Storm Dumps Inch of Rain

A Pacific storm which left behind nearly an inch of rain as it swept over Orange County will leave cloudy conditions in its wake as it disintegrates Saturday, National Weather Service forecasters predict.

And by the time the Los Angeles Rams and the Dallas Cowboys take the field at the Coliseum Sunday, the weatherman says post-storm conditions will have improved to the point that the sun will break through the cloud cover from time to time.

But it will be cool, forecasters warn. Highs during the weekend will be in the low 60s with a low of about 50 on both days.

They predict that winds will pick up during the weekend with brisk gusts of up to 15 miles an hour hitting the Orange Coast from the southeast.

Showers which appeared to hit their peak in the early morning hours Friday kept the 1978 rain tables at a level with precipitation statistics recorded at this time a year ago.

Huntington Beach rainfall analyst J. Sherman Denny said his gauge showed that 5.90 inches of rain had fallen in the current season - just .38 inches less than the total he recorded at this point in 1978.

"And that's pretty good," Denny said. "We've already got

Clothes Trap 'Disco Dan' Heist Suspect

LOS ANGELES (AP) - The beat may have stopped for Disco Dan, a flashy dresser wanted for nine bank holdups, police say.

Fancy clothes and a mustache worn by a man pictured in three bank robbery photographs led detectives to give the nickname to a man wanted for bank heists between Nov. 13 and Dec. 30.

And wanted posters featuring the man and his feverish fashions were distributed in a neighborhood where he went in a cab following one robbery.

The cabbie remembered the occasion because a tear-gas device placed in the robber's money bag by a bank employee exploded in the cab.

On Wednesday, a citizen called police when he saw a man in fancy clothes waiting for a taxi. The clothes appeared to match the bank robber's fashions, authorities said.

Thomas Palmer, 26, was arrested by detectives Bob Duretto and Kenny Smith before the cab arrived.

Like Disco Dan, whose capers netted $9,300, the officers said, Palmer was carrying a paper bag. On it was written: "This is a holdup," they said.

Tests Show 727 Takeoffs 'Quieter'

By JOANNE REYNOLDS

The two Boeing 727 jets flown into and out of Orange County Airport so far are proving the contention of Hughes Airwest officials that the big jets are no noisier than the DC-9s the airline uses.

The test of the three-engine jets was launched Dec. 15 amid protests from Newport Beach homeowners, who want substantial airport noise reductions and at the time claimed the 727s would only increase the noise problem.

However, unofficial results show the 727s haven't been noisier. One county official said some of the data from county noise monitors shows that, at times, the larger plane has been quieter than either the DC-9s or the Boeing 737s flown by Air California.

In addition, records kept in the airport's noise abatement office indicate a decline to the number of telephone complaints or questions about the 727 since the initial days of the test.

U.S. Sues Oil Companies

$1 Billion in Gas Price Refunds Sought

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Energy and Justice departments sued nine major oil companies in U.S. District Court today, accusing them of overcharges totaling nearly $1 billion and asking refunds plus interest and penalties.

Energy Department spokesman James Bishop said it was the department's largest enforcement action, bringing to about $2.2 billion the total involved in such action which began in September 1977.

The department earlier alleged $316 million in overcharges by Exxon, the world's largest petroleum company. This was included in the $930 million claimed in today's lawsuit as the department sought to have the Exxon case considered together with eight new ones.

The remaining $614 million was charged against Mobil, Texaco, Amoco, Shell, Phillips, Gulf, Atlantic Richfield and Cities Service, all large oil and gas producing companies.

In Houston, an Exxon USA executive said the company believes "all our pricing actions have been in compliance with the regulations.

"Exxon has been trying to resolve both administratively and in the courts differences in interpretation of the regulations for pricing natural gas liquids," Senior Vice President O.L. Luper said. "In fact, the company initiated the court action three years ago in an effort to resolve questions surrounding the issue."

—There was no immediate comment from the other companies involved.

Bishop had no immediate breakdown of the over charges alleged against each company.

He said the lawsuit charged that the nine companies exaggerated their costs for natural gas liquids since 1973, resulting in excessively high prices for such products as propane, butane and heating oil made from the liquid petrolum extracted from natural gas.

He said alleged violations in-

Envoy's Estate Refuge

PALM SPRINGS (AP) - The besieged mother and sister of Iran's troubled shah have found refuge in a sprawling desert estate, where former President Nixon also sought a haven in recent years.

Queen Mother Tadj Ul Moluk and Princess Chams arrived at the oasis winter residence of Walter Annenberg Wednesday night after they became the targets of anti-shah violence in Beverly Hills.

Federal, state and local authorities are protecting the estate surrounded by a high wall and tamarisk trees - said Annenberg, the former U.S. ambassador to Great Britain.

Asked about security against possible violence by anti-shah demonstrators at Sunnylands near Rancho Mirage, the 70-year-old publisher replied: "If they come, so be it."

Annenberg served as ambassador to Great Britain from 1969 to 1974, and his winter home provided seclusion for Nixon following the former president's resignation in 1974.

Iran Strike Ends

Workers Heed Plan to Save Economy

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Oil-industry sources said striking petroleum workers began returning to their jobs today, apparently heeding the call of the anti-shah religious opposition to produce enough oil to save the Iranian economy from collapse.

Palace sources reported, meanwhile, that the embattled Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi returned to Tehran by helicopter from the nearby ski resort of Jaroud, where he had gone Thursday for a brief vacation. Empress Farah and their children accompanied the monarch.

Shahpour Bakhtiar, the shah's choice for prime minister, was readying his proposed civilian cabinet for presentation to the monarch this weekend and later to the Parliament.

Since the latest round of anti-shah strikes began last month, oil production has plummeted from six million barrels a day to 250,000 barrels or less. Industry sources say it takes 900,000 barrels to meet Iran's domestic needs alone, and because of shortages the military-led government ordered fuel rationing last week.

An oil-industry source, who asked not to be named, said that with the return of some strikers the first shipments of kerosene and heating oil are expected to reach Tehran on Saturday. Figures on total production for the day were unavailable.

Refineries in Abadan and Tabriz resumed limited production today but those in Shiraz and Tehran remained shut pending a decision by striking workers Saturday.

Ayatullah Khomaini, the Moslem religious leader who is the symbol of the anti-shah movement, called Wednesday for the workers to produce enough fuel to ease the burden on the people.

The shah emerged from near-seclusion in his palace Thursday for his brief vacation in the nearby mountains. Earlier, he formally appointed Bakhtiar to head a civilian Cabinet to replace the military regime the shah named last November in an unsuccessful attempt to end months of violence and crush religious and political opposition to his reign.

Anti-busing Rally Slated

By KATHY CLANCY
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Efforts to drum up local support for a state constitutional amendment that would prohibit forced busing of school children in California were announced today by State Sen. Alan Robbins, D-Van Nuys.

In a press conference this morning, Robbins invited local parents to a $10 per family rally Jan. 26 at Orange County Fairgrounds in Costa Mesa.

Proceeds from the rally will be used to transport parents to Sacramento in February when Robbins figures his proposed amendment will be debated on the state Assembly floor.

If approved by the Legislature, the amendment likely would be placed before California voters in 1980.

Among speakers scheduled for the 7:30 p.m. rally Jan. 26 are state Sen. John Schmitz, R-Newport Beach; Assemblyman Dennis Mangers, D-Huntington Beach, and Assemblyman Ross Johnson, R-La Habra.

Other speakers expected are Paul Clark of the San Fernando Valley-based Bus Stop and Bobbie Fiedler, a Los Angeles Unified School District trustee.

The Robbins amendment parallels a similar bill he introduced in the 1977-78 legislature.

Robbins said today he believes the new measure has a better chance of passing in this session because of the proposed "metropolitan plan" of busing that would involve all but three Orange County school districts.

Robbins said virtually the entire Orange County legislative delegation backs the amendment while little interest was shown locally when the busing issue applied only to the Los Angeles school district.

"Busing has been a failure in the Los Angeles school district as everyone knows," Robbins said. "Since Los Angeles has been a failure they think they can do a better job by expanding busing to Orange County."

Robbins' amendment seeks to prohibit judges from ordering forced busing in all cases except when children of some ethnic origins are prohibited from attending their neighborhood schools because of race.

In effect, the proposed constitutional amendment would prohibit the type of forced busing undertaken in Los Angeles and now proposed in the expanded metropolitan plan.

Robbins said the amendment also would prohibit inter-district busing, but would permit voluntary busing of school students.

Pot Medicine Bill Pending

SACRAMENTO (AP) Legislation to permit doctors to use marijuana to treat cancer, glaucoma and other diseases is to be introduced next week, says state Sen. Robert Presley, D-Riverside.

The senator said there are several studies, including one made at UCLA, that indicate that marijuana has value in cancer treatment. Several states allow medicinal use of marijuana.

affirmatively if necessary," he said.

The 90-year-old mother of Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi was flown to Los Angeles from riot-swept Iran last weekend, reportedly to seek medical attention.

She was at the Beverly Hills home of her daughter, Princess Chams, on Tuesday when about 500 protesters — including many Iranian students attending U.S. colleges — rushed the house.

Demonstrators broke windows and set fire to cars before being driven back by police using tear gas and fire hoses.

In a statement to the Palm Springs Desert Sun, Annenberg called the attack "outrageous conduct." He said the demonstrators' threats against "the shah's elderly mother and his sister in their anarchisic drive to murder them, enraged Americans."

Seven people were arrested and about 40 were injured when authorities broke up the violence, which erupted after an orderly protest march through Beverly Hills by a group of about 2,000.

Hamid Parcham, 26, and Said Parcham, 23, pleaded innocent Thursday in Beverly Hills Municipal Court to one count each of felony vandalism and misdemeanor rioting.

The two are accused of helping to overturn and burn a car rented by the shah's family. They were returned to Los Angeles County Jail in lieu of $10,000 bail.

The queen mother and princess were shuttled from hotel to hotel in Los Angeles for protection after the incident. They arrived at Sunnylands on Wednesday.

The Desert Sun said the shah's relatives were housed in separate cottages.

NOISE TESTS. . .

Under a plan approved by Orange County Supervisors, the 155-passenger jets are being flown into the airport twice a day.

After Jan. 15, county officials will evaluate the preliminary findings of the test to decide if it should be concluded or if it can be continued.

In making the test proposal, Airwest officials originally asked for up to six months for evaluating the noise impact of the jet.

Airwest wants to substitute the 727 for the DC-9s as a means of gaining extra passenger capacity without increasing the number of flights at the county airport.

The 727s carry about 50 more passengers than the DC-9s. The airline, through its lease agreement with the county is limited to slightly less than 14 flights per day on a monthly average.

The initial phone calls to the noise abatement office made after the test was launched Dec. 15, were exclusively from Newport Beach and Upper Bay area residents, many of whom call the office with regular complaints.

Those calls have nearly disappeared from the log and in fact, there was even a telephoned compliment from one unidentified resident who just wanted to let airport officials know he listened especially for the 727 and found "it wasn't so bad."

It's a view grudgingly shared by one airport noise foe, Dan Emery. "Yeah. So far it's at least as quiet, if not quieter," he conceded.

However, Emory said he believes the results are being produced by the flying skill of "super pilots."

"I'm not sure it's proving much other than perhaps proving you can execute the noise abatement maneuver and have it be effective," Emory said.

One of the concerns voiced by Emory and other airport foes, including the Newport Beach City Council, was that the tests would involve flying the aircraft light, or not fully loaded.

The fear was that the lighter plane would require less thrust to become airborne and therefore would be quieter than a comparable plane carrying a full load of passengers and fuel.

But airport records indicate several flights have been at or near the plane's weight capacity.

Emory said he has reservations about the use of the noise abatement takeoff if the airline were to use 727s on all its flights.

"It's fine when they've got super pilots flying. But what happens when they put in the pilots who are opposed to the maneuver? I don't think the results will be the same," he said.

Winter Visits Near LA

LOS ANGELES (AP) – Heavy snow within 35 miles of downtown Los Angeles stalled traffic on major highways leaving the city and gave hundreds of delighted school children in outlying areas an unexpected holiday today after a vigorous Pacific storm moved into Southern California.

"The only way to go north out of Los Angeles is by Highway 101 along the coast unless you want to drive to San Bernardino," California Highway Patrol officer Monty Keifer said today.

Snow that measured four inches in some places closed the Angeles Crest Highway about five miles west of Big Pines, 35 miles northeast of downtown Los Angeles, said CHP officer Ken Schultheis

Interstate 5, the main northern artery to San Francisco, was closed between Castaic and Wheeler Ridge, some 50 miles north of Los Angeles, he said.

Snow, which crept below the 3,000-foot level in the mountains, made chains mandatory for travel on the main road to Las Vegas – Interstate 15 – "from Cajon Pass all the way to the Nevada state line" in the high desert, said Lance Stalker of the state Department of Transportation.

He said snow was falling all along the route and was heavy in the Victorville-Barstow area.

Brad Griffin at KWTC Radio in Barstow said, "We're all excited. When I looked out my window this morning, I just about grabbed my skis."

On the Antelope Valley Freeway, just north of the Los Angeles area, six inches of snow had fallen with predictions of four more

CdM Couple Sue to Trim Nearby Trees

A Harbor View Hills couple have filed suit in Orange County Superior Court in efforts to force a neighboring couple to either trim their pine tree by 10 feet or pay $200,000 in property damages.

Flaherty said today he hadn't yet been notified of the suit and couldn't comment on it.

The Harwoods contend the value of surrounding homes is $350,000 to $400,000 and that the presence of the pine trees has diminished the value of their home by $200,000.

In their complaint, the Harwoods allege past requests that the Flahertys trim the trees have gone unheeded.

In addition, they contend the Harbor View Hills Community Association has asked that the trees be trimmed.

The Harwoods contend the trees violate the community association's rules because they exceed the height of the Flaherty home and the association's Architectural Committee has not approved the taller trees.

Robbins said virtually the entire Orange County legislative delegation backs the amendment while little interest was shown locally when the busing issue applied only to the Los Angeles school district.

"Busing has been a failure in the Los Angeles school district as everyone knows," Robbins said. "Since Los Angeles has been a failure they think they can do a better job by expanding busing to Orange County."

Robbins' amendment seeks to prohibit judges from ordering forced busing in all cases except when children of some ethnic origins are prohibited from attending their neighborhood schools because of race.

In effect, the proposed constitutional amendment would prohibit the type of forced busing undertaken in Los Angeles and now proposed in the expanded metropolitan plan.

Robbins said the amendment also would prohibit inter-district busing, but would permit voluntary busing of school students.

Desert Estate

Shah's Family Find Refuge

PALM SPRINGS (AP) — The besieged mother and sister of Iran's troubled shah have found refuge in a sprawling desert estate, where former President Nixon also sought a haven in recent years.

Queen Mother Tadj Ul Moluk and Princess Chams arrived at the oasis winter residence of Walter Annenberg Wednesday night after they became the targets of anti-shah violence in Beverly Hills.

Federal, state and local authorities are protecting the estate — surrounded by a high wall and tamarisk trees — said Annenberg, the former U.S. ambassador to Great Britain.

Asked about security against possible violence by anti-shah demonstrators at Sunnylands near Rancho Mirage, the 70-year-old publisher replied: "If they come, so be it."

Annenberg served as ambassador to Great Britain from 1969 to 1974, and his winter home provided seclusion for Nixon following the former president's resignation in 1974.

"When the government of the United States offers shelter to those seeking protection from radical extremists, the citizens of this country should respond affirmatively if necessary," he said.

The 90-year-old mother of Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi was flown to Los Angeles from riot-swept Iran last weekend, reportedly to seek medical attention.

She was at the Beverly Hills home of her daughter, Princess Chams, on Tuesday when about 500 protesters — including many Iranian students attending U.S. colleges — rushed the house.

Demonstrators broke windows and set fire to cars before being driven back by police using tear gas and fire hoses.

In a statement to the Palm Springs Desert Sun, Annenberg called the attack "outrageous conduct." He said the demonstrators' threats against "the shah's elderly mother and his sister in their anarchisic drive to murder them, enraged Americans."

Seven people were arrested and about 40 were injured when authorities broke up the violence, which erupted after an orderly protest march through Beverly Hills by a group of about 2,000.

China Trade Weighed

SAINT FRANCOIS, Guadeloupe (AP) — The Caribbean summit of President Carter and three West European leaders focused today on an ambitious British plan for up to $2 billion in trade with China, probably including the sale of British jet fighters, conference sources said.

British Prime Minister James Callaghan, in outlining the Chinese trade picture to Carter and the others, emphasized the sale of power-generating and other industrial equipment to Peking, said the sources who asked not to be identified.

But Callaghan also said he seeks a "balanced trade relationship" with China, a strong indication Britain will approve sale of 80 Harrier vertical take-off fighters in defiance of Soviet warnings that such sales would damage East West relations.

Carter, Callagahan, French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing and West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt met this morning in a thatched-roof open pavilion overlooking the sea, underlining the informal nature of this Western summit. The agenda was expected to be dominated by China and Western security issues, including the future of Iran and its oil resources.

Carter and West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt were the last to arrive, walking together. The president was tieless in a white short-sleeve shirt and wore gray slacks and desert boots.

French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing, who like the others spurned neckties for the occasion, had a small stack of briefing books in front of him as the quartet sat down around a small circular table.

"I see you've come well prepared," Carter noted.

None of the other leaders had any papers with him.

U.S. officials said the four might hold most of their sessions, which will conclude Saturday, without advisers at their sides.

Balloon Suspect Held

2 Others Sought in Fiery Airport Incidents

Irvine police arrested a former Control Components Inc. trainee at his home in Orange Thursday on suspicion of launching balloons that exploded in an Orange County Airport flight path.

Investigators said warrants have been issued for two other suspects following the launching of three to five homemade balloons carrying incendiary devices between Dec. 7 and 14 over the City of Irvine.

Arrested Thursday was Timothy Joseph Ropchan, 26. He was held in Orange County jail on 10 misdemeanor charges of possessing destructive devices, launching illicit material within the perimeter of an airport and violating laws against sending flaming devices into an air corridor.

Ropchan's bail was set at $1,500. If convicted, he could face a year in jail plus fines, investigators said.

Ropchan and three other employees were fired earlier from Control Components, 2567 Main St., Irvine, as the result of police investigations, a department spokesman said this morning.

On Dec. 14, Terry Huff, 26, of Costa Mesa was burned in a gas explosion in the plant's X-ray room. Investigators said that lighter-than-air gases, including helium and acetylene, are available at the plant.

Police said at least three exploding balloons were spotted above the Irvine Industrial Complex north of San Diego Freeway between Dec. 11 and 14.

The balloons, plastic trash bags filled with gas and trailing a "simple" incendiary device, exploded in flame at an altitude of about 850 feet, investigators said.

Private aircraft approach Orange County Airport at about that same altitude, police said. If a balloon had hit one of the aircraft, investigators said, a crash could have resulted.

Oil Work Resumes In Tehran

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Oil-industry sources said striking petroleum workers began returning to their jobs today, apparently heeding the call of the anti-shah religious opposition to produce enough oil to save the Iranian economy from collapse.

Palace sources reported, meanwhile, that the embattled Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi returned to Tehran by helicopter from the nearby ski resort of Jajroud, where he had gone Thursday for a brief vacation. Empress Farah and their children accompanied the monarch.

Shahpour Bakhtiar, the shah's choice for prime minister, was readying his proposed civilian cabinet for presentation to the monarch this weekend and later to the Parliament.

Since the latest round of anti-shah strikes began last month, oil production has plummeted from six million barrels a day to 250,000 barrels or less. Industry sources say it takes 900,000 barrels to meet Iran's domestic needs alone, and because of shortages the military-led government ordered fuel rationing last week.

An oil-industry source, who asked not to be named, said that with the return of some strikers the first shipments of kerosene and heating oil are expected to reach Tehran on Saturday. Figures on total production for the day were unavailable.

Newport Planners Delay Number Vote

Newport Beach planning commissioners said Thursday they're not sure they want to get into the business of social engineering, and tabled a proposal to reduce from four to three the number of unrelated people who can live in a residence.

Commissioners asked city staff members to investigate some alternate suggestions and bring the subject up again in four to six weeks, said Assistant Community Development Director Jim Hewicker.

The City Council had asked for Planning Commission review of the proposed change as a means of reducing parking problems in congested areas, on the assumption that unrelated persons living together are adults and usually would each have a car.

Currently a maximum of four unrelated persons, or four persons some of whom are related and some of whom are not, may occupy a single residence.

Hewicker said commissioners are concerned that lowering the limit to three might alleviate a problem in one part of the city but cause problems in other sections.

Staff members were asked to investigate the possibility of basing a limitation on living area, and the effects of eliminating the city's definition of a family altogether.

4 Newport Youths Held in Lido Theft

Four Newport Beach youths were being held today in connection with the theft of $3,100 in goods and a $15,000 car from a Lido Isle home, police said.

Being transferred today to Orange County Jail on $2,500 bail each were Susan Lynn Spalin, 18, and Steven Paul Fletcher, 19, of 1628 W. Ocean Front, police said. They said both face charges of receiving known stolen property.

In addition, they said two 17-year-old Newport Beach boys, whose names couldn't be released because of their age, were being held at Juvenile Hall. One faces burglary charges and the other faces charges of receiving stolen property.

Detective Bob Hardy said the arrests stemmed from the Jan. 2 burglary of the home of S.H. Byers, 401 Via Lido Soud. Taken were jewelry, clothing, a television and other goods valued at $3,100, and a car valued at $15,000 to $17,000.

One of the 17-year-old boys was arrested for the burglary later that evening after he allegedly crashed the car in Orange, Hardy said.

He said the youth was already on probation in connection with the Dec. 20 burglary of a Newport Beach surf shop.

Aqueduct Closed

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The 242-mile-long Colorado River Aqueduct, which carries the bulk of Southern California's water supply from the Colorado River, will be shut down for maintenance beginning Monday.

2 Mesa Girls Run Into Car, Suffer Injuries

Two 8-year-old Costa Mesa girls were injured Thursday when they apparently darted out from behind a parked car and ran into the side of a moving car on Wilson Street, police said.

The two students at Wilson School were resting at home today after the 7:40 a.m. accident near the intersection of Monrovia Avenue and Wilson Street.

Janet Gail Ward of 891 Darrell St. suffered a broken foot, a cut knee, and reinjured her arm that was broken last week when she fell off a bicycle. She was treated at a clinic in Fountain Valley, her parents said.

Her friend, Anne Marie Lafave of 878 W. Wilson St., was treated at Hoag Memorial Hospital in Newport Beach for a deep skull laceration. Twenty-five stitches were needed to close the wound, hospital officials said.

Police said no charges are pending against driver Sidney Jay Yules, 23, of 890 Darrell St., who was able to slam on his brakes and swerve to avoid hitting the girls head-on.

A witness told police the young girls ran into the street without looking and hit the side of Yules' skidding car.

Irvine Ranch Converting 500 Acres

The Irvine Company announced Thursday it is expanding its farmland acreage by converting 500 acres of land in the Irvine Ranch foothills into avocado and orange groves.

The orchards will be developed, through an investment of $1.5 million, on property below the Lomas Ridge, northwest of El Toro Marine Corps Air Station, in county territory near the city of Irvine.

The land is now used for cattle grazing.

Terracing, construction of contour drainage channels and installation of a drip irrigation system is scheduled to begin this spring.

Some 300 acres will be put into avocado production, with the remaining 200 acres in oranges.

The property adjoins 500 acres that were converted to avocado orchards during 1978, a program that also cost a reported $1.5 million.

The reduction of grazing lands will not affect the size of the Irvine Ranch cattle herd, an Irvine Company spokesman said.

NOISE. . .

Emery. "Yeah. So far it's at least as quiet, if not quieter," he conceded.

However, Emory said he believes the results are being produced by the flying skill of "super pilots."

"I'm not sure it's proving much other than perhaps proving you can execute the noise abatement maneuver and have it be effective," Emory said.

One of the concerns voiced by Emory and other airport foes, including the Newport Beach City Council, was that the tests would involve flying the aircraft light, or not fully loaded.

The fear was that the lighter plane would require less thrust to become airborne and therefore would be quieter than a comparable plane carrying a full load of passengers and fuel.

But airport records indicate several flights have been at or near the plane's weight capacity.

Emory said he has reservations about the use of the noise abatement takeoff if the airline were to use 727s on all its flights.

"It's fine when they've got super pilots flying. But what happens when they put in the pilots who are opposed to the maneuver? I don't think the results will be the same," he said.

Suspect Held In Newport Robbery Try

A 24-year-old transient was arrested Thursday in connection with the attempted robbery of a Newport Beach record store, police said today.

They said Clifford Robert Jardine was arrested about 11:30 a.m. near Dale Way and Harbor Boulevard in Costa Mesa based on a description given by witnesses. He remained in Newport Beach jail today in lieu of $25,000 bail.

Police said the incident occurred the evening of Dec. 30 at Peer Records, 2306 W. Ocean Front.

They said an apparently drunk man hit and slapped a clerk several times and threw the cash register against the wall in an unsuccessful attempt to open it. The man fled on foot after a burglar alarm was set off, police said.

At 77, He's Out of Gas

Ex-Councilman Calls It a Career in Huntington

By ARTHUR R. VINSEL
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

One of the traditional bastions of motorized America — the corner gas station where the owner would still wipe the windshield for $1 worth of regular — is fading out of downtown Huntington Beach

Texaco dealer Ted Bartlett, 77, has closed his station at 303 Main St., on the corner of Olive Avenue, where the champagne was to flow today like Sky Chief and Fire Chief never will again.

His Texaco distributor, based in Wilmington, forced the former mayor out of business effective New Year's Day.

The tanker truck trip downcoast apparently is too costly to justify in a day and age when oil companies cater to operators with 40,000-gallon underground tanks.

Bartlett is too small to compete anymore.

"They're coming down today to pick up the credit card receipts and the imprinter," says the longtime civic leader, in business at the same location for 30 years this July.

The little corner station with its Playboy calendar pinup pictures; its smell of motor oil and echoes of decades of man-talk has a paltry 4,000-gallon capacity.

"I ordered gas at New Year's and they said, 'Well, we're not going to deliver anymore!'" said Bartlett.

"We'd been talking about this for three months," says Bartlett, who didn't really believe it would come to this.

Despite the sentiments of customers of 20 and 30 years who don't believe big is necessarily beautiful, Bartlett decided to close down.

"Everything's going to superstations. It's big business now. I'm not feeling sorry for myself. You can't work till you die and I want to live to be 100."

A lot of water has passed under the bridge since Bartlett pumped his first tankful of regular on July 15, 1949, after taking over the tiny station.

"I think it hit the Post Office the hardest," Bartlett says of his Texaco-enforced retirement and the budget-conscious Post Office officials just across Main Street.

His was the last service station in the downtown area and the fleet of postal vehicles must now travel 2½ miles and spend 25 minutes on routine refueling at Magnolia Street and Atlanta Avenue at a definite cost increase.

Pumping gas and shooting the breeze was Bartlett's stock in trade.

"Over the years, when we had the five-man city council, I think we had more meetings at the station than at City Hall," he recalls.

"There was always someone there . . . councilmen, the police chief. "We didn't accomplish much, but there was a lot of BS thrown," he says with a chuckle.

"But it was never what you would call 'backroom politics'," says Bartlett, ever-mindful of the Ralph M. Brown Act which forbids secret government agency meetings.

A lot of Republican Party meetings were held among the hand-cranked bulk oil pumps by men smoking and thoughtfully scuffing their shoes on the grimy concrete office floor.

Not a day went by but what Bartlett could be seen on his corner chatting with such longtime local figures as J. Sherman Denny or George Arnold, wearing a yellow slicker in rain; traditional green Texaco uniform in fair weather.

"I've got a lotta work to do," Bartlett said today of the task of winding up his business affairs and selling out.

Bartlett, who was defeated last April in a bid for re-election to the Huntington Beach City Council, after 20 years' service, plans to take wife Alice on a Caribbean cruise later this year.

Cleveland Forest Preserving Nixed

Officials of the U.S. Forest Service said Thursday they would recommend to Congress that very little of the Cleveland National Forest be preserved in wilderness form.

The recommendation came at the conclusion of a six-month study known as RARE (Roadless Area Review and Evaluation)-II in which the service analyzed a total of 63 million acres nationwide.

Forest land that didn't qualify by having some unusual or unique attributes is to be put under some kind of management plan making it available for more inetnsive recreation or for commercial interests such as lumber or cattle grazing.

In all, 11 areas within the Cleveland National Forest totalling 119,500 acres were considered under RARE-II.

