coverage to qualify for protection that is backed by the federal government in the event of large damage claims.

The ordinance additionally will require new buildings in the city to be placed on a pad at least three feet above the flood plain, in the interest of escaping future damage.

Although a so-called 100-year flood seems a remote possibility to most of us there are pictures to prove, and those who remember, when vast areas around the Santa Ana River were inundated in earlier floods before today's massive development took place. Much has been done to control the river since then, but nowhere near enough, in the eyes of flood control authorities, to safeguard the present population.

The insurance hike will be a bitter pill for Fountain Valley homeowners, but it's medicine that must be taken.

Beach protection a must

Laguna Beach and Emerald Bay, both beach-oriented communities, have good reason to look askance at a proposal that could result in a greater discharge of sewage pollutants into the ocean off the south coast.

The two communities are among seven participants in the Aliso Water Management Agency (AWMA) which was formed a decade ago to construct a $100 million regional sewage treatment system that ultimately would serve 45,000 acres in south Orange County.

Now AWMA is seeking to take advantage of a change in federal regulations that would eliminate the need for upgraded sewage treatment at an estimated saving of $400,000 a year in operating costs.

The Clean Water Act originally set a goal of 85 percent removal of suspended solids in sewage treatment, but Congress has reduced that to as little as 35 percent, provided it can be established that higher pollution levels will not harm the ocean environment.

Five members of AWMA, the Irvine Ranch Water District, South Laguna County Water District, Moulton Niguel Water District, Los Alisos Water District and El Toro Water District have voted to spend $100,000 for the preparation of studies that could lead to a waiver of the higher requirement.

In fact, equipment for the expensive "secondary" sewage treatment already has been constructed at the AWMA facility in Aliso Canyon, but the agency management says that meeting a lower standard of treatment would result in a big saving in operating costs.

Laguna Beach and Emerald Bay, both scheduled to hook into the treatment system next year, opposed the cost-saving project on grounds their valuable shores could be damaged.

There is cause for concern. South coast beaches too often have had to be closed because of sewage spills resulting from breakdowns in treatment systems.

There should be no downgrading of AWMA's treatment capability unless it can be very positively established that the risks are minimal. The beaches are a treasure for inland communities too.

Trash diggers need to unite

To the Editor:

Auld lang syne could best be used to describe my emotions, for that's what you conjured up in your article of last week, "Trash diggers clean up." Schooled during the great Depression from beginning to end, dig we did — had to if you were going to go to the Saturday matinee at the Cosmo theater where the admission was 10 cents. Had to dig up quite a few Coke bottles and several pounds of newspaper for that amount.

Now I know Mr. Frank Madden of Smiths Food King in Newport Beach and he's not only a capable manager of that store but also a gentleman and his rendition as to what is coming down in this trash bit is good but with omission.

Not told is how come produce items which are thrown out are not first offered at reduced price. Well, it doesn't take a brain to figure that out. Let's just say it isn't good business.

Something else: Mr. Madden and the other store employees would just love to be able to take cast off produce home themselves, but Smiths says "verboten." Some of the mraket employees have let their jealousy out by hassling the "diggers" which is like saying, "If I can't have it neither can you." I think the manager is good in matters of public relations knowing that the diggers also spend a few bucks in the store and there the matter rests, except that a brick wall was built behind the market to put the throwaways in and diggers were quick to figure out that someone forgets to lock the gate quite often.

Well, Reaganomics, and the way I see it us trash diggers had best form an association!

Parking ploy

To the Editor:

Last week's council meeting produced another study to solve Laguna's long-running permanent parking problem for the downtown area. As a member of the council-appointed Parking Task Force Committee I reviewed, along with other members of the community, several sites (including peripheral sites) that would best serve the downtown business community, which supplied the funds in the first place.

THE VOTE of the majority of the council, (Gentry, Bellerue, and Minkin), to go against the advice of the Citizens Parking Task Force, the city's staff, and the paid professional parking consultant to select the Glenneyre site, and to make up their own minds on what was found to be an inferior site at the city employees' and sewer lots; i.e. flood control channel, Edison easement, question of parcel ownership, vehicle ingress and egress to the site, is beyond comprehension to anyone with any planning background.

If this is a ploy to use merchants' and businessmen's funds to supplement the city's past failures to provide low-cost housing and to provide the festival with an inducement for staying, then I feel that the business community is being taken again.

Airport site

To the Editor:

Your editorial on Sunday, Sept. 12 took on SCAG and the subject of a new airport site rather caustically.

You're against El Toro and presumably Pendleton. Chino Hills and Long Beach Harbor seem out of the question. What does this leave — Newport Beach?

Let's consider your reasoning on El Toro. Studies of El Toro have embodied Tom Riley's approach which is you can't interfere with the Marines and/or their mission at El Toro. You say the Marine Corps has rejected the idea (of joint use) soundly. Since when does the Marine Corps make top-level political decisions? It is quite obvious our efforts must be at higher levels. Unfortunately our Congressman shares a reluctance to upset the Marines and this is another hurdle in the path.

MAILBOX

YOU SAY THE Marines have always been good neighbors. This is interesting but not compelling. Then — "SCAG esimates that El Toro population alone would increase . . ." "In that same period the Mission Viejo-Trabuco population is expected to climb . . . to nearly 200,000. And this is the arena in which SCAG would locate a new international airport."

So future population growth must not suffer the effects of airport noise, dirt and traffic? What about the present problem for Newport Beach? You are certainly entitled to an editorial opinion but I don't see the need for an acerbic presentation of partial data.

The fact that the airport could be physically accommodated many times over at El Toro is of consequence. The fact that the added jet noise might be proportionately slight and impact an area that now is less populated than that presently under the flight patterns is of consequence. The fact that the present airport was never intended as a jet port is of consequence. The fact that Newport Beach people and property values are affected is of consequence. You mentioned none of these facts — and had no suggestions other than that SCAG's proposal wouldn't fly.

Maybe it won't, but a lot of people in Newport Beach would like to avoid any growth in the airport. Supervisor Riley's efforts to keep the noise down are greatly appreciated but how is air travel growth to be accommodated?

Any solution will have political problems and it's easy to criticize any of those proposed. Do you have any suggestions — or only criticism?

PAUL RYCKOFF

Airport fan

To the Editor:

Reading your Thursday edition of the paper I immediately noticed the article concerning Allan Beek's fuss with John Wayne Airport and its related airplane noise. I happen to enjoy the availability of having several air carriers in my area. It is just a short four-mile drive from my home in Newport Beach and I have used the airlines on several occasions.

It does trouble me to think of the airlines being forced out of the immediate area and relocated in Beek's proposed Santiago Canyon. Personally I would much rather hear the roar of a Boeing 737 or Douglas DC 9 Super 90 than to hear the sound of a teen-ager's "hot rod car." Perhaps we should move all the residents who own such cars?

I ask the people of Newport Beach who feel as I do to please speak up and keep the airport named after the "Duke" right where it is. After all, don't we all love airplane noise?

GREGORY LOUIS SHWARTZ

Copter foes

To the Editor:

The problem of helicopters flying over the rooftops of North Costa Mesa has been a matter of major concern to residents and the homeowners association that represents them. In 1980 communications were sent to the City Council of Costa Mesa calling this to their attention. Adding to this concern was still another letter directed to the council in September 1980 pointing out that the problem was not just North Costa Mesa areas, but other associations representing College Park, Halecrest-Hall of Fame, Mesa Verde and West Side Costa Mesa also joined together through the "Joint Associations Board of Costa Mesa" calling attention to the matter. A letter was sent to the council expressing a unified motion "that the Joint Associations Board of Costa Mesa has taken a stand of being opposed to a helicopter landing pad being allowed in the old McNally School site (where a savings and loan headquarters was to be built) and that further this association (five homeowners associations) is opposed to any further consideration for any helicopter landing site anywhere within the boundaries of the City of Costa Mesa."

THE LANDING site was approved for the savings and loan and with "tongue in cheek" the council made a stipulation that approval of a helicopter landing pad would be only for a 30-day period to see if it met all their standards. Now, this "thirty-day period" is after the entire facility is completely installed.

Several letters were transmitted following this to the City Council reminding them that the letter from the five association members of the Joint Association had not been acted upon. It was estimated that these associations represent about 7,000 homes or about 21,000 persons. There was no reply nor any action.

The North Costa Mesa Homeowners Association decided to take the matter one more step. Using their own funds, they surveyed 2,108 homes asking residents how they felt about the matter of heliports being constructed for take-offs and landings within the city of Costa Mesa. The return of the survey card was strictly voluntary with the residents even furnishing their own stamps. A surprising 21.06 percent return was received which is an excellent random sample of opinion. It indicated 87.2 percent opposed to heliports within the city. The completed survey was presented to the City Council. There has been no move to adopt an ordinance and it has been since 1980 the first request was made.

The citizens of Costa Mesa have done their homework, studied it and know the answers. I think the City Council has failed the test. How do you feel?

DAVE LEIGHTON
President, North Costa Mesa
Homeowners Association

Unethical

To the Editor:

Tom Wood is a city employee. It is highly unethical to use him in his official capacity as city attorney for Costa Mesa to defend political inanities committed by the collectivist clique on the City Council.

If our local petty politicians are too incompetent to resolve the Ali Roushan affair without jailing the artist and destroying his art, let them write letters in their own defense and stop wasting city employees and taxpayer dollars on self-serving political flackery.

J.P. PALMER

Delighted

To the Editor:

I was thoroughly delighted to read the letter of Tom Wood (Costa Mesa City Attorney) in the Sept. 12 Pilot re "Ali" and, as you called it in your editorial, his "ridiculous jail term."

My reaction to said editorial was "If Roushan doesn't like our laws and refuses to abide by same, why doesn't he go back to whence he came?"

But Mr. Wood succinctly gave the facts, which, I would think, one would check before editorializing.

'Oil weapon' may backfire on OPEC nations

JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — Try to fight back your tears: My sources tell me the Arab oil countries are in deep trouble, and are unlikely to pull out of it any time soon.

Some analysts even go so far as to predict that OPEC — the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries — is on the verge of collapse. A confidential White House memo I've seen put the situation bluntly, and with undisguised satisfaction: "The oil weapon has been laid to rest once and for all. The Cartel is dead. R.I.P."

REST IN PEACE, indeed. What makes the demise of OPEC's stranglehold on the Western industrial countries particularly gratifying is that it was brought about by the sheiks' insensate greed.

By using their "oil weapon" as a gun at the head of the industrial nations, the OPEC sheiks not only helped bring on the recession that has cut down on their onetime customers' need for oil; they forced the victims of their monopoly to find alternative forms of energy to run their factories and heat their homes. Fuel-economical automobiles have replaced the profligate gas guzzlers that enriched the desert despots.

The result has been disastrous for OPEC, as illustrated by the sheiks' sales to their most important customer, the United States. In 1977, U.S. oil imports from the Middle East totaled 3.7 million barrels a day, or 20 percent of this country's oil consumption. During the first quarter of 1982, the United States bought only 1.1 million barrels of Middle East oil a day, or 6.9 percent of our oil needs.

OPEC has responded to the worldwide oil glut in predictable fashion: Individual members of the international cartel have broken ranks, selling oil at the best prices they can get behind the backs of their monopoly partners.

The reason, of course, is that they have to. Not only are the OPEC countries in danger of being undercut by non-members like Mexico, which is desperate for revenue from its oil resources, but they need the income themselves almost as desperately. Like Mexico, the Arab sheikdoms have committed themselves to ambitious development programs that were based on the now-untenable assumption that King Oil would reign supreme indefinitely.

Sources told my associate Lucette Lagnado that Saudi Arabia is probably the OPEC nation that has been one of the hardest hit by the oil glut. For the Saudi princes, oil revenues spell the difference between rule and ruin.

The Saudi royal family is in a terrible bind. For years it has placated its subjects by sharing some of the desert kingdom's oil wealth in the form of social welfare programs, hospitals and housing. Given the extravagant lifestyle of the Saudi princelings and their retinues, this has been the only way the royal family can stave off revolution and ensure its own survival.

NOW THE MONEY is no longer coming in at the old rate — but the Saudis must still continue their system of largesse. The Saudi government recently announced its budget for the coming year, and it shows an increase of several billion dollars, even though it is obvious that the country's one source of income — oil — is producing drastically less revenue than it used to. The government doesn't dare to reduce its domestic expenditures, for fear of revolution.

There's an additional, macabre dilemma faced by the Saudis: The Iran-Iraq war poses a threat to the Saudi regime the longer it continues. If Iran wins, its radical Moslem revolution could topple the Saudi regime. Yet supporting Iraq is costing the Saudis more than they can afford, while risking the Ayatollah Khomeini's wrath.

On the other hand, as long as the war continues, the Saudis can sell more oil, relieved of competition from Iran and Iraq, which are too busy fighting to pump oil. In fact, one source said: "If Iran and Iraq were to stop fighting, Saudi Arabia is finished."

In any case, one thing seems clear: OPEC's once-vaunted "oil weapon" is beginning to look more like a cap pistol every day.

New hymnbook drops some old favorites

ANDY ROONEY

If you're Catholic, Jewish or not religious at all, you probably don't care, but the Episcopalians are putting out a new edition of their traditional hymnbook and they're taking a lot of old favorites out and changing the words to others.

I'm not an Episcopalian either, but I'm interested because when I was growing up we used to sing two hymns in school every morning and I got to like them. I don't know the difference between an Episcopal hymn and a Presbyterian hymn, if there is any, but I think the Episcopalians are making a big mistake dropping some of their best numbers.

"THE BATTLE Hymn of the Republic" is out of their new hymnbook, for example. Can you believe that? There won't be any more singing: "In the beauty of the lilies Christ was born across the sea,

"With a glory in His bosom that transfigures you and me."

I couldn't be more shocked if the Vatican announced the Pope wasn't Polish.

They're also cutting out the hymn that begins:

"Once to every man and nation Comes the moment to decide."

The reason they give for taking this Top Twenty hymn off their list is that they think it suggests God only gives people one chance. Apparently the Episcopalians don't like the idea of not being able to make a few mistakes in life.

The mistake the people who run the Episcopal Church are making here is in analyzing the religious songs. I'm sure any serious theologian who studied the 600 hymns in their book would find a lot of things in the words that don't make any sense at all, but a hymn doesn't have to make any more sense to be moving than rock music does. The beauty of a hymn is in what it does to the spirit, not the brain. I have probably sung "Rock of ages, cleft for me" a thousand times and I love it, but I don't have the vaguest idea what it means.

There's just no sense pretending that hymns have a lot of intellectual content that stands up to close inspection by historians, scientists or even theologians. The Episcopalians are dropping "He's Got the Whole World In His Hands." Come on, Episcopalians! First thing you know you'll be telling us there is no Santa Claus. There's nothing more religious than Mahalia Jackson singing that song.

THEY'RE ALSO dropping the one that begins "God of our fathers, known of old." You probably remember the refrain:

"Lord God of hosts, be with us yet,
Lest we forget . . . lest we forget."

That was written by Rudyard Kipling, and the Episcopal fathers don't want it around anymore because they say it has some racist lines in the fifth stanza. I say drop the fifth stanza and leave the hymn in the book. No one ever sings a hymn all the way down to the fifth stanza anyway.

Several years ago, after a bitter argument in the church hierarchy, women were admitted to the priesthood in the Episcopal church. Now, church leaders are going even further by eliminating references to sex in the hymns. Where a hymn uses the word "brother" or "son," they're changing it to a word with a neuter gender, like "disciple" or "child."

At the meeting where the changes were approved, the Episcopalians had an argument over whether or not to leave in the patriotic hymn "My Country Tis of Thee." It was left in but I imagine the people who didn't want it were sixth grade English teachers who said there was no such word as "tis" in the dictionary.

SYDNEY HARRIS

Thoughts at Large:

— If all your friends and associates are millionaires, as President Reagan's seem to be, then the feedback you get from them is just as narrow and distorted and divorced from reality as if the only people you saw were terrorists and revolutionaries.

— There is no substitute for quality: so-called "warranties" on small home appliances are nearly meaningless, because it takes so much time and trouble to send them back for repair or replacement it is less vexing simply to discard them and buy another.

— The axiom that "knowledge is power" cuts both ways: if the knowledge is disseminated, then power becomes more equally distributed, but if the knowledge is concentrated, then the power become dangerously oligarchic.

— I am convinced that inside every pompous personality there is a wistful core who is frightened that any show of friendliness will be taken as a sign of weakness.

— There is no more misleading phrase than "public opinion," once we understand how "opinion" differs from mere prejudice or sentiment or self-interest.

— Reforms lead to changes in institutions, and these changes breed new abuses which then require reform, and so on ad infinitum.

— I have never agreed that one picture is worth a thousand words, but it is certainly true that one slogan can blot out a thousand thoughts.

— A title does a disservice to a painting, by calling attention to its subject rather than to the underlying treatment, which is of first importance.

U.S. nabs wandering California fugitive on Island

A California lawyer who enjoyed a meandering 23-month South Pacific cruise while federal authorities sought him to face drug charges is being held in prison in lieu of bail of $2 million.

The government finally found Alan Hunter on the atoll of Vanu Atu in the New Hebrides islands, where he was spotted by an alert policeman who remembered the name of his 44-foot sloop from an international police alert, Assistant U.S. Attorney Kenneth I. Wirfel said, in New York.

Hunter was deported from Australia as an undesirable alien and was arrested when he landed at Honolulu.

The "urban mountaineer" who failed in a bid to climb the 853-foot Transamerica Pyramid is free on bail, awaiting word on whether he'll have to face felony charges connected with his stunt.

District Attorney Arlo Smith said in San Francisco, he'd make a decision this week about whether to press charges against Ron Broyles, who posted $3,500 bail a day after he was booked for investigation of felony malicious mischief, misdemeanor trespassing and resisting or delaying arrest.

Actor Cary Grant and actress Dina Merrill are among six people President Reagan says he will appoint to the board of trustees of the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts.

Reagan said he also was appointed Alice H. Hanley, former vice president of the New York Securities Co. Inc.; Alice S. Marriott, vice president of the Marriott Corp.; Donna Tuttle, a California political consultant, and Mrs. Jack Wrather, vice president of the Wrather Corp.

BURSITIS IS A BURSA INFLAMMATION

by Terry Grant, R. Ph.

A bursa is a small sac, filled with a slippery fluid. It is located between two body parts that move upon one another. They occur in several parts of the body and serve the same purpose as a bearing. The bursa near the ligaments of the shoulder joint is a frequent pain causer.

Rest and treatment are usually required to reduce the inflammation and enable the bursa to regain its slippery quality. You can save yourself a lot of future pain by visiting your Doctor.

JUST COASTING

Radio waves drown out worries

TOM MURPHINE

THAT SURFING SOUND: Sometimes we just don't realize how lucky we are living along this coastline. We're all close enough to get down to the sea, smell the breezes and listen to the soothing sounds of surf rumbling against the beach or pounding into spray upon the rocks. It's a peaceful sort of thing.

Comes now some reports to suggest that all of this ocean tranquility has been discovered as a possible replacement for rock music and blaring stereo radios.

According to recent wire news dispatches, radio station KMAH out of Menlo Park, about 35 miles below San Francisco, has been recording the sounds of the ocean and playing it all night long. That's all. Just ocean sounds.

Now here's an FM radio station that really has come up with something different.

ACCORDING TO THE station's general manager Frank Spinetta, they tried it a couple of nights more or less as a gag and started getting enthusiastic listener response.

Insomniacs, thrashing about in their beds, can simply turn up the volume and drown out all the car noise on the street or neighborhood battles with the surfing sound.

Ocean sounds broadcast between 10 p.m. and 7:30 a.m. have become such a hit that KMAH has refined the art.

Spinetta reported, "We've now made six differemt recordings of the sea's song. In one recording, we had seagulls, sea lions and foghorns. But we took out the sea lions because they sounded like pigs.

"Then we took out the seagulls and got a call the next day from a listener who demanded we put them back in."

Sounds of the sea will lull some people to sleep right away

It all sounds like a grand idea for people who want to escape the blare of everyday life. You have to doubt that any station serving our Orange Coast would pick up on the notion of running ocean recordings all night long.

FOR ONE THING, residents of Surfside or El Morro mobile home park who woke up in the middle of the night with all that ocean sound around them might figure they'd just gone awash.

You have to suspect that ocean sounds wouldn't be too popular as a soother with youngsters who have grown up along our coastline. They're used to hearing the ocean all the time.

They relax better with acid rock blaring from four separate loudspeaker systems. They do their homework to that kind of racket.

IT'S AMAZING. You wonder if their brains are going to absorb all that learning before their ears blow out.

Some folks who really do live near the ocean might not find the sounds of the sea so soothing. They're used to that. They might need a radio playing something that would remind them more of real life.

Maybe one of our local radio stations could come up with an all-night broadcast that would be nothing but sounds of the San Diego Freeway during rush hours.

Or, for those West Newport residents who miss the good old summertime, you could record the sounds of screeching tires and falling glass, so they could drift off into normal slumber.

FOR MASOCHISTS, you could offer old play-by-play recordings of Ram football games.

Obviously, it's tough to please everybody in the sound department.

Alternatives considered, however, the ocean sounds better every night.

Parents spur March of Dimes

By JODI CADENHEAD
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Marilee Stockman of Newport Beach can still remember how frightened she felt when doctors said her 11-month-old son Christopher had hydrocephalus. That was 10 years ago.

"I had heard of it only through women's magazines," recalled Stockman. "And the only thing I could think of was big heads and death."

About two out of every 1,000 infants born in the United States have the disease that occurs when normal circulation and reabsorption of fluid produced in the brain is blocked.

If left untreated, the accumulation of fluids can result in swelling of the head, deterioration of the brain, retardation and sometimes death.

Following surgery to burst the problematic cyst in the brain, Christopher has led a near normal life. A slight coordination problem doesn't stop him from pursuing such active sports as flag football.

"I still get a knot in my stomach when I think about him possibly getting hurt," said Stockman. "But from the day he got home from the hospital our philosophy has been to let him do everything he can."

Having dealt so successfully with her son's illness, Stockman decided in 1974 to organize a support group for parents of hydrocephalus children.

She turned to the Orange County Chapter March of Dimes Birth Defects Foundation and received an enthusiastic response.

Likewise Claudia Colton, 34, of Laguna Hills became a March of Dimes volunteer after her daughter, Amy, now 6, was born one month prematurely.

Although it is difficult to determine an exact link between Amy's prematurity and current medical problems, she has suffered from asthma and has been highly susceptible to infections, said Colton.

She joined a March of Dimes-sponsored program that monitored the physical and mental progress of children born early. She also volunteered to visit parents whose babies were hospitalized by complications from low birth weights.

"When you're told that your child is probably brain damaged at birth, you have a great deal of anxiety. It turned out Amy wasn't," she said. "But parents need moral support."

In many ways the two Orange Coast mothers mirror the new image of the March of Dimes, best known for its successful fight against polio before the Salk vaccine was discovered in the 1950s.

"Some people still think we're the polio foundation," said Dorothy Sutherland, executive director of the Orange County chapter of the March of Dimes. "They don't know we work with birth defects."

The March of Dimes has raised more than $520 million for research and education since 1938 for a long list of birth defects. Among them are spina bifida, cleft palate, club foot, cystic fibrosis, PKU, Tay-Sachs, hypothyroidism, diabetes and sickle cell anemia.

Through the Walk-A-Thon, golf tournaments, Mothers' March and fund-raising efforts the Orange County chapter raised $649,000 last year.

The March of Dimes, that began with a plea from entertainer, Eddie Cantor, to find a cure for polio, was the first grass roots charity organization of its kind.

Ironically, the agency that opened its first Orange County office in Costa Mesa in 1960 has returned to the city following 21 years in Santa Ana. The doors opened today at the Rea Community Center, 661 Hamilton St.

When the rent went up in Santa Ana, officials began searching for a larger office, said Sutherland, looking around at the new 5,400-square-foot office.

Sutherland said that 1,700 or 7 percent of the babies born each year in Orange County suffer from some birth defect, of which 80 percent can be prevented through pre-natal care or helped later with medical treatment.

"You don't just want to save a life, you want to save a child for a good life," said Sutherland.

Recently March of Dimes volunteers began going into grammar schools to assist students in accepting handicapped classmates.

Brothers hold two campus' reins

By SANDIE JOY
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

The Stevens brothers' sphere of influence over higher education along the Orange Coast has doubled this fall.

Dr. Lee Stevens has been president of Golden West College in Huntington Beach five years.

His brother, Dr. Larry P. Stevens, has taken over the top administrative post at Saddleback Community College with campuses in Mission Viejo and Irvine.

The Saddleback chancellor said, however, his brother had "very little" to do with his decision to go after the $65,000-a-year post. Some 30,000 students attend the 14-year-old college's two campuses.

He added, "The faculty and staff enjoy a national reputation for excellence in many programs. It's an innovative creative district.

"It's also in a growing area which the large majority of community colleges in the United States can't say anymore because they've maximized out on the number of students they can serve.

"I'm told by the year 2000, another 50,000 to 100,000 people will call this area home," the chancellor said, "and I find that exciting."

Larry Stevens, who came to Saddleback from Washington, where he was president for seven years at Tacoma Community College, also was attracted because of the school's proximity to the beach.

Stevens and his wife Pamela have rented a house near the school's South Campus in Mission Viejo, just over the hill from Laguna Beach.

Stevens was chosen for the Saddleback post from a field of 50 candidates.

He succeeds Dr. Robert Lombardi, who had been chief executive at Saddleback for more than half its history.

