

Alien impact feared

By STEVE TRIPOLI
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Orange County supervisors, worried about federal legislation which could legalize the status of thousands of undocumented aliens, want to know what the impact of such legislation could be in local dollars.

An influx of new people with a legitimate claim to welfare, health and other services could have a serious impact on the county budget, Supervisors Chairman Bruce Nestande told fellow members Tuesday.

Nestande sponsored a motion adopted by the board calling for a $1,000 expenditure to study the impact of legislation currently before Congress.

Two versions of the legislation, known after its sponsors as the Simpson-Mazzoli immigration reform bill, are being considered on Capitol Hill. The two could have widely different impacts on local governments.

According to James McConnell, one of the county's Washington lobbyists, the version which already has passed the Senate provides reimbursements to local areas for increased public service costs resulting from the legislation, but the reimbursements may not cover total costs.

A version currently on its way to the House guarantees full federal reimbursement for additional local costs resulting from the legislation, McConnell said.

The impacts would vary with the number of undocumented aliens who are allowed to stay legally and thus qualify for social services, McConnell said. Part of the debate over the bill is whether to legalize the status of aliens who have arrived since Jan. 1, 1980, or whether only (See ALIEN, Page A2)

Baby hostage released

A tense drama in Costa Mesa ended Tuesday evening when a father who held a knife to his own body surrendered his infant son, taken hostage inside a rundown automobile, to police.

Costa Mesa police officer Kevin Gleason talked to the 20-year-old father for nearly an hour, while neighbors watched and six other officers cordoned off the 200 block of Ogle Street, ready to move in.

The man, identified as Bob Ball, was taken to UC Irvine Medical Center in Orange where he was placed under 72-hour observation. No criminal charges were filed.

Sgt. Rod Haddock said that Ball held a four-inch carving knife at his own stomach and never threatened to hurt the baby who sat on his lap and was released unharmed at 5 p.m.

Haddock assured the mother, Lisa Ball, 18, that her husband didn't threaten the baby. "If he did anything he said he would do it to himself. I was prepared that if he made a move to do what I (See HOSTAGE, Page A2)

Newport water quality? Depends on source you ask

By STEVE MARBLE
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Newport Harbor, water quality experts suggest, is a study in contradiction.

While one recent state test reveals Newport Harbor is a growing pollution hot spot, a second shows water quality in the harbor has improved dramatically.

Experts say the results of both tests should be taken with a grain of salt, though, and that the true condition of the popular boating harbor is a mystery.

Both of the recent tests were funded through the state Water Quality Resources Control Board.

One of them, the so-called "Mussel Watch" testing program, shows levels of pesticides, polychlorinated biphenyls (PCBs) and heavy metals have increased.

The level of DDE, a derivative of the outlawed pesticide DDT, has increased 30 times in a two-year span, the mussel study claims.

DDT and its derivatives are known cancer-causing agents.

John Ladd, a water quality official in Sacramento, says he is unsure why the sudden concentration of DDE.

"It's a broken-down form of DDT which is a very persistent pesticide. It stays around for a very long time and it is possible it is just being recycled."

Ladd points out that while the use of DDT in this country was banned a decade ago, it is still manufactured in California for foreign export. He says it's possible some quantities escape into coastal waters.

The mussel study, conducted by the state Department of Fish and Game, also shows that higher levels of cadmium, chromium, copper, mercury and silver have been found in the bay. All of the metals can produce health problems for humans.

But a second test in which samples of harbor mud were analyzed indicates that the level of some heavy metals has gone down.

This test, conducted at 10 test stations last winter, shows the level of mercury, tin, copper and zinc is down from findings in 1981 and 1972.

Jim Anderson, director of the Santa Ana water quality board, claims the improvements shown in the test are the result of a crackdown on boatyards.

Until recently, he explains, boatyards in the harbor swept paint chips from the hulls of boats into the water. The paint, designed to prevent marine organisms from growing on boats, usually contains a metal compound such as copper.

"I think all in all, the harbor is in much better shape than it used to be," says Anderson.

Others, including state water quality official Rolf Mall, claim the results of the mussel test have produced a low level of alarm and that the harbor needs to be watched.

Singer launches KDOC

By PHIL SNEIDERMAN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Singer Pat Boone stood in a half-finished Anaheim television studio Tuesday, promising to bring a little bit of Hollywood to Orange County and show a little bit of Orange County to Hollywood.

Boone is president and a chief shareholder of Golden Orange Broadcasting Co., owner of Orange County's first commercial television station, KDOC Channel 56.

Wearing a gold and orange jacket and shirt, along with 1950s-style brown and white saddle shoes, Boone spoke enthusiastically about the station, which begins broadcasting Friday after a 14-year struggle.

"We believe this is a golden opportunity for the 26 cities of Orange County," he said. "We want this station to reflect life in Orange County. We'll at last be able to show Orange County to everyone else."

Boone described the effort to put KDOC on the air as nearly "an impossible dream."

Golden Orange was one of numerous business groups that applied in 1968 for the commercial station license designated for Orange County. It took seven years for the Federal Communications Commission to award the license to Golden Orange, then another seven to secure transmitter location approval and install the antenna atop Sunset Ridge in the San Bernardino Mountains.

The station's initial programming will consist of syndicated series reruns such as "Gunsmoke" and "McHale's Navy," plus sport broadcasts from Cal State Fullerton and Cal State Long Beach.

In addition, the station will broadcast a nightly news show focusing on one Orange County issue per program, plus a noontime man-on-the-street interview show visiting locations throughout the county.

Former KNBC Channel 4 anchorman Jack Latham, who is KDOC's general manager, admitted that the initial schedule is modest. But he added that he believes Orange County-oriented programming will expand as the station becomes better known.

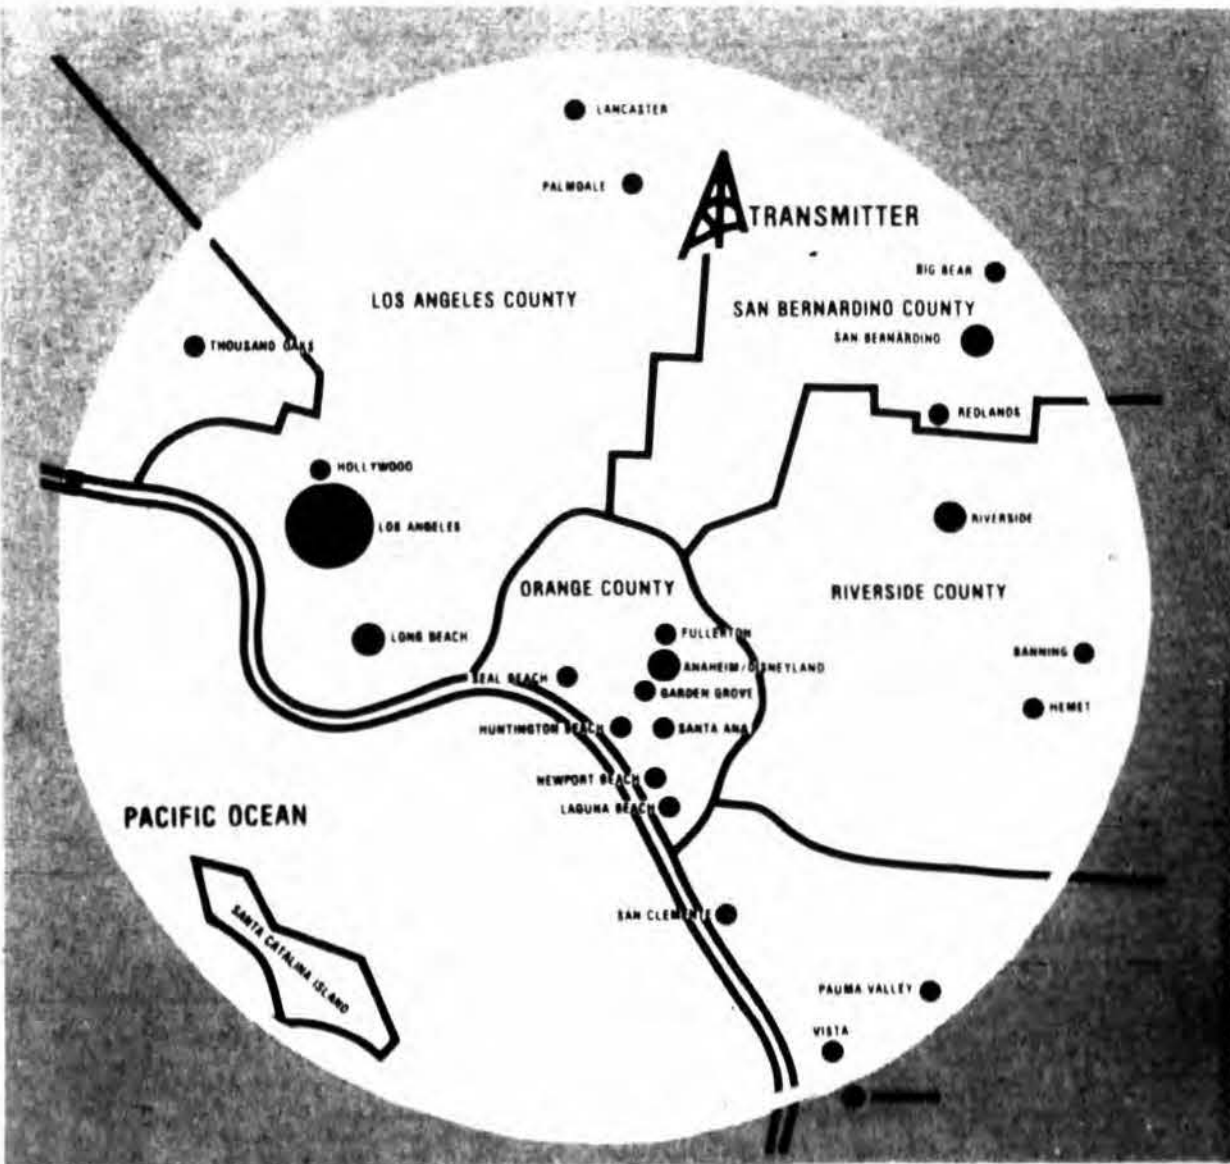

"We have to get our legs, and that's where we are now," Latham said.

Along with Boone, KDOC's major investors include former Westminster Mayor Calvin C. Brack, and Los Angeles attorneys William G. Simon and Tom Sheridan.

Latham said the shareholders already have invested approximately $2 million into the project and want to see the station begin generating some of its own revenues before investing additional capital.

But the station manager said his long-term plans are to expand local coverage to include Orange County cultural events, along with local community college sports and perhaps high school sports.

"My credo," Latham said, "is that if it has to do with Orange County and it's worthwhile program material, we'll do it."

Orange County's first commercial TV station will broadcast within circled area.

those who arrived after Jan. 1, 1982 should be excluded, he said.

The $1,000 appropriated by the supervisors will buy the services of immigration specialist David North, director of the private center for Labor and Migration studies in Washington.

Nestande said North's study won't "give us an absolute, down-to-the-penny analysis" of the bill's local economic impact, but he said North can direct county staff members toward areas for an expanded study which will pinpoint costs.

He said North's analysis also will help the county formulate a position on the bill that can be heard in Washington before the House version is considered.

McConnell said Tuesday that consideration is unlikely to come until after Nov. 29, when the House returns from its election break.

Losses prompt cancellation

DENVER (AP) — The State Fair Commission, which has been losing money instead of raising it, canceled tonight's Linda Ronstadt concert to keep losses under $100,000.

State Agriculture Commissioner J. Evan Goulding said Tuesday night that losses to state taxpayers would be more like $65,000 now that the concert has been called off.

William Kostka Jr., owner of the advertising firm promoting the concert, had estimated that 11,000 tickets would have to be sold to return a $75,000 guarantee to Miss Ronstadt and for promotional expenses, but fewer than 3,000 tickets had been sold by noon Tuesday.

The singer's contract also calls for payment of $57,000 in the event of cancellation.

WEATHER

Coastal

Variable cloudiness today with highs of 70 to 75. Clouds to remain tonight and Thursday with overnight lows of 62 to 65. Highs Thursday 68 to 73. Breezy afternoons. Huntington-Newport area temperatures to range from a low of 59 to a high of 73.

Locally light variable winds tonight and Thursday morning with south to southwest winds 10 to 15 knots, turning west to northwest 12 to 18 knots Thursday afternoon. Wind waves 3 to 4 feet. West to southwest swells 1 to 3 feet. Variable cloudiness today and Thursday.

California

Scattered cloudy skies and the possibility of mountain and desert thundershowers accompanied by gusty winds dotted Southern California's weather outlook today, according to the National Weather Service.

The high temperature in Los Angeles was forecast at 74 with a low of 59. Northern desert highs may reach into the 60s with lows from 44 to 54. High winds from 20 to 30 mph were expected by the weather service in northern desert areas.

Mountain and desert areas scored the highest probability of rain through Thursday. The high temperature in mountain areas should range from 58 to 65 with lows from 38 to 45. Northwest winds from 15 to 30 mph are expected in the mountains.

Southern desert highs should range from 74 to 82 with lows from 54 to 64. Owens Valley highs are forecast from 64 to 72 with lows from 46 to 53. Highs from 72 to 76 and lows from 50 to 58 were expected in coastal valleys.

U.S. summary

Travelers advisories were issued Tuesday over the mountains of northwestern Wyoming and Colorado, where locally drifting and blowing snow created hazardous driving conditions.

Temperatures at higher elevations of the region were as much as 15 degrees colder than those of the last weekend.

Locally heavy snow was expected in the mountains from eastern Montana through Colorado, with accumulations of as much as 12 inches of new snow by morning.

Outlook for Thursday: Little change.

HB cop to stand trial in accident

Huntington Beach Police Officer Delbert Bledsoe pleaded innocent to charges of negligent homicide and leaving the scene of a fatal accident in Arizona, according to court officials.

A trial has been scheduled Nov. 18 at Yuma County Superior Court. Following Blackwell's arraignment Tuesday, according to officials.

Blackwell, 32, was indicted by the Yuma County Grand Jury Sept. 16 in connection with a July 11 traffic accident near Parker, Ariz., that took the life of Lisa Garlich, 18, of Huntington Beach.

An indictment is a charge brought against a person by a grand jury and does not establish guilt or innocence.

The fatal accident occurred on State Route 95, about 10 miles north of Parker, according to an accident report performed by the Arizona Department of Public Safety.

The vehicle failed to negotiate a curve and rolled over after fish tailing, according to the report.

Garlich, one of three passengers thrown from the vehicle, suffered head, neck and back injuries, according to the report.

An investigating officer said in the report that Blackwell left the scene of the accident, according to Allan Schmitt, a spokesman for the Department of Public Safety.

The accident report also said that Blackwell's vehicle was traveling 50 miles an hour in a 35-mile-per-hour zone. The officer said it was his opinion that this was not a reasonable rate of speed, according to Schmitt.

The investigating officer also said it was his opinion that Blackwell was driving under the influence of intoxicating liquor, according to Schmitt.

Blackwell, who appeared personally at Tuesday's arraignment, has been on the Huntington Beach police force four years. He has been reassigned to desk duties pending the disposition of his case, according to Police Chief Earle Robitaille.

CM teen lauded as hero

Victor Forsythe of Costa Mesa can't guess how many people passed by his sweaty, limp body, thinking he was drugged or drunk — not guessing he was near death.

Forsythe, 33, was returning from a trip to San Diego Aug. 27 and stopped at a bank in Santa Ana to make a deposit. He was standing in line when he began feeling weak and dizzy.

Thinking that the feeling would pass in a moment he drove to nearby Centennial Park and sank down in the warm dry grass.

He remembers a police car cruising by real slow. It stopped. But the bearded man was too exhausted to even raise his head.

Finally he dragged himself back to his van and either fell asleep or passed out for several hours. When he awoke the temperature was in the mid-90's, he recalled.

He managed to move a few yards to a restroom and collapsed on the grass. He was lying there when Delbert Bledsoe, 17, of Costa Mesa and several friends found him.

Bledsoe, a senior at Back Bay

High School, said that his friends told him not to get in the car with the stranger. But Delbert loaded his bike in the back and drove Forsythe to a clinic in Costa Mesa.

"I thought he was kind of hurting," said Bledsoe. "He looked so sick. I thought he was going to die."

Forsythe said he was told by Police dog performance wins Irvine job

By GLENN SCOTT
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Chimo the unlikely looking police dog did a good deed for his kind Tuesday night.

The charcoal-colored Bovier padded into the Irvine City Council chambers, performed a few easy tricks, and then relaxed on the carpet as Irvine Police Chief Leo Peart explained how Chimo functions on duty.

It was all in a day's work for one of the Orange Police Department's three four-legged crime stoppers. Unknown to Chimo, however, was that this demonstration had helped convince council members to unanimously agree to buy two other Boviers, once bred in Belgium as cattle dogs, for the Irvine Police Department.

Upon exiting the chambers, the curly canine was met by nine off-duty Irvine police officers who attended the meeting to learn whether the council would adopt service dogs in Irvine.

Chimo was the center of attention, as usual, and seemed willing to put up with their congratulatory pats. Now that Irvine will use dogs, Peart said two officers will be selected to serve as handlers. They will drive special vehicles and keep the dogs at home when not on duty.

The off-duty officers were asked who wanted jobs as handlers. "Everyone," said one of the bosses.

A Bovier does not share the military image held by German Shepherd or Doberman police dogs. In fact, Chimo looked more like an animal actor in a Walt Disney film than a dog trained to search buildings or crime scenes indoors or out — four times faster and more thoroughly than a human.

A Bovier's temperament and appearance, explained Peart, are key reasons why it is suited for Irvine, where a wholesome community image for police is considered essential.

"All of my homework tells me it's a special breed that would fit with our community," he said.

Peart said the time saved in searches thanks to the dogs would amount to $30,000 in wages in a year. First-year start-up costs would be about $33,400, which would be offset by not filling an existing vacancy, he said.

Girl, 17, to face trial as an adult in slaying

A 17-year-old girl accused of shooting her boyfriend to death in Laguna Beach last May will be tried as an adult and not as a juvenile.

Orange County Superior Court Judge William Murray ruled late Tuesday that it was more appropriate to handle Laura Lee Feist, a Laguna Beach High School transfer student, who apparently shot herself in the chest, prosecutors allege, after fatally wounding James Anthony Kendall, 21, of Emerald Bay.

The judge said in his ruling that he didn't believe Feist would be a good candidate for rehabilitation if convicted.

In making his ruling, Murray cited the circumstances of the shooting incident and the alleged criminal sophistication shown by Feist, a Laguna Beach High School transfer student, who apparently shot herself in the chest, prosecutors allege, after fatally wounding James Anthony Kendall, 21, of Emerald Bay.

The judge said in his ruling that he didn't believe Feist would be a good candidate for rehabilitation if convicted.

Once established, the program would cost only about $2,000 per year, Peart said.

The dogs' primary mission in Irvine, he added, will be to perform searches. Most will be in the large warehouses and office buildings in industrial sectors, where officers often are dispatched to answer silent alarms.

"Even in the quiet city of Irvine, we respond to about 400 alarms a month, mostly in the industrial area," he noted.

A police dog may be hailed for its efficiencies, but critics have also pointed out its weakness — its inability to use discretion.

Massacre inquiry asked

By The Associated Press
JERUSALEM — Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin today formally asked Supreme Court President Yitzhak Kahan to appoint a commission to investigate Israel's conduct regarding the massacre of Palestinians in Beirut.

Begin sent Kahan a letter by messenger asking that he start the commission. It will have powers to subpoena witnesses and penalize perjurers in probing the mass slaughter that has churned a storm of moral outrage and political turmoil in Israel.

AirCal warns of layoffs

Union rejects pay decrease proposal

By STEVE TRIPOLI
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Officials of Newport Beach-based AirCal have promised to lay off more than 300 of the airline's employees if a reluctant union will not accede to a demand that its workers take a 12 percent cut in pay.

AirCal spokesman Mark Peterson said the airline laid out its position Monday in a meeting with officials of the Transport Workers Union.

AirCal maintenance and ramp workers represented by the union narrowly rejected the pay cut in a vote involving about 450 of its nearly 600 members.

The 400-employee flight attendants section of the union accepted the cut by a narrow margin, while the 980 management and other non-union employees of the airline accepted the cut by a reported 5-1 margin. Only AirCal pilots have not voted on the proposal.

But the airline has said it will not implement the pay cut plan without the backing of all its employees, and Peterson said AirCal stuck to that position in talks with TWU officials.

Peterson said 309 jobs will be cut from nearly all segments of the AirCal workforce, and that even more layoffs plus a cutback in operations and work schedule changes will be announced in mid-October if the pay cut is not accepted.

The pay plan, which would have applied to employees at all levels, includes a profit-sharing provision that, based on the airline's performance over the next three years, could help employees recoup some of their losses.

Union officials were not available for comment.

By South Korean count, North Korea has seized 3,554 South Korean fishermen since the end of the Korean War in 1953. South Korea says 407 have never returned.

Fallout victims tell heartaches

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Cancer victims and their widowers told stories of physical pain and a decade of heartache as a trial on the health effects of atomic test fallout entered its third week.

"It's been 10 years of heartache," said Verlynn Bradshaw, 54, the mother of Jeffrey Bradshaw of Cedar City, Utah, as she testified Monday.

Bradshaw said he contracted Hodgkin's disease — or cancer of the lymph glands — 10 years ago, and it has twice recurred.

Bradshaw is among 1,192 claimants who allege fallout from above-ground nuclear tests in Nevada from 1951 to 1962 caused cancer and other illnesses. They also claim the government knew or should have known the fallout was hazardous, but failed to adequately warn or protect people downwind from the tests.

U.S. District Judge Bruce Jenkins is hearing testimony on 24 representative plaintiffs' cases. Plaintiffs' attorneys hope Jenkins' decision in the cases will let the other claimants obtain settlements out of court.

Plaintiffs' attorneys said seven of the eight remaining representative plaintiffs probably would testify today and the final one would take the stand Thursday. The trial is expected to last until Thanksgiving.

Bradshaw, 28, said he was attending Northern Arizona University on a baseball scholarship when his cancer was diagnosed. He was forced to drop out of school and eventually abandon hopes of a major league baseball career, he said.

"I was going to be a major-league pitcher," he said. "I just felt bad for myself. I was torn apart. I felt like killing myself."

He became addicted to pain-killing drugs because of his cancer and depression, he said.

Bradshaw said he has overcome the addiction and his cancer is under control after a bout in 1979, but he has a related hip disability and must use a cane or crutches to walk.

He and his wife, unable to have children because of the cancer treatments, are attempting to adopt, he said.

"Every time adoption agencies hear I have cancer, they say I'm a bad risk," he said.

Bradshaw's mother, who said she has had breast cancer, testified her son was devastated by the end of his baseball plans.

Under cross-examination, Bradshaw said he had quit the high school football team as a senior because of a disagreement with his coach over Bradshaw's smoking.

Three plaintiffs testified their wives died of cancer in the early 1970s.

"They never did issue any warning of any nature saying there was any danger at all" in the downwind area of southern Utah, southern Nevada and northern Arizona, said Paul Wood of Cedar City, whose wife died of cancer in 1973.

"It was published in both newspapers and on the radio about how safe it was," said S. Harold Thompson of Cedar City, whose wife died in 1973 of abdominal cancer. "A big pink cloud came over and we stood out and watched it."

Most of the witnesses said they had vegetable gardens and drank milk and ate fruit from local farms during the testing period.

Plaintiffs' attorneys contend locally produced vegetables, fruit and milk were contaminated by radiation that could have produced cancer in those who ingested them.

All plaintiffs were cross-examined about illness-related expenses listed in a report prepared by consulting economist Frank Stuart. Stuart estimated the total actual losses for the 24 representative claimants at about $7.5 million.

SYMBOLS IN JEWELRY

Almost all of the world's religions are honored by some kind of symbolism. Christians, of course, use the symbol of the cross to remind them of the execution of Jesus. Those of the Jewish faith have the Star of David. This symbol is so sold (more than 2,000 years) that scholars and historians disagree on its origin. Many Catholics wear medals honoring particular saints recognized by their church. Some of the designs that are made into jewelry and are woven into fabrics by the American Indians are symbols that became part of their spiritual faith many centuries ago. Believe it or not, young people wear religious symbols as jewelry more often than their elders. It is also a fact that women wear more religious jewelry than men. Sterling silver and gold-filled pieces are very popular with young people. Such jewelry has become fashionable, as well as showing an expression of one's faith. The simple dignity of these symbols gives them a beauty that is universal.

Reagan, O'Neill clash over economy

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Reagan, conceding unemployment soon could hit 10 percent, is blaming two decades of Democratic policies for the economy's lingering woes.

But in a sharp retort by the nation's ranking Democrat, House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. insists that Reagan "cannot pass the buck" for the failure of Reaganomics.

Here, at a glance, are highlights of the President's nationally broadcast news conference Tuesday night: Mideast

Reagan said U.S. Marines re-entering Beirut will take up a peacekeeping mission that will last until the Lebanese government is in full control and "able to preserve order." He said he could not say how long that will be.

Economy

He defended his economic program, saying there are signs of recovery soon. He blamed Democrats for persistent problems of recession and unemployment.

Busing

Reagan insisted that the Justice Department is going to court to overturn existing school busing orders only in instances where the local communities involved are trying to get the orders changed. In many cases, he said, it is the black community seeking the changes.

Asked why his administration is moving to counter desegregation orders obtained under prior administrations, Reagan said, "Well I suppose it's because there's been so much court ordering and some of it seems to be a violation of the rights of the community, of the school board and so forth."

Soviet sanctions

The president said administration sanctions aimed at countering Soviet involvement in Poland and elsewhere are successful because they have given the Soviets "a pretty good understanding . . . where we stand."

Taxes

Reagan ruled out a tax increase next year, "unless there's a palace coup and I'm overtaken or overthrown."

Budget cuts

The president disputed contentions that many of the budget cuts he has pushed through Congress have been particularly harmful to poor people while the middle class got a tax reduction. "In a number of instances, those cases have nothing to do with our budget cuts," he said, citing reports of people suffering from losing benefits.

NFL strike

The president declined to comment on the National Football League players' strike beyond saying, "It doesn't seem there was the consideration for the fans that there could have been and should have been."

President Reagan

No time for tax overhaul, administration says

By JIM LUTHER

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Despite polls indicating most Americans are eager for a rewrite of the federal income tax code, the Reagan administration says now is not the time to tackle the job.

"We are not planning any initiative in this area," John E. Chapoton, the Treasury Department's chief authority on tax policy, said Tuesday as the Senate Finance Committee opened hearings on various "flat-tax" proposals. In fact, Chapoton added, no such step is anticipated in the foreseeable future.

Some recent polls show that two-thirds of those asked favor some kind of flat tax, in which most or all deductions would be eliminated and most people would pay the same share of their income to the government. Pollster Louis Harris planned to give the committee the results of his latest survey today.

President Reagan and several of his aides have shown an interest in the flat tax. Budget Director David Stockman earlier went so far as to predict the president would recommend such a move in the budget he sends to Congress next January.

But Chapoton said the administration does not want to send out any signal that it considers a flat tax the answer to the complexities of the tax system. Too many factors must be weighed before such a decision can be made, he added.

But it is likely that several private analyses of the flat tax made it easier for the administration to avoid committing itself to any such system in this election year. Those analyses show that a flat tax would provide tax cuts to upper-income Americans at the expense of middle-income families.

One flat-rate plan would allow a $6,000 standard deduction per couple plus a $2,000 exemption per dependent and tax the remainder of income at 20 percent. People earning $5,000 to $10,000 would pay about 13 percent more; the $20,000-to-$30,000 group would pay 18.5 percent more, and those making $100,000 to $200,000 a year would get a 29 percent tax cut.

Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., described the flat tax in simple terms: "If you're rich you'll love it," he said. "If you're not — look out."

But Long and most other members of the committee agreed with Chapoton that Americans are becoming increasingly fed up with the complexities and what they consider the inequities of the present tax system.

Even with the average 23 percent, across-the-board cut in tax rates that Congress passed last year, Chapoton said, "what continues to upset the man in the street is his conviction that his neighbor who is just as well off pays less tax than he does. Furthermore, he is concerned that the fellow in the big house on the hill pays still less than either he or his neighbor is paying."

Although there seems little chance Congress will adopt any flat tax in the foreseeable future, there is a better chance for some variation that would retain some of the "ability-to-pay" provisions and some of the deductions under present law.

Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., chairman of the finance panel, said, "I am convinced members of this committee are committed to doing our best to simplify and bring about fairness." One method of doing that, he added, would be to continue with the policies contained in last year's tax cut and this year's tax increase: cutting rates while taxing more income by eliminating or reducing some deductions.

IRS warns of shelters danger

WASHINGTON (AP) — Internal Revenue Service Commissioner Roscoe Egger Tuesday warned upper-income Americans who invest in exotic tax-avoidance schemes that "participating in abusive tax shelters can be hazardous to your wealth."

Testifying before the House Ways and Means oversight subcommittee, Egger pledged an all-out campaign against fraudulent shelters.

John Chapoton, assistant treasury secretary for tax policy, has criticized the notion of a "flat-rate" tax, which would end most deductions and require everyone to pay the same portion of income to the government.

But, as the Senate Finance Committee opened hearings on the flat tax, Chapoton, the administration's chief tax authority, recommended that variations of such a proposal be studied thoroughly.

Similar advice was offered by Alice Rivlin, director of the Congressional Budget Office.

Witnesses and members of the committee were virtually unanimous on one point. As Sen.

Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, put it, "There is a growing feeling of unfairness in the tax system. What we need is a major reform . . . a simplification."

He said a major objective of the new Congress taking office in January will be "a massive reform of the tax system."

Most members of the committee who spoke out opposed a pure flat tax — in which the $20,000 family and the $100,000 family would pay the same portion of their incomes in taxes.

Brazil parched by drought

22 million people affected by harsh rainless season

SERRA TALHADA, Brazil (AP) — The worst drought in 100 years is ravaging northeastern Brazil, driving hungry peasants into the cities of South America's largest country.

Brazil, burdened with a huge foreign debt and 95 percent inflation, has been forced to divert much-needed cash into stopgap relief programs for the drought victims.

And the government, campaigning hard through the region prior to national, state and municipal elections in November, has been embarrassed by charges of corruption and waste in the handling of relief money.

The drought has reached staggering proportions, even for this arid region considered to be one of the poorest places on Earth.

At its peak since it began four years ago, the dry spell affected 22 million people in a nine-state region, according to government figures. The stricken area covered 540,000 square miles — the size of Alaska.

The drought zone lies just below the equator, where South America juts into the Atlantic Ocean. Along the nearby coast, rainfall is plentiful, agriculture is rich and industry is growing.

But in the interior, only scrub grows naturally in the weak, rock-strewn soil. Infant mortality in the nearby cities is officially listed at 109 per 1,000 — seven times higher than in the United States. The government says it is much higher than that in rural areas.

After four years of dry weather, peasants who made subsistence livings suddenly are faced with starvation. In recent months, thousands have begun invading towns and ransacking markets in search of food.

This town of 60,000 in the state of Pernambuco, 260 miles inland, is typical of dozens of municipalities in the area that were invaded by hungry peasants.

In July, thousands stormed into town demanding food and work. Police, who had been warned, kept them from breaking into locked warehouses and shuttered stores.

Mayor Hildo Pereira said he had ordered beans, dried meat, oil and spices to be distributed. "But we finally had to stop," he said. "There simply were too many of them."

In nearby Sao Jose Belmonte, merchants were not as lucky. After several attempted invasions were turned back by storekeepers with guns and whips, peasants broke into warehouses in July and made off with all the food they could find.

The government has responded by creating Depression-style work gangs to build dikes, reservoirs and wells. As many as 1.2 million people, earning about $9 a week, have been put to work on the gangs.

In the first three years of the drought, the government spent $111 million to create jobs, according to Valfredo Salmato, head of the Superintendency for the Development of the Northeast, SUDENE, and coordinator of the relief efforts. The idea, Salmato explained, was "to enable the Northeast to live better through droughts in the future."

AP Wirephoto

Brazilian hauls rocks to building sites past deserted, drought-plagued farm.

complain the agency wasted or misappropriated money intended for drought victims.

"The government was spending a billion cruzeiro (about $7 million) a month here and only built a few small, badly designed reservoirs," said Aureo Guedes, regional agricultural coordinator for the state of Paraiba. "They don't hold enough water to last through even a normal dry season."

Almanac: East to button up

DUBLIN, N.H. (AP) — The Old Farmer's Almanac, the 191-year-old, yellow and black weather bible ready to hang in pantry or privy, predicts a frigid winter for the East and a mild one for the West.