Thursday, Grover Payne, one of Cleveland National Forest's district rangers, explained that only one 13,500-acre area has been recommended for wilderness status.

It's the Pine Creek area near Pine Valley in south San Diego County.

Five of the areas in the Trabuco district that encompasses Orange, Riverside and northern San Diego counties have been taken out of RARE-II and given a management plan.

That means no wilderness designation for the Trabuco district. Instead, the plan calls for some developed campsites and off-road vehicle use along with what officials call "dispersed uses."

Dispersed uses include trails for hiking or horse riding that spread the people around the area, rather than concentrating people in a campsite, he explained.

Payne stressed that RARE-II has only produced recommendations, not final decisions.

"This is simply the list as it will be presented to Congress," he said. "It's up to them to make the final decision."

Cost of Early Vote Tally Hit By Registrar

A proposal to start counting election day ballots earlier in Orange County to speed up the final tallying would cost more than it's worth, according to County Registrar of Voters Al Olson.

The early count procedure probably would have trimmed two hours off the Orange County tally during the November general election, Olson said in a report to supervisors.

But the system would cost an extra $40,000 to put into effect and require legislation allowing Orange County to start counting ballots before the polls closed.

Supervisor Ralph Clark asked Olson to study the early counting system after learning such a procedure was being used in Riverside and San Diego Counties.

Special state legislation allowed the early counting there, Olson said, as a test program. That legislation expires in 1981.

Olson said there is a possibility legislation will be passed this year to permit California counties with mechanized vote counting equipment to use early ballot pickups.

Among problems with the early vote count system, Olson said, is the fact that it would require Orange County's 14-year-old vote counting machines to work an extra six hours and increase the likelihood of a breakdown.

In addition, he said, it would require the county to hire about 751 additional election employees to work in two shifts. It is now difficult to recruit enough workers for one shift, he added.

Clark had proposed the early vote counting system as a possible way to avoid spending several million dollars on new vote tallying equipment.

Strike Continues

False Fire Alarm Empties School

By RAYMOND ESTRADA Jr.
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

A disruption developed early to day in the Huntington Beach teachers strike when a fire alarm was falsely set off at Edison High School and several hundred students left classes.

While there was considerable milling about, Edison Principal Phil Gross said only about 300 students actually joined teachers on the picket line as a result of the false fire alarm.

Two students, Kim Higgins and Pam Parbs, however, claimed about 1,500 students joined the pickets in the 9:30 a.m. incident.

Miss Higgins and Miss Parbs claimed they have gathered signatures of 700 students on a petition supporting the striking teachers.

Meanwhile, officials estimated nearly half of the 867 teachers in the Huntington Beach Union School District have stayed off their jobs since the strike was called Wednesday in a contract dispute.

Elsewhere in the school system, district spokesman Lyn Henderson said about 150 Westminster High School students staged a walkout this morning.

But Berger said most of the students returned to classes when warned they would be truant if they did not.

A number of Ocean View High School students reportedly walked out of classes Wednesday but school officials denied the incident.

Teachers to Strike In Westminster?

By ROBERT BARKER
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Rumblings of a possible teachers strike in the Westminster School (elementary) District are mounting after a prolonged deadlock in contract negotiations.

Bill Bianchi, executive director of the West Orange County United Teachers, said today that some teachers are clamoring for a strike.

He said it could take place Monday morning, depending on what the teachers decide late today at a meeting of the general membership.

Key points in the labor dispute include salary increases, fringe benefits, class sizes and binding arbitration in teachers grievance disputes.

Bianchi said that teachers in the 20-campus district are asking for a six percent increase for the 1979-80 school year. They were granted a 5.5 percent hike for the current year in a previous contract but that has been held up by statewide salary freeze.

He reports that teachers also are asking for an additional 1.5 percent adjustment in their current salary.

The total package would amount to 13 percent salary increase.

District spokesman Barbara Winars said teachers have been offered a seven percent hike for 1979-80.

The district employs about 400 teachers who earn an average salary of $18,100 annually.

District officials previously have collected lesson plans, and classroom keys from teachers in the event of a strike.

Bianchi said this action hardened positions and the Westminster Teachers Association took a vote of no confidence in school Superintendent Kenneth Ricketts.

District officials claim they are well prepared for a strike and that all schools will remain open and all classes will be conducted by trained personnel.

First Payment Paid County In Park Case

Officials of Conrock have given Orange County officials a check for $600,000 as the first installment of the $1.2 million settlement of the dispute over Caspers Regional Park, according to Auditor-Controller Vic Heim.

The check was given to the county after supervisors Wednesday unanimously endorsed an agreement negotiated with the gravel mining concern by supervisors Thomas Riley and Ralph Diedrich.

The settlement ends a dispute that began last winter when Conrock's gravel mining operation on the San Juan Creek caused erosion damage to the park.

Trees were uprooted and picnic tables washed out when the rain-swollen stream ate a gulch through the park that was 20 feet deep and up to 400 feet wide in places.

The agreement calls for payments totaling $1.2 million to be given the county over the next five years to pay for the erosion damage.

It also calls for an additional $600,000 to be paid the county if the company's lease is extended beyond 1983.

Nudie Photo Brings Suit

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An Encino man has filed a $500,000 lawsuit against Playgirl magazine for running a nude photograph taken of him at a private party without his permission.

Kulik Jurors Get Five-day Break in Tiff

Jurors in the $1 million heroin possession trial of Alexander Kulik were given a five-day break in the Orange County Superior Court case on Thursday when lawyers couldn't agree on questioning the defendant.

Kulik, 29, a one-time Newport Beach resident and businessman is being tried in the court of acting Superior Court Judge Paul Mast on charges that he had 1.1 pounds of nearly pure oriental heroin in his possession when he was arrested Oct. 22, 1977.

In addition to dismissing the jury until next Wednesday Judge Mast rescinded a bench warrant he had issued earlier for one witness, Anthony "Big Tony" Marone Sr.

The warrant was issued this week when Marone, a relocated federal witness with ties to east coast Mafia families, failed to appear to testify.

Court officials said they have received assurances that Marone will be on hand to testify when the trial resumes next week.

Courting Disaster?

DISASTER REPORTS (CONTINUED): A writer for the Chicago Tribune has traveled to our region recently and has come up with another one of those pieces that broadly hints California may fall into the sea.

His piece was printed in a county paper and was timed nicely with the recent rains.

The story is datelined "Laguna Beach" which you suspect was a selection keyed to the recent Bluebird Canyon disaster in the Art Colony.

The Chicago-based writer suggests, "Now, scientists

Old 1906 Coastal Structure That Has Survived a Few Storms

say, living along the Golden State's shore may be less status than stupidity."

HE GOES ON TO quote a scientist as saying we live in a fantasyland out here because people build homes along the shoreline. And, most of these homes have been built during a drought cycle. But we've had four wet cycles within the last 173 years.

Thus, indeed, if we are moving into another wet cycle, it is suggested that homes might be smashed by 40-foot waves and other mansions might simply slip off into the sea.

It was suggested that since the 1940s, people have just assumed it never rains in Southern California - which sounds like a somewhat familiar lyric.

Well, if that was the thought, it should have evaporated last year when we got 33 inches of the wet stuff. That compared pretty closely to our total rainfall of 32.76 inches in 1940-41. But we've had other rains. We got almost 27 inches in 1950-51 and almost 28 inches in 1968-69.

No doubt we've made some stupid decisions in the past on where we build. But so has every other region of the country.

I'VE NEVER UNDERSTOOD why some people build on the bank of a river when they know it might flood out in the winter. People still build in Kansas within tornado alleys. Floridians don't seem to be discouraged much by hurricanes.

And as for the East and Midwest, you are amazed that citizens still insist on building entire cities in places where they just know they'll be covered with ice and snow every winter.

THUS YOU MIGHT suspect Southern Californians are no more stupid when it comes to building in hazardous places than anybody else.

You flirt with Mother Nature and every once in a while you get your toes stomped on.

Airlift Seen

Viets Pushing Into Cambodia

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) – Vietnamese divisions were reported driving north, south and east of Phnom Penh today in an apparent move to throttle the Cambodian capital.

Diplomatic sources in Peking said China may likely airlift Cambodian leaders out of the capital carrying six of them to China. Japan's Kyodo News Service said. It quoted other Peking sources as saying China recently asked Thailand to allow passage of a special Chinese plane over Thailand, but said the informant was not confirmed.

THE SOVIET Communist Party newspaper Pravda reported on its front page that Cambodian rebels are continuing a powerful offensive against the Phnom Penh government. It did not mention the participation of Vietnamese troops in the fighting.

The escalating border conflict between Vietnamese and Cambodia mirrors the political struggle in southeast Asia between the Soviet Union and China.

Reports published in China's official People's Daily said 100,000 Vietnamese regulars, equipped with Russian-made fighter planes, tanks and guns, already have invaded and occupied a large chunk of Cambodian territory, Kyodo said.

"I WOULD NOT be surprised if Phnom Penh was evacuated soon and the government took to the countryside," one European diplomat in Bangkok said.

Other Bangkok analysts said the Vietnamese bypassed Kompong Cham, 45 miles northeast of Phnom Penh, and may have moved 19 or more miles west of the Mekong River to a point near the dead center of Cambodia.

They said the Vietnamese also opened up a major front in the extreme south of the country, and that three divisions were driving westward near the coast. It was believed they would try to cut the highway from Cambodia's only deep-water port, Kimpong Som, through which China ships military supplies to the Cambodian army.

THE ANALYSTS said the provincial capital of Takeo, 37 miles south of Phnom Penh, was taken by the Vietnamese who were now believed to have moved most of a 100,000-man force into Cambodia.

Vietnam's rebel Cambodian Communist proxies claimed they seized Svay Rieng in the Parrot's Beak area along Highway 1 leading to Phnom Penh from the Vietnamese border.

The insurgents of the month-old National United Front for National Salvation and six provinces of eastern Cambodia, about a quarter of the country, were now under their control.

However, Bangkok analysts believe the Vietnamese are doing the major fighting and leaving the mop-up and victory claims to the estimated 20,000 rebels who broke with the Communist regime in Phnom Penh.

United Air Lines pilot Malburn McBroom, who was in command of a DC-8 jetliner that crashed in Portland's outskirts last week is shown with his wife, Donna, in a Gresham hospital Thursday. McBroom, 52, a veteran of 27 years with UAL, is recovering from a fractured leg, fractured ribs and hand and face lacerations.

Soviets Rap McDonald's 'Big Mac'

MOSCOW (AP) – A Soviet magazine says the "Big Mac" has earned big profits for McDonald's hamburger chain while raising questions about the health of hamburger-hungry Americans.

The world affairs weekly, New Times, said McDonald's is making millions of dollars out of a "clearly poor-quality product." One of the company's sandwich specials is known as the "Big Mac."

FRED TURNER, chief executive at McDonald's headquarters in Oak Brook, Ill., commented: "The rhetoric of the English-language New Times published in Moscow indicates they must have had a slow news day. Maybe next week they'll report they invented the hamburger."

McDonald's operates about 4,000 restaurants in the United States and 20 other countries, selling approximately 3 billion hamburgers a year.

"The most useful part of the McDonald special, as a California doctor has aptly put it, is the layer of air in the sliced bun," said the New Times article.

IT ADDED: "In the opinion of scientists, the correlation of fats, carbohydrates and soda in the firm's products makes them akin to foods which raise the cholesterol content in the blood which, in its turn, increases the probability of the cardiovascular system being affected."

The article quoted Dr. George Christakis, nutrition chief at Mount Sinai School of Medicine in New York City, as saying that a third of the youngsters who regularly eat such foods would run a high risk of heart attacks by age 50.

Dallas Cycle Cop Disputes Finding

DALLAS (AP) – The Dallas motorcycle policeman whose open microphone is given as the source of evidence that John Kennedy's assassination was a conspiracy said Thurdsday that the mike couldn't have been his.

The House assassination committee concluded last week that Kennedy probably was slain as the result of a conspiracy. Committee members said their conclusion was based on new acoustical evidence that "establishes a high probability that two gunmen fired at President Kennedy."

THE COMMITTEE'S EVIDENCE included an analysis of a tape recording made during the assassination – from what the panel determined was a stuck transmitter on officer H. B. McLain's motorcycle.

But McLain said Thursday that his mike would have transmitted loud sirens as he rushed to the hospital with the fatally slain president.

"That wasn't my motorcycle," McLain said. "There would have been a siren on that channel one all the way to the hospital. Everybody had their sirens on . . . you would have heard it on channel one."

THE RECORDING WAS MADE of a transmission over the police department's channel one, although motorcycles assigned to the motorcade were instructed to communicate on channel two.

U.S. Summary

Rain and freezing drizzle slicked roads in Oklahoma and northern Texas, and cold temperatures continued today from the Midwest to the Atlantic Coast.

Deaths related to the cold were reported Thursday in Illinois where two mentally retarded boys were found frozen to death, and in Georgia, where an elderly woman died in a fire kindled by sparks from a bedroom fireplace.

Electric use records were set in Milwaukee and in North and South Carolina.

Schools were closed Thursday in parts of Oklahoma because of ice-coated roads, and Oklahoma Gov. George Nigh ordered all non-essential state workers to stay home today because of the hazardous driving conditions.

Rain was reported from the coast of eastern Texas into Arkansas and Louisiana, with freezing drizzle over Oklahoma and northern Arkansas. Snow fell in Nebraska, Kansas and much of the Midwest.

Temperatures around the nation at 2 a.m. EST ranged from 37 below zero in Butte, Mont. to 67 in Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

California

A stalled Pacific weather front that left forecasters' predictions of rain looking all wet has finally come ashore and may continue to deluge Southern California through tonight.

Chances of precipitation are expected to decline through the evening, and the National Weather Service estimates the likelihood of rain Saturday at 10 percent.

A half-inch to an inch of moisture was expected to fall in coastal regions, and as much as three inches was predicted for some mountain areas before giving way to variable clouds Saturday. Snow levels are also expected to fall tonight to about 6,000 feet.

Gusting winds of up to 35 mph in the mountains about 25 mph along the coast are expected to decrease in most spots tonight.

Relatively mild overnight temperatures in the upper 40s are predicted for metropolitan areas with highs in the low 60s expected Saturday.

State Tax Cut Hinted

Brown to Reveal Plan at Inauguration?

SACRAMENTO (AP) – Gov. Edmund Brown Jr., carrying his "Spirit of Proposition 13" banner into 1979, is privately telling key lawmakers he may request an additional $1 billion tax cut this year.

This $1 billion cut would come as an addition to the $1 billion reduction in state income taxes signed by Brown last summer, effective for income tax returns filed between now and April 15.

IN A TELEVISION interview Wednesday, Brown appeared to be hinting he would publicly announce the tax cut proposal during his inaugural address, which is to be televised statewide next Monday night.

Brown, who last fall promised voters a radical reduction in government if re-elected, said in the Wednesday interview that he "might" ask for another state tax cut.

"We're not asking for more taxes. In fact, we may be even looking to see how we can eliminate a few," Brown said.

Asked if that meant he would cut taxes again, Brown replied, "We might just do that . . . Tune in next week."

"I'm not making a commitment yet. We're looking at it. It depends on the economy."

Brown rarely floats such trial balloons unless he has already made up his mind, and he apparently was more specific about the proposal in private briefings with Democratic lawmakers this week.

Senate President Pro Tem James Mills, who participated in one of those briefings, said Thursday that Brown put a tentative $1 billion pricetag on the tax cut, but did not specify which taxes might be reduced.

Mills said he expected the package would be a combination of reductions in the income tax and one or more other taxes.

If Brown's past comments are a guide, most of the tax cuts will probably go to renters in the form of increased income tax credits. Renters are the biggest group of taxpayers left out of the Proposition 13 tax cut feast.

Mills also said Brown told him that in addition to the $1 billion tax cut, he was considering a separate proposal to permanently shift $1 billion or more in sales tax revenues from the state to local governments.

"I THINK IT'S very likely. I think it's something we can do," Mills said.

But a tax cut could bring into the open a simmering battle between the Democratic governor and liberal leaders of his party who are already unhappy with Brown's apparent willingness to cut health, welfare and other social programs.

Hughes Airwest Trims Fares

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) Hughes Airwest today rolled back five-day-old fare hikes of up to 135 percent on routes inside California after the state Public Utilities Commission rejected the increases.

The PUC ruled Thursday that Hughes could boost fares on flights in California by no more than 15 percent or lower them as much as 35 percent – the same latitude granted other carriers which fly between California cities

A Hughes spokesman said the airline would comply by dropping fares once again to pre-Jan. 1 levels.

For example, the one-way coach fare between Los Angeles and San Francisco will return to $28.10, including tax. Hughes had begun charging $54.00 on Jan. 1.

Alioto to Run?

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) – Ex-mayor Joseph L. Alioto has renewed his voting address here amid published reports that he is expected to run for mayor in November.

The 61-year-old lawyer, popular with labor, black and local business leaders, reportedly telephoned the city's registrar of voters on Thursday to change his registration to an address where his daughter lives.

Warrants Sought

LOS ANGELES (AP) – Search warrants have been served on Los Angeles and San Francisco banks in an effort to verify whether the Rev. Jim Jones and his aides forced followers to sell property and turn over the money to People's Temple.

Documents filed to obtain the warrants Thursday indicated investigators may be interested in $326,256 paid to People's Temple from 1976 to 1978 following 24 sales in Los Angeles County.

Buffalo Killed

LOS ANGELES (AP) – Two of three Cape buffalo imported from Africa 12 years ago have been killed at the Los Angeles Zoo this week because no other zoos would accept them, zoo director Warren Thomas said.

"We really needed to get rid of most of the herd. It's like maintaining any group of animals – there comes a time when you have to cull your stock," said Thomas, who added that no other federally approved institutions wanted the animals.

Avocados Lost

ESCONDIDO (AP) – Losses to avocados knocked from trees by high winds earlier this week could run as high as $250,000, growers predict.

The loss for the season is estimated at 30 percent of the initial crop, packing house spokesman Steve White said Thursday. "There will be a temporary reduction in prices for avocados as a result," White said.

Brown Help Asked

SAN DIEGO (AP) – The county Board of Supervisors has asked Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. to declare a state of emergency in the neighborhood ravaged by the crash of a jetliner Sept. 25 that killed 144 people.

The board adopted a resolution Thursday asking Brown to clear the way for property owners in the North Park area whose homes were destroyed or damaged to obtain tax relief once their homes are rebuilt.

More than a dozen homes in a two-block area were damaged or destroyed.

Ex-death Row Inmate Held In Slaying

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) – A former death row inmate, who was paroled after repeatedly begging to be executed, was arrested Thursday and booked for investigation of murder in the shooting of a liquor store owner on Wednesday.

Robert Lee Massie, 36, was seized at the end of a car-chase through the Haight-Ashbury District. He was booked in the slaying of Boris "Bob" Naumoff, 63, who was killed at the Miraloma Liquor Store owned by Naumoff.

NAUMOFF, married and father of four, was described as well-liked by patrons and neighbors.

"It's an awful thing. And such a fine man he was, friendly and gentle," said Vera Hochede, operator of a nearby launderette.

Massie, accused of killing a San Gabriel woman during a robbery in 1965, was granted a stay of execution in 1967 on the day he was scheduled to die in the gas chamber for the murder, authorities said.

MASSIE WAS paroled about eight months ago, authorities said.

Against Massie's wishes, his 1967 execution was stayed by Gov. Ronald Reagan, authorities said. Although Massie said he fired his lawyers and wanted no intervention, Reagan granted the stay on Oct. 6 in the "interests of justice."

Hearst Wedding Blood Ceremony

SAN MATEO (AP) – Patricia Hearst intends to incorporate an ancient Indian marriage ritual of blood mingling when she weds her former bodyguard next month, it has been disclosed.

Ms. Hearst, currently serving a federal prison term for bank robbery, will marry Bernard Shaw on Feb. 14, the Times of San Mateo reported Thursday.

The newspaper account said the wedding would begin with Episcopal rites by the Rev. Edward Dumke and then John E. Hamilton, Grand Sachem Rolling Cloud of the Confederation of the Mochican and Pequot tribes of Connecticut, New York and New Jersey will perform the Indian rites.

Part of the ceremony will include having the married couple prick their little fingers and combine the blood after it flows to their wrists, Hamilton said.

Ms. Hearst also will cut a lock from her hair and give it to Shaw.

The couple met when Shaw was assigned to guard Ms. Hearst while she was free on bail. She returned to prison when her appeals in court failed.

Doctor Pleads Innocence

INDIO (AP) – A prominent doctor and school board member in the Coachella Valley, Donald A. Miller, has pleaded innocent to charges he burned down his office building and tried to hire someone to kill his estranged wife, Susan.

Charges against Miller were arson, two counts of insurance fraud and conspiracy to commit murder, according to Deputy District Attorney Jim Sandler.

Miller was being held in lieu of $50,000 bond, reduced from $250,000, after his plea Thursday.

OC Fire Service Change Proposed

The urbanization of once sparsely populated areas like Orange County has raised some difficult questions for state and local fire-fighting agencies.

Since 1930 the state Division of Forestry and the Orange County Fire Department have provided joint fire service to the county with excellent results.

Strictly speaking, the state fire fighters are not supposed to battle structural fires. Their concern is wildland and watershed fire protection.

But with the growth of Orange County the ratio between the needs has changed to a point where 90 percent of fires involve structures and only 10 percent wildlands protection.

The state-county agreement provides fire service in both areas, with the county paying the state $18.6 million annually for structural fire protection and the state paying $1.6 million for wildlands protection.

Now, in the interest of complying with Gov. Brown's request for a 10 percent cutback in state budgets, the Division of Forestry has announced plans to terminate the joint agreement, leaving the county to pay for its own structural fire-fighting services, with the state paying the county to take over wildlands protection as well.

The state has in mind a $700,000 contract, which would represent a substantial saving over its present investment of $1.6 million. It also would reduce the headcount of state fire-fighting personnel.

But County Administrative Officer Robert Thomas contends this amount would cover only salaries, not overhead costs involved in the takeover.

Indeed, some financial estimates indicate termination of the joint agreement could end up costing both parties more money.

The joint operation has efficiently served unincorporated communities as well as nine cities contracting for fire service.

In addition it provides a large pool of highly trained fire-fighters available to fight major blazes throughout the state in time of emergency. It has aptly been pointed out that if Orange County takes over the entire operation it would be less likely to send county personnel off on such missions.

The state now has indicated that the scheduled July, 1979 cutoff of state participation may be renegotiated, since that would hardly give the county time to make the operational shift.

In view of all the questions, financial and operational, that have been raised, it would seem advisable for the state to re-think the entire proposal.

Out of Order

Local and federal officials who reacted to the ugly rioting in Beverly Hills were on target when they demanded that the Iranian student trouble-makers be invited to leave the United States as rapidly as possible.

The Department of State and the Immigration and Naturalization Service indicate there may be legal problems in cancelling student visas or ordering deportation.

It is of course correct, and proper, that legally admitted persons should enjoy the right of free speech while in this country.

It is far from correct when they abuse that right to incite and organize riots, invade private property, endanger the safety of others, ignore or resist police orders and cause injury and property damage that must be paid for by both law-abiding private citizens and the taxpayers.

This is not the first time the hot-headed young Iranians, enjoying the fruits of higher education at the expense of their parents or their government, have caused trouble for law enforcement agencies.

A similar, but perhaps somewhat more understandable, demonstration resulted in a riot outside the White House at the time of the shah's visit.

This week's obviously well-organized attack on the residence of the shah's relatives in Beverly Hills was totally inexcusable.

Things have come to a pretty pass when residents of a peaceable American community must be warned by radio to stay away from their homes until police can restore order.

It is unfortunate if our laws prevent us from sending these so-called students with their Marxist symbols home to do their rock-throwing and car-burning on the streets of Teheran.

That would seem more appropriate for would-be social revolutionaries than a chicken-hearted attack on the home of a couple of elderly ladies.

That Humphrey Bogart liked his liquor was never much of a secret. And where he went in his romantic adventures wasn't either, evidently. At least not to the private detective that Bogart finally spotted on his trail. It's reported Bogart called the operative's agency and said, "You've got a man tailing me. Would you check with him and find out where I am?"

The Dutch word "nippertje" wound up in English as "nipperkin," meaning a small flask that held less than half a pint. Today's liquor drinker may not know it, says our Language man, but it's to that word he alludes when he calls for a little nip.

Frogs in fear tend to jump toward the color blue, if such color be within sight. Tests have repeatedly indicated that. Maybe they think it's water, don't know.

Q. "Can you tell the age of a rooster by its comb?"

A. Not precisely, certainly. But the comb's color tends to fade a little with age. I lived in West Germany for a number of years after World War II. Still recall how the chicken raisers thereabouts then used to color the combs of their stewing chickens with lipstick before taking them to market. Made the birds look younger.

Q. "How many amateur and professional boxers have died from ring injuries since World War II?"

A. 329. Almost 10 a year.

Variations on 10-Best Theme

WASHINGTON — One of the winter solstice rites is Dr. George Gallup's little listings of the 10 men and women most admired by the American citizenry. Whatever the state of grace of these good souls, it must be said that the only reason they are on the lists is that theirs are public names, and that this enterprise is more a name-identification exercise than a public vote for sainthood.

How else to explain that every year, the President, whoever he is, is almost always first? And yet we do not know the private virtue of these Chiefs of State. They may be the worst scoundrels in the universe.

still, if the populace wants to list Jimmy Carter as first of the most admired, let it be.

THIS YEAR, Pope John Paul II came in second, and I'm for that if only because it brings overdue recognition to a Pole of merit. Despite all those bad jokes, Poles can claim Copernicus, Madame Curie and Frederic Chopin.

Now Billy Graham always finishes in the money — he's third this year. Graham's just too holy to be true. But isn't his dominance threatened by all those evangelists braying away on television in their pastel blue or beige polyester suits?

Fourth is Anwar Sadat, the sly old fox. Trailing Sadat is Gerald Rudolph Ford, first as a nice guy but second in 1976. Then there's Ronald Reagan, by golly, an earnest young chap way past Social Security age. He is followed by Sen. Edward Kennedy (ah, the name), Richard M. Nixon (ah, the gumption), and Menachem Begin (ah, the chutzpah . . . his admirable consistence may prove to be consistently wrong).

BARELY MAKING the list — probably for good reasons — is Henry A. Kissinger, the slyest fox of all. He is the Wizard of Oz and Oooze, but who will pull the curtain back? Do you know that this man's income is probably greater than that of Jimmy Carter, Gerry Ford and Dick Nixon combined? Egads!

Betty Ford leads the women, and I only wish her husband had a commanding enough voice to tell her to shut up once in a while. Why Rosalynn Carter slipped to second this year, I don't know, but I can understand why Golda Meir stayed in there at third. Same thinking on fourth most admired, Pat Nixon, who proves that dignity isn't obsolete.

Barbara Walters, who can't be avoided, is fifth, and the similarly unavoidable Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis is sixth. Anita Bryant, celebrated for oranges and other fruit, follows.

NEXT ARE Barbara Jordan and Queen Elizabeth II (tied), who probably should swap jobs. Shirley Chisolm, the only 1968 presidential candidate who had compassion enough to visit the paralyzed George Wallace in the hospital after he was shot (thus bringing tears to his eyes), is ninth. Tenth is Indira Gandhi, to me an omen of what could happen if the National Organization for Women ever prevails in our republic.

Enough of this Gallup drill. I have my own list, though some on it have no public fame. I think first of a highly skilled specialist at Johns Hopkins Hospital, a man whose greatest pride is that he comes from generations of doctors who vastly preferred treating patients at reasonable fees, rather than laying up treasures and stock in shopping centers on this earth.

HE IS to be further admired for using his surgical skills sparingly and only when he knows they can be put to healing and not for a quick, big payday.

And Vincent Reed, 50, superintendent of schools in Washington, D.C., deserves a kudo for reintroducing discipline, strong administration, and insistence on quality and accountability in a system long afflicted with bad teaching, wasteful spending, and poor morale. His conservatism might succeed in reaching goals that liberals have yelled about for years.

I have to hand it to Cyrus Vance for manfully and patiently putting up with the nonsense endemic to international diplomacy. Also to Arthur Fiedler, a wonderful maestro at 84, who walked away from the hospital only 16 days after brain surgery. Pearl Bailey shows class by hanging in there with quality.

AND I AM so admiring of George Burns, now 82, for being a great and durable entertainer, and a man who proves that smoking cigars does not cause early demise.

Dr. Andre Hellegers, director of the Kennedy Institute, who spends much time studying prenatal and infant care, deserves commendation for trying to find out why the District of Columbia (heavily laden with federal bucks) had the worst record in the nation for infant mortality. (Could it be that since D.C. also leads the country in abortions, the once-aborted mothers aren't as able to deliver healthy children?)