Lombardi left the college in May to become vice president in charge of a new division of Datascan, a Los Angeles-based computer firm. The division he's heading is based in Irvine and involves development of educational software programs for computers.

At Saddleback College, Stevens said one of his biggest challenges "is to preserve the quality of programs and services to the biggest number of students we can, given the funding restraints that are on us."

"I have a lot to learn and

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Anyone who has read your column regularly, as I have, must be keenly aware of the great number of lonely people in the world. I wonder if those people have any idea as to why they are lonely. Several years ago you wrote a column listing character and personality traits that make some people less popular than others. It would be a great service if you ran it again. I lost that column when my wallet was stolen two years ago. Thanks, Annie. — BORIS FROM BRONXVILLE

DEAR B.: I have a wonderful right arm who has been with me 26 years. Her name is Carmella De Santi. She knows where everything is in this office, including columns I couldn't find in 100 years. Carmie went straight to the files and found the one you want. Here it is — and the thanks go to her.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: You receive many letters from people who are lonely. They wonder why. Yesterday a woman I work with complained that no one liked her. I sat down and wrote 10 personality and character traits that bother me most.

Strangely enough, of the 10 traits, this woman has seven. I hope you will print my list. It might help some of those lonely people see themselves as others see them.

(1) A compulsion to show off knowledge.
(2) Exaggerates so much it is almost the same as lying.
(3) Moodiness. Warm and friendly one day, cold as ice the next.
(4) Bossiness. Must run everything.
(5) Unreliable. Word is no good.
(6) Chronic complainer and inveterate crepe-hanger. Gloom-and-doomer.
(7) Nosy. Asks a lot of questions that are none of her business.
(8) Gossipy. Knows everything about everybody. Makes me wonder what she is saying about me behind my back.
(9) Says things in anger then tries to smooth things over with a gift.
(10) Always fishing for compliments but never gives any. — WATERTOWN, S.D.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: A long time ago you printed a few lines about petty people who gossip, as compared to great people who discuss ideas. Please repeat it. I have just taken a job where there is so much trivial garbage passed off as conversation, it is driving me nuts. Thank you. — BINGHAMTON (N.Y.) HEEBIE JEEBIES

DEAR JEEBIES: I think you are asking for the following — which I am glad to rerun:

Bright people talk about ideas.
Mediocre people talk about things.
Small people talk about other people.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: For years my wife has been telling me that she is going to get a cat to keep her company when I travel. Last week she did it. The only problem is the cat is 6 feet, 2 inches and plays the drums with a rock group. What should I do? — WORRIED IN MEMPHIS

DEAR WORRIED: You can shave it before you tell it again. The last time I heard that gag I kicked the slats out of my cradle.

Can drugs be a friend in time of stress? If you keep your head together can they be of help? Ann Landers' all-new booklet, "The Lowdown on Dope," separates the fact from the fiction. Get it today. For each booklet ordered, send $2, plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope (37 cents postage) to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Ill. 60611.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Results come from inquiries made nearly two months ago. Waiting period is finished; green light flashes for direct action. Lines of communication are opened, travel route is clearly defined.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Emotional responses dominate; you'll have chance to renegotiate agreement. Focus on money belonging to others, on fresh start and on chance to gain greater independence. Search will be inaugurated.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Direct appeal brings results — if you avoid any display of arrogance. Be a good listener, be considerate of idiosyncrasies of one who controls funds. Maintain low profile, realize that your turn will come in very near future.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Close associate engages in soliloquy which represents pent-up frustration, if not fury. Key is to be understanding, flexible and to realize that humor can soothe savage beast.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Emphasis on change, speculation, intensified relationship and need for instituting rebuilding process. Member of opposite sex makes demands, many of which are justified.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Boundary lines are drawn, terms are defined and pertinent material is identified. Streamline techniques, institute special services, obtain professional property appraisal.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Focus on family relationships, domestic adjustments, purchase of art object or luxury item. Short trip may be necessary to complete special mission. Taurus, Scorpio and another Libra figure prominently.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You'll locate what had been lost, missing or stolen, You'll see situation in light of reality. Toss aside rose-colored glasses; be sure you leave no room for self-deception.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): This is your power-play day! Lunar, numerical cycles point to pressure, challenge, responsibility and the obtaining of solid results. You'll be given more responsibility, have chance for promotion and a relationship will reach its zenith.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Nagging doubts disappear; you'll have backstage view, you'll be rid of burden and you'll have assurances that efforts are appreciated. Cycle is nearing a peak; you'll make discovery which verifies past views.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Some of your most ingratiating qualities surge to forefront. Powers of persuasion are heightened; you'll win your way, get your way and make others like it.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): By following through on first impressions you invite success. Take initiative, heed inner voice and display sense of direction. Superior is impressed and will make room for you in more suitable, profitable situation. Watch Cancer.

Opening lead: Ace of ♣.

You should learn from your mistakes, or so we are told. But somehow it seems almost indecent to profit from them. This hand is from the Life Master Pairs Championship at the recent Summer North American Championships.

Looking only at the North-South hands, you would want to play in a heart slam. However, it would take an unnatural line of play to make your slam. Most likely you would lose a club trick and a trump. However, Ed and Joyce Landau of Wayne, N.J., ended up in six spades via the above sequence, and Ed proceeded to make it!

West led the ace of clubs and shifted to his singleton trump. Declarer took dummy's three high trumps as West parted with two clubs. Declarer came to hand with the king of diamonds and drew the last trump. Dummy sluffed a diamond and West let go another club. Now declarer led a diamond to the ace and ruffed a diamond, and when East discarded a club on that trick, declarer had an inferential count of the hand.

Since East had entered the bidding at the three-level missing the ace of his suit, he had to have at least six clubs. And he had shown up with four spades and two diamonds. Therefore, he could have at most one heart.

In that event, the hand could be made only if East had started with either a singleton queen or singleton ten of hearts. Declarer cashed the ace of hearts and, when the ten dropped from West, he continued with a low heart to the nine. When the finesse succeeded, the slam was home for 23½ out of a possible 25 matchpoints.

No drinking safe during pregnancy

DEAR DR. STEINCROHN: I'm confused and I don't think you'll blame me. I'm pregnant and my doctor tells me not to take alcohol at all. My best friend's doctor, one of the best obstetricians around, tells her, "It's all right to take one or two drinks a day — but no more."

I'm not an alcohol-lover, but it would be nice if I could have wine with my dinner and occasional cocktail at a party. What do you say? — MRS. E.

DEARMRS. E.: Want to know what the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse thinks? "The safest choice is not to drink during pregnancy." Lately, there's been much scientific and public awareness of what's known as the fetal alcohol syndrome.

The risks of maternal drinking are serious complications such as deformities for the infant. Taking three ounces daily is considered by many to be a high level of consumption.

I agree it's safer not to drink during pregnancy. Some findings have shown that taking as little as one ounce per day — or even once a week — may increase the risk of spontaneous abortion.

Irish say goodbye to 'Danny Boy'

HUGH MULLIGAN
MULLIGAN STEW

EAST DURHAM, N.Y. (AP) — The most popular songs in Ireland these days are not Irish songs at all, but the down home Nashville sound of good old country music.

"Mother Machree" can't hold a candle in the auld sod to Dolly Parton, and the greenest jukebox lyrics you hear any night in the Emerald Isle have nothing to do with the hills of Killarney or the vale of Avoca, but emanate from the Johnny Cash recording of "The Green, Green Grass of Home," a best seller on both sides of the troubled border.

Although I have observed the phenomenon myself in many hours of job related pub crawling in all of Ireland's 32 counties, my authority for this disturbing trend in Hibernian musical taste is Al Logan, the Belfast crooner who regularly commutes to the Catskill Mountains in New York to reacquaint the immigrant sons and daughters of Erin and their offspring with their roots.

"Country music is emotional and sentimental," Logan explained as we both waited for the breakfast bell to sound in a lovely green glen of the "Irish Alps," as the northeast corner of the Catskills is called.

"And the Irish are an emotional, sentimental people. They like their songs simple and direct, tugging a bit at the heart strings and maybe telling a story — a sad story, preferably."

The strange thing is that the Irish both at home and abroad have adopted such country favorites as "One Day at a Time," "Tie a Yellow Ribbon 'Round the Old Oak Tree" and "By The Time I Get to Phoenix" as their own, while giving "Macushla," "Danny Boy" and "The Rose of Tralee" the bum's rush into ethnic oblivion.

The younger generation, the colleens in particular, don't want to hear about "Delaney's Donkey," "Courtin' in the Kitchen" or "The Cottage With the Horseshoe O'er the Door."

They suspect there is something degrading about the women in this and don't care a hoot whether Paddy Reilly ever gets back to Ballyjamesduff after all his gallivanting.

Their tastes in Irish music, when the country-western repertoire finally runs down, seem to center on maudlin latter-day rebel songs like "The Boys Behind the Wire" and a new wave of always welcome raucous drinking songs like "Would You Like Your Old Lobby Washed Down."

Both in the Irish Alps and in the Wicklow Hills outside Dublin I have come across young Irish entertainers who didn't know the words to "Galway Bay" and "Danny Boy." You'd have thought I'd asked them to play an early Haydn Opera or an obscure Kyrie in Gregorian chant.

Al Logan, who croons like Bing Crosby in a slight Antrim accent and has been told he looks like Perry Como, has kept up with the times but now and then sneaks in a John McCormack favorite or an immigrant song like "The Mountains of Mourne" or "Phil the Fluter's Ball" out of respect for the great Irish composer Percy French.

Among his personal favorites is "These Are My Mountains," and when he sings it nowadays the audience doesn't know whether he is lavishing lyrical love on the Catskills or the Mountains of Mourne back home.

Logan has become a seasonal fixture at Gavin's Golden Hill House, one a couple of dozen authentic Irish-American "houses," as the hotels are still called, arriving every spring and leaving just after Columbus Day for a winter round of engagements in whatever clubs and bars still survive in Belfast.

"The Catskills do remind me of the Mountains of Mourne," Logan confessed, "Green and purple, according to the mood of the clouds, and with a lot better weather. At least it doesn't rain all the time, but I can't stand the winter. I'm not a snow person."

Logan sang in clubs on both the Catholic and Protestant sides of the so-called peace line until the violence and the bombings left most of the nightlife to the terrorists and the fire brigade. By then, the people had become so polarized no one ventured on alien turf for a bit of refreshment and music.

"A man came up to me one day in the Belfast airport," Logan recalls, "and said to me, 'My sister was a great fan of yours until she found out you were a Catholic.' I guess to her it was like losing my voice or something."

Since the Catholics are no longer required to eat fish on Friday, it's no longer possible to determine who is a "left footer" or a "mackerel snapper," unless a Donnybrook breaks out when the band strikes up "The Boys Behind the Wire."

Vacation book plot was too weak

ERMA BOMBECK
AT WIT'S END

Today is a big day in my life.

I finished reading, "Warm Bodies in the Yukon."

It's a trashy, sleazy novel of passion and raw courage set in the Alaska wilderness that I started reading on a vacation in 1979.

Obviously, I don't read as fast as I used to.

IT WAS ONE OF THOSE books that was supposed to make the whole trip. It certainly passed all the requirements I set for such a book:

1. You can take the cover anywhere.
2. There are no words in it over two syllables.
3. You can eat, watch TV, work crossword puzzles and carry on a phone conversation while you're reading it.
4. It will not bruise your chest when it falls on it when you nod off.

"Warm Bodies in the Yukon" was perfect. The saleswoman at the bookstore said it was so stimulating that she couldn't even stop reading it to eat, let alone to sleep.

I started the book on the plane. It began, "Beth peered over the blanket of animal fur with frightened eyes. She had never been with a man before but somehow as Brad Stuart looked at her from across the room of the abandoned cabin, she knew that was about to change."

I dozed off and didn't wake up until the stewardess was telling us to prepare for our landing.

I took "Warm Bodies" with me to the beach, to the beauty shop and to public parks, but never got beyond the first page.

IN THE SPRING OF 1980, I got it out again and vowed to finish it. Somehow the torrid love scene between Beth and Brad didn't seem to do it for me. Maybe it was the peanut butter that stuck the pages together that brought too much wholesomeness to it.

If you're a reader, you don't want to admit that a book owns you. In the fall of '80, I put it by my bedside and vowed to read 10 pages a night, which I did until Christmas. Unfortunately, it was the same 10 pages. Every night I'd fall asleep over them and forget what I had read and have to start all over again.

This year, I took "Warm Bodies In the Yukon" with me on my vacation again. There would be no more fooling around with it. I would finish the book!

I was within 30 pages of the end when a woman with a floppy hat sat down in a chair next to me. "Oh," she said, "You're reading 'Warm Bodies In the Yukon'." I nodded.

"I loved the ending," she said, "Somehow I never expected Beth to give the baby away and go back to teach school on Long Island after Brad died."

"I take it you've read the book," I said, closing the pages.

"No, just saw the movie."

"Some of the youngsters are afraid of braces," said Sutherland. "We try to make them see that these are things that help."

In addition to the education programs, the March of Dimes organizes groups for parents of children with spina bifida, hydrocephalus and Down's syndrome.

The agency also sponsors several health tests for infants throughout the year.

Residents can also participate in the free "Ask Our Doctor" program that offers advice on birth defects, nutrition and the effects of specific drugs and venereal diseases.

Mind having your house made ghostly?

Although the Orange County chapter of the March of Dimes has moved into a new home in Costa Mesa, officials are looking for a house to haunt.

After four years of entertaining trick-or-treaters at the Orange County Fairgrounds, volunteers have had to look for a new place to fill with cemeteries, guillotines and scary mazes.

The spirits are hoping to find at least a 20,000-square-foot building to haunt the entire ghosting month of October. Proceeds go to the March of Dimes.

understand about the California scene but, so far, I do not find it a whole lot different from Washington," he said.

Speaking informally in his new office on the school's South Campus, Stevens said, "After seven days on the job, I don't have many pronouncements to make about anything.

"I expect to spend the first six months assessing the Saddleback situation and the second six months putting into place an administrative organization to help me manage the district for the board."

If he makes any changes at Saddleback, Stevens said he doesn't expect to begin them until next summer.

Fabric Fair's talk outlined

A lecture on the Indian arts and weavings of Guatemala and the adjacent Mexican states of Oaxaca and Chiapas will be one of the featured presentations at Orange Coast College's 12th annual Fabric Fair.

The fair is scheduled 7:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 16, in OCC's Chemistry Building. Admission is $8, and people may come and go throughout the day.

Tickets are on sale in the OCC Ticket Office, located in the college's Administration Building at 2701 Fairview Road, Costa Mesa. The office is open weekdays from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m., and Saturdays from 8 a.m. to noon.

Tickets will also be available at the door.

Under the theme "Fibers, Fabrics, Fashions and Furnishings," the fair will include 101 lectures and workshops, and 45 exhibitors.

Titled "Native Arts: Oaxaca, Chiapas, Guatemala," the Indian arts lecture will be presented by prize-winning author and lecturer, Gordon Frost. He has assembled one of the world's largest collections of Guatemalan Indian art, and spends several months each year in Mexico and Guatemala.

Frost's lecture will be presented at 9 and 10 a.m.

The dusty trail is in Guatemala and southeast Mexico where Frost has spent the last 16 years traveling and amassing an extensive collection.

The major portion of his collection is a colorful array of Indian textiles — all hand-woven by Mayans in the southwest portion of Guatemala. The weavings, along with ceramics, dance masks and jewelry, are remnants of what may be a dying culture, according to the 39-year-old collector.

Frost's primary interest is in recording the culture before it vanishes.

"Guatemala is changing, through radio, television and Western clothes," he says. "I felt there was a cause to record the culture and its art."

Frost returns to Guatemala annually to scout out new pieces for his collection. Traveling by a four-wheel-drive vehicle, he negotiates the back roads of the mountainous Guatemalan highlands, exploring primitive villages.

When he discovers a particular article of clothing or rug that captures his fancy, he "establishes a rapport" with its creator and then bargains for it with cash.

The weavings, which are produced both for ceremonial and functional occasions, are a collage of vivid purples, greens, turquoises, maroons, yellows and reds. Figures resembling monkeys, chickens, deer and birds are seen throughout the tapestries, but Frost says no one knows for sure what they symbolize.

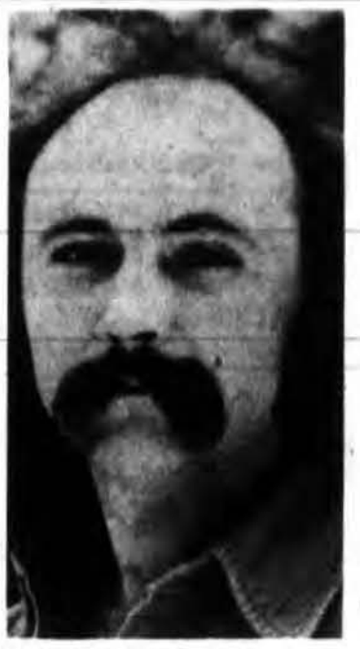
Singer makes steep bail

Crosby posts $100,000 bond; lawyer protests



David Crosby

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Rock star David Crosby was released on $100,000 bail Wednesday from county jail, where he spent the night after a judge ordered him confined for 90 days for disturbing the peace, the sheriff's department said.

"A $100,000 appeal bond was posted at Culver City Municipal Court, and he is out," said sheriff's Deputy Jim Platis.

The 40-year-old member of the rock group Crosby, Stills & Nash was taken into custody Tuesday immediately after a sentencing hearing before Culver City Municipal Judge Frank Troost.

The judge also put Crosby on three years' probation and fined him $200, and as part of the probation ordered him to undergo periodic testing for drugs and to pay any civil judgments stemming from the November, 1980, incident at a friend's condominium in Culver City.

At a separate hearing late Tuesday afternoon, Troost set Crosby's appeal bond at $100,000. Crosby attorney Peter Knecht said he was unable to free his client until Wednesday because of the time lag in putting the case into the computer at county jail.

The singer originally had been charged with two counts of battery on two women who filed a complaint claiming he had struck them. But the charge was reduced to disturbing the peace, and he pleaded guilty in June.

A warrant for his arrest was issued after he did not appear in court July 29. He was taken into custody Sept. 6 at the Irvine Meadows Amphitheater after a concert with colleagues Stephen Stills and Graham Nash.

UCI Fine Arts dean named

Dr. Robert Garfias, formerly a music professor at the University of Washington, has been appointed dean of UC Irvine's School of Fine Arts.

Garfias is a scholar specializing in international ethnic music forms and has written on music in Korea, Burma, India, Romania, Spain, Mexico and Venezuela. He is recognized as an authority on "Gagaku," the court music of Japan, according to UCI officials.

A Chicano, Garfias is fluent in Spanish and speaks Japanese, Burmese and Romanian.

He assumes duties Oct. 1, succeeding acting dean William Holmes. Clayton Garrison, founding dean of the school, returned to teaching and research last year.

Garfias, who grew up in San Francisco's Mission District, received his master's and doctoral degrees from UCLA and has been a faculty member at Washington since 1962.

He is a member of the National Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences, the National Council for Chicano Education and sits on the folk arts panel of the National Endowment for the Arts.

Auto importers 'are driven' to more television ads

NEW YORK (AP) The television screen is full of "We are driven" Datsuns, "Help me Honda" Hondas and "ultimate driving machine" BMWs.

So where are all the U.S. automakers?

They've got ads on television too. But foreign carmakers are the ones with record increases in their TV budgets to preserve their image as well as their market share, analysts say.

For the first half of the year, foreign car TV advertising increased by 25 percent over the same period in 1981. Meanwhile, the four largest U.S. carmakers were spending only 1 percent more on their TV advertising.

Unit sales of domestic cars plunged almost 33 percent in August, while imports rose 1.5 percent, giving foreign makers a 32.7 percent share of the U.S. market — their highest ever.

So while there may be a Ford in your future, as the ads say, Ford would like to sell a few right now — and like other U.S. automakers it's cutting prices and using rebates to stimulate sales.

That means using advertising that can be placed and changed quickly; ads that focus on particular price offers rather than the quality of appeal of a particular car.

"We've had to put more of our advertising into newspapers because we need a medium with a quicker turnaround time," said Bob Bierman, spokesman for the Ford Division of Ford Motor Co.

"We'd prefer product advertising to 'fire sale' advertising, but when faced with the kind of industry we all faced this year, we needed to get them out very quickly," he said.

Television fits better with the goals of foreign carmakers, who are using their TV ads to introduce lines and ease protectionist sentiment.

Japanese carmakers, who account for about 75 percent of the import market here, have been under pressure by Congress to limit exports to the United States where poor car sales and factory layoffs mean tough times.

At a "Buy American" rally at the Kentucky State Capitol this month, signs proclaimed: "The people who gave you Pearl Harbor are now giving you Datsuns, Toyotas and unemployment."

"There's been so much bad will between us and Japan on the issue of trade that the Japanese companies are attempting to preseverve their image as manufacturers of high-quality, fuel-efficient cars," said David Eisenberg, a securities analyst who follows the auto industry for Sanford Bernstein & Co. Inc. in New York.

The top 13 foreign car makers spent $109 million on network and regional TV ads for the first half of 1982, compared with about $87 million for the same period in 1981, according to the Television Bureau of Advertising.

Detroit's four manufacturers spent $175 million during the same period, up from $173 million.

"To hang onto what you've got, I think you've got to advertise more," says analyst Alfred Nelson, who follows the auto industry for A.G. Becker.

Lunch-box sales prove 'big business' for kids

NEW YORK (AP) — It was exactly two minutes before noon at P.S. 3 in Lower Manhattan, and quick as you can say "What's for lunch?" there they were: Strawberry Shortcake, The Fall Guy, Smurfs, Superfriends, and Pac-Man.

These are among this fall's new, raised-metal faces on school lunch boxes — some current television favorites, a few from the movies, one from the video arcades — that are staring back at hungry school children across America.

"I thought it was cute"

And if these third-grade pupils are at all typical, youngsters await the fall lunchboxes as eagerly as parents once looked forward to car models.

Shana Gattens, 8, gets a new box each year, costing about $7, and on this particular day was toting cantaloupe, saltines and Kool-Aid in her Strawberry Shortcake box.

"I thought it was cute," she explained.

Classmate Colin Dwyer was sitting nearby munching on a bagel and some peanuts from his new Pac-Man lunch kit, wishing aloud that it contained his favorite meal — leftover Chinese food.

"I really love video games," he said of his choice in lunch boxes.

Two American companies compete in the school lunch box market: Aladdin Industries of Nashville, Tenn., and King-Seeley Thermos Co., of Norwich, Conn.

The competition for the hearts and stomachs of schoolchildren is so fierce that both companies refuse to say how much they earn from sales, how many boxes they sell, or how much they pay for the rights to put characters on those boxes.

But Richard Corbin, a spokesman for Aladdin, says business has been strong for two school years, and the single biggest reason has been the appeal of the newest characters.

Pac-Man leads the list of stars in the 1982 Aladdin lunch box lineup, along with Annie and Heathcliff, the cartoon cat, and The Fall Guy, a TV show about stunt men starring Lee Majors. They join other recent favorites like The Dukes of Hazzard, Strawberry Shortcake and Sesame Street, and hearty perennials like Mickey Mouse and other Walt Disney characters.

Hopes are also high for a kit based on "E.T., the Extra-Terrestrial" due at Christmas.

The hottest new characters in the Thermos line are Smurfs, says C. Woodrow Browne, product manager for the school kits division. Garfield the Cat, G.I. Joe and Kermit the Frog are also appearing in 1982 for the first time, joining long-standing characters from "Star Wars," "Peanuts" and the Muppets.

For whatever social historians want to make of it, all this started 30 years ago when cowboy Hopalong Cassidy became the first character to appear on a lunch box.

Eight-year-old Jonathan William Van Gieson was seemingly the lone holdout among P.S. 3's lunch box enthusiasts.

"I have a Mickey Mouse box," he said, "but I hate to bring it to school. It's too heavy."

He's switched back to brown bags, for keeps.

OCC air prof honored

CAP plans citation for Newport woman

Dolores Valencia of Newport Beach, an Orange Coast College professor of airline flight services, will be honored by the Air Force Civil Air Patrol for leadership in aerospace education.

She will receive an award during the Pacific region aerospace education conference in San Diego next month.

For seven years, Valencia has been a coordinator and instructor for Air Force-sponsored aerospace education programs at the Costa Mesa college. Classes and workshops have been offered in space flight, military aviation, civilian aviation, airports and careers in education.

Three years ago, she received an "Order of Merit" from the World Aerospace Education Organization.

A member of the OCC staff 17 years, Valencia originated the college's flight service program in 1965. She also developed Orange Coast's travel geography and aerospace workshop programs. She is author of two flight service textbooks and has written articles on transportation and education.

Valencia was one of 12 founding employees of AirCal, and prior to that served as the assistant director of aviation for San Antonio International Airport.

'60 Minutes' tops ratings

Football high, but its 'show' canceled

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Pro football, its season interrupted for the first time by a players' strike, scored big in the television ratings race by winning three spots in the Top 10 in the week ending Sept. 19, according to figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co.

In the networks' prime-time competition, meanwhile, ABC finished in first place for the second time in three weeks, finishing ahead of CBS, which fell to a distant second place despite having the highest-rated show of the week, "60 Minutes."

ABC's opening Monday Night Football game, Pittsburgh vs. Dallas, grabbed the highest rating for a season opener since the series began in 1970. ABC said it also had the highest viewing record for the entire series with 20.7 million households per average viewing minute.