The 1983 edition of the nation's oldest continuously published periodical, issued today, says it makes forecasts based on both "the latest scientific technology" and a secret formula locked in a black box in the almanac's offices.

But Abe Weatherwise — a pseudonym for publisher Rob Trowbridge and editor Jud Hale — cautions that the April 4 eruption of the Mexican volcano El Chichonal could throw off this year's forecasts because the almanac went to press before the volcano's effects could be assessed.

Weatherwise predicted severe cold waves rolling across the East in January, February and March after a mild and sunny December.

The West may face a serious drought as a result of a warm and dry November, then rain and relief in December and a cold snap at the end of the year, he said. The Middle Atlantic region should expect a wet spring and possible flooding.

The publishers claim an accuracy rate of 80 percent, and the U.S. government took them at their word at least once. During World War II, all copies of the magazine were confiscated after German spies were captured off the East Coast consulting its forecasts.

The Old Farmer's Almanac's most recent success was predicting last winter's bitter cold wave. The forecast was for a major snowstorm and cold wave in the East and South during the Christmas-New Year's holidays. The forecast was a bit narrow, though: The cold wave spread into the Midwest and lasted through January.

The almanac is not to be confused with a younger publication called simply the Farmers' Almanac, which is only 166 years old. That almanac, published in Lewiston, Maine, is given away by business as an advertising promotion.

The younger almanac's winter forecast — prepared by Caleb Weatherbee, a pseudonym for an unidentified weather buff from New Hampshire — also predicts a colder-than-normal winter, with above-average snowfall virtually everywhere but the Pacific Northwest. But the Farmers' Almanac, which also claims 80 percent accuracy, did not predict last winter's killer cold wave.

The Old Farmer's Almanac, on sale for $1.50, offers anecdotes and stories along with its year-long forecasts for 16 regions of the country, tide and planting tables, and breeding charts.

The publishers say they have gone to great expense to keep all this at a reader's fingertips, and note the almanac is perforated in the upper left-hand corner so it can be tacked to a wall.

This year's almanac offers these tidbits:

— An old-fashioned cure for insomnia: Smell your socks before retiring.

— A list of printers' errors in various editions of the Bible, including a 1632 publication in which the Seventh Commandment admonished: "Thou shalt commit adultery."

— A study that says U.S. workers spend an average of two hours and 44 minutes a day to make enough money to pay their taxes.

Instruction on hulling corn, "for the three, possibly four people in the world who would be interested."

Still time for action on school fund issue

As noted here immediately after the close of the legislative session, California's lawmakers fumbled badly on one of the most important issues demanding their attention — public school financing.

Offered two opportunities to restore dwindling school funding — an oil severance tax that would have raised $400 million, or an additional tax on tobacco and alcohol for $350 million — they backed away from both, clearly panic-stricken by the idea of a tax increase of any type in an election year.

So the schools opened with just about the same budget they had last year. No money for pay increases, for building maintenance, for textbooks, or to restore programs that have been cut since Proposition 13 began to take effect.

The schools already have laid off teachers, counselors, librarians, maintenance people. Instruction programs from remedial reading to music have been eliminated. Students are asked to pay more for school lunches and transportation.

There is no room for more cuts if they are to receive anything resembling a decent education.

Already California has the second highest ratio (after Utah) of students per teacher, 23.6 compared with a national average of 18.4.

The national average amount spent per student is $2,690. California spends $2,337, down from 21st to 35th in the nation in just two years.

And in percentage of personal income channeled into the school system, we have the honor to be dead last — No. 50.

Of course there is more to a school system than dollars. But without a reasonable financial base even the best-intentioned teachers and administrators cannot function adequately. Alas, so far as teachers are concerned, too many have become so discouraged they are simply leaving the profession altogether. The loss is our children's, and their future in this state.

Given our legislators' pre-election jitters, there's not much to be done before Nov. 2. But it still is possible for the governor to call a special session of the Legislature immediately after the election to do what should have been done.

If the issue of school financing is put off until after the New Year it will again be bogged down in the morass of legislation facing the new group of lawmakers. The governor could make us all rest easier by announcing a special session immediately. The outgoing Legislature should not be permitted to pass the buck on this one.

Taxpayer protection

Taxpayers who tangle with the Internal Revenue Service are granted some new protections under the 1982 tax act.

The new law puts some reins on the ability of the IRS to seize property to satisfy tax claims, speeds up the deadline for releasing property when a lien is satisfied and assures a taxpayer who wins a court fight with the IRS of adequate recompense for court costs and attorney fees.

With the cost of tax litigation now averaging $9,000 to $12,000, the law says a taxpayer who wins a tax case now can be awarded up to $25,000 to cover such costs.

When the IRS intends to seize property, the taxpayer now must be warned in advance by certified mail and thus given a chance to head off the action. Previously, the IRS could proceed with seizure without knowing whether or not the taxpayer had received due notice.

The rules regarding property exempt from seizure, unchanged

since 1959, also have been made more realistic.

Furniture, provisions and personal effects worth up to $1,500 now are exempt. The previous limit was $500. The exemption for books and tools of a trade has been raised from $250 to $1,000 and exempted wages are increased from $50 to $75 a week, with an additional exemption for each dependent.

Finally, the IRS now must release property within 30 days when a claim is satisfied. Previously there was no time limit.

While the heavy hand of the IRS still can come down on delinquent citizens, the taxpayer who claims innocence now can fight the government without going broke, and the one who has indeed broken the rules will not be deprived of too many possessions while trying to make amends. Given the IRS horror stories that come up from time to time, all this sounds more reasonable.

A man of courage

The Orange Coast lost a true man of courage and the youth of our area lost a true friend last Sunday with the untimely death of Dean J. Westgaard, teacher, coach, lifeguard supervisor, sky diver and gentleman.

Westgaard demonstrated his courage from his days as a football star through becoming a professional skydiver with more than 2,500 jumps to his credit.

Much of his life was spent serving youth as a teacher, coach, supervisor and friend.

But at no time did the Laguna Beach resident and Orange Coast College instructor demonstrate more courage than in his final fight against cancer.

He died at age 52. He will indeed be missed by all who knew him.

L.M. Boyd/Little use for u's

The original dictionary man Noah Webster was moved mostly to the outset by one main motive: to rid the American language of the useless "u's" in such English words as colour, honour, labour. He was 17 years old when the Declaration of Independence was signed.

If you are 76 years old, you were born just about the time that pajamas first replaced the full-length nightshirt as modern man's favorite sleeping costume.

A married man in a business partnership is more apt to split up with his wife than with his partner, statistics show.

Turkish coffee houses serve nothing at all but coffee.

Q. Didn't the Russian musical genius Rachmaninoff start the Sikorsky helicopter company?

A. No, sir, Rachaminoff invested $5,000 in Igor Sikorsky's aircraft company when it was in financial trouble, however, Sikorsky gave Rachmaninoff the title of vice president.

Q. How come there's no male or female name for a beaver except beaver.

A. Because none but another beaver can tell the difference. No call to specify when you just don't know.

Dayan eyed Lebanon annex

WASHINGTON — White House suspicion of Israel has become so intense that President Reagan's top advisers are now wondering whether Prime Minister Menachem Begin is planning the eventual annexation of southern Lebanon.

Secret reports shown to my associates Dale Van Atta and Ron McRae indicate why the White House is disturbed.

One secret State Department report, for example, had this to say on Sept. 15, as the Israeli invasion of West Beirut was proceeding apace: There is a danger that Israel's "logistical operations will evolve into permanent administrative agencies."

IN OTHER WORDS, the suspicion is that Israel is in the process of building a military-civilian government for Israeli-occupied Lebanon.

The same pattern of Israeli infiltration that has been seen in the West Bank territories seems to be evolving in Lebanon. The ultra-nationalist extremist group, Gush Emunim, is planning to put Israeli settlements in southern Lebanon, according to U.S. reports.

If Begin follows his past action, he will not denounce these settlements for fear of criticism from hardline Israeli factions that are the bedrock of his political support. Instead, he will see that the bootleg settlements are hooked up to water and electricity to make them permanently viable.

The Gush Emunim and the Israeli Army's chief rabbi, Gen. Gad Navon, believe that God may be giving them southern Lebanon to compensate for Israel's withdrawal from the Sinai. The chaplain's support would be a key element in transforming temporary military governments into permanent civilian bodies. Sensing an opportunity, Israeli businessmen are already beginning to establish themselves in occupied Lebanon.

A significant historical note should be mentioned here. It adds fuel to the

JACK ANDERSON

White House suspicions.

A former Israeli prime minister, Moshe Sharett, published an intriguing account in 1978 of a meeting of Israeli defense and foreign-policy officials. The meeting occurred 27 years ago, and quotes the late Moshe Dayan, then army chief of staff, as saying Lebanon was ripe for the picking.

"The only thing that's necessary is to find an officer, even just a major," Dayan said, according to the account. "We would either win his heart or buy him with money, to make him agree to declare himself the savior of the Maronite (Christian) population."

"Then the Israeli army will enter Lebanon, will occupy the necessary territory and will create a Christian regime which will ally itself with Israel," Dayan reportedly continued. "The territory from the Litani (River) southward will be totally annexed by Israel and everything will be all right."

The Dayan scenario was followed to the letter — even to the choice of the cooperative Christian leader's military rank. Maj. Saad Haddad, a cashiered Lebanese officer, has been acting as Israel's puppet warlord in the Litani River area for years.

The secret Sept. 15 report predicted that Israel would try to bestow legitimacy on Haddad, possibly by insisting that he be included in any future Lebanese regime. His role in the massacres at the Palestinian refugee camps in West Beirut may have destroyed his chances, however.

ISRAEL'S COVETOUS designs on southern Lebanon are explained in a top-secret CIA report, which states: "Hardliners in Israel have for years pointed out that Israel, by seizing territory up to the Litani River, would gain a more defensive border and a greater supply of water." In fact, Israeli engineers are already working at the Litani, exploring its potential for irrigation.

At the start of the West Beirut invasion, Begin assured Reagan in a private message that Israel "did not covet one inch of Lebanese territory." In early June, he had publicly declared in the Knesset that Israel didn't want "one square millimeter of Lebanese territory."

The White House no longer has faith in these assurances.

Footnote: An official of the Israeli Embassy said that Israel has "no intention of annexing any part of Lebanon or setting up any settlements."

Island might solve jail site dilemma

Probably in a moment of frustration, Sen. Robert Presley dashed off a letter to the state prison director suggesting the use of Alcatraz Island as a means of relieving overcrowding in California prisons.

Presley had authored the $495 million prison construction bond issue approved by the voters last June. But any relief to come from the money provided by the bonds is at least two years away. Actually the funds are viewed as just "starter" money for the longterm need for new prison facilities.

ALCATRAZ, long the site of a federal prison, was abandoned a number of years back by the government on grounds it was too costly to operate.

Presley either has never visited the site or has forgotten its limited capacity. In operation, it never housed more than 250 inmates. Because of its small size its operating costs were magnified.

Not only must all of its supplies, including water, be barged from the mainland but, lacking a sewage treatment plant, the sewage too must be transported by barge.

the prison required a full-time fleet of boats, ferries and barges.

Nothing about that has changed. But time, fire and unauthorized occupations of the property have taken a toll on the buildings. So even without considering operational costs, the funds required to rehabilitate the plant are far out of proportion to the few prisoners that would be accommodated.

Unquestionably the prison authorities are having problems housing the inmates. Even though, as Sen. Ed Davis, the former Los Angeles police chief, has pointed out, the department tends to exaggerate the overcrowding, it does exist. That days when 5,000 could be crammed into San Quentin's designed capacity of 2,700 are gone. Today's prisoners are more violent. And then there are the racial problems which were non-existent in the earlier days.

The department has been attempting to meet the crisis by expanding both the community release program and the conservation camps but there is a limit to those who can safely be assigned to such programs.

The department also is constructing satellite facilities at Folsom and Tehachapi which will use up a good part of the $495 million bond issue.

The prison authorities would still like to build at least one new complete facility but they are meeting resistance from communities each time a site is under consideration.

So Presley's idea about Alcatraz isn't as far out as it seems. Domiciling prisoners on an island would solve the problem of community resistance. Furthermore it would provide security without the great expense of building prison cells and walls. Presley just picked the wrong island.

Hate can overwhelm love

In a lifetime of reading, one begins to realize how much has been written about love, and how little about hate. Yet hate is, in a sense, the greater force, in that it can destroy in a single moment what love has taken years to build.

It seems to me that we spend too much time sentimentalizing over love, and too fear revolt and revolution. Each position hardens out of fear, until conflict becomes inevitable, though all may desire a less devastating confrontation.

How do we deal with the mechanism of hate born of fear? The world has never really addressed itself to this basic problem. Disputes have been settled ad hoc around the conference table or on the battlefield — but each "settlement" contains the seed of renewal.

We speak of "love" as the ultimate solvent, but before love can come into operation, we have to find a way to reduce the mutual fear which feeds on itself, and eventually consumes itself in warfare. We must learn how to tame and re-channel the torrent of hate that now, for the first time, has the capacity to obliterate most of mankind.

What is so tragically ironic today is that the only way governments feel they can adequately defend themselves is by playing on the fear of the "enemy" — as we are told to fear the Russians, and they to fear us.

The most imperative thing needed in the world at this time is a community of nations, and it has never seemed further away. Perhaps it will take a holocaust of hate to burn the fear out of us and leave the saving remnant — if any — holding hands amid the ashes.

little effort to understand the roots and ramifications of hate, a destructive element far more rampant than any number of nuclear warheads.

This is true not merely in personal terms, but on a tribal or national scale as well. It took the Israelis many loving years to build up a prosperous and fertile country; it can take only a few hours or days to devastate the entire Middle East. St. Paul informs us that perfect love casts out fear, but the reverse is equally, and more dreadfully, the case — fear drives out love and transforms it into a raging and implacable hatred.

The Palestinians fear extinction; the Israelis fear destruction; the Arab states

BUT THE FACT is that California has about 1,000 offshore islands although some are no more than rocks. The two principal groups are the Farallons, standing sentinel at the entrance to the Golden Gate and the Channel Islands to the west of Long Beach.

That group consists of eight major islands including Catalina. While that and two others are privately owned the remaining five are public lands. All are protected as wildlife areas but one, San Clemente, is used by the navy as a bombing range. It perhaps could serve as a prison colony and in fact the authorities now are considering just that.

Daughter's dating pattern self-destructive

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Our 25-year-old daughter has been dating a 23-year-old excuse for a man for nearly two years.

We do not approve of this person because we do not know his true personality. We have never seen him sober. He passes out at parties, and it's up to the host to arrange to get him home. Our daughter must use her car whenever they go out because he has had his license revoked — for drunken driving, of course.

We are sick of him waking up the whole family at all hours with his telephone calls. Many nights she has thrown her clothes on and left the house to meet him in some crummy bar.

We know our daughter reads your column and that she respects you. We have talked to her until we are blue in the face. Now will you please say something? — BESIDE OURSELVES IN RAPIDS.

DEAR B.O.: If you have described the situation accurately, there is nothing I can say that will make any difference. Your daughter's behavior is self-destructive. One of the worst things about going with drunks is that it's so easy to join them. I wish her luck. She'll need it.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: You goofed. There IS an escape from the tyranny of copper. I refer to your comment (that there was not) when a reader suggested the merchants stop pricing items at 99 cents and $2.98, so they'd seem cheaper.

You said some dumb thing about getting stuck with pennies, no matter what, because of the tax. Several years ago I managed a gift shop in Dallas. When the local government added a gift tax of 2 cents, I priced the $1 items at 98 cents. Later when the tax went to 4 cents, I priced the $1 items at 96 cents. I applied the same formula to everything we sold, from 19 cents to $75. This was why we never had a copper shortage.

Tax is paid on accumulated value sold. Sometimes the merchant collects extra tax, and sometimes he's a little short — but it averages out and he doesn't lose anything.

There is always a better way to do things in business but it means using your head — which so many people find extremely difficult. — G.W. IN THE BIG D.

DEAR BIG D.: How true. Thanks for hauling me up short. I had it coming.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Our eldest daughter is being married soon. She is a young business executive and her soon-to-be-husband is a fine, well-respected man. We gave our other daughters beautiful weddings and we plan to do the same for Lorraine.

Yesterday we went shopping for her wedding gown, and she chose an off-the-shoulder style which would be gorgeous except for one thing. Lorraine has a tattoo on her right shoulder — a remnant of her rebellious college days. My husband says we should be thankful that the tattoo is a rose and not a skull and crossbones or a spider. I feel very uneasy, nonetheless, and fear that it will be the one thing everyone will talk about.

ANN LANDERS

I also worry about what the groom's conservative parents and their friends will think. Can you suggest something? — M. BARRASSED IN GARRISON

DEAR M.: Apparently Lorraine still has some rebellion to work through. Accept her decision for now. But have a bottle of Covermark on hand in case she has an attack of good sense at the last moment.

HOROSCOPE
BY SIDNEY OMARR

Thursday, September 30

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Family member aids in resolving dilemma. You could be on brink of a very important discovery. You'll be invited to participate in scientific project. One close to you talks of moving, travel and domestic adjustment.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Romantic involvement lends spice to life. Keep guard up, don't fall prey to sucker punch. You'll be dealing with individual who is secretive, sensitive and prescient. Wish will come true in unorthodox manner. Watch Pisces.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Emphasis on business, career, prestige and honor. You succeed in making room for yourself at top. You'll have added responsibility and chance for greater rewards. Debt will be repaid, you'll feel fortunate and burden will be removed.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Good lunar aspect coincides with travel, spiritual values, ability to overcome distance, language barriers. Project will be completed, you'll have opportunity to strike chord of universal theme. Key now is to be enterprising.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Get to heart of matters concerning financial proposition. You may be asked to endorse a product. Key is to be selective, to understand tax, license requirements and to know who is supplying funds. Aries, Libra persons play key roles.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Sense of direction requires clarification. You may be working against your own best interests. Emphasis on legalities, public relations and necessity for protecting formats, ideas, concepts. Keep eye on Aquarius.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Leave details for another time — for now, perceive picture or theme in its entirety. Change of pace proves beneficial. You'll be invited to interesting social function. What appeared a setback is due to boomerang in your favor.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You engage in risk-taking operation. Excitement prevails, you're stimulated and challenged. Aquarius, Leo and another Scorpio figure prominently. You'll have opportunity to prove major points, to insure safety measures and to display affection.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Give full rein to intellectual curiosity — ask questions, make inquiries especially where property is concerned. You encounter a stimulating salesperson who tends to overwhelm. Maintain balance, get promises in writing.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Focus on domestic situation, relatives, important concessions and activity which involves remodeling if not actual change of residence. Telephone call could result in short trip. Be alert, aware and open to creative suggestions.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Keep eye on loose change. Cycle is high, you obtain major support and some of your associates make no secret of their envy. You'll be invited on cruise or tour. Be sure of exact meanings, take nothing for granted.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): This can be your power-play day! Business, financial and personal life blend; you'll make right moves, you'll know what to do and when to do it.

There goes great American dream

My son, Mordred, was sitting in the living room looking particularly sullen the other day. So I asked him what the matter was.

"Give it to me again, Dad," he said. "What's The Great American Dream?"

This is the kind of question that makes us daddies beam. "As I've told you since long before you were grown, son," I said. "The Great American Dream has always been to drive a big car, own a little house surrounded by a white picket fence and send your kids to college."

Mordred nodded. "I can't afford the gas," he said.

"At $1.50 a gallon?" I protested. "Of course you can."

"If I buy the gas, I can't afford the car."

"I'M SORRY TO HEAR THAT, Mordred. But the price of gasoline is not my fault."

"The heck it's not. Your generation has been driving around in your big gas guzzlers for years, blithely burning up our irreplaceable fossil fuels."

"Excuse me, Mordred. They're not your fossil fuels; they're our fossil fuels. We discovered them; we get to burn them up. Fair is fair."

"There goes The Great American Dream."

"Not necessarily," I said. "But you may have to modify it a little. What about a big car up on blocks and a little white house, both surrounded by a picket fence?"

"Who can afford a little white house?"

ART HOPPE

THE INNOCENT BYSTANDER

Now, Mordred, it was a 25-year struggle, but your mother and I managed to buy this one."

"At 16 percent?"

"No, at 5 1/2. But you can get creative financing: nothing down, an interest-only loan and, at the end of 10 years, a balloon, a trumpet serenade and a cake with candles on it."

"To qualify, I'd have to make $97,500 a year — a salary level I will reach, on my present wage scale, at the age of 113."

"WELL, IT'S SOMETHING to shoot for," I said. "And, whatever else, there's always the pater of tiny feet to look forward to. That's the part of The Great American Dream that really counts."

"Sure, that's what Xanthippe says," agreed Mordred, referring to his loving young wife. "But do you know what tiny feet cost these days? We'd be lucky to get two of them through high school for $300,000, much less college. We decided, instead, to adopt a couple of 21-year-olds when we retire. Then we can listen to the pater of tiny feet when they have kids."

Naturally, I was somewhat disappointed. But I hid it. "Look on the bright side, Mordred," I said. "The money market fund is paying your mother and me an exorbitant rate of interest on our little nest egg. And, thanks to inflation, you wouldn't believe the price we could get for this house, if anyone were buying houses."

"Oh, sure, you've achieved The Great American Dream," said Mordred. "But what about us? We can't afford a car, a house, or kids. You know what we're saving up for? A Happy-Zap 2200 Home Computer and Video Game Terminal, a week in Acapulco and two tickets to tonight's concert of George Rotten and His Ejectorators."

I PUT A FATHERLY HAND on his shoulder. "I'll admit that's not my Great American Dream, son, but it's your Great American Dream. And what does it matter so long as a man has a Great American Dream to dream?"

"Gosh, I think you're right, Dad," said Mordred thoughtfully. "I'll run upstairs and tell Xanthippe. And, oh, by the way, can we borrow your car tonight?"

"Okay," I said grudgingly. "But burn up your own fossil fuels."

Yet I can't help but feel sorry for these young people. The Great American Dream has changed for them. Of course, it's changed for us, too. Right now, my Great American Dream is that Mordred and Xanthippe will move out of the house and buy a motorcycle.

This hand from a team match is an interesting lesson in technique. Both Souths gave an impressive performance, each in his own way.

Because of a preempt from East and a raise by West, both North-South pairs reached a slam that could hardly be described as laydown. Both Wests led a diamond, and both Easts took the ace and made a neutral shift to a trump.

Our first declarer won in dummy and cashed another high trump. Next came three rounds of hearts, on which he sluffed a club. When East followed to all these tricks, declarer had an inferential count of the hand — East almost surely had seven diamonds for his jump, and he had shown up with two trumps and three hearts. Therefore, he held at most one club.

Declarer elected to play for East to have specifically a bare nine or ten of clubs, twice as good as hoping that the singleton was the king. He came to hand with a heart ruff and led the jack of clubs. West covered and declarer was delighted to find that East produced the nine. South came back to his hand with the ace of trumps and ran the eight of clubs. When East showed out as expected, twelve tricks were there.

The other declarer took a slightly different, perhaps even better, line of play. Since East had long diamonds, he rated to be short in the other suits. So declarer won the trump shift in dummy at trick two, came back to his hand with the nine of trumps and took the club finesse. When that held, he cashed the ace of clubs and then started to run his trumps. From dummy declarer discarded a club.

When declarer led his last trump, West was down to four hearts and the king of clubs. Since he knew that declarer had the jack of clubs, West had to hold the king. He reluctantly parted with a heart, in the hope that his partner had the king. But it was not to be. Dummy's remaining club was ditched, and four hearts brought declarer's trick total to twelve.

Where a man can have an island to himself

ALEXANDRIA BAY, N.Y. (AP) — "No man is an island," wrote the Elizabethan poet John Donne, who never visited the Thousand Islands.

One of his contemporaries did, however, a Frenchman named Samuel de Champlain. He realized right off that if no man was an island, there were enough of them in the St. Lawrence River for a man to have one all to himself.

LaSalle, Marquette, Joliet, Cadillac and a couple of other Frenchmen important enough to have colleges, penitentiaries and limousines named after them came canoeing by, and before you know it, Millionaire's Row blossomed with ornate mansions on these pink granite outcroppings where the Huron and the Iroquois used to stage their war games.

The novelist James Fenimore Cooper helped give the Thousand Islands a good press, even if no one in those romantic times was very good at counting. Actually, if you go by the two trees rule that the locals use for defining a valid island among these remnants of the Ice Age, the 40-mile-long assortment should be known as the Two Thousand Islands, give or take a few in the wash of a passing jumbo oil tanker.

THE INDIANS, BEFORE they chose the wrong side in the French and Indian War and were chased off, called them "The Garden of the Great Spirit," which still had a nice ring to it in Prohibition days when great amounts of spirits were hustled from island to island, depending on the way the boundary line between Canada and the United States bounced back and forth in the St. Lawrence.

By a treaty signed in 1822, the islands were pretty evenly divided between the two countries, with those on the American side being assigned to Jefferson County in New York State. Less than 150 years ago, you could have bought the whole batch of New York State's islands for $3,000 from a real estate speculator named Col. Elisha Camp. That, of course, was before the automobiles named for LaSalle and Cadillac were invented, and honeymooners discovered the charm of the cool nights and the chance to get away from it all on a bona fide fantasy island.

One chap who spent his honeymoon on an uninhabited, underdeveloped island in the middle of the St. Lawrence paid the Canadian government a million dollars to keep it that way, save for the cross he erected in his wife's memory when she died soon after the wedding.

Tourist boat guides now boom out the details of the memorial cross over their loudspeakers, along with the other sad, romantic tales that seem to hover over these islands like the river mists.

There is Boldt Castle, a tremendous pile of pink stone and imposing arches and turrets that George Boldt, who managed the old Waldorf Astoria Hotel, had built on Heart Island, shaped like a heart, for his wife, but abandoned when construction was only half finished, because of her untimely death.

There are the fine Edwardian mansions erected on adjoining islands by two New York department store magnates, who went down on the Titanic.

RAND OF THE RAND McNALLY map people has an island all to himself, as does one of the big guns at Reader's Digest. One island belongs to Yale University, which is doing research into honeymooners or island fever or the life cycle of sturgeon in the St. Lawrence or something.

HUGH MULLIGAN

My favorite among the two thousand is Zavikon, which is actually a pair of islands with the international boundary located in the narrow channel between them. The one on the north flies the Maple Leaf flag, while the other is under the Stars and Stripes, and both are joined by what is touted to be the world's shortest international bridge, a wooden arch that looks like it belongs to the stage set of "The Mikado."

I'm also partial to an island called Just Room Enough, which has just room enough for the requisite two trees, a red shingled cottage and three deck chairs. This island paradise has no lawn to mow, hedges to trim or garden to weed.

Most of the islands have simple pretty names: Deer Island, Jewel Island, Ivy Lea, Fairyland, Devil's Oven, Castle Rest, Stave Island, Comfort Island — not the sort of names that would blight the landscape if a real estate developer got hold of this scattering of wooded islands, which gets the St. Lawrence off to such a splendid scenic start on its mighty surge from Lake Ontario to the Atlantic Ocean. The island scene is picture postcard perfect with great mansions with wraparound porches, gingerbread boat houses and tiny U.S. and Canadian customs posts.

People who live year round in the Thousand Islands seem to think big, in four digits at least. St. Cyril of Alexandria Roman Catholic Church, which serves parishioners on the U.S. side of the river boundary, has in its Chapel of Our Lady, just to the right of the main altar, the largest collection of toy frogs anywhere in Christendom.

The stuffed amphibia, which may now outnumber these islands, are available for children to touch and toss about during Mass. It keeps the urchins from crying during sermons by Father James Meehan, the pastor, who started collecting the frogs seven years ago, and takes the adults' minds off the second collection. Kermit the Frog, in Alexandria Bay anyway, is definitely a Catholic.

St. Cyril, by the way, was not a Thousand Islander. He was a stern fifth century bishop of Alexandria, Egypt, a theologian and doctor of the church, who might have had trouble assimilating a thousand frogs into the liturgy. But then, he lived in the Dark Ages, before anyone thought of adding ketchup and chives to mayonnaise and flogging it to the tourists as Thousand Island dressing.

Anyone interested in having an island to him or herself can pick up one in this group flying a "for sale" sign for a mere $50,000. It contains at least a dozen trees, the chimney and foundation of a burned down mansion, a teetering, crumbling dance hall and a fine view of the 700-foot-long ore and oil boats playing the main channel of the St. Lawrence Seaway. In winter, when the ice is 40 feet thick, you can walk on it. And soon you may be able to in the summer, too, if that next Ice Age, which all the natives are predicting and preparing for, gets here. Then there might be a whole new batch of islands up for grabs.

Harvest Fest set in Irvine

Just like in that melancholy song, Irvine's Harvest Festival to be staged this weekend, will be shined on by a harvest moon.

The "Old Farmer's Almanac" says the full moon appearing on the horizon Saturday evening will be the legendary harvest moon.

However, the reaping taking place this weekend won't be so much in agricultural fields as in the festival booths at Heritage Park, where local artisans, organizations and service clubs expect to profit selling everything from crafts to corn on the cob to craziness.

Festival Chairman Tim Parker said 160 booths have been rented this year, 15 more than in the 1981 event that drew about 35,000 spectators. More are expected this year if the weather is pleasant, he said.

So far, he added, weather reports indicate that skies might be clear enough to see the man in the moon.

"It is supposed to be clear and beautiful through Friday. We'll have to wait and see after that," he said Tuesday.

The festival begins with gates opening at 6 p.m. Friday after local dignitaries gather for a ribbon cutting. Gates close the first night at 11 p.m.

The festival runs from 9 a.m. to midnight Saturday and from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. Sunday.

Admission is $1 for adults, 50 cents for senior citizens and spectators aged 12 to 18. Those aged 11 or less will be admitted free.

Volunteers began this week erecting a fence around the festival grounds and spreading the first layer of sawdust as a ground cover. The festivities actually began last Friday when more than 300 people attended the annual Harvest Moon Ball at the Registry Hotel.

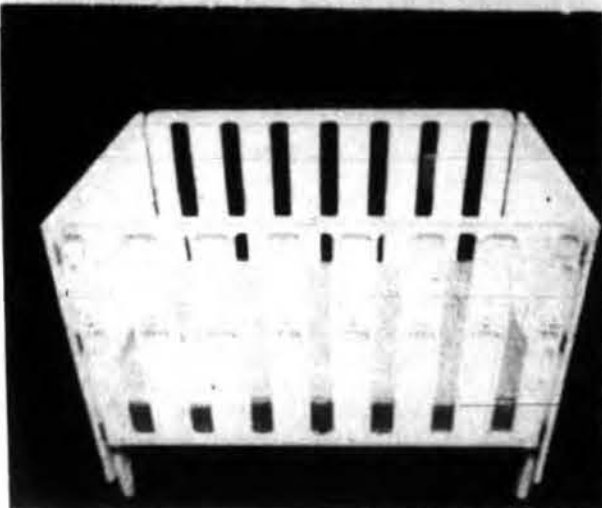

Established a decade ago for local artists to display their works, the festival has evolved into an event that this year will offer more than 100 arts and crafts booths, 41 others selling food and drink and 16 offering games.

Now administered by a volunteer board of directors, the festival has become a key fund-raising activity for many organizations.

The Soroptimist Club of Irvine is defending champion of the clubs; the Orange County Fire Department also is out to defend its title. The high school competition will be new this year.

On Saturday, the Irvine Chamber of Commerce will host a $2.25-per-person pancake breakfast at the Heritage Park Teen Center from 7 a.m. to 11 a.m.

The Ebell Club of Irvine will hold a live auction at 1 p.m. Sunday, also at the teen center.

Danger of Starlighter baby cribs demonstrated: When top rail is folded down (above), child could get neck trapped in section.

Starlighter cribs said safety peril

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Consumer Product Safety Commission has warned parents to stop using "Starlighter" baby cribs, which the commission said could pose a safety hazard.

About 1,000 of the plastic cribs were sold between 1975 and 1978 by Contemporary Times Inc., of St. Petersburg, Fla., which is undergoing a federal bankruptcy proceeding, the commission said.

When the top rail of the crib is folded down, the bottom section presents a picket fence appearance and a child could get its neck trapped in this section, the commission warned. The agency reported that one infant died in such a situation.

Owners of the cribs should immediately stop using them, said the commission.

People needing more information can contact the commission, toll-free, by calling 800-638-8326. In Maryland, the number is 800-492-8363; in Alaska, Hawaii, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands, 800-638-8333.