And what about Henry Ford II, a super-rich guy who didn't have to work a day in his life, but dutifully stuck to the business to make sure it succeeded, and lived up to his own enlightened social views as well? Amen, amen, I say to you that it is harder for a rich man to enter heaven than it is for a camel to pass through an eye of the needle (how 'bout that Billy?).

SAM HAYAKAWA is a great senator if only because he argues that at his age, 72, he has nothing to lose and that more accomplished senior citizens ought to get into politics and exercise their wit and wisdom - as he does so well.

Nor can I forget the faceless men and women of the Army, who got small thanks for picking up the remains of the Rev. Jim Jones' 1,000 True Believers. Mark Lane's name is front-page, but name me one of those dedicated soldiers who performed this higly unpleasant and difficult job.

There should also be a bonus salute to newsmen and women who refrain from running with the latest popular cause and practice their trade at least 50 feet away from the story so that they can get a proper view of it.

Likewise, for the first courageous black official who stands up and says it makes no sense for the District of the Columbia to be "treated as though it were a state," and thus be granted two U.S. senators. Should add that D.C. can't be a state if for no other reason than it has no cows, county fairs, or farm field fences. Well, enough of this.

Wiggling Out of Trouble With Psychiatry

The Guyana murder suicide, that mass production, painfully American version of the "Orchestra" or some other equally sanguinary Greek tragedy, and the reasons for it are beyond divination. Leave it to the saurian ladies and gentlemen of the social sciences to provide us with the pop-psyche or pop-soc explanation on the TV talk shows.

Crime, if it's to be understood at all, must be examined on a smaller scale. Which brings us to the news that a Franklin County (Ohio) judge has acquitted one William Milligan of three rapes, a kidnapping and a robbery by virtue of insanity. Mr. Milligan, the court found, is the possessor of no less than ten different and distinct personalities, only one of whom, named Ragan and aged 22, is the evil criminal.

Arthur, a poet of undetermined age and a British accent, is thought to be a wholesome influence although a weak one when it comes to controlling Ragan's behavior. The three-year-old girl personality who draws what are described as charming butterflies and the nine-year-old boy personality who passes his time screaming and knocking his head against a wall are below the legal age of reason.

AT THE time of the trial, the wicked Ragan was out to lunch. Obviously the authorities couldn't try an innocent three-year-old girl who draws butterflies but happens to live in a male body which bops around raping women.

So the judge, who's shown himself to be putty in the hands of organized psychiatry, ruled that Ragan was out to lunch and Mr. Milligan should be handed over to the shrinks. The judge didn't even knock on Milligan's skull and say, "Little girl, when is your big brother Ragan expected home?"

Mr. Milligan and his 10 buddies aren't, of course, being set free on the streets. He or they are to be sent to some as yet unspecified place for therapy. From the noises the shrinks involved in this case are making, all 11 of these patients will be theraped within an inch of their lives, or is it life?

Quoth Dr. George Harding, a specialist in bodies with more than one person living in them: "This is a very significant case. Milligan's condition is very rare and what we learn from treating Billy can perhaps help us a great deal in helping others suffering from this disorder."

BUT WHAT will this do to the rest of us, since we all have at least one nasty little other who threatens to take control of the vehicle from the relatively stable, relatively benign person who's usually at the wheel?

Until now it has been our own responsibility to control the impids (imp+id) who dwell within us. If your impid got out of hand and for some reason — alcohol, a broken heart or fury at the boss — you did 85 mph in a 30 mph zone, it was too bad. You had to wiggle out of it mostly by begging for mercy and sounding contrite.

Now all kinds of other excuses and exculpating statements are possible. Imagine, the cop has pulled you over and you see him getting out of his car to come forward to talk to you. "Do you know how fast you were going on that stretch of street back there?" he asks.

"I WASN'T driving, officer," you reply and he leans in a little closer to get a sniff of your breath. A double swivel of the policeman's eyes confirms the lack of any other occupants. "Then if you weren't driving, Mister," the cop looks at your driver's license, "if you weren't driving, Mr. Philander Hotchkiss, exactly who was?"

"Junior Foyt, he's the one who was firing through the streets of our city at such a reckless speed. I begged him to slow down, officer, but he never listens to me. That's why I won't give him permission to drive the car."

"And who might this Junior Foyt be?"

"Oh, he's just a fella that shares a body with me. He's a vulgar, id-like creature who came to live with me a few years ago."

Mr. Milligan and his 10 buddies may be more body mates than most need or desire. Few are gifted enough to handle such complexity or even decide which of the multiple Milligans gets to sit at the throttle or when. The best advice is to keep your internal boarders down to two or three. Then you can still have fun and break the law scot free.

Shah Opponent Turns Back Clock

WASHINGTON — Human rights devotees in the Carter administration, who made the shah of Iran one of their special enemies before President Carter ordered a halt, will be in for a shock if Ayatullah Khomaini, the exiled Moslem fundamentalist and the shah's powerful opponent, should ever gain power in Iran.

Khomaini wrote the following credo in a now-suppressed book called "Islamic Government" 10 years ago — words that should be more odious to human rights' devotees than anything the shah has said:

"We want a ruler who would cut off the hand of his own son if he steals, and would flog and stone his near relative if he fornicates."

The quotation is from page 124 of Khomaini's 1968 book, copies of which are hard to find today. That presumably is because the author's religious fundamentalism — it has also been called religious "fascism" — would hurt him in the West, even among the most passionate haters of the shah, if it were fully understood.

NOW EXILED in France, Khomaini is the most prominent of all the anti-shah Moslem fundamentalists and has been given high visibility in the Western world for weeks through the press and television. Little advertised, however, is the fact that whereas the shah has been "liberating" Iranian women for many years, it is Khomaini's conviction that the Koran must be the basic instrument of Islamic "law" and that "it is the religious expert (faqih) and no one else who should occupy himself with the affairs of government."

For Iranian women, once consigned to veils, that would be a brutal turning back of the clock. For the Carter administration's overall "human rights" crusade, a similar turning back of the clock would make a mockery of State Department worry over the shah's alleged lack of adherence to U.S. human rights principles.

MOREOVER, a strong strain of anti-Semitism runs through Khomaini's 1968 book. He charges that Israel has distorted the true teachings of Islam, "making a mockery of the Koran" by "distorting its text" for use in the Israeli-occupied West Bank, Gaza strip, Sinai and Golan Heights. He calls it his "duty" to "reveal this treachery and shout at the top of our voices until people understand that the Jews and their foreign masters are plotting against Islam and preparing the way for the Jews to rule over the entire planet."

New Rules for Pools

Solar Heat Bids Required Starting July 3

SACRAMENTO (AP) — The state Energy Commission says that beginning July 3, swimming pool buyers will have to get bids for solar as well as gas heat.

The idea is to compare the long-term costs.

But the commission rejected a proposal by the solar industry and environmental groups that natural gas heat be banned altogether from swimming pools.

AND IT VOTED TO REQUIRE thermal covers on pools built after July 3 that use fossil fuel.

The vote at the meeting was 3-0 in all cases.

The commission is adopting energy conservation standards for new swimming pools.

The rule on comparative bids would require that they show the cost of keeping the water at 78 degrees from May 1 through Oct. 31. They would detail the installation costs, operating costs over five years, and any tax credits.

THE SOLAR INDUSTRY PRAISED the regulations, but the pool and gas heat contractors deplored them.

"We want a system to give everybody the facts they need to make an intelligent decision," said Walter Hayes of the California Solar Energy Industry Association "Most people would agree that swimming pools are a luxury use of gas. . . ."

But A.J. Weisbrod of South Gate, president of Anthony Pools, said the regulations "can't function in the real world" because pool builders can't guarantee a steady temperature with solar heat.

"THIS IS NOT THE APPROACH we need. We need something livable. As gas keeps going up and solar gets more reasonable, it will work itself out," he said.

Solar industry spokesmen said a solar heater for an average pool costs about $2,700, while a gas heater is about $700-$900. But after that comes the cost of sunshine vs. gas.

The ban on gas heaters was suggested by groups that included Solar Use Now for Resources and Employment, the Campaign for Economic Democracy, the Sierra Club, and Gov. Edmund Brown Jr.'s SolarCal Council.

Home Costs Hit New High

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government figures confirm what home buyers already know: Houses cost more now than ever before — more to buy and more to finance.

The Federal Home Loan Bank Board reported Thursday the average interest rate in December on house loans was above 10 percent for the first time in history.

The average prices for both new and used houses also hit highs — $67,000 for new ones and $58,000 for those already lived in.

The average buyer paid a 10.02 percent interest rate on the loan for a new house in December, up from 9.87 percent in November, the agency said. The average interest on used homes went from 9.97 percent in November to 10.06 last month.

New house purchases prices jumped nearly $10,000 last year, from an average of $57,000 in December 1977.

Premiums Up For Medicare

WASHINGTON (AP) — The monthly premium for Medicare's supplementary medical insurance will climb 50 cents to $8.70 a month starting July 1, HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. has announced.

The premium increase for Medicare's Part B, which covers physicians' fees and some other medical bills, will hit 27.1 million Americans, including 24.3 million age 65 or older and 2.8 million disabled persons under 65.

MEDICARE RECIPIENTS ALSO BEGAN paying more of their hospital bills under Part A on Jan. 1. The deductible went up 11 percent to $160 from $144. These recipients must pay the first $160 of their hospital bills before the government picks up the tab.

The Department of Health, Education and Welfare increases the premiums automatically under a formula tied to the program's costs and increases in Social Security benefits.

"Although we had attempted to hold the increase to an absolute minimum, once again older Americans are going to have to shoulder the financial burden of highly inflationary medical care costs," Califano said Thursday.

HE SAID THE COST OF benefits under Medicare Part B is expected to rise to $9.6 billion in fiscal 1980 from $8.2 billion in fiscal 1979.

The actual cost for the services is $13.40 a month, but the law limits the premium increases that the elderly must pay, Califano said.

He said the major factors responsible for the increase are rising doctors' fees, more services rendered, more expensive services using new technology and more costly hospital outpatient treatment.

Dividends High On GI Insurance

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Veterans Administration says a record $485 million in dividends will be paid during 1979 to four million veterans holding GI life insurance.

VA Administrator Max Cleland said no application is necessary. Dividends are paid automatically to veterans of World War I, World War II or the Korean War who kept their GI insurance in force.

The bulk of the dividend payments will be made to 3.38 million World War II veterans, who will receive $433.3 million.

Unfinished List of Accomplishments

Mulligan's Stew

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

RIDGEFIELD, CONN. — Upon my soul, the new year is upon us already.

I must be up and doing or the decade will have fled without my having accomplished several long planned but oft delayed improvements.

BEFORE 1979 SLIPS into the great beyond of unrecallable yesteryears and the 1980s are ushered in, remind me to:

— Swear off junk food forever.

— Learn how to ski, although at this late date I shall probably have to settle for cross-country skis or perhaps even snow shoes.

— Get on with Henry James' "The Golden Bowl." I have been bogged down on page 14 for 14 years.

— Take up tap dancing. It is too late to master the piano or the harpsichord but I must find something to amuse others with when called upon for a turn at a party.

— INCREASE MY REGIME of daily situps to 25. It has been bogged down at three for a decade.

— Reread George Orwell's "Nineteen Eighty-Four" so I will be prepared for what Big Brother has in store for us a few years hence.

— Swim the Hellespont, if I can recall where it is and why Byron wanted to swim it. Or was it the Grand Canal that he favored for his morning refresher?

— LEARN HOW TO change a typewriter ribbon. Office boys have become too touchy to bother since their job title has been changed to administrative assistants. With the arrival of the computer, they too lack the basic skill to cope with the fundamentals of this archaic writing device.

— Take a course in celestial navigation so when friends invite me to tour the isles of Greece or the lesser Antilles on their yachts I can do more than just pop the champagne corks and swab the decks.

— Cultivate some friends with yachts plying the Greek isles or the lesser Antilles so my efforts in celestial navigation will not be in vain.

— SIT THROUGH Wagner's Ring cycle and an uncut version of Shaw's "Man and Superman." Failing that, read the complete speeches of Fidel Castro.

— Shave off my mustache so I can retrieve my look of the '60s and carry it into the '80s.

— Get a new suit, although there is every indication that the double-breasted-belt-in-the back is making a comeback in some pretty trendy circles. The fashion pendulum always swings back if you can hang in there longer than the moths.

— Dust off my novel, vaguely autobiographical, which has been bogged down at page 14 for 14 years and so far carries me to age 14 of a sluggish childhood much muddled with procrastination.

— Widen the driveway.

— TAKE OFF 15 POUNDS so it will be necessary to get a new suit.

— Invest in a few golf lessons to cure the deficiencies in my short game.

— Do something about my long game or find some golf balls that float.

— Practice 100 putts each morning on the living room rug.

— Go see "Star Wars" now that the box office pressure is off.

— GET ON WITH Proust's "Remembrance of Things Past." He is still waiting for his mother to put him to bed, after 44 pages. Surely something else will happen: 50 million Frenchmen can't be wrong or what's a best seller all about?

— Go back and re-translate Virgil's Aeneid as Father Weinlich, our old Latin teacher, predicted we would someday do when caught up in the woes of adulthood. I wonder if anyone else in the class has fulfilled his prediction.

— Master the small print in the racing form so I will know in advance why I lost.

— INVEST IN A BIRD study book. With so many lovely feathered friends visiting our area and running up our wild bird seed bill, it is inexcusable not to be able to tell a pixilated dingbat from Murvie's lesser sapsucker. Besides, the field glasses will come in handy when the bikini season resumes at the lake.

— Enroll in that night course in automobile mechanics down at the high school. Today's bill from the garage is ridiculous. Anyone with a smattering of basic mechanics could have performed the same services once he learned where the thingamabob to open the hood is located.

— Memorize the signals flashed by the football referees. After sitting through the Gator, Liberty, Orange, Sugar, Cotton and Rose bowls on TV, plus all those professional playoffs until the eyeballs bulge like two pigskins, it's time I knew in an instant why the clipping call or illegal backfield motion penalty always goes against the team of my choice.

— WANGLE AN INVITATION to lunch or dinner at the White House. What with the new Social Security gouge, the dollar's decline and ever climbing fuel oil prices, it is time I got something back off the government even if it's only a free meal.

— Is it too late to begin pumping iron? They say weight lifting is a proven body builder and excellent all around conditioner, but one must begin cautiously. My wife suggests pumping a couple of garbage cans in the direction of the roadway, which is the sort of sarcasm serious attempts at self improvement always elicit around here.

— Drive across America one more time. I did it in the '60s from New York to Seattle, and again in the '70s from Maine to California. This time, before the decade dies, I want to become acquainted again with the infinite variety of our peoples, the grandeur of this land, the secret heart of America that beats beyond the hearing of the pollsters, the headline writers and the paid political announcement.

— And, oh yes, remind me to stop writing 1978 on checks and letters.

LEWISTOWN, ILL. CEMETERY OF 'SPOON RIVER' FAME
Charlie Parkison, last of Spoon River Romantics

Spoon River Lives On

Masters' Small-town America Still Same

LEWISTOWN, Ill. (AP) — They've been living and dying for 60 years since the anthology, but take it from "Spoon River Charlie," things haven't changed much out here in the Heartland.

"If the truth were known, this town's changed not a damn bit," he says while drinking coffee at the drugstore. "It's the same here now as it was when Edgar Lee Masters wrote about it."

CHARLIE PARKINSON, THE last of the Spoon River romantics, looks out on Main Street where the characters from "Spoon River Anthology" used to drink and sing and fight and gossip and, eventually, lay down in death under the black loam up on The Hill. They still do.

"Life goes on here," says Parkinson, exuberant in his affirmation that, despite all the TV dinners and plastic Christmas trees and disco music, small-town America somehow survives.

"The world changes, but human nature doesn't," says Parkinson. "Masters' Spoon River is still here, still the same, still with us."

Charlie Parkinson is Lewsitown city clerk, a round elf of a man with black muttonchops, a keen sense of history and a pair of eyebrows that swing up and down like railroad gates.

Lewistown and nearby Petersburg were Edgar Lee Masters' boyhood homes, and they served as models for the anthology in which he wrote with bold precision and brutal honesty about what small-town America was really like — hypocrites, scoundrels, petty gossips and all.

IT WAS A REVELATION — a smash in New York, a bomb back home.

"The anthology shook up the town," says Parkinson. "Keep in mind that the people he wrote about as characters were yet walking these streets. The town drunk was still here, the town villain was still at the bank, the prostitute — all still here."

Masters used fictitious names for his characters. Parkinson's Uncle Bill is called something else, but there wasn't a soul in town back in 1915 who didn't recognize William Parkinson, preaching free silver and tax relief on the courthouse steps.

The same for the rest, the local banker who made millions from deceit, the newspaper editor who published lies in the name of community good, the Sunday school superintendent who admitted grudgingly from the grave that he was "a cog in the wheel of things as they were: of money, master and man, made white with the paint of Christian creed."

THE LEWISTOWN LIBRARY banned it. Parents hid it from their children. For about 30 years, it was impossible to mention the anthology without incurring the ire of the merchant and plutocrats on Main Street.

"At the time, he did the town an injustice by what he did, but he did justice to his writing," says Parkinson. "The same things were happening everywhere in small towns all across America. But this was the first time somebody had written in a hard and honest way about it."

Literary critics say "Spoon River Anthology" was a precursor to Thornton Wilder's "Our Town" and "Under Milk Wood" by Dylan Thomas. Parkinson figures a better parallel is "Peyton Place."

THREE GENERATIONS have grown up along Spoon River since publication of the anthology, and the scandal of it has been largely forgotten with time. In fact, they celebrate it in the fall with a festival.

Parkinson just smiles and nods his head. It's sort of like Masters wrote himself in one of the epitaphs in the book, "That those who first oppose a good work seize it and make it their own, when the cornerstone is laid and the memorial tablets are erected."

Plan Your Move

Don't Quit on Impulse

CAREERS

By JOYCE L. KENNEDY

Dear Joyce: I bid on two promotions in my agency recently and have been turned down on both. I'm deflated. I feel it's useless to try if my efforts are so unappreciated. I'd quit Monday morning if I weren't so house-payment poor. What's my best move?

— R.C., Washington, D. C.

A benchmark for the quitting question: when the core problem is your attitude, work hard to come up to speed before resorting to a job hunt; when it's an unreasonable boss, try to change departments; when it's the organization, outline a strategy — with goals and timetable — and launch your search at once. But never, absolutely never, quit on impulse.

Another rule to save you grief: don't quit until you have a new job in hand. That's because you lose marketability points when you're unemployed.

ANY EXCEPTIONS? YES, says job hunt authority Richard Lathrop, author of Who's Hiring Who.

If you are in an intolerable situation, it may be better to take a part-time job to open your days for interviews. You'll probably get the same weak reference whether you go now or stay longer, you would be employed and thus maintain the aura of being a desirable candidate, and it's important to project self-respect, something that's hard to do when you're in a no-win circumstance.

When departing, do not imply criticism of the employer, Lathrop advises. Simply say you want to work shorter hours.

NEVERTHELESS, IF there is any hope of smoothing things over with a hostile boss, it's in your interest to phase out gracefully, perhaps volunteering to cut back your hours and pay while you shop for a new job. Only you can anticipate how much you can afford to gamble on this honest tactic.

Whenever you're denied promotion, the first step is to go to the decision-maker for advice, not to gripe. Don't put the executive on the spot by demanding to know why you didn't get the job, but ask for guidance to improve your future career development.

The trick is to avoid personalizing your rejection as if it were an attack on your inherent worth. By smiling and asking the executive to become a kind of tutor or counselor, you may cultivate a mentor.

If your best efforts fail, the situation is probably beyond repair. As personnel expert Robert Half says, "An employer-employee relationship that isn't working is like a severely troubled marriage: it may be time for a divorce."

READER SERVICE: If you're worried you'll get fired before you can quit, read tips for the suddenly unemployed executive. Enclose a stamped, self-addressed, long white envelope with your request for "Marketing You" to Joyce Lain Kennedy at this newspaper. This is a reprint of a two-page article from Management World magazine.

At Menopause

Cancer Link Found In Estrogens Use

NEW YORK (AP) — Doctors must take a harder look at the danger of uterine cancer before prescribing estrogens for women in menopause, says a doctor whose study found a link between the two

The Johns Hopkins University study, largest of its kind, said women who took estrogens at menopause ran a five-fold greater risk of cancer of the uterus than non-users.

WOMEN WHO TOOK THE DRUG for more than five years ran a risk 16 times higher than non-users, it said.

Dr. Paul Stolley, who directed the study, said the risks remained low for short-term use of the drug, such as six months to a year. But he said women who must use the hormones should be acquainted with the dangers and supervised carefully during any lengthy treatment.

"What you would want to avoid is long-term use for trivial indications," said Stolley, now at the University of Pennsylvania.

THE JOHNS HOPKINS STUDY, which involved 1,339 women, is the sixth to draw a link between uterine cancer and estrogen, and disputes arguments by Yale University researchers in November who suggested that the link was the result of faulty statistical work.

Results of the latest study were published in the New England Journal of Medicine.

Arts Panel Has Vacancy

The vacancy occurred when commission member Mitch Teemley resigned. His term will end June 30, 1980.

The commission advises the City Council in artistic, aesthetic and cultural matters and recommends ordinances, rules and regulations relating to the arts.

Aide Seeks Office

MILLBRAE (AP) - Joe Holsinger, administrative assistant to slain U.S. Rep. Leo J. Ryan, has announced his candidacy for next spring's special election to complete Ryan's term. Holsinger, 57, said he has the support of the Ryan family and vowed to "continue the Ryan tradition of individuality – cowering to no special interest groups and bending to no congressional clique."

Breasts Too Large

Surgery Suggested

DOCTOR IN THE HOUSE

By DR. STEINCROHN

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I have a reverse of the usual problem — my breasts are too large rather than too small. I'd say my breasts are very large. So much so that I have deep scars on my shoulders where bra straps have cut into me.

I feel too embarrassed to get a swim suit. Finding clothes to fit me is a recurring nightmare.

As I'm only 33 I don't want to go through the rest of my life suffering unnecessarily. Our family doctor has advised me to consider seeing a plastic surgeon to operate on my breasts to make them smaller.

As I respect opinion, I'd appreciate a word or two from you. Do you advise that I have the operation? — Mrs. T.

DEAR MRS. T.: In most patients who have a problem similar to yours I advise that "reduction mammoplasty" be considered. But there are exceptions. Only your own doctors can determine whether or not you fit into that category.

I recall one patient who had large breasts operated on who developed emotional reactions that upset her for months. Even though she was satisfied with the physical aspects, she could not get herself to believe she had done the right thing by submitting to the operation.

THERE WAS ALMOST a guilt complex; of having been too vain; of having allowed unnecessary amputation of an important part of her body. She complained of feeling "naked."

Fortunately, after a few months of understanding treatment by her family doctor, she lost her guilt complex and was quite happy about her "new" breasts.

As I said, I advise the operation in most women who are "almost disabled" by pendulous breasts; but usually, the plastic surgeon makes a careful evaluation of the emotional status of his patient (whether the operation is on the breast or a "nose job") before consenting to perform an operation. Plastic surgeons often refuse to operate on patients they suspect aren't emotionally prepared for such surgery.

$11.5 Million

OCTD Asks Fund

Directors of the Orange County Transit District Thursday approved an application for a $11.5 million federal grant that would cover half the district's operating expenses for the year.

The five directors approved the application to the federal Urban Mass Transit Administration without comment.

However, Patricia Bailey, who described herself as a transportation consumer, questioned district staff members about programs for handicapped that some of the money would be used for.

THE ANAHEIM RESIDENT herself handicapped, asked if the district would be buying more dial-a-lift buses for the handicapped, if there would be provisions for bus schedules in Braille or if special information for the deaf would be provided.

"I want to call these things to your attention so you can plan. You will have better service if the handicapped can participate in it more fully," she said.

DISTRICT GENERAL MANAGER James Reichert assured Ms. Bailey and the directors that more dial-a-lift minibuses would be added to the district fleet.

He said he's received no requests for special schedules or information for the deaf, but would be willing to consider such projects.

The grant application will cover half the district's 1978-79 operating expenses. That balance is paid for by taxes raised locally by the district.

Directors Not Sure About Agency Merger

Directors of the Orange County Transit District don't want to see highways become more important than public transportation, so they aren't too enthusiastic about a merger planned in Washington D.C.

The federal Department of Transportation is planning to combine the Urban Mass Transit Administration, from which OCTD gets half its operating funds, with the Federal Highway Administration.

THE NEW AGENCY would be called the Surface Transportation Administration.

Thursday, OCTD directors decided to let Washington know how they feel about the merger.

While lauding the efforts to streamline the federal bureaucracy, district directors warned: "The merger may result in the organizational overshadowing of transit by the more numerous highway oriented people."

Board Approves Pocket Budget

Orange County Transit District officials want the public to know what the district is like, but Thursday they couldn't make up their minds on how to do it.

During a meeting of district directors, the allocation of $350 to print a 12-page annual report was discussed at length.

DIRECTORS AL HOLLINDEN, a Fountain Valley city councilman, and Philip Anthony, a county supervisor, both wanted the idea buried.

"I really don't think a show-off piece is necessary, declared Anthony. "If people want to know about the district, we can just pull a couple of key pages out of the budget."

NONE OF THE OTHER directors said they were asking for a "promo piece" but they indicated they felt some kind of information document was needed.

"And," noted director Robin Young, a La Harba City Councilwoman, "we all know that the budget is such a technical document that we even need help reading it sometines."

IN THE END, the five directors agreed to try a pocket budget, modeled after the one developed by county officials.

Supervisor Ralph Clark, chairman of the OCTD board of directors, noted that it would provide the required data without resorting to the photographs of directors and staff members that his fellow directors found objectionable.

Ice Water Unclear

DEAR PAT: I recently discovered a substance that looked like powder floating in my glass of ice water. After checking several glasses of water from the faucet and others filled only with ice cubes, I found that when the ice cubes melted the powdery substance was even heavier than in the faucet water. I became concerned and contacted the Huntington Beach Water District. I was told the water was safe to drink but that there's a chemical reaction that seems to take place when ice made by an ice maker melts. I'd like to know more than this because there seems to be so many things the general public is not aware of that may endanger our health.

R.K., Huntington Beach

Edward Elvatorski, Huntington Beach Water District superintendant, explains that calcium and magnesium in the water tends to "precipitate out" (when a slightly soluble substance becomes insoluble and separates out from a solution) of melting ice cubes. Also, some minerals may precipitate on the inside of the pipe that feeds water to your refrigerator's ice maker. Elvatorski will arrange to have your ice cube water and tap water tested to find out exactly what minerals may be present if you phone him at 536-5527.

Who Examines Credit?

DEAR PAT: I'd like to find out if a government agency can obtain a credit report on me. I'd try to find this out on my own, but I don't know who to ask.

N.E., Santa Ana

If the government agency (federal, state, county, city) proposes to extend credit to you, collect or review an account with you, employ or insure you, it may obtain a credit report. It also may obtain a credit report if it is considering you for a license or other benefit, such as a military security clearance, and is required by law to check your financial responsibility. A government agency also can get a credit report on you if you authorize it with written instructions or if a court orders it.

In all other instances, the credit bureau may provide only identifying information to a government agency. Such information is limited to your name, address, former addresses, place of employment or former places of employment. This prevents the Internal Revenue Service or the Federal Bureau of Investigation, for example, from going on a "fishing expedition" regarding your financial affairs.

Questions about your credit record or the Fair Credit Reporting Act can be directed to the Industry Relations Director, Associated Credit Bureaus Inc., 6767 Southwest Freeway, Houston, Texas 77036.

Old Oven a Bargain?

DEAR PAT: I have a chance to buy a used microwave oven at a bargain price. The only thing I worry about is the safety of older microwaves. Can you tell me when these ovens were first tested for radiation emission?

C.P., Costa Mesa

The Food and Drug Administration says there have been no cases of radiation injury related to microwave ovens that were used according to manufacturer's instructions. FDA safety specifications standards were not in effect for ovens made before Oct. 6, 1971. FDA advises owners of older microwave ovens to switch the oven off before opening the door; stay at least an arm's length away from the front of the oven while it is on, and have it tested for radiation emission.

Do Not Thaw Fish

DEAR PAT: Can you tell me if frozen fish should be thawed before cooking? I've always thawed it, but my neighbor tells me this decreases the quality of the fish once it's cooked.