The Monday night game was second overall in the Nielsen ratings. CBS' regional games were third and CBS' postgame show was fourth. Another ABC game finished 13th.

Sunday's Emmy Award program on ABC finished seventh. Its competition on CBS was "Seven Brides for Seven Brothers," a pilot movie for the new series of the same name, and the contemporary family drama finished in ninth place in the ratings.

Both CBS and NBC shared the five least-watched shows for the week: "Mr. Merlin," CBS; "Moonlight," CBS; "Father Murphy," NBC; "Steeler and the Pittsburgh Kid," NBC; and "CBS Reports," CBS.

Here are the 10 highest-rated shows:

"60 Minutes," a rating of 25.3 representing 21.1 million homes, CBS; ABC Monday Night Football, Pittsburgh vs. Dallas, 24.9 or 20.7 million, ABC; CBS NFL Regional Football Games, 23.5 or 19.6 million, CBS; CBS NFL Football Postgame 2, 23.2 or 19.4 million, CBS; "Too Close for Comfort," 23.0 or 19.2 million ABC; "Three's Company," 22.8 or 19 million, ABC; "The 34th Television Academy Awards," 21.6 or 18 million, ABC; "Hart to Hart," 21.3 or 17.7 million, ABC; movie — "Seven Brides for Seven Brothers," 19.7 or 16.4 million, CBS; "M-A-S-H, 19.5 or 16.2 million, CBS.

Carroll O'Connor

BEVERLY HILLS (AP) — Carroll O'Connor was seated at his regular corner table in the Ginger Man cafe when Hal Linden passed by.

"Hey, Carroll," said television's Barney Miller, pointing to a waist-high brass rail before the table. "Is that to keep you in, or other people out?"

"Neither," television's Archie Bunker replied. "But I will say that it keeps the autograph seekers at a distance when they ask for my signature."

O'Connor, who owns the Ginger Man with fellow actor Irishman Patrick O'Neal, was in a mellow mood — for the most part.

What made him less than mellow was the handling of the new series "Gloria," in which Sally Struthers goes solo as Archie's daughter.

It seems that the producers of "Gloria" made no effort to seek O'Connor's advice on the show. Nor did they accede to his suggestion that the series be taped at Metromedia Studio, where O'Connor has played Archie Bunker in the current series and the previous "All in the Family."

"If we were at the same studio, then I could pay an occasional visit to 'Gloria' and Sally could come on my show," he said. "But they decided to work at Universal. I would have been willing to move out to Universal, even though I've been comfortable working at the same place all these years. But they don't seem interested."

A Royal sweep for the Angels

By CURT SEEDEN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

The cameras and microphones zeroed in on Reggie Jackson in the Angel clubhouse Wednesday night, which didn't distinguish the night from any other this season.

But for the first time this season, Jackson found himself embroiled in a controversy of sorts when his hard slide into second base resulted in an angry tirade from Royals' second baseman Frank White in the seventh inning.

With 51,273 looking on at Anaheim Stadium, not to mention a Southern California television audience, the infield was littered with players from both teams with guess who was caught in the middle?

"I didn't want any trouble. I wasn't looking for any trouble — they're (the Royals) too great of a team," Jackson said of the play.

Indeed, Jackson didn't cause much trouble for the Royals during this important three-game series, but his teammates did.

Wednesday night, Doug DeCinces powered a pair of home runs and Brian Downing rifled one over the left-field fence as the Angels scored an 8-5 victory for a three-game series sweep and a three-game lead in the American League West with 10 games remaining for both teams.

Getting home runs from guys like DeCinces and Downing isn't new, but a relief stint by Dave Goltz to save the victory for starter Tommy John was nothing short of brilliant.

Goltz held the Royals hitless over the final 3⅓ innings, retiring all 11 batters he faced to help John earn his 13th victory against 12 defeats.

And just to make it a perfect evening, the Angels set an all-time season attendance record. A total of 2,672,377 fans have witnessed Angel baseball at Anaheim Stadium this year, and the Angels saved some of their best ball for the last three days.

"We had a real vocal crowd tonight," offered Downing, who is rarely vocal about anything. "That's kind of unusual for here. It's just like playing in the

By HOWARD L. HANDY
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

When he faces a field of 100 riders at the start of Saturday's Junior National Criterium Championship bicycle race in Costa Mesa, Jim Gordon of Huntington Beach will have one thing in mind.

He will be trying to avoid any crashes that might occur in front of him in order to sprint for the lead and pick up points during bell laps of the 32-mile event that gets under way at 11:40 on Placentia Street.

"I really don't know how they will start the race or if they will seed anyone to the front," Gordon says. "The big problem in starting at the back of the pack is that there will be lots of crashes and you can run into them.

"In Manhattan Beach earlier this year, I started in a field of 142 and got caught in a crash at the first turn and went down. There could be a lot of squirrels (riders that aren't used to riding in a big crowd) in this race and they could knock someone else down with them.

"ON THE first couple of laps that's what you have to watch out for."

Gordon classifies himself as a sprinter and prefers to ride in the velodromes such as the one in Encino where he is undefeated. But the race in Costa Mesa is a different type and he will be using a road bike instead of a sprinter that has only three gears and no brakes.

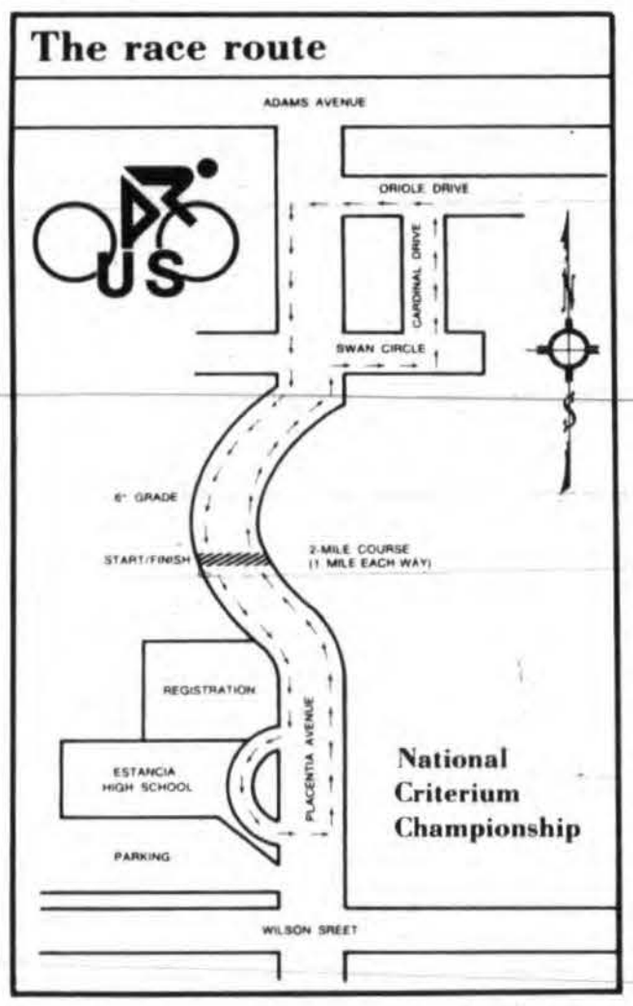
"I'm a sprinter and I'm not in training for a distance race," Gordon says. "I really don't train for this type of a race. I don't ride more than 150 miles in a week."

In bicycle racing jargon, a sprinter combines speed with quick acceleration and aggressive riding to produce a winning formula. Good strategy is to work as little as possible throughout the race, except on sprint laps.

On Saturday, the Junior race is over 16 laps with sprint laps on laps 3, 5, 7, 11 and 13 with double sprint laps on 9 and 16. Only the top four riders gain points (5-3-2-1) and for double sprint laps (10-6-4-2).

This means that the rider with the most points at the end of the race, and not the one who finishes in front necessarily, will be the winner.

The race route



ENDURANCE racers try to burn-off the sprinters by keeping a fast pace throughout the race. With applied pressure, especially on the lap just after a sprint, the endurance rider hopes to drain the sprinter.

In the Costa Mesa race on Saturday, the sprinters are expected to fare better if they have sufficient fitness and endurance to survive the post-sprint crunch and accumulate points.

"I hope to win a couple of sprints early in the race but I don't plan on going for the first one right now," Gordon says. "If I do go for the first one, it will be because I am in a good position at the start.

"I've ridden against most of the guys who will be in the race before and if the endurance guys decide to push it the whole way, I won't be able to sprint as much as I would like to."

Gordon didn't race in Costa Mesa in 1980 or 1981 but he did ride here in the two previous years. He finished 10th in 1979.

He has won the state track sprint championship, the 1,000-meter time trials and the junior omni championship. Last year he was second in the nationals in Pennsylvania.

To the riders, the sprint laps are bell laps and a bell is rung to start that lap and let them know it is in progress.

GORDON DOESN'T have the time for competition on Edison school teams but says he almost made the track team. "We had a race in New Jersey, though, and that blew it for me."

He's a 16-year-old junior and hopes to make the U.S. cycling team in 1984 to compete in the Olympic Games.

The Junior race at 11:40 is one of three set Saturday. The Sprite women's national criterium is at 9 o'clock over 13 laps (26 miles). The Harbor Blvd. of Cars Veteran's race is at 10:15 a.m. and is for 16 laps (32 miles).

The two-day event will conclude Sunday with the Harbor Blvd. of Cars U.S. Senior men's national criterium championship for 25 laps (50 miles) beginning at 10:40. Prior to Sunday's finale, the Del Taco 5K and 10K runs will be staged at 8 and 8:05 along with a Big Wheel race for pre-school children and other special events.

Placentia Street will be blocked off in the vicinity of Estancia High from Wilson to Adams for the event. Admission is free both days.

Royals down, but not out with 10 to go

By JOHN SEVANO
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Like a hunter stalking a wounded prey, the Angels went out to finish the Kansas City Royals Wednesday night.

And, while Gene Mauch's squad didn't deliver the final blow, it left its victim in an extremely critical state.

The Angels' Magic Number is now 8 following their 8-5 triumph Wednesday at Anaheim Stadium. In sweeping the Royals, the Angels bettered three of KC's top pitchers — Larry Gura, Dennis Leonard and Vida Blue — who came into the series with a combined 40-25 record.

KANSAS CITY, meanwhile, has few numbers of late that are positive. Not only do the Royals trail the Angels now by three games, they have also lost seven in a row, tying their longest losing streak of the season.

"We just picked an inopportune time for all this to happen," said KC's designated-hitter Hal McRae.

"We're in a lot of trouble, but they still have to win some games."

Of course, the biggest number facing both teams is 10, which just happens to correspond to the number of games each side has left.

"We've got our backs to the wall now," admitted Royals Manager Dick Howser. "We wanted anything but a sweep . . . but they swept us.

"I think we're going to have to win every ball game now or we're out of it. If we had won only one game here we would have been in pretty good shape. As it is, we have to count on winning 10 in a row."

WHILE THE ANGELS play Texas tonight, the Royals enjoy an off day prior to their three-game set with the A's in Oakland. The Royals then return home for three with the Angels and four more with the A's before saying goodbye to 1982.

"They've got to lose and we've got to win. That's about it," summed up third baseman George Brett, who went through a frustrating 0-12 series.

"I thought last night was important until I came to the ball park tonight," added Dan Quisenberry. "I figured all we had to do was win the game and we'd be one game out and in good shape. I never thought about losing and dropping three behind.

"What do we have? Ten games left? I think if we're going to win it we've got to play .900 ball the rest of the way. The way I see it I don't think they'll do any worse than 6-4 the rest of the way. If we go 9-1, all that would do is give us a tie. Things sure don't look good."

Padres still same old spoilers, 2-1

SAN DIEGO (AP) — With 10 games left and trailing by eight, the San Diego Padres know their role in the fading days of the National League West race.

"I think we can be spoilers, mess up some plans," said outfielder Al Wiggins after his 10th inning single gave San Diego a 2-1 victory over the division-leading Dodgers Wednesday night.

Padres' Manager Dick Williams knows it would take a miracle.

"We're only delaying the inevitable. They (the Dodgers) are going to win it," said Williams, who fielded a crazy-quilt lineup that was missing the club's five top run producers.

"We were shorthanded, but we didn't lack for desire," said Williams as the fourth-place Padres tripped the Dodgers for the second night in a row.

San Diego did it without Terry Kennedy, Sixto Lezcano, Garry Templeton, Luis Salazar, and Ruppert Jones. Four are nursing injuries and Jones has been benched because of a batting slump.

GAMES REMAINING
DODGERS (10) — HOME (7): Sept. 24, 25, 26, San Francisco; Sept. 27, 28, Cincinnati; Sept. 29, 30, Atlanta. AWAY (3): Oct. 1, 2, 3, San Francisco.
ATLANTA (10)—HOME (3): Sept. 24, 25, 26, San Diego. AWAY (7): Sept. 27, 28, San Francisco; Sept. 29, 30, Dodgers; Oct. 1, 2, 3, San Diego.

Wiggins, once a bright light in the Dodger organization, got the game-winner off Los Angeles relief ace Steve Howe.

"I wanted a chance to redeem myself," said Wiggins, who set an all-time record by stealing 120 bases at Lodi in 1980.

"It feels good beating a team you once wanted to play for," said Wiggins.

"I was surprised they brought Howe in," said Wiggins. "I couldn't understand why he (Lasorda) did that. If he had looked at the stat sheet, he would have seen how much better I've done batting right-handed." Wiggins, who is hitting .333 from the right side, lined a 1-2 offering from Howe to center field to score Joe Pittman, who had led off with a single and moved to second on Broderick Perkins' sacrifice bunt.

Defending his strategy, Lasorda said, "I thought we had a better chance if he was hitting from the right side, where he doesn't bunt."

Besides, added Lasorda, "How many RBIs does he have?"

Colleges eye Sundays

Pro football TV void may be filled

MISSION, Kan. (AP) — Regular scheduling of college football on Sundays is a possibility if the National Football League player strike continues and there are no NFL games, a National Collegiate Athletic Association official said Wednesday.

"We have had discussions with all three networks — ABC, CBS and Turner (WTBS)," said Tom Hansen, assistant executive director of the NCAA. "But the events of the last week had brought all discussions to a halt, for obvious reasons."

Hansen said the NCAA could now take a better look at Sunday football, following the NCAA's receipt Wednesday of a stay of an earlier decision that invalidated its football television contracts with ABC, CBS and WTBS.

Hansen said before networks could receive permission to move games from Saturday to Sunday, the 13-member NCAA Football Television Committee would have to discuss the proposal.

If more televised games were requested by the networks, Hansen said approval from the 22-member NCAA Council would be necessary.

Hart has pneumonia; fund established

PASADENA — Todd Hart, the 19-year-old sophomore defensive back from Long Beach State, paralyzed from the shoulders down because of a third-quarter injury in the 49ers' game against UCLA Sept. 11, remains in serious condition despite presently fighting a bout with pneumonia at Huntington Memorial Hospital.

"The crisis is over," says spokesperson Donna Swift, "but it's still a day-to-day situation."

Although Hart is in a sitting position, attempts are being made to place him in a "stroke chair" to make it more comfortable.

The prognosis remains vague with no change in sensations and no movement below the shoulders.

As for the pneumonia, it was anticipated because of the surgery and circumstances, and is being routinely handled

The San Juan Capistrano athlete, an All-Orange County football player for Servite High School, is expected to be relocated at a rehabilitation hospital in the next two to three weeks with Craig Hospital in Englewood, Colo., Sharp Memorial in San Diego or St. Jude in Fullerton atop the list of potential sites.

Meanwhile, the Todd Hart Championship, a fund to aid the young football player has been set up by friends of the family and boosters of the Long Beach State football program.

The fund will be used to help defray expenses of Hart's hospital and medical bills. Donations may be mailed to the Todd Hart Championship, P.O. Box 241, Santa Ana, 92702.

Quote of the day

"We have territorial rights to Red Grange. He's 81 years old and living in Boca Raton, Fla. We'll use him on third-and-one situations." — George Allen, coach of the Chicago Blitz of the United States Football League on the USFL's rule about territorial rights in signing players.

USC-Oklahoma TV package off?

The NCAA regained control of college football telecasts Wednesday when a three-judge panel in Denver granted a stay of a lower-court ruling that overturned its television agreements, which jeopardizes a deal that would allow Channel 11 to televise Saturday's USC-Oklahoma game live. This ruling is also now under appeal by the independent station. At least 45 television stations are affected . . . The National Football League, buoyed by assurances it would receive at least $30 million in television money even if no games are played the next two weeks, called off tonight's Atlanta-Kansas City game in Kansas City because of the players' strike. Even if games for the next two weeks are wiped out, the NFL will reportedly receive the money it normally would have gotten from the three networks which televise games . . . Cleveland Browns' tight end Ozzie Newsome says he'll switch to the fledgling United States Football League if the Browns try to field a team of free agents during the strike. Newsome contended that such action would constitute a lockout of the players and he said that if that happened, "I'd be gone back home to Birmingham and the USFL." . . . The striking San Francisco 49ers' players held an informal practice session at a nearby junior college after running into another striking union's picket line by some campus workers at Stanford University.

ANGELS SWEEP KANSAS CITY . . .

Midwest — in Chicago."

Speaking of the Midwest, the Angels have some unfinished business to attend to next week — a three-game rematch with the Royals in Kansas City which the players say won't be taken lightly.

"We don't want Kansas City to get any closer to us. We're not going to let down at all," the soft-spoken Downing stated after the game.

DeCinces picked up four RBI on the night with his two homers and a sacrifice fly. His 28 homers this season ties his career high, and his double dose Wednesday night marked the fifth time this season he has hit two or more homers in a game.

"We knew we were due to explode. We were talking about it before the game," DeCinces said. The Angel third baseman and his teammates had come up against two tough starters in Larry Gura and Dennis Leonard in the first two games of the series.

"The crowd was very inspirational tonight," DeCinces added. "I just wish they'd cut it out with those beach balls. It's very distracting."

There were plenty of beach balls — and fights — in the stands Wednesday night, not to mention the little brouhaha between Jackson and White.

At that stage, the Angels were holding on to a precarious 6-5 lead.

Bobby Grich opened the seventh with a single and Jackson followed by forcing Grich at second. Juan Beniquez followed and hit a ball deep in the hole at short. U.L. Washington flagged it down and threw to White at second.

DOWNING

exchanged a few words, but then Royals' first baseman Greg Pryor raced over to Jackson to complain.

That brought everyone on the field, including players from both bullpens.

Informed that Royals' Manager Dick Howser called the play a cheap shot, Jackson countered: "I don't agree with him. I don't take cheap shots. The ball was hit in the hole and I was running hard."

"Jackson slides hard. He only knows one way to slide," added Angel Manager Gene Mauch.

John, meanwhile, with a 12-4 lifetime record against the Royals, was shaky right from the outset. He allowed a first-inning home run to Washington and another by Amos Otis with George Brett aboard in the third inning.

The Angels took a 2-1 lead in the first when DeCinces homered with Rod Carew aboard and then made it 5-1 in the second on RBI singles by Downing and Don Baylor and Carew's RBI triple.

Angel rookie Rick Adams collected his first major league hit in the fourth inning and it played a part in the Angels' sixth run. Carew followed the rookie's hit with a single of his own, sending Adams to third. DeCinces then followed with a possible third homer of the night. He settled for a sacrifice fly.

The Royals finally banished John to the clubhouse in the sixth on singles by Otis, Hal McRae, John Wathan and a ground out by pinch-hitter Steve Hammond.

It was Goltz who retired Hammond and the next 10 Royals he faced.

"All through the series we were excited but we stayed within ourselves and kept it together," Goltz said. "That's what you're going to see from this club all the way through.

"I was relaxed tonight. My fastball was moving and doing what I wanted and I was putting it just where I wanted," Goltz added.

Speaking of relaxing, the Angels will have little time for it. They boarded a plane early this morning, rolled in to Texas around 5 and were set to open a four-game series with the Rangers tonight.

ANGEL NOTES: Center-fielder Fred Lynn, already smarting from cracked ribs, injured his ankle Tuesday night while making a spectacular catch at the fence on a fourth-inning drive by Amos Otis. Lynn was not a starter Wednesday night . . . The Angels have announced that all three games from Kansas City next week will be televised live by KTLA, Channel 5. The important series begins Monday night, and game time is 5:35 (PST) each night . . . A little more than 1.2 million television viewers tuned in to Monday night's opener with the Royals, which was televised live by KTLA. But the Angels and Royals played second fiddle to the Dodgers and Padres who drew about 1.5 million viewers for their game from San Diego which was televised by KTTV Tuesday . . . Angel Manager Gene Mauch has re-inserted veteran Steve Renko into the starting rotation for the four-game series in Texas. Renko (11-6) will pitch Thursday night against Mike Mason (1-1). He's replacing Mike Witt Renko's last start was back on Aug. 29 in Boston . . . The winning run, which Royals' reliever Dan Quisenberry allowed Tuesday night was the first by the former Orange Coast College standout in his last 11 outings spanning 18 innings. Quisenberry owns five career saves over the Angels . . . Trivia question, who was the last switch-hitting Most Valuable Player in the American League? Answer: The Royals' Vida Blue back in 1971.

ROYALS DOWN AFTER SWEEP . . .

Maybe not. But Reggie Jackson who, like Brett, went hitless in the series, but unlike Brett, didn't go unnoticed, may have sparked a flame under the Royals.

The collective opinion of the Kansas City squad was that Jackson had given teammate Frank White a cheap shot during a force play at second base in the seventh inning.

After an inning-opening walk to Jackson, Juan Beniquez followed with a ground ball into the hole at short. Shortstop U.L. Washington, who made a good play just to reach the ball, whirled and fired to second, hoping to force Jackson.

IT WAS APPARENT from the outset that the Royals had no chance for a double play. Jackson, however, went in hard, flying over the base and into White's legs. Both benches emptied immediately, but cooler heads prevailed and no fists were thrown.

White finished the inning but in the top of the eighth, couldn't take his regular turn at the plate as he complained of soreness in his right foot.

Jackson pleaded innocent to all charges after the contest had ended, but the Royals weren't as kind.

"It was a cheap shot and I'm surprised he did it," said Howser. "I've never seen Reggie do anything quite like that before. If it had been a double play, that would have been one thing. But all it was was a force out.

"I'm sure he was frustrated because he hadn't been hitting in the series, but I thought he had more poise than that."

Brett had a terse "no comment" regarding Jackson's actions, while White himself was brief, but to the point: "It wasn't a very professional thing to do. Other than that, I have no comment."

SO, WHILE the Royals may be wounded, they're still snapping and biting.

Like Quisenberry, who said:

"I know Mauch will kill me for this, but I'm still hoping things will happen like they did for the Phillies in 1964 (when they blew a huge lead in the final weeks), or like the Yankees in '78 (when they overcame a large deficit to edge Boston).

"It looks bad for us, but there's still hope there. Still, it's going to take one of those miracle rallies."

Streak on the line

Gauchos risk skein against OCC

By CURT SEEDEN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

The longest collegiate football streak in the nation — proudly owned by Saddleback College and now at 17 — will be on the line Saturday night when Orange Coast College and the Gauchos get together.

Coach Ken Swearingen's squad, which finished the 1981 season with an 11-0 mark and opened the 1982 campaign with a 14-6 decision over Golden West, is still ranked No. 1 in the Southland Community College football poll.

Golden West, meanwhile, will try to get its offense in gear Saturday night when the Rustlers travel to the Santa Ana Bowl to face the Santa Ana Dons.

Kickoff is at 7:30 for both games. Here's how things shape up:

Orange Coast at Saddleback

The Gauchos won their opener with the Rustlers with their defense, and in particular, the play of defensive end Mike Copeland.

Copeland, a 6-3, 215-pound sophomore, recorded three sacks, two blocked punts, nine tackles and caused a Golden West fumble. The Gauchos went on to hold the Rustlers to minus-five yards rushing and just 122 yards of total offense.

Saddleback Coach Ken Swearingen expects another defensive battle Saturday night against the Pirates, who pulled off a 7-5 victory over Palomar in their opener last week.

"They're excellent on defense, although offensively they played poorly against Palomar," Swearingen said. "Palomar has a good quarterback and they kept them from getting a touchdown."

"I'm very impressed with Saddleback, but not because of all the streaks they have going," adds OCC's Dick Tucker. "Those kinds of things really don't mean very much. The important ingredient is the quality of players you put on the field, and Saddleback has excellent personnel."

Sophomore quarterback Craig Miller fits into that description for the Gauchos. After a sluggish first half against the Rustlers, Miller wound up completing 9 of 13 passes for 65 yards.

The Gauchos also received strong efforts from tailback Bob Curry and wide receiver John Marshall.

"Curry is the fastest player I've seen in a while. He's a tremendous breakaway threat," Tucker cautions. "On Marshall: "He is simply one of the best community college wide receivers in the country. He's a big-time prospect. Marshall is so smooth, and he has great speed and excellent hands."

Offensively, OCC will have to improve on its 47 yards total offense statistic in their opener, but they'll probably have to do it without the services of sophomore quarterback Clay Tucker.

Tucker, sidelined by a broken ankle just prior to the season, was in uniform against the Comets but did not play.

"Right now, I'd say that he probably won't play," Tucker says of Clay, who is his son. "He's not 100 percent yet and we neded to have him around later in the year when the games begin to count in the South Coast Conference standings."

Instead, Tucker will once again go with freshman Greg Denham who completed 9 of 20 passes for just 48 yards against Palomar.