Legends

Cuauhtemoc (pronounced Kwou-TAY-mock) is Mexico's oldest and largest brewery, named in honor of the last Aztec emperor, Cuauhtemoc. Since 1890, the Cuauhtemoc breweries have been producing beers that have become legends the world over.

Brisa Light. Mexico's only true light beer. Golden in color, Brisa has real import flavor, yet only 90 calories per 11 oz. bottle.

Bohemia. One of the world's finest lager beers, Bohemia has a crisp, clean, full-bodied taste and a rich golden color.

Carta Blanca Dark Special. A rich, amber colored beer with a smooth, mellow, satisfying flavor and no bitter aftertaste.

Carta Blanca. Mexico's great traditional lager beer. Carta Blanca has been winning gold medals and delighting beer drinkers around the world since 1893.

Tecate. Topped with lemon and salt, Tecate is a taste sensation. No wonder it's the largest selling imported canned beer throughout the United States.

When you think of the world's great beers, remember the five great beers from Mexico—the legends of Cuauhtemoc.

More than just a home

For the good of the Children's Hospital of Orange County, Dr. Barton Blinder and his family have agreed to move out of their custom-built home on Harbor Ridge in Newport Beach.

It's not like the Blinder family won't be back, because it will. It's just that the former Philadelphians have agreed to let their 9,000-square-foot home be used for a month to raise money for the hospital.

Sponsored by the Newport Harbor Jaycees, the home has been decorated by 20 leading interior designers and the results can be viewed every day through Oct. 26 except on Mondays.

The house, even without the decorators, is a work of art. It has a circular, two-story library off a large living room, quarters for guests and a maid, indoor sauna, jacuzzi and steamroom and five bedrooms.

The house at 23 Ridgeline Dr. has seven fireplaces and its interior is largely oak with oak parquet flooring.

Designed with Philadelphia-style, the house features a stone exterior with a massive curved staircase and formal chandelier in the entry.

The work of the interior decorators was added to all of this and is the centerpiece of the month-long viewing.

And when the Blinder family returns home next month, it will have first crack at purchasing the added items such as rugs and wall hangings.

Tickets to see the so-called "house of design" are $6.50 in advance or $7.50 if purchased at the Harbor Ridge sales office at 19 Harbor Ridge Dr.

Call 675-9333 or 997-4818 for more information.

Incumbents lead in campaign cost sweepstakes

Most expensive election race involves non-incumbents Barbaro and Royce

By JEFF ADLER
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Incumbents in Orange Coast legislative districts — be they Democrat or Republican — are winning the fund-raising and campaign-spending sweepstakes, the latest batch of financial disclosure statements filed with election authorities shows.

But even though state Senate and Assembly incumbents are collecting and dispersing campaign monies faster than their challengers, the most expensive Orange Coast legislative race is a battle between two non-incumbents, Democrat Frank Barbaro and Republican Edward Royce, for the 32nd District state Senate seat.

Barbaro, a Garden Grove attorney, tops the list with contributions totaling $250,318 and expenditures totaling $269,901, according to his financial disclosure statement filed with the Orange County Registrar of Voters Office.

For the latest filing period, between July 1 and Sept. 17, Barbaro reported cash receipts of $38,620 and expenditures totaling $77,644.

He reported having $8,648 at the close of the reporting period and a total campaign deficit of $115,599, according to the report.

Royce, his GOP opponent for the central Orange County Senate seat, reported expenditures totaling $82,576 on receipts of $174,324. For the latest disclosure period, Royce said he received $92,448 in cash contributions and spent $22,501.

Royce's financial disclosure report also shows an ending balance for the July-September reporting period of $57,517 with $83,217 in cash on-hand.

Both candidates reported receiving cash contributions from a host of California trade associations and political action committees.

Barbaro reported contributions from the California Cable TV Association, $1,250; California State Employees Association, $5,000; California Teachers Association, $4,000; and the California Trial Lawyers Association, $10,000 through the close of the period.

ELECTION 82

His statement also shows that he received a $3,300 loan from Democratic activist and wealthy south county landowner Richard O'Neill, bringing the total of O'Neill's loans to the campaign to $26,300.

Contributors to Royce's campaign effort include: Aminoil USA, $800; California Real Estate PAC, $5,000; California Republican Party, $10,000; Farm PAC, $2,500; Fluor Corp., $1,000; Fund for Insurance Education, $3,000; Orange County Lincoln Club, $15,000; United for California, $25,000; and Karl Karcher Enterprises, $1,000.

Following is a listing of contributions and expenditures in other districts encompassing Chancellor and Mrs. Daniel Aldrich entertained 240 members of UCI Town and Gown recently in the University House to begin the group's 1982-83 season.

Advisory board members acting as hostesses for the coffee were Mary Glass, Vivian Harvey, Suzanne McBrien, Helen McGeen, Rae Jean Ryan, Gerrie Shank and Paula Van Eden. France Campbell and her committee provided the refreshments.

The university support group has over 800 members with 22 interest groups. Joan Rowland is president.

LAGUNA CATHEDRAL: The Guinness Book of Records lists the Cathedral of St. Francis By-the-Sea as the smallest cathedral in the world, says Nancy Kreder. The American Catholic church seats 45.

A recent party honored one of the members, Karl Kreder, who was celebrating his 75th birthday and at the same time served as a fund-raiser to purchase an organ.

The event which featured an outdoor Mass of Thanksgiving, social hour and a potluck dinner, took place at the home of the Rev. Thomas Allen in Laguna Niguel.

Before his retirement, Kreder worked for a

South leaders gather

More than 100 ranking executives, volunteers and educators are to meet Oct. 9 in what might be the first major community leadership seminar in south Orange County.

The event, called Leadership Saddleback, has been designed by Saddleback College administrators to stimulate an ongoing effort to enhance grass roots leadership in the south county communities.

Saddleback College Trustee Robert Price said the seminar, to be held at the Mission Viejo Country Club, is the first of what could become a year-long series of meetings.

"The objective of Leadership Saddleback is to develop strengthened community leadership by providing selective participants from diverse backgrounds with the knowledge and understanding of the total community and its many facets," Price explained.

Among participants will be newly-appointed Saddleback College Chancellor Dr. Larry Stevens, Irvine City Manager William Woollett and Mission Viejo businesswoman Margaret Pottenger.

Also to participate are Linda Turner, head of the Saddleback Regional Chamber of Commerce, and UC Irvine administrator James Dunning, president of Orange County Arts Alliance.

Co-sponsors for the event with the college are the Mission Viejo Company, the Saddleback Area Coordinating Council and Laguna Hills Community Association.

Parents to study infancy

"What Now?" or "Everything You Always Wanted To Know About Kids But Were Afraid To Ask," is the title of the parent education program beginning on Oct. 6.

Sponsored by St. Joseph Hospital and the Orange County Chapter of the March of Dimes, the classes will meet on three Wednesdays from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m., at the Assistance League of Orange Chapter House, 124 South Orange, in the city of Orange.

There is no fee but reservations are recommended. Further information can be obtained by phoning 631-8700, 553-0881 or 633-9111, Ext. 7246.

CORRECTION
On Page 8 of the Sears advertising section appearing in this newspaper on Sunday, Sept. 26th, there is an advertisement for "Men's Fleeced Active Wear." The copy incorrectly reads: "Sweat shirt and pants. Several colors, S-KL, Reg. $8.99 ea." The correct copy is: "Sweat shirt or pants. Several colors, S-XL, Reg. $8.99 ea." The sale price of 2 for $10 is correct. We sincerely regret this error.

Barbara Williams has been named manager of the Santa Ana-Bristol branch of Home Savings of America, 3666 S. Bristol St. in the Bristol Town and Country Plaza.

Williams joined Home in 1976 as an operations officer at the Westminster branch. She previously was with Coral Gables Federal Savings and Loan in Coral Gables, Fla. and Huntington National Bank in Columbus, Ohio.

Finn Claudi-Magnussen of Mission Viejo has been promoted to marketing manager for Fluorocarbon Company's Rubber Group.

Prior to his new appointment, he served as vice president and sales and marketing manager for the company's Reeves Rubber Division which has its main plant in San Clemente, and a second production facility in Birmingham, Ala. He joined Reeves in 1971 after being in executive marketing positions for 14 years.

Howard K. Barlow of Corona del Mar and David B. Mayberry of Huntington Beach are members of New York Life Insurance Company's 1982 President's Council, which includes the top 8 percent of the company's 8,500 agents in the United States and Canada.

President's Council members qualify to attend a five-day educational conference at Palm Springs. Membership is based on 1981-82 sales performance. Both are associated with the company's Orange general office.

She is a graduate of Cal State Los Angeles and received her public accounting experience from Alexander Grant & Co. in Los Angeles.

Catherine S. Shea has been named senior vice president of the savings division and John L. Auletta senior vice president of loan division for Westwood Savings and Loan Association.

She is a former assistant vice president of Far West Savings & Loan Association in Newport Beach. Auletta is a former assistant vice president at Sate Mutual Savings & Loan Association in Newport Beach.

TI plans layoffs

DALLAS (AP) — Texas Instruments Inc., one of the world's largest makers of semiconductors, says it will lay off another 2,600 workers this fall, bringing to nearly 10,000 the number of employees furloughed in the last two years.

Company Vice President Norman Neureiter said that the layoffs would be spread among many of the diversified electronics concern's 50 plants around the world.

Opera star challenge to director

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

HOLLYWOOD Franklin Schaffner, a filmmaker accustomed to directing army divisions and revolutionary mobs, wanted to find a different kind of movie and he succeeded.

It's called "Yes, Giorgio." The star is Luciano Pavarotti, the wide opera tenor, who engages in a romantic fling with pencil-slim Kathryn Harrold.

Such a plot, as well as a sprinkling of operatic arias, would seem a risky bet in today's youth-oriented, rock-conscious film market.

MGM has high hopes for the $12.4 million musical and gave it a careful release, opening first in five major cities before spreading across the country last week.

"That's a wise move," says Schaffner. "I think the Pavarotti fans will flock to the picture when it opens, then it will have to prove itself with the wide audience." (The movie has not received favorable reviews, despite Schaffner's optimism.)

The director's association with "Yes, Giorgio" began two years ago when he was searching for "something different" after the ill-fated "Sphinx." Having directed such large-scale films as "Planet of the Apes," "Patton," "Nicholas and Alexandra," "Papillon" and "The Boys from Brazil," he seemed typed.

"I was looking for a romance or comedy, perhaps with music, a political allegory or a western," he said. "MGM had already signed Pavarotti, and Norman Steinberg had written a script. I asked my agent, George Chasin, to call David Begelman (then MGM production chief). The studio sent a script and we had a meeting in which everyone seemed satisfied. I offered my services."

Schaffner hadn't directed anything musical since 1950s live television, and he had a crash education in reading scores, meanwhile working with Steinberg on the script.

The director's first meeting with Pavarotti took place at a lunch with eight of their advisers.

"Luciano said, 'Let's take a walk.' He was very frank and open and scared," he said. "I reassured him, and when we finished talking he said, 'I think I can do it, let's trust each other.'"

Schaffner had no armies to direct, but the logistics of "Yes, Giorgio" were awesome: a concert for 100,000 plus at Hatch Shell in Boston; a performance of "Turandot" at the Metropolitan Opera; a concert in San Francisco, plus locations in the Napa Valley and a seacoast town in Italy.

Pavarotti had canceled all engagements for three months last summer so he could make the film. Just as production started in Boston, the threat of a Directors Guild strike loomed. If "Yes, Giorgio" had to be postponed, it would have taken two years for the singer to clear his schedule again.

"We were calling the Guild every night for news of the strike," said Schaffner. "Fortunately for us it didn't happen."

The director found Pavarotti to be "a true professional — he knows to what edge he can go before it becomes unbelievable." He consented to Schaffner's suggestion to drop the handkerchief that has become the singer's trademark in concerts.

Kathryn Harrold, Luciano Pavarotti and Eddie Albert get together after recent screening of "Yes, Giorgio."

Booking suit reinstated

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A federal appeals court has reinstated part of an antitrust suit involving broadcast rights to the television programs "Bonanza" and "The High Chaparral."

The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled recently that Aurora Enterprises Inc. and Xanadu Productions Inc., which developed the two series, could bring a claim in Los Angeles federal court involving "block booking."

The practice forces buyers of television syndication packages to purchase all the shows offered in that package, regardless of their quality. The companies claimed the practice hurts profits.

In 1972, the Federal Communications Commission ordered the three major networks to stop syndicating shows. NBC, which aired "Bonanza" from 1959 through 1973, and "Chaparral" from 1968 through 1971, sold all syndication rights to the programs to National Telefilm Associates Inc.

However, NBC and the two production companies retained a share of the profits.

U.S. District Judge A. Wallace Tashima of Los Angeles dismissed all federal claims, but the appeal court said Tashima should reconsider state law claims.

The plaintiffs said marketing activities were "done with the specific intent of obtaining a monopoly in television production, distribution and programming in general and on the NBC television network."

Hug helped tense time

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Carol Channing recalls when she and Pearl Bailey were building up the tension for their television special, ready to perform at full tilt, when a camera broke down.

They were on the brink of frustration, said Channing, who recently finished in a revival of "Hello, Dolly," at the Music Center's Dorothy Chandler Pavilion, a role she and Bailey played on Broadway.

Bailey said to her, "Now, honey, your father was a minister and my father was a minister, and they're standing here with their arms around us, and we're going to relax and we're going to through this just fine."

Channing said, "So we stood there with our arms around each other, and that's how we got through it. That's how keyed up we were."

Mancini 'stars'

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Composer Henry Mancini, 58, who won Oscars for such movie themes as "Moon River" and "The Days of Wine and Roses," recently had his star planted in Hollywood's Walk of Fame.

It was the 1,754th brass star to be cemented into the Hollywood Boulevard sidewalk honoring movie, TV and recording artists and technicians, said Hollywood Chamber of Commerce spokeswoman Monique Moss.

Alcoholism, housewife prostitution get sensitive treatment

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer

Viewers tonight can choose a movie about female alcoholism on CBS or housewife prostitution on ABC. Both treat sensitive subjects in a serious way, but ABC's "Money on the Side" deserves special attention.

"Money on the Side" is a forthright depiction of how three suburban women get tangled in a web of body-selling. The film never opts for cheap, sordid exhibitionism. (Air time is at 9 on channel 7.)

In fact, it takes great pains to avoid it. There's nothing close to a sex scene, nor is any violence shown, although brutality is a major element in the plot line. This lifestyle is not glamorized.

Over on CBS, channel 2 at 9, Carol Burnett stars in "Life of the Party: The Story of Beatrice," a dramatization based on the activities of Beatrice O'Reilly, a former alcoholic who founded the first recovery house for women in Los Angeles.

"Beatrice" is good — but standard — entertainment. It's the small-scale, inspirational story that TV does well — and often. The protagonist comes to grips with a problem in the first hour, then surmounts it, against various obstacles and odds, just before the credits.

Miss Burnett's interest in this topic is well known. Her parents were alcoholics, and she won a much-publicized libel suit against the National Enquirer, which had reported — inaccurately — that she was drunk in public.

In the beginning, Miss Burnett's bitchy drunk characterization seems too close to her cloying Eunice character. This makes the personality less person and more caricature. Later, though, after being rescued by Alcoholics Anonymous, Miss Burnett brings more vital reality to Beatrice, the crusader.

"I've been trouble all my life," Beatrice says, explaining why she takes chances on strung-out women.

None of the women in "Money on the Side" seems as superficially desperate, but an intelligent script provides plausible motivations for their behavior. One weakness is that the conversion from housewife to hooker happens too easily.

Karen Valentine has the girl-next-door look, giving the issue some common-woman identification. She becomes a prostitute because her son is apparently brain-damaged and in need of special, costly schooling. Her husband minimizes his son's troubles. He's also having trouble making the mortgage payments.

Carol Burnett and Lloyd Bridges star in "Life of the Party: The story of Beatrice."

Starch blockers
redefined as drugs . . . C6

Beef Burgundy, accompanied by Lemon Pilaf, is the elegant entree for a romantic dinner for two. Dessert is equally rich — a Chocolate Almond Mousse served in your best crystal.

Cooking for two — elegant but easy

When you want to give that special someone the "red carpet treatment," make this elegant meal for two. Your partner will be impressed with its delectable taste, and you'll be amazed at its simplicity!

In Beef Burgundy for Two, tenderloin steaks simmer in minutes to perfection in a sassy sauce made with a single-serving envelope of instant onion soup mix. Delicately seasoned rice is the ideal accompaniment as Lemon Pilaf.

Chocolate Almond Mousse, easily prepared with unflavored gelatine, is the luscious finale to a most memorable evening.

BEEF BURGUNDY FOR TWO

- 2 tenderloin steaks (4 oz. ea.)*
- Bacon slices (optional)
- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine
- 1/2 cup sliced mushrooms
- 1 envelope instant onion soup mix
- 1 tablespoon finely chopped parsley
- 1 1/2 teaspoons all-purpose flour
- 1/2 cup water
- 1/4 cup dry red wine
- 1 teaspoon lemon juice
- 1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce

Wrap steak with bacon; secure with string.

In medium skillet, melt butter and brown steaks 2 minutes on each side. Add mushrooms and cook until mushrooms are tender. Add instant onion soup mix, parsley and flour blended with water, wine, lemon juice, and Worcestershire sauce.

Simmer, turning steaks occasionally, 8 minutes or until tender. Serve, if desired, with hot cooked julienne cut vegetables. Makes 2 servings.

LEMON PILAF

- 2 teaspoons butter or margarine
- 1/2 cup sliced celery
- 1/4 cup sliced green onions, including tops
- 1 cup cooked rice
- 1 teaspoon grated lemon peel
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- Dash ground black pepper

In small saucepan melt butter over medium heat. Add celery and onions and cook until tender but not brown. Stir in remaining ingredients and continue cooking over low heat until thoroughly heated. Makes 2 servings.

CHOCOLATE ALMOND MOUSSE

- 1 envelope unflavored gelatine
- 3 tablespoons sugar
- 2 tablespoons unsweetened cocoa powder
- 1 1/2 cups milk
- 2 tablespoons almond liqueur or 1/4 teaspoon almond extract
- 1/2 cup whipping or heavy cream, whipped

In medium saucepan, mix unflavored gelatine, sugar and cocoa powder; blend in milk. Let stand 1 minute. Stir over low heat until gelatine is completely dissolved, about 5 minutes. Stir in liqueur.

Pour into large bowl and chill, stirring occasionally, until mixture mounds slightly when dropped from spoon. Fold in whipped cream. Turn into dessert dishes or 2-cup bowl; chill until set. Garnish, if desired, with additional whipped cream and almonds. Makes 4 servings.

Variations on the theme of chicken and rice

Easy skillet rice dinners that combine the protein of meat, poultry and fish with vegetables and the important carbohydrates of rice into delectable dishes are ideal.

MEDITERRANEAN CHICKEN RICE SKILLET

- 1 clove garlic, sliced
- 2 tablespoons olive oil
- 2 1/2 to 3 pound chicken, cut up
- 2 1/4 cups water
- 1 cup rice
- 3 chicken bouillon cubes, crushed
- 1 teaspoon oregano
- 1 bay leaf
- 1 large tomato, cut in thin wedges
- 1 can (3 3/4 ounces) pitted ripe olives, drained (optional)

Lightly brown garlic in olive oil in 12-inch skillet. Add chicken pieces; brown well. Drain fat. Add water, rice, bouillon cubes, oregano and bay leaf; stir. Bring to a boil. Reduce heat, cover and simmer until chicken is tender and liquid is absorbed, about 30 minutes. Salt to taste. Top with tomato wedges and, if desired, olives. Makes 5 servings.

PIZZERIA

RICE SKILLET

- 1 can (16 ounces) stewed tomatoes
- 1 cup rice
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon oregano
- leaves
- 1/2 cup Parmesan cheese, grated
- 1 package wieners or beef franks, cut into 1/2-inch pieces
- 1/4 cup chopped green pepper
- 1 teaspoon seasoned salt
- 1/2 cup shredded mozzarella cheese, or to taste.

Drain tomatoes, reserving juice. Add water to juice to make 2 1/2 cups liquid. Bring liquid to boil in 10-inch skillet. Stir in rice, tomatoes, salt and oregano. Cover tightly and simmer 20 minutes. Stir in Parmesan cheese, wieners, green pepper and seasoned salt. Heat through. Sprinkle shredded mozzarella cheese over top. Remove from heat. Let stand covered until liquid is absorbed, about 5 minutes. Makes 6 servings.

Easy-to-fix Mediterranean Chicken Rice Skillet recalls the sunny flavors of Italy and Greece with economical, plentiful chicken.

Chicken and rice, that world-famous combination for economical meals, can be made into some very interesting dishes.

How about a casserole that you can cut and serve in squares?

BREEZY CHICKEN CASSEROLE

- 3 cups cooked rice
- 3 cups coarsely chopped cooked chicken
- 2 cups soft bread crumbs
- 3 eggs, slightly beaten
- 1/4 cup chicken broth
- 1/2 cup chopped green pepper
- 1/2 cup chopped onion
- 1/2 cup chopped celery
- 1/2 teaspoon celery salt
- 1/4 teaspoon garlic salt
- 2 cans (10 3/4 oz. each) condensed cream of mushroom soup
- 1/2 cup milk
- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine
- 2 tablespoons chopped pimiento
- 1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce

Combine rice, chicken, crumbs, eggs, broth, vegetables, salts, and 1 can of soup. Turn into a buttered 2-quart casserole. Bake at 350 degrees for 50 minutes or until set. Combine remaining ingredients in a small saucepan and heat. Top serving of casserole with sauce. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

BREEZY CHICKEN CASSEROLE

(Microwave Method)

Combine rice, chicken, crumbs, eggs, broth, vegetables, salts, and 1 can of soup. Turn into a shallow, round, 2-quart microproof dish. Cover and cook on HIGH (maximum power) 9 minutes, or until hot, rotating dish 1/4 turn every 3 minutes. Remove from oven; set aside. Combine remaining ingredients in a 2-cup measure. Cook on HIGH 3 to 4 minutes, or until heated through. Top serving of casserole with sauce.

Each serving provides: for 6 servings: 459 calories, 3 meat exchanges, 2 1/2 bread exchanges, 3 fat exchanges, some milk.

When Breezy Chicken Casserole is cut in squares, it doesn't even seem like a casserole. It's attractive enough to serve to company.

Soup season starts with stockpot from garden

By BARBARA GIBBONS

The first cool evenings of autumn suggest soup. Luckily, the start of the soup season corresponds neatly with the end of the growing season, when Mother Nature's stockpot is a harvest of garden goodies, all low in calories. Here are some pleasingly light ideas to try:

STEAK LOVERS' MEAL-SIZE SOUP

1 pound lean fat-trimmed beef round steak (or flank steak)
3 onions, chopped
6 cups water, divided
3 potatoes, pared and cubed
2 cups shredded cabbage
2 cups coarsely chopped carrots
1 1/2 cups slant-sliced celery
1/4 cup red wine
2 small bay leaves salt (or garlic salt) pepper, to taste optional: 2 teaspoons fresh (or half-teaspoon dried) thyme leaves optional: 1 cup thinly sliced mushrooms
Spray a large nonstick pot (or pressure cooker) with cooking spray. Brown the steak on both sides, with no fat added. Remove steak to a cutting board. Drain and discard any fat from pot.
Combine the onions with 2 tablespoons water; cook and stir until onions begin to brown in pot. Add remaining ingredients, except mushrooms if using, and heat to boiling.

Meanwhile, slice steak very thinly against the grain into wafer-thin strips. Then, slice the strips into bite-size pieces and add them to the soup. Cover and simmer 1 hour (or 20 minutes under pressure, according to pressure cooker manufacturer's directions).

Add mushrooms and simmer uncovered, 5 minutes. Makes six meal-size servings, approximately 200 calories each.

SPAGHETTI AND MEATBALL SOUP

1/2 pound extra-lean ground beef

Pasta — the great extender

You don't have to be Italian to love pasta or to realize that it's an excellent budget stretcher. As the great extender, it combines well with almost everything, absorbing the flavors of sauce, cheese, vegetables, meats and other "add-to's."

Here's a suggestion: try the convenience of a complete package spaghetti dinner which contains spaghetti, grated cheese and spaghetti sauce with meat. Use a relatively inexpensive basic meat such as short ribs, which are long on flavor, and cook in the rich spaghetti sauce. . . wow, what a combination! Add your pasta from the package as an extender and you have a rich, satisfying inexpensive meal for healthy appetites.

SNAPPY SHORT RIBS

2 packets (.14 oz. or 4 g each) seasoning and broth
1 pound beef short ribs
1 tablespoon vegetable shortening
1 cup chopped onions
1 cup sliced carrots
1 package spaghetti dinner with meat sauce

Sprinkle seasoning packets over beef short ribs. In 1 tablespoon vegetable shortening brown ribs quickly over high heat; reduce heat. Saute onions and carrots, add spaghetti sauce from package; cover, simmer for 45 minutes to 1 hour until fork tender. 15 minutes before ribs are finished, prepare spaghetti according to package directions. Drain spaghetti, arrange ribs in sauce over it; sprinkle with cheese from package. Serves four.

(fat-trimmed ground round)
1 onion, chopped
1 cup water, divided
6 cups tomato juice
1/4 cup dry red or white wine
4 ounces dry vermicelli (thin spaghetti), broken
1 bell pepper, minced
1 carrot, shredded
2 tablespoons minced fresh parsley
2 teaspoons minced fresh basil or oregano (or teaspoon each), or pinch of dried mixed Italian herbs optional: small clove garlic, minced (or pinch of instant garlic)

2 vine-ripe tomatoes, cut in cubes optional: 2 tablespoons shredded Parmesan (or Romano) cheese Spray a large nonstick skillet or electric frypan with cooking spray. Shape meat into tiny meatballs with a melonballer. Brown the meatballs with no fat added, turning to brown evenly. Drain and discard any fat in pan. Stir in onion and 2 tablespoons water, until onion begins to brown. Add tomato juice, wine and remaining water; heat to boiling. Stir in broken-up vermicelli, a little at a time. Stir in vegetables, except fresh tomatoes, and herbs. Simmer until vermicelli is tender, about 10 minutes. Stir in tomato cubes and heat through. Sprinkle with cheese, if desired. Makes four main-course servings, under 300 calories each; cheese adds about 10 calories per serving.

SLIM GOURMET

HOT OR COLD SALAD SOUP
4 cups tomato juice
1/2 cup chopped celery (or red and green bell pepper)
1/2 cup coarsely shredded unpared carrot
1/2 cup diced unpared zucchini (or cucumber)
1/2 cup sliced raw mushrooms (or green beans)
1/4 to 1/2 cup chopped

1 tablespoon minced fresh parsley
1 teaspoon minced fresh herbs (or pinch each: dried basil, thyme, savory, oregano, marjoram), or to taste
2 tablespoons regular (or low-fat) Italian salad dressing.
For cold soup: combine ingredients and chill thoroughly before serving.
For crunchy, hot soup: heat tomato juice to boiling. Stir in vegetables and continue to heat just until boiling point is reached. Stir in fresh herbs and salad dressing. Serve hot (garnish with croutons, if desired).

Makes four large servings soup, 110 calories each; or eight small servings, 55 calories each (with alternative ingredients, 90 calories per large serving, 45 calories per small serving).

Bean and Apple Casserole

How to feed a crowd and save the budget

Looking for an inexpensive way to entertain your family and friends? Plan a crowd-pleasing meal that is tasty and easy on your budget, too.

Instead of going out for dinner, invite your friends in for a special main-dish treat that beats high food prices.

BEAN AND APPLE CASSEROLE
1 1/2 pounds pork sausage, cut into 1-inch pieces
2 cups chopped onion
2 cloves garlic, minced
4 cans (16 ounces each) pork and beans in tomato sauce
1/2 cup tomato juice
2 teaspoons chili powder
1 1/2 teaspoons salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper
2 large apples, pared, cored and thickly sliced
6 cups hot, cooked rice
1 cup sour cream
1/2 cup chopped scallions

In a large skillet cook sausage until evenly browned. Using a slotted spoon, transfer to a Dutch Oven. Pour off all but 2 tablespoons fat. Add onion and garlic to skillet and saute 5 minutes. Add onion mixture, beans, tomato juice, chili powder, salt, and pepper to sausage. Simmer over medium heat 10 minutes, stirring often. Stir in apples and continue to cook for 10 minutes more or until apples are tender. Serve over rice with a dollop of sour cream and a sprinkling of chopped scallions.

Makes 10-12 servings.

MICHIGAN NAVY BEAN MINESTRONE SOUP
1 pound (2 cups) dry, navy beans
3 quarts water
4 tablespoons oil
3/4 cup finely chopped carrots
1/2 cup finely chopped onion
1/2 cup finely chopped celery
1 clove garlic, minced
2 1/2 cups diced zucchini
1 package (10 ounces) frozen cut green beans, thawed
1 ham hock
2 beef bouillon cubes
1 teaspoon basil
1/2 teaspoon each salt and oregano
1/4 teaspoon pepper
1 can (28 ounces) whole tomatoes, drained
1/2 cup pastina macaroni

Place navy beans in large soup pot with water. Bring to a boil; boil 2 minutes; remove from heat and let stand 1 hour.

Meanwhile, heat oil in a large soup pot. Add carrots, onion, celery, and garlic. Saute until vegetables are tender, about 5 minutes. Stir in zucchini and green beans. Cook, stirring occasionally for 5 minutes.

Stir in navy beans and their soaking liquid, ham hock, bouillon, basil, salt, oregano and pepper. Cover, bring to a boil; reduce heat and simmer until beans are tender, about 1 hour.

Stir in tomatoes and pastina. Continue to simmer 30 minutes or until macaroni is tender. Remove ham hock, dice meat and return meat to soup. Serve with grated Parmesan cheese.

Makes 4 quarts.

Smart food shopping is a skill built upon knowledge of nutrition and the relative value of foods. Menu planning is the art of using all kinds of food products in creative ways. This art makes dining more interesting and food shopping more fun and economical. Here are some questions to test your shopping IQ:

1. Do you plan to use leftovers in meals in order to avoid waste?

If you begin to think of food as money — which it really is because you've paid good hard cash for it — the refrigerator becomes a "bank". Would you grind up dollar bills in your garbage disposal? Of course not. Yet, that is what you're doing if you're throwing away edible food.

Of course, don't eat anything which might be spoiled — your nose and eyes will tell you whether it's good to eat. There should be no such thing as "leftovers"; instead, you have "planned leftovers", with a plan in mind to use every scrap.

2. Do you plan your meals around what you already have on hand and make up a grocery list before going to the market?

Test your shopping IQ

Check your refrigerator, cupboard, and freezer. Make sure the foods on hand are used before they spoil. The key is rotating foods in and out of your storage areas through careful planning.

3. Do you plan meals with an eye to appetite and taste appeal as well as nutritional needs?

Remember that a touch of color perks up a meal. Consider colorful vegetables or fruits for garnishes, adding nutrition and value as well as eye appeal. Use raw as well as cooked foods for maximum effect.

A well-balanced meal contains two servings from the vegetable and fruit group, one choice from the protein foods (meat, fish, poultry, eggs, beans), one or two selections from the cereal group (bread, rice or other grains), and one selection from the dairy group (milk, cheese, ice cream).

4. Do you sometimes use less expensive proteins, such as eggs, milk products, beans and pastas in planning "meatless" meals?

These stretch your food dollars and provide wholesome nutrition.

5. Do you try new products occasionally to add variety to meal planning?

Variety is the key word in planning meals for proper nutritional balance. New products are often more convenient than older ones, an important consideration for those with limited time for meal preparation.

6. Do you eat before shopping and shop alone in order to avoid impulse buying?

It's hard to resist tempting foods when you're hungry. A spouse or a child can also persuade you to stray from the budget-wise shopping list.

7. Do you figure "cost per serving" when selecting foods and buy budget-priced meat cuts that can be used for more than one meal?

One of the best buys in the meat case is the chuck roast which can be cut into steaks, stir-fry strips, and stew meat.

8. Have you considered the savings in non-fat dry milk or cooked cereals which are highly nutritious at a lower cost per serving than ready-to-eat cereals?

There are many types of "exchanges" you can make to save money. Be sure to check seasonal best buys in the produce department and the best values in the meat case before making final buying decisions.

9. Do you buy only what you can use or store for a reasonable period of time?

When the pantry's too cluttered, you cannot be an efficient meal planner, and there is sure to be waste if foods are not rotated in the cupboard, refrigerator, and freezer.

"Yes" answers to these questions indicate a high shopping IQ. Any negative answers indicate areas where better inflation fighting can be done.