R.G., Huntington Beach

It's best from a quality standpoint not to thaw frozen fish, or to thaw it just partially, before cooking. Portions and sticks should not be thawed. Fully thawed fish becomes soft and soggy. Fish should be thawed in the refrigerator, not at room temperature or in warm water. Cook fish promptly after thawing and do not refreeze unless it is cooked first.

SUPERMAN

The Man of Steel

By DENNIS McLELLAN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

June, 1938 does not mean much to most people. But for comic book historians it is the 4th of July. That's the month Superman made his heroic debut in Action Comics.

That first issue, picturing the "Man of Steel" lifting up a green sedan on the cover, sold for one dime.

Today that same comic book—in mint condition—might bring its lucky owner $7,000.

All those Depression-era kids who tossed out their copies of that premiere issue are, no doubt, kicking themselves. But who could have predicted that a throw-away art form like comic books would one day be collectors items?

All those former comic book fans have an opportunity to see the one that got away in an exhibit at the American Comic Book Company, 106 N. Harbor Blvd., Fullerton.

TOMORROW IS THE final day of a week-long display of rare Superman comics, toys and movie memorabilia spanning the 40-year career of the "Man of Steel."

As a bonus, actors Jeff East, who plays young Superman in the current movie, and Marc McClure, who plays cub reporter Jimmy Olsen, will be signing autographs at the store between noon and 2 p.m.

"What I've tried to do is chronicle the history of Superman," says the 27-year-old shop owner Carl Macek. "What this basically is is the roots of Superman."

The main attraction of the exhibit, which includes some 300 vintage Superman comics, is the Superman costume worn by George Reeves in the popular '50s television series

The slightly moth-eaten blue shirt and red cape are on loan from the Cal State Fullerton library where Macek once was curator of pop culture.

Macek says the idea for the exhibit was to show the conceptual changes of the super hero. "Basically," he says, "the character has gone through cultural and physical changes."

IN LOOKING AT the encased collection of old comic books it is apparent that Superman was — and is — a mirror of the times.

The October, 1946 issue, for example, shows our man flying over a mushroom cloud with a movie camera. "In this Issue!" announces the cover, "Superman Covers Atom Bomb Test."

Macek views comic books as not only an art form but a popular entertainment—"it's a medium like television, radio and the movies."

He allows that it does have its high and low points, however. And Superman, for all practical purposes, is one of the high spots, he feels.

A character that has been around for 40 years and appeared in some 500 separate issues, Macek says, "obviously has some staying power. He must mean something to somebody.

"I think he's represented a champion of the oppressed. I think he stands for justice and truth—all that's good in mankind. He's like the total ideal. He's a Super Man."

MACEK DOESN'T THINK Superman will cause a resurgence of heroes in America. "But I think Superman does re-establish—on a completely indisputable level—the power of a true hero. So did 'Star Wars.' But the 'Star Wars' heroes were not larger than life."

Macek sold many of the items in the Superman exhibit when the display was at his Studio City store. He says he is trying to buy a Kryptonite ray gun and Superman mask and flippers.

Macek frowns on the present flood of Superman merchandise publicizing the new movie version of the super hero. He feels Superman is being forced upon the American public.

"It's like the 'Man of Steel' has turned into the 'Man of Gold,' " he says surveying his display of vintage items. "For me, I like to get back to basics when it was done more for fun than profit."

Arbitrator

Mei Bickner

By CHERYL ROMO
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

In recent times it has become almost standard practice when entering a private physician's office to be asked to sign an arbitration agreement prior to treatment in hopes of avoiding a costly malpractice suit if something goes wrong.

Or, if you are a member of a union, you will probably notice your contract states disputes will be settled by an impartial arbitrator.

What is an arbitrator and why are they increasingly in demand?

To begin with, an arbitrator — a skilled professional with expertise in a particular area — acts as an informal judge, a neutral third party, who is requested by two other parties to render a decision about a dispute they are having.

THE PROCESS IS less costly and time consuming ($150 to $500 per day for the services of an arbitrator with hearings lasting from one to four days) than formal court proceedings. Quite often an attorney's presence is not required.

Decisions are presented in written form within 30 days of the close of formal or informal proceedings and are binding — with the exception of unions within the public sector such as police and fire fighters. (Huntington Beach Union High School teachers are currently on strike demanding binding arbitraton in employee grievances.)

The process of arbitration is relatively new — since World War II — and is still viewed with skepticism by some members of the legal profession, even though the United States Supreme Court has rendered decisions based on arbitration.

ARBITRATORS ARE usually male, over 50, have years of specialized experience and have a law degree. But Newport Beach resident Mei (pronounced May) Bickner, 37, a management professor at Cal State University Fullerton with a Ph.D. in business administration and no legal background, has recently become an arbitrator specializing in labor relations and collective bargaining.

In addition to handling her first cases after a two-year informal apprenticeship program with a Los Angeles arbitrator, she was recently selected to take part in a national pilot arbitrator program sponsored by the American Bar Association.

Dr. Bickner was one of 15 persons selected nationally (and one of four in the program who was not an attorney) to attend conferences at Columbia University Law School.

She's a native of Indonesia who now lives in a home overlooking the Back Bay with her husband, John, a former UCLA professor now devoting full time to writing. She says she became interested in arbitration while attending graduate school at UCLA where a number of her professors were involved in the field.

ALTHOUGH THERE are no licensing requirements or tests to take to become an arbitrator, Dr. Bickner explained it is one of the most difficult occupations to enter. First, membership is required in either the American Arbitration Association or the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Council.

Becoming a member, she said, is a "Catch 22." You cannot join without professional experience and you cannot get experience without joining.

To work around the dilemma, she apprenticed for two years and helped draft awards and attended hearings in her spare time.

Halfway through her training she heard about the Bar Association program and was interested but was certain it would be weighed heavily in favor of practicing attorneys. "One did not apply," she says. "They asked you and you had to be recommended."

Mei Bickner, to her surprise, was asked.

SHE HAS ALREADY completed one portion of the Columbia program and will finish the other early this year. Dr. Bickner plans to retain her position at Cal State while building her reputation as an arbitrator.

Maintaining the respect of parties an arbitrator deals with is essential: "An arbitrator has to be as pristine as Caesar's wife," she says. "Or, shall we say, partiality is very bad? And the labor management com-

Spirits Make Flesh Weak

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I need to know once and for all. Does alcohol improve a male's sexual performance or not? My husband insists that it does. BEFORE he takes those few extra drinks. Then when he can't hack it he refuses to admit he was wrong. We get into an argument and he blames me — says I "turned him off."

Will you please get me some recent data on this subject? Nothing I say will convince him. Thanks so much. — LANCASTER, PA.

DEAR LAN: Although there is plenty of modern scientific data on this subject, Shakespeare said it best in "Macbeth."

Discussing the contradictory effect of alcohol on sexual performance, the porter tells Macduff in Act Two, Scene Three:

"It provokes and unprovokes. It provokes the desire but it takes away the performance. Therefore much drink is said to be an equivocator with lechery. It makes him and it mars him. It sets him on and it takes him off. It persuades him and it disheartens him. . ."

In simpler terms: Alcohol heightens the desire in males. It reduces the inhibitions. BUT it also has a physical effect on his body that makes it extremely difficult to perform. In other words, the spirit is willing but the flesh is oh, so weak.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN: If you can solve this one, you're a genius.

I am 22 years old (female), still living at home with my dad and brother, who is 25. We all have different working hours. Dad gets up first and sets the alarm clock for me. I in turn set it for my brother.

The problem is, my brother could sleep through the San Francisco earthquake and the Chicago fire combined. He does not hear the alarm go off. Both Dad and I phone him from work because we know what a heavy sleeper he is. The telephone is right by his head. He doesn't hear that either.

Almost every night there's an argument at the dinner table because Brother insists I did not set the alarm and we forgot to phone him. So — he was late again.

When he loses his job, of course, it will be our fault. Do you have a solution to this? — DUMPED ON

DEAR DUMPED ON: Is your brother a pothead — or is he perhaps on another drug? Beer or alcohol before bedtime can also konk out a person. Also, what time does he turn in?

Buy Rip Van Winkle an alarm clock with the noisiest clang available. Set the phone on its heaviest ring. If this doesn't do it, he's no normal sleeper — and I suggest he'd better stop doing whatever he's doing that knocks him unconscious at night.

DEAR ANN: I'm the mother of three good-looking sons, ages 14, 15 and 17. I'm tired of having our dinners interrupted by girls. Last night I announced there will be no telephone cords dragging in the plates while the food gets cold.

Do you think girls who phone boys are chasing them? When I was growing up, boys called girls. Right or wrong? — CREAKY LADY

DEAR LADY: Girls who call boys lose a lot. While it might flatter a male's ego, an aggressive female can spoil a good thing.

On the home front: Make it a rule — no calls during dinner. The boys can phone the chicks back if they want to.

To build her reputation as a fair and impartial arbitrator, Dr. Bickner says she would never accept favors or gifts; and if she happened to hold stock in a company party to arbitration she would disclose the fact and then disqualify herself from the proceedings or divest the stock.

Because she plans to retain her professorship, she admits some concern about an upcoming election being held by teachers at Cal State to decide whether they want to join a union shop. As a labor arbitrator, being a member of a union could be viewed as a conflict of interest.

"That is a choice I will have to make," she says. ". . . I may not have to join."

Does the arbitrator, who says she dresses conservatively for hearings, ever run into problems because she is an attractive young woman in a field dominated by males?

"Oh yes. I ignore (the prejudice) and conduct the hearings and after five or 10 minutes hopefully their (participants) fears are allayed."

How? "You just do it — and you sympathize with them a little." Then she admits she is occasionally confronted with someone who is "really prejudiced against women."

Mei Bickner hopes time will change that.

Will '79 Dow Top 1,000?

'Bulls' Say It Will, Pushed By 'Trailwind,' Later in Year

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

This isn't a forecast, a recommendation or an endorsement. It is merely to say that some analysts expect the Dow Jones industrial average to top 1,000 points one of these days.

You've heard it before, but the market hasn't. Repeatedly it has balked at "that barrier." And when it broke through, in 1973 and 1976, it quickly fell back again, seemingly exhausted by the effort.

RECENTLY IT'S been slightly above or below 800 points, wary of high interest rates, inflation and the possibility of a recession, and buffeted by various forecasts of a fall into the mid-700s.

All this barely disturbs some analysts who focus on the future, who rely on fundamentals, and who maintain that the market eventually will overcome the negatives strewn in its way.

"A new cyclical expansion of stock prices is likely to begin sometime in 1979," says Argus Research. Prices might fall some before the rise, it concedes, but then comes a market "that shouldn't be missed."

LIKE MOST BULL markets, "it will probably get under way at a time of relatively poor economic conditions and widespread fear and confusion." But when it takes off, it will have a "tailwind."

The tailwind, says Argus, will be the containment of inflation and an acceleration in dividend growth. "As a result, equity prices could be swept to record high levels in the 1980s."

Arnold Bernhard, founder of the Value Line Investment Survey, has long been on record with a forecast well beyond 1,000 points by 1982. John Wright of Wright Investors Service shares the view. Babson's Reports expects the 1979 market to get a shade above 1,000 points.

THOSE WHO foresee such growth tend to believe that stocks at today's prices are greatly undervalued. Generally they turn to sheafs of statistical evidence, some so sophisticated as to bore the layman.

There is one key statistic, however, that is easily understood. The price-earnings ratio of the Dow Jones stocks was down to 7.9 at the close of business last week, one of its lowest levels in many years.

BUSINESS ANALYSIS

In 1967, when the market was soaring to the heavens, the ratio — or the multiple of earnings that investors are willing to pay for a share — was 16.8. And at times it ranged up to 18 times or so.

THE SHARP DECLINE didn't begin until 1973, when the ratio fell to 9.9. By 1974, deep into the recession, it fell to 6.2. Up to 11.3 in 1975, it began eroding again until it reached the recent low.

Many of bulls caution that it might fall even lower sometime in 1979 before beginning its ascent. But ascend it will, they say, noting that if the current ratio doubled it would merely be back to "normal."

Should it occur, that would of course mean a doubling of prices too. But why should it double? Aren't times bad? In fact, isn't the United States in one of the toughest economic dilemmas it has ever faced?

THE BULLS don't disagree, but they say the pendulum is swinging their way. People have had their fill of government overspending and deficits, and inflation finally is being challenged, they say.

They maintain that business has corrected some major failings. It is better financed in the past few years, they claim, and they believe that the initial environmental costs, which cut into profits, have now been taken care of. Some see business as lean and hungry.

And so, they hope, is the stock-buying public, which the New York Stock Exchange says shrunk by more than 5 million during the 70s. Should they be attracted back, they could give a thrust to prices.

Such forecasts are built upon assumptions, and the bulls are perhaps a bit more concerned about them than they would like to let on. But one must take a view, and so they look upward and beyond the obstacles.

Quits PUC

Robert Batinovich, chairman of the state Public Utilities Commission, has resigned the post effective Jan. 17 to return to private business. The office of Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. said he would later be offered a part-time state job.

Energy Tax Credits Show on '78 Return

WASHINGTON (AP) — When you file your income tax return, remember you can claim credits for residential energy expenditures made since April 20, 1977.

Whether the expenditures were made in 1977 or 1978, the claims must be on your 1978 tax return. You cannot claim the credits by filing amended 1977 returns.

Under the law, available credits go up to $300 for certain conservation expenditures and up to $2,200 for installing renewable energy sources. Qualifying expenses include weatherstripping, insulation, storm doors and windows, caulking and certain heating system modifications.

Housing Supply Drops

Increasing Shortage Blamed on Proposition 13

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Housing vacancies are at near-record lows and construction is being slowed in some areas by an unlooked-for effect of Proposition 13, Brown administration officials say

By reducing property taxes 57 percent, last June's ballot initiative discouraged some local governments from allowing new housing developments because tax revenue does not match the cost of services, an administration spokeswoman told a Senate committee.

"PROPOSITION 13 will further reduce the supply of land available for development and increase the price," said Deni Greene, deputy director of Gov. Edmund Brown Jr.'s Office of Planning and Research.

Business representatives at the hearing called for weaker environmental regulations. A member of Brown's Housing Task Force proposed more state housing aid and restrictions on tenant evictions.

All sides agreed that the state's housing shortage is severe.

"IT MEANS YOU have to stay when the rent is increased," said Norvene Foster, deputy director of the state Housing and Community Development Department.

Department officials said housing vacancies in most of the state's urban areas appear to be well below the 5 percent figure defined as a "shortage" level by the federal government.

Estimates for homes and apartments combined last year yielded a 2.7 percent vacancy rate in Los Angeles County, 3.2 percent in Orange County and 4 percent in the San Francisco-Oakland area.

MARCIA MILLS OF the League of Women Voters, a member of Brown's California Housing Task Force, said its recommendations will include a state "commitment of funding for 80,000 housing units a year."

But she didn't say where the money should come from.

Sen. John Foran, D-San Francisco, chairman of the Senate Select Committee on Housing and Urban Affairs, predicted no significant state money for housing would be available this year.

MS. MILLS SAID another task force recommendation would be some restrictions, which she didn't define, on eviction of renters in a housing shortage.

She said the group, which includes some builders, supported the proposal by consensus, with some dissent.

On another topic, Ms. Greene, whose office is one of the most influential in the administration, said some restrictions should be placed on post-Proposition 13 local building fees.

AMID REPORTS OF hefty fee increases to make up for local property tax losses, Ms. Greene said building fees should be limited to the costs of such development-related services as sewers, roads and permit processing.

"For too long, state agencies have emphasized environmental concerns to the detriment of the construction industry and the homeowners, tenants and other publics which it serves," said Santa Ana developer Karl Bergheer, spokesman for the industry's construction awareness program.

IF THE TREND continues, he said, "a large percentage of our residents could someday be enjoying their smog-free air and park-like surroundings from tents and treehouses."

Bergheer urged the Brown administration, which soon will review regional clean-air plans, to give housing needs as much weight as air quality.

Cliff Hood, president of an Orange County-based industry-labor group, called on the state to strip local agencies of "much of their authority to delay and impose costly conditions on development."

He said government regulations have brought about a situation in which 80 percent of the population cannot afford "decent housing."

Bavasi Optimistic About Halos' Chances

By DAVE CUNNINGHAM
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

If logic means anything, the greatest hitter in baseball will be wearing an Angel uniform this spring.

Minnesota Twins first baseman Rod Carew, a seven-time American League batting champ, appears just a signature away from assuring the California Angels of another pennant-contending season.

ALL THE INGREDIENTS are there—he's unhpappy with his present management, he wants the Angels, the Angels want him and, most importantly, the Angels can afford him.

Carew reportedly wants to be paid more than Pete Rose, now baseball's highest-paid player with a $3.2 million contract at Philadelphia.

Although several other clubs have expressed interest, and the Boston Red Sox reportedly made a firm offer Thursday, the Angels appear to have the inside track because Carew, an 11-year veteran, has the right to veto any deal he doesn't like.

CAREW HAS ALREADY rejected one trade to his second choice—the San Francisco Giants—and all that remains is for the Twins to accept one of the trade offers that the Angels have already made.

"We've given Cal Griffith (Twins owner) a list of several players we'd be willing to trade for Carew," says Angel General Manager Buzzie Bavasi, "and there's no question we can reach a salary agreement with him. It's just a matter of whether or not we can satisfy Griffith."

That's where the logic comes in. Carew has already announced he won't sign another contract with the Twins, and if he isn't traded this season, he'll be a free agent in 1980. The Twins couldn't get any compensation for him.

TO BECOME ANGEL?
Carew Wants Trade

IT SIMPLY MAKES good business sense to make a deal now, while the Twins can still get a few quality players in exchange.

It's the same reasoning that Bavasi says he used prior to the 1978 season when he dealt away popular outfielder Bobby Bonds. Bavasi felt that Bonds was planning to become a free agent.

The subject of Carew's future is so hot that during an Anaheim Stadium press conference for a totally different matter Thursday, the first question (and most of the following ones) pertained directly to the possible signing.

THE INTENT of the conference was to introduce the Angels' recently-acquired personnel—outfielder Dan Ford, pitcher Jim Barr and coaches Bobby Knoop and Larry Sherry.

But the first query directed to Ford, a former Twin, was what he thought about a possible Carew deal.

"I think for the Angels, needing a first baseman like we do, signing him would be the best thing," Ford answered "Rod says he'd like to come here. I know it's his No. 1 choice."

FORD SAYS CAREW wants to leave Minnesota for the same reason he himself decided to become a free agent—problems with the front office.

"It got to be where playing in Minnesota was a hassle. The management got down on the players a lot," Ford said.

"The club hasn't won in a while and someone had to take the blame," Ford says. "Management decided to put it on the players."

THE ACQUISITION of Ford gives the Angels a boost in replacing Lyman Bostock, the outfielder who was shot and killed last September. But Bavasi says the Angels have much more revamping ahead.

"We still need a lefthanded hitter and Carew would certainly fill the bill," Bavasi says. "Now that the holidays are out of the way we can start working at these things again."

And if California can actually get Carew's name on a contract? Would its shopping be over for 1979?

"Absolutely not," Bavasi says. "That would give us at least one other man we could deal, and then we could go after some big improvements in other areas."

Anteaters Win Laugher

107-57 Rout Occurs at Right Time for UCI

By ERNIE CASTILLO
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

It had been quite some time since UC Irvine was on the smiling end of what is euphemistically known as a laugher. And it will be a long while before another one rolls along. But Thursday night, as they picked on somebody smaller than they were, the Anteaters didn't forget what it felt like as they made the most of an opportunity to play basketball bullies.

Mac Murray College, a Division III team that is more on a sight-seeing tour than a road trip, drew the honors of serving as a punching bag for UCI frustration. With everybody playing and six players scoring in double figures, the Anteaters rolled up a 107-57 victory to snap a three-game losing streak and lift their spirits for the upcoming Pacific Coast Athletic Assn. season.

THE STYLE of play looked as out of place as the final margin. UCI Coach Tim Tift, who would prefer his players run a patient passing game, allowed them to flash their freewheeling run-and-gun skills as soon as it became obvious the game was going to be a runaway.

Vic Conyers put on a slam dunk exhibition, Lester Jones and Louis Bremond got in some one-on-one fun, Steve McGuire and Quentin Brown worked on their shooting, Robbie Beal and Steve Rodgers tested injuries and the reserves got in a lot of playing time.

Generally, a fun time was had by all, especially Tift who saw nothing but good come out of an exhibition in which his team shot 58 percent from the field and committed just 11 turnovers. Even if it was only before a sparse Crawford Hall crowd of 525, Tift said it was good to be home again after spending the entire month of December on the road.

"THIS SHOWED US a lot of things," said Tift who seized the opportunity to work his troops in a zone defense for the first time in a month. "We're trying to run off of free throws and this was a good game for us to play and play everybody.

"It was too easy but we did show some patience," he added. "It didn't look like we were running the offense but we tried to stay with it. After a while, I told them if they had a chance for an easy basket or a dunk to take it.

"Everybody's confidence is up. We were disappointed with our play at Santa Barbara last week because we had the opportunity to win both tourney games. The first game we couldn't shoot and the second we had no defense. Up to that point, I thought we had continued to improve."

SINCE THE COMPETITION gets markedly tougher next week, the Anteaters will have to keep on improving. After a final tune-up against Portland State Saturday, UCI opens PCAA play Thursday at Cal State Long Beach, the team many feel should run away with the conference crown.

But the only runaway the Anteaters are concerned with right now is Thursday night's. UCI reached the century mark for the first time as a Division I team and also equalled a school record for margin of victory. Conyers, who had just 16 field goals in the first eight games, had three by slam dunks against Mac Murray. Even Jones, the smallest man on the UCI roster at 6-0, got in a slam to go along with a season-high 18 points. Everybody but Rodgers, who was testing a strained knee, scored.

Bear Looks Back

Bryant Was Close To Giving It Up

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — Bear Bryant almost missed out on Alabama's fourth national college football championship, he disclosed today.

"I almost retired two years ago, but now I'm glad I didn't," the 65-year-old Alabama coach told The Associated Press by phone from "somewhere in Florida," where he is on a recruiting trip.

BRYANT SAID he was so close to retiring that he "even talked with the president about it.

"I thought maybe they should bring in somebody younger. I was getting old and I didn't think I was doing a good job. I still don't think so, but I'm surrounded by good people and it wasn't very hard to talk me out of it," Bryant disclosed just a few days after Alabama defeated previously unbeaten Penn State 14-7 in the Sugar Bowl and captured the national championship.

The Bear, who has been Alabama's head coach since 1958 and has taken the Crimson Tide to a record 20 consecutive bowl games, knows that some day he will have to step down. He doesn't want the cupboard to be bare and he's doing something about it, even though he can coach through the 1984 season if he wants to.

"WE HAVE A GOOD program going, and when I thought about retiring it looked like we'd have good material for the next two years," he explained. "I don't want to retire after we lose all our players and then have people say Alabama couldn't win because I wasn't here."

He won't have to worry about that for awhile because all retirement plans have been pushed aside and the Bear is on the track of Amos Alonzo Stagg's all-time record of 314 coaching victories. The Sugar Bowl triumph was Bryant's 284th and he needs just 31 more to become the all-time king.

"People started using my age against me in recruiting," he said. "I never even thought about Stagg's record until last year and I said as long as somebody has to have the record it might as well be me."

BRYANT RETURNED to Tuscaloosa from New Orleans on Tuesday. In the wee hours Wednesday he was informed that The AP's board of sports writers and broadcasters had voted Alabama the national championship. To celebrate, he went recruiting.

"I've done more recruiting this year than I have in the last 10 years put together," he said. "I've never been on airplanes as much as I have this year. We need some players who can play and the competition is awfully tough. You've got to be so much more selective and careful.

"If we don't come up with a good freshman outfit this year we'll start downhill. We lost 26 seniors last year, we lose 21 this year and we're thin everywhere."

Two Share Bowling Lead

Henry Gonzalez of Colorado Springs, Colo., and Carmen Salvino of Chicago shared first place after Thursday night's competition in a $100,000 Professional Bowlers Association Tournament at Wonderbowl in Anaheim.

Gonzalez, who has won just one previous PBA tournament, and Salvino, a Hall of Famer with 16 tour victories, had 5,984 pins after each fourth-round play, which covers a total of 26 games.

Sixteen match-play games are scheduled for today before the 24-man semifinal lineup is cut to five finalists for Saturday's nationally televised finals. Winner of the 1979 PBA opener will collect $15,000.

Guppy Troup of Columbia, S.C., was third entering Friday's play with 5,869 pins followed by Steve Martin of Kingsport, Tenn. at 5,856; Dan Roche of Downey at 5,848; Wayne Zahn of Tempe at 5,838; Pete Couture of Windsor Locks, Conn. at 5,821; Bill Spigner of Hamden, Conn. at 5,803; Ernie Schlegel at 5,770 and Nelson Burton of St. Louis at 5,756.

65-63 Win

It's a Struggle For Bruins Again

By The Associated Press

UCLA may yet win its 13th consecutive conference basketball championship, but it's becoming more obvious by the day that the Bruins aren't going to accomplish such a feat without a struggle.

The sixth-ranked Bruins captured the Pacific-8 Conference title in each of the last 12 seasons, and were 14-0 last winter. They now stand 2-1 in the first Pacific-10 campaign after a close call Thursday night.

BRAD HOLLAND'S 20-foot jump shot with 3:19 to play accounted for the game's final points as UCLA nipped visiting Oregon State 65-63 at Pauley Pavilion. The Bruins are 8-2 overall; the Beavers are 8-3.

"I felt we needed this win to gain momentum in the conference," said UCLA Coach Gary Cunningham, whose team was upset 75-72 at Stanford last week. "We must win our home games and some of our road games to win the conference."

In other Pac-10 action Thursday night, California upset host Arizona State 70-59 and Arizona whipped visiting Stanford 74-64.

One Pac-10 game is scheduled tonight — Southern Cal entertains Oregon.

David Greenwood's 19 points and nine rebounds paced UCLA to its hard-fought victory. The Bruins stormed out to a 20-10 lead after nine minutes but the Beavers fought back to tie the score at 29-all late in the first half and the game was close the rest of the way.

"WE MADE ONE or two too many mistakes tonight," said Oregon State Coach Ralph Miller. "We played very well at times but we had some lapses. We attempted eight free throws and UCLA tried 24. That says something."

Oregon State guard Ray Blume led all scorers with 23 points. Steve Johnson, the Beavers' sophomore center who brought a 17.5 scoring average into the game, was held to three points and four rebounds.

Jensen Scores Biggest Goal of Career

MONTREAL (AP) — Steve Jensen was a star on the United States' hockey team at the 1976 Winter Olympic Games, but the biggest goal of his National Hockey League career came three years later as the Los Angeles Kings edged the Montreal Canadiens 5-4 Thursday night.

"I've never felt more pressure going in on a breakaway," Jensen said of his game-winning goal at the 19-minute mark in the third period.

"I COULDN'T TELL you what I did. I just know I slowed down coming in on Bunny (Montreal goalie Michel Larocque), but I couldn't remember if I made any move.

"With my speed I've had a lot of breakaways in my time and, with guys like Marcel (Dionne) and Butch (Goring) teaching me, I had to learn."

The goal was the 11th in 30 games at Los Angeles for Jensen, who scored 13 in 74 games for the North Stars last season.

THE LEFT WINGER went to Los Angeles from the Minnesota North Stars with Rick Hampton and Dave Gardner prior to the current season, as compensation for Minnesota's signing of free agent defenseman Gary Sargent. The move has been a dream come true for Jensen.

"I had a tough grind mentally in Minnesota. We played 100 games and only won 25," Jensen said. "The change was really good for me. This team (the Kings) plays my style — a freewheeling type of hockey."

Dave Taylor scored two goals for the Kings. Brian Glennie and Murray Wilson also scored for Los Angeles.

THE KINGS BOUNCED back from an 8-3 loss to Washington Wednesday night and the Canadiens, who lost 6-2 to New York Rangers on Wednesday, equalled their longest losing streak of the season — two games.

A Capsule Report From the World of Sports

Most Bowl Favorites Win, But Spread Takes Beating

Favored teams won in nine of college football's 12 major bowl games but it was a different story against the point spread as far as bowl bettors were concerned.

Only USC in the Rose Bowl, Navy in the Holiday, Texas in the Sun and Purdue in the Peach won by more points than expected. Clemson covered the line in the Gator Bowl while Alabama, rated even with Penn State, won by 12 in the Sugar Bowl.