Golden West at Santa Ana

Despite dropping his opener, Golden West Coach Ray Shackleford felt some satisfaction in keeping pace with the touted Gauchos.

"I think it may have opened some eyes a little. I guess a lot of people thought it was going to be a rout," Shackleford says.

The Rustlers struggled offensively against the Gauchos, but the Rustler defense kept the Gauchos out of the end zone until a third-quarter mistake gave Saddleback the break it needed.

"We had one turnover in the whole game and it made the difference," Shackleford admits.

Shackleford divided the quarterback duties between freshmen Adam Gragnano and Darryl Ducharme in the Rustlers' opener. Gragnano completed 8 of 24 passes for 69 yards while Ducharme was 6-for-12 for 60 yards.

"If anything, that game made me feel even better about the quarterback situation," the Golden West coach admits. "The lack of more completions or yardage was not the result of bad quarterback play."

Santa Ana, meanwhile, was routed by the Southland's No. 2-ranked team, Fullerton by a 37-0 count.

"Inexperience was the biggest

It's for the berries

A lone tractor makes its way along what will become rows of strawberries on 300 acres of land along Irvine Center Drive near the San Diego Freeway, fumigating the ground in preparation for Oct. 25 planting. The berries will be planted in strips of ground now covered by plastic. A February harvest is anticipated.

260 lose jobs at PSA

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A seasonal decline in air travel and the recession are being blamed for the layoffs of 260 Pacific Southwest Airline employees, including at least 20 pilots, a company spokesman said.

"It's partly seasonal and partly belt-tightening in a bad economy," PSA spokesman Cecil Scaglione said.

Layoff notices were sent Monday to 20 of PSA's 512 pilots and the rest of the furloughs will be implemented gradually the next few weeks, airline officials said.

In all, about 7 percent of PSA's 3,600 workers will be affected by the layoffs, the first since the company furloughed 9 percent of its labor force in September, 1981.

PSA typically lays off some workers in the fall following the peak traffic periods of the summer, Scaglione said.

Since last year, the airline has had a hiring freeze in effect, which has helped whittle PSA's labor force from 4,000 to 3,600. Scaglione said that as workers quit or retire, they are not being replaced.

The union representing the pilots said it fears that eventually as many as 75 of their members may be laid off in this job reduction.

"We understand why PSA has to do this. We are disappointed, but we realize it is a fact of life," said Jim McCollum, an Airline Pilots Association spokesman.

OC BUSINESS

Western Peripherals, a division of WESPERCORP, Tustin, has promoted Gary Pyles to director of international marketing and named Phil Lagestee national sales manager. Lagestee was with Direct Inc., Sunnyvale, and is a former vice president of marketing for Wilson Laboratories, Orange.

Diversified Securities Inc., an investment firm with eight offices in Southern California, is doubling the size of its Lake Forest office.

The offices, located in the Aspan Plaza at 22706 Aspan St., Suite 703, are managed by Larry A. Carter, a vice president.

E.F. Hutton & Company, Inc. has relocated its Newport Beach office to larger quarters at 860 Newport Center Drive, in the Pacific Mutual Plaza Building.

The telephone number remains 644-9111.

Wespac Investors Trust, Tustin has announced its intention to distribute to shareholders proceeds, less operating expenses, of the sale of properties on an "as sold" basis.

Such distribution should constitute capital gains and a return of capital, the company said, noting that while property sales are a product of the market, a four-to-six year selling period is anticipated.

The board of trustees of the California-based real estate investment trust maintain the value of Wespac's holdings represent a much higher per-share price than reflected in the market price of shares.

The Hammond Company, an independent mortgage banking firm, has moved its Orange County loan organization and processing center from Newport Beach corporate headquarters to a Tustin building it jointly developed and co-owns.

The branch occupies the ground floor of the Spirit Building, 145 W. Main St.

The firm's corporate headquarters remain at 4910 Campus Drive, Newport Beach.

The data systems division of Pertec Computer Corporation, based in Irvine and CBR Systems Corporation, Colorado Springs, Colo., have signed an agreement under which Pertec will provide PCC 2000 microcomputers for CBR's taxwriter tax preparation system.

Pertec estimated the agreement could generate up to $200 million in revenues for the companies over the next five years.

National University's continuing education program will present a workshop on "The Mid-management Person" Oct. 2 at 9 a.m. at its branch campus, 2112 Business Center Drive, Irvine. There is no charge. For information, call 957-6285.

Orange Coast College in Costa Mesa will offer a workshop, "What's Happening In Orange County?" on Saturday at 9 a.m. It will be conducted by Ann Coil and Jane Ballback of Coil, Ballback and Slater, a career management firm.

Nell Shukes of Mission Viejo has been appointed sales manager for Hidden Mountain, estate homesite development in San Juan Capistrano. She has acted as sales agent and broker for several custom lot projects in south Orange County, and is a principal in her own real estate sales and brokerage firm, Sky View Realty.

EOCOM Electronic Systems of Tustin, has delivered to Atari, Inc. what it says is the first laser plotter controlled directly from a CAD/CAM system.

Westbay Construction of Anaheim has purchased a 4,646-square-foot building in the Lakeview Business Center, 4560 Eisenhower Circle, Anaheim, from Troll Development of Garden Grove and Far West Savings.

The sale price was $297,344.

Alan Pekarcik of the Newport Beach office of Business Properties Brokerage Company represented both parties.

Telecommunications Design Corporation of Orange has been retained by IBIS Systems, Inc., Duarte, to evaluate is telecommunications needs and design a communications system.

Business and Professional Consultants, Inc., headquartered in Los Angeles, will open its 10th office in the Southern California market, its second in Orange County, on Oct. 1.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Ehrhart will be the franchise owners for this office at 4020 Birch, Suite 104, Newport Beach.

A retail software store will open Saturday at 3821 S. Bristol, Santa Ana. This will be the second store of Los Angeles-based Software Centres International in a projected franchise chain of over 200 stores.

Norma Evans, sales manager at the Gene Autry Hotel Palm Springs, has been appointed director of sales. She was director of sales and marketing for the Sheraton Newport Hotel and a vice president of the Newport Beach Convention and Visitors Bureau.

As fall guy for 'Dukes,' he's the Best

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES — James Best believes that in his role as Sheriff Roscoe Coltrane on "The Dukes of Hazzard" he's been kicked around more than any other actor.

"In the 3½ years I've been on the show," he said, "I've landed in the pond countless times, fallen in wet cement, been hit by explosions, had garbage dumped on me, had sand dumped on me, been squirted by fire hydrants, and run into haystacks."

Best's regular partner in getting dumped on is Sorrell Booke, who plays Boss Hogg on the CBS comedy-adventure about rural Hazzard County.

"Sorrell is such a pleasure to work with," he said. "I think we're psychic. We each know what the other will do. We work for the laughs of the crew. They're so terribly blase. If we can make them laugh I know it's working."

It's a knockabout, slapstick partnership for Best and Booke, somewhat like Laurel and Hardy. Interestingly, Booke trained at the Yale School of Drama and Best has his own acting school and is a much-in-demand dramatics teacher.

"It's strange. I've spent 35 years in this business playing rapist-killers and I wind up doing comedy."

Asked about the success of the series, Best replied: "It's the ingredients. You've got a grandfatherly figure, Denver Pyle, who gives it stability and honesty. You add three beautiful people, Catherine Bach, Christopher Mayer and Byron Cherry. Put in a Laurel and Hardy to play the cardboard heavies.

"I don't mean to compare Sorrell and myself to Laurel and Hardy. They were master actors. But I think Sorrell and I have been influenced by the masters. I think that's why we work so well together. We're both from the stage and we both studied that kind of humor."

He said, "It's a cotton candy show. You don't have to chew it. But it's very palatable."

Although they work well together, both work differently. Best said, "Sorrell knows in advance every move and nuance. I come and just let it fly. I think it works because it's unpredictable."

Best will write his first script for "The Dukes of Hazzard" this year. "I got it in my new contract," he said. "I wanted to write one very badly. I wanted another creative outlet."

He has a number of outlets. He frequently directs at the Florida theater owned by his good friend, Burt Reynolds, and has starred in several plays there. He did rewrites on "Hooper," "The End," and "Gator" for Reynolds. He's written the book for a musical about Nashville called "Jukin" as in juke box and Larry Hart will write the music. And for the past 14 years he's had his own theater and school.

Best abandoned Hollywood in 1971 and didn't return until 1977. He became artist-in-residence at the University of Mississippi. He also founded the Mississippi Film Commission and the Mississippi Ballet Theater. "Burt Reynolds brought me out of retirement with 'Gator'," he said.

He also quit "The Dukes of Hazzard" for six episodes. This past summer, during the time John Schneider and Tom Wopat quit the show, he held out until he got the contract he wanted, which also calls for him to direct another episode.

When he's not working Best spends most of his time away from Hollywood, where he owns two homes. He also owns homes in Hot Springs, Ark., Florida, and Indiana. He recently bought an island in Florida. He said, "That's the gypsy in me. I'm home wherever I hang my hat."

E.T. fan club

Rock wasn't solid

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Rock Hudson says a lot of rubbish has been printed over the years about how healthy he was.

Instead, Hudson said he got no exercise, smoked heavily and drank a lot.

"I'd really get ripped," he said. "When you've been working hard on a television series you look forward to that drink at night."

It caught up to Hudson last year, just as he was beginning work on a new series for NBC, "The Devlin Connection." In November he was admitted to Cedars-Sinai Hospital and underwent heart bypass surgery.

Now 20 pounds lighter, he is back at work on his show. Although he still smokes, he says he feels like a different man.

Fines delayed in fatal copter crash

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Postponements have been given Warner Brothers and three individuals who are appealing $5,000 fines levied upon them in connection with a helicopter crash that killed actor Vic Morrow and two children while making a movie.

State Deputy Labor Commissioner Francis Bacon said the hearings have been rescheduled "for a date and time to be determined.

The deaths occurred July 23 during filming of a movie revival of "The Twilight Zone," a popular old television series.

The children were working at 2:30 a.m. when the law forbids such work after 6:30 p.m.

'Inchon' inches off to a slow start

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Inchon," the Korean War movie financed by the Unification Church of Japan, is off to a slow start at the box office despite a $1 million promotion campaign by followers of the Rev. Sun Myung Moon.

The $48 million film starring Laurence Olivier and Jacqueline Bisset took in only $2,326,112 at 1,291 theaters during its first weekend of release, said MGM-UA spokesman Richard Kahn. That amounted to $1,802 per screen.

By comparison, this year's box office winner, "E.T. — The Extra-Terrestrial," attracted $3,351 per screen at 1,253 locations last weekend for a $4,199,333 total. After 101 days in release, "E.T." has collected $253.5 million.

In second place this past weekend was "An Officer and a Gentleman," which took in $4,061,544 at 997 theaters, or $4,074 per screen.

"Inchon," which was financed partially by Moon's Unification Church of Japan and which lists Moon as special adviser, kicked off a splashy moviegoer sweepstakes last Friday. Among the sweepstakes' 3,500 prizes was a Rolls-Royce automobile with $100,000 in the glove compartment, a 16-day trip to the Orient and televisions and cameras.

Moon followers — or "Moonies" — have passed out flyers at airports and train stations urging people to "Go See 'Inchon'." But apparently the pitch isn't working yet.

MGM-UA has little, if anything, invested in "Inchon," which the studio picked up from One Way Productions after the movie was shopped around for nearly 2½ years.

One Way Productions is paying an estimated $11 million in prints and promotion costs normally borne by the distributing studio.

'E.T.' doll brings suit

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Universal City Studios Inc., producer of the movie E.T.—The Extra-Terrestrial," has filed suit seeking to prevent distribution of dolls it contends are unauthorized replicas of the little alien creature.

The studio and its licensing agent, Merchandising Corporation of America, filed suit Mondau in U.S. District against Keith Stewart. They are seeking a court order to prevent Stewart from manufacturing or selling the dolls or other E.T. items.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Turn on the radio and take your ears on an ocean cruise. Students do it, and studying is almost a breeze. Insomniacs do it, and they sleep like babies on a gently rocking boat.

They're all tuned in to 89.1 on the FM dial — KMAH, a 100-watt community radio station in Menlo Park that treats listeners to the squawk of seagulls, the bleat of foghorns and the crashing of the waves against the shore, every night from 10 p.m. to 7:30 a.m.

It was an idea born of Spinetta, general manager of the 4-year-old station, which is owned by Menlo-Atherton High School, where Spinetta teaches communications.

Four months ago, Spinetta recalled in an interview, "it reached a point where things were really bad, and everyone was really discouraged."

Then he saw a Colorado newspaper with a spoof ad touting the virtues of a non-existent radio station that didn't broadcast anything.

"It said, 'Tired of talk and noise? Listen to the sound of nothing,'" said Spinetta. "We said, 'Hey, that's a wonderful idea. If we didn't play anything, there'd be nothing to worry about, no hassles with money and programming.'"

The idea of recording and airing the ocean "Came out of the clear blue sky," Spinetta said. "One night we put it on and we left it on for two or three days. And we started getting phone calls, then letters. We said, 'Hey, maybe there's something to this.'"

When the station discovered people liked the idea, KMAH made six different recordings of the sea's song.

"In one recording, we had seagulls, sea lions and foghorns. But we took out the sea lions because they sounded like pigs, and we didn't need sea pigs floating in our ocean," Spinetta said. "We took out the seagulls and got a call the next day from a listener who demanded we put them back in."

The station, manned by volunteers, received funding from a variety of sources. Its other programming includes big-band music, broadcasts of city council meetings and other public services for an audience stretching to San Ramon, across San Francisco Bay to the east, and San Jose to the south.

It can't crack San Francisco, though, a problem Spinetta hopes to rectify by raising the station's antenna, which sits just 28 feet off the ground.

Since the station began broadcasting the gentle song of the ocean, it has received about 20 letters and an average of two or three phone calls a day from appreciative listeners.

"They say it's really great because it's an alternative to everything else," Spinetta said. "They put it on in the background, and they can relax and have this sound that cuts out all the noise and sound of cars on the street. We've had letters saying, 'Don't you dare take it off.'

"We're the only station I know of that programs for people to sleep," he said with a laugh. "The only problem is keeping the person awake who has to sit here all night."

Arab culture chair founded

Tel Aviv University has established the Dr. Irene Halmos Chair in Arab Language and Literature.

The chair was endowed by psychologist Dr. Irene Halmos, longtime supporter of Israel. Dr. Halmos, a resident of Leisure World in Laguna Hills, said she is enthusiastic about the project because of its role in strangthening the relationship between Israel and the Arab people.

"The Arab peoples have contributed so much to the history, languag, and literature of the country," Dr. Halmos said, "and we're offering them a place to come and study their roots."

Mel Jaffee, chairman of the Orange County chapter of the American Friends of Tel Aviv University, called the endowment one of the outstanding achievements in the one-year history of the group.

Recipient of the Halmos Chair is Tel Aviv University Professor Sason Somech, chairman of the department of Arabic language and literature, which he helped found in 1968.

The chair will enable him to continue work begun with Egyptian literary figures. In addition, Somech will continue his research and collaboration with several Arab authors, and develop methods to expose Israeli students and the people of Israel, to the expression of Arab literature.

Pessimists see miserable winter

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Remember the miserable winter of '82? Some forecasters say the coming winter will be even worse — even though predicting the weather that far ahead may be more art than science.

Today is the first day of fall, and everyone agrees that's a sure sign cold weather is not far behind. But coming up with a more specific forecast depends on whether you subscribe to the sunspot theory, the volcano theory or simple intuition.

Hurd C. Willett of Massachusetts Institute of Technology says the prediction of a cold winter is "almost unanimous," but National Weather Service forecasters are, to put it kindly, skeptical of independent colleagues' prognostications.

"In principle, it may be possible to predict this far ahead," said Donald L. Gilman, chief of long-range forecasting for the weather service. "The real question is: Do we have the tools now to do it?"

Gilman doesn't think so. If the weather service put out a winter forecast now, he said he'd lay odds that it would be 52 percent correct — not much better than flipping a coin.

To a forecaster, winter is December, January and February. The weather service holds off its winter prediction until late November. Gilman says it averages about a 65 percent reliability.

Willett, a professor emeritus at MIT, is one of a few meteorologists who make very long-range forecasts. He puts his faith in sunspots.

"My forecast is for a very cold winter this year, with the coldest weather in the eastern United States and not so cold in the Far West," he said. "A very cold winter would be 5 or 6 degrees below normal for the average of the winter."

He expects January to be the nippiest month, with temperatures 8 degrees below normal in parts of the country.

Last year the temperature in Chicago hit 26 below zero Jan. 10, the coldest ever in the Windy City. When the Cincinnati Bengals played the San Diego Chargers for the American Football Conference title in Cincinnati, the temperature stood at minus 9.

Before the season was over, Florida suffered through a devastating freeze and parts of the Northeast got 2 feet of snow in April.

Laguna festival planned

A festival of "Arts in Motion" will be staged at Main Beach Park in Laguna Beach on Saturday and Sunday, featuring more than a dozen dance, mime, exercise and ancient ceremonies.

The free dance series is presented by the city's Art Commission and the Arts Commission Alliance and runs from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. both days "on the green" at the seaside park.

Spectators were invited to participate in several scheduled events, with demonstrations and teaching offered to the novice.

The schedule Saturday is:

10 a.m. — Yoga, demonstration and teaching.
10:40 a.m. — Innerconnection dance, demonstration and teaching.
11:05 a.m. — The Wind Dancers — Footbag and Frisbee.
11:25 a.m. — Strathleven Scottish Dancers, demonstration and teaching.
12:15 p.m. — Gordon Grey's Pipe Band and Highland Dancers.
12:40 p.m. — The Silent Treatment — a mime special with Caprice Rothe.
1 p.m. — African Haitian Ensemble, Rowland Harvey Trinidad Steel Drum Band, performance and teaching.
2:30 p.m. — The Festival of Nations — Ballet Pacific.
3 p.m. — Tai Chi Ch'uan, Shaolin Temple Meditation exercises, demonstration and teaching.

Sunday's events include:

10 a.m. — Fun Things to Do For Your Body, with Zahava, performances and teaching.
11:45 a.m. — The Wind Dancers.
Noon — Senara Badaya ("Love of the Arts") Balinese Dancers, musical procession and performance.

Balinese dancers will be among the performers at the two-day "Arts in Motion," scheduled at Main Beach Park.

12:45 p.m. — The Rig-Bees and Doo Bees — Cathy Rigby Gymnastics Academy.
1:30 p.m. — Jazz Dancers, Inc.
2:30 p.m. — The Gimbdu Dance Suite, Los Angeles Choreographers/Dancers.
3 p.m. — Caribbean Carnival, with the R'Wanda Lewis Dance Co., performance and limbo teaching.

Doug Rowe, director of the Laguna Moulton Playhouse, will be the program announcer. Health food booths will be provided.

Specators were asked to bring beach chairs and light clothing if they intend to participate in some of the teaching events.

Youth held after chase

A 15-year-old Santa Ana youth has been arrested after leading police from two cities on a 100 mph car chase that ended in Seal Beach where he reportedly plowed the car he was driving into another vehicle, police said.

Officers said the Tuesday accident at Seal Beach Boulevard and Westminster Avenue resulted in minor injuries to the young driver and the driver of the second car, Jeff Wright of Lakewood.

Police said they were forced to close the intersection for two hours while the debris was cleared.

Seal Beach officers said it is believed the unnamed 15-year-old stole the car in Santa Ana and attracted the attention of Westminster police by speeding through that city at a high rate of speed.

Business seminars scheduled

The Small Business Administration will present three seminars in October for small-business entrepreneurs, owners and managers.

They are designed to provide information on personnel, financing, marketing, record keeping, legal aspects, insurance and site location.

The programs will be held on Tuesdays, Oct. 12, 19, and 26, from 7 to 9:30 p.m., at Golden West College, Administration room 209, Huntington Beach.

For information call 836-2709 or 891-3991.

Co-sponsors are the Service Corps of Retired Executives (SCORE), Active Corps of Executives (ACE), the Small Business Administration and Golden West College.

Care revisions inked

SACRAMENTO (AP) — The governor has signed into law major revisions to California's foster care and adoption programs that will affect at least 30,000 children.

Gov. Edmund Brown Jr.'s office said SB14 by state Sen. Robert Presley, D-Riverside, and AB1695 by Assemblywoman Gwen Moore, D-Los Angeles, will go into effect Jan. 1.

Reunion set

The South Gate High School class of 1942 will hold its 40th reunion on Oct. 9 at the Hyatt Anaheim, Anaheim.

Further information may be had by calling evenings at 827-1193.

OCC offers talks on maturing

A lecture series that explores the trials and triumphs of life's middle years will be offered at Orange Coast College in Costa Mesa.

Titled "The Middle Years," the series meets on Friday evenings, Oct. 1 and 8, from 7 to 10 p.m. in OCC's Science Lecture Hall 1.

Series fee is $8 for single admission and $12 for couples.

For information, phone 556-5880.

HB student named to post

Robin-Star Merrill, daughter of Norma E. Merrill of Huntington Beach, has been chosen by Cal Poly Pomona as a student representative for college and school relations functions.

She will present educational information concerning the school at career days on high school and community college campuses.

NOTICE OF TRUSTEE'S SALE

YOU ARE IN DEFAULT UNDER A DEED OF TRUST DATED AUGUST 28, 1981. UNLESS YOU TAKE ACTION TO PROTECT YOUR PROPERTY, IT MAY BE SOLD AT A PUBLIC SALE. IF YOU NEED AN EXPLANATION OF THE NATURE OF THE PROCEEDING AGAINST YOU, YOU SHOULD CONTACT A LAWYER.

On the 15th day of October, 1982, at the hour of 11:00 a.m., at the 8th Street entrance of the new County Courthouse, located at 700 Civic Center Drive West, formerly known as 700 West 8th Street, situated in the City of Santa Ana, County of Orange, State of California, CONTINENTAL AUXILIARY COMPANY, a California corporation, as Trustee under Deed of Trust dated August 28, 1981, executed by George Koschel and Luzstella Koschel, who are married to each other, and recorded on Sept. 15, 1981, as Instrument No. 17870, in Book 14219, Page 1283 of Official Records, County of Orange, California, given to secure an indebtedness in favor of Bank of America National Trust and Savings Association, a national banking association, by reason of the breach of the obligations secured thereby, notice of which was recorded on June 2, 1982, as Instrument No. 82-186613 of Official Records of said Orange County, and more than three months have elapsed since such recordation, will sell at public auction to the highest bidder for cash or a cashier's check drawn on a state or national bank, a state or federal credit union or a state or federal savings and loan association domiciled in this state, (payable at time of sale in lawful money of the United States of America) without covenant or warranty, express or implied, as to title, possession or encumbrances, the interest conveyed to and now held by the said Trustee under said Deed of Trust, in and to the following described property situated in the County of Orange, State of California, to wit:

Lot 186 of Tract No. 7100, in the City of Irvine, County of Orange, State of California, as shown on a map recorded in book 324, pages 44 to 48, inclusive of miscellaneous maps, in the office of the county recorder of said county.

Excepting therefrom all oil, oil rights, minerals, mineral rights, natural gas rights, and other hydrocarbons by whatsoever name known that may be within or under the parcel of land hereinabove described together with the perpetual right of drilling, mining, exploring and operating therefor and storing in and removing the same from said land or any other land including the right to whipstock or directionally drill and mine from lands other than those hereinabove described, oil or gas wells, tunnels and shafts into, through or across the subsurface of the land hereinabove described, and to bottom such whipstocked or directionally drilled wells, tunnels and shafts under and beneath or beyond the exterior limits thereof, and to redrill, retunnel, equip, maintain, repair, deepen and operate any such wells or mines without, however, the right to drill, mine, store, explore and operate through the surface of the upper 500 feet of the subsurface of the land hereinabove described, as reserved in the deed from the Irvine Company, a West Virginia corporation, recorded August 7, 1975 in Book 11477, Page 14 of Official Records. The address or other common designation, if any, of the real property described above is purported to be: 3782 Fern Street, Irvine, California; the undersigned Trustee disclaims any liability for any incorrectness of the address or other common designation, if any shown herein.

If the aforesaid property has no street address or other common designation, directions as to how to locate such property may be obtained from the Beneficiary under said Deed of Trust, at whose request the sale is to be conducted, pursuant to a written request submitted, within ten days from the first publication of this Notice, to such Beneficiary at the following address: BANK OF AMERICA NATIONAL TRUST AND SAVINGS ASSOCIATION, LOAN ADJUSTMENT DEPARTMENT NO. 4327, FORECLOSURE SECTION, 45 SOUTH HUDSON AVENUE, PASADENA, CALIFORNIA 91101.

The unpaid balance of the note secured by said Deed of Trust, with interest thereon, as provided in said note, advances, if any, under the terms of said Deed of Trust, including fees, charges and expenses of the Trustee, as of the date of the initial publication of the Notice of Sale, to wit: $103,947.34.

FOUNTAIN VALLEY SCHOOL DISTRICT
NOTICE OF ADOPTION OF RESOLUTION OF INTENT TO LEASE SURPLUS DISTRICT REAL PROPERTY
BID NO. 83-2

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT THE FOUNTAIN VALLEY SCHOOL DISTRICT has declared that the following real property will not be needed for classroom purposes:

Storage area (approximately 9' x 9') in Building E at Wardlow School located at 9191 Pioneer Drive, Huntington Beach, California.

The Board of Trustees of the Fountain Valley School District resolves to lease the facilities so indicated above under the terms and conditions stated in the Resolution of the Board, Resolution No. 83-8.