Economy dinners for six

Ground beef is a natural to be included in economical meals. If your ground beef dinners have been tasting the same, look to new flavor combinations to give them spark. Grated parmesan cheese, for instance, provides rich, robust cheese flavor with just a shake of the canister.

Soups and stews can be very soothing on a cold night, as well as a comfort to the pocketbook. Simply Good Stew takes a small amount of ground beef and stretches it to eight servings, with tomatoes, garbanzo beans, zucchini and onion.

This hearty minestrone-like stew simmers practically unattended, the ingredients blending for a tasty, easily prepared dinner. The zesty flavor of grated parmesan cheese, stirred in just before serving, adds great cheesy flavor for special interest.

A loaf of hot crusty Italian bread and a simple salad round out the meal. Remember to pass extra grated parmesan cheese at the table so everyone can add more to taste.

One meatless meal a week is a nice change of pace, as well as a money saver. Grated parmesan cheese added to Double Cheesy Macaroni gives this made-from-scratch macaroni and cheese an extra zesty flavor. Top with chopped tomato and additional cheese for extra taste appeal.

SIMPLY GOOD STEW

1 lb. ground beef
1 16-oz. can tomatoes
1 15 1/2 oz. can garbanzo beans, drained
2 medium zucchini, sliced
2 cups onion slices
1 cup white wine
2 tablespoons flour
1 teaspoon basil leaves
1 bay leaf
1/4 teaspoon salt
3/4 cup (3 oz.) grated parmesan cheese

Brown meat; drain. Combine meat, tomatoes, beans, zucchini, onion, wine, flour and seasonings in 3-quart dutch oven; mix well. Cover; simmer 30 minutes or until vegetables are tender, stirring occasionally. Stir in cheese; serve immediately.

Eight 1-cup servings.

DOUBLE-CHEESY MACARONI

1/4 cup chopped green pepper
1/4 cup chopped onion
2 tablespoons margarine
7 oz. elbow macaroni, cooked, drained
1 1/2 cups (6 oz.) shredded sharp natural cheddar cheese grated
6 eggs, beaten
1/4 cup milk
1/2 teaspoon oregano leaves
1/4 teaspoon salt
1 cup chopped tomato

Saute green pepper and onion in margarine. Combine with macaroni, cheddar cheese, eggs, milk and seasonings; mix well. Spoon into 11 1/4 x 7 1/2-inch baking dish. Bake at 350 degrees, 20 minutes. Top with tomato; sprinkle with 2 tablespoons parmesan cheese. Continue cooking 5 minutes.

6 to 8 servings.

Meat fillings baked in a loaf

Flavorful yeast bread covering a filling of tasty meat loaf, turkey loaf or ham loaf combine to create an exciting yet inexpensive meal. The yeast bread covering is easily made with frozen bread dough.

Create the meaty fillings from your favorite meat loaf recipe or use leftover turkey or ham and mix with onion, stuffing, mashed potatoes and gravy. These meaty loaves are the perfect way to "catch up" with your budget and serve this economical and elegant entree.

MEATY LOAVES

1 (one pound) frozen bread dough (white or honey wheat)

1 1/2 pounds ground beef

3/4 cup oats, uncooked

1 cup grated cheese (cheddar or jack)

1/2 onion, chopped

1 egg

salt and pepper

2 tablespoons butter, melted

3 tablespoons grated parmesan cheese

Let frozen dough thaw

to room temperature 2 1/4 - 3 1/2 hours, or overnight in refrigerator. Mix remaining ingredients for meat loaf. Shape into 5 equal patties approximately 4 inches in diameter. Cook in conventional oven approximately 20 minutes at 350 degrees or in microwave oven 10 minutes. Drain off grease. Cut thawed loaf into 6 equal pieces.

On lightly floured board roll each piece into a circle approximately 6 inches in diameter. Place one partially cooked meat patty in center of each piece of dough. Fold ends over patty and seal. Place seam side down on lightly greased cookie sheet.

Brush loaves with butter (at this point grated parmesan cheese can be sprinkled over loaves). With sharp knife make small cuts in top of dough. Bake in 375 degrees oven 20-25 minutes or until golden brown. Serve with mixed vegetables and beverage for a balanced meal.

Meaty loaves are literally that, when a meat filling is baked into a yeast bread covering, easily made with frozen bread dough.

Portable homemade soup steams with good flavor

Homemade soup steaming with fresh garden flavor can be quick, easy to prepare and ideally suited to box and bag lunches that travel to school or work this fall.

Drawing on the convenience and availability of frozen vegetables and fresh whole milk, Garden Chowder solves the daily dilemma of creating nourishing, portable meals with little preparation.

It's ready in seconds, rounds out lunchbox meals with delicious flavor and necessary vitamins and offers limitless possibilities for ethnic variations created by adding a dash or two of a favorite spice or herb.

Simply thaw a cup of your favorite frozen vegetable or vegetable combination such as peas and carrots, corn, broccoli, or mixed vegetables, and place them in the blender with a cup of milk, a chopped green onion, some seasoned salt and pepper.

Blend until smooth or chunky in texture, depending on preference, then heat in a saucepan to bring to its fullest flavor.

Experiment with different herbs such as dill and thyme to create subtle flavor changes, or give the meal an international touch with a dash of curry for an Indian flavor, basil or oregano for a hint of Italian flavor, basil or recall the flavors of Germany.

Garden Chowder can be poured piping hot into a thermos for a warming "brown bag main course," or refrigerated for a chilled luncheon soup to enjoy with a green salad or fresh fruit.

GARDEN CHOWDER
1 cup frozen vegetables (peas & carrots, peas, corn, mixed, etc.), thawed. (or one 8 1/4 oz. can vegetables drained)
1 cup milk
1 green onion, chopped
1/2 teaspoon seasoned salt
Dash pepper
Blend ingredients in blender until desired consistency. Heat and serve. 2 servings.
Variation: Blend in 1/4 teaspoon dill, thyme or Italian seasoning.

Variation: Blend in 1/4 teaspoon dill, thyme or Italian seasoning.

Steaming cups of homemade soup are a welcome change in box and brown bag lunches. Equally refreshing when served cold, Garden Chowder can travel or stay at home.

Diet pills are drugs says FDA

"Starch blockers" — the hottest new item on the American weight-loss scene — are coming under increasing scrutiny from dietitians, professional nutritionists and, most recently, the federal government.

Sold under a variety of names and backed by voluminous advertising, starch blocker pills are supposed to prevent the body from absorbing starch from foods like potatoes, bread and pastas. The unwanted and unsightly extra pounds just melt away no matter how much starch you eat, according to manufacturers.

The starch blockers are basically a concentrate of a derivative of raw kidney beans that somehow inhibits the enzyme alpha amylase, which digests starch in humans. The unabsorbed starch progresses to the bowel, with unknown and sometimes unfortunate results.

Gloria Johnson, a Sacramento registered dietitian and nutrition consultant, note that the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) recently decided to classify the so-called starch blocker products used as weight reduction aids as drugs, despite manufacturers' claims that they are "special dietary foods."

"After much discussion within the FDA," Johnson says, "officials decided that the products may affect the body's normal metabolic functions, which would bring them under drug laws."

The federal agency has subsequently sent letters to more than 100 manufacturers and distributors, directing them to discontinue marketing starch blockers until scientific testing confirms their safety and efficacy.

Along with a variety of fad diets, Johnson maintains the starch blockers are unnecessary and, in some cases, harmful.

"There is no easy or magical solution to being overweight," she says. "The key is changing one's eating and activity habits to a degree that sustains desirable weight and health over a lifetime."

Johnson adds that a moderate, well-balanced diet from the four food groups — milk, meat, vegetables and fruits, breads and cereals — combined with proper exercise, provide a healthy basis for gradual weight loss.

Coupons, refunds pay for cost of newspaper

By MARTIN SLOANE

Dear Martin: I didn't think that I could afford a daily newspaper, that is, until I began clipping out all the coupons from the food section. Now my coupon and refund savings pay for the paper and much more.

Several weeks ago I really came out on top and the grocer owed me money! I purchased $22.50 worth of groceries and my free product coupons and cents-off coupons totaled $23.10. When I got the groceries home and removed the proofs-of-purchase, I was able to send for $4.75 worth of refunds.

Saving money with coupons and refunds is especially pleasing to me because I do all my shopping by phone since I am in a wheelchair and can't go out. — J.E., Kingston, Mass.

Dear J.E.: When you "go" shopping, you obviously go for all the saving opportunities that can be worked into a well-planned shopping list. I hope your example will be an inspiration to others to try our money-saving pastime.

Dear Martin: Several stores in my area are using the new electronic scanners and I have a question about the Universal Product Code. How can the same code be on a product, let's say tuna, which is priced at $1.30 at one store, and $1.25 at another store? Isn't the price of the product somewhere on those black lines? — Confused in Coventry, Conn.

Dear Confused: The Universal Product Code only identifies the product. It does not contain price information. When a cashier passes an item's UPC across the scanner, the scanner "reads" its identity and sends this message to the store's computer. Within a fraction of a second, the computer matches the identity of the product with the price, which comes from the computer's memory, and that price is rung up on the register.

Here's a refunding tip from Carol Hammond of Helena, Ala.:

"I trade refund forms with people all over the country and it often is confusing to remember the forms that my trading partners want or don't want. So, I have asked them to list the types of forms they don't want on a 3-by-5 inch card and send it to me. This has helped me immensely when responding to their trades, and in return the forms I have received have been worthwhile."

Carol and other readers whose tips appear in this column receive a free copy of my couponing and refunding magazine, The National Supermarket Shopper. Write to me in care of this newspaper.

Does garden abundance put you in a pickle?

Orange County Home Advisor

A highly productive vegetable garden can present the problem of what to do with all the vegetables.

Some people give them away. Others freeze them. Some can them, using a pressure canner (the only safe way to process vegetables).

But how can you preserve vegetables if you don't have freezer space, don't have a pressure canner — or don't want to risk the danger of botulism developing in home canned vegetables?

One answer is to pickle the vegetables. Pickling is a tried and true food preservation method that can be used on many foods, not just cucumbers.

Because pickling involves the use of acid as a preservative, you greatly diminish the risk of botulism. The bacteria that cause botulism do not grow in an acid environment.

Pickled products do need to be processed after they're packed in canning jars, but the processing is done in a water bath, not a pressure canner, and takes only 10 to 15 minutes.

A water bath processing involves placing the jars on a rack in a large kettle, covering the jars with hot water, and heating at a simmering temperature (in the case of pickles) or boiling temperature (in the case of fruit and tomatoes) for the recommended processing time.

The purpose of this water bath processing for pickles is to create a vacuum in the jar and seal the lid. The heating drives the air out of the jar. Then when the jar cools the vacuum forms and the lid is sucked down, or sealed.

A simmering temperature is used for processing pickles in order to preserve the crispness of the vegetable but still create a sufficient vacuum to seal the lid.

Pickles, like other canned food, must have a sealed lid in order to keep out microorganisms that could cause spoilage. If a jar doesn't seal, the product should be stored in the refrigerator or reprocessed using fresh lids.

The easiest and usual method for making pickled vegetables is what is known as the "quick pickle." The recipe contains enough vinegar to protect the food from botulism, and generally contains other seasonings such as salt, dill, spices, garlic, onion, celery seed, pepper, etc. A sweet-sour pickle also contains sugar.

If not enough vinegar is used, pickled products may ferment. Fermentation causes bubbling and an overflow of liquid from the jar. It is purposely used to make flavorful fermented pickles and sauerkraut, and the product isn't sealed in jars until the fermentation is completed. But if you're making quick pickles you don't want them to ferment.

Using the proper amount of vinegar is crucial in protecting the pickled vegetable from spoiling, so it's important to use a reliable, tested recipe and follow it precisely. Don't cut down on the amount of vinegar and don't add extra water!

Check the label of the vinegar. It should be 4 to 6 percent acetic acid; or stated another way, it should be 40 to 60 grain. Law requires that the amount of acid in vinegar be printed on the label.

Also, don't use homemade vinegar for pickles. It may seem very sour and yet not be acid enough to protect you from botulism.

The type of vinegar you use depends on the flavor and appearance desired. White distilled vinegar doesn't discolor pickles. Cider, wine, and malt vinegars do add a darker color and contribute some very distinctive flavors.

QUESTIONS WE ARE ASKED:

Q: I have an old pickle recipe that calls for lime. What is the purpose of the lime and where can I buy it?

A: Lime is calcium oxide — the same as "quicklime," burnt lime, dehydrated lime, or calyx. Slaked lime is a hydrated lime or calcium hydroxide. It is used as a firming agent — to make the pickles crisp, but is not necessary if the vegetable is of good quality and fresh.

You may be able to find lime at nurseries, building material supply stores, or pharmacies. Use no more than ½ teaspoon per gallon of water and be sure to rinse it off thoroughly to prevent reducing the acidity of the pickled product to levels where botulism bacteria might grow. We recommend eliminating the lime as it is unnecessary.

Q: The garlic and cauliflower in some pickled vegetables I put up last year have turned a funny pinkish color. Does this mean they're spoiled or unsafe to eat?

A: No, color changes in vegetables such as cauliflower and garlic are not a sign of spoilage. The change is caused by a harmless reaction between the acid in the vinegar and chemical compounds in the vegetable. Your pickled vegetables are still safe to eat.

Q: My dill pickles sealed but now the lids loosened and there are bubbles and cloudy liquid. Are they spoiled? Can I save them?

A: When pickles are put into jars cold, then covered with hot pickling solution and sealed without processing, the heat of the liquid may not be high enough to kill all the microorganisms and create a permanent seal. This may then allow fermentation to take place in which carbon dioxide gas is produced. The gas bubbles through the liquid, forcing the lid to unseal.

The fermentation process is not harmful. Open the jars in which this is happening and leave them loosely covered until the bubbling ceases and the brine is less cloudy. This may take up to 3 weeks. There may be a white sediment in the jar bottoms that results from the fermentation. It isn't harmful. The pickles now may be refrigerated and eaten soon.

If you want to keep them longer, then you need to process them. After fermentation has stopped, remove contents from jars and wash jars in hot sudsy water. Repack pickles and spices in jars. Filter the brine through a paper coffee filter and heat to boiling. Reduce heat and simmer for 10 minutes. Pour hot brine over pickles and seal with new lids that have been immersed in simmering water for a few minutes.

Seafood casserole is great in the stretch

On restaurant menus the three popular items are steak, lobster and Surf 'n Turf, which combines the first two.

On home menus, favorites like these are usually reserved for special occasions.

But there's no need to limit rock lobster to a "sometime" thing at home if the meat of this succulent seafood is stretched to marvelous lengths.

The trick is to combine the rock lobster with ingredients that make a little go a long way without sacrificing the cherished taste of the seafood. If the combination tastes so good in total, diners don't get the feeling that they are not getting enough of the most important element of the dish.

South African rock lobster is, indeed, the most valued ingredient in the recipe here. The juicy meat has a flavor and texture entirely its own, which is why it has become so popular. There is no waste, since the tail is a solid piece of snow-white meat. It makes everyday noodles the basis for a delightful dinner, supper or Sunday brunch dish.

On a buffet, with that star of rock lobster meat in the center of the dish, this casserole will always be the main attraction. Clever, sophisticated, delicious and "stretched," it says smart things about the person who offers it.

SOUTH AFRICAN STAR CASSEROLE
1 1/2 pounds rock lobster tails

1 package (8 ounces) medium noodles
4 tablespoons butter
1 medium onion, minced
4 tablespoons flour
2 1/2 teaspoons salt
1 1/2 teaspoons paprika

1/2 teaspoon pepper
4 cups milk
Bread crumbs
1/4 cup melted butter
Drop frozen rock lobster tails into boiling salted water. Cook for 3 minutes. Cut away

Brown bag carriers studied

Orange County Home Adviser

The rising costs of eating out and pinched budgets have caused many people to become "brown baggers."

There's a Brown Bag Institute that's been formed to study the people who carry lunches and provide information to manufacturers of products that brown baggers might buy.

According to a report from this institute in the Wall Street Journal, some 10.7 billion brown bag meals are put together each year at a value of $20 billion. No small potatoes to producers who want to zero in on this market!

The Brown Bag Institute reports that people carry lunches because they want to economize, want to save time, or don't like the food sold at school or work.

Another reason why some people carry a lunch is to save calories or have foods that are lower in salt, fat, or sugar than they might get in a restaurant.

A major reason why people don't carry a lunch is they "don't have time" to make it (or don't have someone with time to make a lunch for them).

But a more accurate reason might be, "I didn't plan ahead — so I didn't have anything to put in my lunch" or "I didn't get up early enough to make lunch."

So making lunch is a matter of management: planning food for lunches when you do your grocery shopping; planning the time you need for lunch making when you set your alarm. Some late sleepers prefer to make their lunches the night before (See BROWN, Page C10) underside membrane and remove meat from shell in one piece. Slice each tail in half lengthwise, cutting one half into chunks and leaving other half whole. Cook noodles. Melt butter and saute onion till transparent; stir in flour and seasonings. Gradually add milk; cook until thickened, stirring constantly. Add rock lobster chunks and noodles and place in 2-quart casserole. Top with buttered bread crumbs. Bake, uncovered, 20 minutes, at 375 degrees F.

Top with reserved rock lobster halves arranged in spiral star. Brush tails generously with melted butter. Return to oven for 10 minutes longer. Yield: 6 servings.

Sunday brunch or weekend buffet will bring raves from your guests if you serve a succulent seafood casserole starring rock lobster. Chunks of the juicy meat are added to noodles and spirals of the lobster halves swirl on top.

Indoors or out, potato salads are favorite

Potato salad is an all-American classic. And there's a good reason, it starts with America's favorite vegetable, the potato.

A picnic or barbecue just wouldn't be complete without a brimming bowl of delicious potato salad. Almost everyone has their favorite version and we're no exception.

Another Favorite Potato Salad is a good traditional recipe that serves as the base for innumerable variations. So, whether you're a new cook looking for the best basic recipe or one who'd just like to try someone else's favorite potato salad, this recipe is for you.

The potatoes are cooked in the skin to preserve many nutrients. And there are lots of variations offered to suit everyone's special tastes.

Potatoes also are a great economy value. Recent harvests have been large so you'll find excellent quality, quantity and prices, making potatoes one of the best food buys in the produce department.

With these economical potato prices, you'll really be able to stretch those food budgets, and still serve delicious, nutritious meals. Remember how good potatoes are for you. A medium potato (three per pound), supplies 35 percent of the U.S. RDA of vitamin C, 20 percent of vitamin B6 and 10 percent of niacin and iron, along with significant amounts of other vitamins and minerals. And all for only 100 calories.

Whether it's in salads, in pancakes, or as french fries or scalloped potatoes, you'll find that low-cost potatoes make even simple meals special. And for that special outdoor meal, don't forget Another Favorite Potato Salad. We hope that this one will become your family's favorite too!

ANOTHER FAVORITE

POTATO SALAD
1½ pounds (4 to 5 medium) potatoes, scrubbed
3 hard-cooked eggs, shelled and coarsely chopped
1½ cups sliced celery
½ cup sliced green onions
3 tablespoons chopped parsley

½ cup mayonnaise
½ cup sour cream
3 tablespoons white vinegar
1 tablespoon prepared mustard
½ teaspoon pepper
Salt, to taste
Butter lettuce
Paprika
Place potatoes in Dutch oven or large saucepan with tight-fitting lid. Add 1 to 2 inches boiling water. Cover tightly and cook over high heat 30 to 40 minutes until potatoes are tender when pierced with a fork or skewer. Drain, cool and peel. Cut potatoes into ¾-inch cubes.

Place in large bowl with eggs, celery, onions and parsley. In small bowl whisk together mayonnaise, sour cream, vinegar, mustard and pepper. Toss gently with potato mixture. Mix in salt, cover and chill. To serve, line individual dishes with lettuce. Fill with potato mixture. Dust with paprika.

Makes 6 servings.
To vary the flavor and texture, add your choice of one or two of the following to potato mixture before tossing with dressing:

• 1 teaspoon dill weed
• ½ cup sliced radishes
• ½ cup halved cherry tomatoes
• ½ cup chopped green or red bell pepper
• ½ cup shredded

carrots
• ¼ cup crumbled blue cheese
• ½ cup crumbled crisp bacon
• ½ cup shredded sharp Cheddar cheese
• ½ cup sliced ripe or green pitted olives
• ½ cup chopped cucumber
• ¼ cup chopped dill pickles or gherkins

How much money can you save by carrying a lunch? It depends on what you carry and what you would buy in a restaurant. At a minimum you would be likely to spend three times as much for a takeout food lunch compared to carrying a lunch. Food in a sit-down restaurant could be five or six times as costly as the food in a carried lunch.

Say you spent just $1 a day more for a purchased lunch compared to a lunch made at home. That's $5 a week; $20 or more a month. At $2 a day the difference is $10 a week or $40 a month; and at $3 a day the difference would be $15 a week or $60 a month.

Not so bad, you say? Think about the difference if it involves two people in a family, or three, or four.

Another consideration is the nutritional value of the homemade lunch compared to a purchased one. Again, the difference depends on what you make and what you buy.

As a general rule, restaurant and take-out foods tend to be high in fat and calories, high in salt, and may be high in sugar and starch. And they tend to be low in fiber, vitamins such as A, C, and folic acid (a B vitamin), and minerals such as calcium and iron.

A carried lunch can be made from foods that are low in fat and can have foods such as raw vegetables or fresh fruits that will supply the fiber, vitamins, and minerals that might be missing from the restaurant meal.

On the other hand, your carried lunch could be just as high in fat, sugar, and calories if you are heavy-handed with the salad dressing, use fatty lunch meat or sausage such as bologna, and include high calorie dessert items such as cookies or frosted cake.
When packing a lunch, try to provide at least one food from each of the four food groups: protein food; bread, cracker or cereal food; fruit and vegetable; milk, cheese or yogurt. Such a lunch will be well balanced nutritionally and will be enjoyable from the standpoint of having color, flavor, and texture contrasts.

Quisenberry, Royals delay Angels

KC remains alive in AL West race — barely

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Leave it to Dan Quisenberry to sum up the task facing the beleaguered Kansas City Royals in the American League West race.

"We're like the Dutch boy holding back the tide. We don't have enough fingers," said Quisenberry. "We found a little sap and some Silly Putty to put in there tonight."

The Royals stayed alive in the AL West chase Tuesday night by defeating the Angels 5-4 and trimming their first-place margin to 3½ games.

George Brett drove in the winning run with a two-out, seventh-inning single and Quisenberry hurled 1½ innings of scoreless relief for his 34th save of the year, a club record and tops in the league.

But it may merely have delayed the Angels' second division title in four years and the first championship of any kind for Manager Gene Mauch in 23 major league seasons.

The Angels' magic number remains at two, and the Angels still could clinch the division in Kansas City with a victory over the Royals tonight — owner Gene Autry's 75th birthday.

"The sooner, the better," said Mauch. "If we're going to win it, let's get it done."

For the Royals, Quisenberry said, drastic measures are needed.

"If we are going to win this thing, we gotta import Moses," he said. "The odds are all against us."

We would save some pride beating them tomorrow and making them win it against Texas."

The Angels finish the year with three home games against the Rangers, while the Royals are host to Oakland for four contests. Any combination of Angel victories and Kansas City losses totaling two will give the Angels the AL West crown.

"We're still hanging in there. I haven't conceded anything," said Kansas City Manager Dick Howser.

Brett's single to right off reliever Dave Goltz, 7-5, scored Willie Wilson, who had doubled and moved to third on a groundout, and made a winner of Mike Armstrong, 5-5, who blanked the Angels on three hits in four innings.

The Angels took a 4-1 lead with four in the fourth — two on a bases-loaded single by Don Baylor — to knock out Kansas City's Larry Gura, who was trying to become the AL's first 19-game winner.

But the Royals bounced back with two in the bottom of the fourth, then tied the game in the sixth on Jerry Martin's solo homer, his 14th of the year.

"We don't want them popping any champagne corks around here," said Martin.

Most of the Angels dismissed the loss, only their third in 11 games.

"We're still in the driver's seat," said Doug DeCinces. "It was a tough game to lose ... we wanted to win tonight, but Kansas City's a good ballclub, otherwise we wouldn't be battling them."

Bobby Grich observed, "I would rather be drinking champagne right now than talking to you, but maybe we'll just postpone it for one day."

Atlanta takes Wild West lead

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Los Angeles Manager Tom Lasorda, wearing a T-shirt with "World Champions" splashed across the front, wore a glazed expression as he sat quietly in his office. He appeared stunned.

"No, I can't remember," he said when asked if he recalled greater feelings of frustration. "I don't know how I feel."

Obviously, he didn't feel very good. His Dodgers had just dropped a 4-3, 10-inning decision to the hapless Cincinnati Reds. It extended their losing streak to seven games and knocked them out of first place in the National League West.

The losing streak is the longest of the year for Los Angeles, which has scored only 13 runs in those seven games.

It was not only that the Dodgers had lost, it was the way they lost for the second night in a row to a team with the worst record (59-98) in the NL. The Reds are trying to avoid becoming the first team in the 107-year history of the Cincinnati franchise to lose 100 games.

The Dodgers held a 3-0 lead over the weak-hitting Reds entering the eighth. Los Angeles starter Bob Welch had allowed only two hits and had retired 12 straight batters entering the inning.

However, Cesar Cedeno and Johnny Bench opened the eighth with singles to chase Welch and the Reds scored three times off reliever Tom Niedenfuer to tie the game.

In the bottom of the eighth, the Dodgers had runners on first and third with one out and couldn't score. In the last of the ninth, Los Angeles had runners on first and second with one out and came up empty.

Then, in the top of the 10th, after Ron Oester drew a walk off Dave Stewart, 9-8, and was sacrificed to second, Rafael Landestoy, a former Dodger who brought a .198 average to the plate, bounced a pinch-hit single to center to drive in the go-ahead run.

It appeared the Dodgers could salvage a victory when they loaded the bases with nobody out in the bottom of the inning. After Bill Russell walked and Steve Yeager bunted safely off Ben Hayes, 2-0, Joe Price came on in relief for Cincinnati and gave up a bunt single to Mark Belanger.

However, Steve Sax flied to shallow center, Ron Roenicke popped out and Dusty Baker flied to right, ending the game. And, at least for the moment, ending the Dodgers' stay atop the division.

Atlanta, which defeated San Francisco 8-3 Tuesday night, leads the wild West by one game over the Dodgers and two games over the Giants. All three teams have five games remaining.

The Braves and Dodgers open a two-game series at Dodger Stadium tonight while the Giants entertain the Houston Astros in the opener of a two-game series in San Francisco.

"I don't know if we're spoilers but we're sure making it tough for some people around here," said Cincinnati Manager Russ Nixon. "Price has had plenty of practice pitching out of bases-loaded, no-out situations. He did it twice in a row in San Francisco in back-to-back innings in a game we won 5-4 earlier this month."

League openers top prep slate

Week No. 4 also finds some old rivalries and some new ones

By ROGER CARLSON
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Old rivalries, new ones, league openers and still more non-league games are on tap this week as Week No. 4 of the 1982 prep football season approaches.

The Sea View and South Coast leagues open for business with games Thursday and Friday, highlighted by a confrontation between Corona del Mar and Estancia, while El Toro and host Newport Harbor collide.

Fountain Valley gets a look at Orange County's No. 1 ranked team — Servite; Marina tries to get back on the winning trail against La Quinta; Huntington Beach eyes its fourth straight victory and Edison, after opening the season a week earlier in order to play at Hawaii, is idle.

Corona del Mar vs. Estancia

Estancia could have the edge because although both teams have shown a sharp sword in the running game, the Eagles have also put together a passing game behind quarterback Scott Davis.

Corona del Mar has Dave Patterson back in camp after an injury, but the status of tackle-kicker Brett Hughes (concussion) and linebacker Joe Paluck (ankle) is tentative.

"They're similar to us," says CdM Coach Dick Morris. "We're both running teams and don't like to throw unless we have to, and we're both very fundamental."

Estancia Coach Ed Blanton echoes Morris, saying, "It's going to be a battle. Corona del Mar is tough to score on and its tailback, Lance Martin, is the type who can break it at any time."

Martin has rushed for 261 yards on 67 carries, while Estancia tailback Matt Spies, similar in stature, not quite as fast, has bulled for 320 yards on 59 carries in the last two games for the Eagles, each a victory.

El Toro vs. Newport Harbor

Although Newport Harbor can boast good size in its line, this is still a muscle (El Toro) vs. finesse (Newport Harbor) game.

Paul Svitenko, a 6-3, 215-pound guard, is just one of the lions in the El Toro lineup, which thrives on a power I-formation with the accent on the running game.

The defending Sea View League champion, El Toro is 2-1 in non-league play, losing only to defensive minded Mission Viejo, 10-0.

Newport Harbor relies on 6-3, 207-pound junior tailback Steve Brazas, a workhorse who has carried 64 times in three games, in addition to catching nine passes. His rushing (213 yards) and receiving yardage (67 yards) represents the bulk of the Sailors' offense.

There is a common opponent — Cypress lost a 21-7 decision to El Toro in its opener, then followed with a 16-3 victory over Newport Harbor.

Costa Mesa vs. University

Costa Mesa enters under a cloud of uncertainty regarding linebacker James Kyung (ankle) and if the Mustangs are forced to go without him, it could be the difference in what is considered a very close matchup.

"We're very similar in terms of abilities, records (each won after losing twice), enrollment and physical size," says Costa Mesa Co-Coach Jim Hagey.

Mesa's offense revolves around 5-6 tailback Wally Grant (67 carries for 274 yards); University's No. 1 runner is fullback Gary Ianuzzi (24 carries for 189 yards).

Irvine vs. Saddleback

It's a battle of unbeaten after each rolled to three straight victories. Saddleback is ranked No. 8 in Orange County.

The Roadrunners of Saddleback feature the quick Rod Pesak at quarterback, along with runners Kevin Bradley and Bobby Williams, a pair of 4.6 speed Pesak has completed 13 passes in three games and five have gone for touchdowns.

Irvine, meanwhile, has gotten 313 yards from Johnny Salinas on 43 carries, including a pair of touchdowns.

Andre Willis and Chris Mandeville, two offensive sparkplugs for Irvine who have been sidelined, are both expected to play.

Servite vs. Fountain Valley

Fountain Valley is 0-3 after losing to Mater Dei, Foothill and St. Paul, and now the Barons try Servite, ranked No. 1 in Orange County and No. 2 in the CIF Big Five Conference despite only one game under its belt.

Servite lost a 29-15 decision to national power Moeller of Cincinnati after leading, 15-14, through three quarters behind the passing of Steve Beurlein.

Sophomore tailback Dave Swigert has rushed for 213 yards on 32 carries in the past two games for Fountain Valley and Dale Frye, after completing 14 of 23 for 164 yards and two touchdowns, gets the starting nod at quarterback.

Bolsa Grande vs. Htg. Beach

Huntington Beach is sporting a 3-0 non-league record, but so is Bolsa Grande after the Matadors toppled Sierra Vista, Buena Park and Savanna.

Sean O'Keefe is a returning starter at quarterback for Bolsa Grande, and he has Steve La Freniere, a returning wide receiver, as a solid passing target.

Huntington Beach's resurgence has revolved around the play of quarterback Eric Lawton and fullback Danny Thompson, along with an offensive line and secondary which has been proving it belongs.

La Quinta vs. Marina

Quarterback Hugh Kollar and fullback Mark Allred, a couple of All-Garden Grove League selections as juniors, complement (See PREP, Page D3)

Estancia's Scott Davis will lead the Eagles against Corona del Mar in Sea View League opener Friday.

From AP dispatches
WASHINGTON — President Reagan said Tuesday that National Football League owners and players did not show much consideration for the fans in the labor dispute that has shut down the professional football league.

"Sometimes I think we ran the Screen Actors Guild better than that," Reagan, a one-time president of that union, said at a nationally televised news conference.

Asked whether he thought the football owners and players were being fair with the fans, Reagan said there "doesn't seem to be the consideration for the fan that there could have been and should have been."

The players struck a week ago after negotiations stalemated over their demand that owners guarantee them at least half of the revenues received from television networks for broadcast rights. The two sides are scheduled to resume negotiations here Thursday.

Yount puts Brewers 3 games up

Robin Yount belted a two-run homer in the first inning, becoming the first American League player to reach 200 hits this season, to trigger Milwaukee to a 9-3 victory over Boston to highlight action Tuesday. Coupled with Baltimore's loss to Detroit, the Brewers' victory increased Milwaukee's AL East lead to three games.