The only upsets were North Carolina State's 30-17 victory in the Tangerine Bowl over six-point favorite Pittsburgh and UCLA's 10-10 tie with seven-point favorite Arkansas in the Fiesta Bowl. Among those teams covering the spread, only Purdue and Texas did so handily. The Longhorns, picked by five to beat Maryland, won 42-0 to win our cinch of the year award.

The final bowl tally:

The Game	The Line	The Score
Holiday (Navy vs BYU)	Navy by 6	Navy, 23-16
Sun (Texas vs Maryland)	Texas by 5	Texas, 42-0

11 Area Standouts Earn All-CIF Football Honors

By ROGER CARLSON
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Eleven Orange Coast area athletes have been honored with All-CIF Division I football laurels as chosen by the Citizens Savings Athletic Foundation board, capped with four first team selections and a half dozen second team picks.

The selections include a quarterback, two running backs, a receiver, two defensive backs, two offensive guards and an offensive tackle, a nose guard and a linebacker.

PLAYER OF THE YEAR is Compton High linebacker Michael Richardson, who nipped Fountain Valley High quarterback Gil compton for the honor.

The Compton linebacker, a 190-pounder with 4.55 speed for 40 yards, led the Tarbabes to the Coastal Conference championship with a 12-1 overall record. He was credited with 11 quarterback sacks, 12 caused fumbles and seven fumble recoveries. He scored 30 points without ever playing a minute of offense.

First team picks from the Orange Coast area include Compton, the Fountain Valley quarterback who completed 135 of 257 passes for 52.5 percent and 1,940 yards; Mater Dei offensive guard Greg Brown, who paved the way for the Monarchs' wicked running game; and Edison High defensive back Steve Davis, considered one of the best major college prospects in years out of Orange County in that category; and Kevin Margerum, one of two outstanding receivers on the end of Compton's aerials.

GIL COMPTON

Compton, with an exceptionally fast and low passing style, went to Margerum for 58 of his completions for 849 yards.

JIM COPPOM, the other half of Compton's attention, was awarded a second team berth as a defensive back. Coppom and Margerum were almost dead even in statistics and both played sterling defense in the secondary. Coppom's completion statistics are 55 catches for 790 yards.

Also earning second team honors are Newport Harbor linebacker Dave Thompson, Edison running back Mike Dotterer and his blockers—guard Bob Dumity and tackle Wayne Nabal —and Fountain Valley noseguard Rick Lanphear.

Thompson, a 200-pounder, was the architect of Newport Harbor's staggering 10-7 victory over underrated and No. 1 seeded St. Paul in the first round of the playoffs.

CdM, Tars Mix It Up Tonight

Corona del Mar and Newport Harbor resume their sports rivalry tonight as Orange County's No. 1 ranked prep basketball team—the Corona del Mar Sea Kings—host Newport Harbor in an 8 o'clock game.

The rivalry dates back to 1965 with Corona del Mar boasting a 10-8 edge, but the only result significant to the present combatants is the last time these two met—a 55-54 Newport Harbor victory on a last-second shot.

Tonight's duel pits the Corona del Mar trio of Dave Koehler (16.8), Shawn Ahearn (14.6) and Chris Johnston (12.1) against the one-two punch of scorer Jon Sweek (19.1) and the scoring (16.6) and ball-hawking of Brian Freeman.

Corona del Mar enters with an 8-1 record as opposed to Newport Harbor's 8-3 mark. The Sailors are ranked No. 6 in Orange County and there is no common opponent.

Other 8 o'clock non-league games tonight include Costa Mesa (3-4) at Dana Hills (6-2); Estancia (8-3) at Kennedy; University (3-8) at Mission Viejo (10-3); Ocean View (8-2) at San Clemente (6-4); Laguna Beach at El Toro; Fountain Valley at Katella; and Huntington Beach at Cypress.

Networks Fumble Ball

Television Bowl Coverage Called Amateurish

By HOWARD SMITH
AP Sports Writer

ABC kicked off college football's biggest weekend of the season by fumbling the ball on the Woody Hayes' incident, then compounded the fracture by blowing the opening kickoff of the Sugar Bowl.

CBS, with only one bowl to deal with, provided absolutely amateurish coverage of the Cotton Bowl, topped off by completely missing the touchdown that Notre Dame scored as time ran out to cap its amazing comeback.

NBC DIDN'T BLOW anything of import and, in fact, did a good job capturing the only controversial play that came up, Charles White's fumble that officials wrongly ruled a Southern Cal touchdown. But NBC did manage, with questionable motives, to sabotage the Rose Bowl's halftime show.

It was not television's finest hour. Bleary-eyed viewers who sat through nine national games, including the pros, over a 4-day period deserved better.

TV SPORTS

The main cause celebre, of course, came Friday night in the Gator Bowl when Ohio State's charming coach Woody Hayes slugged a Clemson player in the game's waning moments. The incident, unprecedented on national TV, led to Hayes' dismissal after 28 years on the job.

ABC showed the incident clearly but never televised a replay. And commentators Keith Jackson and Ara Parseghian ignored the whole thing.

ALL OF WHICH BROUGHT forth an avalanche of irate phone calls to the network's switchboard in New York and cries of "coverup" throughout the land.

Producer Bob Goodrich, the man running the show in Jacksonville, offers the following explanation. He had three sources for videotape replay. With Ohio State driving toward a possible score with less than two minutes left, he decided to use the videotape on two wide receivers and use the third for an end zone shot. Thus he had no replay capability on the main field feed, the picture that everyone sees at home.

The cameraman with the end zone view punched off his tape as soon as the Clemson player was knocked out of bounds to get ready for a quick replay. Unfortunately, he punched off a couple of seconds before Hayes delivered his fateful blow.

GOODRICH DIDN'T SEE the punch because he was checking the replay. Others in the truck thought they saw it but weren't sure. Goodrich contacted ABC personnel on the sidelines and they said they didn't see it. It became apparent that something happened but Goodrich wasn't sure what and, in any event, he didn't have it on replay.

"I showed the only replay I had but it stopped short of showing the punch," said Goodrich. "I wouldn't say he (the cameraman) cut off the tape any shorter than usual. Normally when a player goes out of bounds you punch out of record. That's the way all the networks do it."

Upstairs in the broadcast booth, Jackson and Parseghian were not watching their monitor. They were watching the field and lost track of the Clemson player in a sea of bodies when he was knocked out of bounds. Goodrich told Jackson that some people in the truck thought they had seen Hayes punch the player. But Jackson hadn't seen it and was reluctant to comment on something he hadn't seen. So he didn't say a word.

AS TIME RAN OUT in the game, Goodrich knew he was in trouble but didn't know what to do about it. "I wanted to die, right then and there," he said. "I've been around long enough to know the consequences of what had just happened. But I also knew by a strange set of circumstances there was nothing I could do about it."

RCC Tabbed; Saddleback Picked 4th

By JOHN SEVANO
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

When the Mission Conference begins league play Saturday night, it will start a race featuring both thoroughbreds and plow-horses.

Perennial powers Riverside and Saddleback colleges figure to be in the race from wire-to-wire joined by newcomers San Diego CC, Citrus and Palomar.

Riverside is led by the solid backcourt tandem of Tommy Wight (6-3) and Ken Copeland (6-1) who return from last year's squad. Also in the picture is 6-7 freshman pivotman Eddie Roberson, a transfer from Brooklyn.

San Diego CC has plenty of talent led by 5-11 guard Carl Dale who averaged 15.3 points a game last year.

Saddleback's problem is inexperience and figuring how to win on the road where the Gauchos are 6-7.

Here is how the Daily Pilot handicaps the conference:

Pos. Team	Comment	Odds
1. Riverside (13-3)	Vastly Improved	8-5
2. San Diego CC (9-5)	Can Win If Ready	5-2
3. Citrus (13-6)	Surprise Package	3-1
4. Saddleback (10-7)	After 3rd Straight	6-1
5. Palomar (7-6)	Figures in Battle	8-1
6. San Bernardino (2-8)	Seldom Wins a Race	100-1
7. Chaffey (0-13)	Overmatched Again	200-1
8. Southwestern (0-12)	Nosedive in Class	500-1

JOY OF WORK IS ESSENTIAL THEME OF SOUTH COAST REPERTORY PLAY

Learning the Ropes

'The Contractor' Challenges Actors

By REBECCA HELM
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

"I hate tents," John H. Napierala growled.

Hands grasping a thick rope attached to a heavy sheet of canvas, the tall strapping actor was posing with three fellow performers just before rehearsal of the new play at South Coast Repertory's Fourth Step Theatre in Costa Mesa.

HIS DECLARATION was only half-facetious.

For the past several weeks, Napierala and four other actors in SCR's current production, "The Contractor," have been learning and doing the construction of a huge, white tent.

And, each performance night for the next four weeks, the actors will step by actual step raise and then bring down the 25-foot high by 40-foot wide canvas creation.

Napierala and co-performer Wayne Grace described the construction as the most challenging thing they've ever done on stage.

"IT ISN'T THE SAME as crossing down left and picking up a book," Grace said. He portrays foreman Kay, a leading character in the contemporary British play.

The manual labor and technicalities of constructing a large tent is an unfamiliar and complicated task in itself, but coordination of dialogue with activity poses the biggest difficulty.

"There are certain things that have to happen with certain lines," Napierala said.

If the tent's construction does foul up the actors will have to backtrack and fix it.

HOPEFULLY THE audience won't notice anything amiss if they hear Napierala, as workman Fitzpatrick, say, "Hold on Kay, we have a snag here," a line he adlibbed when some rope tangled during last week's rehearsal.

The ofttimes humorous play tells the story of a businessman, the contractor, who throws a lavish wedding party in the large tent for his daughter. As the temporary shelter is constructed on stage, dramatic conflict develops between the contractor, his family and the workers.

Although the manual labor required of the actors in putting up the tent might seem an unwarranted intrusion into a dramatic production, director Martin Benson aid the audience's view of the work and skill that goes into the construction is central to the play.

"THE ENJOYMENT OR lack of it in one's work is an essential theme," Benson said, adding that the tent's transient presence onstage is symbolic of the contractor's search for meaning in his life.

"At the raising of the tent, we are party to the contractor's moment of glory, to his success. But when the tent is pulled down (in the third act), we see that the event has paralleled the contractor's life — a brief gesture, made in flimsy rope and canvas, which quickly disappears."

THE PLAY PREMIERED in London in 1969, and Murcott first saw the production there. If all goes well onstage, he said, the audience doesn't really grasp the difficulty of the tent's construction.

Murcott and the rest of the cast are hoping the SCR audience won't grasp the difficulty either.

"The Contractor" will play Tuesdays through Sundays at 8 p.m. through Feb. 4, with matinees Saturdays and Sundays at 2:30. Tickets cost $6.50, $7.50, and $8.50, with special reduced rates for students, senior citizens, and groups of 20 or more. For ticket information, phone 957-4033.

Comic Opera

'Five Penny' Draws Interest

Johann Strauss' colorful comic opera, "Die Fledermaus," will open the fifth season of Orange Coast College's Five Penny Opera Company.

Performances are set for Fridays and Saturdays, January 12-13 and 19-20 at 8 p.m. in the OCC Auditorium.

THE PRODUCTION, under the direction of artistic director Carole Boelter, includes a combination of talented actors, singers and dancers. The main cast is supported by the Coast Master Chorus. The production is accompanied by the OCC Theatre Orchestra.

Sets and costumes for the show are by Bradley Elsberry. Three full stage sets will be used, including the elaborate and mammoth interior of Price Orlofsky's summer palace. Elsberry is costuming more than 120 cast members.

"The production has something for everyone," Ms. Boelter said. "It contains comedy, romance and the beautiful Viennese waltz music of Johann Strauss."

JILL GOODSELL, a graduate of the Chicago Conservatory of Music, will play Rosalinda in the production. Ms. Goodsell, who also received training at the Juilliard School of Music, has appeared in several Five Penny productions.

Melissa Tosh, who starred in the OCC production of "Hansel and Gretel" two years ago, will play the charming maid Adele.

Allen Johnson is the handsome Eisenstein, Mike McCormack portrays the cunning Dr. Falke, Niccollino Furticella is Alfred, and Steven Jay Warner plays Dr. Blind.

TICKETS ARE on sale in the Ticket Office, located in the campus Administration Building. Reserved seats sell for $3. The office is open Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 7 p.m., and Saturdays from 8 a.m. to noon.

Mail orders may be sent to Orange Coast College Ticket Office, 2701 Fairview Road, Costa Mesa, 92626. All orders must include a check or money order, and a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

'From nature and living come the elements of true reality — moods, emotions and experience. These are what I seek to express in my painting. To attain this, one must transcend limitations which the What, Where and When place upon one's work so that the imagination can grow freely to create a true expression of the spirit of reality,' says Kwok Wai Lau.

Creative Seeing

Kaleidoscopic ideas compressed, recombined

Describing Kwok Wai Lau's paintings in a black and white newspaper is like having the color go out of the TV in the middle of the Rose Parade.

THE FIRST RETROSPECTIVE exhibition of 30 years of work by the internationally known artist and instructor is being presented through Jan. 22 at the Muckenthaler Cultural Center, 1201 W. Malvern Ave., Fullerton.

"Although Lau is well known and respected in Orange County by his many painting students, this is the first opportunity to study his progress as a painter," said Donald Knaub, Fullerton's director of civic arts.

"In this respect, it is interesting to observe the influence of his native Hong Kong, of his studies and work in Chicago and finally, of the incredible California light and colors in his impressive body of work."

RON SALGADO, exhibitions curator, adds that Lau's work "reveals the expressiveness of a painter who constantly seeks to convey the reality of nature and meets this challenge with imaginative vision."

Fifty-four oil and acrylic paintings, watercolors and drawings may be seen at the gallery Tuesdays through Sundays from noon to 5 p.m. Admission is free.

The artist will present a free, two-hour slide lecture at 8 p.m. Friday, Jan. 12, illustrating how ideas are transformed, reinterpreted and recombined to create unique artistic expressions.

At 9:30 a.m. Thursday, Jan. 18, he will execute a large acrylic collage to explain how the inspiration can result in the compression of time and space on a two-dimensional painting. Admission will be $1.

LAU TAUGHT ART in China until 1952, came to the United States in 1953 and graduated from the Art Institute of Chicago in 1955. He worked for the Industrial Designers Institute in Chicago and travelled extensively before settling in Los Angeles in 1969.

His design, the Anita Chair (named after his wife), won a citation of merit in a national competition sponsored by the Upholstery Leather Group in 1956. It was produced and sold across the country.

His disciplines of industrial design are the opposite of vivid outbursts in such paintings as "Fantasy Landscape,"

Creativity

Workshops Starting

Youngsters who found the gift of imagination during the holidays can put it to work at seven creative art workshops, starting soon at Newport Harbor Art Museum.

Each topic will involve eight meetings at the museum, 850 San Clemente Drive, Newport Beach.

LAURIE LEVIT will teach Especially for the Littlest from 9:30 to 11 on Mondays, beginning Jan. 8. Art awareness games will show 4- and 5-year-olds the simple ideas of shape, color, movement and line.

Using the galleries as a resource, Ms. Levit will instruct 9- to 13-year-olds how an artist develops an idea in I Create My World from 3:30 to 5:30 p.m. Thursdays, starting Jan. 11. The group will then experiment with watercolor, collage, film animation, poetry and music.

Lillian Garrison will show the 5 to 8 age group that Art Is All Around from 9:30 to 11:30 Saturdays or Sundays, beginning Jan. 13 and 14.

SUCH PROJECTS AS dragon puppets, paper mobiles, and fabric sun banners — drawing from nature and imagination — will end with a cookie-cutting party.

Pre-teens will discover Art is An Adventure with Chad Jones from 1 to 4 p.m. on Saturdays or Sundays, commencing Jan. 13 or 14.

Participants will be working in the "flora and fauna" style of the French primitive painter Henri Rousseau to create a permanent, monumental painting in the Children's Workshop area.

JONES ALSO WILL be the mentor for teen-agers who want to mix their media Mondays after school for two hours, starting Jan. 8. Painting, drawing, collage and sculpture from clay or wood will be explored with incentives from the museum.

Class fees vary from $32.50 to $37 for museum members and $42.50 to $47.50 for non-members. For registration details, phone 759-1122.

J. P. Nightengale, headed by John and Pamela Wood, is a versatile, talented group that draws loyal fans throughout the Los Angeles area.

Junior Programs of Long Beach is a non-profit organization that exists for the sole purpose of bringing fine theater to area children at a nominal price. Tickets are only $1 per person. The shows are geared to elementary school age youth. Group tickets are also available.

Kabuki Theater Due in LA

The National Theater of Japan — the august Grand Kabuki — returns to Los Angeles after several seasons, to Shrine Auditorium for five performances from Feb. 21 to 24.

THE SAME program will be offered for each of the four evening performances and Saturday matinee.

"Shunkan" is a detailed story about a warrior who became a priest.

He also is one of three political prisoners remanded to a remote island.

"RENJISHI" (The Double Lion Dance) concerns a father and a son, who engage a Samurai ritual dance wherein the father prays that his son will become as strong as a lion, as he goes through life, a brave Samurai. It, too, contains a stunning close.

Mail orders now are being accepted by the Music Center Ticket Office, 135 N. Grand Avenue, Los Angeles 90012. The prices in the orchestra are $15, $12.50, $10 and $8. The balcony loge is $15, boxes are $10, and the balcony is priced at $15, $12.50, $10, $9 and $8.

'Dance California'

Denise Lewis, Heidi Perrine and Paula Proteau will be featured in the ballet, jazz, modern and disco dances to be performed at 8 p.m. Saturday in Corona del Mar High School's Little Theater. Choreography will be by members of the Dance California company and Desnie Scott and Dance Orange County will be guest artists.

Earful Reaches Record Numbers

Choosing Top 10 Can Be Painful

BOB MARLEY TOPS RECORDING CHARTS WITH PURE JAMAICAN MAGIC

By MICHAEL PASKEVICH
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

A January listing of the best (and worst) rock albums of the past year should always be taken with a grain of salt.

CATCHY SINGER
Todd Rundgren

FOREMOST ZINGER
Richard Pryor

First, consider what those fans with a title ("critic") go through in a logistical sense. About 2,600 records were released in 1978 and how can a final "Top Ten" be legitimate without hearing each album at least once?

Figuring on 40 minutes per album, this means the poor rock bozo must be underneath the headphones round the clock for 72 days!

This leaves barely enough time for a concert every night and painful ear and nose transplants every full moon. Try accounting.

There's also the problem of personal biases too numerous (and probably too embarrassing) to mention in public.

SO, WITH A NOD of thanks to Stevie Wonder, Fleetwood Mac and the Eagles for laying low last year so some other folks could make a buck, here's the 10 best of 1978 (in copout alphabetical order):

Elvis Costello, "This Year's Model."
No weak or loving moments as rock's enfant terrible punches his way through a perceptively bleak lyrical world few artists can articulate in a three-minute melody. A pithy masterpiece that jumps.

Al Green, "The Belle Album."
The world's greatest soul singer in tender religious rejoicing makes for awesome effects. Guaranteed to brighten anyone's day.

"David Johansen."
Former N.Y. Dolls' lead singer combines '60s rock with the cooler sensibilities of the '70s. He's an extremely intelligent composer who also tore apart The Cuckoo's Nest and Golden Bear with his live performances.

The Kinks, "Misfits."
Honesty, integrity and Ray Davies.

Nick Lowe, "Pure Pop For Now People."
Sprightly power pop crammed with lyrical wit and production wizardry makes this album as refreshing as a summer Sunday drive along the ocean. Sing along to "Bay City Rollers" and find perpetual innocence.

Bob Marley and the Wailers, "Babylon By Bus."
There's no more compelling stage persona than Marley, here captured live (double-set) in Paris with body-moving results. Pure Jamaican magic and proof that reggae is still a vital force. Celebrate.

Parliament, "Funkentelechy vs. The Placebo Syndrome."
A delightful cosmic funk cartoon, pitting the zero funkativity-forces of Sir Nose D'Voidofunk against Star Child and his "Bop Gun." Say What? "Dance, sucker..." George Clinton.

The Stones, "Some Girls."

Sports Show Starts 9-day Anaheim Run

Like a three-ring circus, there'll be something going on every minute at the 14th annual Sports, Vacation & Recreational Vehicle Show, which opens a 9-day-run Saturday at Anaheim Convention Center.

And there'll be something for the entire family at the show — an exciting, twice-daily, Las Vegas-style stage presentation; a daily fishing clinic, with angling and fish-cooking tips supplied by experts; a gold panning demonstration; the Ozark Woodcarvers exhibit, a display of native American 'whittlin'" and the traditional Travel Film Festival.

AS IN THE PAST, the show will be sectionalized. Occupying its own area will be an enormous display of recreational vehicles: sleek van conversions, mansion-like motorhomes, attractive mini-motorhomes, compact little trailers, luxury campers, and big, split-level Fifth Wheels, which come with their own powerful, specially-designed trucks to match.

Tackle Row will be bigger than ever, with just about every top quality rod, reel, lure, line and tackle box in the U.S. to be seen. An important feature will be a 100-foot casting pond, where anglers can try out various rods, and obtain free casting lessons from world champions.

Travel Row will contain a record number of exhibit booths manned by travel and tourist authorities; professional guides, fishermen and hunters. They will speak for dozens of states, cities, lake, river and mountain resorts, ranches, national parks and hunting and fishing areas.

ALL THIS, PLUS the latest ideas and models of RV accessories, and backpacking, camping, packing-in, hiking and mountain climbing equipment.

The show doors open on weekends at noon and on weekdays at 2 p.m. Sunday is "Kids Day," and children up to 16 will be admitted free when accompanied by adults. On Thursday, Jan. 11, each child, 6-12, will receive a free Bicycle Book Bag.

Admission is $2.95 for Adults; juniors (12-16), , $2.25; kids (6-11), $1.25, and Free for youngsters under 6. For information phone 635-8811.

OC Stage Openings Familiar or Firsts

It's a new year and there are new productions awaiting their entrance on Orange Coast stages, but half of them are old faces back for another look.

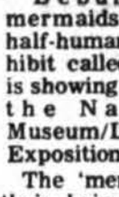
Which, taken positively, means that the other half are, if not exactly new, then at least unfamiliar to local audiences. And that's the way it breaks down with the dozen openings scheduled for the first five weeks of 1979.

THE NEW YEAR HAS already begun at the San Clemente Community Theater, which took the wraps off "The Roar of the Greasepaint, the Smell of the Crowd" Thursday night. It's the second production of "Greasepaint" this season, following the Westminster Community Theater's version last fall.

Next up, on Saturday night, will be South Coast Repertory's second event in its new Fourth Step Theater, "The Contractor." It's another in a collection of Orange County firsts for this estimable professional theater.

Next week the coast's two dinner theaters change their marquees with a pair of shows which each have a good many production miles on them — "Norman, Is That You?" at the Harlequin Dinner Playhouse Tuesday night and "Man of La Mancha," making its second visit to Sebastian's West Dinner Playhouse on Wednesday.

THREE OFFERINGS of a more unfamiliar nature arrive on the scene a week from tonight, one of which will be a world premiere. Charles



Intermission
Tom Titus

Meanwhile, the stage version of the movie "To Kill a Mockingbird" shares a Jan. 12 opening at the Westminster Community Theater with the opera "Die Fledermaus" at Orange Coast College. "Mockingbird" may well be the first staging of this Fifties drama in Orange County.

The Laguna Moulton Playhouse will be doing the same thing the Harlequin did a while back — putting its resident director in the leading role of "Play It Again, Sam." The Laguna production will open Jan. 16.

THE IRVINE COMMUNITY Theater breaks an 18-month period of inactivity when it regroups with Neil Simon's "The Odd Couple" on Jan. 19. The ICT players will be operating in Irvine for the first time in nearly five years, performing at the University High School theater.

Tennessee Williams' "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof" is the ambitious undertaking of the Costa Mesa Civic Playhouse, opening Jan. 26. Then comes another county premiere, Jules Feiffer's "Hold Me" at the Newport Harbor Community Theater also on Jan. 26.

Which pretty well covers the month of January in local theater. Golden West College has "Savages" scheduled for a Feb. 2 opening as the area's professional, community and collegiate theater groups ring in the new year.

Contempo

Christian Songfest

"Contempo '79," a festival of popular Christian musical sounds, will be presented at Disneyland Friday Jan. 12 from 8 p.m. to 1 a.m. Top groups and vocalists will perform at various park stages.

Included in the lineup for this special event is songstress Kelly Willard, whose hit is "Blame It On The One I Love." Daniel Amos, 1978 Campus Life Album of the year winner, will offer "Shotgun Angel."

Singers Randy Stonehill, Larry Norman, Leon Patillo and Barry McGuire also will be featured along with The Benny Hester Band, The Resurrection Band, Parable and The Chuck Girard Band.

Additionally, Disneyland's more than 50 major attractions, including such favorite adventures as "Pirates of the Caribbean," "The Jungle Cruise," and "Space Mountain," will be available for unlimited use.

Advance tickets for the "Contempo '79" festivities are $7.50 and may be ordered by mail through the Disneyland Admissions Office, 1313 Harbor Blvd., Anaheim, 92803, or purchased at Ticketron outlets.

TOP ALBUMS. . .

Talking Heads, "More Songs About Buildings and Food."

Manic music to think by. No other band seems capable of creating such controlled frenzy without falling over the edge

Warren Zevon, "Excitable Boy."

Zevon worked weird magic out of tunes like "Werewolves of London" and "Roland (the headless Thompson gunner)." A one-of-a-kind composer.

FLOPS OF THE POPS (in absolutely no order): Cal Jam II, the concert and record; Sgt. Pepper, the film and soundtrack; the Moody Blues "comeback" album; The Stones at Anaheim; four solo albums from Kiss, and the follow-up albums from Foreigner and Boston. And record prices rose another buck for the second year in a row.

FUNNIER STUFF: The best comedy album of the year is Richard Pryor's "Wanted." Unfortunately, none of the punch lines are printable here.

A great way to liven up a parish pancake breakfast and far more rewarding than the big selling bone tickler of the year, Steve Martin's "Wild and Crazy Guy." So is the release of vintage Woody Allen ("Night Club Years") for that matter.

GREAT SINGLES OF 78: The Stones' "Miss You" was summer's song, just as Patti Smith seemed to wake us out of hibernation with spring's "Because The Night."

For party time, no two songs rated higher on the danceability scale than Parliament's "Flashlight" and Funkadelic's "One Nation Under A Groove"

Finally, 10cc was charming with its reggae send-up, "Dreadlock Holiday," and Todd Rundgren's "Can We Still Be Friends" had everyone singing along and sounding good.

'Mermaids' Put to Rest

Debunking myths of mermaids whose bodies were half-human and half-fish, an exhibit called "The Siren's Song" is showing through September at the Natural History Museum/Los Angeles County in Exposition Park.

The 'mermaids' who combed their hair while singing seductive songs on river banks were actually marine mammals of the Order Sirenia.

Their human-like movements while bobbing in the water deceived early seamen, according to Dr. Don Patten, curator of mammalogy at the museum and co-sponsor of the exhibit along with The American Cetacean Society.

Developed by Sandra Peterson, a researcher of the relationship between man and the Florida manatee, the show comes to Los Angeles from Bergen, Norway, where it was presented at the United Nations Conference on Marine Mammals.

Photographs, fossils, sculptures, drawings, maps and skeletal materials will be used to interest lay people as well as scientists in this animal which cavorts with scuba divers and shows a distinct relationship to the land-bound elephant.

It's like coming home...to France
Unfortunately, many French restaurants serve a stuffy atmosphere with their fine meals. The delicious experience of French dining is usually left for the well-to-do or the once-in-a-great-while nights out.
That's why we advertise that Le Biarritz is "Hometown France." We still serve superb food, but there are no stuffy waiters, no unreadable menus — no haute ambiance.
Join us for award winning dining for lunch or dinner. It's like coming home ...to France.

'Superman,' Simonisms Refreshing

By BOB THOMAS
For The Associated Press

"CALIFORNIA SUITE" presents a quartet of Neil Simon sketches about guests at the Beverly Hills Hotel. The play was a tour de force with the same four actors playing each act. The movie gets out of the hotel suite and onto the tennis courts and beaches, employing a large and talented cast. Alan Alda and Jane Fonda are a divorced couple bickering over custody of their daughter. Maggie Smith and Michael Caine are British visitors at odds over his bisexuality. Walter Matthau is caught with a hooker by his wife, Elaine May. Bill Cosby and Richard Pryor are Chicago doctors on a disaster-ridden vacation with their wives.

Oddly, it is the serious sketches (Alda-Fonda, Smith-Caine) that are the most effective, even moving. The Simonisms are thin (Beverly Hills is "paradise that has had a lobotomy") and the farce mild. Rated PG, because of language.