The minimum monthly lease payment for the term of the lease shall not be less than $25.00 per month. The minimum monthly lease payment for subsequent periods may be adjusted by the Consumer Price Index annual average reflected at the end of the lease period. A security deposit may be required prior to occupancy.

No commission shall be paid any licensed real estate broker in this regard, and there shall be no deduction from any proposal in determining the highest responsible bidder.

Sealed proposals to lease said property must be received by the delegated officer at the Fountain Valley School District Education Center, 17210 Oak Street, Fountain Valley, California, 92708, no later than 2:00 p.m., September 28, 1982.

Before accepting any written proposals, the delegated officer shall call for oral bidding. Any person who has heretofore submitted a written bid may submit an oral bid exceeding by at least five percent the highest written bid. The highest responsible bidder shall be required to execute the form of lease, such format has heretofore been approved by the Board of Trustees.

The Board of Trustees shall make the determination as to whether to lease said facilities with ten (10) days after receipt of bids.

Information concerning the proposal should be addressed to: FOUNTAIN VALLEY SCHOOL DISTRICT, 17210 Oak Street, Fountain Valley, California, 92708, (714) 842-6651, Attention: Naomi Wieland. Dated

IMPORTANT NOTICE
IF YOUR PROPERTY IS IN FORECLOSURE BECAUSE YOU ARE BEHIND IN YOUR PAYMENTS, IT MAY BE SOLD WITHOUT ANY COURT ACTION, and you may have the legal right to bring your account in good standing by paying all of your past due paymenis plus permitted costs and expenses within three months from the date this notice of default was recorded. This amount is $463.00 as of August 17, 1982, and will increase until your account becomes current. You may not have to pay the entire unpaid portion of your account, even though full payment was demanded, but you must pay the amount stated above.

After three months from the date of recordation of this document (which date of recordation appears hereon), unless the obligation being foreclosed upon permits a longer period, you have only the legal right to stop the foreclosure by paying the entire amount demanded by your creditor.

To find out the amount you must pay, or to arrange for payment to stop the foreclosure, or if your property is in foreclosure for any other reason, contact: ANAHEIM HILLS PLANNED COMMUNITY ASSOCIATION, PCM REALTY AND MANAGEMENT, Agent, 23726 Birtcher Drive, El Toro, CA 92630, (714) 768-7261.

If you have any questions, you should contact a lawyer or the governmental agency which may have insured your loan.

Remember, YOU MAY LOSE LEGAL RIGHTS IF YOU DO NOT TAKE PROMPT ACTION.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that pursuant to Article IX, Section 7 of the Declaration of Covenants, Conditions and Restrictions, recorded April 28, 1977, in Book 12169, Pages 209-327, of Official Records, Orange County, California, a breach of the obligation of payment of assessments has occurred. Notice of said breach and lien was filed for record on July 2, 1982 as Instrument No. 82-231208, of said Official Records. No payment of past due amounts has occurred. Therefore, the Anaheim Hills Planned Community Association does hereby elect to sell or cause to be sold, the following described real property to satisfy the obligation:

Lot 28 of Tract 7587 as per map recorded in Book 378, Pages 21 to 25, inclusive, of Miscellaneous Maps, in the Office of the Orange County Recorder.

Reye's syndrome link eyed

Warning labels sought for use on aspirin bottle

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, concerned about the suspected link between aspirin and Reye's syndrome, wants to put warning labels about the childhood disease on aspirin bottles.

In the meantime, Health and Human Services Secretary Richard S. Schweiker proposed that the government use public service announcements to issue an official warning until labels are ready.

Label changes "take time and we must address products already in retail stores and homes," Schweiker said. "We have to alert parents as quickly as possible."

Available data indicates the risks are greatest for youngsters under 16 who have chicken pox, flu or other viral infections, Schweiker told the House Energy and Commerce oversight subcommittee, which is examining the issue.

Reye's syndrome is characterized by vomiting and lethargy which may progress to dellrium and coma in youngsters recovering from viral infections. Between 600 and 1,200 cases occur in the United States each year. Between 20 percent and 30 percent of these cases end in death; many others result in permanent brain damage.

Schweiker's proposal drew immediate criticism from some quarters, although it appeared to be well received by the subcommittee.

Rep. James H. Scheuer, D-N.Y., said the announcement "may be based on a flawed study and is clearly premature given the conflicting opinions from scientific and medical experts."

Dr. Joseph M. White, president of the industry's Aspirin Foundation of America, criticized the data used in developing the proposal as "poorly developed" and "badly flawed."

"There's nothing that would prevent the government from changing its collective mind if the industry were to come up with new data now," said spokesman Bill Griggs of the Food and Drug Administration.

Griggs told the committee the procedure for implementing the warning-label program — publishing the proposal in the Federal Register, allowing for public comment, printing of the final rules and providing time for the industry to change its labels — probably meant that it would not go into effect until next spring or summer.

In addition to aspirin itself, many prescription and over-the-counter drugs — including some popular cough and cold remedies — contain salicylates, or aspirin, and would be subject to the proposed label changes.

For over-the-counter drugs, the proposed label would read:

"Warning: This product contains a salicylate. Do not use in persons under 16 years of age with flu or chicken pox unless directed by your doctor. The use of salicylates to treat these conditions has been connected with a rare but serious childhood disease called Reye's syndrome."

DEATH NOTICES

SPENCER

NELLIE I. SPENCER of Angelus Oaks, Ca. passed away on Monday, September 20, 1982 at Redlands Community Hospital after a short illness. Mrs. Spencer was 91 years of age. She was born in Long Beach, Ca. on August 2, 1891. She was a 2nd generation Californian, for the past 13 years she has made her home with her son Albert Spencer of Angelus Oaks, Ca. Besides her son she leaves a daughter Hazel I. Pinkerton of Bethesda, Maryland and a brother Frederick Vaughan of Angelus Oaks, Ca. Mrs. Spencer's husband, George Spencer, was a well-known builder in the 1920's and 1930's in the Newport Balboa Area. The family moved to Balboa in 1918 and later to the Costa Mesa area in 1933. Mrs. Spencer was a clerk in the Balboa Post Office for 25 years before retiring to her home in Costa Mesa, Ca. after her husband passed away. She loved her garden and flowers and was a long time member of the Costa Mesa Bay Cities Branch of the California Fuchsia Society. Her love for her flowers extended to a great love for all living things, the animals and birds and especially to her many friends in Angelus Oaks, Redlands, Yucaipa and the Newport Beach/Costa Mesa area. She will be sorely missed. Funeral services will be held on Friday, September 24, 1982 at 2:00PM at Pacific View Memorial Park, 3500 Pacific View Dr., Newport Beach, Ca. 92663. DEATHS ELSEWHERE

ATLANTA (AP) — The Rev. John Mulroy, 53, a crusading priest who led efforts to reform the Roman Catholic church in the Southeast, died Monday.

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — Emmet J. Hughes, 61, a professor and journalist who served as a speechwriter and aide to President Dwight D. Eisenhower, died Sunday. Hughes, who also taught at Rutgers University in 1970, wrote books about the presidency and foreign policy.

MIAMI (AP) — Theodore Gibson, 66, a civil rights activist instrumental in winning court-ordered desegregation of Dade County public schools, died Monday. Gibson was an Episcopal priest and head of the local NAACP chapter in the turbulent 1950s and early 1960s.

Bathroom list warns tipplers

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Taverns and restaurants in the San Fernando Valley are supplementing their bathroom decor with a new pitch against drunk driving: a 13-by-20 wall chart that informs you when you've had enough.

Across the top, the black-and-white graph lists weight in blocks from 100 to 250 pounds. Down the side are 10 blocks representing one to 10 drinks.

Match your weight to your consumption. If the corresponding block is red, you're probably over the .10 blood-alcohol level that signifies a drunken driver to California authorities.

Motorcycle patrolmen have begun distributing the charts to bars on their beats, said Deputy Los Angeles Police Chief Dan Sullivan.

"It's an educational program," he said, "and I expect you'd refuse to post it only if you're in the business of selling drinks to drunks."

The United Restaurant and Lounge Association, which represents about 50 Valley taverns and restaurants that sell spirits, paid $400 for 1,000 charts, association co-chairman Jerry LaRocco said.

LaRocco, who owns the Nine 'n' Easy bar on Sepulveda Boulevard, said the association adapted the chart from one used by the California Highway Patrol.

Innkeepers who serve an obviously intoxicated guest can be cited by police and fined as much as $1,000 by the state's Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, which suspends the license of repeat offenders.

Yoga class scheduled

The workshop is slated for Saturdays, Oct. 2 and 9, from 9 a.m. to noon in OCC's Student Center.

Workshop fee is $8.

Workshop instructor is Judy Olson, a certified teacher of both Siddha Yoga and Hatha Yoga. She teaches at several Southern California colleges.

Singles invited

An experimental-workshop for singles designed to help them re-direct their lives will be offered at Orange Coast College in Costa Mesa on Oct. 2.

Titled "Designing Your Own Life — As a Single Adult," the workshop will run from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. in OCC's Faculty House. Registration is $10.

Workshop director is Alyn Bartick, an OCC human sexuality instructor and a therapist in private practice in Newport Beach.

Local, county, state, national and international events come to your doorstep in the bright, light and lively Daily Pilot

Coast colleges, CBS sign pact for TV courses

Communications giant CBS Inc. and the Coast Commmnity College District have signed a $2.4 million agreement to produce and market five television courses targeted for colleges and universities nationwide as well as cable television companies and videotape distributors.

Representatives from the local college district and CBS hailed the contract Wednesday as a landmark agreement linked to the revolution in video technology and the growing market for adult education.

The pact comes at a time when Coast district administrators are embroiled in a dispute with some faculty members over the quality of television courses.

The district includes Orange Coast College in Costa Mesa, Golden West College in Huntington Beach and Coastline College, which offers classes at numerous locations. The district also owns KOCE Channel 50, located on the Golden West campus.

The district is described as the nation's leading producer of television courses. These have been used by more than 900 colleges and universities.

Under the agreement, CBS is investing $2.4 million to cover the costs of producing the five telecourses. The district will provide personnel to design, produce (at KOCE) and help market the courses.

Accompanying texts and study guides will be printed by CBS Educational and Professional Publishing. The courses are to be completed and ready for marketing by September 1984, according to CBS and the district.

Coast and CBS will share equally in revenues derived from marketing the courses to colleges and universities. CBS will derive a higher percentage from sales involving cable companies, secondary school placement, video cassettes and video discs.

"We'll both make money," Coast district Chancellor Norman Watson said.

He contended that the district has never lost money on any telecourse produced.

Disabled athlete in swim

By PHIL SNEIDERMAN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Amputee athlete Tom Clardy, who works at a Huntington Beach sporting goods store, said he plans to set off late today on a 21-mile swim from Catalina Island to Cabrillo Beach near San Pedro.

For Clardy, 37, the athletic challenge will cap a long, difficult comeback from the days he spent as a suicidal patient at a Utah Veterans Administration hospital.

"I'm not supposed to be working out at all today," he said Wednesday. "But I'm going to anyway. I'm too nervous not to."

Clardy, who resides in Fullerton, spent some time in the surf at Corona del Mar State Beach on Wednesday preparing mentally and physically for the swim.

He said he plans travel to Catalina Island tonight, plunge into the water at about 8 p.m. and arrive at Cabrillo Beach by noon Friday.

Clardy was prepared to make the swim one year ago but could not arrange for an escort boat. He feared that the current swim might be called off when his present escort boat developed serious engine trouble this week.

Rather than delay the feat again, Clardy said he has rented a boat for $1,000 o accompany him on the swim.

A former police officer and Navy frogman, Clardy was hit by a car during a skiing excursion in 1974. His right leg was amputated at the knee. Movement in his left leg was permanently impaired.

After a period of depression in the Utah hospital, Clardy slowly battled his way back to good

Waste plan due change

By STEVE TRIPOLI
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

A proposal that would allow the transportation of radioactive wastes on three major Orange County freeways may be changed before it is put into effect, its sponsors said Wednesday.

The proposal, part of a statewide plan, was authored by the California Highway Patrol with assistance from state transportation officials and the nuclear power industry.

It calls for use of the Santa Ana, Costa Mesa and Riverside freeways, all roads that run through heavily populated areas, as routes for trucks carrying the materials.

Though densely populated areas were not favored by those who drew up the plans population was just one factor used in drawing up the CHP's final proposal, according to Dan Parker of the CHP. Other considerations included road safety and the ability of raids to handle trucks carrying the materials, he said.

The plan, which has attracted criticism from almost all of the areas it affects, was aimed at finding the "safest, most feasible routes" for moving the materials, Parker said.

Though medical and industrial radioactive waste will be among those carried, the biggest potential producer of radioactive waste locally is the San Onofre nuclear power plant. Material from that plant had been transported into San Diego County and across the desert on four 1980 trips to a disposal site in Illinois.

Officials of Southern California Edison Co., which operates the plant located just south of the Orange-San Diego County line, said Wednesday they anticipate no shipments from the site until the early 1990s, when on-site waste storage areas become full.

After that time, said Edison's nuclear fuel supply manager, John Ladesich, as many as two shipments of waste per week could leave the plant by truck.

Ladesich stressed, however, that Edison currently is leaning toward a plan to remove all its wastes from the plant by rail, a process that is faster, cheaper and would require only about six shipments a year.

Parker said hearings around the state are bringing local concerns about the CHP plan to light, and that those concerns may alter the plan eventually.

"We certainly don't think we have a monopoly on knowledge — that's why we're holding the hearings," he said.

Two held in Valley rent scam

Fountain Valley police have arrested two men who allegedly tried to rent a local four-bedroom home to 16 different tenants to obtain $1,700 in preliminary payments from each.

Officers said the two allegedly were working a familiar scheme that ties into the current shortage of rental housing and the prevailing high rents.

Placed in Orange County Jail on suspicion of grand theft, fraud and criminal conspiracy were Gary Richard, 36, of Ronan, Mont., and Allen L. Carlson, 28, of Apache Junction, Ariz.

Fountain Valley police Sgt. Vic Deutsch said the two were arrested Tuesday afternoon while they were concluding transactions with separate prospective tenants at two restaurants near Orange County Airport.

Deutsch said officers found that the two men each carried business cards bearing their photograph and the same phony name — David R. Hall. He said the men possessed documents indicating they had set up appointments to meet 16 prospective renters at the restaurant.

The two men had earlier rented a Fountain Valley home with four bedrooms, a pool and fireplace and then had placed a newspaper ad offering to rent the home for $695 per month, which is significantly below going rates, Deutsch said.

The men allegedly set up appointments with 16 prospective tenants, urging each to bring a cashier's check for $1,700, which they said would cover first and last month's rent, plus security and key deposits, according to Deutsch.

The two even employed an answering service in Arizona to field calls to their "office," he said.

Several prospective tenants were skeptical of the low rent, however, and contacted Fountain Valley police.

After receiving several calls about the home, officers arranged to monitor the restaurant transactions. Police arrested the two men after confirming that they were renting the same home to different people, Deutsch said.

He said officers recovered the deposits and found that the men were carrying 16 separate rental contracts and 16 keys that would not have worked at the Fountain Valley home.

Valley to increase trash pickup fees

Fountain Valley home and business owners face higher monthly trash collection fees beginning in October.

Homeowners currently paying $3.98 per month for refuse collection will pay $5.97, beginning Oct. 11.

Commercial and industrial charges vary according to the size of the refuse bins used and the number of pickups. But city comptroller Howard Longballa said the commercial-industrial rates are increasing by an average of 11.6 percent, effective Oct. 1. (This percentage does not include the new county gate fees.)

The new refuse fees, approved Tuesday by the Fountain Valley City Council, reflect increased charges by Rainbow Disposal, which contracts to pick up local trash, plus the imposition of gate fees at county landfills and transfer stations where the trash is taken.

In the new residential charge, $3.80 will go to Rainbow (up from the present $3.40).

Shell blast 'like atom bomb'

MARTINEZ (AP) — A blaze with flames shooting more than 500 feet high from a Shell Oil refinery explosion that police say looked and sounded "like a small atomic bomb" was under control today.

Windows in at least four homes a half-mile from the massive complex were blown out by the force of the explosion Wednesday night, according to police in Martinez, 20 miles northeast of San Francisco. Buildings were shaken for several miles around and the blast was heard eight miles away.

No injuries were reported in the accident and police credited the "excellent work" of the Shell firefighters in bringing the flames under control quickly. A small fire continued today as the residue of oil burned off, officials said.

"Most of the refinery is kind of automatically controlled and most of the operators are quite a distance" from the scene, said Shell spokesman Dan Glaze.

Another Shell official, Joe Sneed, said the explosion apparently occurred in a piece of equipment called a catalytic feed hydro treater, which removes impurities from oil. The part of the plant where the blast occurred processes some 80,000 barrels of light oil each day, he said.

Witnesses said a brilliant orange flash lit up the sky at 9:35 p.m., followed by an enormous rumble and fountains of flames.

"I saw the light of the explosion before I heard it," said Martinez senior patrolman Chuck Steele. "It was like a small atomic bomb. It wasn't mushroom-shaped but it was huge. The flames were at least 500 to 600 feet high, way over the tower which is 300 feet. And there were cinders or sparks like fireworks."

Steele said a deputy sheriff told him he'd been walking about

BULLETIN BOARD

High schools forum topic

A community forum on the future of area high schools will be held Saturday from 9 a.m. to noon at Marina High School cafeteria, 15871 Springdale Ave., Huntington Beach.

Trustees of the Huntington Beach Union High School District will be asking community members how the district should spend its money and for priorities for school programs.

Decisions will affect students at Edison, Huntington Beach, Fountain Valley, Marina, Ocean View and Westminster comprehensive high schools plus Wintersburg continuation high school and the guidance center.

●A four-week program on women's fashions featuring advice on how to dress according to one's personal style, will be held Saturdays at Golden West College.

Fashion consultants Wanda Harlow and Ricki Van Hoorebeke will conduct the sessions from 10 a.m. to noon in Administration Room 137 on the Huntington Beach campus. The first session is scheduled this Saturday.

Topics will include dressing for body proportions, building a wardrobe and basic modeling skills. Registration fee for the four-week program is $35.

● A 10K run and 5K walk are scheduled Saturday, Oct. 9 in Huntington Beach. Proceeds will go into the attempt to preserve the Bolsa Chica marshlands.

The two events, sponsored by the Amigos de Bolsa Chica environmentalist organization, will start at 8:30 a.m. at Bolsa Chica State Beach at Pacific Coast Highway and Warner Avenue.

There will be a $10 entry fee. Registration starts at 7 a.m. the day of the race.

● Capt. John W. Kinnier will relieve Capt. James R. Williams as commanding officer of the Seal Beach Naval Weapons Station in ceremonies Sept. 27.

Williams will go to Washington, D.C. as director of undersea warfare systems after commanding the station for 23 months.

Kinnier has been assigned to duty in Washington for the last eight years.

Beirut blasted before ceremony

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Explosions rocked Christian-populated east Beirut today about two hours before President Amin Gemayel was sworn in. Authorities said the blasts were at an ammunition dump and radios reported at least 38 people were injured.

The explosions were at an arms depot where the Lebanese army stored tons of Soviet-made rockets hauled out of Palestine Liberation Organization centers in west Beirut, prosecutor-General Assaad Germanos said. Military officials said the first explosion was set off when a shell being unloaded from an army truck went off, causing a chain reaction.

For about an hour, the area resounded with explosions as people ducked for cover from the whizzing rockets and several buildings were on fire.

A woman who escaped the area was screaming, "The military, the military, why do they put it among the people?"

Germanos told reporters the blast occurred at an army depot in the al-Abed Square near the Sin el-Fil residential neighborhood of east Beirut at 9:45 a.m. (12:45 a.m. PDT). The area is rfear the Green Line that divides Beirut into Moslem and Christian sectors.

Germanos said 28 passers-by were hurt but Christian radio stations gave the names of 38 people it said were injured. Earlier, police reported "several" wounded but said there were no deaths.

The explosions sent a black cloud of smoke billowing skyward and debris scattered over a wide area. It was not immediately clear what caused the explosion.

Lebanese radio stations said civil defense workers with loudspeakers blared warnings to people telling them to stay off streets around the stricken area as ambulances converged to treat the injured.

COLLEGE TV CONTRACT. . .

Publishing division, said population studies indicate the traditional college age group, 18 to 25, will decrease by 15 percent by 1990, while the number of adults over 35 will increase by 40 percent during the period.

He said this older age group is demonstrating a strong appetite for continuing education.

"People are getting much more serious about spending some of their leisure time in learning," he said.

Ashton said faculty objections to television courses have occurred elsewhere in the United States and said he is not worried about reviews of Coast television courses.

"I happen to think the Coast district is one of the best in the country from design to marketing (of telecourses,)" he said.

Phillis Basile, president of the American Federation of Teachers chapter representing full-time Coast district instructors, said the group has no specific objections to the CBS contract.

But she said some Coast teachers remain concerned about the district's diversion of attention to nationwide television course production while cutbacks continue in classroom instruction resources.

Basile also raised questions about how many credits would be granted for television courses that will consist of 26 to 30 viewing hours, plus written assignments, testing and instructor consultation.

Crash victim wins case against bar

A former Orange Coast College student from Costa Mesa — seriously injured in a traffic accident in 1978 — has won a $1.88 million judgment against an Anaheim bar which served drinks to the driver of the car which struck her bicycle.

The verdict in favor of 27-year-old Michelle Daily was reached Wednesday in Orange County Superior Court Judge Leonard Goldstein's courtroom after a day of deliberations.

Though it was substantially less than the $3.5 million which Dailey sought, her attorney said the award was a "reasonable amount."

The jury, after hearing five weeks of testimony, determined that Kano's Restaurant and Lounge in Anaheim was negligent for serving drinks to Richard Morris, the driver of the vehicle which struck Daily's bicycle from behind Sept. 15, 1978.

The accident occurred at about 2 a.m. as Daily was riding home from her job at the South Coast Plaza Hotel. She suffered serious leg injuries which her attorney, Charles O'Reilly, said would still require costly medical treatment in coming years.

O'Reilly also said that his client's prospects of finding employment were damaged because the leg injuries, though treated through corrective surgery, led to curvature of her spine.

Wave watch continues

Seal Beach officials kept a close watch for heavy waves in the Surfside Colony throughout the night and today as Hurricane Olivia posed a threat to the troubled area.

A city spokeswoman said homes have escaped flooding and damage. She said the threat seemed to be easing and that the city was informed this morning that the hurricane was losing intensity.

Nevertheless, heavy Navy equipment was reported moving sand in front of the expensive homes that have been threatened by high tides starting several weeks ago.

At a Los Angeles hearing last weekend, Orange County Rep. Jerry Patterson, D-Garden Grove, was among local people expressing opposition to the current plan.

If the CHP changes its plan as a result of the current round of hearings there will be more hearings in the affected areas before a final decision on new routes is reached, Parker said.

Even without changes — and that was characterized by Parker as an "unlikely" possibility — no new plan can go into effect until at least the beginning of next year, he said.

WEATHER

Coastal

Increasing high cloudiness. Highs ranging from upper 70s at the beaches to 80s inland. Tonight: variable high cloudiness. Lows 65 to 70. Friday: Considerable high cloudiness. Highs ranging from upper 70s at beaches to 80s inland.

Over outer coastal waters northwest winds 10 to 20 knots with 3 to 5 foot combined seas decreasing tonight and Friday. Elsewhere, light variable winds night and morning hours becoming southwest to west 8 to 16 knots in afternoon and evening hours today and Friday. Southwest swells increasing to 2 to 4 feet by late today continuing through Friday.

California

Ocean-front property dwellers along south-facing beaches were warned to prepare for high waves today, Friday and possibly through the weekend if Hurricane Olivia doesn't die down, the National Weather Service said.

The hurricane was last placed by the weather service about 750 miles south of San Diego on Wednesday, decreasing in intensity as it moved toward the west and northwest at 14 knots, said weather service specialist Allen Thompson.

He said 5-to-8-foot breakers along south-facing beaches were expected today and Friday, noting that some areas expected to be hit are Santa Monica, Long Beach and Malibu.

"If Olivia stalls out and degenerates into a tropical storm there will be a slow subsiding," Thompson said. "But if it starts moving more northward as a hurricane, then it will continue the wave action through the weekend."

Olivia was moving at maximum speeds of 110 knots with gusty winds up to 125 knots. It was expected to decrease in intensity as it moved over colder waters, he said.

"Now is the time for persons with ocean-front property that is subject to wave damage to begin taking protective measures," the weather service said in a statement today.

High tides at Los Angeles Harbor were forecast for this afternoon at 4.7 feet.

More fog and cloudiness were forecast throughout Southern California through Friday with scorching temperatures in the Los Angeles area, Owens Valley and coastal valley areas.

The high in Los Angeles on Friday should be about 90 with 95-to-102-degree weather forecast in valleys. Mountain-area highs may range from 78 to 88 with northern desert highs from 95 to 100 and low desert highs of 100 to 108.

U.S. summary

Showers swept from the upper Midwest to the Atlantic Coast today and clouds stretched from the Rockies to Florida.

Rainshowers were common over the lower Great Lakes, New York and Pennsylvania, and along the mid-Atlantic Coast. It was cloudy over New England, the Ohio Valley, Florida, South Dakota and along the Carolina coast.

Clouds and a few showers also were reported over Minnesota and Iowa, northern Colorado, western Nebraska and southwest Wyoming. Fair skies prevailed elsewhere.