Elsewhere, Jim Clancy came within three outs of a perfect game in Toronto's opener of a double-header with Minnesota. Clancy gave up one hit in hurling the Blue Jays to a 3-0 victory. The right-hander lost his bid for a no-hitter when designated hitter Randy Bush led off the ninth with a single barely beyond the reach of second baseman Damaso Garcia. In the nightcap, Toronto came from behind to win, 4-3.

In Detroit, Lance Parrish slapped a two-run homer and Mike Ivie and John Wockenfuss added solo shots to power the Tigers to a 9-6 decision over the Orioles.

Harold Baines crashed a two-run homer and pitcher Dennis Lamp did the rest as the Chicago White Sox dumped Seattle, 3-1.

Doyle Alexander gained his first victory in almost a year as the New York Yankees downed Cleveland, 6-4.

Fred Stanley's double and Dwayne Murphy's single, both with two out in the fourth inning, pacing Oakland to a 5-4 win over Texas.

YOUNT

Another NFL-less Sunday? You bet!

The National Football League Management Council, rejecting on Tuesday the union's offer for a preliminary meeting prior to Thursday's scheduled negotiating session, wrote off next weekend's games and assailed the union for putting public appearances ahead of bargaining.

Meanwhile, in Washington, the union formally unveiled its plans for a series of so-called all-star games, but admitted it had a stadium contract for only one, Oct. 10 in Washington's RFK Stadium.

Gene Upshaw, president of the striking NFL Players Association, told members of the San Diego Chargers Tuesday that he thinks the 1982 season will not be canceled. Upshaw added, however, that he had little encouraging news regarding negotiations between the owners and the players.

Braves take over first place

Terry Harper's bases-loaded, three-run third-inning double triggered a 13-hit Atlanta attack as the Braves downed San Francisco, 8-3, to vault into first place in the NL West. Coupled with the Dodgers' loss to Cincinnati, the Braves took over sole possession of first place for the first time since Sept. 12.

Elsewhere in National League action Tuesday, Al Oliver, who earlier became only the second man in baseball history to produce 200 hits and 100 RBI in both leagues, scored the winning run on Warren Cromartie's one-out double in the 10th inning to give Montreal a narrow 5-4 win over St. Louis.

Pete Rose's eighth-inning single brought home pinch-runner Bob Dernier with the winning run as Philadelphia rallied to beat the Chicago Cubs, 3-2.

Pinch-hitter Rusty Staub delivered a one-out, run-scoring single in the 10th inning to give the New York Mets a 3-2 victory over Pittsburgh.

Pinch-hitter Kurt Bevacqua's infield single drove in the game's first run and sparked a three-run seventh inning as San Diego blanked Houston, 3-0.

How should you pick an MVP

Well, here's one theory you can contemplate

As the baseball sides plod toward their respective destinies, there is great hemming and hawing and carrying on in general as to the identities of the most valuable players.

As you know, the voting is conducted by committees comprised of members of the Baseball Writers Association of America in major league cities. Inasmuch as these gentlemen are salts of the earth, there is no room for provincialism in the voting.

Significantly, the ballots must be in before the start of the championship series playoffs but votes can be delayed until after the completion of the division races. It is the uncluttered view from here that the entire process should be delayed until after the World Series but you can't have everything.

The theory about to be advanced, of course, is that consideration should be given as to whether a candidate is a member of a winning team. The reasoning is that a player contributing to a championship should be considered more valuable than one assisting his team to prominence among the also rans.

The theory can be applied very nicely in the National League West. The election committee is viewing the qualifications of outfielders Pedro Guerrero of the Dodgers and Dale Murphy of the Atlanta Braves.

Assuming the voters will award the honor to either of these gentlemen over one George Hendrick of the St. Louis Cardinals, the above mentioned theory must be applied.

The Dodgers are where they are largely due to the figures of Guerrero. He will be the only candidate to finish in the top ten in the three meaningful categories — home runs, runs batted in and batting average.

Still, if the Braves win the National League West title over the Dodgers, Murphy would get the decision according to the theory.

Of course, if the San Francisco Giants win the West, you call it a team effort and run whimpering into the underbrush.

In the American League, one notes a traditional situation wherein a candidate for MVP election is considered a shoo-in and there is no contest and the BBWAA might save itself the expense of postage.

SPORTS COLUMNIST

BUD TUCKER

Clearly, Milwaukee shortstop Robin Yount has lapped the field off the season he has put together. If the Brewers win the American League East championship, you may expect Robin to fly away with the thing.

However, if the Brewers falter, the mechanics of the theory put forth here would throw the American League MVP issue wide open. The Eastern scientists would give prominent mention to Baltimore's Eddie Murray which would in no way resemble an absurdity.

In the West, Hal McRae of Kansas City would get a look if the Royals won it.

Of all the teams and situations, though, the most interesting and intriguing would be that of the Angels. Into the martinis you would drop the names of Doug DeCinces, Reggie Jackson and Brian Downing — not necessarily in that order.

Now it is important to keep in mind that there are no guidelines established for MVP voting. That is to say, it is not essential to consider the statistics of a candidate, if the voter feels the contribution of the player has been by other means.

In short, the beauty of the MVP is strictly in the eyes of the beholder.

If the Angels win the West, the vote here would go to DeCinces but legitimate arguments would come forth in behalf of Jackson and Downing.

At any rate, such are the technical aspects of one theory on the important matter of MVP's. Simply stated, Robin Yount should not be the American League MVP if the Brewers do not make the playoffs and the same would apply to Guerrero and Murphy and so on and so forth. It is a thought I leave with you.

GWC won't drown itself over a single loss

Well, Golden West College lost a water polo match last weekend. Easy come, easy go.

At least, that's the way Rustler Coach Tom Hermstad likes to think. It seems like every decade or so, his Rustlers break down and lose a water polo match.

OK, maybe every 1½ years or so. For instance, West Valley's 10-9 victory over Golden West Saturday in the Cuesta Tournament snapped the Rustlers' 34-game winning streak.

Yet, there were no Rustlers holding their heads under water in disgrace, no polo balls deflated in a fit of rage.

"No, there was no dramatic experience. We had a nice little talk," Hermstad notes of the post-game atmosphere around his Rustler squad.

"It's really not that important to us what we did yesterday. We worry about today," adds Hermstad, who has used that kind of philosophy since he arrived at the school in 1966.

And you can't really blame Hermstad. It's hard to get all choked up when you've lost only two water polo matches in the last 105 games.

CURT SEEDEN

Hermstad does know his Rustlers have won the state community college championship the past four years and five of the last six campaigns.

Making it five in a row will be a much tougher act this season, thanks to a new tournament system worked out by the Committee on Athletics, however.

In the past, the top eight teams from Southern California and Northern California have held their respective tournaments with the survivors advancing to the state tournament.

This year, only three community college conferences in Southern California — the South Coast, Metropolitan and Pacific Coast — harbor water polo teams.

In the past, a runner-up in a conference could compete in the Southern Cal tourney and even advance to the state tournament.

This season, the Southern California tourney will be limited to the three champions of the above-mentioned conferences.

"The worst thing about it is the leagues have become so unbalanced. That league (the South Coast Conference) from top to bottom is so much stronger than the others, it's ridiculous," says Hermstad.

"A team that will win one of the other conferences would come in sixth in the South Coast. The idea is for the kids to have legitimate playoffs to go to at the end of the year. As it stands now, the playoff structure is at best unacceptable," Hermstad adds.

When the Committee on Athletics meets in Burlingame in October, Hermstad will be there to make a presentation aimed at changing the new tournament structure.

"To ding all of these teams and good players is counter-productive," he adds.

Meanwhile, Hermstad will quietly go about his winning ways, knowing all along that every good thing must come to an end.

"I feel I cover the bases very well with myself and my team," he says. "We know we're going to lose once in awhile. I do think there's a little bit of pressure off of us."

Still, there will be plenty of pressure once conference play begins.

"When we played Fullerton the other day and beat them by one goal it was a moral victory just to come that close," Hermstad says. "And obviously, West Valley had to be real pleased. That's the price you have to pay when they all want a piece of you."

ONE TOM HERMSTAD, JR., is playing a prominent role on the high school water polo circuit.

Young Hermstad, a senior at Long Beach Wilson High, was named to the all-tournament team following last week's Moore League Tournament.

Hermstad and his Wilson teammates finished second in the tourney to Tustin High.

"It's the first time he's really had any success at the game," the senior Hermstad offers.

Could Hermstad wind up coaching Hermstad next season at Golden West?

"I don't know. He's very sharp academically," Hermstad says of his son. "I might have trouble recruiting my own kid."

Rustlers' Rowe now at Hoag

Golden West College assistant football coach Don Rowe, who suffered a mild heart attack during the Sept. 18 Rustlers-Saddleback game, has been transferred to Hoag Memorial Hospital in Newport Beach.

Rowe, 47, had been recuperating in Pacifica Community Hospital in Huntington Beach, and was scheduled to be released from the hospital on Monday. However, he failed a treadmill test prior to leaving, and doctors immediately admitted him to Hoag.

"He had just started the treadmill test and his heart showed some irregularities," said Golden West head coach Ray Shackleford, who talked with Rowe Monday night. "Right now, nobody knows anything about what's happening."

Rowe reportedly was to undergo an angiogram Tuesday at Hoag.

The Rustler coach, who had complained of pain during the afternoon prior to the Golden West-Saddleback game, apparently suffered the heart attack during the contest. His wife, Marilyn, took him to the hospital around 4 a.m. Sunday (Sept. 19) when the pain increased.

"He'd been having chest pains for several months," Shackleford said. "They were just more severe during the game. He's not the type of guy to complain."

Rowe is an original member of the Golden West football coaching staff, coming to the school in 1966 when the football program began.

Rowe, who was an assistant football coach at Compton College and Lynwood and Pius X high schools before coming to Golden West, also played professional baseball for 13 years.

He was a relief pitcher for the New York Mets in 1963 under Manager Casey Stengel.

Thorpe marks get support

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House passed by voice Tuesday a resolution calling for the International Olympic Committee to restore the records of the legendary Jim Thorpe to the official Olympic books.

Rep. James J. Howard, D-N.J., who introduced the measure, said, "Simply put, this resolution expresses the sense of Congress that this great injustice be corrected. One of the greatest injustices in the history of sports was denying Jim Thorpe his medals. Athletics is based on fairness, but there is nothing fair about the way our American Indian hero was treated."

Thorpe, considered one of the world's greatest athletes, won the pentathlon and decathlon events in the 1912 Olympics in Stockholm, Sweden. Seven months after the games, Thorpe was disqualified because it was disclosed that he played semi-professional baseball in the summers of 1909-1910 for expense money amounting to $2 per day.

the La Quinta attack, one which has dropped Ocean View by a touchdown and lost to Westminster by a 7-0 decision.

"It's a very explosive offense if you let them get started," says Marina assistant coach Andy Donegan.

Marina, ranked No. 7 in the CIF Big Five Conference after absorbing its first loss of the season (13-11 to Foothill), is a solid favorite based on its defense.

Foothill's offense actually crossed midfield only once last week.

Sunny Hills vs. Ocean View

Sunny Hills enters with a big advantage in size (i.e. linebacker Mike Bergstrom at 235, tackle Scott Bynum at 230 and lineman David Kitchen at 220), but the Lancers' defense has been handled by Esperanza and El Dorado for a combined total of 64 points.

Sunny Hills toppled Brea-Olinda, 9-7, while Ocean View is on a two-game skid.

SC vs. Woodbridge

Woodbridge takes its initial voyage into the South Coast League against run-oriented San Clemente, which operates an option out of its wishbone behind quarterback John Weiser.

Bill Russell caught 10 passes for 162 yards from quarterback Kevin Burke for Woodbridge last week and the quarterback's statistics reflect 33 completions in 62 attempts for 437 yards and 3 touchdowns.

Laguna Hills vs. Laguna

Laguna Hills was shut out twice before losing to University, 24-20, although the Hawks have shown an explosive ability behind Allan Roman's open field running and the passing of Lee Plemel to receivers Todd Williams (205) and John McDaid (185).

Laguna Beach is without speedster Dru Murphy because of a knee injury and tailback Bede Arabe is still nursing a sprained ankle.

Undefeated Laguna Beach (2-0) has sophomore tailback Mark Draper as the offensive focal point, but the Artists strength lies within its defense — and that's not good news for the winless Hawks of Laguna Hills in their South Coast League opener.

Elsewhere in high school football:

Westminster vs. Compton — The Lions will try to get a dormant offense going against the Tarbabs with Bill Hanson at quarterback and Mark Wood at tailback.

Mater Dei vs. Crespi — Quarterback John Laufenberg leads the unbeaten Crespi Celts, and 6-6, 250-pound John Kidder anchors the defense.

Dana Hills vs. Capistrano Valley — Capo is a heavy favorite after apparently finding the goal line against Corona del Mar with a 27-point fourth-quarter explosion.

Mission Viejo vs. Indio — Indio is 1-2 after dropping a 23-0 decision to Palm Springs, and the defensive-minded Mission Viejo Diablos (2-1) will be trying to soothe some wounds from a 35-21 loss to Los Angeles power Carson.

Yastrzemski signs 'final' contract

BOSTON (AP) — Carl Yastrzemski, 43 and insisting "I can still hit," signed a new contract Tuesday for a 23rd and "final" season with the Boston Red Sox in 1983.

"I can still hit and feel I can still help the team," Yastrzemski said after agreeing to terms after a meeting with General Manager Haywood Sullivan.

"I'm really looking forward to next season, a final one that I feel can be a very good one."

Terms were not announced, but Yastrzemski reportedly receives well over $500,000 a year.

"I think that Carl can help our ball club another year," Sullivan said. "If we didn't feel he could help us, we wouldn't be signing him to another contract."

Boston Manager Ralph Houk said that he plans to use Yastrzemski next year as the designated hitter against right-handed pitching and "I think he'll help us a lot in that role."

Houk said that Yastrzemski, who was 43 in August, "has had quite a year" for the Red Sox with "one of the best batting averages among designated hitters this season."

Despite a midseason slump, Yastrzemski carried a .268 average with 16 homers

Dodgers, Giants play early Sunday

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Sunday's season finale between the San Francisco Giants and Los Angeles Dodgers has been moved to an earlier starting time to accommodate television, the Giants said on Tuesday.

The game, which was to begin at 1:05 p.m., will start instead at 12:15 p.m. in order to accommodate ABC Television.

Olympic site set

ARCADIA (AP) — The final sports event of the 1984 Olympic Games, equestrian show jumping, will be held at Santa Anita Park, representatives of the International Equestrian Federation and the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee announced Monday.

The committee also named Michael A. Morphy, chairman of the board of California Portland Cement Co., as commissioner for Olympic equestrian events.

Santa Anita was the center of equestrian competition for the 1932 Olympics.

The 1984 Games begin July 28 and end Aug. 12 with the final equestrian event and the Closing Ceremonies.

The Games will include individual and team competition in jumping, dressage and the Three-Day event.

Compensation for mobile home evictions eyed

Of the Daily Pilot Staff

A method to compensate displaced mobile home tenants on the basis of the length of eviction notices will be studied by the Huntington Beach City Council.

The plan, recommended by the city's development services staff and approved this week for study, calls for the purchase of coaches at varying percentages of their full market value if they can't find a place to move.

City officials say there is a growing demand for park owners to use their land for greater profits.

Officials also note there is a zero vacancy rate in Orange County mobile home parks.

Tenants would receive 90 percent of the value of the coach on one year's notice; 80 percent on two years' notice; 65 percent on three years' notice and 25 percent on four years' notice and 25 percent on five years' notice.

Payments to the owner of a coach with a market value of $50,000 would range from $12,500 to $45,000 under the formula.

Staff members say the sliding scale system would provide equitable treatment and would encourage longer notification periods that would give tenants more time to find new living quarters.

Critics say, however, the plan might let park owners avoid relocation costs because they may not plan to develop their property in at least five years.

No mobile home parks have been closed to date. City officials have been grappling for months to find a compensation plan acceptable to both tenants and park owners.

Officials are trying to hammer out an agreement on a mobile home conversion ordinance by the end of October. A moratorium on conversions expires next June.

Another form of compensation under study calls for park owners to pay tenants the cost of moving their coaches to other parks within 100 miles of the city.

If there is no space for the coaches, the proposals call for park owners to pay tenants the purchase price of the coach.

About 5,000 people live in 19 mobile home parks throughout the city.

Seven of the parks, most of them located in coastal areas where there is a demand for higher use of the property, presently don't have mobile home zoning.

The seven parks are being considered for permanent or temporary mobile home zoning as a means of protecting compensation rights for tenants.

These parks include Rancho del Rey, Huntington Shores, Pacific Trailer Park, Driftwood, Cabrillo, Huntington Mobile Estates and Beach View.

HB cop pleads innocent

Huntington Beach Police Officer John J. Blackwell has pleaded innocent to charges of negligent homicide and leaving the scene of a fatal accident in Arizona, according to court officials.

A trial has been scheduled Nov. 18 at Yuma County Superior Court, following Blackwell's arraignment Tuesday, according to officials.

Blackwell, 32, was indicted by the Yuma County Grand Jury Sept. 16 in connection with a July 11 traffic accident near Parker, Ariz., that took the life of Lisa Garlich, 18, of Huntington Beach, officials said.

An indictment is a charge brought against a person by a grand jury and does not establish guilt or innocence.

The fatal accident occurred on State Route 95, about 10 miles north of Parker, according to an accident report performed by the Arizona Department of Public Safety.

The vehicle failed to negotiate a curve and rolled over after fish-tailing, according to the report.

Garlich, one of three passengers thrown from the vehicle, suffered massive head and neck injuries, according to the report.

An investigating officer said in the report that Blackwell left the scene of the accident, according to Allan Schmitt, a spokesman for the Department of Public Safety.

The accident report also said that Blackwell's vehicle was traveling 50 miles an hour in a 35-mile-per-hour zone. The officer said it was his opinion that this was not a reasonable rate of speed, according to Schmitt.

The investigating officer also said it was his opinion that (See OFFICER, Page A2)

Baby hostage released

A tense drama in Costa Mesa ended Tuesday evening when a father who held a knife to his own body surrendered his infant son, taken hostage inside a rundown automobile, to police.

Costa Mesa police officer Kevin Gleason talked to the 20-year-old father for nearly an hour, while neighbors watched and six other officers cordoned off the 200 block of Ogle Street, ready to move in.

The man, identified as Bob Ball, was taken to UC Irvine Medical Center in Orange where he was placed under 72-hour observation. No criminal charges were filed.

Sgt. Rod Haddock said that Ball held a four-inch carving knife at his own stomach and never threatened to hurt the baby who sat on his lap and was released unharmed at 5 p.m.

Haddock assured the mother, Lisa Ball, 18, that her husband didn't threaten the baby. "If he did anything he said he would do it to himself. I was prepared that if he made a move to do what I (See HOSTAGE, Page A2)

Singer launches KDOC

By PHIL SNEIDERMAN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Singer Pat Boone stood in a half-finished Anaheim television studio Tuesday, promising to bring a little bit of Hollywood to Orange County and show a little bit of Orange County to Hollywood.

Boone is president and a chief shareholder of Golden Orange Broadcasting Co., owner of Orange County's first commercial television station, KDOC Channel 56.

Wearing a gold and orange jacket and shirt, along with 1950s-style brown and white saddle shoes, Boone spoke enthusiastically about the station, which begins broadcasting Friday after a 14-year struggle.

"We believe this is a golden opportunity for the 26 cities of Orange County," he said. "We want this station to reflect life in Orange County. We'll at last be able to show Orange County to everyone else."

Boone described the effort to put KDOC on the air as nearly "an impossible dream."

Golden Orange was one of numerous business groups that applied in 1968 for the commercial station license designated for Orange County. It took seven years for the Federal Communications Commission to award the license to Golden Orange, then another seven to secure transmitter location approval and install the antenna atop Sunset Ridge in the San Bernardino Mountains.

The station's initial programming will consist of syndicated series reruns such as "Gunsmoke" and "McHale's Navy," plus sport broadcasts

from Cal State Fullerton and Cal State Long Beach.

In addition, the station will broadcast a nightly news show focusing on one Orange County issue per program, plus a noontime man-on-the-street interview show visiting locations throughout the county.

Former KNBC Channel 4 anchorman Jack Latham, who is KDOC's general manager, admitted that the initial schedule is modest. But he added that he believes Orange County-oriented programming will expand as the station becomes better known.

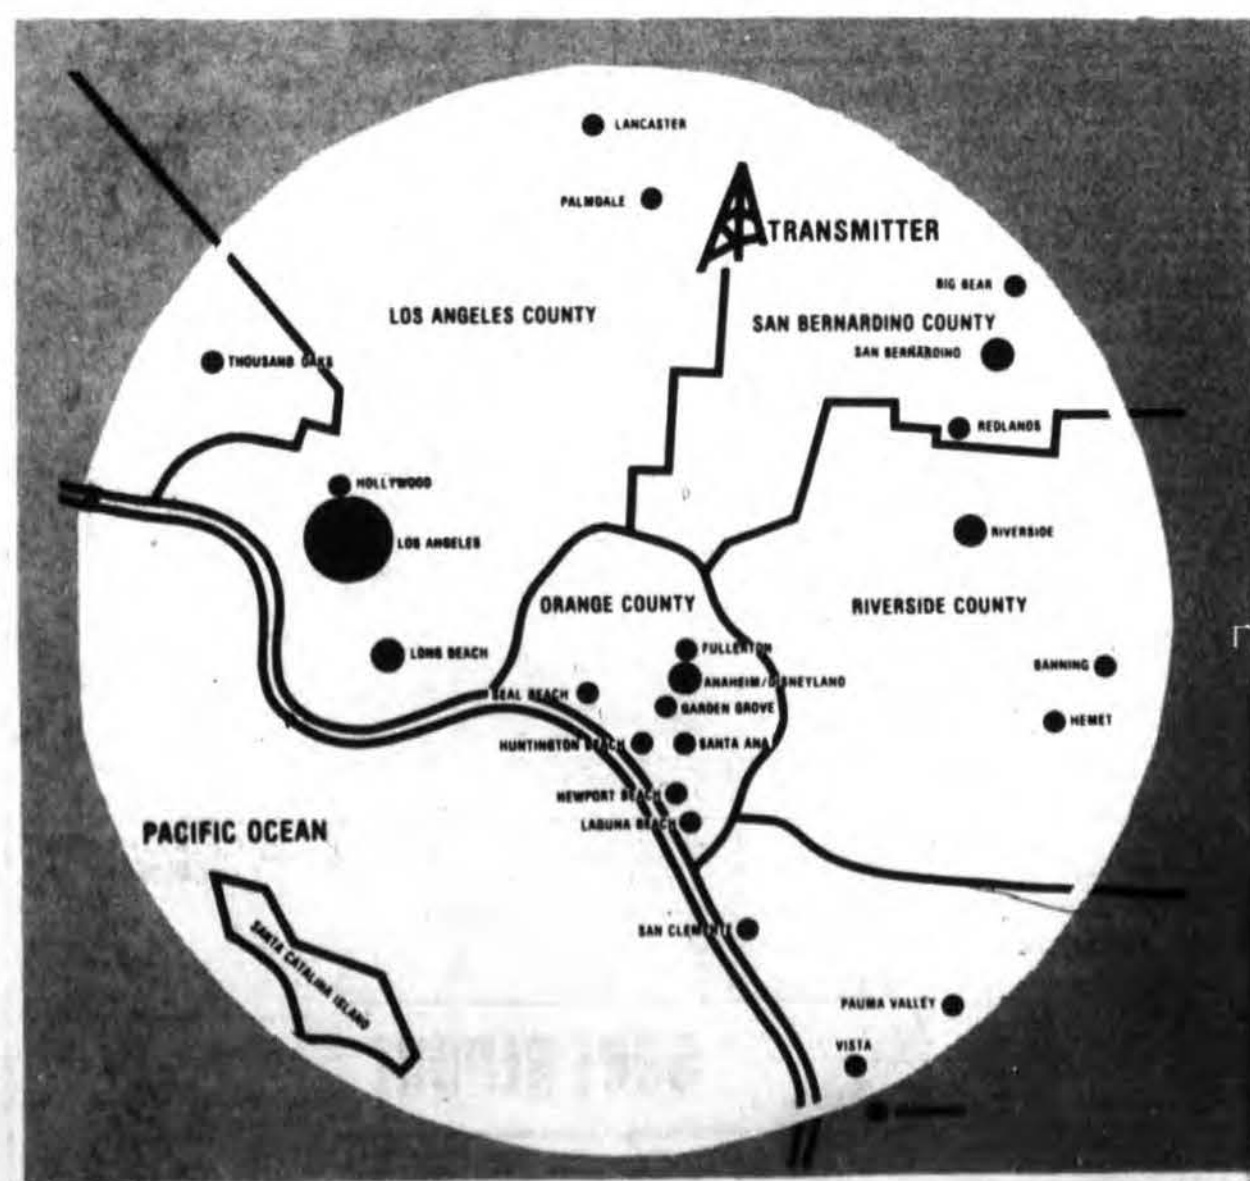

"We have to get our legs, and that's where we are now," Latham said.

Along with Boone, KDOC's major investors include former Westminster Mayor Calvin C. Brack, and Los Angeles attorneys William G. Simon and Tom Sheridan.

Latham said the shareholders already have invested approximately $2 million into the project and want to see the station begin generating some of its own revenues before investing additional capital.

But the station manager said his long-term plans are to expand local coverage to include Orange County cultural events, along with local community college sports and perhaps high school sports.

"My credo," Latham said, "is that if it has to do with Orange County and it's worthwhile program material, we'll do it."

Orange County's first commercial TV station will broadcast within circled area.

Valley's Woolco closure raises tenant queries

Of the Daily Pilot Staff

The announcement that the W. Woolworth Co. will close its large Woolco store in Fountain Valley has set off speculation concerning the future of its 103,000-square-foot Brookhurst street building.

The Fountain Valley store, which employs about 75 persons, is the only Orange County Woolco outlet. It is slated to close in early 1983 along with 335 other Woolco stores across the country, according to the parent company.

Pat Doyle, vice president of Doyle and Shields, a partner in the Westhaven Plaza where the Fountain Valley Woolco is located, said Woolworth officials signed a long-term lease which has not yet expired.

Doyle said his firm has not been contacted by Woolworth officials regarding who will seek a new tenant for the Fountain Valley store, which opened in 1971.

But he predicted, "It's not going to sit vacant."

Doyle said the closure of Woolco, following the shutdown earlier this year of the Fed-Mart chain, does not necessarily indicate hard times for discount stores. He said his company owns a similar shopping center in Huntington Beach at which a Gemco store is apparently thriving.

The Westhaven Plaza was affected earlier this year by the closure of Market Basket supermarkets, including one adjacent to the Woolco store.

Doyle said Market Basket retains the lease for that store and has been negotiating with several different parties interested in moving into that location. He said he expects a new tenant to be lined up for the Market Basket store before the end of the year.

Fountain Valley city officials also are concerned about the Woolco closure because 1 percent of the store's gross sales are returned to the city through state sales tax.

City Comptroller Howard Longhalla said the Woolco outlet was once one of the city's top sales tax generators, although its returns have declined in recent years.

Calls to local Woolco officials were referred to J.F. Carroll.

Woolworth vice president for public affairs in New York.

Although he was not aware of arrangements for the Fountain Valley store, Carroll said Woolworth may retain some of its more valuable long-term store leases and find new tenants. He said other retail chains traditionally contact companies that are closing to inquire about moving into the vacant stores.

Woolworth officials announced the closure of the Woolco chain last Friday, saying the large discount outlets had persistently lost money. The company plans to concentrate attention on its 1,300 Woolworth general merchandise stores and its specialty chains such as Kinney, Foot Locker and Richman.

Carroll also said the Woolco closure does not necessarily indicate large discount houses are in trouble. He said the K-Mart chain, with 1,900 stores nationwide, remains "very viable."

But he said Woolco suffered from having fewer stores dispersed over a large area. He said the company failed to concentrate its business in specific market areas.

BULLETIN BOARD

Exchange Club to seat officers

The Fountain Valley Exchange Club will install its new officers during a dinner tonight at the Harlequin Dinner Playhouse in Santa Ana. Mayor Marvin Adler will officiate.

New officers are Pat McLaughlin, president; Doug Magnuson, vice president;

Roy Redmond, secretary, and Don Bailey, treasurer.

The Exchange Club recently presented the Fountain Valley Law Enforcement Explorers with a check for $360. This donation was for the security help provided by the Explorers during club events.

• Golden West College music and dance instructors will perform original numbers during the Huntington Beach College's first annual Dance and Music Faculty Concert, scheduled Friday through Sunday in the Community Theater.

Performances will be at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday, and at 5 p.m. on Sunday. Tickets, at $4 each, may be purchased at the college bookstore.

The program will include modern and jazz dance pieces, plus contemporary and classical musical arrangements.

• The Ocean View School District is looking for college students to work as classroom aides in the primary grades. Openings are for part-time employment during morning hours.

The pay is $4.25 an hour. Students must be carrying at least 12 units of college credit to be eligible for the jobs.

Interested students can contact Joyce Reinholdt in the Ocean View office at 16940 B St., Huntington Beach, or can call her at 847-2551, ext. 224.

Impact of 'legal aliens' feared

By STEVE TRIPOLI
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Orange County supervisors, worried about federal legislation which could legalize the status of thousands of undocumented aliens, want to know what the impact of such legislation could be in local dollars.

An influx of new people with a legitimate claim to welfare, health and other services could have a serious impact on the county budget, Supervisors Chairman Bruce Nestande told fellow members Tuesday.

Nestande sponsored a motion adopted by the board calling for a $1,000 expenditure to study the impact of legislation currently before Congress.

Two versions of the legislation, known after its sponsors as the Simpson-Mazzoli immigration reform bill, are being considered on Capitol Hill. The two could have widely different impacts on local governments.

According to James McConnell, one of the county's Washington lobbyists, the version which already has passed the Senate provides reimbursements to local areas for increased public service costs resulting from the legislation, but the reimbursements may not cover total costs.

A version currently on its way to the House guarantees full federal reimbursement for additional local costs resulting from the legislation, McConnell said.

The impacts would vary with the number of undocumented aliens who are allowed to stay legally and thus qualify for social services, McConnell said. Part of the debate over the bill is whether to legalize the status of aliens who have arrived since Jan. 1, 1980, or whether only those who arrived after Jan. 1, 1982 should be excluded, he said.

The $1,000 appropriated by the supervisors will buy the services of immigration specialist David North, director of the private Center for Labor and Migration Studies in Washington.

Nestande said North's study won't "give us an absolute, down-to-the-penny analysis" of the bill's local economic impact, but he said North can direct county staff members toward areas for an expanded study which will pinpoint costs.

He said North's analysis also will help the county formulate a position on the bill that can be heard in Washington before the House version is considered. McConnell said Tuesday that consideration is unlikely to come until after Nov. 29, when the House returns from its election break.

In other actions supervisors:

— Approved a five-year plan for county beaches, parks and harbors that calls for construction of several new recreational facilities along the Orange Coast.

— Approved a plan to finance construction of the 248-unit Windwood project in Irvine and the 64-unit family Village project in Mission Viejo. Both will be rental units for families.

— Approved budgets totaling $457,504 to continue two programs of preventive medicine for children.

would have had to do."

Lisa said that the couple were recently separated. An argument over the baby's toys escalated and Ball reportedly threw her against the bedroom wall and then ran from the home with the infant.

She said her husband of seven months then raced up and down the 200 block of Ogle, before parking the family car across the street.

Blackwell was driving under the influence of intoxicating liquor, according to Schmitt.

Blackwell, who appeared personally at Tuesday's arraignment, has been on the Huntington Beach police force four years. He has been reassigned to desk duties pending the disposition of his case, according to Police Chief Earle Robitaille.

An attorney for Blackwell declined to comment and wished to remain silent on the case at this time, an employee for the attorney said.

Big Brother claim in molest settled

An out-of-court settlement has been reached between Big Brothers-Big Sisters of Orange County and the family of a boy who claimed he was molested by a volunteer with the group five years ago.

Neither the attorneys for former Huntington Beach resident Michael Acosta, who sued Big Brothers, nor the Big Brothers organization would disclose the amount of settlement.

It came in the second week of a trial before jurors in Orange County Superior Court Judge Edward Wallin's courtroom.

According to Acosta's mother, who testified last week, her 18-year-old son became withdrawn and could neither eat nor sleep after the alleged incidents in 1977.

"All he wanted to do was lay down and curl up and not say anything," Judy Ann Acosta testified.

It was alleged by Acosta that Big Brother volunteer Ed Smith molested him repeatedly. Smith pleaded no contest to criminal misdemeanor child molestation charges.

Acosta's lawsuit against Big Brothers contended that the organization was negligent in allowing Smith to work with minors. Acosta sought damages because of medical treatment he will need and the possibility that he may be unemployable.