"SUPERMAN," for all its pretension and opulence, is still the same dumb comic book about a man who can fly. This time instead of saving old ladies from burning buildings he's patching up the San Andreas Fault (mispronounced in the movie).

The special effects wizards are the heroes of the production, and the script writers (four) are the villains, failing to supply any original embellishment of the hackneyed formula.

Christopher Reeve is ideal in the double role, and Margot Kidder is refreshingly sophisticated as Lois Lane though not bright enough to detect the similarity between Superman and Clark Kent.

Marlon Brando with "Mutiny on the Bounty" accent and Gene Hackman were paid millions to participate. Their reputations will survive. Rated PG, the film seems suitable for all ages. The younger the better.

Hooker Becomes More Than Tipsy, Matthau's Wife (Elaine May) Becomes Angry

A Quick Look at the Movies

By BOB THOMAS

"SLOW DANCING IN THE BIG CITY" possesses the sweet innocence and determined sentimentality of an O. Henry short story.

A New York columnist with a heart of mush (Paul Sorvino) engages in a hesitant romance with a budding ballerina (Anne Ditchburn) who turns out to have one of those rare ailments that script writers love. Sorvino also befriends a 10-year-old junkie and seems to know or is known by half the population of Manhattan.

Sorvino is one of the few actors engaging enough to carry off such a portrayal, and Miss Ditchburn dances like a dream.

Director John Avildsen conveys the same gentleness that he showed in the "Rocky" romance. Rated PG, the film is a welcome antidote to the harshness of today's product.

"MIDNIGHT EXPRESS" (slang for prison escape) is a raw, compelling, apparently factual account of an American youth's payment for a tragic mistake; an attempt to smuggle hashish out of Turkey.

Billy Hayes, a Marquette University student, endured unspeakable conditions in a Turkish prison and asylum before escaping to Greece. Director Alan Parker depicts Hayes's torment in a film that is often punishing to watch.

"THE WIZ" contains so many wondrous things that you wonder why it isn't more satisfying.

The dances are the best on the screen since "West Side Story", the costumes are lavish beyond belief; playing the Oz legend against graffiti ghetto walls and the subways and sweatshops of Manhattan works surprisingly well.

The cast is amiable, especially Dorothy's companions down the Yellow Brick Road; Michael Jackson, Nipsy Russell, Ted Ross. So what is lacking?

When Lena Horne as Glinda the good fairy stops the show with a brief song, you realize the film's lack of spontaneous excitement. The songs are predictable, the decor overproduced.

Sadly, Diana Ross is miscast. A 24-year-old Harlem school teacher, no matter how shy, cannot achieve the same gentle innocence of a Kansas farm girl of 13.

"WILD GEESE" is a crackerjack adventure in the "Navarone" tradition — wry, involving, suspenseful. Four aging mercenaries Richard Burton, Roger Moore, Richard Harris and Hardy Kruger are enlisted by a British copper king, Stewart Granger, to rescue a black leader who has been deposed and imprisoned by an African tyrant.

The mission goes as badly as the Entebbe raid went well. Director Andrew McLaglen is an old hand at manly heroics, and he deftly mixes action with cool humor.

It's good to see Burton's return to vigor, and Granger should have a whole new career as a suave heavy. Rated R, with soldier talk and more than ample bloodshed.

"WHO IS KILLING THE GREAT CHEFS OF EUROPE?" serves a menu of belly-laughs and murder amid the haute cuisine. Except for a couple of lapses of taste, the results are delicious.

The dialogue is bright, the pace fast, and the view of Europe's finest restaurants is eye-filling.

George Segal is a fast-food magnate trying to conquer the continent, Jacqueline Bissett is his ex-wife, a premier pastry chef. They combine as effectively as the screwball comedy teams of the 1930s.

Robert Morley as a gourmand par excellence chews up the scenery and everything else in sight, he is superb, the solid foundation for the firm's fun, as well as its menace. A high-calorie treat. Rated PG.

"GIRL FRIENDS" applies the sharp edge of truth to the experience of a young woman trying for a career in New York City. The film by Claudia Weill exhibits the shoestring nature of the production: early scenes are jumpy, the film grainy (it was shot in 16 mm).

But Weill's vision remains steadfast, and the script by Vicki Polon is insightful and human.

Oil Cleanup Continues

BOSTON (AP) — Almost a year after the Amoco Cadiz spilled 220,000 tons of crude oil into stormy seas off northern France, the area's fragile coastline and village fishing economy have not recovered, and the cleanup may take years.

That is the message of "Black Tide," the season opener of public television's "Nova" series, to be aired tonight at 9 o'clock on KOCE, Channel 50.

REPLETE with closeup shots of oil-covered seabirds struggling to flap their way through dark, mud-thick water, and overviews of polluted beachline, the hour-long program takes a critical look at the after-effects of history's worst oil spill.

There are interviews with French fishermen whose livelihoods were destroyed by the spill, shots of Breton nationalists protesting what they saw as indifference by the French government to the spill, and comparisons of the Argo Merchant and Torrey Canyon disasters.

"This ship was typical of supertankers," said producer Graham Chedd, who was on the scene with camera crews five weeks after the Cadiz impaled itself on rocks. "It was well-maintained, well-crewed and operated with good standards.

"A HYDRAULIC steering mechanism sprung a leak . . . It was the worst conceivable moment for that to happen because there was a storm," he said. "The rocks there are unbelievably frightening — huge, jagged rocks sticking out for hundreds of yards."

The steering failed on the morning of March 16. For 14 hours, while crews tried in vain to run lines from the tanker to rescue tugs, the American-owned — but Liberian flag — ship twisted onto the rocks near the town of Portsail.

The first of the ship's 68 million gallons of oil began leaking into the sea that evening. Within a week its entire cargo had spread over 100 miles of coast.

IT WAS THE fourth time in recent years the Celtic enclave of Brittany had been hit by an oil spill, said the program's narrative.

Crews had the beaches cleared within eight weeks, but scientists interviewed for the program said contaminating oil will be trapped beneath the sand for years.

The scientists estimated about half the oil evaporated or was recovered in the cleanup, leaving more than 100,000 tons of it "still somewhere in the marine environment two months after the spill."

IN SUMMARIZING the spill, "Black Tide," focuses on the problem of tanker safety, crowded shipping lanes and the inadequacy of man's ability to deal with large spills.

Although the U.S. Coast Guard has started tougher inspection standards since New England's Argo Merchant spill two years ago, there is no international mechanism "to force substandard ships from the sea," the program concludes.

Rock 'n' Rollers Nix Wrinkles

To Look Young: Joke About Middle Years, Imitate Older Stars

By LISA ROBINSON

Rock'n' roll seems to have reached the age where it can no longer be trusted.

While aging doesn't quite carry the stigma that it did in the 1960s (remember "never trust anyone over 30?") I've recently noticed that rock stars are getting funny about their advancing years.

Considered teen-age music for so long, rock 'n' roll still has the image of wild, adolescent abandon. Live fast, die young, leave a good looking corpse. Even those who have every intention of sticking around for a long time like to appear as if they live dangerously.

BUT IT'S HARD TO look like you're living dangerously when plagued with heart attacks, liver ailments, flab, baldness and crow's feet.

ROCK TALK

Many of our major rock stars are well into their 30s (you'd be surprised at how many are in their 40s) and so, how do they deal with this?

They lie about their age.

ROCK STARS LIE ABOUT their age for various reasons. Vanity. Ego. A way to pick up girls. A way to sell tickets. No one wants to shell out 10 bucks to see someone onstage who's nearly as old as his parents.

Perhaps it's the only business where so many males have to lie about their ages. Like Hollywood starlets, rock 'n' roll lead guitarists are supposed to remain forever young.

Rock stars lie about their age in various ways. Some who were 24 eight years ago are 28 now.

Other favorites are 17 (most don't have the nerve to try that one), 21 — if you're talking to a 17-year-old — and the ever popular 24 and 28.

HISTORY IS OFTEN a dead giveaway, and musicians who have been around since 1963 really can't get away with such fibs. It doesn't take a master mathematician to figure out that unless you were 12 when you started, if you sang onstage at London's Marquee in 1963 or even Winterland in 1965, you're past 30 by now.

Patti Smith, Bruce Springsteen, David Bowie, Elton John, Rick Derringer, Jackson Browne and dozens of others are past 30. Even The Ramones are all in their late 20s.

So, aside from not telling the truth — which is risky at best — how can rock stars ease gracefully into the middle years?

I have some suggestions.

"He sold out years ago."

Sit in a chair onstage. Nothing is more unappealing than a flabby, exhausted musician leaping about.

Have your drummer take long solos. The other band members can rest in the dressing room. (At least one British supergroup is currently using this tactic.)

Imitate another rock star even older than you. Then you'll be called "the young Mick Jagger" or the "young Bob Dylan."

MAKE FILMS. Vaseline the lens.

Cut your hair. The aging hippie look is ridiculous.

Maybe Kiss had the right idea all along. Under all that makeup, they may be middle-aged already.

Kitt Aids Dance

Eartha Kitt, sultry star of "Timbuktu!", currently at the Pantages Theatre, through Feb. 11, will appear at the Backlot Theatre of Studio One Monday.

Both performances are benefits for Ms. Kitt's dance program in Watts, Kittsville. The cover charge for the evening is $10 which is tax-deductible.

Ms. Kitt will perform her nightclub repertoire to which she has added six new numbers, among them a medley of songs from "Timbuktu!" For reservations or further information phone (213) 659-0471.

How to Crank Out Film Adventure

Movieland Exhibits Mutoscope Nostalgia

Movieland is not a museum — not in the sense that one thinks of musty collections of forgotten stuff.

Wax models of more than 230 nostalgic favorites and current stars are displayed at the Buena Park attraction.

BUT TUCKED AWAY in a corner across from the Commissary of the Stars restaurant is a fascinating collection of early movie machines that would do any "regular" museum proud.

These Mutoscopes and Biographs, that tell stories through the rapid movement of photographs, and the earlier stereo slide machines known by such names as Sapho, Mills Quartoscope, Auto Stereo and Cail-O-Scope, live on, too.

They still tell stories of adventure, humor, tragedy and the life of the times. Tom Mix still stalls the Great Train Robbery, Joe Louis still knocks the tar out of Max Schmeling, and the 1906 San Francisco earthquake repeats at the turn of a crank.

OTHER STARS OF these miniature movies are Charlie Chaplin, Babe Ruth and even Rin-Tin-Tin.

Maybe there's something to the adage, "they don't make things the way they used to," because these are the original articles and they still operate to perfection.

And it's natural that the first examples of the art of moviemaking should be on display at Movieland which is a monument to the motion picture industry.

THERE ARE EIGHT Mutoscopes on display ranging from the earliest known models to the most advanced styles made. There are also a dozen different types of Stereo View Drop Picture Machines which were developed concurrently from 1895 to 1910.

Every machine on display is authentic with the exception of one which has been modified to include a glass casing to show how a Mutoscope operates. All the machines are original and as operable as the day they were manufactured.

Made solely for the purpose of showing movement, the Mutoscopes operate by a series of photographs moving in sequence on a rotating wheel. The wheel is attached to a handle which is turned by the viewer. The rapidity of movement is determined by the speed at which the handle is turned.

W.K.L. DICKSON is given the credit for inventing the Mutoscope. He originated the idea while working on the Kinetoscope in the laboratories of Thomas A. Edison. But Edison saw the moving picture as little more than a novelty and applied his energies to other areas.

The entire collection, on consignment to the museum, belongs to Frank Rayle from Del Mar, whose current project is to develop an authentic turn-of-the-century ice cream parlor in San Diego County.

Balboa Club Opens Season

The Balboa Yacht Club inaugurates the 1979 yachting season this weekend with the continuation of its three months long Sunkist Series.

Racing Saturday will be inside the bay for small boats with starts and finishes in front of the clubhouse. On Sunday the keel boats and Performance Handicap Racing Fleet (PHRF) will take over the action with races starting inside the bay and continuing to marks in the ocean before returning to the finish line inside the bay.

THIS WILL BE the second race of the annual Sunkist Series. The first race was on the first weekend in December and the final race will be on the first weekend in February. Many skippers and crews use the series as a tuneup for the Southern California Yachting Association Midwinter Regatta in mid-February.

BOATING

In the Los Angeles Harbor area the Cabrillo Beach Yacht Club will stage the second race of its Winter Series for all classes, and the Los Angeles Yacht Club will conduct a Frostbite Invitational for Sabot sailors.

Racing activity in Santa Monica Bay will be light this weekend. The Del Rey Club kicks off the offshore racing season with its Malibu race, the first of the Berger Series, and the South Bay Yacht Racing Club has scheduled the first race of its annual Champagne Series.

DOWN SAN DIEGO way, six yacht clubs are conducting series type races, mostly for members of their own clubs.

There is no activity this weekend in the north and inland areas.

Power Unit Sets Course in Safety

The Balboa Power Squadron's spring course in safe boating will get under way Monday at 6:30 p.m. at the Newport Harbor Yacht Club, 720 W. Bay Ave., Newport Beach.

The 10-week course is free and is taught by expert United States Power Squadron members from the local area.

The course covers all facets of boating outboard, inboard and sail—with one lecture devoted to trailer boating.

Lectures include handling under normal conditions, handling under adverse conditions, seamanship and common emergencies, Rules of the Road, aids to navigation, compass and chart familiarization, running lights and equipment, boat trailering, inland boating and mariner's compass and piloting.

The Balboa squadron is a unit of the USPS which was established in 1914 as a self supporting boating education organization. It is America's largest private boating fraternity with over 75,000 members in 400 local squadrons

Classes in Boating Safety Scheduled

Flotilla 27 of the U.S. Coast Guard Auxiliary has announced two safe boating classes which will start this month at the Horance Ensign Middle School, 2000 Cliff Drive, Newport Beach.

A class in sailing and seamanship will get under way Jan. 16 at 7:30 p.m. and a class in boating skills and seamanship is scheduled to start Jan. 17 at 7:30 p.m.

Further classes scheduled by Flotilla 27 include a class known as Coastal Piloting, April 25, according to Wade Miller, commander of Flotilla 27.

All courses will be instructed by seasoned members of the Coast Guard Auxiliary and are free of charge. For further information call 540-0153

Show Slated

Racing Craft Featured

Several features have been set for the mammoth 300,000-square-foot 23rd annual Southern California Boat Show, Feb. 2-11 at the Los Angeles Convention Center.

For the first time, there will be a large American Power Boat Association (APBA) section devoted to showcasing racing craft. The area will include record holders in several categories.

Charley Davis will be in charge of a salt water and fresh water fishing class. Davis is one of the few people who lectures in colleges on how to fish.

Statistics at an anti-narcotic exhibition here also showed that the government destroyed 1,000 acres of marijuana plantations, and seized 44 pounds of heroin and 4,400 pounds of raw opium last year.

Roads Out of LA Clogged by Snow

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Heavy snow within 35 miles of downtown Los Angeles stalled traffic on major highways leaving the city and gave hundreds of delighted school children in outlying areas an unexpected holiday today after a vigorous Pacific storm moved into Southern California.

"The only way to go north out of Los Angeles is by Highway 101 along the coast unless you want to drive to San Bernardino," California Highway Patrol officer Monty Keifer said today.

Snow that measured four inches in some places closed the Angeles Crest Highway about five miles west of Big Pines, 35 miles northeast of downtown Los Angeles, said CHP officer Ken Schultheis.

Interstate 5, the main northern artery to San Francisco, was closed between Castaic and Wheeler Ridge, some 50 miles north of Los Angeles, he said.

Snow, which crept below the 3,000-foot level in the mountains, made chains mandatory for travel on the main road to Las Vegas - Interstate 15 - "from Cajon Pass all the way to the Nevada state line" in the high desert, said Lance Stalker of the state Department of Transportation.

He said snow was falling all along the route and was heavy in the Victorville-Barstow area.

Brad Griffin at KWTC Radio in Barstow said, "We're all excited. When I looked out my window this morning, I just about grabbed my skis."

On the Antelope Valley Freeway, just north of the Los Angeles area, six inches of snow had fallen with predictions of four more. Chains were required north of Santiago Highway near Escondido Summit and south from Palmdale Boulevard.

Chains also were required on state routes 18 and 38 in the San Bernardino Mountains northeast of Los Angeles and route 58 in the Tehachapi Pass, east of Bakersfield, the CHP's Schultheis said.

Bill Herider, owner of the Antelope Valley Bowl, said it snows in Lancaster "about once a year. Nobody can go to work. They've gotta sit here and drink coffee.

"Every school's closed. The kids are having a great time, going out front and playing in the snow."

Gusting winds of up to 35 mph increased the driving hazard in the mountains, but were expected to decrease in most spots tonight.

EDISON HIGH STUDENTS CROSS STREET DURING INCIDENT THIS MORNING

Strike Continues

False Fire Alarm Empties School

By RAYMOND ESTRADA Jr.
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

A disruption developed early toaday in the Huntington Beach teachers strike when a fire alarm was falsely set off at Edison High School and several hundred students left classes.

While there was considerable milling about, Edison Principal Phil Gross said only about 300 students actually joined teachers on the picket line as a result of the false fire alarm.

Two students, Kim Higgins and Pam Parbs, however, claimed about 1,500 students joined the pickets in the 9:30 a.m. incident.

Miss Higgins and Miss Parbs claimed they have gathered signatures of 700 students on a petition supporting the striking teachers.

Meanwhile, officials estimated nearly half of the 867 teachers in the Huntington Beach Union School District have stayed off their jobs since the strike was called Wednesday in a contract dispute.

Elsewhere in the school system, district spokesman Lyn Henderson said about 150 Westminster High School students staged a walkout this morning.

But Berger said most of the students returned to classes when warned they would be truant if they did not.

A number of Ocean View High School students reportedly walked out of classes Wednesday but school officials denied the incident.

Mrs. Henderson said a total of 509 teachers failed to show up for work Thursday but 76 of those said they were sick.

No statistics on the number of striking teachers was available today but teacher leaders claim the number joining their ranks is climbing steadily each day.

Student absenteeism was about twice as high as normal today, officials said. Twenty-four percent of the district's 20,900 students were absent Thursday and 30 percent were not in classes Wednesday.

A teacher spokesman said late this morning a confrontation occurred today between strikers and substitute teachers in front of Westminster High School. No further details were available.

School district officials said someone glued 10 Huntington Beach High School doors shut and broke into a duplicating machine room between 4 and 6 p.m. Thursday. One of the machines was used.

DWAYNE HOLDER, 4, CONTEMPLATES RAIN
From the Inside, Looking Out in Costa Mesa

Storm Dumps Rain On Orange Coast

A Pacific storm which left behind nearly an inch of rain as it swept over Orange County will leave cloudy conditions in its wake as it disintegrates Saturday, National Weather Service forecasters predict.

And by the time the Los Angeles Rams and the Dallas Cowboys take the field at the Coliseum Sunday, the weatherman says post-storm conditions will have improved to the point that the sun will break through the cloud cover from time to time.

But it will be cool, forecasters warn. Highs during the weekend will be in the low 60s with a low of about 50 on both days.

They predict that winds will pick up during the weekend with brisk gusts of up to 15 miles an hour hitting the Orange Coast from the southeast.

Showers which appeared to hit their peak in the early morning hours Friday kept the 1978 rain tables at a level with precipitation statistics recorded at this time a year ago.

Huntington Beach rainfall analyst J. Sherman Denny said his gauge showed that 5.90 inches of rain had fallen in the current season just .38 inches less than the total he recorded at this point in 1978.

"And that's pretty good," Denny said. "We've already got more than half of our normal season's rainfall in both years and there's a long way to go yet."

The rain appeared to have had little effect on essential services and traffic conditions in Orange County.

Flooding appeared to be nonexistent and the California Highway Patrol and traffic officers in contacted communities said traffic was moving normally on all streets and highways.

Nudie Photo Brings Suit

LOS ANGELES (AP) - An Encino man has filed a $500,000 lawsuit against Playgirl magazine for running a nude photograph taken of him at a private party without his permission.

An attorney for Robert Levitus claimed in the suit filed Thursday in Superior Court that the nude side view — which "left nothing to the imagination" — falsely characterized him as willing to pose for nude photographs and have them published.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Republican Lt. Gov.-elect Mike Curb has thrown his support behind Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. in the Democrat's battle with legislative leaders of his own party over cuts in spending in next year's budget, it was reported today.

Against Oil Firms

In Federal Lawsuit Overcharge Hit

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Energy and Justice departments sued nine major oil companies in U.S. District Court today, accusing them of overcharges totaling nearly $1 billion and asking refunds plus interest and penalties.

Energy Department spokesman James Bishop said it was the department's largest enforcement action, bringing to about $2.2 billion the total involved in such action which began in September 1977.

The department earlier alleged $316 million in overcharges by Exxon, the world's largest petroleum company. This was included in the $930 million claimed in today's lawsuit as the department sought to have the Exxon case considered together with eight new ones.

The remaining $614 million was charged against Mobil, Texaco, Amoco, Shell, Phillips, Gulf, Atlantic Richfield and Cities Service, all large oil and gas producing companies.

In Houston, an Exxon USA executive said the company believes "all our pricing actions have been in compliance with the regulations.

"Exxon has been trying to resolve both administratively and in the courts differences in interpretation of the regulations for pricing natural gas liquids," Senior Vice President O.L. Luper said. "In fact, the company initiated the court action three years ago in an effort to resolve questions surrounding the issue."

There was no immediate comment from the other companies involved.

Bishop had no immediate breakdown of the over charges alleged against each company.

He said the lawsuit charged that the nine companies exaggerated their costs for natural gas liquids since 1973, resulting in excessively high prices for such products as propane, butane and heating oil made from the liquid petrolum extracted from natural gas.

Kulik Jurors Get Five-day Break in Tiff

Jurors in the $1 million heroin possession trial of Alexander Kulik were given a five-day break in the Orange County Superior Court case on Thursday when lawyers couldn't agree on questioning the defendant.

Kulik, 29, a one-time Newport Beach resident and businessman is being tried in the court of acting Superior Court Judge Paul Mast on charges that he had 1.1 pounds of nearly pure oriental heroin in his possession when he was arrested Oct. 22, 1977.

In addition to dismissing the jury until next Wednesday Judge Mast rescinded a bench warrant he had issued earlier for one witness, Anthony "Big Tony" Marone Sr.

The warrant was issued this week when Marone, a relocated federal witness with ties to east coast Mafia families, failed to appear to testify.

Court officials said they have received assurances that Marone will be on hand to testify when the trial resumes next week.

Kulik, in addition to the heroin possession trial, still faces charges of murder conspiracy in the shooting death of Stephen John Bovan who died outside a Newport Beach restaurant hours before Kulik's arrest in a Mission Viejo parking lot.

Early Vote Tally Cost Too High?

A proposal to start counting election day ballots earlier in Orange County to speed up the final tallying would cost more than it's worth, according to County Registrar of Voters Al Olson.

The early count procedure probably would have trimmed two hours off the Orange County tally during the November general election, Olson said in a report to supervisors.

But the system would cost an extra $40,000 to put into effect and require legislation allowing Orange County to start counting ballots before the polls closed.

Supervisor Ralph Clark asked Olson to study the early counting system after learning such a procedure was being used in Riverside and San Diego Counties.

Special state legislation allowed the early counting there, Olson said, as a test program. That legislation expires in 1981.

Olson said there is a possibility legislation will be passed this year to permit California counties with mechanized vote counting equipment to use early ballot pickups.

Among problems with the early vote count system, Olson said, is the fact that it would require Orange County's 14-year-old vote counting machines to work an extra six hours and increase the likelihood of a breakdown.

In addition, he said, it would require the county to hire about 751 additional election employees to work in two shifts. It is now difficult to recruit enough workers for one shift, he added.

Clark had proposed the early vote counting system as a possible way to avoid spending several million dollars on new vote tallying equipment.

Teachers to Strike In Westminster?

By ROBERT BARKER
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Rumblings of a possible teachers strike in the Westminster School (elementary) District are mounting after a prolonged deadlock in contract negotiations.

Bill Bianchi, executive director of the West Orange County United Teachers, said today that some teachers are clamoring for a strike.

He said it could take place Monday morning, depending on what the teachers decide late today at a meeting of the general membership.

Key points in the labor dispute include salary increases, fringe benefits, class sizes and binding arbitration in teachers grievance disputes.

Bianchi said that teachers in the 20-campus district are asking for a six percent increase for the 1979-80 school year. They were granted a 5.5 percent hike for the current year in a previous contract but that has been held up by statewide salary freeze.

He reports that teachers also are asking for an additional 1.5 percent adjustment in their current salary.

The total package would amount to 13 percent salary increase.

District spokesman Barbara Winars said teachers have been offered a seven percent hike for 1979-80.

District officials previously have collected lesson plans, and classroom keys from teachers in the event of a strike.

Bianchi said this action hardened positions and the Westminster Teachers Association took a vote of no confidence in school Superintendent Kenneth Ricketts.

District officials claim they are well prepared for a strike and that all schools will remain open and all classes will be conducted by trained personnel.

Anti-busing Rally Slated

AP Wirephoto
ANNOUNCES MESA RALLY
State Senator Robbins

By KATHY CLANCY
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Efforts to drum up local support for a state constitutional amendment that would prohibit forced busing of school children in California were announced today by State Sen. Alan Robbins, D-Van Nuys.

In a press conference this morning, Robbins invited local parents to a $10 per family rally Jan. 26 at Orange County Fairgrounds in Costa Mesa.

Proceeds from the rally will be used to transport parents to Sacramento in February when Robbins figures his proposed amendment will be debated on the state Assembly floor.

If approved by the Legislature, the amendment likely would be placed before California voters in 1980.

Among speakers scheduled for the 7:30 p.m. rally Jan. 26 are state Sen. John Schmitz, R-Newport Beach; Assemblyman Dennis Mangers, D-Huntington Beach, and Assemblyman Ross Johnson, R-La Habra.

Other speakers expected are Paul Clark of the San Fernando Valley-based Bus Stop and Bobbie Fiedler, a Los Angeles Unified School District trustee.

The Robbins amendment parallels a similar bill he introduced in the 1977-78 legislature.

Robbins said today he believes the new measure has a better chance of passing in this session because of the proposed "metropolitan plan" of busing that would involve all but three Orange County school districts.

Robbins said virtually the entire Orange County legislative delegation backs the amendment while little interest was shown locally when the busing issue applied only to the Los Angeles school district.

"Busing has been a failure in the Los Angeles school district as everyone knows," Robbins said. "Since Los Angeles has been a failure they think they can do a better job by expanding busing to Orange County."

Robbins' amendment seeks to prohibit judges from ordering forced busing in all cases except when children of some ethnic origins are prohibited from attending their neighborhood schools because of race.

In effect, the proposed constitutional amendment would prohibit the type of forced busing undertaken in Los Angeles and now proposed in the expanded metropolitan plan.

Robbins said the amendment also would prohibit inter-district busing, but would permit voluntary busing of school students.

China Trade Weighed

SAINT FRANCOIS, Guadeloupe (AP) – The Caribbean summit of President Carter and three West European leaders focused today on an ambitious British plan for up to $2 billion in trade with China, probably including the sale of British jet fighters, conference sources said.

British Prime Minister James Callaghan, in outlining the Chinese trade picture to Carter and the others, emphasized the sale of power-generating and other industrial equipment to Peking, said the sources who asked not to be identified.

But Callaghan also said he seeks a "balanced trade relationship" with China, a strong indication Britain will approve sale of 80 Harrier vertical take-off fighters in defiance of Soviet warnings that such sales would damage East-West relations.

Carter, Callagahan, French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing and West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt met this morning in a thatched-roof open pavilion overlooking the sea, underlining the informal nature of this Western summit. The agenda was expected to be dominated by China and Western security issues, including the future of Iran and its oil resources.

Carter and West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt were the last to arrive, walking together. The president was tieless in a white short-sleeve shirt and wore gray slacks and desert boots.

French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing, who like the others spurned neckties for the occasion, had a small stack of briefing books in front of him as the quartet sat down around a small circular table.

"I see you've come well prepared," Carter noted.

None of the other leaders had any papers with him.

U.S. officials said the four might hold most of their sessions, which will conclude Saturday, without advisers at their sides.

The agenda for the two days of discussions was worked out Thursday night while Carter and his wife, Rosalynn, spent a relaxed, convivial evening over an elaborate French meal with Callaghan, Schmidt, their host, Giscard and their wives.

news media. As soon as the television cameras leave, students return to classes, she contended.

School board members say they will meet Saturday morning in a closed door session to possibly seek a court order aimed at halting the three-day-old strike.