Scattered thunderstorms were forecast for later today over southern Florida, and scattered showers were expected from New England across Maryland, New York and northeastern Pennsylvania. Cloudy skies were predicted over the upper Mississippi Valley, with sunny skies forecast for the rest of the nation.

Temperatures around the nation before dawn ranged from 36 at Sault Ste Marie, Mich., to 88 in Phoenix, Ariz.

By DAVID KUTZMANN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

A Huntington Beach man accused of hacking to death his estranged wife and her mother in their Sunnycrest Drive home in June has been ordered to stand trial on death penalty charges of murder, robbery and burglary.

Following a nearly two-day preliminary hearing, West Orange County Municipal Court Judge William L. Mock ruled Wednesday there was sufficient evidence to order defendant Rene Florea Dayco, 41, to face trial.

The slender mechanic's helper is charged with two counts of murder, two of robbery and one of burglary. He also faces multiple special circumstance allegations which could lead to imposition of the death penalty if he is convicted.

Judge Mock ordered Dayco to be arraigned Oct. 4 before Superior Court Judge Luis Cardenas in Santa Ana. The defendant will continue to be held without bail at the Orange County Jail.

Dayco is accused of killing is estranged wife, Shirley Dayco, 27, and her mother, Amelia Harbulak, 65, June 14 in the Huntington Beach home where the women lived with the Dayco couple's three young children.

The defendant was arrested in Rosarito Beach, Mexico, two days after police discovered the mutilated bodies of the women in a bedroom of the home at 14952 Sunnycrest Lane.

The three children were found unharmed with Dayco in Mexico. Police confiscated a number of bloody knives, including a meat cleaver, from the trunk of Dayco's Pontiac Firebird automobile.

According to testimony Tuesday, the defendant's sister-in-law said Dayco confessed to her June 14 that he killed his wife, apparently because she was seeing another man.

The witness, Luz Carabas of San Diego, said Dayco came to her home at about 4 a.m. and told her he had a "big problem."

According to the woman, it was the custom of men from the Philippine Islands where she and Dayco grew up to beat and kill their wives if they went out with other men.

Dayco and his wife had been separated about a month. During that time, the defendant lived with a friend and his family in Temple City.

That friend, Paulino Ventura, testified Wednesday that Dayco apparently left his home the night of the slayings and returned in the early morning hours with what appeared to be a blood stain on a shirt sleeve and a bruise on his face.

The defendant's three children were with him, Ventura said, and Dayco hurriedly packed his belongings and left.

"I asked him where he was going . . . As far as I know, he just said somewhere," the witness said.

Ventura identified a meat cleaver seized by police from Dayco's car as being one he had owned.

The burglary charge against Dayco involves his allegedly breaking into his estranged wife's house on June 14 and the robbery counts allege he stole the contents of his victims' purses

Inflation rate 3.3%

WASHINGTON (AP) — Falling food and gasoline prices held inflation to an annual rate of 3.3 percent in August, the smallest rise in four months, the government said today.

Prices moderated across the board, except for medical care, the only component in the Labor Department's Consumer Price Index that has risen substantially every month this year.

Largely responsible for August's 0.3 percent seasonally adjusted monthly increase were the 0.1 percent decline posted for gasoline prices and the 0.3 percent fall in food costs.

Railroad strike ending

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says he signed legislation ordering striking railroad engineers back to work to "protect the jobs of our people," but still thinks the government should stay out of labor-management negotiations.

Within hours after the decree became law, union officials said they would comply, thus ending a four-day strike that had shut most of the nation's rail system.

They said they expected most striking engineers to resume work at the beginning of their next shift.

Raise nixed for military

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legislation that would authorize a 4 percent pay boost for members of the armed forces has been turned down in the House.

Wednesday's 214-186 vote on the measure, which was brought to the floor under an expedited procedure that permitted no amendments, was 53 short of the two-thirds margin needed for approval.

The bill must either be redrafted by the House Armed Services Committee or sent to the Rules Committee, which will set procedures under which it may be considered again.

Belushi hearing slated

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A county grand jury will begin hearing testimony Tuesday in the drug-overdose death of "Saturday Night Live" comic John Belushi, the Los Angeles Herald Examiner reported today.

But the newspaper said it was unlikely that grand jurors will be asked to return an indictment.

Instead, the Herald Examiner said, prosecutors decided to go before the grand jury hoping to force reluctant witnesses to discuss events leading to Belushi's death. The 33-year-old comedian died of a drug overdose March 5 in a bungalow behind the Chateau Marmont hotel in Hollywood.

Bills now law

SACRAMENTO (AP) — New laws will give tax breaks to computer software firms and World Airways, require prisoners to work for time off sentences, and enable banks to buy shopping centers.

Other bills among the dozens signed Wednesday by Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. require the Public Utilities Commission to monitor large utility construction projects, forbid children from riding in the back of trucks, and add two Legislature-named members to the Unemployment Insurance Appeals Board.

In addition, the Democratic governor signed a package of crime bills at a press conference in Los Angeles.

Soldiers suspicious?

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — A Tel Aviv newspaper today quoted two Israeli soldiers stationed near the Chatilla refugee camp in Beirut as saying they suspected Palestinians were being massacred there but were told by superiors: "It's all right, don't worry."

The Haaretz said its reporter was approached by the soldiers outside the camp and told that on Thursday evening several Palestinian women ran out of Chatilla crying hysterically that their children were being butchered.

Quarantine extended

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — The army quarantined a mud-covered neighborhood strewn with rotting corpses following a flood which claimed at least 313 lives there.

Interior Ministry spokesman Orrego Candray, explaining the army's action, said Wednesday that the decomposing bodies in the Montebello neighborhood has caused an outbreak of a viral infection known as parvovirosis.

Prayer pays dividend?

SANTA CRUZ (AP) — As Stanton Powers stood and prayed, the automatic teller machine continued to add. He watched his bank balance rise from $1.17 to $1,600. Early the next morning, Powers had $4.4 million.

"Mr. Powers' very simple contention is that he prayed for the money and his prayers were answered," attorney Marcello DiMauro said Wednesday.

"If you (God) can turn water into wine and bread into fish," said DiMauro, scrambling the Bible a bit, "you should be able to put $4 million into somebody's account."

But officials at the County Bank of Santa Cruz say they're not ready to accept the conversion of a Santa Cruz artist on a Social Security disability income into a millionaire. Bank president Reese Davis says his lawyers are investigating the incident.

The night of Sept. 7, the 39-year-old pen-and-ink artist peered at his balance in the automatic teller, "And before his eyes, it increased to $26 and $201 and $600 and $1,600 while he was standing and looking at his balance and praying or meditating," DiMauro said.

Powers went home, but unable to sleep, returned to the bank at 5:30 a.m. and "discovered his balance was in excess of $4 million," DiMauro said.

A bank officer suggested that Powers — not God — had punched in spurious deposits. Powers denied it.

"If the money belongs to the bank, I'd like to see them keep it," DiMauro said. "But I'd like to see them prove it."

Make-believe disaster

While it appears this "victim" is dead, she got up and walked away following a multi-hospital disaster drill at Doheny State Beach Park Wednesday. The county fire department and four south county hospitals, along with 76 student volunteers, responded to the scenario of a plane crash onto the crowded picnic area.

Bradley to fight drilling

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley, whose campaign for governor has received lukewarm support from environmentalists, says he'll protect sensitive portions of the California coast from oil drilling.

However, the Democrat said Wednesday he would allow development along the 88 percent of the coast that is not environmentally sensitive, a position that irked a representative of the nation's largest conservation organization.

Bradley, who leads Republican state Attorney General George Deukmejian in recent polls, said the Interior Department's coastal leasing proposal would amount to a "wholesale giveaway" of about a billion offshore acres.

"Secretary of Interior Watt's proposal to put up for sale our most precious resource — 1 billion acres of offshore tracts — is, in my judgment, a most irresponsible proposal," said Bradley in a press conference at the Cliff House as fog shrouded Seal Rocks below.

"We are not opposed to all offshore oil drilling," he explained. "To give you an example, I think only 12 percent of the whole coastline of California has been found to be environmentally sensitive, and therefore must be protected. It is that region we're most concerned about."

Asked if drilling should be permitted in the other 88 percent, he said: "Yes, we have no objection to the rest of it."

Bradley said he sought to protect "only 24" of the 163 tracts proposed for development in Southern California as he "led the fight" against offshore drilling there.

The candidate declined to specify where he would allow drilling and where he would oppose it, but said there would be protected areas all along the state's 1,000-mile coast.

Environmentalists have been waiting for Bradley to take a position on offshore drilling and on the so-called Bottle Bill initiative on November's ballot.

Police rescue kidnapped girl

Kidnappers who held a Vietnamese 11-year-old captive for 27 hours reportedly had plans to execute the Santa Ana girl if police intervened, officers said after rescuing her late Wednesday.

Anh Dao Thi Nguyn was found bound and gagged, but unharmed, in a bedroom of an Anaheim home. Five persons were arrested including a man standing guard outside the bedroom who was overpowered by police, officers said.

Nguyn was grabbed by two men Tuesday while walking to school. Police said the kidnappers later contacted the girl's mother, demanding 200 ounces of gold for the girl's safe return.

Officers said the mother followed the kidnappers' instructions on where to take the ransom late Wednesday while police followed her car.

Officers said they were about to give up when a car began flashing its lights at the vehicle being driven by the mother. Police said they arrested two men who told authorities where the girl was being held.

After the successful rescue, Santa Ana officers said they now believe that the alleged kidnappers had been stalking the 11-year-old for several days, believing that her family was wealthy.

Introducing . . .

COME SEE THE EXCITING NEW 1983 CADILLACS

JOIN US AS WE CELEBRATE OUR 15th ANNIVERSARY

Thursday, September 23rd you're invited to join us in a double celebration. The 1983 Cadillacs have arrived and feature new levels of performance and styling refinements. Of special interest is a state of the art BOSE/DELCO sound system custom designed for each car's interior and offering startlingly lifelike reproduction.

Additionally, we at Nabers Cadillac are celebratng our 15th year of service. Stop by tonight and help us celebrate.

IT WILL BE OUR PLEASURE TO PROVIDE COMPLIMENTARY CHAMPAGNE AND HORS D'OEUVRES FROM 5:00 to 9:00 PM.

HB student named to post

Robin Star Merrill, daughter of Norma E. Merrill of Huntington Beach, has been chosen by Cal Poly Pomona as a student representative for college and school relations functions.

She will present educational information concerning the school at career days on high school and community college campuses.

SPENCER

NELLIE I. SPENCER of Angelus Oaks, Ca. passed away on Monday, September 20, 1982 at Redlands Community Hospital after a short illness. Mrs. Spencer was 91 years of age. She was born in Long Beach, Ca. on August 2, 1891. She was a 2nd generation Californian, for the past 13 years she has made her home with her son Albert Spencer of Angelus Oaks, Ca. Besides her son she leaves a daughter Hazel I. Pinkerton of Bethesda, Maryland and a brother Frederick Vaughan of Angelus Oaks, Ca. Mrs. Spencer's husband, George Spencer, was a well-known builder in the 1920's and 1930's in the Newport Balboa Area. The family moved to Balboa in 1918 and later to the Costa Mesa area in 1933. Mrs. Spencer was a clerk in the Balboa Post Office for 25 years before retiring to her home in Costa Mesa, Ca. after her husband passed away. She loved her garden and flowers and was a long time member of the Costa Mesa Bay Cities Branch of the California Fuchsia Society. Her love for her flowers extended to a great love for all living things, the animals and birds and especially to her many friends in Angelus Oaks, Redlands, Yucaipa and the Newport Beach/Costa Mesa area. She will be sorely missed. Funeral services will be held on Friday, September 24, 1982 at 2:00PM at Pacific View Memorial Park, 3500 Pacific View Dr., Newport Beach, Ca. 92663. Pacific View Mortuary directors.

PUBLIC NOTICE

T-14432
NOTICE OF TRUSTEE'S SALE

YOU ARE IN DEFAULT UNDER A DEED OF TRUST DATED AUGUST 28, 1981. UNLESS YOU TAKE ACTION TO PROTECT YOUR PROPERTY, IT MAY BE SOLD AT A PUBLIC SALE. IF YOU NEED AN EXPLANATION OF THE NATURE OF THE PROCEEDING AGAINST YOU, YOU SHOULD CONTACT A LAWYER.

On the 15th day of October, 1982, at the hour of 11:00 a.m., at the 8th Street entrance of the new County Courthouse, located at 700 Civic Center Drive West, formerly known as 700 West 8th Street, situated in the City of Santa Ana, County of Orange, State of California, CONTINENTAL AUXILIARY COMPANY, a California corporation, as Trustee under Deed of Trust dated August 28, 1981, executed by George Koschel and Luzstella Koschel, who are married to each other, and recorded on Sept. 15, 1981, as Instrument No. 17870, in Book 14219, Page 1283 of Official Records, County of Orange, California, given to secure an indebtedness in favor of Bank of America National Trust and Savings Association, a national banking association, by reason of the obligations secured thereby, notice of which was recorded on June 2, 1982, as Instrument No. 82-186613 of Official Records of said Orange County, and more than three months have elapsed since such recordation, will sell at public auction to the highest bidder for cash or a cashier's check drawn on a state or national bank, a state or federal credit union or a state or federal savings and loan association domiciled in this state, (payable at time of sale in lawful money of the United States of America) without covenant or warranty, express or implied, as to title, possession or encumbrances, the interest conveyed to and now held by the said Trustee under said Deed of Trust, in and to the following described property situated in the County of Orange, State of California, to wit:

Lot 186 of Tract No. 7100, in the City of Irvine, County of Orange, State of California, as shown on a map recorded in book 324, pages 44 to 48, inclusive of miscellaneous maps, in the office of the county recorder of said county.

Excepting therefrom all oil, oil rights, minerals, mineral rights, natural gas rights, and other hydrocarbons by whatsoever name known that may be within or under the parcel of land hereinabove described together with the perpetual right of drilling, mining, exploring and operating therefor and storing in and removing the same from said land or any other land including the right to whipstock or directionally drill and mine from lands other than those hereinabove described, oil or gas wells, tunnels and shafts into, through or across the subsurface of the land hereinabove described, and to bottom such whipstocked or directionally drilled wells, tunnels and shafts under and beneath or beyond the exterior limits thereof, and to redrill, retunnel, equip, maintain, repair, deepen and operate any such wells or mines without, however, the right to drill, mine, store, explore and operate through the surface of the upper 500 feet of the subsurface of the land hereinabove described, as reserved in the deed from the Irvine Company, a West Virginia corporation, recorded August 7, 1975 in Book 11477, Page 14 of Official Records. The address or other common designation, if any, of the real property described above is purported to be: 3782 Fern Street, Irvine, California; the undersigned Trustee disclaims any liability for any incorrectness of the address or other common designation, if any shown herein.

If the aforesaid property has no street address or other common designation, directions as to how to locate such property may be obtained from the Beneficiary under said Deed of Trust, at whose request the sale is to be conducted, pursuant to a written request submitted, within ten days from the first publication of this Notice, to such Beneficiary at the following address: BANK OF AMERICA NATIONAL TRUST AND SAVINGS ASSOCIATION, LOAN ADJUSTMENT DEPARTMENT NO. 4327, FORECLOSURE SECTION, 45 SOUTH HUDSON AVENUE, PASADENA, CALIFORNIA 91101.

The unpaid balance of the note secured by said Deed of Trust, with interest thereon, as provided in said note, advances, if any, under the terms of said Deed of Trust, including fees, charges and expenses of the Trustee, as of the date of the initial publication of the Notice of Sale, to wit: $103,947.34.

Dated September 10, 1982.

NOTICE OF TRUSTEE'S SALE
No. 50326v

YOU ARE IN DEFAULT UNDER A DEED OF TRUST DATED JULY 17, 1980. UNLESS YOU TAKE ACTION TO PROTECT YOUR PROPERTY, IT MAY BE SOLD AT A PUBLIC SALE. IF YOU NEED AN EXPLANATION OF THE NATURE OF THE PROCEEDING AGAINST YOU, YOU SHOULD CONTACT A LAWYER.

On October 6, 1982, at 11:00 a.m., VERDUGO SERVICE CORPORATION, a California corporation, as duly appointed Trustee under and pursuant to Deed of Trust recorded September 10, 1980, as instr. No. 12823, book 13737, page 146, of Official Records, executed by: NEWPORT PARTNERSHIP, A General Partnership, as trustor, in the office of the County Recorder of Orange County, State of California, WILL SELL AT PUBLIC AUCTION TO HIGHEST BIDDER FOR CASH (payable at time of sale in lawful money of the United States) at: the entrance (South) to Orange County old Courthouse, city of Santa Ana, California, all right, title and interest conveyed to and now held by it under said Deed of Trust in the property situated in said County and State described as:

Lot 7 of Tract No. 300, in the county of Orange, state of California, as per map recorded in book 4, pages 11 and 12 of Miscellaneous Maps, in the office of the County Recorder of said county and state of California.

The street address and other common designation, if any, of the real property described above is purported to be: 2328 Newport Blvd., Costa Mesa, California 92626.

The undersigned Trustee disclaims any liability for any incorrectness of the street address and other common designation, if any, shown herein.

Said sale will be made, but without covenant or warranty, express or implied, regarding title, possession, or encumbrances, to pay the remaining principal sum of the note secured by said Deed of Trust, with interest thereon, as provided in said note, advances, if any, under the terms of said Deed of Trust, fees, charges and expenses of the Trustee and of the trusts created by said Deed of Trust, for the amount reasonably estimated to be: $164,592.35.

The beneficiary under said Deed of Trust heretofore executed and delivered to the undersigned a written Declaration of Default and Demand for Sale, and a written Notice of Deafault and Election to Sell. The undersigned caused said Notice of Default and Election to Sell to be recorded in the county where the real property is located.

Bigger plan for Laguna Canyon eyed

By STEVE MITCHELL
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

The Irvine Company has submitted plans to the county for a Laguna Canyon project nearly twice as large and with more than twice the homes proposed a year ago.

In its Laguna/Laurel Canyon plan, the company proposes building as many as 3,600 units on 2,150 acres along Laguna Canyon Road between the San Diego Freeway and El Toro Road.

Plans for the project were barely in the hands of county Environmental Management Agency officials before Laguna Beach submitted a list of the city's concerns.

The homes, ranging from affordable units to luxury custom homes adjacent to an 18-hole private golf course, would dot the canyon acreage.

Plans call for low and medium density development of homes in Laurel Canyon, along with a commercial center adjacent to the proposed San Joaquin Transportation Corridor.

And while the land area and the number of units proposed are much larger than originally proposed by the company, a spokesman for the development firm said the project includes much more public open space.

Richard Sim, vice president of the company's community development division, said plans call for phased dedication of 1,151 acres as public open space, including ridgelines and hillsides facing the canyon road and in Laurel Canyon.

When that is added to the 158-acre golf course, open space and recreation land would amount to about 61 percent of the development area.

Sim said development could begin in two to three years, depending on approval by the county and the economic climate.

"In any event," he said, "We anticipate it will take a minimum of 10 years and perhaps as long as 15 to complete the planned community."

But before development begins, the company must prepare an environmental impact report. Public hearings on that document and the project are tentatively scheduled for mid-March.

The company discarded a "golf village" proposal submitted earlier, with officials saying the plan was not economically feasible.

Laguna Bech council this week sent a letter to county officials outlining concerns it has with the project, and issues it believes should be included in the environmental report.

Specifically, it wants EIR to evaluate the effects of traffic on existing roadways as well as the

Laguna Beach council members agreed to offer the U.S. Postal Service $1,025,000 for a nearly four-acre parcel in Laguna Canyon owned by the service.

The Postal Service has declared the 3.7-acre tract, near Big Bend in the canyon, as surplus, and government agencies have first right to purchase the land at fair market value.

He said the city could use the land for a number of things, including possibly a night-lighted adult softball field.

That option would allow the city to move softball activities from Riddle Field and remove a long-standing battle between the city and neighbors near that field who complain of noise and bright lights at night.

A second option offered by the city manager would see the city use the land for a storage yard.

That would enable Laguna to consolidate two current storage yards and sell the valuable property where the city's rolling stock and equipment are presently stored. Combining the city and school district storage yards is also a possibility.

A third alternative would be to construct low-cost senior citizen housing on the site, although a zone change would be required to complete that option.

And, the city manager said, the flat parcel could be used for peripheral parking or a parking structure.

Frank said funding for the property could come from several sources, including $770,000 from the city's open space fund; $202,000 from the uncommitted balance in the capital improvement fund, and $53,000 from the park-in-lieu account from developers.

There are problems with the purchase, Frank warned. For one thing, the purchase would eliminate the reserve for Sycamore Hills, a 522-acre parcel purchased by the city in 1976, for which Laguna still owes $7 million.

Disabled athlete in swim

By PHIL SNEIDERMAN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Amputee athlete Tom Clardy, who works at a Huntington Beach sporting goods store, said he plans to set off late today on a 21-mile swim from Catalina Island to Cabrillo Beach near San Pedro.

For Clardy, 37, the athletic challenge will cap a long, difficult comeback from the days he spent as a suicidal patient at a Utah Veterans Administration hospital.

"I'm not supposed to be working out at all today," he said Wednesday. "But I'm going to anyway. I'm too nervous not to."

Clardy, who resides in Fullerton, spent some time in the surf at Corona del Mar State Beach on Wednesday preparing mentally and physically for the swim.

He said he plans travel to Catalina Island tonight, plunge into the water at about 8 p.m. and arrive at Cabrillo Beach by noon Friday.

Clardy was prepared to make the swim one year ago but could not arrange for an escort boat. He feared that the current swim might be called off when his present escort boat developed serious engine trouble this week.

Rather than delay the feat again, Clardy said he has rented a boat for $1,000 o accompany him on the swim.

A former police officer and Navy frogman, Clardy was hit by a car during a skiing excursion in 1974. His right leg was amputated at the knee. Movement in his left leg was permanently impaired.

After a period of depression in the Utah hospital, Clardy slowly battled his way back to good

Waste plan due change

By STEVE TRIPOLI
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

A proposal that would allow the transportation of radioactive wastes on three major Orange County freeways may be changed before it is put into effect, its sponsors said Wednesday.

The proposal, part of a statewide plan, was authored by the California Highway Patrol with assistance from state transportation officials and the nuclear power industry.

It calls for use of the Santa Ana, Costa Mesa and Riverside freeways, all roads that run through heavily populated areas, as routes for trucks carrying the materials.

Though densely populated areas were not favored by those who drew up the plans population was just one factor used in drawing up the CHP's final proposal, according to Dan Parker of the CHP. Other considerations included road safety and the ability of raids to handle trucks carrying the materials, he said.

The plan, which has attracted criticism from almost all of the areas it affects, was aimed at finding the "safest, most feasible routes" for moving the materials, Parker said.

Though medical and industrial radioactive waste will be among those carried, the biggest potential producer of radioactive waste locally is the San Onofre nuclear power plant. Material from that plant had been transported into San Diego County and across the desert on four 1980 trips to a disposal site in Illinois.

Officials of Southern California Edison Co., which operates the plant located just south of the Orange-San Diego County line, said Wednesday they anticipate no shipments from the site until the early 1990s, when on-site waste storage areas become full.

After that time, said Edison's nuclear fuel supply manager, John Ladesich, as many as two shipments of waste per week could leave the plant by truck.

Ladesich stressed, however, that Edison currently is leaning toward a plan to remove all its wastes from the plant by rail, a process that is faster, cheaper and would require only about six shipments a year.

Parker said hearings around the state are bringing local concerns about the CHP plan to light, and that those concerns may alter the plan eventually.

"We certainly don't think we have a monopoly on knowledge — that's why we're holding the hearings," he said.

Two held in Valley rent scam

Fountain Valley police have arrested two men who allegedly tried to rent a local four-bedroom home to 16 different tenants to obtain $1,700 in preliminary payments from each.

Officers said the two allegedly were working a familiar scheme that ties into the current shortage of rental housing and the prevailing high rents.

Placed in Orange County Jail on suspicion of grand theft, fraud and criminal conspiracy were Gary Richard, 36, of Ronan, Mont., and Allen L. Carlson, 28, of Apache Junction, Ariz.

Fountain Valley police Sgt. Vic Deutsch said the two were arrested Tuesday afternoon while they were concluding transactions with separate prospective tenants at two restaurants near Orange County Airport.

Deutsch said officers found that the two men each carried business cards bearing their photograph and the same phony name — David R. Hall. He said the men possessed documents indicating they had set up appointments to meet 16 prospective renters at the restaurant.

The two men had earlier rented a Fountain Valley home with four bedrooms, a pool and fireplace and then had placed a newspaper ad offering to rent the home for $695 per month, which is significantly below going rates, Deutsch said.

The men allegedly set up appointments with 16 prospective tenants, urging each to bring a cashier's check for $1,700, which they said would cover first and last month's rent, plus security and key deposits, according to Deutsch.

The two even employed an answering service in Arizona to field calls to their "office," he said.

Several prospective tenants were skeptical of the low rent, however, and contacted Fountain Valley police.

After receiving several calls about the home, officers arranged to monitor the restaurant transactions. Police arrested the two men after confirming that they were renting the same home to different people, Deutsch said.

He said officers recovered the deposits and found that the men were carrying 16 separate rental contracts and 16 keys that would not have worked at the Fountain Valley home.