Attorneys for Big Brothers had contended that Acosta suffered from emotional problems before meeting Smith and that the organization thoroughly screened its volunteers.

WEATHER

Coastal

Variable cloudiness today with highs of 70 to 75. Clouds to remain tonight and Thursday with overnight lows of 62 to 65. Highs Thursday 68 to 73. Breezy afternoons. Huntington-Newport area temperatures to range from a low of 59 to a high of 73.

Elsewhere, from Point Conception to the Mexican border and out 60 miles: Small craft advisory over outer waters with northwest winds of 20 to 30 knots this afternoon through Thursday. Seas 5 to 8 feet. Locally light variable winds tonight and Thursday morning with south to southwest winds 10 to 15 knots, turning west to northwest 12 to 18 knots Thursday afternoon. Wind waves 3 to 4 feet. West to southwest swells 1 to 3 feet. Variable cloudiness today and Thursday.

California

Scattered cloudy skies and the possibility of mountain and desert thundershowers accompanied by gusty winds dotted Southern California's weather outlook today, according to the National Weather Service.

The high temperature in Los Angeles was forecast at 74 with a low of 59. Northern desert highs may reach into the 60s with lows from 44 to 54. High winds from 20 to 30 mph were expected by the weather service in northern desert areas.

Mountain and desert areas scored the highest probability of rain through Thursday. The high temperature in mountain areas should range from 58 to 65 with lows from 38 to 45. Northwest winds from 15 to 30 mph are expected in the mountains.

Southern desert highs should range from 74 to 82 with lows from 54 to 64. Owens Valley highs are forecast from 74 to 72 with lows from 46 to 53. Highs from 72 to 76 and lows from 50 to 58 were expected in coastal valleys.

U.S. summary

Travelers advisories were issued Tuesday over the mountains of northwestern Wyoming and Colorado, where locally drifting and blowing snow created hazardous driving conditions.

Temperatures at higher elevations of the region were as much as 15 degrees colder than those of the past weekend.

Locally heavy snow was expected in the mountains from western Montana through Colorado, with accumulations of as much as 12 inches of new snow by morning.

Cloudy and breezy

Thunderstorms developed over the Plains and a tornado watch was issued for parts of eastern South Dakota, northeastern Nebraska, southwestern Minnesota and northwestern Iowa.

For today, fair skies were forecast for much of the nation. Showers were forecast from Upper Michigan across the northern Rockies and Great Basin, changing to snow showers in Montana. Thunderstorms were forecast in parts of the northern and central Plains, with rain showers in the northern Pacific Coast.

Girl, 17, faces trial in slaying

A 17-year-old girl accused of shooting her boyfriend to death in Laguna Beach last May will be tried as an adult and not as a juvenile.

Orange County Superior Court Judge William Murray ruled last Tuesday that it was more appropriate to handle Laura Lee Feist's case through the adult criminal court system than through the juvenile court system. She will be arraigned Friday.

In making his ruling, Murray

cited the circumstances of the shooting incident and the alleged criminal sophistication shown by Feist, a Laguna Beach High School transfer student, who apparently shot herself in the chest, prosecutors allege, after fatally wounding James Anthony Kendall, 21, of Emerald Bay.

The judge said in his ruling that he didn't believe Feist would be a good candidate for rehabilitation if convicted since the juvenile justice system would have less time to keep her incarcerated.

Feist could face a longer sentence if convicted in adult court than if she had been tried in juvenile court. As an adult, a judge can sentence her to the California Youth Authority until her 25th birthday. She could then be transferred to state prison. As a juvenile, she could have been kept no later than her 23rd birthday at CYA and would have been given an automatic release date.

Massacre inquiry asked

By The Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin today formally asked Supreme Court President Yitzhak Kahan to appoint a commission to investigate Israel's conduct regarding the massacre of Palestinians in Beirut.

Begin sent Kahan a letter by messenger asking that he start the commission. It will have powers to subpoena witnesses and penalize perjurers in probing the mass slaughter that has churned a storm of moral outrage and political turmoil in Israel.

Ancient objects discovered

Dr. Yannis Sakellarakis,

director of Heraklion museum, said some of the objects date from 1300 B.C. and include a decorated strip of gold, bronze shields and basins, iron arrowheads and spears and other dedications of silver, lead, ivory and wooden objects.

Captive fishermen released

SEOUL, South Korea — A South Korean fishing boat and its 35 crewmen returned to port today after 78 days of captivity in North Korea, authorities said.

The 114-ton Masan-ho was seized by a North Korean patrol ship July 13 while operating in what South Korea called international waters.

By South Korean count, North Korea has seized 3,554 South Korean fishermen since the end of the Korean War in 1953. South Korea says 407 have never returned.

Shultz, Gromyko confer

UNITED NATIONS (AP)

Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko, failing to agree on any outstanding problem between their countries, say they will try again next week.

They met for three hours Tuesday in a session that a senior U.S. official called "serious" and "non-polemical."

"They were two serious people talking about serious subjects," said the official who briefed reporters on the understanding he would not be identified. "There was no yelling. They got along all right."

He provided few details of what was discussed, except to say they reviewed subjects that included arms control, human rights issues, Poland, Afghanistan and Cambodia.

"No agreements were reached, other than to meet again next week for further discussions," he said. U.S. officials had indicated earlier they did not expect major results to emerge from the meeting.

The senior official indicated Shultz reiterated U.S. demands that the Soviet Union drop support for Poland's martial-law regime and withdraw troops from Afghanistan.

"You can assume what the secretary would be saying about the two subjects," the official said.

But he said the economic sanctions imposed by Washington against Moscow because of the martial-law crackdown in Poland — which have become a divisive issue in U.S.-West European relations — "did not come up at all."

Shultz and Gromyko were unsmiling at the beginning of their meeting at the U.S. mission to the United Nations. Afterward, Gromyko smiled and waved to reporters but declined comment.

Tanker blast rocks city

LIVINGSTON, La. (AP) — A new explosion rocked this empty town early today, sending flaming debris from derailed tanker cars "all over the place," and authorities feared toxic smoke would drift to a nearby community where some of the 3,000 evacuees had taken refuge.

No one was seriously hurt in today's blast or in the explosion that took place when 42 cars of an Illinois Central-Gulf freight train derailed before dawn Tuesday.

The derailment caused a thunderous explosion that sent flames leaping from one chemical tank car to another all day long, and spewed toxic smoke.

"We had another explosion this morning, and we assume it was one of the vinyl chloride tank cars," State Police Sgt. Stephen Campbell said early today. "It was nothing we weren't expecting, but it blew pieces of the tank car all over the place when it exploded . . . and it lighted up the sky briefly."

Tuesday night, Lt. Gov. Bobby Freeman put the Louisiana National Guard on alert and sent more state police in to this southeastern Louisiana town to arrest any looters. Gov. Dave Treen cut short a Florida vacation to return today.

The American Red Cross set up evacuation shelters at Walker and Holden high schools, about six miles from Livingston. About 96 people spent the night at both, officials said. Many displaced people moved in with relatives or friends.

Hours after Tuesday's blast, all 2,000 Livingston residents fled.

The situation worsened at mid-afternoon, when a tanker containing tetra-ethyl lead shot a fireball into the sky, spreading fumes over a wide area and driving flames closer to seven overturned tankers containing highly poisonous vinyl chloride.

Measles outbreak reported

PHOENIX, Ariz. — The Arizona Department of Health Services says children who visited Disneyland in California the week of Aug. 15-21 may have brought home an unwanted souvenir: measles.

A current outbreak of measles in the Phoenix-Glendale area has been traced to a 12-year-old boy who visited Disneyland that week, officials said. Eight cases of measles have been reported and more are expected, they said.

Offshore mineral find told

MIAMI — A scientist says the discovery of a rich offshore bed of minerals near Southeast states could free the United States from depending on unstable nations for "strategic" metals.

Dr. Frank T. Manheim of the U.S. Geological Survey

said Tuesday that the 63,000-square-mile bed, stretching from North Carolina to Florida, holds more cobalt, manganese, phosphorite, nickel and platinum than any other known area in the United States.

'Lemon law' starts Friday

HARTFORD, Conn. — Manufacturers, not new-car buyers, will shoulder the burden for defective autos once the nation's first "lemon law" takes effect.

Starting Friday, Connecticut consumers may take complaints first to an independent arbitration panel, which must decide the case within 40 days, and any rulings against the automaker are binding. A consumer disagreeing with the decision then may sue the manufacturer.

Consumers are eligible if a new car is under repair for more than 30 straight days in the first year of ownership or if a single problem has not been fixed after four attempts at repair.

Mesa teen hero in Forsythe's saga

Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Victor Forsythe of Costa Mesa can't guess how many people passed by his sweaty, limp body, thinking he was drugged or drunk — not guessing he was near death.

Forsythe, 33, was returning from a trip to San Diego Aug. 27 and stopped at a bank in Santa Ana to make a deposit. He was standing in line when he began feeling weak and dizzy.

Thinking that the feeling would pass in a moment he drove to nearby Centennial Park and sank down in the warm dry grass.

He remembers a police car cruising by real slow. It stopped. But the bearded man was too exhausted to even raise his head.

Finally he dragged himself back to his van and either fell asleep or passed out for several hours. When he awoke the temperature was in the mid-90's, he recalled.

"I was so weak all I could think of is I've got to get to a hospital," said Forsythe. "My throat felt like the Sahara Desert."

He managed to move a few yards to a restroom and collapsed on the grass. He was lying there when Delbert Bledsoe, 17, of Costa Mesa and several friends found him.

Bledsoe, a senior at Back Bay High School, said that his friends told him not to get in the car with the stranger. But Delbert loaded his bike in the back and drove Forsythe to a clinic in Costa Mesa.

Victor Forsythe (left) owes his life to Delbert Bledsoe, 17, who took Forsythe to a hospital after finding him stricken in a Santa Ana.

"I thought he was kind of hurting," said Bledsoe. "He looked so sick. I thought he was going to die."

Forsythe said he was told by doctors at Costa Mesa Memorial Hospital that he had nearly died from blood poisoning.

Almost all of the world's religions are honored by some kind of symbolism. Christians, of course, use the symbol of the cross to remind them of the execution of Jesus. Those of the Jewish faith have the Star of David. This symbol is so sold (more than 2,000 years) that scholars and historians disagree on its origin. Many Catholics wear medals honoring particular saints recognized by their church. Some of the designs that are made into jewelry and are woven into fabrics by the American Indians are symbols that became part of their spiritual faith many centuries ago. Believe it or not, young people wear religious symbols as jewelry more often than their elders. It is also a fact that women wear more religious jewelry than men. Sterling silver and gold-filled pieces are very popular with young people. Such jewelry has become fashionable, as well as showing an expression of one's faith. The simple dignity of these symbols gives them a beauty that is universal.

An extraordinary diamond of a carat or more. Show the world you couldn't have made it without her.

Still time for action on school fund issue

As noted here immediately after the close of the legislative session, California's lawmakers fumbled badly on one of the most important issues demanding their attention — public school financing.

Offered two opportunities to restore dwindling school funding — an oil severance tax that would have raised $400 million, or an additional tax on tobacco and alcohol for $350 million — they backed away from both, clearly panic-stricken by the idea of a tax increase of any type in an election year.

So the schools opened with just about the same budget they had last year. No money for pay increases, for building maintenance, for textbooks, or to restore programs that have been cut since Proposition 13 began to take effect.

The schools already have laid off teachers, counselors, librarians, maintenance people. Instruction programs from remedial reading to music have been eliminated. Students are asked to pay more for school lunches and transportation.

There is no room for more cuts if they are to receive anything resembling a decent education.

Already California has the second highest ratio (after Utah) of students per teacher, 23.6 compared with a national average of 18.4.

The national average amount spent per student is $2,690. California spends $2,337, down from 21st to 35th in the nation in just two years.

And in percentage of personal income channeled into the school system, we have the honor to be dead last — No. 50.

Of course there is more to a school system than dollars. But without a reasonable financial base even the best-intentioned teachers and administrators cannot function adequately. Alas, so far as teachers are concerned, too many have become so discouraged they are simply leaving the profession altogether. The loss is our children's, and their future in this state.

Given our legislators' pre-election jitters, there's not much to be done before Nov. 2. But it still is possible for the governor to call a special session of the Legislature immediately after the election to do what should have been done.

If the issue of school financing is put off until after the New Year it will again be bogged down in the morass of legislation facing the new group of lawmakers. The governor could make us all rest easier by announcing a special session immediately. The outgoing Legislature should not be permitted to pass the buck on this one.

Taxpayer protection

Taxpayers who tangle with the Internal Revenue Service are granted some new protections under the 1982 tax act.

The new law puts some reins on the ability of the IRS to seize property to satisfy tax claims, speeds up the deadline for releasing property when a lien is satisfied and assures a taxpayer who wins a court fight with the IRS of adequate recompense for court costs and attorney fees.

With the cost of tax litigation now averaging $9,000 to $12,000, the law says a taxpayer who wins a tax case now can be awarded up to $25,000 to cover such costs.

When the IRS intends to seize property, the taxpayer now must be warned in advance by certified mail and thus given a chance to head off the action. Previously, the IRS could proceed with seizure without knowing whether or not the taxpayer had received due notice.

The rules regarding property exempt from seizure, unchanged

since 1959, also have been made more realistic.

Furniture, provisions and personal effects worth up to $1,500 now are exempt. The previous limit was $500. The exemption for books and tools of a trade has been raised from $250 to $1,000 and exempted wages are increased from $50 to $75 a week, with an additional exemption for each dependent.

Finally, the IRS now must release property within 30 days when a claim is satisfied. Previously there was no time limit.

While the heavy hand of the IRS still can come down on delinquent citizens, the taxpayer who claims innocence now can fight the government without going broke, and the one who has indeed broken the rules will not be deprived of too many possessions while trying to make amends. Given the IRS horror stories that come up from time to time, all this sounds more reasonable.

A man of courage

The Orange Coast lost a true man of courage and the youth of our area lost a true friend last Sunday with the untimely death of Dean J. Westgaard, teacher, coach, lifeguard supervisor, sky diver and gentleman.

Westgaard demonstrated his courage from his days as a football star through becoming a professional skydiver with more than 2,500 jumps to his credit.

Much of his life was spent serving youth as a teacher, coach, supervisor and friend.

But at no time did the Laguna Beach resident and Orange Coast College instructor demonstrate more courage than in his final fight against cancer.

He died at age 52. He will indeed be missed by all who knew him.

L.M. Boyd/Little use for u's

The original dictionary man Noah Webster was moved mostly at the outset by one main motive: to rid the American language of the useless "u's" in such English words as colour, honour, labour. He was 17 years old when the Declaration of Independence was signed.

If you are 76 years old, you were born just about the time that pajamas first replaced the full-length nightshirt as modern man's favorite sleeping costume.

A married man in a business partnership is more apt to split up with his wife than with his partner, statistics show.

Turkish coffee houses serve nothing at all but coffee.

Q. Didn't the Russian musical genius Rachmaninoff start the Sikorsky helicopter company?

A. No, sir, Rachmaninoff invested $5,000 in Igor Sikorsky's aircraft company when it was in financial trouble, however, Sikorsky gave Rachmaninoff the title of vice president.

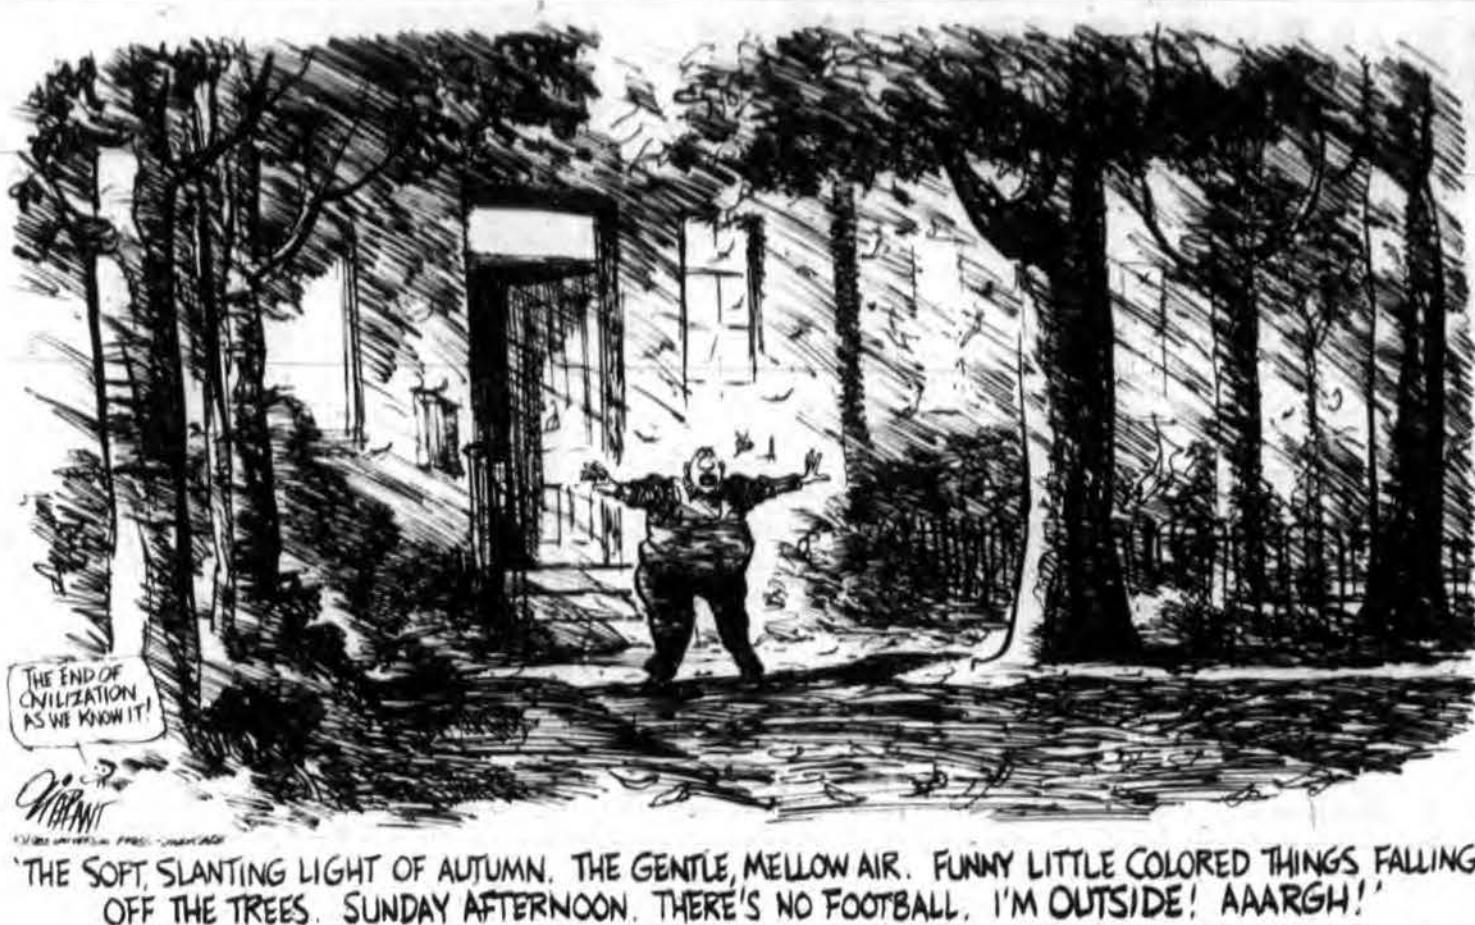

Q. How come there's no male or female name for a beaver except beaver?

A. Because none but another beaver can tell the difference. No call to specify when you just don't know.

Dayan eyed Lebanon annex

WASHINGTON — White House suspicion of Israel has become so intense that President Reagan's top advisers are now wondering whether Prime Minister Menachem Begin is planning the eventual annexation of southern Lebanon.

Secret reports shown to my associates Dale Van Atta and Ron McRae indicate why the White House is disturbed.

One secret State Department report, for example, had this to say on Sept. 15, as the Israeli invasion of West Beirut was proceeding apace: There is a danger that Israel's "logistical operations will evolve into permanent administrative agencies."

IN OTHER WORDS, the suspicion is that Israel is in the process of building a military-civilian government for Israeli-occupied Lebanon.

The same pattern of Israeli infiltration that has been seen in the West Bank territories seems to be evolving in Lebanon. The ultra-nationalist extremist group, Gush Emunim, is planning to put Israeli settlements in southern Lebanon, according to U.S. reports.

If Begin follows his past action, he will not denounce these settlements for fear of criticism from hardline Israeli factions that are the bedrock of his political support. Instead, he will see that the bootleg settlements are hooked up to water and electricity to make them permanently viable.

The Gush Emunim and the Israeli Army's chief rabbi, Gen. Gad Navon, believe that God may be giving them southern Lebanon to compensate for Israel's withdrawal from the Sinai. The

JACK ANDERSON

White House suspicions.

A former Israeli prime minister, Moshe Sharett, published an intriguing account in 1978 of a meeting of Israeli defense and foreign-policy officials. The meeting occurred 27 years ago, and quotes the late Moshe Dayan, then army chief of staff, as saying Lebanon was ripe for the picking.

"The only thing that's necessary is to find an officer, even just a major," Dayan said, according to the account. "We would either win his heart or buy him with money, to make him agree to declare himself the savior of the Maronite (Christian) population."

"Then the Israeli army will enter Lebanon, will occupy the necessary territory and will create a Christian regime which will ally itself with Israel," Dayan reportedly continued. "The territory from the Litani (River) southward will be totally annexed by Israel and everything will be all right."

The Dayan scenario was followed to the letter — even to the choice of the cooperative Christian leader's military rank. Maj. Saad Haddad, a cashed-in Lebanese officer, has been acting as Israel's puppet warlord in the Litani River area for years.

The secret Sept. 15 report predicted that Israel would try to bestow legitimacy on Haddad, possibly by insisting that he be included in any future Lebanese regime. His role in the massacres at the Palestinian refugee camps in West Beirut may have destroyed his chances, however.

ISRAEL'S COVETOUS designs on southern Lebanon are explained in a top-secret CIA report, which states: "Hardliners in Israel have for years pointed out that Israel, by seizing territory up to the Litani River, would gain a more defensive border and a greater supply of water." In fact, Israeli engineers are already working at the Litani, exploring its potential for irrigation.

At the start of the West Beirut invasion, Begin assured Reagan in a private message that Israel "did not covet one inch of Lebanese territory." In early June, he had publicly declared in the Knesset that Israel didn't want "one square millimeter of Lebanese territory."

The White House no longer has faith in these assurances.

Footnote: An official of the Israeli Embassy said that Israel has "no intention of annexing any part of Lebanon or setting up any settlements."

Island might solve jail site dilemma

Probably in a moment of frustration, Sen. Robert Presley dashed off a letter to the state prison director suggesting the use of Alcatraz Island as a means of relieving overcrowding in California prisons.

Presley had authored the $495 million prison construction bond issue approved by the voters last June. But any relief to come from the money provided by the bonds is at least two years away. Actually the funds are viewed as just "starter" money for the longterm need for new prison facilities.

ALCATRAZ, long the site of a federal prison, was abandoned a number of years back by the government on grounds it was too costly to operate.

Presley either has never visited the site or has forgotten its limited capacity. In operation, it never housed more than 250 inmates. Because of its small size its operating costs were magnified.

Not only must all of its supplies, including water, be barged from the mainland but, lacking a sewage treatment plant, the sewage too must be transported by barge.

the prison required a full-time fleet of boats, ferries and barges.

Nothing about that has changed. But time, fire and unauthorized occupations of the property have taken a toll on the buildings. So even without considering operational costs, the funds required to rehabilitate the plant are far out of proportion to the few prisoners that would be accommodated.

Unquestionably the prison authorities are having problems housing the inmates. Even though, as Sen. Ed Davis, the former Los Angeles police chief, has pointed out, the department tends to exaggerate the overcrowding, it does exist. That days when 5,000 could be crammed into San Quentin's designed capacity of 2,700 are gone. Today's prisoners are more violent. And then there are the racial problems which were non-existent in the earlier days.

The department has been attempting to meet the crisis by expanding both the community release program and the conservation camps but there is a limit to those who can safely be assigned to such programs.

The department also is constructing satellite facilities at Folsom and Tehachapi which will use up a good part of the $495 million bond issue.

The prison authorities would still like to build at least one new complete facility but they are meeting resistance from communities each time a site is under consideration.

So Presley's idea about Alcatraz isn't as far out as it seems. Domiciling prisoners on an island would solve the problem of community resistance. Furthermore it would provide security without the great expense of building prison cells and walls. Presley just picked the wrong island.

Hate can overwhelm love

In a lifetime of reading, one begins to realize how much has been written about love, and how little about hate. Yet hate is, in a sense, the greater force, in that it can destroy in a single moment what love has taken years to build.

It seems to me that we spend too much time sentimentalizing over love, and too fear revolt and revolution. Each position hardens out of fear, until conflict becomes inevitable, though all may desire a less devastating confrontation.

How do we deal with the mechanism of hate born of fear? The world has never really addressed itself to this basic problem. Disputes have been settled ad hoc around the conference table or on the battlefield — but each "settlement" contains the seed of renewal.

We speak of "love" as the ultimate solvent, but before love can come into operation, we have to find a way to reduce the mutual fear which feeds on itself, and eventually consumes itself in warfare. We must learn how to tame and re-channel the torrent of hate that now, for the first time, has the capacity to obliterate most of mankind.

What is so tragically ironic today is that the only way governments feel they can adequately defend themselves is by playing on the fear of the "enemy" — as we are told to fear the Russians, and they to fear us.

The most imperative thing needed in the world at this time is a community of nations, and it has never seemed further away. Perhaps it will take a holocaust of hate to burn the fear out of us and leave the saving remnant — if any — holding hands amid the ashes.

little effort to understand the roots and ramifications of hate, a destructive element far more rampant than any number of nuclear warheads.

This is true not merely in personal terms, but on a tribal or national scale as well. It took the Israelis many loving years to build up a prosperous and fertile country; it can take only a few hours or days to devastate the entire Middle East. St. Paul informs us that perfect love casts out fear; but the reverse is equally, and more dreadfully, the case — fear drives out love and transforms it into a raging and implacable hatred.

The Palestinians fear extinction; the Israelis fear destruction; the Arab states

Nevada Nell (Gus, Sept. 24) should change her name to Johnnie come lately. The Lebanese have been killing each other for at least seven years, and constantly.

You can afford LB home, if you're old enough

Of the Daily Pilot Staff

A quick check with the Laguna Beach Board of Realtors shows the cheapest house on the market in town is going for $139,500.

The owner of the next cheapest house is asking $167,500.

So you can understand why they're lining up to buy into local developer James Schmitz' 31-unit project that probably won't even get under way until late next spring.

"We've had more than 30 inquiries about the project already," Schmitz said.

And no wonder. Schmitz, of Beach Construction Co., plans to market the 500- to 600-square-foot units for between $72,500 and $89,000.

But, as in the case of most great deals, there's a catch.

Buyers must be at least 60 years of age, or promise not to move into their unit until they reach that age. In the interim, they must rent their unit at affordable rates to older tenants.

In addition, buyers must earn less than $25,000 a year and, if they sell their unit in later years, must not ask more than the original price plus an adjustment for inflation.

Schmitz and his investors have submitted plans for the project to the city's planning department and hope to break ground on the eight-level, terraced development by April of next year.

The units would front on Mermaid and the 3rd Street hill, and feature a Victorian design and two elevators.

Parking for 19 vehicles would be accommodated with an underground lot and a smaller lot at the uphill corner of the 12,000-square-foot parcel.

Since the development would house only senior citizens, Schmitz believes the State Coastal Commission will permit fewer parking spaces than normally required.

And, he says, there are potential advantages to Laguna (See SENIOR, Page A2)

Mesa baby hostage released

A tense drama in Costa Mesa ended Tuesday evening when a father who held a knife to his own body surrendered his infant son, taken hostage inside a rundown automobile, to police.

Costa Mesa police officer Kevin Gleason talked to the 20-year-old father for nearly an hour, while neighbors watched and six other officers cordoned off the 200 block of Ogle Street, ready to move in.

The man, identified as Bob

Ball, was taken to UC Irvine Medical Center in Orange where he was placed under 72-hour observation. No criminal charges were filed.

Sgt. Rod Haddock said that Ball held a four-inch carving knife at his own stomach and never threatened to hurt the baby who sat on his lap and was released unharmed at 5 p.m.

Haddock assured the mother, Lisa Ball, 18, that her husband didn't threaten the baby. "If he did anything he said he would do it to himself. I was prepared that if he made a move to do what I would have had to do."

Lisa said that the couple were recently separated. An argument over the baby's toys escalated and Ball reportedly threw her against the bedroom wall and then ran from the home with the infant.

She said her husband of seven months then raced up and down the 200 block of Ogle, before parking the family car across the street.

"Everyone was worried about him (the baby)," said the young mother, as Bobby lay quietly in her arms grabbing fistfuls of long brown hair. "But he came out the best."

The couple have lived with her mother in Costa Mesa since moving from Ohio seven months ago. Bob was laid off from his job at a car wash five days ago.

Impact of aliens probed in county

By STEVE TRIPOLI
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Orange County supervisors, worried about federal legislation which could legalize the status of thousands of undocumented aliens, want to know what the impact of such legislation could be in local dollars.

An influx of new people with a legitimate claim to welfare, health and other services could have a serious impact on the county budget, Supervisors Chairman Bruce Nestande told fellow members Tuesday.

Nestande sponsored a motion adopted by the board calling for a $1,000 expenditure to study the impact of legislation currently before Congress.

Two versions of the legislation, known after its sponsors as the Simpson-Mazzoli immigration reform bill, are being considered on Capitol Hill. The two could have widely different impacts on local governments.

According to James McConnell, one of the county's Washington lobbyists, the version which already has passed the Senate provides reimbursements to local areas for increased public service costs resulting from the legislation, but the reimbursements may not cover total costs.

A version currently on its way to the House guarantees full federal reimbursement for additional local costs resulting from the legislation, McConnell said.

The impacts would vary with the number of undocumented aliens who are allowed to stay legally and thus qualify for social services, McConnell said. Part of the debate over the bill is whether to legalize the status of aliens who have arrived since Jan. 1, 1980, or whether only those who arrived after Jan. 1, 1982, should be excluded, he said.

The $1,000 appropriated by the supervisors will buy the services of immigration specialist David North, director of the private Center for Labor and Migration Studies in Washington.

Nestande said North's study won't "give us an absolute, down-to-the-penny analysis" of the bill's local economic impact, but he said North can direct county staff members toward areas for an expanded study which will pinpoint costs.

He said North's analysis also will help the county formulate a position on the bill that can be heard in Washington before the House version is considered. McConnell said Tuesday that consideration is unlikely to come until after Nov. 29, when the House returns from its election break.

Singer launches KDOC

By PHIL SNEIDERMAN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Singer Pat Boone stood in a half-finished Anaheim television studio Tuesday, promising to bring a little bit of Hollywood to Orange County and show a little bit of Orange County to Hollywood.

Boone is president and a chief shareholder of Golden Orange Broadcasting Co., owner of Orange County's first commercial television station, KDOC Channel 56.

Wearing a gold and orange jacket and shirt, along with 1950s-style brown and white saddle shoes, Boone spoke enthusiastically about the station, which begins broadcasting Friday after a 14-year struggle.

"We believe this is a golden opportunity for the 26 cities of Orange County," he said. "We want this station to reflect life in Orange County. We'll at last be able to show Orange County to everyone else."

Boone described the effort to put KDOC on the air as nearly "an impossible dream."

Golden Orange was one of numerous business groups that applied in 1968 for the commercial station license designated for Orange County. It took seven years for the Federal Communications Commission to award the license to Golden Orange, then another seven to secure transmitter location approval and install the antenna atop Sunset Ridge in the San Bernardino Mountains.

The station's initial programming will consist of syndicated series reruns such as "Gunsmoke" and "McHale's Navy," plus sport broadcasts

from Cal State Fullerton and Cal State Long Beach.

In addition, the station will broadcast a nightly news show focusing on one Orange County issue per program, plus a noontime man-on-the-street interview show visiting locations throughout the county.

Former KNBC Channel 4 anchorman Jack Latham, who is KDOC's general manager, admitted that the initial schedule is modest. But he added that he believes Orange County-oriented programming will expand as the station becomes better known.