Meanwhile, teachers plan to meet with a state-appointed mediator today. The mediator will take the teachers' latest contract offers before the school board Saturday.

Mrs. Wessa said the main issue in the dispute is teachers demand for binding arbitration in all employee grievances.

"They will be out on the picket line until June if they think they will ever get binding arbitration," Mrs. Wessa said.

Teachers are also demanding a five percent pay hike for the 1978-79 school year and another similar pay hike for 1979-80.

Mrs. Wessa said the pay hikes would be illegal due to a state-imposed salary freeze.

Many teachers are also up in arms because they claim the school board is not maintaining some contract clauses that appeared in last year's agreement. Teachers have been working without a contract since July 1, 1978.

Despite pouring rain this morning, about 40 teachers picketed West Orange County high schools in Huntington Beach, Fountain Valley and Westminster.

Huntington Beach police reported that some parents have complained that teachers were slapping "scab" bumper stickers on their autos as they dropped their youngsters off for school.

Police in Fountain Valley and Westminster have boosted patrols around the homes of school board members.

No suspects have been arrested in connection with the smashing of the school board president's auto window Wednesday night or Thursday morning, in front of her Fountain Valley home.

Probe Asked

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) Sen. Alan Cranston said Thursday that he has called for an investigation of reports that foster children were placed under the guidance of the Peoples Temple, whose head, Jim Jones, led more than 900 persons to their deaths in Guyana.

Donna Reed Leaves Coast For Oklahoma

Actress Donna Reed has announced she is giving up her home in Corona del Mar and moving to Tulsa, Okla., because her husband has taken a job there.

Miss Reed's husband, Grover Asmus, an executive engineer, will work for the Williams Brothers Company.

The actress, who hosted her own television show for eight years, spent most of December filming an NBC movie called "The Best Place to Be."

She said she lived out of a Los Angeles hotel while filming and hasn't been in Corona del Mar since November.

Miss Reed said she is currently looking for a house or a condominium in Tulsa.

Relatives of Shah Flee to Desert Home

PALM SPRINGS (AP) – The besieged mother and sister of Iran's troubled shah have found refuge in a sprawling desert estate, where former President Nixon also sought a haven in recent years.

Queen Mother Tadj Ul Moluk and Princess Chams arrived at the oasis winter residence of Walter Annenberg Wednesday night after they became the targets of anti-shah violence in Beverly Hills.

Federal, state and local authorities are protecting the estate surrounded by a high wall and tamarisk trees – said Annenberg, the former U.S. ambassador to Great Britain.

Asked about security against possible violence by anti-shah demonstrators at Sunnylands near Rancho Mirage, the 70-year-old publisher replied: "If they come, so be it."

Annenberg served as ambassador to Great Britain from 1969 to 1974, and his winter home provided seclusion for Nixon following the former president's resignation in 1974.

"When the government of the United States offers shelter to those seeking protection from radical extremists, the citizens of this country should respond affirmatively if necessary," he said.

The 90-year-old mother of Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi was flown to Los Angeles from riot-swept Iran last weekend, reportedly to seek medical attention.

She was at the Beverly Hills home of her daughter, Princess Chams, on Tuesday when about 500 protesters – including many Iranian students attending U.S. colleges – rushed the house.

Demonstrators broke windows and set fire to cars before being driven back by police using tear gas and fire hoses.

In a statement to the Palm Springs Desert Sun, Annenberg called the attack "outrageous conduct." He said the demonstrators' threats against "the shah's elderly mother and his sister in their anarchisic drive to murder them, enraged Americans."

Seven people were arrested and about 40 were injured when authorities broke up the violence, which erupted after an orderly protest march through Beverly Hills by a group of about 2,000.

Hamid Parcham, 26, and Said Parcham, 23, pleaded innocent Thursday in Beverly Hills Municipal Court to one count each of felony vandalism and misdemeanor rioting.

The two are accused of helping to overturn and burn a car rented by the shah's family.

Many Orange Coast ski enthusiasts were busy packing their gear Friday in aniticipation of a weekend of fun on slopes that were described by their operators as being in peak condition.

Oil Work Resumes In Iran

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) Oil industry sources said striking petroleum workers began returning to their jobs today, apparently heeding the call of the anti-shah religious opposition to produce enough oil to save the Iranian economy from collapse.

Palace sources reported, meanwhile, that the embattled Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi returned to Tehran by helicopter from the nearby ski resort of Jaroud, where he had gone Thursday for a brief vacation. Empress Farah and their children accompanied the monarch.

Shahpour Bakhtiar, the shah's choice for prime minister, was readying his proposed civilian cabinet for presentation to the monarch this weekend and later to the Parliament.

Since the latest round of anti-shah strikes began last month, oil production has plummeted from six million barrels a day to 250,000 barrels or less. Industry sources say it takes 900,000 barrels to meet Iran's domestic needs alone, and because of shortages the military-led government ordered fuel rationing last week.

An oil-industry source, who asked not to be named, said that with the return of some strikers the first shipments of kerosene and heating oil are expected to reach Tehran on Saturday. Figures on total production for the day were unavailable.

Refineries in Abadan and Tabriz resumed limited production today but those in Shiraz and Tehran remained shut pending a decision by striking workers Saturday.

Ayatullah Khomaini, the Moslem religious leader who is the symbol of the anti-shah movement, called Wednesday for the workers to produce enough fuel to ease the burden on the people.

Elvis' Home Up for Sale

PALM SPRINGS (AP) – Elvis Presley's Spanish-style desert estate is being offered for sale at $450,000, a real estate firm says.

The late singer bought the home in 1972, using it during his frequent trips to Palm Springs, Eli Birer said Thursday.

Birer's firm, Eli Birer and Associates, is handling the sale of the 1.75-acre estate, which includes five bedrooms, seven baths, a music room, sauna and steam room, pool, jacuzzi, double car garage and large parking area.

Tests Show 727's Takeoff 'Not Noisier'

By JOANNE REYNOLDS
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

The two Boeing 727 jets flown into and out of Orange County Airport so far are proving the contention of Hughes Airwest officials that the big jets are no noisier than the DC-9s the airline uses.

The test of the three-engine jets was launched Dec. 15 amid protests from Newport Beach homeowners, who want substantial airport noise reductions and at the time claimed the 727s would only increase the noise problem.

However, unofficial results show the 727s haven't been noisier. One county official said some of the data from county noise monitors shows that, at times, the larger plane has been quieter than either the DC-9s or the Boeing 737s flown by Air California.

In addition, records kept in the airport's noise abatement office indicate a decline to the number of telephone complaints or questions about the 727 since the initial days of the test.

Under a plan approved by Orange County Supervisors, the 155-passenger jets are being flown into the airport twice a day.

After Jan. 15, county officials will evaluate the preliminary findings of the test to decide if it should be concluded or if it can be continued.

In making the test proposal, Airwest officials originally asked for up to six months for evaluating the noise impact of the jet.

Airwest wants to substitute the 727 for the DC-9s as a means of gaining extra passenger capacity without increasing the number of flights at the county airport.

The 727s carry about 50 more passengers than the DC-9s. The airline, through its lease agreement with the county is limited to slightly less than 14 flights per day on a monthly average.

The initial phone calls to the noise abatement office made after the test was launched Dec. 15, were exclusively from Newport Beach and Upper Bay area residents, many of whom call the office with regular complaints.

Those calls have nearly disappeared from the log and in fact, there was even a telephoned compliment from one unidentified resident who just wanted to let airport officials know he listened especially for the 727 and found "it wasn't so bad."

U.S. Sues Nine Oil Companies

WASHINGTON (AP) The Energy and Justice departments sued nine major oil companies in U.S. District Court today, accusing them of overcharges totaling more than $1 billion and asking refunds plus interest and penalties.

Energy Department spokesman James Bishop said it was the department's largest enforcement action, bringing to about $2.2 billion the total involved in such action which began in September 1977.

The department earlier alleged $316 million in overcharges by Exxon, the world's largest petroleum company. This was included in the $930 million claimed in today's lawsuit as the department sought to have the Exxon case considered together with eight new ones.

The remaining $614 million was charged against Mobil, Texaco, Amoco, Shell, Phillips, Gulf, Atlantic Richfield, and Cities Service, all large oil and gas producing companies.

In Houston, an Exxon USA executive said the company believes "all our pricing actions have been in compliance with the regulations.

"Exxon has been trying to resolve both administratively and in the courts differences in interpretation of the regulations for pricing natural gas liquids," Senior Vice President O.L. Luper said. "In fact, the company initiated the court action

Rally Set In Busing Issue

By KATHY CLANCY
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Efforts to drum up local support for a state constitutional amendment that would prohibit forced busing of school children in California were announced today by State Sen. Alan Robbins, D-Van Nuys.

In a press conference this morning, Robbins invited local parents to a $10 per family rally Jan. 26 at Orange County Fairgrounds in Costa Mesa.

Proceeds from the rally will be used to transport parents to Sacramento in February when Robbins figures his proposed amendment will be debated on the state Assembly floor.

If approved by the Legislature, the amendment likely would be placed before California voters in 1980.

Among speakers scheduled for the 7:30 p.m. rally Jan. 26 are state Sen. John Schmitz, R-Newport Beach; Assemblyman Dennis Mangers, D-Huntington Beach, and Assemblyman Ross Johnson, R-La Habra.

Other speakers expected are Paul Clark of the San Fernando

Rain Dumped on Coast

Wind, Cloudiness Forecast for Weekend

A Pacific storm which left behind nearly an inch of rain as it swept over Orange County will leave cloudy conditions in its wake as it disintegrates Saturday, National Weather Service forecasters predict.

And by the time the Los Angeles Rams and the Dallas Cowboys take the field at the Coliseum Sunday, the weatherman says post-storm conditions will have improved to the point that the sun will break through the cloud cover from time to time.

But it will be cool, forecasters warn. Highs during the weekend will be in the low 60s with a low of about 50 on both days.

They predict that winds will pick up during the weekend with brisk gusts of up to 15 miles an hour hitting the Orange Coast from the southeast.

Showers which appeared to hit their peak in the early morning hours today kept the 1979 rain tables at a level with precipitation statistics recorded at this time a year ago.

Huntington Beach rainfall analyst J. Sherman Denny said his gauge showed that 5.90 inches of rain had fallen in the current season just .38 inches less than the total he recorded at this point in 1978.

"And that's pretty good," Denny said. "We've already got more than half of our normal season's rainfall in both years and there's a long way to go yet."

The rain appeared to have had little effect on essential services and traffic conditions in Orange County.

Flooding appeared to be nonexistent and the California Highway Patrol and traffic officers in contacted communities said traffic was moving normally on all streets and highways.

The storm left some picturesque winter scenes in its wake with the 3,000-foot snow level leaving Saddleback Mountain looking like a scene from a picture postcard.

Snow Clogs Roads North of LA Area

LOS ANGELES (AP) – Heavy snow within 35 miles of downtown Los Angeles stalled traffic on major highways leaving the city and gave hundreds of delighted school children in outlying areas an unexpected holiday today after a vigorous Pacific storm moved into Southern California.

"The only way to go north out of Los Angeles is by Highway 101 along the coast unless you want to drive to San Bernardino," California Highway Patrol officer Monty Keifer said today.

Snow that measured four inches in some places closed the Angeles Crest Highway about five miles west of Big Pines, 35 miles northeast of downtown Los Angeles, said CHP officer Ken Schultheis.

Interstate 5, the main northern artery to San Francisco, was closed between Castaic and Wheeler Ridge, some 50 miles north of Los Angeles, he said.

Snow, which crept below the 3,000-foot level in the mountains, made chains mandatory for travel on the main road to Las Vegas – Interstate 15 – "from Cajon Pass all the way to the Nevada state line" in the high desert, said Lance Stalker of the state Department of Transportation.

He said snow was falling all along the route and was heavy in the Victorville-Barstow area.

Brad Griffin at KWTC Radio in Barstow said, "We're all excited. When I looked out my window this morning, I just about grabbed my skis."

On the Antelope Valley Freeway, just north of the Los Angeles area, six inches of snow had fallen with predictions of four more. Chains were required north of Santiago Highway near Escondido Summit and south from Palmdale Boulevard.

The snow turned to rain in Los Angeles where the storm played havoc with morning traffic.

Couple File Suit Over Tree Length

A Harbor View Hills couple have filed suit in Orange County Superior Court in efforts to force a neighboring couple to either trim their pine tree by 10 feet or pay $200,000 in property damages.

Flaherty said today he hadn't yet been notified of the suit and couldn't comment on it.

The Harwoods contend the value of surrounding homes is $350,000 to $400,000 and that the presence of the pine trees has diminished the value of their home by $200,000.

In their complaint, the Harwoods allege past requests that the Flahertys trim the trees have gone unheeded.

In addition, they contend the Harbor View Hills Community Association has asked that the trees be trimmed.

The Harwoods contend the trees violate the community association's rules because they exceed the height of the Flaherty home and the association's Architectural Committee has not approved the taller trees.

Catering Truck Driver Wounded

Police said Costa Panagitou of Brea was treated by paramedics for a punctured lower lip and gum injuries after he reported being robbed near SPI Inc. at 1652 Kaiser Ave. at about 6:45 p.m.

Panagitou told investigators his assailant demanded money, then shot him in the lower jaw with a pellet gun when he apparently moved too slowly and snatched the bills from the victim's left hand.

Panagitou said the man fled on foot. Officials said it is the city's first report of a robbery involving a food caterer.

Mormon Church OK'd in Irvine

Irvine planning commissioners approved a conditional use permit Thursday night authorizing construction of a Mormon church in Woodbridge and okayed a municipal plan to extend the civic center.

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints is proposed for property off Lake Street next to the San Diego Creek.

The planned single-story church is to contain 45,000 square feet of space.

The civic center expansion plan is for additional warehouse and police department office space in an existing building east of the existing City Hall, at Jamboree Boulevard and McGaw Avenue.

The new space, about 12,500 square feet, is proposed to house the department's overflow after closing a satellite office in the University Town Center area which housed traffic and crime prevention groups.

The expansion building as well as the City Hall structure are leased facilities originally built as industrial warehouses.

In other action Thursday night, commissioners approved a signing program proposed by Verde Development to identify the Northwood Plaza, between the Santa Ana Freeway and Trabuco Road.

Suspect Seized in Airport Explosion

Irvine police arrested a former Control Components Inc. trainee at his home in Orange Thursday on suspicion of launching balloons that exploded in an Orange County Airport flight path.

Investigators said warrants have been issued for two other suspects following the launching of three to five homemade balloons carrying incendiary devices between Dec. 7 and 14 over the City of Irvine.

Arrested Thursday was Timothy Joseph Ropchan, 26. He was held in Orange County jail on 10 misdemeanor charges of possessing destructive devices, launching illicit material within the perimeter of an airport and violating laws against sending flaming devices into an air corridor.

Ropchan's bail was set at $1,500. If convicted, he could face a year in jail plus fines, investigators said.

Ropchan and three other employees were fired earlier from Control Components, 2567 Main St., Irvine, as the result of police investigations, a department spokesman said this morning.

On Dec. 14, Terry Huff, 26, of Costa Mesa was burned in a gas explosion in the plant's X-ray room. Investigators said that lighter-than-air gases, including helium and acetylene, are available at the plant.

Police said at least three exploding balloons were spotted above the Irvine Industrial Complex north of San Diego Freeway between Dec. 11 and 14.

The balloons, plastic trash bags filled with gas and trailing a "simple" incendiary device, exploded in flame at an altitude of about 850 feet, investigators said.

Private aircraft approach Orange County Airport at about that same altitude, police said. If a balloon had hit one of the aircraft, investigators said, a crash could have resulted.

Dana Man Arrested In Heist

Orange County Sheriff's investigators and FBI agents arrested a 29-year-old Dana Point man Thursday in connection with a savings and loan robbery Tuesday in the seaside community.

Lt. Richard Drake of the sheriff's department said Roland Bruce Clendening was arrested late Thursday afternoon on the 1400 block of S. Sycamore Street in Santa Ana. He offered no resistance, authorities said.

Police are still seeking another man in the robbery at Provident Savings and Loan, 34155 Coast Highway. Two men entered the savings and loan shortly after 2 p.m. Tuesday and herded employees into a rear room.

The second suspect was described as about 35 years old with a stocky build, collar length brown hair and a Fu Manchu moustache. He was wearing a stocking mask.

Sheriff's investigators said Clendening was scheduled to be arraigned today before U.S. Magistrate Arthur Bradley on bank robbery charges. He is being held in Orange County Jail.

China Trading Summit Topic

SAINT FRANCOIS, Guadeloupe (AP) – The Caribbean summit of President Carter and three West European leaders focused today on an ambitious British plan for up to $2 billion in trade with China, probably including the sale of British jet fighters, conference sources said.

British Prime Minister James Callaghan, in outlining the Chinese trade picture to Carter and the others, emphasized the sale of power-generating and other industrial equipment to Peking, said the sources who asked not to be identified.

But Callaghan also said he seeks a "balanced trade relationship" with China, a strong indication Britain will approve sale of 80 Harrier vertical take-off fighters in defiance of Soviet warnings that such sales would damage East-West relations.

Carter, Callagahan, French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing and West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt met this morning in a thatched-roof open pavilion overlooking the sea, underlining the informal nature of this Western summit. The agenda was expected to be dominated by China and Western security issues, including the future of Iran and its oil resources.

Carter and West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt were the last to arrive, walking together. The president was tieless in a white short-sleeve shirt and wore gray slacks and desert boots.

French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing, who like the others spurned neckties for the occasion, had a small stack of briefing books in front of him as the quartet sat down around a small circular table.

"I see you've come well prepared," Carter noted.

None of the other leaders had any papers with him.

U.S. officials said the four might hold most of their sessions, which will conclude Saturday, without advisers at their sides.

The agenda for the two days of discussions was worked out Thursday night while Carter and his wife, Rosalynn, spent a relaxed, convivial evening over an elaborate French meal with Callaghan, Schmidt, their host, Giscard and their wives.

The Robbins amendment parallels a similar bill he introduced in the 1977-78 legislature.

Robbins said today he believes the new measure has a better chance of passing in this session because of the proposed "metropolitan plan" of busing that would involve all but three Orange County school districts.

Robbins said virtually the entire Orange County legislative delegation backs the amendment while little interest was shown locally when the busing issue applied only to the Los Angeles school district.

"Busing has been a failure in the Los Angeles school district as everyone knows," Robbins said. "Since Los Angeles has been a failure they think they can do a better job by expanding busing to Orange County."

Robbins' amendment seeks to prohibit judges from ordering forced busing in all cases except when children of some ethnic origins are prohibited from attending their neighborhood schools because of race.

In effect, the proposed constitutional amendment would prohibit the type of forced busing undertaken in Los Angeles and now proposed in the expanded metropolitan plan.

Robbins said the amendment also would prohibit inter-district busing, but would permit voluntary busing of school students.

Donna Reed Leaves Coast For Oklahoma

Actress Donna Reed has announced she is giving up her home in Corona del Mar and moving to Tulsa, Okla., because her husband has taken a job there.

Miss Reed's husband, Grover Asmus, an executive engineer, will work for the Williams Brothers Company.

The actress, who hosted her own television show for eight years, spent most of December filming an NBC movie called "The Best Place to Be."

She said she lived out of a Los Angeles hotel while filming and hasn't been in Corona del Mar since November.

Miss Reed said she is currently looking for a house or a condominium in Tulsa.

Irvine Ranch Converting 500 Acres

The Irvine Company announced Thursday it is expanding its farmland acreage by converting 500 acres of land in the Irvine Ranch foothills into avocado and orange groves.

The orchards will be developed, through an investment of $1.5 million, on property below the Lomas Ridge, northwest of El Toro Marine Corps Air Station, in county territory near the city of Irvine.

The land is now used for cattle grazing.

Terracing, construction of contour drainage channels and installation of a drip irrigation system is scheduled to begin this spring.

Some 300 acres will be put into avocado production, with the remaining 200 acres in oranges.

The property adjoins 500 acres that were converted to avocado orchards during 1978, a program that also cost a reported $1.5 million.

The reduction of grazing lands will not affect the size of the Irvine Ranch cattle herd, an Irvine Company spokesman said.

Emery. "Yeah. So far it's at least as quiet, if not quieter," he conceded.

However, Emory said he believes the results are being produced by the flying skill of "super pilots."

"I'm not sure it's proving much other than perhaps proving you can execute the noise abatement maneuver and have it be effective," Emory said.

One of the concerns voiced by Emory and other airport foes, including the Newport Beach City Council, was that the tests would involve flying the aircraft light, or not fully loaded.

The fear was that the lighter plane would require less thrust to become airborne and therefore would be quieter than a comparable plane carrying a full load of passengers and fuel.

But airport records indicate several flights have been at or near the plane's weight capacity.

Emory said he has reservations about the use of the noise abatement takeoff if the airline were to use 727s on all its flights.

"It's fine when they've got super pilots flying. But what happens when they put in the pilots who are opposed to the maneuver? I don't think the results will be the same," he said.

More Tumors Detected By Computer

About 30 percent of all tumors go undetected by doctors using standard X-ray interpretation techniques, a UC Irvine professor reported in Houston today.

Dr. Jack Sklansky said computers can be used to fill the lethal gap.

In a report of his research findings to the American Association for the Advancement of Science, Sklansky said computers can be used not only to assist in finding normally undetectable tumors, but in a variety of other ways.

Computers can perform measurements to aid diagnoses, and create visual three-dimensional representations of organs.

Sklansky said the computer system he has helped develop at UCI can simulate the opening and cutting of an organ, such as the heart. It can be a three-dimensional road map for surgeons.

He said poor diagnosis often can result from inaccurate reading, reporting and interpreting of X-rays and other radiographic images used in medicine.

FBI Probes Sale of Mayor's House

By ANNE COOPER
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

A $100,000 claim has been filed against the city of San Clemente by a former resident, who says a fraudulent city inspection was made on her home in 1975 when she bought it from Mayor William Walker.

The City Council voted unanimously this week to deny the claim, on the city insurance carrier's recommendation.

Deputy City Attorney Michael Bartlett said he expects the claimant, Shirley Cooper Lundy, to file suit against the city. This would be the next step in trying to collect damages, he said.

Mrs. Lundy asserted in her claim against the city that she is unable to sell her home at 132 Ave. Alessandro, because it does not conform to city ordinances. She said she was not aware, when she and her former husband, Gary Cooper, bought the house from Walker in 1975, that the conversion of a garage to a den was done without a city permit.

Walker was a member of the city planning commission at the time of the sale. He was elected to the City Council the following year, 1976.

At the time the claim was before the City Council, attorney Bartlett advised councilmen that no public discussion should be allowed on the matter. He said that any comments made publicly might prejudice future litigation.

Despite Bartlett's warning, Councilman Howard Mushett said he thought the public should be aware that the mayor was involved in a $100,000 claim against the city, which centered on an allegedly "bootlegged" garage conversion.

Walker responded by saying that he would abide by Bartlett's admonition not to comment, although he said, "It disturbs me that I cannot have my day in court publicly." Walker said he thought Mushett wanted to make an issue of the claim, because the two political opponents face a recall election on Jan. 23.

"He's trying to make political hay," said Walker.

But Mushett said Thursday that he thinks Walker should explain the allegedly illegal conversion instead of crying political foul play.

"The fact is that city records do not indicate any permits issued for the garage conversion," said Mushett. "The building does not meet city code now and did not meet city code at the time Walker sold the house to

Winter Visits Near LA

LOS ANGELES (AP) Heavy snow within 35 miles of downtown Los Angeles stalled traffic on major highways leaving the city and gave hundreds of delighted school children in outlying areas an unexpected holiday today after a vigorous Pacific storm moved into Southern California

"The only way to go north out of Los Angeles is by Highway 101 along the coast unless you want to drive to San Bernardino," California Highway Patrol officer Monty Keifer said today.

Snow that measured four inches in some places closed the Angeles Crest Highway about five miles west of Big Pines, 35 miles northeast of downtown Los Angeles, said CHP officer Ken Schultheis.

Interstate 5, the main northern artery to San Francisco, was closed between Castaic and Wheeler Ridge some 50 miles north of Los Angeles, he said

Snow, which crept below the 3,000-foot level in the mountains, made chains mandatory for travel on the main road to Las Vegas - Interstate 15 - "from Cajon Pass all the way to the Nevada state line" in the high desert, said Lance Stalker of the state Department of Transportation

He said snow was falling all along the route and was heavy in the Victorville-Barstow area.

Brad Griffin at KWTC Radio in Barstow said, "We're all excited. When I looked out my window this morning, I just about grabbed my skis."

On the Antelope Valley Freeway, just north of the Los Angeles area, six inches of snow had fallen with predictions of four more. Chains were required north of Santiago Highway near Escondido Summit and south from Palmdale Boulevard.

From the Inside, Looking Out in Costa Mesa

Storm Dumps Rain On Orange Coast

A Pacific storm which left behind nearly an inch of rain as it swept over Orange County will leave cloudy conditions in its wake as it disintegrates Saturday, National Weather Service forecasters predict.

And by the time the Los Angeles Rams and the Dallas Cowboys take the field at the Coliseum Sunday, the weatherman says post-storm conditions will have improved to the point that the sun will break through the cloud cover from time to time.

But it will be cool, forecasters warn. Highs during the weekend will be in the low 60s with a low of about 50 on both days.

They predict that winds will pick up during the weekend with brisk gusts of up to 15 miles an hour hitting the Orange Coast from the southeast.

Showers which appeared to hit their peak in the early morning hours today kept the 1979 rain tables at a level with precipitation statistics recorded at this time a year ago.

Huntington Beach rainfall analyst J. Sherman Denny said his gauge showed that 5.90 inches of rain had fallen in the current season- just .38 inches less than the total he recorded at this point in 1978.

"And that's pretty good," Denny said. "We've already got more than half of our normal season's rainfall in both years and there's a long way to go yet."

The rain appeared to have had little effect on essential services and traffic conditions in Orange County.

Flooding appeared to be nonexistent and the California Highway Patrol and traffic officers in contacted communities said traffic was moving normally on all streets and highways.

The storm left some picturesque winter scenes in its wake with the 3,000-foot snow level

Cash 'Pulled' From Dentist

A Laguna Beach dentist said Thursday that his wallet lost or stolen during a New Year's Day dinner contained $1,500 cash.

Dr. Robert Warmington, 44, who lives aboard a boat in Dana Point Harbor, was eating in the restaurant atop the Surf and Sand Hotel. He reported the incident to police at the time.

Asked by a reporter about the large amount of cash in his wallet, Warmington said he had returned from Hawaii and had not been to the bank.

Couple File Suit Over Tree Length

A Harbor View Hills couple have filed suit in Orange County Superior Court in efforts to force a neighboring couple to either trim their pine tree by 10 feet or pay $200,000 in property damages.

Dennis W. and Carolyn L. Harwood, 729 Harbor View Drive, contend in the suit the trees on the property of George T. and Katherine V. Flaherty, 920 Goldenrod Ave., block their view of Newport Harbor.

Flaherty said today he hadn't yet been notified of the suit and couldn't comment on it.

The Harwoods contend the value of surrounding homes is $350,000 to $400,000 and that the presence of the pine trees has diminished the value of their home by $200,000.

Donna Reed Leaves Coast For Oklahoma

Actress Donna Reed has announced she is giving up her home in Corona del Mar and moving to Tulsa, Okla., because her husband has taken a job there.

Miss Reed's husband, Grover Asmus, an executive engineer, will work for the Williams Brothers Company.

The actress, who hosted her own television show for eight years, spent most of December filming an NBC movie called "The Best Place to Be."

She said she lived out of a Los Angeles hotel while filming and hasn't been in Corona del Mar since November.

Miss Reed said she is currently looking for a house or a condominium in Tulsa.

U.S. Sues Nine Oil Companies

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Energy and Justice departments sued nine major oil companies in U.S. District Court today, accusing them of overcharges totaling more than $1 billion and asking refunds plus interest and penalties.

Energy Department spokesman James Bishop said it was the department's largest enforcement action, bringing to about $2.2 billion the total involved in such action which began in September 1977.

The department earlier alleged $316 million in overcharges by Exxon, the world's largest petroleum company. This was included in the $930 million claimed in today's lawsuit as the department sought to have the Exxon case considered together with eight new ones.

The remaining $614 million was charged against Mobil, Texaco, Amoco, Shell, Phillips, Gulf, Atlantic Richfield and Cities Service, all large oil and gas producing companies.

In Houston, an Exxon USA executive said the company believes "all our pricing actions have been in compliance with the regulations.