Crash victim wins case against bar

A former Orange Coast College student from Costa Mesa — seriously injured in a traffic accident in 1978 — has won a $1.88 million judgment against an Anaheim bar which served drinks to the driver of the car which struck her bicycle.

The verdict in favor of 27-year-old Michelle Daily was reached Wednesday in Orange County Superior Court Judge Leonard Goldstein's courtroom after a day of deliberations.

Though it was substantially less than the $3.5 million which Dailey sought, her attorney said the award was a "reasonable amount."

The jury, after hearing five weeks of testimony, determined that Kano's Restaurant and Lounge in Anaheim was negligent for serving drinks to Richard Morris, the driver of the vehicle which struck Daily's bicycle from behind Sept. 15, 1978.

The accident occurred at about 2 a.m. as Daily was riding home from her job at the South Coast Plaza Hotel. She suffered serious leg injuries.

Shell blast 'like atom bomb'

MARTINEZ (AP) — A blaze with flames shooting more than 500 feet high from a Shell Oil refinery explosion that police say looked and sounded "like a small atomic bomb" was under control today.

Windows in at least four homes a half-mile from the massive complex were blown out by the force of the explosion Wednesday night, according to police in Martinez, 20 miles northeast of San Francisco. Buildings were shaken for several miles around and the blast was heard eight miles away.

No injuries were reported in the accident and police credited the "excellent work" of the Shell firefighters in bringing the flames under control quickly. A small fire continued today as the residue of oil burned off, officials said.

"Most of the refinery is kind of automatically controlled and most of the operators are quite a distance" from the scene, said Shell spokesman Dan Glaze.

Another Shell official, Joe Sneed, said the explosion apparently occurred in a piece of equipment called a catalytic feed hydro treater, which removes impurities from oil. The part of the plant where the blast occurred processes some 80,000 barrels of light oil each day, he said.

Witnesses said a brilliant orange flash lit up the sky at 9:35 p.m., followed by an enormous rumble and fountains of flames.

"I saw the light of the explosion before I heard it," said Martinez senior patrolman Chuck Steele. "It was like a small atomic bomb. It wasn't mushroom-shaped but it was huge. The flames were at least 500 to 600 feet high, way over the tower which is 300 feet. And there were cinders or sparks like fireworks."

Steele said a deputy sheriff told him he'd been walking about

Hard cover books will be sold at paperback prices and buyers may select from more than 5,000 books donated by community members.

The book sale will run from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. both days.

Beirut blasted before ceremony

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Explosions rocked Christian-populated east Beirut today about two hours before President Amin Gemayel was sworn in. Authorities said the blasts were at an ammunition dump and radios reported at least 38 people were injured.

The explosions were at an arms depot where the Lebanese army stored tons of Soviet-made rockets hauled out of Palestine Liberation Organization centers in west Beirut, prosecutor-General Assaad Germanos said. Military officials said the first explosion was set off when a shell being unloaded from an army truck went off, causing a chain reaction.

For about an hour, the area resounded with explosions as people ducked for cover from the whizzing rockets and several buildings were on fire.

A woman who escaped the area was screaming, "The military, the military, why do they put it among the people?"

Germanos told reporters the blast occurred at an army depot in the al-Abed Square near the Sin el-Fil residential neighborhood of east Beirut at 9:45 a.m. (12:45 a.m. PDT). The area is near the Green Line that divides Beirut into Moslem and Christian sectors.

Germanos said 28 passers-by were hurt but Christian radio stations gave the names of 38 people it said were injured.

500 yards from the refinery when the force of the explosion "bounced him back against the wall." The deputy was unhurt, Steele said.

For instance, were the multi-million dollar corridor not constructed, how would the company alleviate traffic congestion?

Other concerns expressed by the council include flood control in the canyon, the effect on the view for motorists on Laguna Canyon Road and whether the public would have access to open space lands.

They said the EIR should contain a cost/revenue analysis of public services, grading impacts, and should explore alternatives which would feature "a less intensive development pattern, including a reduction in residential densities and commercial development."

But, the city manager, said, that would not be a problem until the fall of 1984. He also said that public purchase of the land would mean a loss of property taxes on the property.

In approving the offer to purchase the land, the City Council also authorized the spending of $2,500 to obtain an appraisal of the parcel.

'Short cut' proves fatal

A 21-year-old Laguna Hills man, reportedly taking a short cut by running across the San Diego Freeway in Mission Viejo, was struck by a car and killed late Wednesday, police said today.

Daniel Danker, California Highway Patrol officers said, dashed in front of a southbound vehicle near the La Paz Road offramp. Officers said Danker was pronounced dead at the scene.

The driver of the car, 45-year-old Harcourt A. Morgan III of San Clemente, suffered minor injuries in the mishap.

At a Los Angeles hearing last weekend, Orange County Rep. Jerry Patterson, D-Garden Grove, was among local people expressing opposition to the current plan.

If the CHP changes its plan as a result of the current round of hearings there will be more hearings in the affected areas before a final decision on new routes is reached, Parker said.

Even without changes — and that was characterized by Parker as an "unlikely" possibility — no new plan can go into effect until at least the beginning of next year, he said.

Walter Gilbert dead at 76

Long-time Laguna Beach resident Walter LeRoy Gilbert, a carpenter who helped build many of the batten board houses that dot the city, is dead at the age of 76.

Born in Buffalo, N.Y., Gilbert moved with his familiy to San Bernardino. As a teen-ager, he used to drive down to Laguna Beach from the family home for the dances at the old ballroom, where Main Beach Park is today.

He moved to town in 1925 and worked for "Doc" Malo at Malo drug store, which was located where the Aaron Brothers art center is now on Coast Highway.

Later he became a head caretaker for the then-new Emerald Bay Homeowners Association and a carpenter, working for a variaty of builders in town, including the Taylor Brothers, who built many homes in Laguna.

He was, at one time, financial secretary and treasurer for the South Orange County District Council of Carpenters and was a past member and officer of the Laguna Beach Elks Club.

Of his courtship, friends recalled he drove up beside Floy "Billie" Gilbert in Laguna Beach at the corner of Beach Street and Ocean Avenue and asked if she'd like a ride downtown.

WEATHER

Coastal

Increasing high cloudiness. Highs ranging from upper 70s at the beaches to 90s inland. Tonight: variable high cloudiness. Lows 65 to 70. Friday: Considerable high cloudiness. Highs ranging from upper 70s at beaches to 80s inland.

Over outer coastal waters northwest winds 10 to 20 knots with 3 to 5 foot combined seas decreasing tonight and Friday. Elsewhere, light variable winds night and morning hours becoming southwest to west 8 to 16 knots in afternoon and evening hours today and Friday. Southwest swells increasing to 2 to 4 feet by late today continuing through Friday.

California

Ocean-front property dwellers along south-facing beaches were warned to prepare for high waves today, Friday and possibly through the weekend if Hurricane Olivia doesn't die down, the National Weather Service said.

The hurricane was last placed by the weather service about 750 miles south of San Diego on Wednesday, decreasing in intensity as it moved toward the west and northwest at 14 knots, said weather service specialist Allen Thompson.

He said 5-to-8-foot breakers along south-facing beaches were expected today and Friday, noting that some areas expected to be hit are Santa Monica, Long Beach and Malibu.

"If Olivia stalls out and degenerates into a tropical storm there will be a slow subsiding," Thompson said. "But if it starts moving more northward as a hurricane, then it will continue the wave action through the weekend."

Olivia was moving at maximum speeds of 110 knots with gusty winds up to 125 knots. It was expected to decrease in intensity as it moved over colder waters, he said.

"Now is the time for persons with ocean-front property that is subject to wave damage to begin taking protective measures," the weather service said in a statement today.

High tides at Los Angeles Harbor were forecast for this afternoon at 4.7 feet.

More fog and cloudiness were forecast throughout Southern California through Friday with scorching temperatures in the Los Angeles area, Owens Valley and coastal valley areas.

The high in Los Angeles on Friday should be about 90 with 95-to-102-degree weather forecast in valleys. Mountain-area highs may range from 78 to 88 with northern desert highs from 95 to 100 and low desert highs of 100 to 108.

U.S. summary

Showers swept from the upper Midwest to the Atlantic Coast today and clouds stretched from the Rockies to Florida.

Rainshowers were common over the lower Great Lakes, New York and Pennsylvania, and along the mid-Atlantic Coast. It was cloudy over New England, the Ohio Valley, Florida, South Dakota and along the Carolina coast.

Clouds and a few showers also were reported over Minnesota and Iowa, northern Colorado, western Nebraska and southwest Wyoming. Fair skies prevailed elsewhere.

Scattered thunderstorms were forecast for later today over southern Florida, and scattered showers were expected from New England across Maryland, New York and northeastern Pennsylvania. Cloudy skies were predicted over the upper Mississippi Valley, with sunny skies forecast for the rest of the nation.

Irvine teachers stage march over contract

Irvine's teachers, as promised, held an unusual faculty outing Wednesday, walking in a long procession over city sidewalks to call attention to their contract negotiations.

Their mile-long parade ended at Lakeside Middle School, the site of the Irvine Unified School District's board meeting, where teacher spokesman Dan Graham told trustees that greater efforts should be made to consider teachers' concerns.

"It is no secret that the teachers make the programs work," he said. "It's not the programs that make the teachers work."

About 400 of the teachers, by Graham's estimate, met at Venado Middle School to make their public march to Lakeside, with representatives from each school carrying hand-made signs to identify their campuses.

Graham is president of the Irvine Teachers Association, the bargaining group for the teachers in their contract talks. He noted this is the first time in the district's 10 years that teachers have gone to work in the fall without a contract.

However, district Superintendent A. Stanley Corey, addressing the crowd of teachers during the board meeting, noted that Irvine is only one of 19 districts in the county that have yet to sign contracts.

Disabled athlete in swim

By PHIL SNEIDERMAN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Amputee athlete Tom Clardy, who works at a Huntington Beach sporting goods store, said he plans to set off late today on a 21-mile swim from Catalina Island to Cabrillo Beach near San Pedro.

For Clardy, 37, the athletic challenge will cap a long, difficult comeback from the days he spent as a suicidal patient at a Utah Veterans Administration hospital.

"I'm not supposed to be working out at all today," he said Wednesday. "But I'm going to anyway. I'm too nervous not to."

Clardy, who resides in Fullerton, spent some time in the surf at Corona del Mar State Beach on Wednesday preparing mentally and physically for the swim.

He said he plans travel to Catalina Island tonight, plunge into the water at about 8 p.m. and arrive at Cabrillo Beach by noon Friday.

Clardy was prepared to make the swim one year ago but could not arrange for an escort boat. He feared that the current swim might be called off when his present escort boat developed serious engine trouble this week.

Rather than delay the feat again, Clardy said he has rented a boat for $1,000 o accompany him on the swim.

A former police officer and Navy frogman, Clardy was hit by a car during a skiing excursion in 1974. His right leg was amputated at the knee. Movement in his left leg was permanently impaired.

Waste plan due change

By STEVE TRIPOLI
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

A proposal that would allow the transportation of radioactive wastes on three major Orange County freeways may be changed before it is put into effect, its sponsors said Wednesday.

The proposal, part of a statewide plan, was authored by the California Highway Patrol with assistance from state transportation officials and the nuclear power industry.

It calls for use of the Santa Ana, Costa Mesa and Riverside freeways, all roads that run through heavily populated areas, as routes for trucks carrying the materials.

Though densely populated areas were not favored by those who drew up the plans population was just one factor used in drawing up the CHP's final proposal, according to Dan Parker of the CHP. Other considerations included road safety and the ability of raids to handle trucks carrying the materials, he said.

The plan, which has attracted criticism from almost all of the areas it affects, was aimed at finding the "safest, most feasible routes" for moving the materials, Parker said.

Though medical and industrial radioactive waste will be among those carried, the biggest potential producer of radioactive waste locally is the San Onofre nuclear power plant. Material from that plant had been transported into San Diego County and across the desert on four 1980 trips to a disposal site in Illinois.

Officials of Southern California Edison Co., which operates the plant located just south of the Orange-San Diego County line, said Wednesday they anticipate no shipments from the site until the early 1990s, when on-site waste storage areas become full.

After that time, said Edison's nuclear fuel supply manager, John Ladesich, as many as two shipments of waste per week could leave the plant by truck.

Ladesich stressed, however, that Edison currently is leaning toward a plan to remove all its wastes from the plant by rail, a process that is faster, cheaper and would require only about six shipments a year.

Parker said hearings around the state are bringing local concerns about the CHP plan to light, and that those concerns may alter the plan eventually.

"We certainly don't think we have a monopoly on knowledge — that's why we're holding the hearings," he said.

Two held in Valley rent scam

Fountain Valley police have arrested two men who allegedly tried to rent a local four-bedroom home to 16 different tenants to obtain $1,700 in preliminary payments from each.

Officers said the two allegedly were working a familiar scheme that ties into the current shortage of rental housing and the prevailing high rents.

Placed in Orange County Jail on suspicion of grand theft, fraud and criminal conspiracy were Gary Richard, 36, of Ronan, Mont., and Allen L. Carlson, 28, of Apache Junction, Ariz.

Fountain Valley police Sgt. Vic Deutsch said the two were arrested Tuesday afternoon while they were concluding transactions with separate prospective tenants at two restaurants near Orange County Airport.

Deutsch said officers found that the two men each carried business cards bearing their photograph and the same phony name — David R. Hall. He said the men possessed documents indicating they had set up appointments to meet 16 prospective renters at the restaurant.

The two men had earlier rented a Fountain Valley home with four bedrooms, a pool and fireplace and then had placed a newspaper ad offering to rent the home for $695 per month, which is significantly below going rates, Deutsch said.

The men allegedly set up appointments with 16 prospective tenants, urging each to bring a cashier's check for $1,-700, which they said would cover first and last month's rent, plus security and key deposits, according to Deutsch.

The two even employed an answering service in Arizona to field calls to their "office," he said.

Several prospective tenants were skeptical of the low rent, however, and contacted Fountain Valley police.

After receiving several calls about the home, officers arranged to monitor the restaurant transactions. Police arrested the two men after confirming that they were renting the same home to different people, Deutsch said.

He said officers recovered the deposits and found that the men were carrying 16 separate rental contracts and 16 keys that would not have worked at the Fountain Valley home.

Crash victim wins case against bar

A former Orange Coast College student from Costa Mesa — seriously injured in a traffic accident in 1978 — has won a $1.88 million judgment against an Anaheim bar which served drinks to the driver of the car which struck her bicycle.

The verdict in favor of 27-year-old Michelle Daily was reached Wednesday in Orange County Superior Court Judge Leonard Goldstein's courtroom after a day of deliberations.

Though it was substantially less than the $3.5 million which Dailey sought, her attorney said the award was a "reasonable amount."

The jury, after hearing five weeks of testimony, determined that Kano's Restaurant and Lounge in Anaheim was negligent for serving drinks to Richard Morris, the driver of the vehicle which struck Daily's bicycle from behind Sept. 15, 1978.

The accident occurred at about 2 a.m. as Daily was riding home from her job at the South Coast Plaza Hotel. She suffered serious leg injuries.

Shell blast 'like atom bomb'

MARTINEZ (AP) — A blaze with flames shooting more than 500 feet high from a Shell Oil refinery explosion that police say looked and sounded "like a small atomic bomb" was under control today.

Windows in at least four homes a half-mile from the massive complex were blown out by the force of the explosion Wednesday night, according to police in Martinez, 20 miles northeast of San Francisco. Buildings were shaken for several miles around and the blast was heard eight miles away.

No injuries were reported in the accident and police credited the "excellent work" of the Shell firefighters in bringing the flames under control quickly. A small fire continued today as the residue of oil burned off, officials said.

"Most of the refinery is kind of automatically controlled and most of the operators are quite a distance" from the scene, said Shell spokesman Dan Glaze.

Another Shell official, Joe Sneed, said the explosion apparently occurred in a piece of equipment called a catalytic feed hydro treater, which removes impurities from oil. The part of the plant where the blast occurred processes some 80,000 barrels of light oil each day, he said.

Witnesses said a brilliant orange flash lit up the sky at 9:35 p.m., followed by an enormous rumble and fountains of flames.

"I saw the light of the explosion before I heard it," said Martinez senior patrolman Chuck Steele. "It was like a small atomic bomb. It wasn't mushroom-shaped but it was huge. The flames were at least 500 to 600 feet high, way over the tower which is 300 feet. And there were cinders or sparks like fireworks."

Canyon plan doubled

Of the Daily Pilot Staff

The Irvine Company has submitted plans to the county for a Laguna Canyon project nearly twice as large and with more than twice the homes proposed a year ago.

In its Laguna/Laurel Canyon plan, the company proposes building as many as 3,600 units on 2,150 acres along Laguna Canyon Road between the San Diego Freeway and El Toro Road.

Plans for the project were barely in the hands of county Environmental Management Agency officials before Laguna Beach submitted a list of the city's concerns.

The homes, ranging from affordable units to luxury custom homes adjacent to an 18-hole private golf course, would dot the canyon acreage.

Plans call for low and medium density development of homes in Laurel Canyon, along with a commercial center adjacent to the proposed San Joaquin Transportation Corridor.

And while the land area and the number of units proposed are much larger than originally proposed by the company, a spokesman for the development firm said the project includes much more public open space.

Richard Sim, vice president of the company's community development division, said plans call for phased dedication of 1,151 acres as public open space, including ridgelines and hillsides facing the canyon road and in Laurel Canyon.

When that is added to the 158-acre golf course, open space and recreation land would amount to about 61 percent of the development area.

Sim said development could begin in two to three years, depending on approval by the county and the economic climate.

"In any event," he said, "We anticipate it will take a minimum of 10 years and perhaps as long as 15 to complete the planned community."

But before development begins, the company must prepare an environmental impact report. Public hearings on that document and the project are tentatively scheduled for mid-March.

The company discarded a "golf village" proposal submitted earlier, with officials saying the plan was not economically feasible.

Laguna Bech council this week sent a letter to county officials outlining concerns it has with the project, and issues it believes should be included in the environmental report.

Specifically, it wants EIR to evaluate the effects of traffic on existing roadways as well as the proposed transportation corridor, which would bisect the project.

For instance, were the multi-million dollar corridor not constructed, how would the company alleviate traffic congestion?

Other concerns expressed by the council include flood control in the canyon, the effect on the view for motorists on Laguna Canyon Road and whether the public would have access to open space lands.

Blasts precede ceremony

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Explosions rocked Christian-populated east Beirut today about two hours before President Amin Gemayel was sworn in. Authorities said the blasts were at an ammunition dump and radios reported at least 38 people were injured.

The explosions were at an arms depot where the Lebanese army stored tons of Soviet-made rockets hauled out of Palestine Liberation Organization centers in west Beirut, prosecutor-General Assaad Germanos said. Military officials said the first explosion was set off when a shell being unloaded from an army truck went off, causing a chain reaction.

For about an hour, the area resounded with explosions as people ducked for cover from the whizzing rockets and several buildings were on fire.

A woman who escaped the area was screaming, "The military, the military, why do they put it among the people?"

At a Los Angeles hearing last weekend, Orange County Rep. Jerry Patterson, D-Garden Grove, was among local people expressing opposition to the current plan.

If the CHP changes its plan as a result of the current round of hearings there will be more hearings in the affected areas before a final decision on new routes is reached, Parker said.

Even without changes — and that was characterized by Parker as an "unlikely" possibility — no new plan can go into effect until at least the beginning of next year, he said.

Riley answers Irvine dump charge

Orange County Supervisor Thomas Riley has taken issue with Irvine city officials, saying the county government has "aggressively" pursued options to develop landfills.

But Riley noted Wednesday that every scenario conceived for the county's solid waste management program has still required a new dump site. The supervisors have chosen a 725-acre site at Bee Canyon, in the foothills east of Irvine's Sand Canyon Avenue, for the landfill.

County leaders such as Riley, whose supervisorial district includes Irvine, have been criticized by city leaders for failing to nurture more technologically-advanced systems of waste disposal.

The Irvine City Council filed a lawsuit this week in Orange County Superior Court in its most serious bid to stall the landfill development.

Riley, however, noted that a consultant hired last year by the county to examine alternatives, such as trash-burning co-generation or resource recovery systems, advised that landfills are still the most economical course.

Supervisors followed the "normal process of public hearings" before choosing Bee Canyon in September 1979 as the next site, Riley added.

On a more conciliatory note, the supervisor said county administrators are seeking to extend the life of the Coyote Canyon landfill, a dump west of UC Irvine and on the outskirts of the city. Bee Canyon is intended to replace Coyote Canyon, which is projected to last from three to six years.

"With all those plans working, I'm not sure what the board's reaction would be about looking for a new site," Riley explained. "I think that would be a repeat of what's happening with (John Wayne) airport."

The city's lawsuit asks that the county prepare a supplemental environmental impact report to take into consideration the growth of residential areas in nearby Northwood since the Bee Canyon studies were completed in 1979.

It says about 2,000 residents have moved into the village, which is about 2.5 miles from the canyon, the last three years and another 7,000 are expected before growth reaches capacity.

agreed that negotiations this summer were made more difficult by the state Legislature's decision not to offer new funding for public education.

"The board has asked me to express its pride and confidence in the work you've done," Corey told the teachers, most of them standing in the jammed meeting room. "But we are engaged in an adversary process under the law called collective bargaining."

Corey, speaking in measured and respectful tones, said he was confident both sides could reach a fair agreement.

Graham said the teacher walk was organized primarily to prove to the trustees that teachers are supportive of their negotiating team's stance. He said they also wanted to draw attention to the current plight of California's education system, which he said is woefully under-financed.

Negotiators for both sides are still discussing several issues, but teachers and administrators agree that the primary one is the amount of time teachers should spend in classrooms each day.

Increasing high cloudiness. Highs ranging from upper 70s at the beaches to 90s inland. Tonight: variable high cloudiness. Lows 65 to 70. Friday: Considerable high cloudiness. Highs ranging from upper 70s at beaches to 80s inland.

Over outer coastal waters northwest winds 10 to 20 knots with 3 to 5 foot combined seas decreasing tonight and Friday. Elsewhere, light variable winds night and morning hours becoming southwest to west 8 to 16 knots in afternoon and evening hours today and Friday. Southwest swells increasing to 2 to 4 feet by late today continuing through Friday.

California

Ocean-front property dwellers along south-facing beaches were warned to prepare for high waves today, Friday and possibly through the weekend if Hurricane Olivia doesn't die down, the National Weather Service said.

The hurricane was last placed by the weather service about 750 miles south of San Diego on Wednesday, decreasing in intensity as it moved toward the west and northwest at 14 knots, said weather service specialist Allen Thompson.

He said 5-to-8-foot breakers along south-facing beaches were expected today and Friday, noting that some areas expected to be hit are Santa Monica, Long Beach and Malibu.

"If Olivia stalls out and degenerates into a tropical storm there will be a slow subsiding," Thompson said. "But if it starts moving more northward as a hurricane, then it will continue the wave action through the weekend."

Olivia was moving at maximum speeds of 110 knots with gusty winds up to 125 knots. It was expected to decrease in intensity as it moved over colder waters, he said.

"Now is the time for persons with ocean-front property that is subject to wave damage to begin taking protective measures," the weather service said in a statement today.

High tides at Los Angeles Harbor were forecast for this afternoon at 4.7 feet.

More fog and cloudiness were forecast throughout Southern California through Friday with scorching temperatures in the Los Angeles area, Owens Valley and coastal-valley areas.

The high in Los Angeles on Friday should be about 90 with 95-to-102-degree weather forecast in valleys. Mountain-area highs may range from 78 to 88

U.S. summary

Showers swept from the upper Midwest to the Atlantic Coast today and clouds stretched from the Rockies to Florida.

Rainshowers were common over the lower Great Lakes, New York and Pennsylvania, and along the mid-Atlantic Coast. It was cloudy over New England, the Ohio Valley, Florida, South Dakota and along the Carolina coast.

Clouds and a few showers also were reported over Minnesota and Iowa, northern Colorado, western Nebraska and southwest Wyoming. Fair skies prevailed elsewhere.

Scattered thunderstorms were forecast for later today over southern Florida, and scattered showers were expected from New England across Maryland, New York and northeastern Pennsylvania. Cloudy skies were predicted over the upper Mississippi Valley, with sunny skies forecast for the rest of the nation.

Temperatures around the nation before dawn ranged from 36 at Sault Ste Marie, Mich., to 88 in Phoenix, Ariz.

Banning project called '2nd Newport Center'

By STEVE MARBLE
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Critics of the Banning Ranch development in Newport Beach have charged that the project is only a first step toward building another Newport Center.

Mike Johnson, a west Newport resident and foe of the Banning plan that comes before city voters Nov. 2, said this fact and others have been deliberately hidden from local residents.

He charged voters have not been informed of what the Banning development will bring to the west side of Newport Beach.

The development would cover a 75-acre wedge of the 500-acre Banning Ranch. The remaining 425 acres are adjacent to but outside city limits and presently dotted with oil wells.

Hancock Banning owner of the oceanview ranch, responded that development of the remaining 425 acres is 20 years off. He said it would be "preposterous" for him to begin planning that land at this point.

"If that's what they'd like me to do," Banning said of his critics, "I think it's a pretty damned irresponsible thing to ask."

"It would be foolish to spend half a million dollars developing a plan for that land . . ."

Banning denied that he is planning a second Newport Center and said it will be years before his firm can even determine how the remaining 425 acres should be used.

"It would be foolish to spend half a million dollars developing a plan for that land when you'd have to redo the entire thing in 20 years," Banning said.