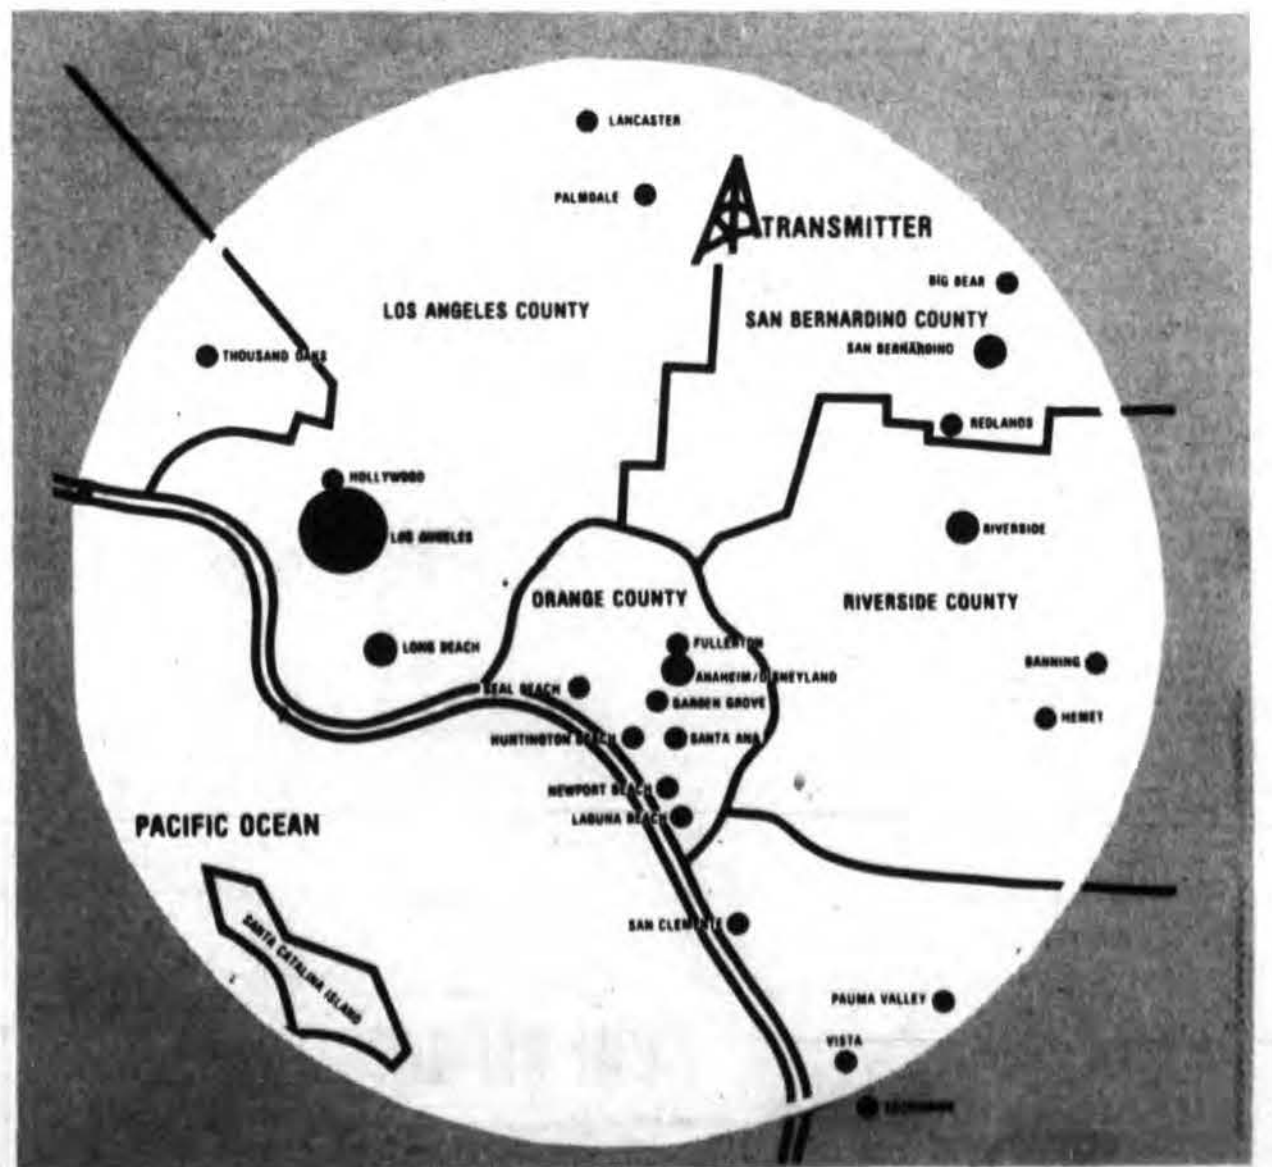

"We have to get our legs, and that's where we are now," Latham said.

Along with Boone, KDOC's major investors include former Westminster Mayor Calvin C. Brack, and Los Angeles attorneys William G. Simon and Tom Sheridan.

Latham said the shareholders already have invested approximately $2 million into the project and want to see the station begin generating some of its own revenues before investing additional capital.

But the station manager said his long-term plans are to expand local coverage to include Orange County cultural events, along with local community college sports and perhaps high school sports.

"My credo," Latham said, "is that if it has to do with Orange County and it's worthwhile program material, we'll do it."

Orange County's first commercial TV station will broadcast within circled area.

SENIOR HOUSING...

Beach were it to approve the project.

Since the 31 units would qualify as affordable under Orange County government regulations, the developers would receive affordable housing credits for each unit.

Those credits could be sold to developers outside Laguna who, under county regulations, must provide 25 percent affordable housing in their projects.

Certificates for such units sell for about $20,000, which, Schmitz says, would be turned over to Laguna Beach for future low-cost housing projects.

Were certificates sold for all 31 units, the city would benefit to the tune of about $620,000 in funds earmarked for affordable housing in town.

Schmitz said he is also exploring means of providing low-interest financing to older buyers.

And, he said, he'd like to see as many older Lagunans as possible get into the project.

"The need is in Laguna and so far all anyone has done is talk about affordable housing," Schmitz said.

"We felt we'd try and do something about it."

ALIEN IMPACT...

Approved a five-year plan for county beaches, parks and harbors that calls for construction of several new recreational facilities along the Orange Coast.

Approved a plan to finance construction of the 248-unit Windwood project in Irvine and the 64-unit family Village project in Mission Viejo. Both will be rental units for families.

Approved budgets totaling $457,504 to continue two programs of preventive medicine for children, the Child Health and Disability Prevention Program and the Early and Periodic Screening, Diagnosis and Treatment Program.

Increased per-day costs at the Joplin Ranch, Juvenile Hall, Los Pinos Forestry Camp and Youth Guidance Center juvenile facilities to $52 a day effective Oct. 1. Joplin Ranch had been $37 a day and the others $45 a day, but staff members told the board that higher costs necessitated the increases.

HB cop to stand trial in accident

Huntington Beach Police Officer John J. Blackwell has pleaded innocent to charges of negligent homicide and leaving the scene of a fatal accident in Arizona, according to court officials.

A trial has been scheduled Nov. 18 at Yuma County Superior Court, following Blackwell's arraignment Tuesday, according to officials.

Blackwell, 32, was indicted by the Yuma County Grand Jury Sept. 16 in connection with a July 11 traffic accident near Parker, Ariz., that took the life of Lisa Garlich, 18, of Huntington Beach, officials said. An indictment is a charge brought against a person by a grand jury and does not establish guilt or innocence.

The fatal accident occurred on State Route 95, about 10 miles north of Parker, according to an accident report performed by the Arizona Department of Public Safety.

The vehicle failed to negotiate a curve and rolled over after fish-tailing, according to the report.

Garlich, one of three passengers thrown from the vehicle, suffered massive head and neck injuries, according to the report.

An investigating officer said in the report that Blackwell left the scene of the accident, according to Allan Schmitt, a spokesman for the Department of Public Safety.

The accident report also said that Blackwell's vehicle was traveling 50 miles an hour in a 35-mile-per-hour zone. The officer said it was his opinion that this was not a reasonable rate of speed, according to Schmitt.

The investigating officer also said it was his opinion that Blackwell was driving under the influence of intoxicating liquor, according to Schmitt.

Blackwell, who appeared personally at Tuesday's arraignment, has been on the Huntington Beach police force four years. He has been reassigned to desk duties pending the disposition of his case, according to Police Chief Earle Robitaille.

An attorney for Blackwell declined to comment and wished to remain silent on the case at this time, an employee for the attorney said.

Newport water quality a mystery

Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Newport Harbor, water quality experts suggest, is a study in contradiction.

While one recent state test reveals Newport Harbor is a growing pollution hot spot, a second shows water quality in the harbor has improved dramatically.

Experts say the results of both tests should be taken with a grain of salt, though, and that the true condition of the popular boating harbor is a mystery.

Both of the recent tests were funded through the state Water Quality Resources Control Board.

One of them, the so-called "Mussel Watch" testing program, shows levels of pesticides, polychlorinated biphenyls (PCBs) and heavy metals have increased.

The level of DDE — a derivative of the outlawed pesticide DDT — has increased 30 times in a two-year span, the mussel study claims.

DDT and its derivatives are known cancer-causing agents.

John Ladd, a water quality official in Sacramento, says he is unsure why the sudden concentration of DDE.

"It's a broken-down form of DDT which is a very persistent pesticide. It stays around for a very long time and it is possible it is just being recycled."

Ladd points out that while the use of DDT in this country was banned a decade ago, it is still manufactured in California for foreign export. He says it's possible some quantities escape into coastal waters.

The mussel study, conducted by the state Department of Fish and Game, also shows that higher levels of cadmium, chromium, copper, mercury and silver have been found in the bay. All of the metals can produce health problems for humans.

But a second test in which samples of harbor mud were analyzed indicates that the level of some heavy metals has gone down.

This test, conducted at 10 test stations last winter, shows the level of mercury, tin, copper and zinc is down from findings in 1981 and 1972.

Jim Anderson, director of the Santa Ana water quality board, claims the improvements shown in the test are the result of a crackdown on boatyards.

designed to prevent marine organisms from growing on boats, usually contains a metal compound such as copper.

"I think all in all, the harbor is in much better shape than it used to be," says Anderson.

Others, including state water quality official Rolf Mall, claim the results of the mussel test have produced a low level of alarm and that the harbor needs to be watched.

The mussel is used in the testing because it has the ability to collect pollutants and is plentiful along the California coastline.

Dr. Michael Martin, a Fish and Game biologist from Monterey, claims he is not concerned about the level of pesticides found in Newport Harbor.

Aid for evictees eyed

Of the Daily Pilot Staff

A method to compensate displaced mobile home tenants on the basis of the length of eviction notices will be studied by the Huntington Beach City Council.

Psychologist ruled guilty

Judge Myron Brown issued his ruling immediately after the prosecutor asked for a first-degree murder conviction against Moore for the 1980 shooting death of Stanley Espinda, also a psychologist.

The plan, recommended by the city's development services staff and approved this week for study, calls for the purchase of coaches at varying percentages of their full market value if they can't find a place to move.

City officials say there is a growing demand for park owners to use their land for greater profits.

Officials also note there is a zero vacancy rate in Orange County mobile home parks.

Tenants would receive 90 percent of the value of the coach on one year's notice; 80 percent on two years' notice; 65 percent on three years' notice; 45 percent on four years' notice and 25 percent on five years' notice.

Payments to the owner of a coach with a market value of $50,000 would range from $12,500 to $45,000 under the formula.

Staff members say the sliding scale system would provide equitable treatment and would encourage longer notification periods that would give tenants more time to find new living quarters.

Critics say, however, the plan might let park owners avoid relocation costs because they may not plan to develop their property in at least five years.

No mobile home parks have been closed to date. City officials have been grappling for months to find a compensation plan acceptable to both tenants and park owners.

Officials are trying to hammer out an agreement on a mobile home conversion ordinance by the end of October. A moratorium on conversions expires next June.

Another form of compensation under study calls for park owners to pay tenants the cost of moving their coaches to other parks within 100 miles of the city.

Bradley slates Laguna session

Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley will attend a fundraiser for his campaign for governor Sunday in Laguna Beach.

The mayor will answer questions and discuss issues facing Laguna and the state from 4 to 6 p.m. at David Stein's home at #9 Lagunita.

Tickets to the event, which includes cocktails and hors d'oeuvres, are $100 per person, or $150 per couple. For reservations, call 499-2006.

•The Laguna Beach chapter of the National League of American Pen Women will meet Monday at 10 a.m. to see a watercolor demonstration by artist Antoinette Wiking.

The meeting will be held in the community room of Laguna Federal Savings and Loan, 260 Ocean Ave.

•Old-fashioned bingo games are being held each Friday night in Laguna Beach with proceeds going to the Laguna Beach Senior Citizens Club. Hours are from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. at the Veterans Memorial Community Center, 384 Legion St.

•Noel Coward's musical drama "Bittersweet," starring Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy, will be screened free to senior citizens in Laguna Beach Oct. 15 at 2 p.m. Free tickets to Laguna seniors are available at the Senior Citizens Club office. The film is co-sponsored by the club and Laguna Federal Savings and Loan.

LB girl, 17, to be tried as adult

A 17-year-old girl accused of shooting her boyfriend to death in Laguna Beach last May will be tried as an adult and not as a juvenile.

Orange County Superior Court Judge William Murray ruled late Tuesday that it was more appropriate to handle Laura Lee Feist's case through the adult criminal court system than through the juvenile court system. She will be arraigned Friday.

In making his ruling, Murray cited the circumstances of the shooting incident and the alleged criminal sophistication shown by Feist, a Laguna Beach High School transfer student, who apparently shot herself in the chest, prosecutors allege, after fatally wounding James Anthony Kendall, 21, of Emerald Bay.

The judge said in his ruling that he didn't believe Feist would be a good candidate for rehabilitation if convicted since the juvenile justice system would have less time to keep her incarcerated.

Feist could face a longer sentence if convicted in adult court than if she had been tried in juvenile court. As an adult, a judge can sentence her to the California Youth Authority until her 25th birthday. She could then be transferred to state prison. As a juvenile, she could have been kept no later than her 23rd birthday at CYA and would have been given an automatic release date.

WEATHER

Coastal

Variable cloudiness today with highs of 70 to 75. Clouds to remain tonight and Thursday with overnight lows of 62 to 65. Highs Thursday 68 to 73. Breezy afternoons. Huntington-Newport area temperatures to range from a low of 59 to a high of 73.

Elsewhere, from Point Conception to the Mexican border and out 60 miles. Small craft advisory over outer waters with northwest winds of 20 to 30 knots this afternoon through Thursday. Seas 5 to 8 feet. Locally light variable winds tonight and Thursday morning with south to southwest winds 10 to 15 knots, turning west to northwest 12 to 18 knots Thursday afternoon. Wind waves 3 to 4 feet. West to southwest swells 1 to 3 feet. Variable cloudiness today and Thursday.

California

Scattered cloudy skies and the possibility of mountain and desert thundershowers accompanied by gusty winds dotted Southern California's weather outlook today, according to the National Weather Service.

The high temperature in Los Angeles was forecast at 74 with a low of 59. Northern desert highs may reach into the 60s with lows from 44 to 54. High winds from 20 to 30 mph were expected by the weather service in northern desert areas.

Mountain and desert areas scored the highest probability of rain through Thursday. The high temperature in mountain areas should range from 58 to 65 with lows from 38 to 45. Northwest winds from 15 to 30 mph are expected in the mountains.

Southern desert highs should range from 74 to 82 with lows from 54 to 64. Owens Valley highs are forecast from 64 to 72 with lows from 46 to 53. Highs from 72 to 76 and lows from 50 to 58 were expected in coastal valleys.

U.S. summary

Travelers advisories were issued Tuesday over the mountains of northwestern Wyoming and Colorado, where locally drifting and blowing snow created hazardous driving conditions.

Temperatures at higher elevations of the region were as much as 15 degrees colder than those of the past weekend. Locally heavy snow was expected in the mountains from western Montana through Colorado, with accumulations of as much as 12 inches of new snow by morning.

Cloudy and breezy

Thunderstorms developed over the Plains and a tornado watch was issued for parts of eastern South Dakota, northeastern Nebraska, southwestern Minnesota and northwestern Iowa.

For today, fair skies were forecast for much of the nation. Showers were forecast from Upper Michigan across the northern Rockies and Great Basin, changing to snow showers in Montana. Thunderstorms were forecast in parts of the northern and central Plains, with rain showers in the northern Pacific Coast.

Four-legged rookie cop passes test in Irvine

By GLENN SCOTT
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Chimo the unlikely looking police dog did a good deed for his kind Tuesday night.

The charcoal-colored Bovier padded into the Irvine City Council chambers, performed a few easy tricks, and then relaxed on the carpet as Irvine Police Chief Leo Peart explained how Chimo functions on duty.

It was all in a day's work for one of the Orange Police Department's three four-legged crime stoppers. Unknown to Chimo, however, was that this demonstration had helped convince council members to unanimously agree to buy two other Boviers, once bred in Belgium as cattle dogs, for the Irvine Police Department.

Upon exiting the chambers, the curly canine was met by nine off-duty Irvine police officers who attended the meeting to learn whether the council would adopt service dogs in Irvine.

Chimo was the center of attention, as usual, and seemed willing to put up with their congratulatory pats. Now that

Irvine will use dogs, Peart said two officers will be selected to serve as handlers. They will drive special vehicles and keep the dogs at home when not on duty.

The off-duty officers were asked who wanted jobs as handlers. "Everyone," said one of the bosses.

A Bovier does not share the military image held by German Shepherd or Doberman police dogs. In fact, Chimo looked more like an animal actor in a Walt Disney film than a dog trained to search buildings or crime scenes — indoors or out — four times faster and more thoroughly than a human.

A Bovier's temperament and appearance, explained Peart, are key reasons why it is suited for Irvine, where a wholesome community image for police is considered essential.

"All of my homework tells me it's a special breed that would fit with our community," he said.

Peart said the time saved in searches thanks to the dogs would amount to $30,000 in wages in a year. First-year start-up costs would be about $33,400, which would be offset by not filling an existing vacancy, he said.

Once established, the program would cost only about $2,000 per year, Peart said.

The dogs' primary mission in Irvine, he added, will be to perform searches. Most will be in the large warehouses and office buildings in industrial sectors, where officers often are dispatched to answer silent alarms.

"Even in the quiet city of Irvine, we respond to about 400 alarms a month, mostly in the industrial area," he noted.

A police dog may be hailed for its efficiencies, but critics have also pointed out its weakness — its inability to use discretion. Chimo, for example, is trained to bite when confronting suspects.

Handler Timm Browne said the biting policy was instituted not only to protect the dog from gun-wielding suspects but also to protect other officers arriving later. However, he said, the dog isn't released to search until officers give verbal commands for suspects to surrender — and (See POLICE DOG, Page A2)

The East Irvine structures that make up the city's only old-fashioned neighborhood should remain in their present locations, preserved in a historic district, the Irvine City Council decided Tuesday.

On a 3-2 vote that featured a disagreement on its implications, council members backed recommendations from their East Irvine Blue Ribbon Committee, a group charged with suggesting ways of accommodating East Irvine in future plans.

The group sought confirmation that the general store, hotel, blacksmith's shop, auto garage, warehouses and bungalows in East Irvine will be saved in the same configuration in which they once served as the commercial center of the old Irvine Ranch.

The committee recommendations also call for consideration from technical staff and advisory committees on limiting expansion of Sand Canyon Avenue, which splits the commercial hamlet, to four lanes of traffic with no bridge to span nearby railroad tracks.

The city's general plan currently designates Sand Canyon as a major artery — it is designed to cross coastal foothills to the Coast Highway — and to include six lanes as it runs southwest from the Santa Ana Freeway through East Irvine.

Council members Barbara Wiener, Mary Ann Gaido and Larry Agran voted to adopt the recommendations. Bill Vardoulis and David Sills objected, saying any commitment for eventual placement of the structures was premature pending more thorough study by staff members.

Baby hostage released

A tense drama in Costa Mesa ended Tuesday evening when a father who held a knife to his own body surrendered his infant son, taken hostage inside a rundown automobile, to police.

Costa Mesa police officer Kevin Gleason talked to the 20-year-old father for nearly an hour, while neighbors watched and six other officers cordoned off the 200 block of Ogle Street, ready to move in.

The man, identified as Bob Ball, was taken to UC Irvine Medical Center in Orange where he was placed under 72-hour observation. No criminal charges were filed.

Sgt. Rod Haddock said that Ball held a four-inch carving knife at his own stomach and never threatened to hurt the baby who sat on his lap and was released unharmed at 5 p.m.

Haddock assured the mother, Lisa Ball, 18, that her husband didn't threaten the baby. "If he did anything he said he would do it to himself. I was prepared that if he made a move to do what I would have had to do."

Lisa said that the couple were recently separated. An argument over the baby's toys escalated and Ball reportedly threw her against the bedroom wall and then ran from the home with the infant.

She said her husband of seven months then raced up and down the 200 block of Ogle, before parking the family car across the street.

"Everyone was worried about him (the baby)," said the young mother, as Bobby lay quietly in her arms grabbing fistfuls of long brown hair. "But he came out the best."

The couple have lived with her mother in Costa Mesa since moving from Ohio seven months ago. Bob was laid off from his job at a car wash five days ago.

"It's hard for a lot of outsiders to believe, but there was a time when we loved each other and believed in forever," said the teen-age mother gazing at her gurgling infant.

"It just doesn't work out that way. Maybe it does for some people. Maybe it will for you," she said lifting her son in the air.

Singer launches KDOC

By PHIL SNEIDERMAN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Singer Pat Boone stood in a half-finished Anaheim television studio Tuesday, promising to bring a little bit of Hollywood to Orange County and show a little bit of Orange County to Hollywood.

Boone is president and a chief shareholder of Golden Orange Broadcasting Co., owner of Orange County's first commercial television station, KDOC Channel 56.

Wearing a gold and orange jacket and shirt, along with 1950s-style brown and white saddle shoes, Boone spoke enthusiastically about the station, which begins broadcasting Friday after a 14-year struggle.

"We believe this is a golden opportunity for the 26 cities of Orange County," he said. "We want this station to reflect life in Orange County. We'll at last be able to show Orange County to everyone else."

Boone described the effort to put KDOC on the air as nearly "an impossible dream."

Golden Orange was one of numerous business groups that applied in 1968 for the commercial station license designated for Orange County. It took seven years for the Federal Communications Commission to award the license to Golden Orange, then another seven to secure transmitter location approval and install the antenna atop Sunset Ridge in the San Bernardino Mountains.

The station's initial programming will consist of syndicated series reruns such as "Gunsmoke" and "McHale's Navy," plus sport broadcasts

from Cal State Fullerton and Cal State Long Beach.

In addition, the station will broadcast a nightly news show focusing on one Orange County issue per program, plus a noontime man-on-the-street interview show visiting locations throughout the county.

Former KNBC Channel 4 anchorman Jack Latham, who is KDOC's general manager, admitted that the initial schedule is modest. But he added that he believes Orange County-oriented programming will expand as the station becomes better known.

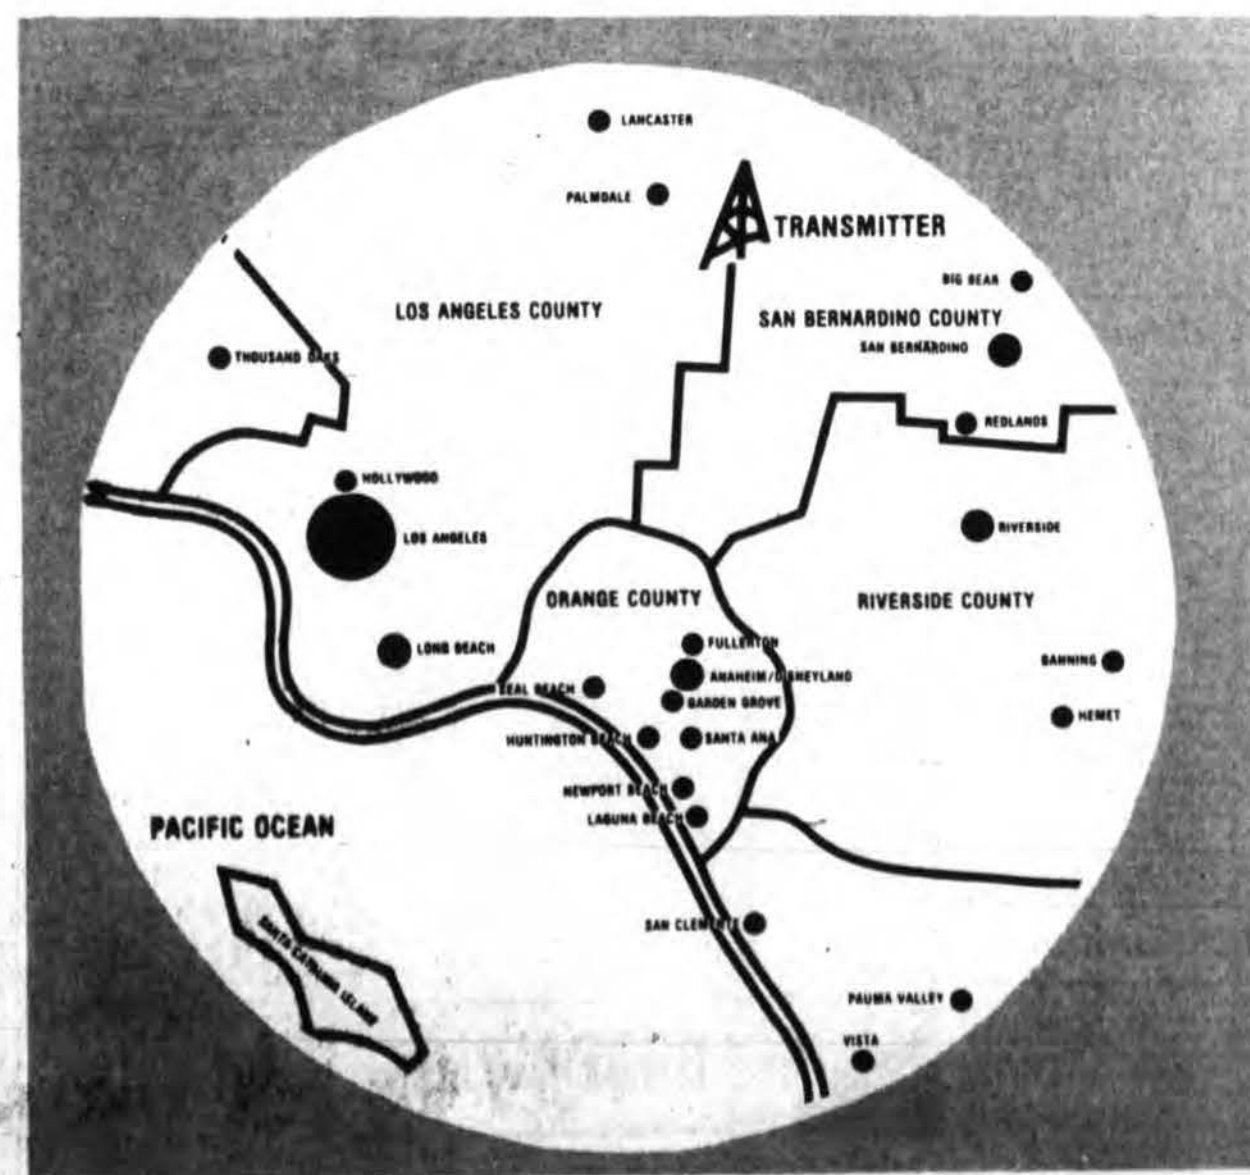

"We have to get our legs, and that's where we are now," Latham said.

Along with Boone, KDOC's major investors include former Westminster Mayor Calvin C. Brack, and Los Angeles attorneys William G. Simon and Tom Sheridan.

Latham said the shareholders already have invested approximately $2 million into the project and want to see the station begin generating some of its own revenues before investing additional capital.

But the station manager said his long-term plans are to expand local coverage to include Orange County cultural events, along with local community college sports and perhaps high school sports.

"My credo," Latham said, "is that if it has to do with Orange County and it's worthwhile program material, we'll do it."

Orange County's first commercial TV station will broadcast within circled area.

Legal aliens a problem

By STEVE TRIPOLI
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Orange County supervisors, worried about federal legislation which could legalize the status of thousands of undocumented aliens, want to know what the impact of such legislation could be in local dollars. An influx of new people with a legitimate claim to welfare, health and other services could have a serious impact on the county budget, Supervisors Chairman Bruce Nestande told fellow members Tuesday. Nestande sponsored a motion adopted by the board calling for a $1,000 expenditure to study the impact of legislation currently before Congress. Two versions of the legislation, known after its sponsors as the

Simpson-Mazzoli immigration reform bill, are being considered on Capitol Hill. The two could have widely different impacts on local governments. According to James McConnell, one of the county's Washington lobbyists, the version which already has passed the Senate provides reimbursements to local areas for increased public service costs resulting from the legislation, but the reimbursements may not cover total costs. A version currently on its way to the House guarantees full federal reimbursement for additional local costs resulting from the legislation, McConnell said. The impacts would vary with the number of undocumented aliens who are allowed to stay legally and thus qualify for social services, McConnell said. Part of the debate over the bill is whether to legalize the status of aliens who have arrived since Jan. 1, 1980, or whether only those who arrived after Jan. 1, 1982, should be excluded, he said. The $1,000 appropriated by the supervisors will buy the services of immigration specialist David North, director of the private Center for Labor and Migration Studies in Washington. Nestande said North's study won't "give us an absolute, down-to-the-penny analysis" of the bill's local economic impact, but he said North can direct county staff members toward areas for an expanded study which will pinpoint costs.

A workshop on basic operations of computers will be offered on two consecutive Mondays beginning Oct. 4 at Irvine's University High School. Sponsored by the city's Community Services Department, the workshop will meet from 7 to 9 p.m. on Oct. 4 and 11. Computer specialist Michael Brinda will teach the course. Fee is $25 per person. Registration by mail is being accepted at Irvine City Hall, Box 19575, Irvine 92713 (attention: specialist classes). Walk-in registration begins Monday, Sept. 20. For more information, call the Community Services Department at 660-3639.

• Ten-week classes in ballroom or folk dancing will be offered beginning next month by Irvine's Senior Services section. The ballroom dance class will be taught by Byron Talbot on Tuesdays from 7 to 9 p.m. beginning Oct. 12 at Turtle Rock Community Park. Ann Holland will teach the folk dance class on Fridays from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. starting Oct. 8 at Northwood Community Park. Fee for each course is $11. Interested persons can register at the Irvine Senior Center by Oct. 15 or at the first class meeting. For more information, contact Kathleen Lem at 660-3889.

• Exercise classes for women who have recently had babies are offered Mondays and Wednesdays in Irvine at the Heritage Park Youth Services Center. The classes staged on an ongoing basis by the city's Community Services Department run from 1:45 a.m. to noon. Fee is $31.50 per month. The postpartum classes are designed to help mothers regain their pre-pregnancy state. It includes discussions on muscle strengthening, infant development and massage. More information may be obtained by calling the department at 660-3639.

Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley will attend a fundraiser for his campaign for governor Sunday in Laguna Beach. The mayor will answer questions and discuss issues facing Laguna and the state from 4 to 6 p.m. at David Stein's home at #9 Lagunita. Tickets to the event, which includes cocktails and hors d'oeuvres, are $100 per person, or $150 per couple. For reservations, call 499-2006.

HB cop pleads innocent

Huntington Beach Police Officer John J. Blackwell has pleaded innocent to charges of negligent homicide and leaving the scene of a fatal accident in Arizona, according to court officials. A trial has been scheduled Nov. 18 at Yuma County Superior Court, following Blackwell's arraignment Tuesday, according to officials. Blackwell, 32, was indicted by the Yuma County Grand Jury Sept. 16 in connection with a July 11 traffic accident near Parker, Ariz., that took the life of Lisa Garlich, 18, of Huntington Beach, officials said.

An indictment is a charge brought against a person by a grand jury and does not establish guilt or innocence. The fatal accident occurred on State Route 95, about 10 miles north of Parker, according to an accident report performed by the Arizona Department of Public Safety.

The vehicle failed to negotiate a curve and rolled over after fish-tailing, according to the report. Garlich, one of three passengers thrown from the vehicle, suffered massive head and neck injuries, according to the report.

An investigating officer said in the report that Blackwell left the scene of the accident, according to Allan Schmitt, a spokesman for the Department of Public Safety.

The accident report also said that Blackwell's vehicle was traveling 50 miles an hour in a 35-mile-per-hour zone. The officer said it was his opinion that this was not a reasonable rate of speed, according to Schmitt.