"Exxon has been trying to resolve both administratively and in the courts differences in interpretation of the regulations for pricing natural gas liquids," Senior Vice President O.L. Luper said. "In fact, the company initiated the court action

Police are still seeking another man in the robbery at Provident Savings and Loan, 34155 Coast Highway. Two men entered the savings and loan shortly after 2 p.m. Tuesday and herded employees into a rear room.

The two men used a red, white and blue pillow case to carry out the contents of cash drawers in the savings and loan office. The men were armed with a shotgun and a small pistol.

They fled with about $2,000.

The second suspect was described as about 35 years old with a stocky build, collar length brown hair and a Fu Manchu moustache. He was wearing a stocking mask.

Sheriff's investigators said Clendening was scheduled to be arraigned today before U.S. Magistrate Arthur Bradley on bank robbery charges. He is being held in Orange County Jail.

Cable Video Boost Eyed In San Juan

About 1,000 San Juan Capistrano cable television subscribers could face rate increases of 11 percent on their monthly bills if a TM Communications request is granted by councilmen.

The cable company, which serves 1,162 subscribers in south San Juan, has requested an increase from $6.75 to $7.50 for monthly television service.

Under the proposed increases, additional cable outlets would cost $2.50 per month, up from $2 monthly. Initial installation charges would increase from $20 to $25.

Councilmen took the request under advisement Wednesday and requested staff members to research the proposed increase for a future City Council meeting.

TM has not been granted a San Juan rate increase since August, 1975. A company spokesman said the firm would raise an estimated $800 per month more if the increases are approved.

Rapist Killed

Saudis Carry Out Beheading

JIDDA, Saudi Arabia (AP) A Saudi Arabian was beheaded publicly in Riyadh today for raping seven women, including a 10-year-old American and an American woman, apparently her mother.

The sentence was carried out in the main square of the capital immediately after the noon prayers.

An official statement said Khaled Abdullah al Suwaih was convicted of seven separate charges of rape and burglary in a three-year period since 1975.

The statement said Suwaih broke into houses after making sure the men were out. He then tied up and raped the women and looted the houses.

County Gets Suit Cash From Conrock

Officials of Conrock have given Orange County officials a check for $600,000 as the first installment of the $1.2 million settlement of the dispute over Caspers Regional Park, according to Auditor-Controller Vic Heim.

The check was given to the county after supervisors Wednesday unanimously endorsed an agreement negotiated with the gravel mining concern by supervisors Thomas Riley and Ralph Diedrich.

The settlement ends a dispute that began last winter when Conrock's gravel mining operation on the San Juan Creek caused erosion damage to the park.

Trees were uprooted and picnic tables washed out when the rain-swollen stream ate a gulch through the park that was 20 feet deep and up to 400 feet wide in places.

The agreement calls for payments totaling $1.2 million to be given the county over the next five years to pay for the erosion damage.

It also calls for an additional $500,000 to be paid the county if the company's lease is extended beyond 1983.

In addition, the agreement prohibits Conrock from mining within 2,000 feet of the park and it prohibits the taking of gravel from a depth of more than 1.3 feet below the grade of the stream bed.

Cleveland Forest Preserving Nixed

Officials of the U.S. Forest Service said Thursday they would recommend to Congress that very little of the Cleveland National Forest be preserved in wilderness form.

The recommendation came at the conclusion of a six-month study known as RARE (Roadless Area Review and Evaluation)-II in which the service analyzed a total of 63 million acres nationwide.

Forest land that didn't qualify by having some unusual or unique attributes is to be put under some kind of management plan making it available for more inetnsive recreation or for commercial interests such as lumber or cattle grazing.

In all, 11 areas within the Cleveland National Forest totalling 119,500 acres were considered under RARE-II.

Thursday, Grover Payne, one of Cleveland National Forest's district rangers, explained that only one 13,500-acre area has been recommended for wilderness status.

It's the Pine Creek area near Pine Valley in south San Diego County.

Anti-busing Rally Slated

By KATHY CLANCY
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Efforts to drum up local support for a state constitutional amendment that would prohibit forced busing of school children in California were announced today by State Sen. Alan Robbins, D-Van Nuys.

In a press conference this morning, Robbins invited local parents to a $10 per family rally Jan. 26 at Orange County Fairgrounds in Costa Mesa.

Proceeds from the rally will be used to transport parents to Sacramento in February when Robbins figures his proposed amendment will be debated on the state Assembly floor.

If approved by the Legislature, the amendment likely would be placed before California voters in 1980.

Among speakers scheduled for the 7:30 p.m. rally Jan. 26 are state Sen. John Schmitz, R-Newport Beach; Assemblyman Dennis Mangers, D-Huntington Beach, and Assemblyman Ross Johnson, R-La Habra.

Other speakers expected are Paul Clark of the San Fernando Valley-based Bus Stop and Bobbie Fiedler, a Los Angeles Unified School District trustee.

The Robbins-amendment parallels a similar bill he introduced in the 1977-78 legislature.

Robbins said today he believes the new measure has a better chance of passing in this session because of the proposed "metropolitan plan" of busing that would involve all but three Orange County school districts.

Robbins said virtually the entire Orange County legislative delegation backs the amendment while little interest was shown locally when the busing issue applied only to the Los Angeles school district.

"Busing has been a failure in the Los Angeles school district as everyone knows," Robbins said. "Since Los Angeles has been a failure they think they can do a better job by expanding busing to Orange County."

Robbins' amendment seeks to prohibit judges from ordering forced busing in all cases except when children of some ethnic origins are prohibited from attending their neighborhood schools because of race.

In effect, the proposed constitutional amendment would prohibit the type of forced busing undertaken in Los Angeles and now proposed in the expanded metropolitan plan.

Robbins said the amendment also would prohibit inter-district busing, but would permit voluntary busing of school students.

Early Vote Tally Cost Too High?

A proposal to start counting election day ballots earlier in Orange County to speed up the final tallying would cost more than it's worth, according to County Registrar of Voters Al Olson.

The early count procedure probably would have trimmed two hours off the Orange County tally during the November general election, Olson said in a report to supervisors.

But the system would cost an extra $40,000 to put into effect and require legislation allowing Orange County to start counting ballots before the polls closed.

Supervisor Ralph Clark asked Olson to study the early counting system after learning such a procedure was being used in Riverside and San Diego Counties.

Special state legislation allowed the early counting there, Olson said, as a test program. That legislation expires in 1981.

Olson said there is a possibility legislation will be passed this year to permit California counties with mechanized vote counting equipment to use early ballot pickups.

Among problems with the early vote count system, Olson said, is the fact that it would require Orange County's 14-year-old vote counting machines to work an extra six hours and increase the likelihood of a breakdown.

In addition, he said, it would require the county to hire about 751 additional election employees to work in two shifts. It is now difficult to recruit enough workers for one shift, he added.

Clark had proposed the early vote counting system as a possible way to avoid spending several million dollars on new vote tallying equipment.

Home Looted In Clemente

A San Clemente woman told police she returned home Thursday and found a front door standing open and jewelry, a color television and a handgun, valued at a total of $5,835, stolen from her apartment.

Police said Melissa Stichel, of 1201 Buena vista, Apt. D, estimated that the burglary occurred between 1 and 5 p.m. Thursday. Investigator Pete Goodwin said it was not known today how the apartment was entered.

The stolen handgun was described as a .45 caliber automatic. Also missing was a magazine with ammunition, police said.

AERIAL VIEW OF THE 350-ACRE ESTATE IN PALM SPRINGS WHERE SHAH'S FAMILY IS LIVING
Iran Ruler's Mother and Sister Guests of Former Ambassador Walter Annenberg

Relatives of Shah Flee to Desert Home

PALM SPRINGS (AP) - The besieged mother and sister of Iran's troubled shah have found refuge in a sprawling desert estate, where former President Nixon also sought a haven in recent years.

Queen Mother Tadj Ul Moluk and Princess Chams arrived at the oasis winter residence of Walter Annenberg Wednesday night after they became the targets of anti-shah violence in Beverly Hills.

Federal, state and local authorities are protecting the estate - surrounded by a high wall and tamarisk trees - said Annenberg, the former U.S. ambassador to Great Britain.

Asked about security against possible violence by anti-shah demonstrators at Sunnylands near Rancho Mirage, the 70-year-old publisher replied: "If they come, so be it."

Annenberg served as ambassador to Great Britain from 1969 to 1974, and his winter home provided seclusion for Nixon following the former president's resignation in 1974.

"When the government of the United States offers shelter to those seeking protection from radical extremists, the citizens of this country should respond affirmatively if necessary," he said.

The 90-year-old mother of Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi was flown to Los Angeles from riot-swept Iran last weekend, reportedly to seek medical attention.

She was at the Beverly Hills home of her daughter, Princess Chams, on Tuesday when about 500 protesters - including many Iranian students attending U.S. colleges - rushed the house.

Demonstrators broke windows and set fire to cars before being driven back by police using tear gas and fire hoses.

In a statement to the Palm Springs Desert Sun, Annenberg called the attack "outrageous conduct." He said the demonstrators' threats against "the shah's elderly mother and his sister in their anarchisic drive to murder them, enraged Americans."

Kulik Jurors Get Five-day Break in Tiff

Jurors in the $1 million heroin possession trial of Alexander Kulik were given a five-day break in the Orange County Superior Court case on Thursday when lawyers couldn't agree on questioning the defendant.

Kulik, 29, a one-time Newport Beach resident and businessman is being tried in the court of acting Superior Court Judge Paul Mast on charges that he had 1.1 pounds of nearly pure oriental heroin in his possession when he was arrested Oct. 22, 1977.

In addition to dismissing the jury until next Wednesday Judge Mast rescinded a bench warrant he had issued earlier for one witness, Anthony "Big Tony" Marone Sr.

The warrant was issued this week when Marone, a relocated federal witness with ties to east coast Mafia families, failed to appear to testify.

Thief Gets Stereo, Skateboard Gear

Memorial services were scheduled for today for longtime Laguna Beach resident and businessman George B. Boye, who died Dec. 30. He was 76.

Services were scheduled at the Pacific View Memorial Park chapel in Newport Beach. Interment was to follow services at the memorial park.

Mr. Boye is survived by his wife, Norma, of the Laguna Beach address; two sons, David, of Costa Mesa, and Theodore of Laguna Beach; five sisters, Marguerite Kaiser, of Santa Fe, N.M., Grace Peall, of Sacramento, Dorothy Schwammel, of Honolulu, Ruth Romak and Gloria Rasmussen, both of Danville, Ca.

Mushett said the Federal Bureau of Investigation is examining city records to determine how a Veterans Administration loan could have been made to Mrs. Lundy's former husband on a home which was in violation of city building standards.

John Morrison, of the FBI's Los Angeles office, confirmed Thursday that the matter is under investigation, but said the Bureau's policy prohibited him from making further comment.

Morrison did say, however, that the FBI does investigate alleged violations of Veterans Administration loan requirements.

Walker said that he has made his records of purchase and sale of the Avenida Alessandro home available to the FBI. City files have also been opened to FBI agents, he said.

In addition, Walker made public Thursday copies of what he said were listings of the house in question at the time he bought it in July, 1973. The standard real estate listing shows the home at 132 W. Ave. Alessandro with a family room and a double garage. Walker bought it in 1973 for $32,000 and sold it in 1975 for $45,000. $45,000.

Walker also made public a sworn statement made by Cooper, Mrs. Lundy's former husband. Cooper said in the statement that Walker had planned to add a garage to the house before selling it to the Coopers. A reduction in the selling price was made, with the understanding that the Coopers would add the garage after building a swimming pool on the property, he said.

China Trade Weighed

SAINT FRANCOIS, Guadeloupe (AP) - The Caribbean summit of President Carter and three West European leaders focused today on an ambitious British plan for up to $2 billion in trade with China, probably including the sale of British jet fighters, conference sources said.

British Prime Minister James Callaghan, in outlining the Chinese trade picture to Carter and the others, emphasized the sale of power-generating and other industrial equipment to Peking, said the sources who asked not to be identified.

But Callaghan also said he seeks a "balanced trade relationship" with China, a strong indication Britain will approve sale of 80 Harrier vertical take-off fighters in defiance of Soviet warnings that such sales would damage East-West relations.

Carter, Callagahan, French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing and West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt met this morning in a thatched-roof open pavilion overlooking the sea, underlining the informal nature of this Western summit. The agenda was expected to be dominated by China and Western security issues, including the future of Iran and its oil resources.

Carter and West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt were the last to arrive, walking together. The president was tieless in a white short-sleeve shirt and wore gray slacks and desert boots.

French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing, who like the others spurned neckties for the occasion, had a small stack of briefing books in front of him as the quartet sat down around a small circular table.

At 77, He's Out of Gas

Ex-Councilman Calls It a Career in Huntington

By ARTHUR R. VINSEL
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

One of the traditional bastions of motorized America – the corner gas station where the owner would still wipe the windshield for $1 worth of regular is fading out of downtown Huntington Beach.

Texaco dealer Ted Bartlett, 77, has closed his station at 303 Main St., on the corner of Olive Avenue, where the champagne was to flow today like Sky Chief and Fire Chief never will again.

His Texaco distributor, based in Wilmington, forced the former mayor out of business effective New Year's Day.

The tanker truck trip downcoast apparently is too costly to justify in a day and age when oil companies cater to operators with 40,000-gallon underground tanks

Bartlett is too small to compete anymore

"They're coming down today to pick up the credit card receipts and the imprinter," says the longtime civic leader, in business at the same location for 30 years this July.

The little corner station with its Playboy calendar pinup pictures; its smell of motor oil and echoes of decades of man-talk has a paltry 4,000-gallon capacity.

"I ordered gas at New Year's and they said, 'Well, we're not going to deliver anymore!'" said Bartlett.

"We'd been talking about this for three months," says Bartlett, who didn't really believe it would come to this.

Despite the sentiments of customers of 20 and 30 years who don't believe big is necessarily beautiful, Bartlett decided to close down.

"Everything's going to superstations. It's big business now. I'm not feeling sorry for myself. You can't work till you die and I want to live to be 100."

A lot of water has passed under the bridge since Bartlett pumped his first tankful of regular on July 15, 1949, after taking over the tiny station.

"I think it hit the Post Office the hardest," Bartlett says of his Texaco-enforced retirement and the budget-conscious Post Office officials just across Main Street.

His was the last service station in the downtown area and the fleet of postal vehicles must now travel 2½ miles and spend 25 minutes on routine refueling at Magnolia Street and Atlanta Avenue at a definite cost increase.

Pumping gas and shooting the breeze was Bartlett's stock in trade.

"Over the years, when we had the five-man city council, I think we had more meetings at the station than at City Hall," he recalls.

"There was always someone there . . . councilmen, the police chief. "We didn't accomplish much, but there was a lot of BS thrown," he says with a chuckle.

"But it was never what you would call 'backroom politics'," says Bartlett, ever-mindful of the Ralph M. Brown Act which forbids secret government agency meetings.

A lot of Republican Party meetings were held among the hand-cranked bulk oil pumps by men smoking and thoughtfully scuffing their shoes on the grimy concrete office floor.

Not a day went by but what Bartlett could be seen on his corner chatting with such longtime local figures as J. Sherman Denny or George Arnold, wearing a yellow slicker in rain; traditional green Texaco uniform in fair weather.

"I've got a lotta work to do," Bartlett said today of the task of winding up his business affairs and selling out.

Bartlett, who was defeated last April in a bid for re-election to the Huntington Beach City Council, after 20 years' service, plans to take wife Alice on a Caribbean cruise later this year.

'Human Error'

Label Says Tuna, But It's Cat Food

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) - Salesmen and federal investigators are searching New England grocery stores for tuna fish cans which actually contain cat food

"I'm not advocating that people eat cat food, but I don't think the mixup will endanger anyone's health," Food and Drug investigator Edward Cassidy said Thursday.

More than 300 mislabeled cans of Bumble Bee tuna have been recovered from stores in Maine, Massachusetts and New Hampshire since the labeling mixup was reported in mid-December, said Jack Daly, a vice president of Castle and Cooke, a major food marketer.

"It was obviously human error in labeling when the product was canned," he said in a telephone interview from San Francisco.

The mislabeled cans, which were supposed to contain solid white tuna, were discovered in the Purity Supreme chain, which has 37 outlets in the three New England states.

"Our people have been checking each store every day," Daly said. "We've done all we can possibly do."

Asked how many cans were unaccounted for, Daly said: "I wish I knew."

Cassidy said, "It shouldn't hurt anyone who did eat it because animal food is processed under the same tight regulations which govern food produced for humans. If it doesn't hurt cats it shouldn't hurt people."

The seven-ounce cans, which can be identified by the letters "PET" stamped on the lid, contain dark tuna meat, vegetables, vitamins and minerals and should have been sold with the Figaro label, said Daly.

"It makes a complete meal for cats," he said.

Irvine Ranch Converting 500 Acres

The Irvine Company announced Thursday it is expanding its farmland acreage by converting 500 acres of land in the Irvine Ranch foothills into avocado and orange groves.

The orchards will be developed, through an investment of $1.5 million, on property below the Lomas Ridge, northwest of El Toro Marine Corps Air Station, in county territory near the city of Irvine.

The land is now used for cattle grazing.

Terracing, construction of contour drainage channels and installation of a drip irrigation system is scheduled to begin this spring

Some 300 acres will be put into avocado production, with the remaining 200 acres in oranges.

The property adjoins 500 acres that were converted to avocado orchards during 1978, a program that also cost a reported $1.5 million

The reduction of grazing lands will not affect the size of the Irvine Ranch cattle herd, an Irvine Company spokesman said

$1.5 Million Theft

Guard Arrested; Money Recovered

LAKEPORT, Mich. (AP) – A missing armored truck guard was arrested today in a Detroit suburb in the theft of more than $1.5 million in cash he was assigned to protect, state police said.

He would be arraigned in federal court on a charge of bank larceny, the FBI said. All the missing money was recovered, except for $148 used to buy two suitcases in which to carry the cash, said FBI agent O. Franklin Lowie.

The guard, Fred Dixon Jr., 28, of Pontiac, employed by Purolator Security Inc., vanished Thursday from an armored truck parked outside a Lakeport restaurant. Three bags of money also disappeared.

Livonia Police Sgt. Shirley Garrison said Dixon was arrested at 3:25 a.m. in Livonia after his attorney telephoned police saying the guard wanted to surrender. Dixon was raised in Livonia, police said.

A crumpled, handwritten, unsigned note reportedly asking for "time to get away" was found in the armored truck after the money and Dixon disappeared.

Troopers said they were looking for a car seen parked near the Table Top restaurant where two other Purolator guards, Glenn Harper and Paul Pudlik, were inside taking a coffee break Thursday.

More Tumors Detected By Computer

About 30 percent of all tumors go undetected by doctors using standard X-ray interpretation techniques, a UC Irvine professor reported in Houston today.

Dr. Jack Sklansky said computers can be used to fill the lethal gap.

In a report of his research findings to the American Association for the Advancement of Science, Sklansky said computers can be used not only to assist in finding normally undetectable tumors, but in a variety of other ways.

Computers can perform measurements to aid diagnoses, and create visual three-dimensional representations of organs.

Sklansky said the computer system he has helped develop at UCI can simulate the opening and cutting of an organ, such as the heart. It can be a three-dimensional road map for surgeons.

He said poor diagnosis often can result from inaccurate reading, reporting and interpreting of X-rays and other radiographic images used in medicine.

The apartment of Gary Guthrie, who surrendered to authorities Thursday, had been surrounded by police for about 3½ hours prior to his arrest, sheriff's deputy Jim Platis said.

The unidentified wounded man underwent surgery Thursday night at Paramount General Hospital and was reported in serious condition.

RECALLS VICTORIES
Commissioner Heneghan

Joe Heneghan's most memorable case wasn't his work on the investigation of a New York City double murder case that spawned the television series "Kojak."

And it wasn't South Orange County's newest municipal court officer's involvement with the first successful prosecution of 60s' drug cult leader Timothy Leary.

It was his successful battle with the "Goliath" of New York City's Legal Aid office.

"As a trial lawyer in the New York City District Attorney's office, I tried a felonious assault case," the 45-year-old fondly recalls of his early years in the legal profession.

"The defendant was a very respectable looking 30-year-old man who had the top legal aid lawyer," Heneghan continues. "I talked with his lawyer, Marty Erdman, but he wouldn't even talk about a plea.

"When Marty Erdman went to trial, you knew you were in trouble."

The case came to trial, and an eager Joe Heneghan was able to catch the defendant in some lies and damage his credibility. He won the case.

"Marty Erdman didn't live it down," the South Laguna resident remembers. "I was pretty young at the time and it was a big deal to be up against him."

Heneghan, who worked several years in New York City before coming west to settle in 1967, will begin a new legal perspective in mid-January when he takes over the new trial commissioner job in south court.

"It was time for a change," says Heneghan, a prosecutor for 12 years with the Orange County District Attorney's office. "I've been prosecuting for most of my professional life so maybe it's time to get a different perspective."

The father of three boys doesn't believe a prolonged stint on the prosecutorial side of court matters will influence his or any other deputy district attorney's work on the bench.

"They (deputy DAs) will usually have substantial experience as criminal trial lawyers," he maintains. "They bring a lot of experience to the bench."

Heneghan acknowledged that judges face problems when they are required to stand for election in a climate where people may think judges are lenient and opposing candidates capitalize on the feeling.

"A judge is in a peculiar position because he's supposed to be independent of pressure from law enforcement on one hand and the defense bar on the other hand," he says.

"It seems like most government officials have fallen in esteem," he says. "There seem to be a lot of judges who people believe are too lenient."

Two of Heneghan's fellow district attorney's office prosecutors were elected to the bench recently. Those two, Theodore Millard and Oretta Sears, were sworn in as Superior Court judges this month.

The New York native's interest in the law sprang from a stint as a courts martial officer while in the Marine Corps in Japan.

"I majored in history in college and I went into the Marine Corps after I graduated," Heneghan recalls. "I worked on some courts martial and decided I liked the law enough to take the LSAT (Law School Admissions Test)."

He took the test while still in the service and qualified and gained admission to Fordham University's School of Law. He graduate three years later and shortly went to work for the New York City District Attorney's office.

"It was an interesting office at that time," Heneghan remembers. "I was involved with a lot of heavy stuff like labor racketeering and corruption of public officials."

A trip to his sister's California home in 1965 got Heneghan to begin considering the attributes of living in California.

"When my wife and I got back to New York, we started thinking about the climate and the lifestyle and decided we would come back here to live," he says.

Courting Disaster?

DISASTER REPORTS (CONTINUED): A writer for the Chicago Tribune has traveled to our region recently and has come up with another one of those pieces that broadly hints California may fall into the sea.

His piece was printed in a county paper and was timed nicely with the recent rains.

The story is datelined "Laguna Beach" which you suspect was a selection keyed to the recent Bluebird Canyon disaster in the Art Colony.

The Chicago-based writer suggests, "Now, scientists

Old 1906 Coastal Structure That Has Survived a Few Storms

say, living along the Golden State's shore may be less status than stupidity."

HE GOES ON TO quote a scientist as saying we live in a fantasyland out here because people build homes along the shoreline. And, most of these homes have been built during a drought cycle. But we've had four wet cycles within the last 173 years.

Thus, indeed, if we are moving into another wet cycle, it is suggested that homes might be smashed by 40-foot waves and other mansions might simply slip off into the sea.

It was suggested that since the 1940s, people have just assumed it never rains in Southern California – which sounds like a somewhat familiar lyric.

Well, if that was the thought, it should have evaporated last year when we got 33 inches of the wet stuff. That compared pretty closely to our total rainfall of 32.76 inches in 1940-41. But we've had other rains. We got almost 27 inches in 1950-51 and almost 28 inches in 1968-69.

No doubt we've made some stupid decisions in the past on where we build. But so has every other region of the country.

I'VE NEVER UNDERSTOOD why some people build on the bank of a river when they know it might flood out in the winter. People still build in Kansas within tornado alleys. Floridians don't seem to be discouraged much by hurricanes.

And as for the East and Midwest, you are amazed that citizens still insist on building entire cities in places where they just know they'll be covered with ice and snow every winter.

THUS YOU MIGHT suspect Southern Californians are no more stupid when it comes to building in hazardous places than anybody else.

You flirt with Mother Nature and every once in a while you get your toes stomped on.

Airlift Seen

Viets Pushing Into Cambodia

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) – Vietnamese divisions were reported driving north, south and east of Phnom Penh today in an apparent move to throttle the Cambodian capital.

Diplomatic sources in Peking said China may likely airlift Cambodian leaders out of the capital carrying six of them to China. Japan's Kyodo News Service said. It quoted other Peking sources as saying China recently asked Thailand to allow passage of a special Chinese plane over Thailand, but said the informant was not confirmed.

THE SOVIET Communist Party newspaper Pravda reported on its front page that Cambodian rebels are continuing a powerful offensive against the Phnom Penh government. It did not mention the participation of Vietnamese troops in the fighting.

The escalating border conflict between Vietnamese and Cambodia mirrors the political struggle in southeast Asia between the Soviet Union and China.

Reports published in China's official People's Daily said 100,000 Vietnamese regulars equipped with Russian-made fighter planes, tanks and guns already have invaded and occupied a large chunk of Cambodian territory, Kyodo said.

"I WOULD NOT be surprised if Phnom Penh was evacuated soon and the government took to the countryside," one European diplomat in Bangkok said.

Other Bangkok analysts said the Vietnamese bypassed Kompong Cham, 45 miles northeast of Phnom Penh, and may have moved 19 or more miles west of the Mekong River to a point near the dead center of Cambodia.

They said the Vietnamese also opened up a major front in the extreme south of the country, and that three divisions were driving westward near the coast. It was believed they would try to cut the highway from Cambodia's only deep-water port, Kimpong Som, through which China ships military supplies to the Cambodian army.

THE ANALYSTS said the provincial capital of Takeo, 37 miles south of Phnom Penh, was taken by the Vietnamese who were now believed to have moved most of a 100,000-man force into Cambodia.

Vietnam's rebel Cambodian Communist proxies claimed they seized Svay Rieng in the Parrot's Beak area along Highway 1 leading to Phnom Penh from the Vietnamese border.

The insurgents of the month-old National United Front for National Salvation and six provinces of eastern Cambodia, about a quarter of the country, were now under their control.

However, Bangkok analysts believe the Vietnamese are doing the major fighting and leaving the mop-up and victory claims to the estimated 20,000 rebels who broke with the Communist regime in Phnom Penh.

MOSCOW (AP) – A Soviet magazine says the "Big Mac" has earned big profits for McDonald's hamburger chain while raising questions about the health of hamburger-hungry Americans.

The world affairs weekly, New Times, said McDonald's is making millions of dollars out of a "clearly poor-quality product." One of the company's sandwich specials is known as the "Big Mac."

FRED TURNER, chief executive at McDonald's headquarters in Oak Brook, Ill., commented: "The rhetoric of the English-language New Times published in Moscow indicates they must have had a slow news day. Maybe next week they'll report they invented the hamburger."

McDonald's operates about 4,000 restaurants in the United States and 20 other countries, selling approximately 3 billion hamburgers a year.

"The most useful part of the McDonald special, as a California doctor has aptly put it, is the layer of air in the sliced bun," said the New Times article.

IT ADDED: "In the opinion of scientists, the correlation of fats, carbohydrates and soda in the firm's products makes them akin to foods which raise the cholesterol content in the blood which, in its turn, increases the probability of the cardiovascular system being affected."

The article quoted Dr. George Christakis, nutrition chief at Mount Sinai School of Medicine in New York City, as saying that a third of the youngsters who regularly eat such foods would run a high risk of heart attacks by age 50.

Dallas Cycle Cop Disputes Finding

DALLAS (AP) – The Dallas motorcycle policeman whose open microphone is given as the source of evidence that John Kennedy's assassination was a conspiracy said Thurdsday that the mike couldn't have been his.

The House assassination committee concluded last week that Kennedy probably was slain as the result of a conspiracy. Committee members said their conclusion was based on new acoustical evidence that "establishes a high probability that two gunmen fired at President Kennedy."

THE COMMITTEE'S EVIDENCE included an analysis of a tape recording made during the assassination – from what the panel determined was a stuck transmitter on officer H. B. McLain's motorcycle.

But McLain said Thursday that his mike would have transmitted loud sirens as he rushed to the hospital with the fatally slain president.

"That wasn't my motorcycle," McLain said. "There would have been a siren on that channel one all the way to the hospital. Everybody had their sirens on . . . you would have heard it on channel one."

THE RECORDING WAS MADE of a transmission over the police department's channel one, although motorcycles assigned to the motorcade were instructed to communicate on channel two.