Richard Nichols, an opponent of the Banning project, suggested that the remaining ranch land should be annexed by Newport and that residents should be shown a master plan for the entire spread. The acreage stretches from the Santa Ana River to a point near Hoag Memorial Hospital.

"That's certainly not true," retorted Banning, whose family has owned the property three generations and once used it for raising sheep.

"This is the single most comprehensive plan ever put together for West Newport. It is not piecemeal — not by a long stretch," Banning said of his 75-acre project.

He charged that critics have tried to mislead voters by raising issues he claims are "straw men."

Banning said he can "only laugh" at the suggestion that developers in Newport Beach get favorable treatment from the City Council.

"If anything," he said, "it is just the other way around."

Jean Watt, another of Banning's opponents, said a majority of the council lives by a "double standard" which favors developers and ignores traffic and other impacts developments will have on residents.

Watt said council members "shove the real and future impacts (of a development) under the rug."

Newport Mayor Jackie Heather, a supporter of Banning's project, said she has heard "this double standard talk before" and takes exception to it.

"There is no double standard," she responded. "Each project that comes before us is judged equally and is judged on its merits. Period."

The fate of Banning's 75-acre project, approved by the council last spring, will be decided by city voters.

Disabled athlete in swim

By PHIL SNEIDERMAN

Amputee athlete Tom Clardy, who works at a Huntington Beach sporting goods store, said he plans to set off late today on a 21-mile swim from Catalina Island to Cabrillo Beach near San Pedro.

For Clardy, 37, the athletic challenge will cap a long, difficult comeback from the days he spent as a suicidal patient at a Utah Veterans Administration hospital.

"I'm not supposed to be working out at all today," he said Wednesday. "But I'm going to anyway. I'm too nervous not to."

Clardy, who resides in Fullerton, spent some time in the surf at Corona del Mar State Beach on Wednesday preparing mentally and physically for the swim.

He said he plans travel to Catalina Island tonight, plunge into the water at about 8 p.m. and arrive at Cabrillo Beach by noon Friday.

Clardy was prepared to make the swim one year ago but could not arrange for an escort boat. He feared that the current swim might be called off when his present escort boat developed serious engine trouble this week.

Rather than delay the feat again, Clardy said he has rented a boat for $1,000 o accompany him on the swim.

A former police officer and Navy frogman, Clardy was hit by a car during a skiing excursion in 1974. His right leg was amputated at the knee. Movement in his left leg was permanently impaired.

Waste plan due change

By STEVE TRIPOLI
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

A proposal that would allow the transportation of radioactive wastes on three major Orange County freeways may be changed before it is put into effect, its sponsors said Wednesday.

The proposal, part of a statewide plan, was authored by the California Highway Patrol with assistance from state transportation officials and the nuclear power industry.

It calls for use of the Santa Ana, Costa Mesa and Riverside freeways, all roads that run through heavily populated areas, as routes for trucks carrying the materials.

Though densely populated areas were not favored by those who drew up the plans population was just one factor used in drawing up the CHP's final proposal, according to Dan Parker of the CHP. Other considerations included road safety and the ability of raids to handle trucks carrying the materials, he said.

The plan, which has attracted criticism from almost all of the areas it affects, was aimed at finding the "safest, most feasible routes" for moving the materials, Parker said.

Though medical and industrial radioactive waste will be among those carried, the biggest potential producer of radioactive waste locally is the San Onofre nuclear power plant. Material from that plant had been transported into San Diego County and across the desert on four 1980 trips to a disposal site in Illinois.

Officials of Southern California Edison Co., which operates the plant located just south of the Orange-San Diego County line, said Wednesday they anticipate no shipments from the site until the early 1990s, when on-site waste storage areas become full.

After that time, said Edison's nuclear fuel supply manager, John Ladesich, as many as two shipments of waste per week could leave the plant by truck.

Ladesich stressed, however, that Edison currently is leaning toward a plan to remove all its wastes from the plant by rail, a process that is faster, cheaper and would require only about six shipments a year.

Parker said hearings around the state are bringing local concerns about the CHP plan to light, and that those concerns may alter the plan eventually.

"We certainly don't think we have a monopoly on knowledge — that's why we're holding the hearings," he said.

Two held in Valley rent scam

Fountain Valley police have arrested two men who allegedly tried to rent a local four-bedroom home to 16 different tenants to obtain $1,700 in preliminary payments from each.

Officers said the two allegedly were working a familiar scheme that ties into the current shortage of rental housing and the prevailing high rents.

Placed in Orange County Jail on suspicion of grand theft, fraud and criminal conspiracy were Gary Richard, 36, of Ronan, Mont., and Allen L. Carlson, 28, of Apache Junction, Ariz.

Fountain Valley police Sgt. Vic Deutsch said the two were arrested Tuesday afternoon while they were concluding transactions with separate prospective tenants at two restaurants near Orange County Airport.

Deutsch said officers found that the two men each carried business cards bearing their photograph and the same phony name — David R. Hall. He said the men possessed documents indicating they had set up appointments to meet 16 prospective renters at the restaurant.

The two men had earlier rented a Fountain Valley home with four bedrooms, a pool and fireplace and then had placed a newspaper ad offering to rent the home for $695 per month, which is significantly below going rates, Deutsch said.

The men allegedly set up appointments with 16 prospective tenants, urging each to bring a cashier's check for $1,700, which they said would cover first and last month's rent, plus security and key deposits, according to Deutsch.

The two even employed an answering service in Arizona to field calls to their "office," he said.

Several prospective tenants were skeptical of the low rent, however, and contacted Fountain Valley police.

After receiving several calls about the home, officers arranged to monitor the restaurant transactions. Police arrested the two men after confirming that they were renting the same home to different people, Deutsch said.

He said officers recovered the deposits and found that the men were carrying 16 separate rental contracts and 16 keys that would not have worked at the Fountain Valley home.

Crash victim wins case against bar

A former Orange Coast College student from Costa Mesa — seriously injured in a traffic accident in 1978 — has won a $1.88 million judgment against an Anaheim bar which served drinks to the driver of the car which struck her bicycle.

The verdict in favor of 27-year-old Michelle Daily was reached Wednesday in Orange County Superior Court Judge Leonard Goldstein's courtroom after a day of deliberations.

Though it was substantially less than the $3.5 million which Dailey sought, her attorney said the award was a "reasonable amount."

The jury, after hearing five weeks of testimony, determined that Kano's Restaurant and Lounge in Anaheim was negligent for serving drinks to Richard Morris, the driver of the vehicle which struck Daily's bicycle from behind Sept. 15, 1978.

The accident occurred at about 2 a.m. as Daily was riding home from her job at the South Coast Plaza Hotel. She suffered

Shell blast 'like atom bomb'

MARTINEZ (AP) — A blaze with flames shooting more than 500 feet high from a Shell Oil refinery explosion that police say looked and sounded "like a small atomic bomb" was under control today.

Windows in at least four homes a half-mile from the massive complex were blown out by the force of the explosion Wednesday night, according to police in Martinez, 20 miles northeast of San Francisco. Buildings were shaken for several miles around and the blast was heard eight miles away.

No injuries were reported in the accident and police credited the "excellent work" of the Shell firefighters in bringing the flames under control quickly. A small fire continued today as the residue of oil burned off, officials said.

"Most of the refinery is kind of automatically controlled and most of the operators are quite a distance" from the scene, said Shell spokesman Dan Glaze.

Another Shell official, Joe Sneed, said the explosion apparently occurred in a piece of equipment called a catalytic feed hydro treater, which removes impurities from oil. The part of the plant where the blast occurred processes some 80,000 barrels of light oil each day, he said.

Witnesses said a brilliant orange flash lit up the sky at 9:35 p.m., followed by an enormous rumble and fountains of flames.

"I saw the light of the explosion before I heard it," said Martinez senior patrolman Chuck Steele. "It was like a small atomic bomb. It wasn't mushroom-shaped but it was huge. The flames were at least 500 to 600 feet high, way over the tower which is 300 feet. And there were cinders or sparks like fireworks."

Steele said a deputy sheriff told him he'd been walking about

Colleges, CBS sign TV pact

Communications giant CBS Inc. and the Coast Commmnity College District have signed a $2.4 million agreement to produce and market five television courses targeted for colleges and universities nationwide as well as cable television companies and videotape distributors.

Representatives from the local college district and CBS hailed the contract Wednesday as a landmark agreement linked to the revolution in video technology and the growing market for adult education.

The pact comes at a time when Coast district administrators are embroiled in a dispute with some faculty members over the quality of television courses.

The district includes Orange Coast College in Costa Mesa, Golden West College in Huntington Beach and Coastline College, which offers classes at numerous locations. The district also owns KOCE Channel 50, located on the Golden West campus.

The district is described as the nation's leading producer of television courses. These have been used by more than 900 colleges and universities.

Under the agreement, CBS is investing $2.4 million to cover the costs of producing the five telecourses. The district will provide personnel to design, produce (at KOCE) and help market the courses.

Accompanying texts and study guides will be printed by CBS Educational and Professional Publishing. The courses are to be completed and ready for marketing by September 1984, according to CBS and the district.

Coast and CBS will share equally in revenues derived from marketing the courses to colleges and universities. CBS will derive a higher percentage from sales involving cable companies, secondary school placement, video cassettes and video discs.

"We'll both make money," Coast district Chancellor Norman Watson said.

He contended that the district has never lost money on any telecourse produced.

Ray Ashton, vice president and editor-in-chief of CBS' College Publishing division, said population studies indicate the traditional college age group, 18 to 25, will decrease by 15 percent by 1990, while the number of adults over 35 will increase by 40 percent during the period.

He said this older age group is demonstrating a strong appetite for continuing education.

"People are getting much more serious about spending some of their leisure time in learning," he said.

Ashton said faculty objections to television courses have occurred elsewhere in the United States and said he is not worried about reviews of Coast television courses.

"I happen to think the Coast district is one of the best in the country from design to marketing (of telecourses,)" he said.

Phillis Basile, president of the American Federation of Teachers chapter representing full-time Coast district instructors, said the group has no specific objections to the CBS contract.

But she said some Coast teachers remain concerned about the district's diversion of attention to nationwide television course production while cutbacks continue in classroom instruction.

BULLETIN BOARD

Seminar explains new tax laws

A seminar on new tax laws will be presented Tuesday at 3:30 p.m. at the Newporter by Fox & Co., a Newport Beach public accounting firm.

The tax laws are a result of the 1982 Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act.

The two-hour seminar is designed to give businessmen an overview and understanding of the latest federal tax legislation. The seminar is open to the public and reservations can be made by calling 851-1088.

The accounting firm is also offering a pamphlet that details the tax law changes. A copy can be obtained by writing Fox & Company, 4000 MacArthur Blvd., Suite 400, Newport Beach, 92660.

• An influenza immunization clinic free to persons over 55 years of age will be set up Oct. 2 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. at Hoag Memorial Hospital in Newport Beach.

The vaccine will also be administered without charge to persons suffering a chronic illness.

The clinic will be in the hospital's conference center and is sponsored by the hospital and the Orange County Health Department.

•A Newport Beach home that has been decorated by 20 interior designers will be open to the public Sunday through Oct. 24 to raise money for Children's Hospital of Orange County.

The House of Design, located at 23 Ridgeline Drive in the Harbor Ridge community, is presented through the Newport Harbor Jaycees.

Tickets are $7.50 at the door or $6 in advance. The house will be open daily from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and on Thursdays from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. It will be closed Mondays.

For information, call 675-9333.

Project expanded for Laguna Canyon

By STEVE MITCHELL
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

The Irvine Company has submitted plans to the county for a Laguna Canyon project nearly twice as large and with more than twice the homes proposed a year ago.

In its Laguna/Laurel Canyon plan, the company proposes building as many as 3,600 units on 2,150 acres along Laguna Canyon Road between the San Diego Freeway and El Toro Road.

Plans for the project were barely in the hands of county Environmental Management Agency officials before Laguna Beach submitted a list of the city's concerns.

The homes, ranging from affordable units to luxury custom homes adjacent to an 18-hole private golf course, would dot the canyon acreage.

Plans call for low and medium density development of homes in Laurel Canyon, along with a commercial center adjacent to the proposed San Joaquin Transportation Corridor.

And while the land area and the number of units proposed are much larger than originally proposed by the company, a spokesman for the development firm said the project includes much more public open space.

Richard Sim, vice president of the company's community development division, said plans call for phased dedication of 1,151 acres as public open space, including ridgelines and hillsides facing the canyon road and in Laurel Canyon.

When that is added to the 158-acre golf course, open space and recreation land would amount to about 61 percent of the development area.

Sim said development could begin in two to three years, depending on approval by the county and the economic climate.

"In any event," he said, "We anticipate it will take a minimum of 10 years and perhaps as long as 15 to complete the planned community."

But before development begins, the company must prepare an environmental impact report. Public hearings on that document and the project are tentatively scheduled for mid-March.

Laguna Bech council this week sent a letter to county officials outlining concerns it has with the project.

Specifically, it wants EIR to evaluate the effects of traffic on existing roadways.

At a Los Angeles hearing last weekend, Orange County Rep. Jerry Patterson, D-Garden Grove, was among local people expressing opposition to the current plan.

If the CHP changes its plan as a result of the current round of hearings there will be more hearings in the affected areas before a final decision on new routes is reached, Parker said.

Even without changes — and that was characterized by Parker as an "unlikely" possibility — no new plan can go into effect until at least the beginning of next year, he said.

Wave watch continues in Seal Beach

Seal Beach officials kept a close watch for heavy waves in the Surfside Colony throughout the night and today as Hurricane Olivia posed a threat to the troubled area.

A city spokeswoman said homes have escaped flooding and damage. She said the threat seemed to be easing and that the city was informed this morning that the hurricane was losing intensity.

Nevertheless, heavy Navy equipment was reported moving sand in front of the expensive homes that have been threatened by high tides starting several weeks ago.

WEATHER

Summer back

Coastal

Increasing high cloudiness. Highs ranging from upper 70s at the beaches to 90s inland. Tonight: variable high cloudiness. Lows 65 to 70. Friday: Considerable high cloudiness. Highs ranging from upper 70s at beaches to 80s inland.

Over outer coastal waters northwest winds 10 to 20 knots with 3 to 5 foot combined seas decreasing tonight and Friday. Elsewhere, light variable winds night and morning hours becoming southwest to west 8 to 16 knots in afternoon and evening hours today and Friday. Southwest swells increasing to 2 to 4 feet by late today continuing through Friday.

California

Ocean-front property dwellers along south-facing beaches were warned to prepare for high waves today, Friday and possibly through the weekend if Hurricane Olivia doesn't die down, the National Weather Service said.

The hurricane was last placed by the weather service about 750 miles south of San Diego on Wednesday, decreasing in intensity as it moved toward the west and northwest at 14 knots, said weather service specialist Allen Thompson.

He said 5-to-8-foot breakers along south-facing beaches were expected today and Friday, noting that some areas expected to be hit are Santa Monica, Long Beach and Malibu.

"If Olivia stalls out and degenerates into a tropical storm there will be a slow subsiding," Thompson said. "But if it starts moving more northward as a hurricane, then it will continue the wave action through the weekend."

Olivia was moving at maximum speeds of 110 knots with gusty winds up to 125 knots. It was expected to decrease in intensity as it moved over colder waters, he said.

"Now is the time for persons with ocean-front property that is subject to wave damage to begin taking protective measures," the weather service said in a statement today.

High tides at Los Angeles Harbor were forecast for this afternoon at 4.7 feet.

More fog and cloudiness were forecast throughout Southern California through Friday with scorching temperatures in the Los Angeles area, Owens Valley and coastal valley areas.

The high in Los Angeles on Friday should be about 90 with 95-to-102-degree weather forecast in valleys. Mountain-area highs may range from 78 to 88 with northern desert highs from 95 to 100 and low desert highs of 100 to 108.

U.S. summary

Showers swept from the upper Midwest to the Atlantic Coast today and clouds stretched from the Rockies to Florida.

Rainshowers were common over the lower Great Lakes, New York and Pennsylvania, and along the mid-Atlantic Coast. It was cloudy over New England, the Ohio Valley, Florida, South Dakota and along the Carolina coast.

Clouds and a few showers also were reported over Minnesota and Iowa, northern Colorado, western Nebraska and southwest Wyoming. Fair skies prevailed elsewhere.

Scattered thunderstorms were forecast for later today over southern Florida, and scattered showers were expected from New England across Maryland, New York and northeastern Pennsylvania. Cloudy skies were predicted over the upper Mississippi Valley, with sunny skies forecast for the rest of the nation.

By STEVE MARBLE
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Critics of the Banning Ranch development in Newport Beach have charged that the project is only a first step toward building another Newport Center.

Mike Johnson, a west Newport resident and foe of the Banning plan that comes before city voters Nov. 2, said this fact and others have been deliberately hidden from local residents.

He charged voters have not been informed of what the Banning development will bring to the west side of Newport Beach.

The development would cover a 75-acre wedge of the 500-acre Banning Ranch. The remaining 425 acres are adjacent to but outside city limits and presently dotted with oil wells.

Hancock Banning owner of the oceanview ranch, responded that development of the remaining 425 acres is 20 years off. He said it would be "preposterous" for him to begin planning that land at this point.

"If that's what they'd like me to do," Banning said of his critics, "I think it's a pretty damned irresponsible thing to ask."

"It would be foolish to spend half a million dollars developing a plan for that land . . ."

Banning denied that he is planning a second Newport Center and said it will be years before his firm can even determine how the remaining 425 acres should be used.

"It would be foolish to spend half a million dollars developing a plan for that land when you'd have to redo the entire thing in 20 years," Banning said.

Richard Nichols, an opponent of the Banning project, suggested that the remaining ranch land should be annexed by Newport and that residents should be shown a master plan for the entire spread. The acreage stretches from the Santa Ana River to a point near Hoag Memorial Hospital.

Nichols charged that Banning is taking a "piecemeal" approach to developing his land.

"That's certainly not true," retorted Banning, whose family has owned the property three generations and once used it for raising sheep.

"This is the single most comprehensive plan ever put together for West Newport. It is not piecemeal — not by a long stretch," Banning said of his 75-acre project.

He charged that critics have tried to mislead voters by raising issues he claims are "straw men."

Banning said he can "only laugh" at the suggestion that developers in Newport Beach get favorable treatment from the City Council.

"If anything," he said, "it is just the other way around."

Jean Watt, another of Banning's opponents, said a majority of the council lives by a "double standard" which favors developers and ignores traffic and other impacts developments will have on residents.

Watt said council members "shove the real and future impacts (of a development) under the rug."

Newport Mayor Jackie Heather, a supporter of Banning's project, said she has heard "this double standard talk before" and takes exception to it.

"There is no double standard," she responded. "Each project that comes before us is judged equally and is judged on its merits. Period."

The fate of Banning's 75-acre project, approved by the council last spring, will be decided by city voters.

Disabled athlete in swim

By PHIL SNEIDERMAN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Amputee athlete Tom Clardy, who works at a Huntington Beach sporting goods store, said he plans to set off late today on a 21-mile swim from Catalina Island to Cabrillo Beach near San Pedro.

For Clardy, 37, the athletic challenge will cap a long, difficult comeback from the days he spent as a suicidal patient at a Utah Veterans Administration hospital.

"I'm not supposed to be working out at all today," he said Wednesday. "But I'm going to anyway. I'm too nervous not to."

Clardy, who resides in Fullerton, spent some time in the surf at Corona del Mar State Beach on Wednesday preparing mentally and physically for the swim.

He said he plans travel to Catalina Island tonight, plunge into the water at about 8 p.m. and arrive at Cabrillo Beach by noon Friday.

Clardy was prepared to make the swim one year ago but could not arrange for an escort boat. He feared that the current swim might be called off when his present escort boat developed serious engine trouble this week.

Rather than delay the feat again, Clardy said he has rented a boat for $1,000 o accompany him on the swim.

A former police officer and Navy frogman, Clardy was hit by a car during a skiing excursion in 1974. His right leg was amputated at the knee. Movement in his left leg was permanently impaired.

Waste plan due change

By STEVE TRIPOLI
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

A proposal that would allow the transportation of radioactive wastes on three major Orange County freeways may be changed before it is put into effect, its sponsors said Wednesday.

The proposal, part of a statewide plan, was authored by the California Highway Patrol with assistance from state transportation officials and the nuclear power industry.

It calls for use of the Santa Ana, Costa Mesa and Riverside freeways, all roads that run through heavily populated areas, as routes for trucks carrying the materials.

Though densely populated areas were not favored by those who drew up the plans population was just one factor used in drawing up the CHP's final proposal, according to Dan Parker of the CHP. Other considerations included road safety and the ability of raids to handle trucks carrying the materials, he said.

The plan, which has attracted criticism from almost all of the areas it affects, was aimed at finding the "safest, most feasible routes" for moving the materials, Parker said.

Though medical and industrial radioactive waste will be among those carried, the biggest potential producer of radioactive waste locally is the San Onofre nuclear power plant. Material from that plant had been transported into San Diego County and across the desert on four 1980 trips to a disposal site in Illinois.

Officials of Southern California Edison Co., which operates the plant located just south of the Orange-San Diego County line, said Wednesday they anticipate no shipments from the site until the early 1990s, when on-site waste storage areas become full.

After that time, said Edison's nuclear fuel supply manager, John Ladesich, as many as two shipments of waste per week could leave the plant by truck.

Ladesich stressed, however, that Edison currently is leaning toward a plan to remove all its wastes from the plant by rail, a process that is faster, cheaper and would require only about six shipments a year.

Parker said hearings around the state are bringing local concerns about the CHP plan to light, and that those concerns may alter the plan eventually.

"We certainly don't think we have a monopoly on knowledge — that's why we're holding the hearings," he said.

Two held in Valley rent scam

Fountain Valley police have arrested two men who allegedly tried to rent a local four-bedroom home to 16 different tenants to obtain $1,700 in preliminary payments from each.

Officers said the two allegedly were working a familiar scheme that ties into the current shortage of rental housing and the prevailing high rents.

Placed in Orange County Jail on suspicion of grand theft, fraud and criminal conspiracy were Gary Richard, 36, of Ronan, Mont., and Allen L. Carlson, 28, of Apache Junction, Ariz.

Fountain Valley police Sgt. Vic Deutsch said the two were arrested Tuesday afternoon while they were concluding transactions with separate prospective tenants at two restaurants near Orange County Airport.

Deutsch said officers found that the two men each carried business cards bearing their photograph and the same phony name — David R. Hall. He said the men possessed documents indicating they had set up appointments to meet 16 prospective renters at the restaurant.

The two men had earlier rented a Fountain Valley home with four bedrooms, a pool and fireplace and then had placed a newspaper ad offering to rent the home for $695 per month, which is significantly below going rates, Deutsch said.

The men allegedly set up appointments with 16 prospective tenants, urging each to bring a cashier's check for $1,700, which they said would cover first and last month's rent, plus security and key deposits, according to Deutsch.

The two even employed an answering service in Arizona to field calls to their "office," he said.

Several prospective tenants were skeptical of the low rent, however, and contacted Fountain Valley police.

After receiving several calls about the home, officers arranged to monitor the restaurant transactions. Police arrested the two men after confirming that they were renting the same home to different people, Deutsch said.

He said officers recovered the deposits and found that the men were carrying 16 separate rental contracts and 16 keys that would not have worked at the Fountain Valley home.

Crash victim wins case against bar

A former Orange Coast College student from Costa Mesa — seriously injured in a traffic accident in 1978 — has won a $1.88 million judgment against an Anaheim bar which served drinks to the driver of the car which struck her bicycle.

The verdict in favor of 27-year-old Michelle Daily was reached Wednesday in Orange County Superior Court Judge Leonard Goldstein's courtroom after a day of deliberations.

Though it was substantially less than the $3.5 million which Dailey sought, her attorney said the award was a "reasonable amount."

The jury, after hearing five weeks of testimony, determined that Kano's Restaurant and Lounge in Anaheim was negligent for serving drinks to Richard Morris, the driver of the vehicle which struck Daily's bicycle from behind Sept. 15, 1978.

The accident occurred at about 2 a.m. as Daily was riding home from her job at the South Coast Plaza Hotel. She suffered

MARTINEZ (AP) — A blaze with flames shooting more than 500 feet high from a Shell Oil refinery explosion that police say looked and sounded "like a small atomic bomb" was under control today.

Windows in at least four homes a half-mile from the massive complex were blown out by the force of the explosion Wednesday night, according to police in Martinez, 20 miles northeast of San Francisco. Buildings were shaken for several miles around and the blast was heard eight miles away.

No injuries were reported in the accident and police credited the "excellent work" of the Shell firefighters in bringing the flames under control quickly. A small fire continued today as the residue of oil burned off, officials said.

"Most of the refinery is kind of automatically controlled and most of the operators are quite a distance" from the scene, said Shell spokesman Dan Glaze.

Another Shell official, Joe Sneed, said the explosion apparently occurred in a piece of equipment called a catalytic feed hydro treater, which removes impurities from oil. The part of the plant where the blast occurred processes some 80,000 barrels of light oil each day, he said.

Witnesses said a brilliant orange flash lit up the sky at 9:35 p.m., followed by an enormous rumble and fountains of flames.

"I saw the light of the explosion before I heard it," said Martinez senior patrolman Chuck Steele. "It was like a small atomic bomb. It wasn't mushroom-shaped but it was huge. The flames were at least 500 to 600 feet high, way over the tower which is 300 feet. And there were cinders or sparks like fireworks."

Steele said a deputy sheriff told him he'd been walking about