The investigating officer also said it was his opinion that Blackwell was driving under the influence of intoxicating liquor.

HISTORY SUPPORTED . . .

Agran, interviewed after the vote, said he believed council members retained enough flexibility to make changes if studies show that preserving the hamlet intact would prove infeasible. "Nothing we've done tonight is irreversible," he said, noting that the decision didn't commit the city to any preservation costs. The vote, he suggested, was mostly a sign that a council majority wants to move ahead with the preservation. But Vardoulis claimed a different reading from the action. He said it "locked in" the council to leaving the structures in present locations even though no financial breakdowns have been prepared to detail city liabilities. "I think we're making a big mistake," he said. Sills had similar misgivings. He also said he wasn't sure if all of the structures were worth saving.

chosen the policies they'll use to train their dogs, said Capt. Jim Blaylock. But he added: "We'll proceed very carefully and make sure it's done right."

Psychologist ruled guilty

Newport Beach psychologist Telford "Tim" Moore, accused of murdering his male companion of 18 years in the Spyglass Hill home they shared, was convicted of voluntary manslaughter today by a superior court judge.

Judge Myron Brown issued his ruling immediately after the prosecutor asked for a first-degree murder conviction against Moore for the 1980 shooting death of Stanley Espinda, also a psychologist. California

Scattered cloudy skies and the possibility of mountain and desert thundershowers accompanied by gusty winds dotted Southern California's weather outlook today, according to the National Weather Service. The high temperature in Los Angeles was forecast at 74 with a low of 59. Northern desert highs may reach into the 60s with lows from 44 to 54. High winds from 20 to 30 mph were expected by the weather service in northern desert areas. Mountain and desert areas scored the highest probability of rain through Thursday. The high temperature in mountain areas should range from 58 to 65 with lows from 38 to 45. Northwest winds from 15 to 30 mph are expected in the mountains. Southern desert highs should range from 74 to 82 with lows from 54 to 64. Owens Valley highs are forecast from 64 to 72 with lows from 46 to 53. Highs from 72 to 76 and lows from 50 to 58 were expected in coastal valleys.

U.S. summary

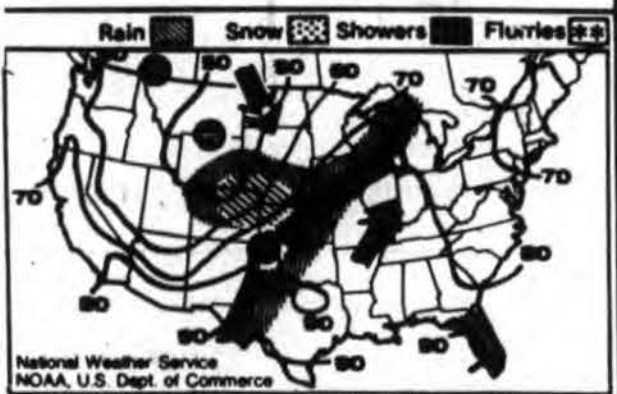

Travelers advisories were issued Tuesday over the mountains of northwestern Wyoming and Colorado, where locally drifting and blowing snow created hazardous driving conditions. Temperatures at higher elevations of the region were as much as 15 degrees colder than those of the past weekend. Locally heavy snow was expected in the mountains from western Montana through Colorado, with accumulations of as much as 12 inches of new snow by morning.

Cloudy and breezy

Thunderstorms developed over the Plains and a tornado watch was issued for parts of eastern South Dakota, northeastern Nebraska, southwestern Minnesota and northwestern Iowa. For today, fair skies were forecast for much of the nation. Showers were forecast from Upper Michigan across the northern Rockies and Great Basin, changing to snow showers in Montana. Thunderstorms were forecast in parts of the northern and central Plains, with rain showers in the northern Pacific Coast.

Girl, 17, faces trial in slaying

A 17-year-old girl accused of shooting her boyfriend to death in Laguna Beach last May will be tried as an adult and not as a juvenile.

Orange County Superior Court Judge William Murray ruled late Tuesday that it was more appropriate to handle Laura Lee Feist's case through the adult criminal court system than through the juvenile court system. She will be arraigned Friday.

In making his ruling, Murray

cited the circumstances of the shooting incident and the alleged criminal sophistication shown by Feist, a Laguna Beach High School transfer student, who apparently shot herself in the chest, prosecutors allege, after fatally wounding James Anthony Kendall, 21, of Emerald Bay.

The judge said in his ruling that he didn't believe Feist would be a good candidate for rehabilitation if convicted since the juvenile justice system would have less time to keep her incarcerated.

Feist could face a longer sentence if convicted in adult court than if she had been tried in juvenile court. As an adult, a judge can sentence her to the California Youth Authority until her 25th birthday. She could then be transferred to state prison. As a juvenile, she could have been kept no later than her 23rd birthday at CYA and would have been given an automatic release date.

Massacre inquiry asked

By The Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin today formally asked Supreme Court President Yitzhak Kahan to appoint a commission to investigate Israel's conduct regarding the massacre of Palestinians in Beirut.

Begin sent Kahan a letter by messenger asking that he start the commission. It will have powers to subpoena witnesses and penalize perjurers in probing the mass slaughter that has churned a storm of moral outrage and political turmoil in Israel.

Shultz, Gromyko confer

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko, failing to agree on any outstanding problem between their countries, say they will try again next week.

They met for three hours Tuesday in a session that a senior U.S. official called "serious" and "non-polemical."

"They were two serious people talking about serious subjects," said the official who briefed reporters on the understanding he would not be identified. "There was no yelling. They got along all right."

He provided few details of what was discussed, except to say they reviewed subjects that included arms control, human rights issues, Poland, Afghanistan and Cambodia.

"No agreements were reached, other than to meet again next week for further discussions," he said. U.S. officials had indicated earlier they did not expect major results to emerge from the meeting.

The senior official indicated Shultz reiterated U.S. demands that the Soviet Union drop support for Poland's martial-law regime and withdraw troops from Afghanistan.

"You can assume what the secretary would be saying about the two subjects," the official said.

But he said the economic sanctions imposed by Washington against Moscow because of the martial-law crackdown in Poland — which have become a divisive issue in U.S.-West European relations — "did not come up at all."

Shultz and Gromyko were unsmiling at the beginning of their meeting at the U.S. mission to the United Nations. Afterward, Gromyko smiled and waved to reporters but declined comment.

Ancient objects discovered

Dr. Yannis Sakellarakis,

director of Heraklion museum, said some of the objects date from 1300 B.C. and include a decorated strip of gold, bronze shields and basins, iron arrowheads and spears and other dedications of silver, lead, ivory and wooden objects.

Captive fishermen released

SEOUL, South Korea — A South Korean fishing boat and its 35 crewmen returned to port today after 78 days of captivity in North Korea, authorities said.

The 114-ton Masan-ho was seized by a North Korean patrol ship July 13 while operating in what South Korea called international waters.

By South Korean count, North Korea has seized 3,554 South Korean fishermen since the end of the Korean War in 1953. South Korea says 407 have never returned.

Measles outbreak reported

PHOENIX, Ariz. — The Arizona Department of Health Services says children who visited Disneyland in California the week of Aug. 15-21 may have brought home an unwanted souvenir: measles.

A current outbreak of measles in the Phoenix-Glendale area has been traced to a 12-year-old boy who visited Disneyland that week, officials said. Eight cases of measles have been reported and more are expected, they said.

Offshore mineral find told

MIAMI — A scientist says the discovery of a rich offshore bed of minerals near Southeast states could free the United States from depending on unstable nations for "strategic" metals.

Dr. Frank T. Manheim of the U.S. Geological Survey

said Tuesday that the 63,000-square-mile bed, stretching from North Carolina to Florida, holds more cobalt, manganese, phosphorite, nickel and platinum than any other known area in the United States.

'Lemon law' starts Friday

HARTFORD, Conn. — Manufacturers, not new-car buyers, will shoulder the burden for defective autos once the nation's first "lemon law" takes effect.

Starting Friday, Connecticut consumers may take complaints first to an independent arbitration panel, which must decide the case within 40 days, and any rulings against the automaker are binding. A consumer disagreeing with the decision then may sue the manufacturer.

Consumers are eligible if a new car is under repair for more than 30 straight days in the first year of ownership or if a single problem has not been fixed after four attempts at repair.

Tanker blast rocks city

LIVINGSTON, La. (AP) — A new explosion rocked this empty town early today, sending flaming debris from derailed tanker cars "all over the place," and authorities feared toxic smoke would drift to a nearby community where some of the 3,000 evacuees had taken refuge.

No one was seriously hurt in today's blast or in the explosion that took place when 42 cars of an Illinois Central-Gulf freight train derailed before dawn Tuesday.

The derailment caused a thunderous explosion that sent flames leaping from one chemical tank car to another all day long, and spewed toxic smoke.

"We had another explosion this morning, and we assume it was one of the vinyl chloride tank cars," State Police Sgt. Stephen Campbell said early today. "It was nothing we weren't expecting, but it blew pieces of the tank car all over the place when it exploded . . . and it lit up the sky briefly."

Tuesday night, Lt. Gov. Bobby Freeman put the Louisiana National Guard on alert and sent more state police in to this southeastern Louisiana town to arrest any looters. Gov. Dave Treen cut short a Florida vacation to return today.

The American Red Cross set up evacuation shelters at Walker and Holden high schools, about six miles from Livingston. About 96 people spent the night at both, officials said. Many displaced people moved in with relatives or friends.

Hours after Tuesday's blast, all 2,000 Livingston residents fled.

The situation worsened at mid-afternoon, when a tanker containing tetra-ethyl lead shot a fireball into the sky, spreading fumes over a wide area and driving flames closer to seven overturned tankers containing highly poisonous vinyl chloride.

Mesa teen hero in Forsythe's saga

Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Victor Forsythe of Costa Mesa can't guess how many people passed by his sweaty, limp body, thinking he was drugged or drunk — not guessing he was near death.

Forsythe, 33, was returning from a trip to San Diego Aug. 27 and stopped at a bank in Santa Ana to make a deposit. He was standing in line when he began feeling weak and dizzy.

Thinking that the feeling would pass in a moment he drove to nearby Centennial Park and sank down in the warm dry grass.

He remembers a police car cruising by real slow. It stopped. But the bearded man was too exhausted to even raise his head.

Finally he dragged himself back to his van and either fell asleep or passed out for several hours. When he awoke the temperature was in the mid-90's, he recalled.

"I was so weak all I could think of is I've got to get to a hospital," said Forsythe. "My throat felt like the Sahara Desert."

He managed to move a few yards to a restroom and collapsed on the grass. He was lying there when Delbert Bledsoe, 17, of Costa Mesa and several friends found him.

Bledsoe, a senior at Back Bay High School, said that his friends told him not to get in the car with the stranger. But Delbert loaded his bike in the back and drove Forsythe to a clinic in Costa Mesa.

Forsythe said he was told by doctors at Costa Mesa Memorial Hospital that he had nearly died from blood poisoning.

Almost all of the world's religions are honored by some kind of symbolism. Christians, of course, use the symbol of the cross to remind them of the execution of Jesus. Those of the Jewish faith have the Star of David. This symbol is so sold (more than 2,000 years) that scholars and historians disagree on its origin. Many Catholics wear medals honoring particular saints recognized by their church. Some of the designs that are made into jewelry and are woven into fabrics by the American Indians are symbols that became part of their spiritual faith many centuries ago. Believe it or not, young people wear more religious jewelry than men. Sterling silver and gold-filled pieces are very popular with young people. Such jewelry has become fashionable, as well as showing an expression of one's faith. The simple dignity of these symbols gives them a beauty that is universal.

An extraordinary diamond of a carat or more. Show the world you couldn't have made it without her.

Slaying verdict 'guilty'

By STEVE TRIPOLI
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Newport Beach psychologist Telford "Tim" Moore, accused of murdering his male companion of 18 years in the Spyglass Hill home they shared, was convicted of voluntary manslaughter today by a superior court judge.

Judge Myron Brown issued his ruling immediately after the prosecutor asked for a first-degree murder conviction against Moore for the 1980 shooting death of Stanley Espinda, also a psychologist.

Defense attorney Al Stokke attempted to convince Brown to find Moore innocent, claiming that Moore, 37, had lapsed into a state of unconsciousness when the shooting took place.

Espinda was portrayed in court testimony as a homosexual who wanted Moore to believe that he, too, was gay.

Brown convicted the dark-haired defendant this morning after hearing several days of psychiatric testimony in Moore's retrial. Moore's first trial ended in a jury deadlock when jurors couldn't agree whether he was guilty of first- or second-degree murder or voluntary manslaughter.

The law defines voluntary manslaughter as an intentional killing without malice.

Both prosecutor Bryan Brown and Stokke said they were satisfied with the judge's ruling this morning.

Stokke, who said he didn't expect Brown to rule so quickly after hearing closing statements, said his client also felt a "feeling of relief" that the case was coming to an end.

Baby hostage released

A tense drama in Costa Mesa ended Tuesday evening when a father who held a knife to his own body surrendered his infant son, taken hostage inside a rundown automobile, to police.

Costa Mesa police officer Kevin Gleason talked to the 20-year-old father for nearly an hour, while neighbors watched and six other officers cordoned off the 200 block of Ogle Street, ready to move in.

The man, identified as Bob Ball, was taken to UC Irvine Medical Center in Orange where he was placed under 72-hour observation. No criminal charges were filed.

Sgt. Rod Haddock said that Ball held a four-inch carving knife at his own stomach and never threatened to hurt the baby who sat on his lap and was released unharmed at 5 p.m.

Haddock assured the mother, Lisa Ball, 18, that her husband didn't threaten the baby. "If he did anything he said he would do it to himself. I was prepared that if he made a move to do what I (See HOSTAGE, Page A2)

Newport water quality? Depends on source you ask

By STEVE MARBLE
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Newport Harbor, water quality experts suggest, is a study in contradiction.

While one recent state test reveals Newport Harbor is a growing pollution hot spot, a second shows water quality in the harbor has improved dramatically.

Experts say the results of both tests should be taken with a grain of salt, though, and that the true condition of the popular boating harbor is a mystery.

Both of the recent tests were funded through the state Water Quality Resources Control Board.

One of them, the so-called "Mussel Watch" testing program, shows levels of pesticides, polychlorinated biphenyls (PCBs) and heavy metals have increased.

The level of DDE — a derivative of the outlawed pesticide DDT — has increased 30 times in a two-year span, the mussel study claims.

DDT and its derivatives are known cancer-causing agents.

John Ladd, a water quality official in Sacramento, says he is unsure why the sudden concentration of DDE.

"It's a broken-down form of DDT which is a very persistent pesticide. It stays around for a very long time and it is possible it is just being recycled."

Ladd points out that while the use of DDT in this country was banned a decade ago, it is still manufactured in California for foreign export. He says it's possible some quantities escape into coastal waters.

The mussel study, conducted by the state Department of Fish and Game, also shows that higher levels of cadmium, chromium, copper, mercury and silver have been found in the bay. All of the metals can produce health problems for humans.

But a second test in which samples of harbor mud were analyzed indicates that the level of some heavy metals has gone down.

This test, conducted at 10 test stations last winter, shows the level of mercury, tin, copper and zinc is down from findings in 1981 and 1972.

Jim Anderson, director of the Santa Ana water quality board, claims the improvements shown in the test are the result of a crackdown on boatyards.

Until recently, he explains, boatyards in the harbor swept paint chips from the hulls of boats into the water. The paint, designed to prevent marine organisms from growing on boats, usually contains a metal compound such as copper.

"I think all in all, the harbor is in much better shape than it used to be," says Anderson.

Others, including state water quality official Rolf Mail, claim the results of the mussel test have produced a low level of alarm and that the harbor needs to be watched.

Singer launches KDOC

By PHIL SNEIDERMAN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Singer Pat Boone stood in a half-finished Anaheim television studio Tuesday, promising to bring a little bit of Hollywood to Orange County and show a little bit of Orange County to Hollywood.

Boone is president and a chief shareholder of Golden Orange Broadcasting Co., owner of Orange County's first commercial television station, KDOC Channel 56.

Wearing a gold and orange jacket and shirt, along with 1950s-style brown and white saddle shoes, Boone spoke enthusiastically about the station, which begins broadcasting Friday after a 14-year struggle.

"We believe this is a golden opportunity for the 26 cities of Orange County," he said. "We want this station to reflect life in Orange County. We'll at last be able to show Orange County to everyone else."

Boone described the effort to put KDOC on the air as nearly "an impossible dream."

Golden Orange was one of numerous business groups that applied in 1968 for the commercial station license designated for Orange County. It took seven years for the Federal Communications Commission to award the license to Golden Orange, then another seven to secure transmitter location approval and install the antenna atop Sunset Ridge in the San Bernardino Mountains.

The station's initial programming will consist of syndicated series reruns such as "Gunsmoke" and "McHale's Navy," plus sport broadcasts

from Cal State Fullerton and Cal State Long Beach.

In addition, the station will broadcast a nightly news show focusing on one Orange County issue per program, plus a noontime man-on-the-street interview show visiting locations throughout the county.

Former KNBC Channel 4 anchorman Jack Latham, who is KDOC's general manager, admitted that the initial schedule is modest. But he added that he believes Orange County-oriented programming will expand as the station becomes better known.

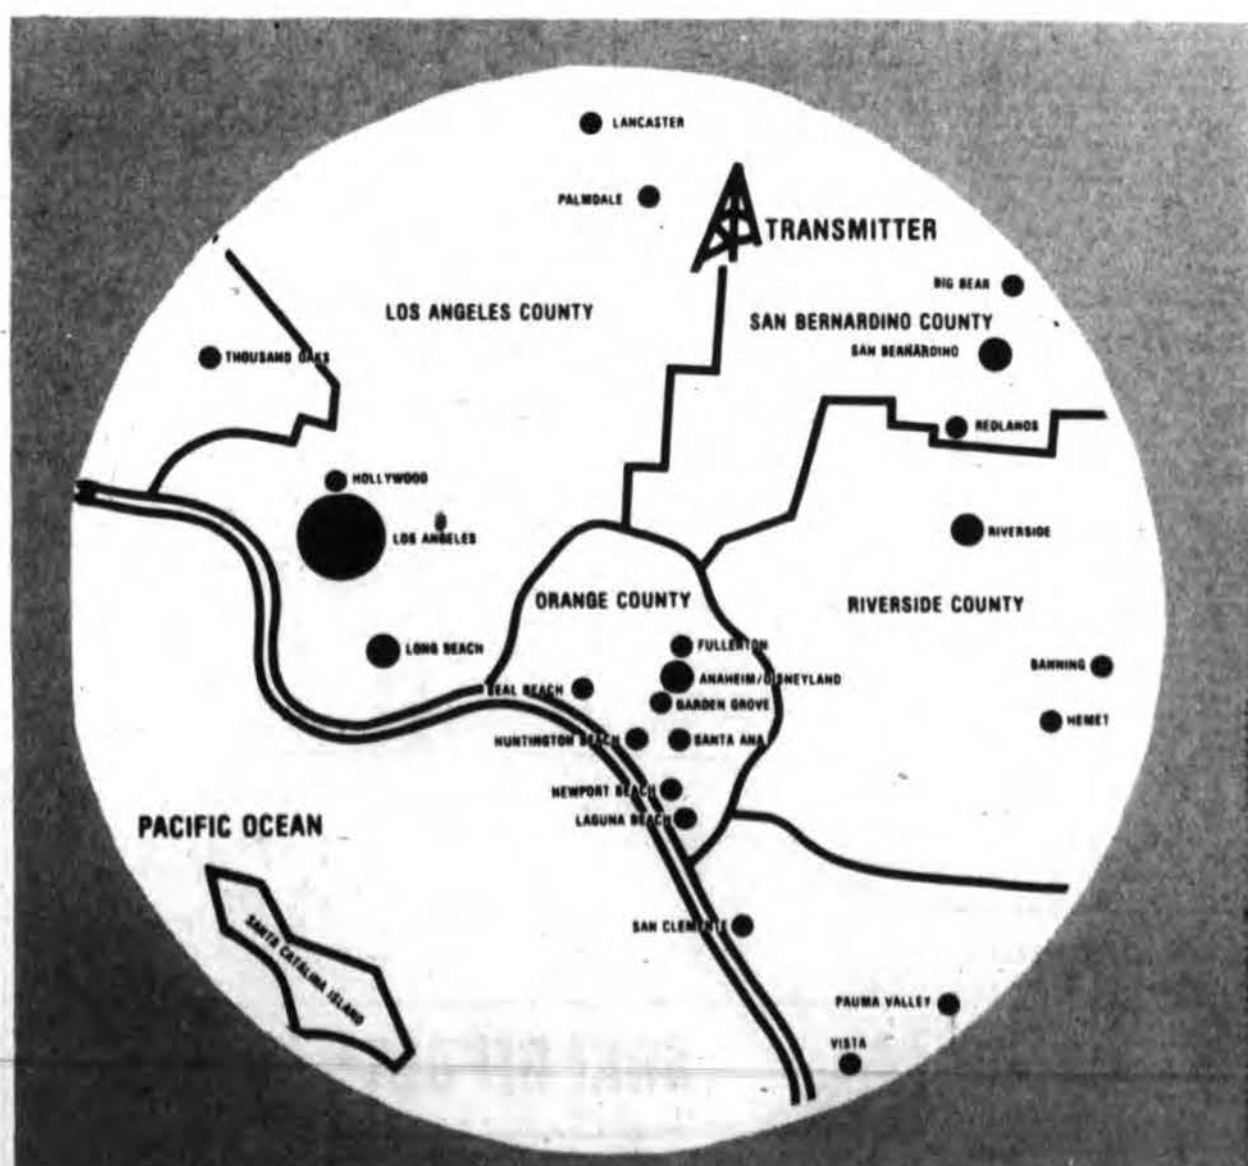

"We have to get our legs, and that's where we are now," Latham said.

Along with Boone, KDOC's major investors include former Westminster Mayor Calvin C. Brack, and Los Angeles attorneys William G. Simon and Tom Sheridan.

Latham said the shareholders already have invested approximately $2 million into the project and want to see the station begin generating some of its own revenues before investing additional capital.

But the station manager said his long-term plans are to expand local coverage to include Orange County cultural events, along with local community college sports and perhaps high school sports.

"My credo," Latham said, "is that if it has to do with Orange County and it's worthwhile program material, we'll do it."

Orange County's first commercial TV station will broadcast within circled area.

defense lawyer said of Moore. Stokke indicated, however, that he still might file an appeal because he believes certain admissible facts were allowed into evidence during Moore's retrial before Judge Brown.

Moore testified in his first trial that Espinda had beaten and sexually abused him during their 18-year relationship. He said he had planned to leave Espinda after meeting a Laguna Beach woman, Glory Lane. She was present in court for the verdict. It was alleged that Moore killed Espinda as he sat in the living room of the Newport Beach home on Nov. 5, 1980. Stokke claimed that Moore had intended to commit suicide that evening, but lapsed into an unconscious state and shot Espinda.

Prosecutor Brown argued that Moore, because he had purchased a gun and had kept it hidden in the home, was guilty of first-degree murder.

Judge Brown revoked Moore's $25,000 bail this morning and ordered him taken into custody pending sentencing on Oct. 22.

Impact of aliens probed in county

By STEVE TRIPOLI
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Orange County supervisors, worried about federal legislation which could legalize the status of thousands of undocumented aliens, want to know what the impact of such legislation could be in local dollars.

An influx of new people with a legitimate claim to welfare, health and other services could have a serious impact on the county budget, Supervisors

Chairman Bruce Nestande told fellow members Tuesday.

Nestande sponsored a motion adopted by the board calling for a $1,000 expenditure to study the impact of legislation currently before Congress.

Two versions of the legislation, known after its sponsors as the Simpson-Mazzoli immigration reform bill, are being considered on Capitol Hill. The two could have widely different impacts on local governments.

According to James McConnell, one of the county's Washington lobbyists, the version which already has passed the Senate provides reimbursements to local areas for increased public service costs resulting from the legislation, but the reimbursements may not cover total costs.

A version currently on its way to the House guarantees full federal reimbursement for additional local costs resulting from the legislation, McConnell said.

The impacts would vary with the number of undocumented aliens who are allowed to stay legally and thus qualify for social services, McConnell said. Part of the debate over the bill is whether to legalize the status of aliens who have arrived since Jan. 1, 1980, or whether only those who arrived after Jan. 1, 1982, should be excluded, he said.

The $1,000 appropriated by the supervisors will buy the services of immigration specialist David North, director of the private Center for Labor and Migration Studies in Washington.

Nestande said North's study won't "give us an absolute, down-to-the-penny analysis" of the bill's local economic impact, but he said North can direct county staff members toward areas for an expanded study which will pinpoint costs.

He said North's analysis also will help the county formulate a position on the bill that can be heard in Washington before the House version is considered. McConnell said Tuesday that consideration is unlikely to come until after Nov. 29, when the House returns from its election break.

In other actions supervisors: — Approved a five-year plan for county beaches, parks and harbors that calls for construction of several new recreational facilities along the Orange Coast.

— Approved a plan to finance construction of the 248-unit Windwood project in Irvine and the 64-unit family Village project in Mission Viejo. Both will be rental units for families.

Mesa hair stylist dies

John Whitson of Costa Mesa who gained a reputation as a hairdresser to Hollywood stars such as Lana Turner and Janet Leigh died Saturday following a long illness.

Whitson moved to Costa Mesa in 1951 and worked at the Balboa Bay Club before opening his own beauty shop, The Carriage Trade Beauty Salon, in Corona del Mar.

The World War II veteran received the Purple Heart in 1945 and belonged to the Purple Heart Association.

Survivors include his daughter Wendy Whitson Carpenter of Port Orchard, Wash.; sisters, Abby Freeman and Maude Middleton of Lincoln Park, Mich., and Bertie Gay of Clearwater, Florida, and friend Bob Weems.

Schools to stay open

By JODI CADENHEAD
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Trustees in the Newport-Mesa Unified School District decided Tuesday night not to close any schools next year and to keep all four high schools open until the 1987-88 school year.

The decision laid to rest rumors that Corona del Mar and Estancia High Schools would be closed soon. Such a recommendation was made earlier this year by the Educational Resources Advisory Committee, a group of parents and teachers.

Dennis Edwards, Corona del Mar High School principal, said that the news came as a relief to the campus that had been rife with rumors of closure since the citizen's report was published last February.

"It's a marvelous decision," said Evans. "The rumors tended to make parents reluctant to put their youngster in a school ticketed for closure."

Under the five-year student housing program adopted by trustees, studies of possible closure of five elementary schools and closure or consolidation of two intermediate schools will not occur until next spring.

Evening High School and Woodland and Lindbergh elementary schools were closed in June.

California, Eastbluff, Bear and College Park elementary schools all have enrollments near 300 and are among those that could be targets for closure later, said district spokeswoman Jean Harmon.

Lincoln and Davis intermediate schools are the two schools whose populations are declining fastest, she added.

Trustee Ken Wayman said that teachers and students will have to make some sacrifices in order to keep all four high schools open at least five years.

He said that instructors and students may have to travel to different schools in order to participate in programs now offered districtwide.

"It's going to be more expensive," said Wayman. "But we decided to commit to the expense because we thought that the smaller high schools offered advantages in terms of student participation."

The advisory report published earlier this year recommended that high schools be closed when enrollments dipped below 1,500. One of the plans called for Costa Mesa and Estancia high schools to be combined at Costa Mesa High and Corona del Mar and Newport Harbor High schools be combined at Newport Harbor.

Trustees said enrollments at all the high school campuses will be about 1,300 by 1987.

HB cop pleads innocent

Huntington Beach Police Officer John J. Blackwell has pleaded innocent to charges of negligent homicide and leaving the scene of a fatal accident in Arizona, according to court officials.

A trial has been scheduled Nov. 18 at Yuma County Superior Court, following Blackwell's arraignment Tuesday, according to officials.

Blackwell, 32, was indicted by the Yuma County Grand Jury Sept. 16 in connection with a July 11 traffic accident near Parker, Ariz., that took the life of Lisa Garlich, 18, of Huntington Beach, officials said.

An indictment is a charge brought against a person by a grand jury and does not establish guilt or innocence.

The fatal accident occurred on State Route 95, about 10 miles north of Parker, according to an accident report performed by the Arizona Department of Public Safety.

The vehicle failed to negotiate a curve and rolled over after fish-tailing, according to the report.

Garlich, one of three passengers thrown from the vehicle, suffered massive head and neck injuries, according to the report.

An investigating officer said in the report that Blackwell left the scene of the accident, according to Allan Schmitt, a spokesman for the Department of Public Safety.

Slaying verdict 'guilty'

By STEVE TRIPOLI
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Newport Beach psychologist Telford "Tim" Moore, accused of murdering his male companion of 18 years in the Spyglass Hill home they shared, was convicted of voluntary manslaughter today by a superior court judge.

Judge Myron Brown issued his ruling immediately after the prosecutor asked for a first-degree murder conviction against Moore for the 1980 shooting death of Stanley Espinda, also a psychologist.

Defense attorney Al Stokke attempted to convince Brown to find Moore innocent, claiming that Moore, 37, had lapsed into a state of unconsciousness when the shooting took place.

Espinda was portrayed in court testimony as a homosexual who wanted Moore to believe that he, too, was gay.

Brown convicted the dark-haired defendant this morning after hearing several days of psychiatric testimony in Moore's retrial. Moore's first trial ended in a jury deadlock when jurors couldn't agree whether he was guilty of first- or second-degree murder or voluntary manslaughter.

The law defines voluntary manslaughter as an intentional killing without malice.

Both prosecutor Bryan Brown and Stokke said they were satisfied with the judge's ruling this morning.

Stokke, who said he didn't expect Brown to rule so quickly after hearing closing statements, said his client also felt a "feeling of relief" that the case was coming to an end.

Baby hostage released

A tense drama in Costa Mesa ended Tuesday evening when a father who held a knife to his own body surrendered his infant son, taken hostage inside a rundown automobile, to police.

Costa Mesa police officer Kevin Gleason talked to the 20-year-old father for nearly an hour, while neighbors watched and six other officers cordoned off the 200 block of Ogle Street, ready to move in.

The man, identified as Bob Ball, was taken to UC Irvine Medical Center in Orange where he was placed under 72-hour observation. No criminal charges were filed.

Sgt. Rod Haddock said that Ball held a four-inch carving knife at his own stomach and never threatened to hurt the baby who sat on his lap and was released unharmed at 5 p.m.

Haddock assured the mother, Lisa Ball, 18, that her husband didn't threaten the baby. "If he did anything he said he would do it to himself. I was prepared that if he made a move to do what I (See HOSTAGE, Page A2)

Newport water quality? Depends on source you ask

By STEVE MARBLE
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Newport Harbor, water quality experts suggest, is a study in contradiction.

While one recent state test reveals Newport Harbor is a growing pollution hot spot, a second shows water quality in the harbor has improved dramatically.

Experts say the results of both tests should be taken with a grain of salt, though, and that the true condition of the popular boating harbor is a mystery.

Both of the recent tests were funded through the state Water Quality Resources Control Board.

One of them, the so-called "Mussel Watch" testing program, shows levels of pesticides, polychlorinated biphenyls (PCBs) and heavy metals have increased.

The level of DDE — a derivative of the outlawed pesticide DDT — has increased 30 times in a two-year span, the mussel study claims.

DDT and its derivatives are known cancer-causing agents.

John Ladd, a water quality official in Sacramento, says he is unsure why the sudden concentration of DDE.

"It's a broken-down form of DDT, which is a very persistent pesticide. It stays around for a very long time and it is possible it is just being recycled."

Ladd points out that while the use of DDT in this country was banned a decade ago, it is still manufactured in California for foreign export. He says it's possible some quantities escape into coastal waters.

The mussel study, conducted by the state Department of Fish and Game, also shows that higher levels of cadmium, chromium, copper, mercury and silver have been found in the bay. All of the metals can produce health problems for humans.

But a second test in which samples of harbor mud were analyzed indicates that the level of some heavy metals has gone down.

This test, conducted at 10 test stations last winter, shows the level of mercury, tin, copper and zinc is down from findings in 1981 and 1972.

Jim Anderson, director of the Santa Ana water quality board, claims the improvements shown in the test are the result of a crackdown on boatyards.

Until recently, he explains, boatyards in the harbor swept paint chips from the hulls of boats into the water. The paint, designed to prevent marine organisms from growing on boats, usually contains a metal compound such as copper.

"I think all in all, the harbor is in much better shape than it used to be," says Anderson.

Others, including state water quality official Rolf Mall, claim the results of the mussel test have produced a low level of alarm and that the harbor needs to be watched.

Singer launches KDOC
